NO CAUSE FOR ALARM

Baer Issues Statement on Proposed Railroad Investigation.

Says Investors Need Not Fear the Legislative Vagaries.

Philadelphia, Feb. 11.—George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, has issued a statement in relation to the action of the house of representatives of Pennsylvania last Friday in adopting a resolution instructing the attorney general of the state to bring court proceedings against the anthracite coal carrying railroads, if, upon inquiry, he finds they are violating the state constitution, which says:

"No incorporated company doing business of a common carrier, shall, directly or indirectly, prosecute, or engage in mining or manufacturing articles for transportation over its lines." The resolution, which will come before the senate names the Pennsylvania railroad, the Philadelphia & Reading railway company, and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railway company. President Baer's statement follows:

"My attention has been called to the possibility that there are many good people in the country who may mistake the actions of the Pennsylvania railway system and that therefore some statement of the facts should be made.

"First, as to the right of the Reading company to own the stock of coal companies: The legislature seems to be the only law officers and law-makers of the state who are ignorant of the provisions of the constitution of 1874. The corporations referred to obtained their rights and franchises under charters granted prior to the adoption of the new constitution. The framers of the constitution well knew that these were vested rights fully protected by the law of the land and to prevent any misapprehension the new constitution explicitly declares, 'and all rights, actions, prosecutions and contracts shall continue as if said constitution had not been adopted' and to still further set forth their meaning they declare in another article, 'That all existing charters or grants of special or exclusive privileges under which a bona fide organization shall not have taken place and business been commenced in good faith before the adoption of this constitution, shall thereafter have no validity.'

"The supreme court of the state has several times passed upon the effect of the new constitution in repealing vested rights and franchises, and has uniformly held that these constitutional limitations do not apply to corporations.

"But all this can safely be left to the report of the attorney-general. The

COMBINE OF RAILROADS

Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Burlington and Milwaukee to Unite.

New York, Feb. 12.—It was disclosed yesterday that one of the most gigantic transcontinental railroad deals ever made is being formulated.

It means the consolidation of the Northern Pacific, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Great Northern, and Burlington into two great transcontinental lines.

It also means the shutting out of the Harriman interests on the Pacific coast.

It also means a desperate fight between the four lines mentioned and the Harriman lines.

As outlined by authority of unquestioned integrity the situation is as follows:

The undertaking involves two separate transactions. They have been in the hands of the promoters for several years. The proposal means two of the greatest railroad systems in the world.

The Great Northern, with its $120,000,000 of iron ore lease and sale rights to its own and the Burlington stock amounting to $50,000,000 more, will cement these two roads into one vast double-track system to the coast.

The Northern Pacific, whose stock is actually worth $300,000,000 on the basis of its earnings, may easily devote $100,000,000 toward the purchase of the stock of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, now extending to the Pacific coast, practically paralleling the Northern Pacific. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will find it more convenient at points along the route to use the Northern Pacific tracks. Indeed, a conference already has been held between officials to this end.

A railroad attorney, whose business brings him in touch with the financial end of all these roads, declares that affairs are so shaping that one can reach no other conclusion and he predicts that within two years, at least, or possibly sooner, the four roads mentioned will have become two great transcontinental lines by the process worked out by James J. Hill.

The attorney declares his belief in the early consummation of this scheme because of the fact that Hill is getting along in years and wishes to see his ambition realized as quickly as possible. Railroad men do not doubt that such arrangement would be beneficial to all the roads concerned. It is simply a matter of working out the detail.

As the first move, it is understood that the Burlington bonds, guaranteed by the Northern Pacific, are to be called in and retired.

In effect, the Northern Pacific and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will be merged and the Great Northern and the Burlington will be made one system. It is understood the Great Northern will absorb the Burlington, while for a few years the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Northern Pacific will work in conjunction, the Northern Pacific finally absorbing the Milwaukee road.

These plans are outlined by parties so close to J. J. Hill as to make the story seem inspired.

TRAIN HITS CHICAGO STREET CAR, KILLING THREE PASSENGERS

Seven More Were Injured, Some of Them Quite Seriously and May Die.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—A theater train on the Pennsylvania road, running at the rate of twenty miles an hour, crashed into a crowded street car in South Chicago last night, killing instantly three persons and injuring seven. The killed and injured were all occupants of the street car. The engine and first coach of the passenger train left the rails and were overturned.

The dead:
MRS. LOUISA BACON.
MISS SADIE LUCY.
MAY WARSUEL, 11 years old.

Injured: Mrs. Blanche Warsuel, badly cut and bruised; Jessie Warsuel, back injured; Joseph C. Mack, engineer of train, ankle badly twisted; William B. Lynch, head cut and body bruised; Mrs. Margaret Lynch, ribs on left side broken, condition critical; Charles R. Bowler, head and body cut; Everett M. Day, motorman, head cut.

The passenger train was a local leaving Chicago at 11:34 p. m. for East Chicago, Ind. It was well filled with passengers who were thrown into a panic by the collision. The street car was hurled into the air, overturned and ground to splinters before the locomotive. The crash came almost without warning and but few occupants of the street car had an opportunity to leap from the car before it was struck. The passengers of the railroad train hurried to the aid of those imprisoned in the debris and began the work of rescue. Calls for assistance were sent to the nearest police station and physicians were summoned to aid the injured.

The engineer of the passenger train and the crew of the street car were placed under arrest.

IN GRIP OF SMALLPOX

Many of Crew of Whaling Bark Have the Dread Disease.

Entire Ship Converted Into a Hospital for Over a Month.

New York, Feb. 12.—One month on the Atlantic ocean, with the entire ship converted into a smallpox hospital and a quarter of the crew ill with this disease, was the experience of the whaling brig Sullivan of New London, Conn. The story of the smallpox outbreak on the whaler was told today by Mrs. M. J. Haggerty, wife of the captain of the Sullivan, who arrived here today from Rio de Janeiro on the steamer Italian Prince.

The whaling vessel put into Rio de Janeiro after two of its crew had died of smallpox, and with seven others ill with the disease, and the twenty-seven remaining members of the crew frantic to get ashore. The cruise began, Mrs. Haggerty said, last October from the island of Fayal, in the Azores. After the brig had been out some time the smallpox started with one case. The disease spread until nine sailors were ill. Days followed when, owing to the fear which spread among the members of the crew, the brig drifted along almost like a deserted ship.

With Mrs. Haggerty on board the vessel, were her two children. After landing at Rio de Janeiro she remained until the disease had been stamped out on the Sullivan.

STATE LANDS IN CASS COUNTY

To Be Sold April 13 and Lively Bidding is Expected.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The sale of state lands located in Cass county will be held at Walker on Friday, April 13, and since the notice to that effect has been issued by the state auditor, there have been received many inquiries as to the nature of the land as to its fitness for agricultural, grazing and other purposes, and its relative location to cities and villages. Anticipating this demand for information, the Commercial club of Walker has appointed Charles Kenkel, mayor of Walker, M. J. Quam, register of deeds, and P. H. McCarry of Walker, a committee to prepare enlightenment and send the same broadcast over the country. As Cass Lake is almost entirely surrounded by the forest reserve lands, there is very little of the land that will be offered for sale on April 13 that is in any manner contiguous to the place. To the east of Cass Lake, near Ball Club, a small station on the Eastern Minnesota railway, in town 144, range 26, there are 2,560.45 acres of state land, all of which borders on the eastern boundary of the forest reserve. This land is on the Leech Lake river, Mud lake and the Mississippi river as it flows northeast. It is considered fairly good soil, and has been carefully gone over by many experienced cruisers and others looking for land. Most of the remainder of the land offered for sale is south of the village of Walker, a considerable portion being located close to Lothrop, and east and south of that place. There is much of the land that is very desirable, and there have been a number of intending purchasers from Iowa and Southern Minnesota who have looked over the land. From present indications, there will be some lively bidding for the land when offered on April 13, and the state will undoubtedly realize a neat sum out of the sale.

WILL ASK STAY OF EXECUTION

For Williams Who is Under Sentence to Hang Monday Night.

St. Paul, Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorney Clark, one of the attorneys who assisted in the defense of William Williams, sentenced to be hanged in the county jail here tonight for murder, announced today that an application for a stay of execution would be asked of Judge Lochren in the federal court at Minneapolis, based on a writ of habeas corpus. The application is for the purpose of enabling counsel for Williams to submit affidavits to the United States supreme court in at attempt to show that Williams did not have his constitutional rights a the trial before the Ramsey county district court. An application for a stay was refused by the chief justice of the Minnesota supreme court Saturday night. Williams was convicted of murdering John Keller, a 16-year-old boy, April 13, last year.

STRUCK BY WORK TRAIN.

August Nolander Meets With an Accident Near Allen Junction.

Two Harbors, Minn., Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—August Melander, foreman of one of the extra gangs, was injured near Allen Junction, yesterday afternoon, by being struck by a work train, bruising him considerably, but it is thought not seriously. He was taken to the Bray hospital at Biwabik.

LODGE IS IN FAVOR

Says Rate Question is Second Only to Economical Problem.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachucetts addressed the senate today on railroad rate legislation.

Mr. Lodge announced his support of legislation for the control of railroad rates along the lines of the Esch-Townsend bill of last session, and said that he believed the practice of giving rebates to be the most serious of all the evils complained of. He expressed the conviction that only by legislation along the lines suggested could government ownership be prevented. He said that before entering upon the investigation of the question he had disposed of his railroad interests in order that his inquiry might be free from bias.

He expressed the opinion that the rate question is second only as an economical problem to the financial question, and one of the most important ever before congress. All were agreed, he said, as to what we as a people desire to do, but the differences arise over the method of proceeding. He was convinced that there are evils to be remedied in connection with the transportation railway system, but the problem consisted in finding a fair and just means of dealing with them.

He passed over as an established fact the right of congress to legislate for the regulation of the railroads. The grievances against the roads he divided into three classes as follows:

He quoted statistics in an effort to show that freight rates are lower in the United States than in any other country and concluded that if no other grievance were presented there would be no cause for legislation and that in the matter of discrimination between localities it is very difficult to interfere in behalf of one place without doing injustice to others, but that the only way to accomplish anything

SERIOUS FIGHT IN OLD SERVIA.

Belgrade, Servia, Feb. 12.—A serious fight has occured in Old Servia between Turkish troops and two Servian bands near the villages of Nikujan, Dragomanzi and Chelovek. The Turks who were the attackers lost forty men killed or wounded. The Servians lost eighteen killed or wounded.

WOMAN'S COUNCIL HAS GOVERNOR JOHNSON AS GUEST AT ITS BANQUET

With Governor Johnson of Minnesota as their guest of honor the club women of the Head of the Lakes entertained today at a midwinter luncheon at the Spalding and the affair was the most brilliant of the kind at which Duluth club women have ever been hosts. Nearly two hundred and ninety guests were present and, aside from the delightful social function, the affair presented to many the work the Women's council of the city is planning and hoping to do in solution of some of Duluth's problems.

The tables in the banquet room were decorated in low baskets of single daffodils and at the speakers' table a large basket of the daffodils formed the centerpiece and at either end a smaller basket of the same dainty flowers was placed. The guests were all seated at 1 o'clock but those who were to be at the speakers' table, and the latter entered led by Mrs. J. L. Washburn with Governor Johnson while the orchestra played "Hail to the Chief."

The guests at the table were Governor and Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Washburn and the speakers, Mrs. John MacLeod, Mrs. J. H. Crowley, Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, Rev. J. W. Powell, Mrs. Alexander Milne and Mrs. Irvin, L. Lenroot of Superior and the guests of honor, Mayor Cullum, E. W. Bohannon, J. L. Washburn, C. A. Smith, R. E. Denfeld, Edward Pearson Pressey, W. A. CHARLES FRANTZ PASSES AWAY

Word was received in Duluth today of the death of Charles F. Frantz at Ashland, Wis.

Mr. Frantz was formerly a resident of Duluth and was at once time employed as a bookkeeper on The Herald. Later he was a partner of J. F. Gordon in the painting and paperhanging business, and in 1897 moved with his family to Ashland, where he was manager of the Booth company's interests at the time of his death.

He was a brother of Albert J. Frantz, who died about a year ago.

Death was due to appendicitis. Mr. Frantz was operated on about three weeks ago, and he was believed to be recovering, but an abcess formed and he died as a result.

He leaves a wife and three children. Two brothers and several sisters are also living.

Mr. Frantz was widely known in Duluth and had many warm friends in this city.

CHILEAN LINE OPENED.

Santiago, Chile, Feb. 12.—The first section of the trans-Andine railroad was inaugurated today. The line reaches to the foot of the Andes where the tunnel begins. The line will shorten the time to Buenos Ayres by six hours. The president and the civil and military authorities were present at the inauguration ceremonies.

IMMEDIATE ATTENTION

Of Miners' Scale Committee Called to Important Matter.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 12.—The members of the anthracite miners' scale committee were hurriedly called together today, but for what purpose was not given out. On Saturday night it was stated that the committee had finished its business and would not meet again prior to the conference between the miners' officials and coal operators, which takes place in New York on Thursday. Today's secret session, however, leads to the belief that some important question arose which required the immediate attention of the committee. None of the officers would discuss the meeting.

New York, Feb. 12.—John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, who is in this city to confer with the operators of the anthracite mines, said today that he did not care to discuss the statement given out by President Dolan of the Pittsburg district yesterday.

In this statement Dolan said that President Mitchell was coming to New York to "ask the anthracite operators for a contract which he has not the power to enter into as the national convention has tied him hand and foot." He also attacked President Mitchell's conduct of the coal strike in the past and declared that every strike in the soft coal regions under his leadership had ended in failure.

"What do you think of Patrick Dolan's attack on you before the Pittsburg miners?" Mr. Mitchell was asked today.

"I do not care to discuss Mr. Dolan," was the reply.

To all other questions Mr. Mitchell made similar answers.

BOYS MAKE A FORTUNE.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Worth $75,000 each as a result of persistent prospecting in the Cobalt silver district, two boys, William and George Darby of Massey Station, Ont., have gone to Ottawa to spend a portion of their newly acquired wealth in sightseeing about the capital. The youngsters are not yet 18 years of age. That fortune smiles where least expected is exemplified in the case of these boys, who left their comfortable home near Massey last February and defied the elements to drive them to seek a more habitable shelter than a mere bough camp on the shores of Bay lake, in the Cobalt country. With the opening of spring they started prospecting at Mud lake and the Montreal river, but with little success. Farther to the westward of their winter camp, near Clear lake, they struck small veins of the prized metal, but results were unsatisfactory and staking the ground as their claim they moved on to Bay lake. Here after persistent trenching they finally made important discoveries of the white metal, and recently they sold out their interests to a syndicate of Windsor mining capitalists for $150,0000. An equal division of the money as shared between them, and refusing an offer of $25,000 for their Clear Lake claim they struck out for Ottawa and a good time. It is asserted that with the opening of spring an influx of 10,000 fortune hunters will invade the Cobalt region.

LIFE SENTENCE.

Helena, Mont., Feb. 12.—Judge Cheadle in district court at Lewistown Saturday, sentenced James Sherman, a young newspaper man, to the state penitentiary for the rest of his natural life, he having been convicted on the charge of killing Samuel Studinski, an aged jeweler.

JOYOUSNESS IS LACKING

Secretary of Navy Bonaparte Presents Diplomas to 101 Members.

Annapolis, Feb. 12.—The career of the class of 1906 at the naval academy was brought to its close officially in the new armory this morning when Secretary of the Navy Charles Bonaparte delivered to 101 members of the class their coveted diplomas in the presence of fully 2,500 persons. In the large crowd were present families and friends of the graduates from all over the country, and, while not marked with the joyousness of similar occasions in the past, the scene was an impressive and beautiful one.

The speech of the secretary did not refer in any way to the present conditions at the academy, which, however, have materially affected the traditional gayity of the occasion and cast a damper over the whole week's ceremonies. His address was short.

At the conclusion of his remarks the secretary received the diploma of Midshipman Allan Chantry from Lieut. Commander Magruder, who drew it from the pile of sheepskins on the table in front of him. The other "star" members who headed the class then received theirs in order in which they stood. The diplomas of other graduates were then drawn at random and as each youth stepped forward and received his reward and a handclasp from the secretary there was a round of applause.

The handsome sword given each year by the class of 1876 to the midshipman holding the best record in the department of practical and theoretical ordnance and gunnery was presented to the man who earned it this year. He was Midshipman W. A. Glassford of Seattle, Wash., who received the prize from the hand of Secretary Bonaparte.

Almost immediately Midshipman Arthur W. Frank, cadet commander of the brigade, called for three cheers for "Those about to leave us" and the youths who have more years at the institution before them, gave the cheers with a will. This was replied to by the graduates who gave three cheers for those "we leave behind us." Commander T. G. Dewey of the department of ordinance of gunnery, who cammanded the brigade, then called for three cheers for the secretary of the navy. The official party then left the armory and went at once to the home of Superintendent Sands, where a luncheon was served. Secretary Bonaparte returned to Baltimore in the afternoon.

After the graduation exercises the ancient custom of "Throwing the first class out of quarters," was enacted and all of the men who for the past year have been the officers of the brigade were good naturedly tossed out of Bancroft hall. After that the class favorites were given yells and ridden about the yards on the shoulders of their comrades.

The dance tonight will close the exercises and tomorrow the graduates will leave for their respective homes to which they have been sent on "waiting orders" before being assigned to duty in the service.

IS FATALLY BURNED.

Iowa Woman Dies After Twelve Hours of Intense Agony.

Fayette, Iowa, Feb. 12.—After twelve hours of intense agony as the result of burns, Mrs. Yates of this city died at the home of a neighbor. Fire which occurred early in the morning destroyed the woman's home, the entire family of small children being rescued by the 14-year-old daughter after the woman had rushed from the building with her clothing on fire.

When neighbors reached the scene Mrs. Yates was found sitting in a snow bank, terribly burned about the upper portion of her body. As nearly as could be ascertained from the fragmentary story the woman was able to tell, she had been transferring live coals from a heater to the kitchen range, and in some manner spilled kerosene on them. The oil flamed up and caught the woman's clothing, and she fled madly for the outer air.

In passing through a woodshed she came in contact with a quantity of straw, and the flames quickly communicated to the house. The woman's husband is said to be in North Dakota.

BRIBERY ALLEGED IN KENT ELECTION.

London, Feb. 12.—Sir Francis Henry Evans, liberal, recently defeated at the Maidstone, Kent, election has petitioned against the return of the Marquis of Londonderry's son and heir, Viscount Castlereagh, Unionist, alleging bribery and other illegalities against the Castlereagh agents. Lady Evans, who is a daughter of the late Samuel Stevens, who was attorney general of New York, took part in her husband's electoral campaign, and is greatly chargrined at his defeat by the narrow majority of 132.

About half a dozen petitions have been lodged against other elections on similar grounds.

ASK A DISMISSAL OF MRS. TAGGART'S APPEAL.

Wooster, Ohio, Feb. 12.—Attorneys for Capt. Taggart this morning filed a motion to dismiss Mrs. Taggart's appeal in the circuit court, "because the case sought to be appealed is not appealable under the laws of the state," and "because this circuit court has no appellate jurisdiction in said case."

Congressman Smyser, Mrs. Taggart's attorney, has written from Washington asking that the Taggart appeal be continued to the second week of the term, which will be next week.

FIRE AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The carbarn of the International Railway company, located on the Canadian side near the whirlpool, was burned today together with twenty-seven cars, the property of the International Belt line. Loss, $60,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM FATALITY

Of Underground Miner in the Rust Mine at Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—An underground miner recently employed at Rust mine near Hibbing figured in a narrow escape from instant death. He was standing in a drift, not knowing a blast had been set off directly beneath him. The blast was exploded and tore a large, ragged hole through the earth directly on the spot where he had stood and threw him about ten feet in the air. He then fell into the aperture which led directly to a raise which is used to transport ore to cars. He slid down a distance of ninety feet and was precipitated headlong into a steel car used to carry ore to the skips. A piece of logging was following in his wake, but was choked by contact on the way down, thus saving him from a horrible and instantaneous death. He considers his escape as little short of miraculous. He sustained internal injuries and to what extent it is not known, as he now lies in Rood's hospital, in a slightly improved condition.

SUITS AGAINST HOST ARE WITHDRAWN.

Milwaukee, Feb. 12.—The suits started by the Prudential Insurance Company of Newark, N. J., against State Insurance Commissioner Zeno M. Host, just before the Republican state convention in May, 1904, have been withdrawn by the company.

Stipulations have been submitted by attorneys representing the company, dismissing both the actions in the federal and superior courts.

Superior Trip Was Expensive.

It cost M. Burris, alias Lightning Bill, a colored porter of this city, just $4 to disturb the peace and quietness of the streets in Superior last evening. Burris was taking in the sights of the burg across the bay with some of his friends when he was taken into custody by the Superior police on the charge of being drunk and using abusive language. He had $4 and this was duly appropriated in municipal court this morning, as a fine, the authorities giving back enough to pay his car fare to Duluth.

CITY BRIEFS

The meeting for the hearing of the charges brought by Dan Cameron against Chief Black will be held Wednesday evening in the city hall, and on the request of Chief Black himself, the representatives of the press will be admitted. The chief was anxious that the widest possible publicity be given the hearing, owing to the wide circulation given the news of the charges.

Sarah, the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Simmonds of Superior, died this morning at 6 o'clock at the family residence in that place, 505 Hollingshead avenue. Death was due to pneumonia. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at the residence, and the interment will take place at Park Hill cemetery, Duluth.

The ladies of Grace M. E. church have decided to resume the serving of suppers each evening this week at an empty store building on West Superior street, near Nineteenth avenue west. The suppers last week were very successful.

Matters were very quiet about the courthouse today, the various offices being closed on account of a legal holiday.

At 8 o'clock this evening Rev. M. S. Rice will speak on the subject, "Abraham Lincoln," in the lecture room of the First Methodist church.

IMPOSING ON CATHOLICS.

Blasphemous Prayer Being Circulated With Evil Intentions.

An edless chain letter, containing a prayer to be recited against the happening of dreadful calamities, has reached several Catholics in Duluth. Some of the Catholic clergymen have condemned the letter and given warning against paying heed to it.

The letter purports to be from a Catholic bishop, warns against dangers "too dreadful for words," and contains a blasphemous prayer which must be recited to ward off the danger. The letter asks the recipient to write nine others like the one he receives, each of the recipients is again to write nine others, and thus the prayer is to spread over the country.

The letter is looked upon as an attempt to burlesque the prayers and teachings of the Catholic church and thus to hold them up to ridicule and contempt. The letter is so worded that it may easily mislead and frighten the ignorant and superstitious, and therefore the clergy are condemning it and warning against spreading it. Only a few of the letters have been received.

The letter was started in the East, and from there spread all over the country toward the West. A report from Chicago says that a sharp necessity has arisen all over the country for the clergy to take quick and decisive action in the suppression of the endless chain of blasphemous prayer. In Chicago indignant priests denounced and ridiculed the prayer chain and its accompanying terrors, in an effort to steamp out the movement.

Some of the clergymen fear that it will envelop the world unless decisive action is taken. Hundreds of thousands of these prayers are in circulation in the country, although very few have reached as far West as Duluth.

AUTOMOBILE RACE BEGINS AT HAVANA.

Havana, Feb. 12.—The 200 mile auto race began today with fine weather and the course in splendid condition and with a large crowd present. Benin, driving W. Gould Brokaw's 90 horse power machine covered the first lap 54.375 miles in fifty-one minutes.

Lancia, driving E. F. Connell's 100-horse power machine, and Cedrino, who drove Gustav Bock's 100-horse power car, are out of the race. Lancia's machinist, Ajassa Battesta, was thrown out and Cedrino's machine turned over at a sharp curve near Candelaria. Lancia succeeded in securing the services of a physician to attend to his mechanist.

Will Have Easter Wedding.

The engagement of Miss Sophia Kaplan of Minneapolis to Harry Shandeling, a prominent young merchant of Eveleth, has been announced. The wedding is to occur about Easter. Miss Kaplan has been a guest for a few days of Mr. and Mrs. Shandeling, parents of the prospective groom. Mr. Shandeling is a frequent visitor in Duluth in connection with his merchantile business and has many friends in this city.

DATE OF EXPOSITION OPENING IS CHANGED.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 12.—The formal opening of the Jamestown exposition has been set for April 26, 1907, instead of May 13, 1907, as originally planned. It was on April 26, 1607, that the English settlers in the London company first debarked at Cape Henry, Va., and in the desire to celebrate the 300th anniversary of that event as well as the tercentennial of the settlement at Jamestown, May 13, is found the reason for changing the date of the final opening. The celebration of the landing anniversary, May 13, will be made the occasion of a moster celebration which will be the great event of the exposition.

DULUTH HAS A HEROINE

Plucky Little Agnes Alexander Saves Small Boy's Life.

In the person of Agnes Gordon Alexander, the little 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Alexander, of 1211 East First street, Duluth has a heroine who should be a candidate for a Carnegie medal.

With her clothing frozen from contact with the chilly waters of Chester creek, and the temperature below zero, the little girl pluckily staid by her little companion, Willie Broughton, the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Broughton, 1232 East First street, and saved him from death beneath the ice on Chester creek.

The children were playing, a few days ago, on the ice over the creek, between First and Second streets. They happened to tread over a spot where it was thin, and broke through, the little girl going in the water up to her neck, while the boy hung on to the edge of the ice, unable to touch bottom.

Agnes screamed for assistance, but there was no person in sight or hearing distance to render them aid. She finally, after much struggling, managed to crawl out to solid ice over the shoulders of her small companion, who pluckily hung to the ice, in danger every minute of being carried under.

Realizing that there was no time to go for help, Agnes stretched herself out on the ice and grasped him by the clothing. Three times she tugged away, and nearly got him out, but the boy had become so chilled that he could not help her, and he slipped back. Almost disheartened, the brave little girl made a fourth desperate effort, and this time she managed to pull her companion clear of the water.

In the intensely cold atmosphere the children's clothing was becoming frozen solid, so they started for their homes, a short distance away, running as fast as they could.

Startled parents divested the children of their icy clothing with all possible dispatch, gave them stimulants, and put them in bed. The next day they were around none the worse for their experience. If the children had been any great distance from home, it is believed that they would have been badly frozen.

GREAT PIANIST HAS DISAPPEARED

Mrs. Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler is Suffering From Melancholia.

Chicago, Feb. 12—Mrs. Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, the world famous pianist, has disappeared from her home, and the police have been asked by her husband to search for her. Mrs. Zeisler has for some time been suffering with melancholia, and the members of her family are apprehensive that some harm has befallen her.

Mr. Zeisler appeared at the Hyde Park station today and said that Mrs. Zeisler had left the house early in the morning, and that although he and his friends had made every effort to find her they had been unsuccessful, and desired the aid of the police. Mr. Zeisler told the police that his wife had for some time been suffering with spells of melancholia, and that just prior to her disappearance she had been mentally depressed for almost a month. He had no idea of where his wife might have gone, or what might have happened to her.

Police Inspector Hunt, in charge of the Hyde Park district, at once ordered policemen to assist in the search for Mrs. Zeisler. A number of automobiles were secured by the friends of Mr. Zeisler, and a most systematic search in the vicinity of the Zeisler residence was begun. Up to 1 o'clock the search had been fruitless. Mrs. Zeisler is one of the most noted pianists. She is a native of Silesia, and came to this country when but 2 years old. Her early musical education was secured in this city, and she afterward studied for a time in Europe. She has made repeated tours of this country and of Europe, being always received with enthusiasm by the public and musical critics. She is a member of many leading women's clubs, and prominent socially. Her husband, Sigmund Zeisler, is a wealthy and prominent attorney.

For more than a year she had been under the care of a specialist, but her sight did not materially improve. She was greatly worried over the fact that this might compel the abandonment of her career as a pianist, and constant brooding over the matter at times brought on attacks of pronounced melancholia.

She was compelled to cancel all her public engagements for this season, and several weeks ago entered a sanitarium near Chicago, from which she returned in greatly improved health. About a month ago, however, another attack of depression overcame her, and she has been unable to throw it off. In addition to this, she was constantly becoming more nearsighted. Everything that could be done was attempted, and attendants were at her side constantly. This morning, however, she eluded them and left the house. She was missed almost instantly, and five minutes after she had left the house her husband hurried in pursuit, but she had disappeared.

Later—Mrs. Zeisler returned to her home about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. She was greatly exhausted and declined to say where she had been.

New Ideas In Women's Separate Skirts

This has long been a branch of the business to which we have given special attention, and as a result, the earliest showing of new styles will generally be found at Gidding's.

We believe that better skirts were never sold for the money than those that make up the very considerable showing of new styles ready now. The models are largely exclusive. The fit, hang and workmanship of the skirts are equal to custom tailoring.

One especially strong line at $10.75—of chiffon Panama in any of these shades—white, reseda, Alice blue, gray and black. Circular gored, with two folds of self cloth at bottom and tailored Vandyke points.

Another of "Shadow Plaids" at $10—Pastel shades so harmonized that the effect is charming.

"French voiles" in cream and black are a feature—$22.50. Folds of voile, down and around in many effective ways.

These are examples of over forty new spring styles.

The starting point, $7.50. At $10.75 and $15 the makers stretched a point—so did we—otherwise they'd have been $13.50 and $18.50.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 12.—Maj. John Thomas, president of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad, died at his home here this morning, aged 76 years. Heart failure was the direct cause of his death. He leaves a widow and one son, John W. Thomas, Jr., who is general manager of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad. Maj. Thomas entered the railroad service in November, 1858, as agent of the road at Murphysboro, Tenn., and September, 1883, became general manager. He has been president of the road since 1899.

Beloit, Wis., Feb. 12.—James Sheehan, who, in the early 80's was one of the greatest first baseman in the West, died here today. He was 44 years old and played ball with all of the star teams of this part of the country at that time. He was an old partner of Joe Cantillon in his early days. Sheehan was with the Beloit champions in 1882 and 1883, in Green Bay in 1884 and with the Eau Claire champions in 1887. Later Sheehan played in Crawfordsville, Terre Haute, Peoria and Lincoln.

Besides his activity in business affairs, Mr. MacMillan was active in Democratic politics and in the local and state organizations of the Presbyterian church. He was 61 years of age.

ABSTEMIOUS.

The present vogue for wrestling, which became marked last year and which is exceedingly strong this season, is sufficient reason for calling the interested public's attention to this the not least interesting fact about wrestlers today—that, unlike prize fighters, they are a pretty abstemious lot when out of training as well as in, says the Washington Post.

Tom Jenkins, the American heavyweight champion, winning back that title from Gotch in Madison Square Garden in New York, last spring, does not know the taste of beer or any other intoxicant. Harvey Parker, the welterweight, has never drunk nor smoked, and in addition he foreswears coffee. Leo Pardello, the premier Italian heavyweight in this country, only occasionally takes a glass of some light Italian wine. "Farmer" Burns, originally from Iowa, has consumed just as much liquor and smoked as much tobacco as has Parker. The 'Cuban Wonder" (properly speaking, Clarence Bouldin), refuses invitations to be "one of the boys" a great deal oftener than he accepts. William J. Brown, for fourteen years wrestling partner of George Bothner, is every bit as careful in his living as Bothner himself, who admits that he takes a glass of beer once in a while, this being the extent practically of his indulgence in the divers excesses that usually wreck the prize fighter before he has reached 35 or 40, Fitzsimmons being a lone exception.

The names of many other wrestlers could be included in the list with propriety and truth, but perhaps the most abstemious wrestler of them all is the king of them all—the "Russian Lion," George Hackenschmidt.

It is a belief amounting almost to a superstition with Hackenschmidt that the moment he quits living in accordance with the moral law, to the best of his knowledge and ability, that moment his strength will desert him, and he will become as weak as Samson when he was shorn of his locks by the treacherous Delilah.

Perhaps "Hack's" observations of the demoralizing effects of "wine, women and song" on many men is responsible in part for the hold this belief has on him; perhaps his marked religious bent is more largely responsible. At any rate, before he does anything, Hackenschmidt always carefully weighs what effect the act will have mind being that anything which will upon him morally, his attitude of weaken a man's moral fiber will sooner or later do the same for his physical fiber.

The simplest of foods are good enough for Hackenschmidt 365 days in the year—and only once in a great while does he wash down a meal with a glass of beer, taken more for a tonic than a stimulant. He never smokes. He never stays out late with "the boys." He is early to bed and early to rise. He holds that hard work is one of the best methods possible for keeping one's self in trim, morally as well as physically, and he plans to have something for his hands to do every minute of the day. If he is not exercising, then he is giving time to his investments or discussing arrangements for matches with his manager, and when business cares are vanished, perhaps books of the sort that would delight the most straight-laced, claim his attention. Where, indeed, is a man who lives more abstemiously?

To the average wrestler's considerate care of himself may be creditcd his ability to stay in the game long after the average prize fighter has become "dead to the ring," by reason of excesses.

George Bothner, the world's lightweight champion, is in his 40th year, and as vigorous as ever. Tom Jenkins is 40 years old. Harvey Parker is two years his senior. "Farmer" Burns, who began his wrestling career at 35, the age when most prize fighters are decayed, is still in fine form at 50, his holding of the middleweight championship for years proving him to be so. Hackenschmidt is probably the youngest of the world's leading wrestlers, he being in his 29th year—a boy in years, almost, when compared with the majority of the men he has met and thrown in his trip around the world.

Leaving all natural inclinations either for or against an abstemious life out of consideration, the wrestler must lead a far more careful life than the prize fighter if he ever hopes to make a name and a livelihood by his wrestling.

The wrestling season usually stretches from Oct. 1 to the last of April, leaving only five months in which there are no bouts. This means not only that the wrestler must be in training seven months out of the year, but a month or two as well before the opening of the season. Therefore, it is easy to grasp why, to all intents and purposes, this means training for practically the entire year, since nine months of simple living tend to form a habit that is not often broken in the two months that are open to indulgences from the standpoint of training.

Anomalous as it may seem in view of all that has gone before, it is nevertheless a fact whenever a wrestler, retiring from the mat, finds himself unprepared against the coming of the invariably rainy day, he usually lets his name be placed in gilt or electric light letters over the door of a grogshop. But even in this demoralizing atmosphere he nearly always clings to the abstemious life. A favorite story among wrestlers tells of a retired wrestler, a saloon keeper, who not only practiced the simple life, but also insisted on preaching it to his customers, with the result that he drove all trade away and soon went into the sheriff's hands.

If every wrestler were as careful to save a portion of his earnings as Hackenschmidt is, there would be no occasion for any of them to embark in the liquor business when approaching old age makes them useless on the mat.

From the time he began his wrestling career at the age of 20, Hackenschmidt has put aside a part of his earnings in every bout. He is doing this with a steady purpose in mind—it is his ambition to save up enough money to furnish an income sufficient to provide his father's family, as well as himself, with the necessary comforts of life after he has retired from the mat.

It has never been the "Russian Lion's" intention to stick to wrestling. When he discovered that he could wrestle, and wrestle well, he decided to put his new-found gift to use until such time as he could secure the competence he saw he would probably never be able to amass through following civil engineering, for which he had been educated in a St. Petersburg university. This competence secured beyond peradventure of a doubt, that day will see Hackenschmidt retire—provided, of course, that he is in the same frame of mind then as now.

Hackenschmidt's American friends estimate that he is worth at present about $100,000, in spite of the circumstances that his expenses as a wrestler have been exceptionally heavy, and he is by no means niggardly lavish with it, after the manner of the champion pugilist. At the Madison Square garden bout with Jenkins, last spring, Hackenschmidt's share of the receipts was nearly $4,000.

HER USE OF THE DIRECTORY.

A stylishly dressed and altogether good looking woman was turning over the leaves of the directory in a leisurely manner when an irascible old gentleman, known to his many acquaintances as a man with a very small stock of patience, entered, says the Portland Enterprise. He wished to see the directory, too, possibly to look up the address of a man who owed him money. He stood about, now and then casting heavy looks in the direction of the directory, and coughing suggestively.

A business man in a hurry followed. He wanted to know where Walter Jones lived. It is a block or two away, but he has forgotten the number. He fell into line.

Then a man who sought some city official but knew nothing of his office, except that it closed in a few minutes, joined the ranks of waiters.

Still the woman placidly turned over leaf after leaf, without any apparent intention to decide whether the name she was seeking was Brown, Smith or Jones.

Finally, when matters were beginning to grow very tense, a young man rushed in. His mission would positively admit of no delay, so he politely offered to assist the woman, sugesting that his experience might tend to save time and lessen her labor. When he asked her what she sought, with a sweet smile full of appreciation, she replied:

"Oh, thank you. You are very kind. I am trying to find a real pretty name for my baby."

PROCTOR GOT EVEN.

Senator Proctor is not only a successful fisherman, but can tell a good story, as is shown by one he told at the fish and game league meeting at Fort Frederick, last summer, says the Boston Herald. Congressman Capron of Rhode Island was one of the guests, and had succeeded in spinning a yarn that brought a good laugh at the expense of the Vermont senator.

Unfortunately for the Rhode Islander, Senator Proctor had the last chance. He said no sportsman worthy of the name would tell a fish story that was not true. He happened to know of one good fish story in which the visitor figured.

He proceeded to tell how, in Rhode Island, there were two fish and game clubs. Congressman Capron belonged to one of them. The record maintained by Capron's club was the constant surprise and envy of the members of the other club, the secret of which was not discovered until recently.

One day a neighbor came rushing in to the Capron club house and wanted to use the scales. He said there was a new baby over at his house, and there was a controversy over its weight. The nurse was sure it was a 10-pounder. Capron hardly wanted to loan the scales, but could not well refuse, so the baby was weighed.

"And what do you think the baby figured on Capron's fish scales?" smiled the senator. "Well, it tipped the beam at an even 47 pounds."

HE TOOK IT.

George Moses, proprietor of the old tavern at Bucksport, Me., rarely allowed the desires of his guests to interfere with his general plans for running his hotel, says the Boston Herald.

Many years ago a relative of mine, spending the night at the tavern, asked Moses to see that he was called in time to take the early train out of Bucksport. Moses looked sternly at him and said: "So you want to be called at 4 o'clock, do you? Well, where do you think you be—in New York? I want you to understand, young man, that I am the bellboy, the porter, the head waiter and the clerk in this tavern, and I don't sit up all night to wake people up."

A long argument ensued, and finally Moses agreed that the early call should be put through, and my uncle retired without any compunctions of conscience for causing so much trouble.

In the morning, when called, he decided, as there was a blinding snowstorm, to wait for the afternoon train, so replied to Moses' gruff "Time to get up" by saying: "I guess I won't take that train."

Like a whirlwind Moses dashed into the room, dragged the shivering form out of bed on to the icy floor, and with a wrathful "By gum, you will take that train," he stood by and watched the hurried dressing to see there was no backsliding, and my uncle took the train.

ONE EAR ENOUGH.

Judge Wilbur, who retired from the Rhode Island bench last June, when the new court and practice act went into effect, had for many years previous handled the criminal business of the state, says the Boston Herald. He was perfectly familiar with the wiles and excuses of men who sought to evade jury duty, and showed them little consideration.

"What is the nature of your infirmity?" asked the judge.

"I am deaf in one ear, your honor," replied the man.

"You'll do," said the judge. "Don't you know you only have to hear one side of a case in the grand jury room?"

DEDICATION OF CHURCH

New First Presbyterian Church at Hibbing Formally Opened.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—On Sunday morning at 10:30 the dedicatory services were held in the new First Presbyterian church of Hibbing. Rev. Frank Durant of the Episcopal church, and Rev. Rupert Swinnerton of the Methodist church, omitted their respective morning services, to give their congregation the opportunity of joining with the Presbyterians in this beautiful service. This service was not entirely of the nature of most dedicatory services, inasmuch as it was not held with the idea and purpose of pressing the people for further contributions. During the morning service, the pastor, Rev. Charles P. Bates, announced the financial conditions of the building fund. The church building together with all furnishings, excluding the exterior painting, cost in round numbers $5,000; and this has entirely been paid with the exception of the small sum of $300. The morning offering brought $220, and the offering at the evening service, nearly enough to make the full $300 required. Thus the church, at its dedication is without a debt, which is a record that is very rarely achieved. This surprising success will be received by hundreds of people throughout the Northwest as a proof of the wonderful advancement of the church in our mining towns. It goes to show what a people can do; and the people of Hibbing, and others who have so generously helped, deserve the highest praise for establishing the beginning of such a power for good in the town.

The leader of this congregation, Rev. Charles P. Bates, came to Hibbing, from St. Louis, Mich., about a year ago. In that time, one short year, he has led his congregation rapidly on, until now they are in their beautiful home and free from debt. This great work was certainly not achieved without hard work. Rev. Bates deserves the highest credit for the wonderful realization of his work. He is a young man, filled with life and energy.

The plans of the church were drawn by Austin Terryberry of Duluth, and very ably executed by David Graham of Hibbing. The auditorium is furnished in a very harmonious and complete style. The church is provided with circular pews with curved seats and curved backs. The windows, which are very beautiful, are of opalescent glass. The front window, which was presented by the Sunday school, contains a fine copy of the well known "Gethsemane" by Hoffman. The woodwork is grained in oak. The walls are tinted in very pretty olive green, and the floor is covered with a handsome red ingrain carpet.

Opening into the auditorium is a room, 14 by 16 feet in size, which has been furnished by the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip (the young men's organization) for a free reading room, open to everybody at all times. Adjoining this is the pastor's study. Upstairs is a room 14 by 32 feet, which will be used as a gymnasium by the young men, except when used at social occasions for a dining room. It had been estimated that the auditorium would seat over 200 people, but during the dedicatory services, both morning and evening, fully twice that number were comfortably seated.

The dedicatory service will always remain in the minds and hearts of all those who were present. Rev. Frank Durant of the Episcopal church delivered the scripture reading, and Rev. Rupert Swinnerton of the Methodist church offered the prayer. The congregation was very highly favored by solos by C. H. Giddings and Miss Florence Hyland, both of Duluth. For some time past Mrs. Louise McPike has been training the choir, which delivered splendid music at both the morning and evening service.

The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. Donald D. McKay, Ph.D., pastor of the Grace Presbyterian church of Minneapolis, Minn. Dr. McKay said in part:

"The great secret of success as a worker in the cause of God would seem to be, not so much capacity for labor, as quality of heart and life. In turning to the records and examining the accounts of the men who were chosen as deacons of the early church, they are described as men of honest report, full of the holy ghost and of wisdom. The church of God is carrying a mighty burden today. Do you know what that is? Men and women of doubtful or bad report have been occupying high places in her courts, and persistently pushing themselves above, into the front seats. The man or woman who needs to be watched in the market place has no business to be leading the forces of God in the church. You know what that means. Scorn and contempt for the whole cause. The bearer of the vessels of God must be clean. We can't afford to ignore what other people think about us; and right here let me say, you can't compell others to always speak well of you, but you can defy them to think and say that you are not as good and true as you pretend to be. This is a strange world. It admires the man who strikes it the hardest blows—when these blows come from an arm that receives its orders from an honest and fearless heart. It is the privilege of every believer to have the spirit of God in some measure dwelling in him. But all are not filled. The large measures are for those who open their hearts wide and bid the spirit of God possess all. Such men have a marvelous power with God. They are as magnets for God among men. God hears them. God hears the prayer they speak, and somehow the words go straight to the conscience and heart, and men believe them and follow them. The life that is possessed of the spirit of God finds it no sin to go where God directs, whether that be a desert way, or to speak where God needs some one to rise and defend His cause.

The other distinctive qualification for efficient service is that of wisdom. Many have a zeal, but not according to knowledge. The great amount of well Christian effort fails for lack of tact. The high purpose of the wise and zealous workers should be evident to all, and an inspiration to all. He should be the very personification of Christian courtesy and culture. Let the feelings and opinions of others be one of your first considerations. If it be necessary to reopen a wound, don't use a pick axe. Follow the example of your Master. Mark his wisdom, his patience, and humility. Paul said, "All things to all men," if by any means he might save some—that was tact. Now to come to a specific case, let us examine that of Philip for a little. There is no mention of him, save in some connection which indicated fidelity to his work. He was prompt and obedient, no matter how erksome the duty imposed. The order for the heavenly messenger was, 'Arise and go toward the South by way which is desert.' Why by the desert way, instead of the paved highways of Samaria. * * Only in going that way could he do the work which God had for him. The world would never have been redeemed had Jesus and the Disciples remained on the point of his transfiguration. It may seem to have been desert all the way for some. A characteristic of the early church was that every one who learned the story of salvation was understood to have a commission to go and tell it. He might do this by the consecrated desk or by the way-side, to a great throng or a single hearer, but preach he must. Think how much might be done by this congregation, were this spirit now to animate the hearts of all. Our highest privilege, our most sacred duty, as approved workers in the church of God, is to lead the children of men to God. If we fail in this we fail in the fulfillment of the purpose, which is the only argument for our existence as a church. The church membership must be like the Great Master with hands ever extended to help to nobler and better living. Our church doors ought to be as the very gates of heaven, swinging wide for all who are weary and laden and need our help. Let the joys that are set in motion in our hearts go forth to enrichen the lives that are sad. This world of crime, sin and sadness. Those who frequent only the desert way. The dreary plains know nothing of the deep, strong peace and joy, that which upholds the believer's heart and have never seen the sunlight heights along which you were led. One after one come upon this restless soul, and untaught by the gospel of Jesus, he must go down to death hearing no answer. The way to goodness is in the service of God."

And conscious of your own abounding life,
Ready to throw your souls' fresh growing powers
Into some noble cause or lower strife,
Christ Jesus was a young man, strong and brave;
Give him your heart's allegiance, give to him
The best you have.

"And you in whom the same young life is throbbing,
But with a steadier pulse and gentler flow,
Whose hearts were made for sacrifice and loving,
Whose souls' ideals grow with you as you grow;
Oh, give to Christ your first, most sacred love,
And of your hearts' devotion give to him
The best you have.

"And is our best too much? O friends, let us remember
How once our Lord poured out his soul for us,
And in the prime of his mysterious manhood
The Lord of Lords, by whom the worlds were made,
Through bitter grief and tears gave us The best he had."

After the sermon the presentation of the keys took place, by the chairman of the building committee, W. C. Northey, to Pentecost Mitchell, the president of the board of trustees. Responsive reading was then conducted by Rev. Samuel A. Jamieson, the pastor at large for this district, who has done so much for the establishment of this church.

Sabbah school was held a noon; many of the congregation remaining. S. A. Blair, S. S. M. of Duluth, gave a splendid talk to the boys and girls, after which many of the older people present realized for the first time the importance of bringing the little children into the church, and to lead Christian lives. The visiting pastors also gave short talks.

The church was again filled to its utmost capacity for the evening service. The sermon was preached by Rev. S. F. Sharpless, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Duluth. Rev. Sharpless delivered his beautiful sermon in a very creditable manner.

The program for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week is as follows:

SIX PERSONS ARE BURNED

In Fire Which Sweeps Commercial District of Portland, Or.

Ten or More Are Seriously Injured During Conflagration.

Portland, Or., Feb. 12.—At least six persons lost their lives in a fire that swept a busy commercial district at the east end of the Morrison street bridge, spanning the Willamette river, early today. Ten or more persons were seriously injured and were removed to hospitals or the nearby residences.

The dead:

NATHANIEL P. YOUNG, watchman.

——— HENDICK, photographer.

Two unknown women.

Two unknown men.

The injured: Mrs. Brown, badly burned about the body; Miss Brown, face, hands and body burned; ——— Babcock, back badly injured; Mrs. Taylor, badly injured in jumping from a window; Baby Taylor, 6 years, burned; L. T. Daley, burned about the face and arms. A number of persons are reported missing.

The fire started in the Mount Hood saloon and consumed that place and the lodging house above it, in which a majority of those killed and injured were sleeping. Twenty-two horses, property of the East Side Transfer company, were burned. Watchman Young met death in an heroic effort to save the horses. He had made several trips into the transfer company's stables and finally was cut off by the flames. Looking from an upper window, he waved his hands to the crowd below and cried "Good bye, boys, I can't get out this time" and and fell back into the flames. The loss is $50,000.

ENTRIES ARE NUMEROUS

For the National Ski Jumping Tournament at Ishpeming.

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judging from the number of entries already received, the national ski tournament to be held on the Brasswire hill, this city, on Washington's birthday, will be the greatest event of the kind ever conducted on this continent. Appearing as contestants will be upwards of 100 expert skiers, practically all of them of the Scandinavian nationality and many of them men who have achieved fame as jumpers in their native lands. A record-breaking attendance also is looked for, while that longer jumps will be made this year than ever, in consequence of the improved condition of the slide, is a practical certainty. The list of prizes also will be larger on this occasion. In addition to many cash awards, there will be the Mather medal and the Hopkins, Roberts and a ladies' cup. It is likely that a few other trophies will be given, the directors now having this matter under consideration in view of the very numerous entries from the various Northwestern states. The Mather medal will go to the skier who makes the longest jump, regardless of form, and who still retains his footing. The trophy is the gift of W. G. Mather, president of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company. It is a round, gold medal engraved with the representation of a skier in the act of making a jump. It hangs from a gold pin, with red and black ribbon, the Ishpeming club's colors. The closing feature of the tornament will be a banquet to the members of the Ishpeming club and all visiting skiers, at which the prizes will be awarded. There will be impromptu speeches and musical numbers.

LEWIS KRUGER

Has Issued Challenge for Another Wrestling Bout With Collins.

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Lewis Kruger, the Mooresville (Ind.) wrestler who met Joe Collins, otherwise Ed Adamson, of Chicago, in a bout at Hancock last winter and who was defeated by the latter after a fiercely contested struggle, has issued a challenge for another go with Collins to take place some time this month for $150 a side; winner to take all, the match to be catch-as-catch-can, best two of three falls. Collins, or Adamson, although the smaller man, is willing to take on Kruger again, and the match will soon be arranged. The bout will be pulled off in the Copper country.

DREW KNIFE ON CHINAMAN

Accused of drawing a knife on the keeper of a Chinese restaurant on lower Lake avenue, Lennie Paine, a negro, was arrested last night and arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charge of disorderly conduct.

Paine is claimed to have entered the restaurant in company with another negro. While the latter was eating his soup, Paine amused himself by joggling his elbow. He kept this up until the other negro became incensed and ordered him to stop. The proprietor also interfered and told Paine that he would have to quit or get out. In the quarrel which followed Paine is claimed to have drawn a knife, but the bystanders interfered, and summoned an officer.

He was fined $10 and costs by Judge Cutting this morning.

CUT CLOTHES INTO STRIPS

Burke Williams Arrested for Destroying Rose Ekols' Garments.

"Ah guess a man can cut up his own clothes," said Burke Williams, a gentleman of color, who lives at 518 Garfield avenue, and who was arrested this morning on the complaint of Rose Ekols, a woman with whom he is claimed to have been living.

The woman claimed that Williams had entered the house last evening and had cut her clothes into ribbons. Williams was arrested in Superior on the woman's complaint, by Detective Irvine, and brought back to Duluth. He claims that the clothes belonged to him and that he had a right to destroy them if he cared to do so.

It is doubtful what complaint will be lodged against him.

WORST ECZEMA DOCTORS EVER SAW

Spread Rapidly Over Body—Limbs and Arms Had to Be Bandaged and Scalp Looked Dreadful—Suffered Untold Misery for Three Years—Better in Two Months

MARVELOUS CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My son, who is now twenty-two years of age, when he was four months old began to have eczema on his face, spreading quite rapidly until he was nearly covered. We had all the doctors around us and some from larger places, but no one helped him a particle. The eczema was something terrible, and the doctors said it was the worst case they ever saw. At times his whole body and face were covered, all but his feet. I had to bandage his limbs and arms; his scalp was just dreadful. I used many kinds of patent medicines before trying the Cuticura Remedies,—all to no avail.

"A friend teased me to try Cuticura. At last I consented, when my boy was three years and four months old, having had eczema all that time, and suffering untold misery. I began to use all three of the Cuticura Remedies; the Cuticura Soap helped as well as the Ointment. He was better in two months; in six months he was well; but I gave him the Cuticura Resolvent one year,—using twelve bottles, I think,—and always used the Cuticura Soap for bathing, and do now a good deal. He was four years old before he was well, and his skin became perfectly fair when cured. I give you permission to publish this letter for I am always glad to do good when I can. I think I have told you all there is necessary to tell." Mrs. R. L. Risley, Oct. 24, 1905. Piermont, N. H.

THE TRADE STATISTICS

Of the United States With Spain and Portugal.

Washington, Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Trade of the United States with Spain and Portugal amounted in the fiscal year 1905 to over $34,000,000, against less than $20,000,000 in 1895, a decade earlier. A statement just prepared by the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, shows that of the total trade between the United States and those countries of over $34,000,000, $15,000,000 was imports and $19,000,000 exports. Of the $15,000,000 of imports from these two countries, $6,500,000, speaking in round terms, was from Portugal and $8,500,000 from Spain. Of the $19,000,000 of exports to these countries, $2,000,000 was to Portugal and $17,000,000 to Spain.

Taking the two countries separately, it may be said that imports from Portugal have greatly increased during the last few years, while the exports to that country have declined quite as rapidly as the imports have decreased. The total value of imports from Portugal in 1900 was $3,743,216, and in 1905, $6,489,207; while the exports to Portugal were, in 1900, $5,886,542, and in 1905, $2,089,846. The increase in importations from Portugal occurs chiefly in india rubber and cocoa, and the decrease in exports to that country occurs chiefly in wheat and wheat flour. The value of india rubber imported from Portugal in 1900 was $1,719,311, and in 1905, $3,194,541; the value of cocoa imported from that country in 1900 was $540,270, and in 1905, $1,200,245. Cork wood also shows a slight increase, the value of that material received from Portugal in 1900 being $877,947, and in 1905, $932,111. Argols or wine lees, which were formerly dutiable, but have been admitted free of duty beginning with the year 1899 under a special reciprocity treaty, have grown from $82,761 in 1897, the year prior to the reciprocity treaty, to $121,321 in 1905. Anchovies and sardines imported from Portugal in 1905 amounted to $166,817, goat skins $246,967, sulphur ore $210,047, and wine $154,927.

The exports to Portugal are chiefly raw cotton, tobacco, mineral oil, lumber and manufactures of iron and steel. The largest item in 1905 was raw cotton, $812,776; next, lumber, $339,547; illuminating oil, $264,009, and iron and steel manufactures, $120,106. Of wheat the value exported to Portugal in 1900 was $3,505,425, but this fell to $1,468,798 in 1902, $339,495 in 1904, and in 1905 the records fail to show any exports of wheat to Portugal. Wheat flour also disappeared from the list of articles exported from the United States to Portugal in 1905, though the records of earlier years show that the value of that article was comparatively small, being but $28,814 in 1895, and having steadily fallen since that date. Of raw cotton the value of the exports of 1905 is larger than in any year during the preceding decade.

The details of the trade with Spain are especially interesting, since they show a marked growth both as to imports from and exports to that country in recent years. A comparison of the conditions in 1905 with those of 1897, the last year prior to the war with Spain, shows that imports into the United States from that country have increased from $3,500,000 and exports to the United States from that country have increased from $11,000,000 to $17,000,000, speaking in round terms. The principal articles imported from Spain are fruits and nuts, sulphur ore, cork wines, and vegetables. Fruits and nuts are by far the largest item in the imports from Spain, amounting in 1905 to considerably more than $3,000,000 out of a total importation of $8,500,000 from that country. Of this total of over $3,000,000 worth of fruits and nuts, almonds amounted to $885,254, preserved and prepared fruits $664,490, raisins $796,100, while olives and grapes form the bulk of the remainder, which amounts to about $1,500,000 in value. Spain supplies a large proportion of the more than $1,000,000 worth of olives imported into the United States annually, while the value of grapes imported from that country is also considerable.

The largest exports to Spain are raw cotton, which amounted in 1905 to $12,735,778, tobacco, unmanufactured, $913,865, crude mineral oil $963,529, shooks, staves, and headings $427,257, boards $296,565, iron and steel manufactures $397,544, and leather and manufactures thereof $246,862.

The trade with Spain in 1905, both as to imports and exports, was larger than in any preceding year in the history of our trade with that country. Imports from Spain amounted to $4,500,000 in 1875, a little less than $5,000,000 in 1885, $3,500,000 in 1895, $8,786,507 in 1905. Exports to Spain amounted to $7,500,000 in 1875, practically $12,000,000 in 1885, about $11,000,000 in 1895, and $17,038,474 in 1905.

D. E. H., Feb. 12, 1906.

LINCOLN stood for honesty and fair dealing, and we believe in their daily application to business as well as to the government.

We sell honestly-made clothes—give our customers the worth of their money—and still make something for ourselves.

At this time of the year, when we consider it best to sell at big reductions rather than to carry goods over, we do so without promising more than we mean to keep and living up to all promises.

For instance if we say that we will sell one of those long dark brown worsted Coats of the "Sincerity" make (which was marked and is fully worth $25) at $14.50, you can depend upon getting a twenty-five dollar coat for $14.50.

Then we say the $18 single breasted dark colored long coat is yours for $10.50—we say it, mean it, sell it and do it.

Walk over to the Boys' and Children's Department and pick up the coat that takes your eye—perhaps it is that fine fancy gray belted Russian Child's coat. The old ticket is there—$8.50—but the clerk will tell you "As advertised—the price is now $5.50.

And so on through the big store.

SURPRISE HUSBANDS

Curlers Dined by Their Wives After Saturday Night's Games.

Novelty Contest Ends, Treasurer's Side Winning by Nine Points.

On Saturday night at the West Duluth curling rink, not only was there an exciting finish to the novelty contest in the curling games, but there were gala doings. The novelty contest took up several nights of last week, there being four rinks representing the treasurer and four representing the secretary. The treasurer's side of the contest won by the narrow margin of 9 points on the total. The last game, Saturday night, decided it, and there was nothing sure about it at any stage of the contest. A great many curlers were present watching the contest.

Saturday night G. W. Meldrum's rink of the secretary's side defeated E. J. Zauft's rink of the treasurer's side, by a score of 16 to 8; and the rink of M. M. Meldahl, for the treasurer, beat S. W. Hanchett's rink by a score of 8 to 7.

After the games were played the curlers were invited into the social rooms of the club and there found the wives of the curlers with a fine supper ready. The spread came as a complete surprise, and was very welcome. It turned out to be one of the best social affairs of the year. The luncheon that was offered was excellent, and everybody was in the mood to enjoy the occasion. It resulted in theirsbeing speeches and toasts, fully as good as the luncheon. This is the first time the women of any part of the city have shown much interest in curling, and it would not be surprising were several rinks of women formed in West Duluth, probably next winter, as it is too late this year. They are very much interested in the game in which their husbands are engaged, and watch the scores closely. In fact, the women of the club are as keen critics of the game as any. The scores Saturday night follow:

Officials to Crematory.

All of the city officials from West Duluth are attending the inspection of the crematory this afternoon at Thirteenth avenue west. West Duluth officials are quite anxious about the effect of this crematory on the health conditions of West Duluth, for the reason that this part of the city is not as well supplied with sewers as are other parts, and being low and flat, there is better opportunity in many ways for disease to breed. It is hoped that the crematory will help wipe out that chance.

Birthday Party.

Mrs. J. Isaacson of 216 South Sixty-third avenue west was hostess at a birthday party given Saturday evening in honor of her eldest daughter, Miss Minnie Isaacson. The evening was spent in games. Refreshments were served. Those present were:

Misses Lizzie Mauml, Hilda Erickson, Hilda Olson, Alice Torgeson, Alice McDonald, Eleanor Johnson, Rowena Olson, Esther McDonald, Sadie Davidson, Lucy Johnson, Anna Kucjenbacker, Selma Johnson, Lily Nivel Nivela, Esther Johnson, Mamie Isaacson, Mabel Isaacson; Messrs. George Christopher, Charles Erickson, Arne G. Frank, Carl Johnson, Ray Donald, Charles Johnson, Henry Johnson, Willie Signer, Arthur Isaacson.

West Duluth Briefs.

The progressive card party to be given this evening by the Modern Samaritans at Wade's hall promises to be a largely attended affair and it is quite likely that the entertainment will be enlarged as a consequence.

Miss Georgina Messler will leave about the first of March for Germany to take up the study of music.

Alderman and Mrs. L. A. Barnes will leave next week for Chicago and Washington to be gone for some little time. They hope to hear the debate on the rate bill in the United States senate.

Mrs. Keene of Fiftyeighth avenue west and Elinor street will entertain the ladies society of Plymouth Congregational church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

WATCH REPAIRING—HURST, 301 CENTRAL.

Measles is getting more broadcast in West Duluth and quite a number of houses have been quarantined. The children that have the measles are all pretty sick but no deaths from the disease have yet occurred.

F. J. Cullen, who was recently operated on at the Mayo hospital in Rochester is reported as improving. He is still at that hospital. It is believed that he will regain the use of his leg, which was injured in the ore dock accident about a year ago, and which it was feared would necessitate amputation.

H. J. Peters has gone to Bellingham, Wash., to take a position in a sawmill there.

Mrs. Charles Bergstrom of Wadena street has gone to St. Paul to visit her sister, Mrs. H. S. Mueller, formerly of West Duluth.

SHOULD PREPARE FOR EMERGENCIES

Root Believes It Well to Be Ready for Chinese Uprising.

Washington, Feb. 12.—While not regarding an anti-foreign uprising in China as exactly imminent, Secretary Root is convinced that it is his duty to pursue the course he has already outlined for the protection of American life and property in China. He has not hesitated to express this view to his congressional callers. Advices from the Orient are disquieting from this fact, that it is clearly established that the Chinese government, while not perhaps actually aiding the development of this anti-foreign sentiment, has not exerted itself to prevent the spread of the anti-American boycott, notwithstanding the publication of numerous proclamations by the viceroys. So Secretary Root will continue to urge on Secretary Taft the adoption of proper military precautions to meet this policy of preparation for any emergency.

Reports of officers returning from the East are to the effect that the Japanese do not appear to be involved in this wave of anti-foreign sentiment in China.

The troops which were ordered to the Philippines, that this government might be prepared for any eventuality are now en route to the islands. It was stated today that the war department would be able to take care of them and would have sufficient funds to provide for the increased force in the Philippines.

MANY AMENDMENTS ARE PROPOSED FOR RATE BILL.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Many amendments to the Hepburn railroad rate bill have been proposed in the senate committee on interstate commerce and are being discussed and laid aside to be voted upon beginning next Friday. The committee has not formally considered any amendment touching upon the court feature, for the reason that the opponents of the bill in its present form desire to perfect a plan for a court review of orders of the interstate commerce commission before it is offered. Senator Crane favors a provision similar to that of the Esch-Townsend bill and informally has presented such an amendment, but has not urged it in any way. The committee expects to reach this feature when it meets tomorrow and will devote practically all of the remaining time to its consideration. The discussion today was confined to the first three sections with a view to perfecting them, and it did not provoke any controversy.

Sale of Oriental Rugs.

The first day of this sale was crowned with success. From the opening of the store in the morning the department has been crowded with eager buyers, each and every one anxious to get first choice of these splendid values we are offering.

It is an event that the lovers of rich, artistic and beautiful floor coverings will not overlook, as our past reputation for carrying the finer sort of things is well known to every home in this city.

No matter what your wish may be, whether you want a fine silk rug or not, rugs for decoration or hard use, you can find it here.

We invite you to visit the third floor tomorrow—the invitation is a broad one—you may come and just look, or buy—just as it pleases you.

GRIGBY'S WIFE

By Charles Sloan Reid.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Grigby and I were playmates when we were boys. Living in the country, we were neighbors, though our homes were two miles apart. But these two miles were as nothing between Grigby and me—we knew every swimming hole in the streams round about, and we knew the home of the red haws and the wild grapes. Together we made many excursions to the village and back again, a distance of six miles, returning before our parents were the wiser for our absence. We romped and frolicked and were as happy as two boys could be.

Then came our school days, and afterward our college days, during which Grigby and I were still chums. Grigby was an apt scholar and a hard student; he had ambition and he was aggressive in competition. He had been the idol of his family in boyhood—a college graduate, he became the lion of the household, though he did not seem to abuse the homage paid him.

But there was something in Grigby's nature that I never understood, that is, until years afterward. He was an obedient son, a kindly neighbor, and a constant lover. He and Gertrude Mauldin had been sweethearts since childhood, and as they had grown older, the attachment had grown stronger, until, had they not themselves become engaged, the neighbors would have arranged the matter for them, for all agreed that Grigby should have Gertrude and that Gertrude should have Grigby.

Grigby had turned his attention to medicine and had won a scholarship in the Baltimore medical college. I remember the day Grigby went away. He spoke of Gertrude, how much he adored her and how deeply he regretted the necessity of going away from her for even one short year. He told me at parting that the wedding would take place just as soon as he had finished his course in lectures.

I heard from Grigby quite often during his absence. But during the last two years of his attendance upon lectures he did not come home at all. But when the time came for his final home-coming, I one day reminded Gertrude that I was to be Grigby's best man, and that I hoped the wedding would take place without delay. Gertrude smiled, and her face colored deeply, but she did not reply.

When Grigby returned I met him at the station—and what was my surprise to find him accompanied by a woman, a frail little flower of humanity that Grigby might have carried in his arms like a child. But she was beautiful, the crystallization of the essence of sweet dreams. Grigby would look down upon her with the deepest admiration expressed in his eyes, and she would return the look with all the devotion of a surrendered soul.

"My wife," said Grigby, presenting her to me, and I exclaimed in my soul:

"Oh, Gertrude!"

Afterward Grigby told me that his wife was an orphan, and that he had married her only three days before leaving Baltimore. "You see," he added, "I could not wait to go back for her."

Grigby and his wife took up their abode with Grigby's people, who, he it said, were some time in recovering from the shock which they had sustained. Grigby began to practice. I do not know what were his aspirations for the future, but he evidently intended to get all the experience he could as a country doctor.

At first Grigby was accompanied everywhere he went by his wife. She was always like a new-blown spring flower, and I never saw such wifely devotion. Grigby seemed to be her whole thought. But before the year grew old, there came a change in the husband's conduct toward his wife—gradual at first, then decidedly marked. He was no longer accompanied by his wife anywhere. Social invitations to them both were accepted by him alone. He was as gay as ever, and went so far as to be complimentary to young girls with whom he was occasionally thrown.

But what had become of Grigby's wife? I visited him at his home one day not long after this change had become so noticeable. It was a chilly day in October and I was invited into a cold room.

"I will have a fire made in a moment," said Grigby, and he retired.

But he was gone only a few moments. Following him on his return came some one with an armful of wood. I looked up. That some one was Grigby's wife. I arose.

"Just keep your seat," said Grigby, and he sat down opposite me.

With feelings I cannot describe I saw Grigby's wife place the wood on the irons and kindle the fire, while Grigby talked to me. Not one word of his conversation, however, can I clearly remember. Grigby's wife had already lost most of the bloom of her cheeks, and she was shabbily clothed. But I shall never forget the look of love she gave Grigby. It was like that a faithful animal might give in its dying moments to the master who, in a moment of passion, had slain it. And when Grigby spoke to her about some task of drudgery, as she turned to go, the harshness of his tone brought tears to her eyes. I cut my visit short—the atmosphere of the room grew too close for me.

After this I heard frequent reports from the neighbors to the effect that Grigby's wife was treated only as a servant in the house. She was not permitted to dine with the rest of the family, but was compelled to take her meals of coarse food in the kitchen. Visitors at the house saw her only in the execution of some menial office.

On a morning in November I had occasion to visit a man who lived on Grigby's place. I was riding horseback, and my only way to reach the man's house was to ride through Grigby's yard, down the hill and across a little stream there. The wind was cold and sharp, but with my big coat buttoned closely about my neck I managed to keep tolerably comfortable.

As I crossed the stream into the wagon road I chanced to turn my head a little and saw, a few yards away, a small curl of smoke.

A small fire was burning under a large pot. Several wash tubs were standing near, and over one of them was bending the form of a woman clothed in a coarse woolen garment. I shivered as I saw the bare white arms exposed to the cutting wind. And the woman was Grigby's wife. My heart sickened as I rode away. I recalled a few conversations I had had with that frail but beautiful little woman, and I remember her high tone of refinement, her superiority in every respect to Grigby. But now—I rode on, depressed. Could she love him so devotedly still, I wondered? Yes, the neighbors said so. They said that she spent all her spare moments, which were few indeed, in preparing something to please Grigby and to remind him of her love.

It was in November, as I have said, when I saw Grigby's wife at the wash tub. Now—it was the following May, the birds had just begun to twitter about the eaves and the roses were in bloom—I was called to Grigby's home. In the little front room where I had seen Grigby's wife make the fire only a few months before, while Grigby sat idly by, I now looked upon the pulseless features of a beautiful corpse—and my heart leaped with the emotion of a prayer of thankfulness.

The following day she was buried. At the grave a few tears fell from Grigby's eyes, which, it seemed, God's wrath would have turned to livid coals upon his cheeks. As we turned away from the grave, Grigby took my arm as if for support.

"Release me!" I cried, springing away from him as from a snake which had attempted to coil itself about me.

"Grigby!" I faced him, that he might feel the loathing of my soul in the fire of my eyes. "Grigby, you are a murderer! Although you are safe from the clutches of human law, Almighty God has recorded the crime against you."

* * * * * * *

On an autumn afternoon, from beside the grave of Grigby's wife, where she had been placing some late flowers, arose a maiden lady, whose hair had taken its first few silver rays. As she passed through the gateway a man stopped his horse in the road near by and slipped from the saddle to the ground, where he stood waiting.

"Gertrude," he called, as the woman passed near him. "Gertrude, is there still no hope for me?"

But the woman did not turn her head, neither did she answer, as she continued her way among the tall trees and through the gathering twilight.

JERRY USNEK GETS THE LIMIT

Pleads Guility to Picking the Pockets of Sleeping Woodsmen.

The extreme penalty for petty larceny was given Jerry Usnek, a young Austrian, this morning, by Judge Cutting, after the prisoner had pleaded guilty to robbing two woodsmen who were asleep in Matlak's saloon on West Superior street.

One of the victims dozed in a chair in the front room and the other was asleep in a rear room. Usnek, it is claimed, had been following the men and as soon as they fell asleep he deftly picked their pockets. The police claim he secured about $10 from the two men, but he admitted taking but $3 this morning.

Another woodsman is claimed to have witnessed the act, and he stated to the police that Usnek had offered him 50 cents to keep quiet about it.

Usnek fled to Superior after the crime, and was arrested there on the request of the Duluth police. He was brought back yesterday by Detective Irvine, and charged with petty larceny.

Judge Cutting fined him $100 and costs with the alternative of a 90-days sentence. The circumstances might have constituted the offense a case of grand larceny, had the county attorney cared to prosecute.

SENATE FORCES

Hand of House and Gives Delegate Rights to Alaska.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The senate has forced the hand of the house by passing a bill giving Alaska the right to elect a delegate in congress by direct vote. For years attempts have been made to obtain initial action in the representative chamber on this bill, but they have failed invariably. Within a few days the house probably will acquiesce in the senate's action and the Northern land will come into its own.

Never before in the history of congress has the senate originated a measure giving one of the country's possessions a right to representation. A majority of the members of the house will welcome the senate's action, for it gives full excuse to force a vote on the proposition. Heretofore, while most of the representatives have desired to give recognition to Alaska, there has been opposition in committee and the majority never had the opportunity to express its will.

Under the provisions of the act an election will be held in Alaska next August. The federal judiciary of the district will be instructed to perfect the machinery and to give due notice of the election.

CHINESE AT BOSTON.

Boston, Feb. 12.—The Chinese imperial commission today inspected a number of cotton mills in this vicinity. Tonight the members will be given a dinner by the state.

LONGWORTH GOES OUT.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Representative Nicholas Longworth had so far recovered from his recent attack of tonsilitis as to be able to take a short drive today.

IS THIS WHAT AILS YOU?

If the Symptoms Fit Your Case, Remember "A Disease Once Known is Half Cured."

Feel feverish? Have headache? Backache? In fact, "ache all over?" Have occasional chilly sensations? Appetite gone? Tongue furred? Bad taste, especially in morning? Bad, foul breath? Perhaps nausea, or "sickness at stomach" occasionally? Feel weak, tired, blue and discouraged?

The above are symptoms common to stomach and liver derangements and often precede attacks of fever and malarious affections, grip, bronchitis, and "lung fever," or pneumonia.

Whichever ailment they point to, you may be sure that it is best to get rid of them as soon as possible by putting your system to rights, regulating, toning up and invigorating stomach, liver and bowels, and thus purifying your blood and system and enabling it to throw off the attack.

For the above purpose, medical science has as yet produced no better agent than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is not a secret, or patent medicine, all its ingredients being printed on the bottle wrapper. It is the prescription of a well-known and experienced physician. It contains no alcohol or other harmful, habit-forming agents—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used both as a solvent and preservative of the medicinal extracts of which it is composed. It is made from the following, native, American medicinal roots: Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Bloodroot, Mandrake root and Black Cherrybark. The medicinal properties of these are extracted by exact and peculiar processes with the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, and by means of apparatus and appliances devised for this special purpose, and in such a way as to produce a most perfect pharmaceutical compound.

As to the superior curative properties of some of the above ingredients, we can only give room here for a very few of the briefest extracts from standard medical works, but more complete information will be sent you, free of charge, in pamphlet form, if you will send your address, plainly written on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., with a request for the same.

Of Golden Seal root Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Medical College, says: "Very useful as a stomachic tonic (stomach tonic) and in atonic (weak stomach) dyspepsia. Cures gastric catarrh (catarrh of stomach) and headaches accompanying the same. * * * Chronic catarrh of the intestines, even if it has proceeded to ulceration, is remarkably benefited by Hydrastis (Golden Seal). * * * It may be given as a remedy for intermittent, chronic and malarial poisoning, and enlarged spleen of malarial origin."

From "Organic Medicines," by Grover Coe, M. D., of New York, we extract the following: "Hydrastis (Golden Seal) exercises an especial influence over mucous surfaces. Upon the liver it acts with equal certainty and efficacy. As a cholagogue (liver invigorator), it has few equals. In affections of the spleen, and abdominal viscera generally, it is an efficient and reliable remedy. Also in scrofula, glandular diseases generally, cutaneous eruptions, indigestion, debility, diarrhœa and dysentery, constipation, piles and all morbid and critical discharges."

Dr. Coe further says: "Hydrastis (Golden Seal) is also of inestimable value in the treatment of chronic derangements of the liver. It seems to exercise an especial influence over the hepatic (liver) structure generally, resolving (dissolving) biliary deposits, removing obstructions, promoting secretions, and giving tone to the various functions. It is eminently cholagogue (liver accelerator), and may be relied upon for the relief of hepatic (liver) torpor."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal: "It stimulates the digestive processes and increases the assimilation of food. By these means the blood is enriched. * * * "In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

As to Stone root, the AMERICAN DISPENSATORY says: "In diseases of stomach and intestines—improves appetite, promotes flow of gastric juice; tonic effect upon organs involved. A good remedy in indigestion, dyspepsia, chronic gastritis, increasing the secretion from kidneys and skin."

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says of Stone root: "In catarrhal gastritis (inflammation of stomach) where the circulation is defective, it, either alone or combined with hydrastis, is of first importance. They increase the appetite and greatly improve the digestion and assimilation of food. * * * Is a heart tonic of direct and permanent influence. Excellent in the bicycle heart, in rheumatic inflammation and clergyman's sore throat."

All the other ingredients entering into the composition of "Golden Medical Discovery" are equally praised for their curative effects in all stomach, liver and bowel affections and five of them for bronchial, throat and lung affections attended with severe cough, expectoration and kindred symptoms.

But you had best read for yourself the "words of praise" written concerning each and every ingredient of this marvelously efficacious medicine by leading medical practitioners and writers. This you can do by writing for the booklet mentioned in the preceding column. No other medicine for like purposes has any such professional endorsement as "Golden Medical Discovery," which should have more weight than all the ordinary testimonials so lavishly flaunted before the public by those who are afraid to publish their formulæ that the search light of investigation may be turned upon them. It is well to know what one takes into the stomach whether in the form of food, drink or medicine.

From the same little book of extracts mentioned above it will readily be seen why Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription works such marvelous cures in those chronic and distressing diseases peculiar to women. In all cases of pelvic catarrh with weakening drains, bearing or "dragging-down" pains or distress, and in all monthly or periodical derangements and irregularities, the "Favorite Prescription" will be found to be made of just the right ingredients to meet and cure the trouble.

Your druggist sells the "FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION" and also the "GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY." Write to Dr. Pierce about your case. He is an experienced physician and will treat your case as confidential and without charge for correspondence. Address him as directed in preceding column.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

Dr. Pierce's 1000-page illustrated book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser," is sent free in paper covers on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. For 31 stamps the cloth-bound volume will be sent. It was formerly sold for $1.50 per copy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

RAILROADS

SOO FROM THE SOUTH

Believed Road Will Build From Frederic, Wis., to Duluth.

With an immense amount of railroad work in sight for the coming summer and all sorts of reports regarding prospective contracts floating about, it is rather difficult to pick out the reliable reports from the other kind. The latest story is that the Soo line will build an extension from Frederic, Wis., to Duluth, and it is even said that contractors have already been asked to bid on the work.

This would give the Soo almost a direct line between the Twin Cities and Duluth. Frederic is at the north end of a short branch road running off from the main line about fifteen miles east of St. Paul. It has been understood for some time past that it was the intention of the Soo ultimately to extend the branch to Duluth, and it is now considered very likely that the work will be done before the end of the present year.

It is known that the Soo has called for bids for constructing a line between Duluth and Carrington, N. D. If both this and the Frederic road are built it will bring the Soo into Duluth from two directions, the West and South.

The Carrington line, which will, it is said, be built instead of one between Duluth and Thief River Falls, Minn., will give the Head of the Lakes direct communication with the Canadian Northwest, and also with Winnipeg, for the road would cross the Winnipeg branch of the Soo at Detroit, Minn., or to the north of there.

So much railroad work is to be done in the Northwest this year that contractors are worrying over a threatened scarcity of labor. The scarcity of labor and the difficulty of obtaining rails and other track material threaten to seriously impede the progress of railroad building this year. The open winter has been favorable to all kinds of outdoor work, and the demand for workmen in building construction and many industries as well as in railway construction, has been far greater than the supply.

With the opening of spring this demand will increase, and in many cases, it is expected, it will be impossible to secure the labor necessary to push construction operations with the speed desired. According to reports from the East the steel mills are crowded to the limit of their capacity, and many orders already booked are for delivery six to twelve months hence. Consequently, companies placing contracts at the present time cannot hope for early delivery. It is now believed that it will be impossible to complete as great a mileage during 1906 as has been anticipated.

BOVEY LONGS FOR TOOTS.

People Looking Forward to Arrival of First Train.

Unless unforeseen obstacles spring up and knock the sturdy workmen down and stop operations altogether, it is probable that their wishes along those lines will be gratified.

Track-laying has already commenced, and those in charge feel that the Fourth of July will see the roadbed finished, the steel down and the choo-choos in operation.

The Fourth will probably be a particularly glorious one if this comes to pass. The citizens of the place have optimistically observed right along that Bovey has not suffered for the want of railway facilities the way some new towns have, but that nevertheless the residents of the place would not weep when the first Duluth, Missabe & Northern train pulled in.

The rails are now being laid west from Alborn and Bengal stations.

BIG COAL HOLDINGS

Are Secured by Harriman and Associates in Colorado.

San Francisco, Feb. 12.—E. H. Harriman, Dees Randolph and their associates, who are interested in an Arizona and Colorado railroad enterprise that will eventually become a Southern Pacific branch, have bought a vast coal land area near Durango, Colo., and have just paid down a part of the purchase price. It is said it will require $2,000,000 to complete the deal. The Porter Fuel company and the Boston Coal & Fuel company's coal land is included in the purchase; also thousands of acres of adjoining coal lands. John McNeil closed the deal. Surveyors have been at work for months past between Durango, Pueblo and Clifton, Ariz., on the line of the Southern Pacific.

PHILIPPINE ROADS.

Contracts for Their Construction Awarded to New York Contractors.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The bid of Solomon & Co., Cornelius Vanderbilt, J. G. White & Co., all of New York; Charles M. Swift, Detroit, with whom are associated the International Banking corporation, H. R. Wilson and Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., has been accepted by the Philippine government for the concessionary contracts or grants for the construction, maintenance and operation of railroads in the islands of Negros, Panay and Cebu. Their bid provides for full government guarantee authorized by congress on 4 per cent bonds for a period of thirty years on 95 per cent of the cost of construction. There were no other bids for the grants for these islands. The lines on Negros and Panay will aggregate 100 miles each, and on Cebu 95 miles.

TERMINALS AT TACOMA.

Union Pacific Railway Gets Seventy Acres of Tide Lands.

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 12.—Negotiations between the Union Pacific railway and the St. Paul and Tacoma Lumber company have been closed whereby the Harriman interests have acquired seventy acres of tide lands forming an ideal site for railroad terminals and having a frontage of 1,500 feet on the bay and about 1,400 on the Puyullup waterway. The property is the highest priced land on the flats and cost approximately $1,000,000.

In purchasing the property, one of the conditions of the sale is that the Union Pacific improve it and locate railroad terminals and shipping warehouses upon it within a certain time. Officials of the St. Paul company refused to state the exact time limit by which the Union Pacific is bound, but it is believed to be about twenty months.

HEATHERBLOOM PETTICOATS!

Introducing Them to the Women of Duluth.

HEATHERBLOOM is a remarkable substitute for taffeta silk; a fabric whose qualities are sure to attract the consideration of every woman.

HEATHERBLOOM closely resembles taffeta, will not cut and crack in the folds, and is an ideal material for petticoats—lustrous enough to deceive the most careful observer as to its nature, durable enough to outlast half a dozen skirts of silk taffeta, and without that harsh rustle which has become so abhorrent to the smartly gowned women.

HEATHERBLOOM comes in a wide range of colors, and now that one wears petticoats to match gowns, and the smart woman's number of petticoats reaches in shades and colors, from one end of the spectrum to the other, the value of Heatherbloom becomes strikingly apparent.

Wherever silk taffeta would ordinarily be used and where enconomy is an object, Heatherbloom comes in nicely for all purposes—has the same rich rustle, the same graceful hang, the same light swing as the better grades of taffetas, and possesses the additional advantage of costing only about one-fourth as much, and is 36 inches wide.

A bit of Heatherbloom history may interest you.

For nearly half a century the brightest minds in the manufacturing world have been searching for a fabric that would combine the good qualities of silk, with better-than-silk wear and less-than-silk cost.

Mercerization, a process invented some 40 or 50 years ago by an Englishman named Mercer, was the first step. This took the vegetable substance from the cotton, leaving the remainder soft and silky looking.

The process by which Heatherbloom is made is a great improvement on this early mercerization, and the strongest and most durable of cotton fibres—long, fine, Sea Island cotton—is used for this material.

We introduce it to you not in an experimental stage, but as a finished and established fabric, tested and tried by the best judges. It appeals to you from points of beauty, economy and durability.

Its lightness is another telling point; in this as in its finish, its makers have followed silk, with the results that Heatherbloom scores even points with the regulation silk skirt in weight.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Man Who Attempted to Kill Sheriff Unable to Get Bonds.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Judge Goss has fixed at $10,000 the bonds of Howard Smith, one of the men arrested for an alleged attempt to kill Sheriff Lee at Portal, Monday morning, by setting fire to a house in which the sheriff and eight others were asleep.

Smith, when arraigned, waived a preliminary examination, and as he was unable to furnish the required bail, was remanded to the county jail to await trial. William Coyne, the other man arrested, who was wounded by a revolver shot, is in the city hospital in a very critical condition. Coyne refuses to talk about the case. As soon as his condition permits he will be arraigned on the same charge as that preferred against Smith.

The sheriff is taking extra precautions to guard Smith, and if necessary a special guard will be placed about the jail to prevent his escape.

Fargo—There is a hitch in the proposed street railway mail service between Fargo and Moorhead, the street railway company refusing to accept the contract on the terms offered by the government. This announcement was made to Assistant Postmaster Alfred on the receipt of a telegram from Manager Heath of the street railway company. The government offered the company $175 a year for the performance of its contract and the sum was deemed inadequate. Business men of both towns are endeavoring to have the contract accepted, and, if necessary, are said to be willing to raise money to add to the amount offered by the government. Mr. Heath is out of the city at present, and nothing can be done until his return.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Knut Sven of Sioux City, the son of Christopher Sven, the farmer who mysteriously disappeared more than a week ago, has arrived on the ground and is aiding the police in their efforts to unravel the mystery surrounding the fate and present whereabouts of the missing man. Although not the slightest trace of Sven can be found, the police have practically abandoned the theory that he was murdered and the body hidden. The missing man had only about $40 with him when he came to Sioux Falls, and most of this had been expended before he disappeared, so it is difficult to believe that he was murdered for his money.

The police are now working on two theories. One is that he wandered away from the city while temporarily insane, and the other that he was enticed away by some one for purposes known only to themselves. Those who have known the missing man for many years say he was of a peculiar disposition and was easily influenced by those who gained his confidence.

The missing man weighs about 150 pounds, is about 45 years of age, and is of peculiar appearance. He is loose-jointed, and has an odd walk that would attract the attention of strangers. He also is peculiar of action and speech. He has dark hair and beard, is hatchet-faced, and at the time of his disappearance wore a poorly-fitting suit of clothes.

Naturally the members of his family are much alarmed over his prolonged absence.

Hereafter when George Ackerman, who resides in McPherson county, wishes to capture a wounded jackrabbit he will not attempt to run it down with a team. By striving to do this he had a miraculous escape from instant death.

Ackerman and his brother, on their way with a team to land a load of hay, wounded a rabbit, which they attempted to run down, George was standing in the sleigh to which the team was hitched with one hand resting over the muzzle of a loaded shotgun. The sleigh struck a bare patch of ground and the sudden slackening of the sleigh threw them forward and discharged the gun.

The load passed through the flesh between the thumb and index finger of George's right hand, grazed his breast, took a nip or two at his chin and touched up the point of his nose, carrying away small pieces of flesh from the side of each nostril. Had the muzzle of the gun been even the fraction of an inch closer to him he without doubt, would have been instantly killed.

Volga—Prompted by an unusual spirit of self-sacrifice, Miss Mary Berg, daughter of a prominent resident of Volga, has submitted to an operation for the removal of cuticle from her body in order that the burns of Mrs. Hildus Egeberg, a total stranger, might be healed.

Mrs. Egeberg last September attempted to start a fire with kerosene and received serious burns. The burns were so extensive and so deep that new skin would not grow, and since the accident she has been a patient at the hospital here. The doctors recently determined that only by a process of skin-grafting could the woman's wounds be healed.

When this determination became known to Miss Berg, a nurse in the hospital, she volunteered to furnish the required amount of cuticle. The operation has just been successfully performed and the skin removed from Miss Berg's body has been grafted on the burned portions of Mrs. Egeberg's body, and the wounds promise to heal rapidly.

Parkston—An individual of the "Jack the Huggar" species has been terrorizing the feminine population in this vicinity. Several women and girls have been accosted, frightened and hugged. Mrs. W. C. Huff, while on her way home was stopped by the scoundrel, who attempted to snatch her purse.

Mrs. Huff had in her hand a pail of lard, and with this unique weapon she dealt the man a blow which caused him to take to his heels.

Mrs. George Vanette, residing on a farm near this village, was returning home about 9 o'clock in the evening, and noticed a man following her through the outskirts of town.

Finally, the man crossed the street and attempted to throw his arms around her. Mrs. Vanette was badly frightened and screamed loudly for help, which arived too late, however, to arrest the man.

Several of the husbands and sweethearts of the women who have been surreptitiously hugged are lying in wait for the "hugger" and when he is caught he will be strenuously dealt with.

THE TENNESSEE IS MAKING GOOD SPEED.

Rockland, Me., Feb. 12.—The armored cruiser Tennessee today began her four-hours' endurance run which commenced at Monhegan island and was expected to end near Cape Ann. She passed White Head shortly after 8 o'clock and began to develop a high rate of speed. At 9 o'clock she passed Monhegan island on the inside passage, a different course from that which the other vessels have taken at the start. The weather was a trifle hazy and a very faint breeze was blowing. The cruiser is required to sustain 22 knots an hours on this run. At the completion of the trial she will keep on to Boston light where the trial board will leave her. Then she will continue on to Philadelphia for completion by her builders, William Cramp & Son.

SUFFRAGISTS CONTINUE.

Baltimore, Feb. 12.—The convention of the Woman's National Suffrage association which began in this city on Feb. 7, reassembled today. Mrs. Elizabeth J. Hauser, chairman of the committee on literature, read a lenghty report. After several proposed amendments to the constitution of the association had been discussed, the convention proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Part of the value to the world of a great man consists in what he does; part consists in his example. The opposite is true, also, that part of the harm of a bad man lies in what he does and part in his evil example; but that has nothing to do with a discussion of Abraham Lincoln. The point is that so long as the republic continues to enjoy the permanent peace that was wrought under his direction, just so long should its people continue to hold the example of his career ever in reverence.

Though no man in the history of the republic was ever reviled so bitterly, none bore abuse so bravely and so calmly, and none came out of it dearer to the hearts of his people. The great tragedy of his death, coming at the height of his triumph, when his hand was needed at the helm more than ever, the act of a half-crazed fanatic, hushed forever the voice of calumny. It wiped out the records of political bitterness as a wet sponge cleans the face of a slate. Hence it is that the memory of his clean, manly, noble character are all that remain, and the attacks of his political enemies are forgotten.

He was God-given, if ever public servant was. Growing up straight from the ranks of the common people, his great heart bled for their sorrows and his great brain planned to bring them together in peace, love and unity. Had he lived to fill out his second term there would have been no horrors of reconstruction, and the wounds of civil strife would have been healed many years before they finally were. Were he alive today, the sentiment quoted above would be again on his tongue, but this time it would mean white slavery instead of black slavery, and his heart and brain, that were so much in unison with the needs and hopes of the plain people, would be seeking a way toward industrial freedom. He would again be saying, as he said in a New York address in 1850:

> Let us have faith that right makes might; and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it.

Stung by the encroachments of the great interests which threaten the liberties of the people, he would be praying, as he prayed at Gettysburg in 1863,

> That this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

We cannot have him with us now, but we can have his noble example, his love of liberty and of equality of opportunity, and we can act, with this example to lead us, as he told us to act in his second inauguration address on March 4, 1865, when the shadows of coming death were close, though hidden:

> With malice towards none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right.

WHOLESOME ADVICE.

Governor Johnson gave the young men of Duluth some most wholesome counsel in his address at the Lyceum theater yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., and if the 1,500 men that heard him will take what he said to heart and govern themselves accordingly they will be better and more truly successful men, and Duluth will be a better city.

The key note of his talk was the value of character, and the dangers of false ideals that undermine and destroy character. Chief among these is the worship of wealth. As Governor Johnson said, "the most vicious standard of success in the world is that which sets up dollars and cents as the height of human ambition."

History and experience are full of significant examples of the truth of this statement. It will hardly be doubted, in this day and age, that no man ever attained happiness by making the accumulation of wealth his chief aim in life. Many lives that have ended in unbounded success in money-getting have been as truly wasted as any life that ended in the degredation of the gutter. Real happiness is to be found not in selfish strife for personal advantage, but in the noble effort to help one's fellows.

He urged the young men in his audience to take an earnest, honest interest in politics, not for political preferment and the gratification of personal ambition so much as for the betterment of social conditions, the evils existing in which are all within the reach of an enlightened use of the ballot. The character of the republic must rest upon the character of its citizenship, and the government itself will register accurately the motives that actuate the voters. It is the duty of every citizen to take a proper interest in politics, to study the questions before the people, to decide the right and to base each political act upon that right and upon nothing else.

The governor's speech was a concise, brilliant and powerful appeal to the young manhood of Duluth. It could not fail to impress his hearers with a clearer conviction of their duty to themselves and to their fellow men.

MERITORIOUS MURDER.

Attorney General Young told the county auditors of the state the other day that it was the cities of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth that defeated the tax code at the special session of he legislature in 1902.

There is more or less truth in it, but it is a credit, not a discredit, to the representatives of the cities that this is so.

The whole special session of 1902, with the monstrous tax code upon which it was based, was conceived in error and sunken irretrievably in error until the final defeat of the proposed tax code brought the first glimmer of sense and reason into it.

The legislature of 1901 decided that the Minnesota tax laws were discreditable to the state. It was right. It happened that pressure was being brought to increase the gross earnings taxes of the railroads from 3 per cent to 4 per cent, and a desire to shelf this movement was largely responsible for the idea of getting up a new tax code, the idea being that if the entire question of taxation was postponed to await investigation by a commission nothing would be done about the gross earnings tax. This idea was correct, too, because no gross earnings tax increase was provided for until the regular session of 1903.

The legislature provided for a tax commission to "make a tax code * * * to include a complete system for the just and equitable taxation of all forms of property, both tangible and intangible, * * * and also to prepare and report a bill or bills providing for any constitutional amendments which may be necessary for properly carrying out the system of taxation recommended by the commission."

This was clear enough. The commission was to make a fair tax code and prepare constitutional amendments to make it effective, as it was recognized that the existing constitutional provisions on taxation were a bar to the creation of a proper tax code.

The commission, however, failed to do this. It spent its time and the state's money in getting up a tax code based on the old constitution. This was a silly proceeding on the face of it, because it was known that the constitution prevented any great improvements in the system. It was an attempt to temporarily patch up a worn-out garment, when the commission was employed to make a new one.

So without any regard to the provisions of the tax code that was presented, it deserved defeat at once. However, the legislature in special session put in six weeks fooling with it, and finally, in disgust, killed it. That should have been done the first day of the session. The only changes of any moment provided by it were of no service whatever in equalizing taxation. It would have simply shifted the burden a little more heavily upon the cities, who now pay much more than their proper share of taxes without complaint.

Therefore the cities, with the help of some country members who could see through a hole in a ladder, killed it. It was the most meritorious murder ever perpetrated in Minnesota.

FORESTRY AND FARMING.

Faribault Journal: The Duluta Herald has queer ideas as to what constitutes an intelligent, progressive farmer. In a cartoon it pictures such a farmer trying to get into a forest reserve to locate a farm. It should know that the "progressive farmer" never wants for a farm the poor land which the government sets aside for forest reserves. He can do better elsewhere.

That's just the point. It is not poor land that has been set aside, but good land, land that ought to support a great agricultural population instead of being devoted to the cultivation of trees and the perpetuation of the wilderness in the interests of harebrained theorists.

There is land in Northern Minnesota that is suitable for forestry experiments, and it is practically good for nothing else. If the forestry people would content themselves with taking this land there would be no complaint from any source.

Very likely in the great area that has been tied up in forest reserves there is some more land that is fit only for raising trees, but the larger portion of it, according to those who have been over it, is excellent agricultural land.

The comment quoted above is an example of the deadly effect of the work of the forestry people, who have not hesitated, in the pursuit of their schemes, to slander Northern Minnesota by telling people that it is unfit for agriculture. At one time their schemes included practically all of Northern Minnesota, but the advance of settlement stopped this plot. Then when the Chippewa reservations were thrown open they were successful in seizing upon a great area in the heart of them, and by untruthfully declaring it to be unfit for agricultural purposes, having it set apart for forestry experiments.

Minnesota wants all of her arable lands settled upon and tilled, that there may be more people to share the burdens of taxation and to add to the state's wealth. Northern Minnesota wants this particularly, but the whole state should be interested. Those who lend their aid to the schemes of the forestry people, deceived by fraud, forgery and falsehood, are, consciously or unconsciously, doing a great injury to the state and its people.

The idea of The Herald's cartoon, referred to by the Faribault Journal, was not that progressive farmers were trying to get into a useless area set apart for forestry, but that a most valuable area had been set apart for forestry when it should have been thrown upon to receive the quickening labors of the progressive farmer.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Last Saturday morning, one of the coldest mornings of the year, a young woman and a young man almost ran into the lobby of the Lenox hotel from the street. They had been walking east along the Bowery together, and evidently had come from a considerable distance, judging by the manner in which they were holding their ears and otherwise showing signs of feeling the effects of the weather.

The girl was in the worst condition. She appeared to really be frightened, and was all but crying. Her ears, her nose and her cheeks were frost bitten, according to the man, who insisted that he be allowed to rub the unfortunate members with snow. The girl violently protested to any such proceedings, and sank wearily down in a chair, nearly in a fainting condition.

Despite the objections of the woman her friend procured some snow and began rubbing ears, nose and cheeks with it, greatly to the interest of the few men in the lobby, who gathered around in a sympathetic circle, offering enough suggestions to rattle a book agent. When the rubbing had been completed to the satisfaction of her escort, the girl, who is an employe of a local wholesale firm, and who was then on her way to work, complained that she was sleepy. She volunteered the information that she had never been so tired or cold in her life, and that she had no inclination whatever to go to work. She didn't even want to go home. It was too much of an effort. She looked as if she felt the way she said she did, and the men began to fear that she was going to faint away. There were no other women in sight, and the poor males began to grow frightened.

At this juncture the hotel clerk came to the rescue. He said he would fix her out in a short while, so that she would feel as good and perhaps a little better than she had when she left home. She leaned back in her chair, with eyes closed and a look of despair and pain on her face, and didn't have enough energy left to even thank the clerk. This individual, however, is used to helping people out of trouble. He disappeared and came into sight a few moments later carrying a glass well filled with brandy. The drink was rather a large one even for a man, but extreme measures seemed in this case to be necessary.

"Take this," he said to the girl, "and I'm sure it will brace you up and make you feel better."

Bpt the girl didn't want it. She didn't want anything but to be left alone. She was tired and she was sleepy. It was evident enough that she was feeling very much out of sorts, and her condition, rather than amusing them, made the men standing about vastly sympathetic. They added their entreaties to those of the clerk, telling her what a world of good the drink would be to her, and finally she allowed the glass to be held to her lips. It was drained to the last drop, and then the girl sank back into her original position, with eyes closed.

Only for a few seconds did she remain thus before the cup that cheers began to work. Her eyes opened and she sat up and looked about her. Then she laughed in an apologetic way and apologized for the trouble she had made. She began to talk in the liveliest manner imaginable about the weather and her walk down the hill. A healthful glow suffused her cheek and her smiles were so numerous and bewitching that the men in the circle fell captive at once, and fairly outdid each other in their efforts to be entertaining. But she did not tarry long. All thoughts of sleep, being tired or of going home had left her mind. Laughing and chatting merrily with her companion she left the hotel and the two started towards the wholesale district again, seeming entirely unmindful of the cold.

"Don't it beat the devil!" said one of the traveling men.

Lying Abed Not Laziness.

Lady's Pictorial: Another scientific discovery has been made. It is that lying in bed, or, rather, the unwillingness to arise from one's couch in the morning, which we all feel, more or less, is only the expression of a real "physiological need."

It used to be called laziness, but then, of course, people did not know so much. "'Tis the voice of the sluggard. I heard him complain, You have waked me too soon. I must slumber again," would never have been written if it had been known that that poor lie-a-bed was only unconsciously expressing a physiological need.

One will never feel in the least guilty after this in coming down to breakfast late.

The Boston Mother's Lullaby.

Close thine eyes, my darling one,
Maternal watch is keeping,
Tax your memory, my son,
For hitherto when sleeping
Progenitors safe-guarded thee,
Nor thought it then a burden.
Subconsciousness should not decree
That still art thou their guerdon.

Put thy cerebrum at peace,
(Inactive thus thy thinking.)
Cerebellum, too, release,
(To stop thine eyes from blinking.)
Calm thy nerves and rest their lobe,
(Medulla oblongata).
Every cell within thy globe
Hath its need, pro rata.

Draw across those orbs of thine,
Pretty eye protectors.
Heavens' planets, yea, Orion,
Hath no such reflectors.
Palpitating, baby breast,
(Bosom, more exact, though.)
Resuscitate thyself with rest!
Do! my dear, de facto!

Roped In.

"He it is," he said, "of whom they tell the church parade story.

"His men were drawn up for church parade one Sunday morning, but the church was undergoing repairs, and could not accommodate all.

"'Sergeant major,' said the colonel, 'tell all the men who don't want to go to church to fall out on the reverse flank.'

"About 90 per cent of the men quickly and gladly fell out.

"'Now, sergeant major,' said the colonel, 'dismiss the men who didn't fall out, and march the others in to church. They need it most.'"

THE WEATHER

The mild weather continues. It did not become oppressively warm yesterday, but there were no appalling descents into the blow zero cellar by the thermometer, and it was mild enough yesterday for a fairly respectable snow storm, which continued most of the morning and into the afternoon. Last night the lake froze over again, and if the wind stays home for a day or two a permanent ice field may be formed. It has been noticed by the young people that the field this morning was slick and smooth, admirably adapted, in all but thickness, for skating purposes. They are hoping for the thickness now.

The lowest temperature last night was just zero, and yesterday it got up to 28 degs. above. Partly cloudy weather tonight and Tuesday, according to the weather man is likely to be accompanied by a little colder weather, the temperature getting down slightly below zero. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions.

"Storm conditions are central off the Florida coast and over Utah, causing rain in southwestern and South Atlantic states. A disturbance central Sunday over Manitoba in moving to the Hudson Bay region was attended by light falls of snow in Wisconsin and along the south shore of Lake Superior. The barometer is rising from the Dakotas northward and the temperature has fallen again to zero or slightly below in Saskatchewan. Conditions favor partly cloudy weather in this vicinity tonight and Tuesday, and the temperature will not change very much, probably going to slightly below zero tonight."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

An Agreeable Rest Cure.

New York World: In the name of the fair sex and its uncounted admirers we hasten to express our gratitude to Prof. Frederic Schiller Lee of Columbia for his fatigue cure. "When one is very tired," he prescribes, "a quantity of candy will, half an hour after eating, often make one feel very energetic."

German army authorities have reported that a ration of sugar helps the soldier in a long march. Prof. Lee's experiments were conducted on frogs. Of course they were pursued in a cold, scientific spirit, but that need not rob them of interest to young persons of sentiment. Hereafter a bashful suitor may disguise his tender feelings as skillfully by sending a box of predigested energy in the shape of chocolate creams to the object of his passion as if he were recommending a special brand of breakfast food.

And the young lady instead of eying a candyshop window may relieve an embarrassing situation by the matter-of-fact remark: "I'm so tired."

Hope Is Poor Filling.

New York Tribune: The special interests hit by the pure food bill are relying upon the senate to kill the measure. It is to be hoped they will find that the senate as well as the house is awake to the importance of checking the growing menace to the health of the people as well as to the moral life of the nation involved in the many articles of adulterated food now imposed upon the people by unscrupulous dealers and manufacturers.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Ada Index: There is one lesson that the Republican party in Minnesota can learn with profit from the opposition. Every Democratic state convention is composed of uninstructed delegates, and the party chooses as their standard bearer the man they deem the most popular. Let the Republicans do the same in 1906 and the question will then be only one of majorities. Aggressively active candidates, if any come up, should be turned down and the best and most popular man chosen as the nominee, whether he wants the honor or not.

Cannon Falls Beacon (Rep.): The name of the next Republican nominee for governor may be among those discussed, but the name of a man who can beat Johnson is not among them.

Moorhead Independent: When some of the senators are through fighting the president on the railroad rate question, they will be making a noise like hitting the high spots for the tall timbers.

Breckenridge Gazette: The early convention idea is growing, but it will probably be squelched by the state central committee, as some of the members of that committee are known to be afraid of their shadow and others don't care a d—arn.

Red Wing Republican: If you must run people down, use an auto. It is a great improvement over the scandal machine.

Aitkin Age: J. F. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle county seems to be getting the long end of endorsements for governor just now—in fact he seems to be getting as many press notices as all the rest combined.

Albert Lea Tribune: In selecting members for both branches of the legislature this fall, people should be careful about their candidates, as, besides a United States senator to be chosen, many matters of importance will devolve upon the members, hence the necessity of having only the best men put forward by any party. Many years there is by far too little attention paid this matter, and it is time a change was instituted.

Fertile Journal: A band of Ohio women proposed to attack the legislature with song and prayer in the hope of winning the franchise for their sex. If this is a woman's idea of politics it is evident that she is not yet ready for a vote.

Fergus Falls Free Press: Party organization is a good thing just so long as it is the servant of the people. But when it is used by the politicians to "do up" the people it is a bad thing. In other words, each voter should use the wheels in his head to keep him in the right road. The old idea of voting the way your father did is about played out. Today, a man must do his own thinking or get the worst of it. Blind partisanship is the child of ignorance.

Willmar Tribune: The Warroad Plaindealer of last week had seventeen editorial articles, eleven of which were devoted to Eddy's gubernatorial boom. Gordon of the Brown's Valley Tribune and Whiteman of the Ortonville Herald Star are also working up an appetite by pushing the same boom.

Le Sueur News: The time spent in telling how to build good roads would fill many a rut near your home.

When Mother Strikes.

All is in a flutter:
Parlor isn't swept;
Live on bread and butter—
How the house is kept!
Breakfast: One stale waffle
That no one can like—
This is simply awful;
Mother's on a strike!

Baby's in the cradle
Yelling like a fiend;
Pot and pan and ladle
All wait to be cleaned;
Milk is in the bottle
Waiting till it sours—
Mother's quit the throttle,
Struck for shorter hours.

Everything is dusty;
All the fires are out;
Knives and forks are rusty;
Trash is all about;
Children all need dressing—
Where's the brush and comb?
Isn't this distressing?
No one runs the home.

Father's argumentive;
Mother won't reply—
Says there's no incentive;
She won't sweep and fry,
Wash and dress and hustle—
This was her remark—
Sacrificing muscle
From the dawn till dark.

Frown on arbitration;
What are we to eat?
See our consternation!
Mother's smile is sweet;
She is bland and pleasant;
She is full of pluck.
Home is fierce at present—
Mother's gone and struck!

Beer for Temperance.

Washington correspondence of the Brooklyn Eagle: That beer is a food product and that it is fast coming to be classed with the least harmful beverages is a claim now receiving the close attention of the government experts connected with the department of agriculture. The department of agriculture is and has been for some time pursuing an investigation of the nature, effects and value of beer.

Dr. W. H. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, is especially interested in the subject, having referred to it frequently in lectures. Dr. Wiley is not yet ready to make any statement or report on the question as to whether beer is a food product.

"I will say this much," he said today, "that the use of beer and wines aids in the work of temperance. To illustrate, there is not near so much intemperance in Germany, where wines and beer are used to such a great extent, as there is in Scotland, where spirituous liquors are principally used."

Germany, Great Britain and the United States, in the order named, are the largest producers of malt beverages, and the general good health of the Germans, English and Americans is pointed to as strong proof of the argument that beer is a food product and that its consumption aids, instead of retarding, the work of temperance.

BOOSTING NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Ripple Compass: Systematic drainage is the one thing that is most needed for the development of Minnesota and the one thing most needed to bring this about is systematic agitation.

Moorhead Independent: Forget irrigation and talk drainage.

International Falls Border Budget: The issues of Northern Minnesota are drainage, good roads and settlers and then politics.

Pine City Pioneer: A few more good settlers and able representation in the legislature, and Northern Minnesota will show Mr. Journalist of Southern Minnesota, who IS the mustard.

Sauk Center Herald: The economy that opposes drainage of state lands reminds us of the economy of the farmer that slaughtered his thoroughbred Durham bull in order that he might sell its hide to get money to play a nickel-in-the-slot machine.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: Every Duluth man that visits the range is a convert to the iron county, and every Hibbing man that looks over the agricultural districts to the north becomes a convert. Keep the boys moving and all pull together.

Crookston Times: A good many Northern Minnesota newspapers are buying new presses, which proves that prosperity in Northern Minnesota is the rule that has no exception.

Ely Miner: The state drainage of the state swamp lands will be a prominent issue upon which to elect law makers in the northern end of the state. To this should be added good roads, and antiforestry of any land fit for a poor man to make a living with, and the three principles will be enough to insure an election.

Duluth Trade News: Floods of oratory will not drain the swamp lands of Northern Minnesota.

Brainerd Tribune: If you own land in Northern Minnesota and are not boosting for good roads and drainage—why are you not?

Moose Lake Star: Do you know that right here in Northern Minnesota there will be the greatest boom that this country has ever seen in just a few years? We can't get away from it. All this soft wood timber will be a money producer. The land will be settled up rapidly. New iron mines are constantly being discovered. We may have coal and if we have, the boom will come soon. At any rate it will come. We know we have plenty of peat bogs and in Germany they are proving that peat will smelt iron. Pittsburg will look like a summer resort in winter alongside of Duluth when all these things get started. Quit grumbling and watch out for opportunities.

According to Mother Goose.

Old Mother Hubbard
Went to the cupboard
To get her poor dog a bone,
But owing to the fact that she had just paid the premium on her policy while the dividend had again been reduced, the poor dog got none.

Little Jack Horner
Sat in a corner
Hungrily longing for pie;
He realized, however, that inasmuch as he had no family connection with the McCurdys his case was hopeless, and he wailed: "What a poor boy am I!"

There was a crooked man
Who went a crooked mile,
And he found a crooked sixpence against a crooked stile.
Whereat he sadly said to himself: "Being crooked I ought to be a life insurance president and thus have a chance to pick up something worth while."

Tom, Tom, the piper's son,
Stole a pig and began to run.
But, being arrested presently, he cried:
"That's the way it goes! If I'd stole about a hundred thousan' a year from the policy holders you'd merely scold me for what I done."

FLED IN HIS NIGHT ROBE

Demented Patient at Local Hospital Ran Two Blocks.

Was Found in St. Elmo Flat Some Time Afterward.

Darting out of St. Luke's hospital, bareheaded and barefooted, clad only in a night robe, Daniel Noel, a patient who died at that institution yesterday morning, caused a number of people who were watching the eclipse of the moon, last Thursday evening, to think they had seen an apparition.

Mr. Noel had been in the hospital for some days, and recently underwent an operation. His physical condition is said to have unhinged his mind, and when the opportunity offered, he slipped out of one of the hospital wards, got out of the building unobserved by the attendants, and ran down the street.

His escape happened close to the midnight hour, and people residing in the Buffalo flats, across the avenue from the hospital, immediately telephoned to that institution that they had seen one of the patients run out and down the street. Assurance was given by the hospital attendants, however, that nobody had left the institution, that the persons who thought they saw a man rush out in his bed clothing must have been laboring under a misapprehension.

Some time afterward it was discovered at the hospital that Mr. Noel was missing, and attendants were quickly dispatched to find him. They were joined by several of the young men who were attending some of the "eclipse parties," and a search was made of the neighborhood, but without result.

While the search was going on, the police department was notified by a tenant in the St. Elmo flats building, two blocks distant from the hospital, that a man in a very much undressed condition, was wandering about in the corridors. The department had already been notified by the hospital authorities that a patient was missing, and an officer was sent out to assist the hospital attendants in getting the demented man back to the institution.

Officer Milostan found Mr. Noel, who offered no resistance, but remarked that he would go along with the officer. He was wrapped up in the officer's fur coat and overshoes placed on his feet. The trip back to the hospital was made in an ambulance.

Mr. Noel has been a resident of Duluth for many years. His funeral took place from Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms this afternoon.

SVEA GLEE CLUB

Elects Superior Man President; Other Officers of Duluth.

The Svea Glee club held a meeting in Steinway hall yesterday afternoon and chose officers for the ensuing year. The club embraces the most prominent Swedish singers of both sides of the bay and its membership is constantly increasing. Hjalmer Nelson of Minneapolis, who has located in Duluth, yesterday became a member of the club, and as he is a singer of note, it is expected that his acquisition will be a valuable one. Charles Hilmer of Duluth was re-elected musical director and the musical committee consists of C. F. Forsell, Edward Peterson and August A. Larson, all of this side of the bay. The officers elected are as follows:

President, N. L. Bendz of Superior; vice president, August A. Larson of Duluth; treasurer, Charles F. Forsell of Duluth; financial secretaries, Arvid Stromb̈gren of Duluth and Charles Olson of Superior; corresponding secretary, E. M. Linnander of Duluth; trustees, Hjalmar Enlund, John Vanin and Carl Sundberg of Duluth.

SIMPLE HEALTHFUL LIVING.

The Problem Not Difficult of Solution.

A Western woman who had been for years a sufferer from "chronic gastritis, induced, it is believed, by overindulgence in coffee," gives an interesting experience with a good, healthy moral attached to it:

"For 5 or 6 years I tried every patent nostrum advertised for the relief or cure of dyspepsia. Sometimes I found temporary relief; sometimes I was for months blistered and burned with plasters externally, or drugged and dieted till I was too disheartened and despondent to care whether I lived or died, for I never got any permanent relief.

"I have lived for weeks at a time on raw eggs, or dry toast, or buttermilk, or sweet milk. I have fasted for days, suffering the agonies of starvation, and then endured equally acute agony because I must eventually eat.

"My kidneys became badly affected and a female weakness resulted. I was dropsical at times; at others much emaciated. I tried change of climate and spent three years traveling in search of health, coming back home to the same old routine of medicine.

"It is about three years now since I first tried Grape-Nuts food—not with any hope of finding anything I could eat, but because I was so sick of everything else. I liked the flavor of Grape-Nuts so much that I ate scarcely anything else for a week.

"I well remember my astonishment when I found I could satisfy my appetite without paying the penalty of hours of suffering; that I could eat a supper of Grape-Nuts and sleep all night afterwards—something I had not done for years.

"But even after a month's use of Grape-Nuts I did not imagine the relief was anything more than temporary till I found I was gaining flesh at the rate of five or six pounds per month, that my digestion was restored, my kidney trouble had disappeared and my nerves had become toned up and steady. I have eaten Grape-Nuts daily ever since and shall continue to do so as long as I live.

"At present I weigh 157 pounds—not flabby, dropsical fat, but hard, solid flesh. I eat three meals every day, can indulge in fruit, and never suffer a single pang from indigestion. My husband, who used to suffer from coffee poisoning (sour stomach, flatulence and heart burn) has long since given up the Arabian berry and, using Postum Coffee and Grape-Nuts food, has become a hale, hearty, healthy man.

"We think we have solved the problem of simple, healthful living, for after three years of Grape-Nuts food we are not tired of it. It is still delicious and supplies so perfectly the place of meat that our butcher's bills are an almost unknown quantity." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

BARGE MANILA OFF THE ROCKS

May be Converted Into Steamer With Former Consort's Machinery.

The barge Manila which went ashore at Encampment island, Nov. 28, in the big storm which wrecked so much vessel property, has been released from her position on the rocks by the Reid Wrecking company of Sarnia, Ont., but she is not yet in a condition to be brought down here. After she had been jacked up and skidded over the rocks which held her in a cradle, and she struck the free water beyond, it developed that the bulkhead work which had been done to cover a large rent adimships, had failed to do its duty and the water poured in, most of it going into the bow. The nose of the barge is drawing 27 feet of water, but the stern is drawing only five feet, so that work can be done on her to pump her out. A diver will be sent down to patch her up and she will then be brought into Duluth.

The Pittsburg Steamship company, which owns the barge has not yet decided whether or not to convert the Manila into a steamer. The proposed plan is to take the engine and boilers out of the wrecked steamer Lafayette, and put the outfit into the barge. Both the Lafayete and Manila went ashore at the same time on Encampment island. The Lafayette became a total wreck so far as her hull was concerned.

Capt. James Reid, the head of the company which has been doing the wrecking work on the Manila, has had charge of the work and as soon as the barge is under way to Duluth, will begin operations to take the steamer Matnafa off the beach at Duluth. He has the contract also to take the steamer Edenborn off the rocks at Split Rock and bring her in. This work, however, will remain unaccomplished or attempted until spring.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

BUYERS GO EAST.

John Panton, of the Panton & White Co., and the corps of buyers for the Glass Block store left Sunday night for the Eastern markets, on a two weeks' buying tour among the manufacturing centers of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other places.

"You may say," said Mr. Panton, before he left, "that we are going to buy more heavily than ever, and that, not only will this spring's stock be the largest and most varied in extent, but the very finest and most desirable things in every line of merchandise will be presented to Duluth's residents, through the Glass Block store."

Those who left yesterday with Mr. Panton were: J. H. Givlins, G. T. Miller, A. R. Chamberlin, J. L. Franck, J. F. Kearney, D. T. McDonald, C. A. Preston and J. W. Scott. W. L. Galloway went the middle of last week.

CHURCH RIOTERS FATALLY SHOT

Police Fire on Lithuanians Who Attacked Catholic Priest.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—An attack by a crowd of angry Lithuanians yesterday upon the residence of the Rev. Edward Stafanowicz, a Roman Catholic priest, resulted in a battle between the mob and the police in which two men were shot and several others injured.

The assailants were all members of the church of which the priest is paster.

Dissension among the members of the congregation over the control of the church funds culminated in violence during the Sunday services. Women are said to have opened hostilities by hurling missiles at the pastor. The attackers had armed themselves with clubs and stones and the police succeeded in dispersing them only after firing into the crowd. John Tammalis, a member of the congregation, was shot in the left groin and is said to be fatally injured. Alexander Bargias, another of the attacking party, received a bullet in the head.

A score of others were more or less severely injured by flying bricks and stones. Fifteen of the ringleaders were arrested.

BISHOP SEVERE

In Criticism of Labor Unions and Capital as Well.

Dubuque, Iowa, Feb. 12.—From the pulpit of the cathedral Bishop Dean of Dubuque yesterday declared that the principle of unionism is a school for thievery. He said:

"There are unions organized to bring the competent man down to the level of workmen who are not as well skilled. The workmen who should receive more do not because they are bound by the union to hold up incompetent men. They force employers to pay poor laborers more than they earn. Their aim is to get shorter hours and do as little work for the employer as possible. They don't earn salaries. This practice in unionism is a school for thievery."

The speaker then took organized capital to task and said that the efforts of the big financiers to deprive man of his natural rights is wrong.

"Such organized capital is also a school of thievery," he said in conclusion.

"The employer who does not pay his employe for the amount of his hire is a thief. The employe who does not give to his employer the labor he is paid for is also a thief."

He made an appeal to men to take an active interest in politics saying: "As your duty to your family is sacred so it is to your city, county and state."

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The entire plant and equipment of the Poughkeepsie City & Wappinger Falls Electric Railway was destroyed by fire Sunday. Twenty-two electric cars were burned. The loss is $150,000, insured for $80,000.

Twenty-five persons on a Wisconsin Central limited train narrowly escaped death or serious injury Sunday night, near Milwaukee, when a broken wheel on the engine threw six of the eight coaches in the train over a 15-foot embankment. Six passengers were slightly bruised and the cook in the dining car was injured, possibly fatally. It was necessary to cut him out of the wreckage.

There was a panic on a South Milwaukee interurban electric car at the Kinnickinnic avenue crossing in Milwaukee Sunday night, when a freight train backed into the car, women fainted and two or three were slightly bruised.

The South Side Baptist church, one of the most handsome edifices in Birmingham was totally destroyed by fire shortly before midnight. Sunday the loss is estimated at $75,000, insurance $25,000.

The searchers in the Parrall mine in West Virginia, found fifteen more dead bodies Sunday. It had been thought twelve would cover all the dead in addition to the six recovered Friday morning. It is known that still another body lies in the death trap. Four of the fifteen first recovered have not been identified.

George Carter, a Slav, was arrested Sunday night for attempting to blow up a boarding house with dynamite at a mining settlement in Fayette county, Pa. Carter had quarreled with two fellow-countrymen and left the house. Later he returned and threw a stick of dynamite into the stove. Two Slavs were seriously injured and were taken to a hospital at Connellsville.

FOURTEEN WERE HURT

In Wreck of Wisconsin Central Train Near Theresa.

Milwaukee, Feb. 12.—Three more names were today added to last night's list of injured in the Wisconsin Central wreck of passenger train near Theresa, Wis., twenty-five miles south of Fond due Lac. The total number of injured was fourteen.

The list as far as known is as follows: Andrew Christenson, colored cook in dining car, leg broken; Rev. Mr. Frotchel, Fond du Lac, slightly bruised; Mrs. A. S. Palmer, Oshkosh, bruised and cut slightly on hands; L. W. Riggs, Fond du Lac, slightly hurt in shoulders; C. L. Meyer, Milwaukee, shoulder bruised; Gerhard M. Dahl, Stevens Point, four scalp wounds. Capt. Robert W. Mueller of Milwaukee, scalp wounds, brought to Milwaukee; Emil Noernberg, Milwaukee, face cut and shoulder bruised. Six other passengers, names not learned, were slightly injured. With the possible exception of Andrew Christenson, a colored cook on the train, who was badly scalded, all the injured will propably recover.

CHINATOWN AT BUTTE

Greatly Excited Over Disappearance of Wealthy Celestial Physician.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 12.—There is great excitement in Chinatown over the disappearance of Dr. C. H. Wong, one of the most prominent celestials in Butte. He has been missing since Jan. 25, and there are many surmises as to his possible fate. He lived alone in his office and quarters, practically leading the life of a hermit.

Friends yesterday had the door of his office broken open by a policeman and a thorough search of the premises was made, but no trace of the missing man was found. His friends are disinclined to the theory that Wong's disappearance is attributable to highbinder feud, as he was not known to have any enemies. The theory generally accepted is that the missing man was called to his door by a highwayman who struck him over the head and then carried his body away to be disposed of elsewhere. The doctor was reputed to be wealthy and robbery is suggested as a motive for the murder, if murder was done.

MASS MEETING CALLED.

Effort Will be Made to Secure Signatures to Water Petition.

A second mass meeting of the property owners in the hill district, has been called for Wednesday evening by Aldermen Tessman, McEwen, Mueller, Ribenack and Aldermen-elect Staples and Jordan.

The meeting is for the purpose of securing the necessary signatures required to complete the petition for the water extensions. The bonds have now been voted, and all that remains to be done is to secure the 8 per cent guaranty.

FISH FRY TO ARGENTINA.

Duluth Hatchery Sends Lake Superior Trout Eggs South.

The United States fish hatchery at Duluth has shipped two consignments of Lake Superior trout fry to Argentine Republic, the second shipment consisting of 100,000 eggs, which will be planted in the water at the foot of the Andes, which are said to be very favorable to the propagation of trout of the Lake Superior species. Supt. S. P. Wires of the Duluth hatchery has received word from E. A. Tuiln, national fish culturist of Argentina, formerly in charge of the United States hatchery at Leadville, that the consignment sent from here a year ago to Argentina has flourished splendidly.

In April, May and June of this year the fish hatchery here will plant a good many eggs in the lakes and streams of this part of the country. In Lake Superior, 25,000,000 whitefish and 9,000,000 lake trout fry will be placed; and between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 walleyed pike will be placed in the lakes of Minnesota and Wisconsin. A good many brook trout fry will also be placed in the streams hereabouts. It is said that value of the walleyed pike is being more and more recognized.

UNINTENTIONAL.

The Rev. Wayland Hoyt, one of the best known of Philadelphia's divines, spent a part of the summer in the lake district of Maine, and while there had the hard luck to mark one fishing excursion by falling overboard, says the Los Angeles Times. As he was hauled back into the boat, wet and disgusted, another of the party asked the inevitable silly question:

"Why, Dr. Hoyt, how did you come to fall in?"

"I didn't," snapped the clergyman; "I came to fish; this was unforeseen."

is for the government to assume supervision of rate-making. He confessed the difficulty in dealing with the problems, said the fixing of rates by the government would not cure the evil, and concluded that that could only be effected by a provision for the punishment of those who violate the law by giving rebates. Regarding rebates he said:

"The rebates have been a wrong and injustice to the people and a serious injury to the railroads themselves. I don't think that it would be possible to pass legislation too drastic for the purpose of stopping these discriminations between persons. We have a law now upon the statute books which, so far as prohibition can go, ought to be sufficient. It undoubtedly has largely checked rebates, but it has not stopped them entirely. To make the law thoroughly efficient we ought to add, in my judgment, three provisions. We should restore the former penalties of the interestate commerce law (which should not have been repealed) and make the secret evasions of the published rates punishable by imprisonment. The men who perpetrate these evasions in defiance of the law suffer but little by a fine, even if it be a heavy one. Their resources are too large to make a money penalty a serious one. For this very reason they are persons who would feel acutely a punishment by imprisonment and that penalty ought to be provided in any law which we pass."

Mr. Lodge reviewed the experience of other governments, including most of the European countries, Canada and Australia in government control of rate-making and added:

"This examination shows us that it is not only entirely possible to abolish all discriminations between persons—that is, all rebates or undue preferences—but that this has been actually and effectively accomplished in other countries. It is now necessary to differentiate between the methods employed in the several countries, for whether, as in England, railroad regulation has been effected through the establishment of a railroad commission court, or as in France and Germany, by the simple operation of direct government control, the conclusion on this point is the same. It is proved beyond doubt that personal discriminations can be utterly extirpated, and if it has been in other countries, it can be done here by suitable legislation.

"On the second point of excessive rates the experience of other countries demonstrates that whatever good effects government rate-making has had, it has not lowered rates, but, on the contrary, has made them not only higher, but inelastic. Where, as in Russia rates are low although not so low as ours, the railroads are run at a loss and the loss is made good out of the pockets of the taxpayers. In England, with maximum rates fixed by parliament in a schedule and the prohibition against raising rates without the consent of the railway commission court, the rates are higher than ours, inelastic, and don't decline in accordance with the fall of prices, or, indeed, in any substantial degree.

"On the continent of Europe generally rates are 50 per cent higher than ours and show the same quality of inflexibility and the same lack of adaptation to changing conditions which we find in England. We have the lowest average freight rates in the world, and yet our railroads are run at a profit without, of course, a dollar of expense to the taxpayers. Government rate-making in this country—directed as it can only be against place discriminations and excessive rates—therefore, if the experience of all the rest of the world is of any value, and I regard it as conclusive, would either not reduce the rates at all, or, if it did reduce the rates generally, it would destroy the profits of the roads and lower the wages of those employed upon them unless we accepted the other alternatives of government ownership, with the roads run at a loss and the people taxed to carry them on.

"The third and last point is that of discrimination between localities. * * * That discriminations exist under our system, which work injustice, it would be folly to deny, but it would be a still greater folly to establish a new series of discriminations, working a larger injustice, in the hope of curing the original inequalities. Whatever attempt to remedy place discriminations we may make, we should guard it as to avoid applying a remedy far worse than the disease. The experience of the world leads me to doubt most seriously whether any government rate making with a view to curing place discriminations can be effected without bringing a change for the worse; but if it is to be tried at all it ought not to go beyond the fixing of a maximum rate by the commission, with the most absolute protection against hasty or prejudiced action through provision for an appeal to the courts of the country. This certainly is as far as we can safely go."

Mr. Lodge combatted the idea that the railroads are owned by a few men and that they are inimical to and independent of all other interests. He said:

"We all want to see the settled and established sections of the country thrive, but to the railroads the well being of such places is a matter of life and death. A sudden and ill-considered revolution in our methods of railroad management would bring on a business panic, reduce wages and probably carry disaster to our trade and commerce in a degree which it is impossible to estimate."

For those reasons, he added, we should proceed with the utmost care in railroad legislation, and continued:

"We should have proper legislation in regard to the railroads, there should be government supervision and regulation, we should stop the intolerable abuse of rebates or discriminations between persons, because if we do not we may find ourselves precipitated into that worst of all disasters, government ownership. But it is equally essential that the legislation we undertake should not itself lead to government ownership, the dangerous pitfall we are seeking to avoid. It is vital that this legislation should succeed, but it can only succeed by being effective against the evils which it can cure, while it proceeds with the utmost care in those directions where experience has shown that some of the remedies now proposed have introduced evils far more injurious than those which it was sought to remedy."

Pointing out possible dangers to the proposed legislation, he said the first of these is found in the possibility of failing to provide an effective remedy against personal discriminations. "That which is to be feared as to rebates," he said, "is that the law will not go far enough and will not be intelligently effective."

He suggested that the power delegated to a commission should not go beyond that of fixing a maximum rate on freight.

Mr. Lodge expressed the opinion that there should be ample provision for review of the findings of the commission by the courts. He concluded:

"There seems to be now prophets of a new dispensation who wish to depart from the line marked out by the president in his message and accepted in the house bill of last year, by removing so far as possible from the proposed law all proper provisions for review by the courts. This seems to me to strike at the very heart of the measure. I am anxious to see this legislation, but I am not yet prepared to substitute for the courts of the United States an executive commission. Legislation cannot prevent an appeal to the courts if it is alleged that the rate is confiscatory; but this is a very narrow ground and a very limited right. A rate may not be absolutely confiscatory and yet may be in the highest degree unjust and unreasonable, and indeed well nigh ruinous. I am not sure that it would be possible to deprive a citizen by legislation of the right to appeal to the courts as to the justice and reasonableness of a given rate, which is a purely judicial question. But no attempt ought to be made, either directly or indirectly, by silence or by assertion, to destroy this privilege or, rather, this right. * * * We are about to pass a great measure, from which, I hope, great good may come, but one which in its operation, will affect the property and interests of millions of our fellow-citizens. It should be guarded with scrupulous care, but above all it should provide that no man should be deprived of his opportunity to go to the courts in defense of his rights if he thinks those rights are invaded."

USED TO ROPES.

Mrs. Agnes Neygood of 200 Elm street, Astoria, used to be an acropat, says the New York Times. Before her marriage she was one of the trapeze performers in a circus. She gave up her career five years ago because she fell in love with a horseshoer employed by the show. When he asked her to be his wife he insisted that she must leave the trapeze forever and she consented.

They were married and lived happily. Mrs. Neygood, who had been Mlle. Marinzi, "the champion aerial triple somersault performer," was hanging out clothes Thursday from her flat after a hard morning's wash. The clothes line connected with a high pole in the rear yard.

Mrs. Neygood, leaning far out to make the rope taut with her precious wash, had a good hold on the rope. The pulley broke and the former trapeze artist was dragged out of the window. As she swung outward she remembered her old time tricks and turned so as to twist the rope about her right arm. She swung the great arc of a pendulum and got a second footing on the window ledge opposite.

The window was closed and she did not have time to get hold before she was swinging back again, but not within reaching distance of her own window, five stories above the ground.

Realizing that each swing would be less than the last, she steered herself with all her old time skill to the pole supporting the line.

She was out of practice and struck the pole harder than she intended. She was half stunned, but still she managed to throw her arms and legs about the pole, and before losing consciousness slid close to the ground.

The fall of fifteen feet aroused her and she was able to crawl into the house. A physician was called. He found that no bones had been broken. Then neighbors helped the former circus woman up to her rooms. When her husband returned from work he found his supper ready for him. His wife was a bit pale, but smiling, and a lot of friends were there to shake hands with him because he was not a widower.

WOMAN'S COUNCIL HAS GOVERNOR JOHNSON AS GUEST AT ITS BANQUET

sympathetic encouragement he extends their work, was the speaker who was most warmly welcomed. He spoke of the opportunities that Duluth offered for work in the development of young people and the part that the club woman might play in this progress, in a city where so many natural advantages were offered and all the bustling activities of a young town. His address was prompted by the inspiration of the moment and was both earnest and entertaining.

MRS. J. L. WASHBURN.

Mrs. J. L. Washburn presided as toastmistress in the happy manner which Duluth club women have come to expect from her. She welcomed in behalf of the Women's council the governor and Mrs. Johnson, the out-of-town visitors, and the club women and prominent citizens who were guests of honor, to this mid-winter function and gave as an introduction to the list of toasts a survey of Duluth's problems, the general subject of all the toasts. She said in part:

"Duluth's first problems were material ones, how to build a city on precipitous rocks with but a little strip of land between them and the water; how to get railroads to extend their lines to this region at that time so remote from the populated parts of the state; how to furnish terminal facilities for those railroads; how to introduce boats coming up the lakes to make Duluth their objective point; how to furnish transportation to the outlying districts where many of the homes of the residents must be built, and a host of others which do not occur to me now. These problems have all been met and mastered by the active, energetic men who laid the foundations of our city and who builded better even than they knew. Our splendid rock-cut streets, our trestles and our bridges with their solid walls of masonry testify to the ability of those pioneers to build a city on solid rock. And it shall endure and prosper when the city built on sand shall have passed from the mind of man.

"In what way Duluth is indebted to the Hon. J. Procter Knott for its growth, its present importance and for its splendid railway facilities and great commercial docks I have never been able to comprehend, although I believe that he explained it himself some years ago in this same banquet hall. Located at the gateway to a vast territory, rich in mines, forests and fields, it needed only transportation facilities to assure the future importance of the little town which was the subject of ridicule in Mr. Knott's sarcastic speech on the St. Croix land grant in congress in 1851. Whether that eminent stat-sman realized it then, or in after years, when others who had foreseen had brought it about, only imagined that he had, I shall not bother to decide. The first railroad was built by the efforts of people of this state united with others enlisted from older and wealthier localities.

"The little ditch dug across Minnesota Point at first by local initiative and capital, afterward taken up, enlarged and improved by the federal government, was all that was needed to persuade a goodly share of the lake traffic to come to our harbor. It was the beginning of the establishment of one of the greatest shipping ports of the world.

"But why dwell on the material problems of the past, all so happily solved or in the process of solution? Suffice it to say that every obstacle met and surmounted but served to make for us hero a better and stronger city than had there been no difficulties with which to contend. It takes strong men—brave and energetic men—to build a city on such a site as the one which Duluth occupies, and men with these qualities are bound to make a successful city.

"The educational problem has been an ever-present and pressing one, chiefly because Duluth's early settlers, which is true in the main of those who came in later, were made up in large part of sturdy young married people with growing families of children. Our splendid public schools, containing accommodations for every child of school age in the city, and our flourishing normal school testify to the manner in which this problem has been met. To be sure there are still many things in this line that we want, but they are coming, or we believe that they will come as fast as one could reasonably expect. For instance, we want to see manual training taught in every school in the city, whereas, at present, but five buildings furnish that instruction; we want to have a number of rooms fitted up in different school buildings for the teaching of domestic science; a sufficient number so that every girl in the city of suitable age may receive instruction at least twice a week in this subject; we want to see the school garden idea taken up and made a part of school work; we want more teaching from living things; we want the city fathers to look with especial tenderness and affection on the schools, giving generously and unstintedly for their support, that they may be maintained on the highest plane possible and that we may be able to recompense our teachers in accordance with their ability and merit.

"With the growth of a city, with added comforts, convenience and luxuries and with the accumulation of wealth, come industrial and social problems almost unknown in its earlier history. These cannot be worked by the simple rule of three as could most of the material ones. They are complicated, consequently more difficult of analysis. We must proceed with care. In our effort to get at the answer at once, when confronted with painful and perplexing questions, we may commence at the wrong end of the problem, reaching a result farther removed from the true one than if we had never attempted its solution. We realize that we are in need particularly to observe this caution. The questions of the indigent, of the child of the street, of the plague spots in our community, how much may be cured, how much must be endured, are all vital ones, involving more than a cursory glance for their unfolding. The answer to the question as to the indigent and the unemployed is not simply to remove the poor for his poverty in one case or to furnish employment to the unemployed in the other. The difficulty often lies deeper and is frequently found in the fact that the indigent person or the unemployed person is not fitted to do well any work which the world wants done. The question for us then seems to be, 'Can we help him to any better equipment of the work of which the world stands in need?'

"And what shall we do for the child of the street, the newsboy, the bootblack, whose home seems to be more on the street than anywhere else? Ah, that is where we should like to wax eloquent. You remember Miss Murphy's impassioned appeal for these children two years ago? The little lady is still working away at the problems that confront her as she goes to and from her school on St. Croix avenue. She has been most successful with the Speer method with her pupils. I wonder if it has ever occurred to her to try that method for the solution of the social problems, which she cannot ignore. She has not secured the playground for which she was hoping two years ago, but 'Hope springs eternal in the human breast,' especially the feminine one, and I am sure that more than a germ of that little everlasting plant remains with Miss Murphy.

"What do we want for these children of the street? What that the Bethel is not already doing for them? Many things, too many for any private philanthropy. The Bethel is a noble institution, and too little appreciated. But with all the line of work which it must carry on it can do more for these children than it is already doing. We want them taught manual training in an attractive as well as practical manner. We want to see them caring for a little spot of ground in the summer where they may behold the beautiful working of natural laws and may learn for themselves the marvellous results to be obtained by means of intelligent labor applied to a generous soil; may learn, if you chose to put it so, how a little capital invested in a parcel of ground and a few seeds, united with labor will bring profitable returns. But most of all we want for these children public play grounds—places where they may learn how to play; playgrounds fitted up with paraphernalia for different kinds of games, sports and diversions—with public baths or swimming pools thrown in if it can be managed. We want the play grounds under the immediate and constant supervision and direction of a man who understands and loves children, be they dirty or clean, crude or refined, and who recognizes the part that play should have in the education of a child.

"This is a work that should be undertaken by the city itself as a part of its educational scheme. It will pay even in dollars and cents, I believe, pay in the better preparation of these neglected children for the duties of citizenship, pay by means of the chance of prevention, which saves the pound of cure. It is no visionary scheme, these public play grounds. Many cities are maintaining them as they would any part of their educational system. Why not have at least one in Duluth the coming year? If the city fathers are inclined to look favorably on this project the women will be only too glad to co-operate with them in the matter should they desire it.

"In my survey of some of Duluth's problems, past and present, I take great credit to myself, that I have finally arrived, though not by the most direct route at the pith of the matter and the point of my remarks, viz., public play grounds.

"Did it ever occur to any of you to analyze the workings of a woman's mind and to ponder on its condition when, after devious wanderings through circuitous paths, lanes and byways, by many a turn and counter-turn, she emerges finally at the place where she supposed the point to be, only to find that it has eluded her? She may have started out firmly persuaded in her mind that she would proceed directly to the Point, its alluring shade, piney smell and sandy beach beckon to her and she obeys their call; but suddenly the subtle attractions of a West Superior ferry fill all her mind and she decides to proceed to the Point by way of that charming suburb; meandering through whose pleasing labyrinths which lead her ever farther and farther from her goal, she finally loses sight of it entirely and is obliged to go back home, to take a new start, some other day, for the vanished Point.

"But the committee who arranged the program of trusts for today were wiser than the majority of our sex, for they have recognized this peculiarity—I am sure you do not wish it called a fault—in the feminine mind and have set about rectifying it—temporarily, at least. They have most thoughtfully placed the toast relating to this subject among the first on the list, that coming speakers—most of whom are women—may profit by the words of wisdom therein contained. The only mistake which this committee has made would seem to be in not placing the toast in question before the toastmistress' introduction. Mrs. John McLeod will tell us of "The Point and How to Reach It."

It has stood the test for 30 years.

GOVERNOR JOHN A. JOHNSON.

POINT FOR PLAYGROUND.

Mrs. John MacLeod Says the Children of Duluth Need it

Mrs. McLeod was heard in the capacity of a toaster by many women for the first time, and the bright little talk she gave on the "Point," both geographical and mental, was received with much pleasure. She said in part:

"I've come to the conclusion that my chief qualification for this special subject is that I am a resident of that favored suburb, Woodland. Now that we have so comfortably disposed of our own transportation problems, we may be supposed to have time to devote to those others not so fortunate, and yet I may be mistaken as to the meaning, the title is so indefinite. I find it can be used in twenty-five different senses, so my latitude is great; if I miss one I may hit the other.

"Twenty years ago we did not consider seriously how to get to the Point; the world was young then and not serious. We went by the only route available, a flat-bottomed boat, until the era of the electric revolving, when the only other conveyance in common use was a diminutive car roped to an attenuated bit of a donkey, which plied between the extreme outposts of civilization, Tenth avenue east and Rice's Point (the twenty-sixth point).

"There were heathen on Park Point then, too, and to reach them four young people braved the storms of one full and winter every Sunday afternoon and rather gloried in the hit-or-miss leap necessary to make the dock after a hold-your-breath sort of row across the canal. However, once on terra firma, high resolve took its place, but was quite likely to have petered out before the hour of religious instruction was over, owing to the persistent devilry and levity of the aborigines of the district. That was when the world was young.

"Now we are so staid, we look around in a calm and reflective state of mind, and we women say to ourselves, 'Is the Point worth reaching?' We are the proud possessors of a Point that is a gift from the gods. Usually we say all good things go by threes. The Bible says 'Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, but the greatest of these is love,' and as we apply the number to this we say nature has done her part and science her share; it remains for love, the greatest, to put the finishing touches, and make the Point the crowning achievement of the women's clubs of Duluth. For the children of Duluth need it, physically and morally. It is their birthright, and only the love of women for children—philanthropy, if you will—is strong enough to overcome the many obstacles that the money power is sure to put forward in any attempt to make the Point a people's playground, where the largest liberty may be enjoyed consistent with decency. Experts in the prophetic science tell us that Duluth is soon to be a great city; we may as well be preparing to care for the future citizens in the recreation department, for it means deducting just so much from the criminal record, and perhaps saving the souls of the boys and girls, the men and women of our town.

"I am allowed just ten minutes to find that Point, and if I've not yet reached it, there is a class of women here who have been taking mental gymnastics all winter under Mr. Powell's able direction, any one of whom, I'm sure, is able to get there in any given time."

BEAUTY OF THE HILLS.

Rocks and Crags Serve Many Purposes, Says Mrs. Crowley.

Mrs. J. H. Crowley's toast was "The Hills," the subject of whoch is essentially one that appeals to all residents of Duluth and any who have ever visited this city of hills. After speaking of the inspiration and ideal which the hill has offered in all time she said:

"What shall we do with our hills or what what can our hills do for us, seems the problem for our consideration. The hills are a part of Duluth and to the pioneer of long ago they presented a picture of beauty. This range of hills upon which our city stands forms a vast amphitheater with old Lake Superior spread like a mirror before us. With our frowning cannon planted on the hillside, reinforced by our naval strength on the water our location becomes a veritable Gibraltar. Even the most favored of locations is bound to have disadvantages and by some people our hills might be classed as such, but to us Duluthians, not a disadvantage, never, but a sometimes inconvenience. Ask the boy who with breathless delight flies down the steep hillside if he cares ought for the climb that makes such delight possible, or the athlete who seems to fly from some lofty peak and alighting glides off in graceful curves. If he does not love the hills. And who would not rather mount to greatness and distinction even at an angle of 45 degrees, though it be with halting step and gasping breath, than pass one's days in physical comfort on the dead level of mediocrity.

"The rocks and crags of the hillside have served many purposes and not least among the many, that of bulletin boards. While it is rather startling to see emblazoned in bright new letters on the face of gray old warriors this legend, 'Grand Opening of Spring and Summer Millinery,' it also shows the progressive spirit of our people. It is most gratifying that the efforts of our club women are showing results and that few new bulletins now appear while nature and the elements are lending their kindly assistance in obliterating this defacement of our hills.

"If in exploiting our problems we seem too modest, it is because we feel there is little need for such effort for we may remind you that 'a city that is set upon a hill, cannot be hid.' From the thousands who come to enjoin this glorious climate and to feast upon the beauties nature has so lavishly betowed, and from those whose fortunes have been cast within this amphitheater, will come the earnest wish that in the march of progress these sentinels may be spared and that we may long be able to draw inspiration from these hills whose gray and green summits seem to melt into the azure of the sky."

THE NEW ELEMENT.

Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge Discusses Some of Duluth's Changes.

"The New Element" was the subject of the toast by Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, who is one of Duluth's early settlers and the subject was treated in a delightful manner. She said in part:

"This subject was given me because I am an old resident; that was the reason the committee gave me when the members asked me to respond to this toast and I must confess that it has puzzled me much. Couldn't a person who has been in Duluth ten years talk upon this subject? But an old resident can tell about old times. Not being the oldest inhabitant which is the equivalent of champion liar, I can not indulge in flights of fancy, but must stick to facts.

"The word 'new' is a comparative one, and a person who came here thirty-five years ago when Duluth was bounded on the east by Fourth avenue east, and on the west by Fourth avenue west, when on a winter's night the wolves were heard howling at the top of the hill; when there were no sidewalks and not a carriage, and Superior street was a slough of despond; when we bought water by the barrel; when we walked a mile to feast our eyes upon a plot of ground twelve feet square; when the winters were so cold we were afraid to close our eyes from fear that the lids would freeze together; when in spring the Indians camped on the hill just above Fourth street and made maple syrup and strained it through their blankets; when everybody knew everybody and nobody had so very much more than anybody else; when church socials and church suppers were patronized by everybody; when we had a grand Dickens party, a mistletoe pantomime and Mrs. Parley's Waxworks and a dancing party at the Clark house to celebrate the completion of the St. Paul & Duluth railroad; when a person can remember so well all that took place thirty-five years ago, everything that has happened since, seems new. You can readily imagine that Duluth has solved many problems since then. The problems of sewage, of a harbor, of lighting, of transportation and communication, of grading, of schools, education and amusements and theaters, of a public library and the thousand and one things which transform a pile of rocks, a primeval forest and a howling wilderness into a habitable and modern city, have all been solved during these thirty-five years.

"You new comers who sigh for the effete East, where automobiles are as common as horses, where the railways drop oil on your gown when you cross the street, where it takes a half day to purchase a yard of ribbon, where you can't stay at home in the summer on account of the heat, nor in the autumn because of the hay fever, just be patient for a while. Duluth will conquer the hills with inclined railways and moving sidewalks and every other good thing which cities similarly situated have. The smoke and soot of the city is a new adornment which presents a problem to be solved. It used to be our boast that no matter how dirty our streets were in the summer we had a dazzlingly clean city in the winter, but now that we have apartment blocks and hospitals and department stores whose chimneys send forth clouds of black smoke so that when we go down town our best friend is scandalized at our appearance and addresses us cold to her 'good morning' the familiar question of the soap advertisers.

"Two weeks ago, you might have complained that Duluth had no sanitary disposal of garbage, but we are delighted to see that this problem is solved and a crematory is already installed. Not very long ago people of wealth and accustomed to luxury stayed in Duluth by compulsion, but now owing to the example and effort of a few men of unselfish spirit and broad outlook, luxurious homes with attractive grounds are making our city a desirable home for the wealthy. This element of wealth and luxury and lavish expenditure is a new one and constitutes perhaps the most noticeable change which has taken place within the past few years. It remains to be seen whether it is on the whole for the highest advantage to our city. It it sets an example of a foolish waste of time and a desire to outshine others, if it has a low standard in temperance and morals, if it is exclusive and snobbish and selfish, then it will prove a baneful and pernicious influence which should be condemned by every good citizen.

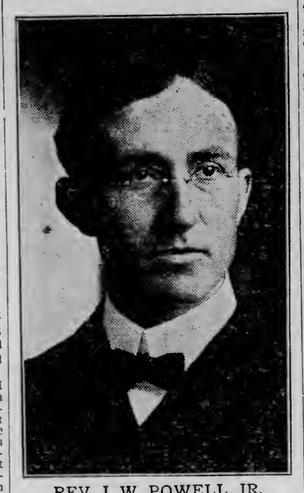

"In club life new elements are continually occurring. Ten years ago the clubs for women were devoted to culture for the individual, but today even the most exclusive are ready to combine in good work for the masses. We are fast approaching the time when Duluth will have all the advantages of an older city. Our schools will be the center of mental, physical and manual training; play grounds will be provided with all the apparatus necessary for gymnastic exercises; the natural beauties of Duluth, water — courses, ravines, rocks, the hills, will be preserved and made more attractive, and it rests largely with the women whether we shall have the reputation of being as healthy morally as we are physically."

THE COMMERCIAL SPIRIT.

Rev. J. W. Powell Finds it a Factor for Good.

"The Commercial Spirit," that element in modern life which receives so much harsh criticism, was the subject of Rev. John W. Powell"s toast, and that the commercial spirit is a factor for good was brought out in Mr. Powell's speech. He said:

"If modern business were all graft and greed, if our social life were all based on the possession of wealth without regard to culture or character, if our political life were absolutely under the domain of the money kings and there were no ideals left, then we might well despair. But we must not blind ourselves to the hidden meaning of all this complex life in which we are immersed. If in the senate we have had a Mitchell bringing down his gray hairs in shame to the grave, we have had also a George Frisbee Hoar, whom a nation delighted to honor. If we have had a Burton or a Quay or a Depew, we have also had a Beveridge, a Dolliver and a Knox, against whose integrity and public spirit not a word can be spoken. If we have had our political bosses, we have at least seen them fall and their places taken by a Republican Roosevelt and Hanly and La Follette, and a Democratic Folk and Johnson. These are the things that suggest the America of our dreams and tell us that the commercial spirit is not what it seems.

"Our modern commerce is actually feeding and clothing the world. The farmer, the merchant, the railroad man and the manufacturer are workers together with God for the service of His people. The spirit that makes possible this infinite labor is the commercial spirit. Not the spirit of greed, not the spirit of strife, not the spirit of oppression, not the spirit that sees all these needs of human life and all the sources of supply and organizes a commercial system so gigantic in conception that the whole round earth is bound by gold chains into a league of mutual service. It matters little that men have not understood the real meaning of the tasks they undertook. 'Themselves from God they could not free.' Some of them were moved by greed of gain, some by desire to make a name for themselves, some by sheer lust of achievement, some by the joy of playing the game, most of them, doubtless, from the humblest laborer to the mightiest organizer, worked in part because a man must work to make a living for himself and his family, and in part because it was in him to work and he could not help himself. But 'they builded better than they knew,' and the end is service and universal brotherhood. And there have not been wanting men who, like Andrew Carnegie, have preached effectively the doctrine of the stewardship of wealth, or of others like George W. Childs of Philadelphia, or Marshall Field of Chicago, or J. L. Washburn and Thomas F. Cole of Duluth and others who have practiced it. These are the men and those like them who have redeemed the commercial spirit, doing joyously the great task of organizing and directing the mighty enterprises through which the world's work is carried forward, and at the same time dedicating all their energies to the uplifting and betterment of mankind."

BESTOWAL OF CHARITY.

Mrs. Alexander Milne Discusses the Extending of Aid.

Mrs. Alexander Milne followed Mr. Powell and spoke on "The Altruistic Spirit." There is probably no woman in Duluth who would be listened to with more interest with such a subject for a toast. She spoke charmingly and suggested plans for very practical work in Duluth and the toast was one of the most delightful of the afternoon. She said in part:

"In few places is the altruistic spirit so strong and so widespread as in Duluth. Witness the exceptional promptness and the overflowing generosity which met the call for money tour our new Y. M. C. A. building. May there be a similar answer when the young women make known their needs. I should like to linger on the broader altruism, but I shall speak only of the altruistic spirit as it grapples with the problem of the dependent classes, the most important problem that confronts us. Goldsmith in his 'Deserted Village' has given us a fine picture of the typical charity of the olden time in his picture of the pastor, and Charles Lamb was another idealist who advised giving without asking any questions. We cannot help loving these people for their warm sympathy, but in the complex life of today they would be the worst enemies the poor could have.

"Ill-considered charity does positive harm. Time and money of a successful workers are consumed in trying to overcome the evil effects. In all cases except emergencies where the relief should be full and speedy, the charity which does not have for its object self-control, self-help and prevention is harmful to him who gives and him who takes.' The giver lulls his conscience and gratifies himself by giving only to such objects as thrust 'good morning' the familiar question of the soap advertisers.

"Two weeks ago, you might have complained that Duluth had no sanitary disposal of garbage, but we are delighted to see that this problem is solved and a crematory is already installed. Not very long ago people of wealth and accustomed to luxury stayed in Duluth by compulsion, but now owing to the example and effort of a few men of unselfish spirit and broad outlook, luxurious homes with attractive grounds are making our city a desirable home for the wealthy. It it sets an example of a foolish waste of time and a desire to outshine others, if it has a low standard in temperance and morals, if it is exclusive and snobbish and selfish, then it will prove a baneful and pernicious influence which should be condemned by every good citizen.

"In club life new elements are continually occurring. Ten years ago the clubs for women were devoted to culture for the individual, but today even the most exclusive are ready to combine in good work for the masses. We are fast approaching the time when Duluth will have all the advantages of an older city. Our schools will be the center of mental, physical and manual training; play grounds will be provided with all the apparatus necessary for gymnastic exercises; the natural beauties of Duluth, water — courses, ravines, rocks, the hills, will be preserved and made more attractive, and it rests largely with the women whether we

Mrs. Milne then told in detail of the extensive and splendid work of Associated Charities which provides such efficient assistance which results in self-help for the recipients by not only relieving the worthy poor, but also in removing if possible the cause of poverty by means of thorough investigation. The District Nursing association was also mentioned by Mrs. Milne as an agency for good in the charitable work among the poor.

WATCH OVER THE YOUNG.

Mrs. Irvine L. Lenroot of Superior Urges Importance of it.

Mrs. Irvine L. Lenroot of Superior was the representative of the Superior club women and she responded in a charming manner to the tonst, "Our Young People." She said in part:

"This is the golden age of youth. Never have there been such opportunities, such privileges, such responsibilities, in business, in politics, in all branches of industrial life. The old men may still dream dreams, but the young men not only see visions, but have become doers of the Word, also.

"Today we are supposed to discuss local problems; to consider what Duluth is doing in our own two cities, needs as it assumes metropolitan proportions, things that are more easily provided for before the city becomes too large, and it is the part of wisdom to consider now the certain demands of the near future. I have particularly in mind the importance of free baths and public playgrounds. I believe the value of these two things cannot be overestimated. There are many small overfull homes in our cities where the conditions of daily living are such, especially during our long, cold winters, as to offer no encouragement whatever to the practice of that virtue which is next to godliness. As for playgrounds, many little ones have none but the public streets where saloons abound.

"You, in Minnesota, have a right to be proud of the remarkable results obtained from the free bath system in St. Paul, while we point with pride to Milwaukee's public playgrounds. We, at the Head of the Lakes, should have enough civic pride to wish to keep up with the best spirit of the times. With one little suggestion I must leave this subject. Whenever a new schoolhouse is to be built, would it not be possible to establish therein two or three baths for the use of the pupils until some more adequate provision could be made?

"There are other needs, common to all childhood, rich or poor, that we do well to bear in mind. There should be a freemasonry among children, irrespective of wealth or station. It is one of the most valuable factors in the growth of character. To day is the 12th day of February, Abraham Lincoln's birthday. According to the false standards which we are constantly tempted to set up, little Abraham would scarcely have been considered a fit playmate for our sons. Children learn all too easily to be priggish and snobbish, but prigs and snobs do not make good citizens. Happy the child who is early taught that neither wealth, nor what sometimes passes for education, makes the man; that it is not what we have, nor even what we know, but what we are, that counts.

"The thought has long been with me that the time has come when especial attention should be paid to the cultivation of the love of home. To make good citizens of our sons we must first make them lovers of home. Patriotism is but the love of home writ-ten large, and the cry for good citizenship rings through our land today like a clarion call to arms. Teach our daughters also the love of home, that they may become the mothers of good citizens.

"Love of home, love of country, love of God, these things should be first on every woman's conscience. The world calls us and needs us for many things. Suffering and oppressed childhood need our philanthropy, our fresh-air playgrounds, and our free baths that make for cleanliness of body that cleanliness of soul may come easier, but at the very foundation of all these things, should lie that fundamental virtue, that torch that should light every man that cometh into the world, the love of home, the light of home."

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM.

reign of law has not ceased in Pennsylvania and investors in Pennsylvania sureties need not be alarmed at the vagaries of the legislature.

"Second, the resolution avers 'It is alleged that the price of anthracite coal has been raised since the last anthracite coal strike to $1.25 per ton, yet the so-called operators are refusing to allow the miners an increase in wages, thus another strike is threatened.'

"This is in form a cowardly statement, the falsity of which the public should know.

"Prior to 1900 the wages as paid by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron company were fixed by a sliding scale. In 1900, under the leadership of the United Mine Workers the labor troubles began. It is just, therefore, to compare prices and costs in 1899 with present cost and prices. The average price per ton received by the coal and iron company for its coal at the mines in 1899 was $1.713, an average price per ton in 1905 was $1.449. This shows an increase of 73.6 cents per ton in seven years.

"The increase in the cost of mining of coal was 62.3 cents per ton, which was made up as follows: Labor cost per ton, 1899, $1.097; labor cost per ton, 1905, $1.584. The cost of materials increased from 21.4 cents in 1899 to 43 cents in 1905. In other words the increased cost of production was labor, 51.7 cents; materials, 11.6 cents, or a total of 63.3 cents, leaving to the coal company an increase of only 10.3 cents per ton in the last seven years.

"In point of fact, notwithstanding this increase of 10 3-10 cents per ton, if the coal and iron company had charged the usual average royalty of 30 cents per ton for coal mined from its own mine operations of the company would have resulted in a loss.

"By reference to the annual report of the coal and iron company for the year 1899, it will be found that the surplus for that year was only $423,028.30. In the previous year there was a deficit of $53,-524.54.

"But someone will ask 'why is it that the Reading system is now making money and its stocks advancing? Does it not make up in the transportation of anthracite, what it loses in mining coal? Here again, the facts will be a full answer to the suggestions.

"The transportation of anthracite coal is not the important factor in the increased revenue of the Reading system. As far back as 1877 the anthracite traffic was 61.60 per cent of the total freight and passenger traffic receipts of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway company. Now the receipts from miscellaneous traffic which does not include bituminous coal nor passenger traffic exceed the receipts from anthracite coal traffic and proportion of anthracite traffic has diminished to 32.50 per cent. Today the passenger receipts alone are equal to one-half the traffic receipts on anthracite coal. The increased prosperity of the Reading system is due to the miscellaneous traffic, passenger traffic and bituminous coal traffic. In point of fact there has been a very small increase in traffic receipts from anthracite coal and no increase in rates thereon. The average receipts from traffic on anthracite coal for the last five years have been $10,334,850. The traffic receipts from the same sources in 1883 were $10,046,760, and in 1893, $10,123,575.

"These are the facts, and if any committee of the legislature wants to verify their accuracy, the books of the company are open for inspection.

"GEORGE F. BAER,
"President Reading Company."

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Disturbance at Quincy Mine Decided to Have Been an Earthquake.

Marquette—The seismic disturbance which was felt so severely throughout the Copper country Thursday morning, and which damaged the Quincy mine to a considerable extent, has been generally accepted by the experts, mining engineers and others in the Copper country as an earthquake, although the opinion of the public that it was one of the familiar air blasts of the Quincy is hard to shake. But the shocks were felt in a wider area than an explosion in the Quincy, however severe, could have affected, and this is reassuring to the people living about the mine.

Superintendent Lawton of the Quincy has given out a statement that the damage to the two shafts which were put out of commission is not of a nature to delay operations very long and that work should be resumed there this week.

South Range—Justice Jarvis of South Range will conduct a hearing next Tuesday morning in the case of Frank Jarvenppa, charged by Lewis Johnson with slander. He alleges that the defendant spoke disrespectfully of his 16-year-old daughter. The matter is one which is expected to hold considerable public interest in South Range, as the parties are well known and other charges are expected to grow out of it.

Houghton—Sportsmen who are interested in getting up the prospective wolf drive in Houghton county during the latter part of February say that in a short time they will be ready to announce who will make up the party of fifty men for the chase. The plans are going along nicely and a well organized company will be the result.

Grand Marais—The new shingle and tie mill at Sable Lake, Alger county, recently completed by Lombard & Rittenhouse, has started operations. The mill will run night and day for the balance of the winter and all next summer. Between the woods operations and the mill the firm will employ a large crew of men. The product will be hauled to Grand Marais and shipped from there by rail and water.

Menominee—The Menominee county officials have received a large bronze medal from the Louisiana Purchase exposition as an award for an exhibit of fruits which that county had on display at the exposition in 1904. The exhibit in question was of apples from the orchards of Magnus Nelson, a wellknown fruit farmer, and the display was awarded prizes which would indicate that it was among the best in the agricultural building. The medal will be placed in the museum at the Spies public library at Menominee, the county having no suitable place at the courthouse for the care of it.

LIVELY RIOT IN NEGRO CHURCH

Pastor and Elders Engage in Row Over Contribution Boxes.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 12.—Internecine war which has been rampant in the congregation of St. James African M. E. church, St. Paul, for several weeks, yesterday morning broke out into open riot. The minister, Rev. Seymour, was completing a sermon on "Brotherly Love," when minister and congregation engaged in a pitched battle over the collection, in which two of the trustees opposed to the minister and the minister himself were knocked down.

During the fight, a riot call was sent into a nearby police station and a patrol wagon full of bule-coats came to the rescue.

Rev. Seymour has had trouble in his congregation for several weeks but he refuses to give up the church, although unfriendly trustees voted to reduce his salary from $80 to $10 a month. When Rev Seymour arose to preach from the text, "Ye are the salt of the earth," the air was surcharged with electricity, but hostilities did not break out until the collection was announced.

Two of the insurgent trustees came forward to take up the collection, but Rev. Seymour called vociferously upon two of the stewards faithful to him to gather up the offering. The congregation by this time were filing before the contribution boxes. Rev. Seymour stood guard over one but the two unfriendly trustees held the other boxes.

Rev. Seymour attempted to take charge of one of these boxes, when R. C. Minor, a trustee who was holding it, objected. Rev. Seymour landed a blow over Minor's eye and put him down. Robert Lowe, another trustee, holding the other box, went after the pastor and felled him before his own altar.

By this time the entire congregation was in an uproar and each took sides. The women rushed in between the combatants, and tried to soothe them. The excitement was at fever heat when the police arrived. The row was finally quelled after the police threatened to make arrests.

NEGRO TAKEN FROM JAIL AND HANGED TO A BRIDGE.

Gadsden, Ala., Feb. 12.—Bunkie Richardson, a negro charged with the assault and murder of Mrs. Sarah Smith here July 15 last, was forcibly taken from the jail at an early hour yesterday morning and hanged to a bridge of the Louisville & Nashville railway across Coosa river, Twenty-four masked men went to the jail, overpowered the sheriff and jailor and made short work of the prisoner.

Four negroes were charged with the crime against Mrs. Smith, one of the most fiendish ever committeed in the state, two of whom have been legally executed. The third, Will Johnson was recently convicted and sentenced to death, but last week Governor Jenks, believing there was strong doubt of the prisoner's guilt reprieved the sentence to life imprisonment.

Richardson, the man lynched yesterday morning had not been indicted, but was in jail awaiting the action of the grand jury.

PEOPLE DISCOURAGED.

Say They Will Never Rebuild Littleton, Destroyed by Fire.

New Martinsville, W. Va., Feb. 12.—Littleton, which was practically wiped out by fire Friday will probably never be rebuilt. Many of the sufferers are disheartened and have expressed an intention to move to other towns. Mayor Bradley threatened to prosecute the proprietor of the one remaining saloon if he opened, but the man disregarded this.

Mayor Bradley promptly sent a man with a sledge hammer to the saloon and the latter knocked in the heads of over 100 barrels of beer and allowed it to flow into the creek.

The fire which destroyed sixty buildings and sixteen business houses, and rendered nearly 1,000 people homeless, was caused, it is said, by the two sons of Harry Crow, who had been playing with matches in a closet.

MAY TAKE 150 YEARS TO BUILD PANAMA CANAL.

Kingston, Island of Jamaica, Feb. 11. —It will take 150 years to finish the Panama canal if things go on as they are going now," remarked an American engineer who has been stopping here a few days on his way home from the Isthmus, where he has spent nearly thirty years.

He seems to be convinced that the authorities at Washington will be compelled to take the work of excavating out of the hands of the commission and let it in sections to private contractors.

The laborers from Jamaica employed on the canal this engineer calls lazy—which is a flattering estimate—and says it is necessary to swear roundly at them before they will do any appreciable amount of work.

Yet the chief engineer of the canal seems to value Jamaica labor, for a short time ago he sent two of his ablest assistants here to hire men.

MINER KILLED.

Crushed to Death Between an Ore Car and a Beam.

Chisholm, Minn., Feb. 12.—Accidentally caught between an ore car and a beam underground at the Chisholm mine, Andrew Parkovich was crushed to death Saturday. He was driving a mule pulling two loaded cars, when he slipped and fell between the beam and one of the cars. Three ribs were broken and his back so badly injured that he died shortly after. Parkovich, who came here about three years ago, was forty years old and leaves a wife and child in the old country.

OHIO WOMEN

Object to Presentation of Punch Bow to Miss Roosevelt.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 12.—The various societies, representing the Women's Christian Temperance union, in Columbus, are indignant at the announcement that the Ohio delegation in congress decided to give Alice Roosevelt a punch bowl as a wedding gift, and their indignation is not abated at the later announcement that the delegation had decided to present her with a loving cup, which many of the women take to be practically a punch bowl. At a meeting of the memorial committee of the W. C. T. U., yesterday, it was decided to send a letter to Congressman Webber, thanking him for his stand against the punch bowl, and also to pray that the delegation shall not present the gift of a punch bowl.

VAIL A CANDIDATE.

Ely, Minn., Feb. 12.—Friends of Patrick R. Vail, mayor of Ely, announced yesterday that he will be a candidate for senatorial honors in the Forty-ninth district, of which he is not now a resident, but into which he will move shortly to take care of his interests in the Virginia Brewing company, at Virginia.

This makes the fourth name mentioned for this office, the others being P. E. Dowling of Eveleth, who recently announced himself; William Brown, a Duluth, Missabe & Northern conductor, and L. A. Barnes, alderman of the Seventh ward, Duluth.

Mr. Vail has large property interests in the district. He owns the Vail opera house block in Eveleth. He has served one term in the legislature.

FIRE AT TWO HARBORS.

The Residence of G. C. Hartman is Almost Totally Destroyed.

Two Harbors, Minn., Feb. 12.—Fire, which originated from a cause unknown, almost totally destroyed the residence of G. C. Hartman, on Eveleth avenue, at 8:30 o'clock last night. Neighbors came to the assistance and aided Mr. Hartman in saving nearly all his household goods. The loss on the building is $500. No one was at home when the fire started. Mr. Hartman was at the home of a neighbor, when he saw the flames beginning their work of destruction. It is thought a lamp accidentally overturned, or an overheated stove caused the conflagration.

MEETING FOR DULUTH.

Slater Will Talk to Head of Lakes Traveling Men.

E. K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner, will conduct an institute for traveling men in Duluth similar to the one which was held some time ago for the food salesmen who make their headquarters in the Twin Cities.

The Duluth salesmen were invited to be present at the gathering held in the Twin Cities but many of them were unable to be there so it was suggested to Mr. Slater that a meeting be held here. Mr. Slater promptly fell in with the suggestion. Mr. Slater will preside and give the flock a heart to heart talk about pure foods.

SMALL FIRE IN A SHAFT.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 12.—A blaze in No. 6 Spruce shaft, Saturday afternoon, caused considerable excitement but did little damage. The fire was in the shaft at the second level, and is supposed to have originated from a smudge neglected by the miners. When the alarm was sounded Supt. J. H. Hearding took charge of the fire fighting brigade, and personally gave the orders that resulted in the quenching of the blaze in a short time.

NO MAN NEEDS A MILLION, SAYS GOVERNOR JOHNSON

Money is the Falsest Standard of Success Ever Raised.

Extracts From Governor's Speech.

Anyone who in jest or otherwise has pointed the finger of scorn at anyone who is trying to make the world better, has done something he will always be ashamed of.

A sceptic never built a hill; never placed a river in its course; never deposited an iron mine on a range; a sceptic never did anything.

There are many standards of success but the falsest is that which raises up dollars and cents as the goal of a life's work.

There is opportunity for every man to be just as big a man as Napoleon, minus the things he did to get fame.

A man doesn't need $1,000,000. No man should have over $10,000 a year to live right.

If you are worth spending any time on yourself, you will regret every moment spent in debauchery when you are 40, if there is anything of you left to regret with.

There is a patriotism higher than the patriotism of war; it is the patriotism of peace, good government and good citizenship.

"Success" and "Character" were the keynotes of the speech delivered by Governor John A. Johnson at the Lyceum yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association ofo Duluth.

The theater was totally inadequate to accomodate the men who gathered to hear the state's chief executive. By 3 o'clock when the door opened, the steps in front of the theater were filled with the waiting crowd, and long before the meeting began, the theater was packed to its capacity, with several hundred people standing.

The governor was given no stated subject but in a rather rambling and disconnected talk he made a deep impression on his audience, and for more than an hour he held the listeners and impressed them with the deep personal feeling apparently underlay his words.

He was introduced by ex-Governor Miller.

"The idea that the opportunities today are not as great as they were, is a great mistake," said Mr. Miller. "There never was a time when the opportunities for a young man were as great as they are today. We have with us today, a man who should be an inspiration to every young man in Minnesota."

The governor, in beginning his speech, stated that he came to the city expecting to speak before a meeting of the Y. M. C. A.

"I would like to think," he said, "that I was talking to 1,500 young men banded together for the raising of the standard of life in this city. The time was when the association was pitied and scorned. The founders were thought to be narrow. Maybe they were. Men with zeal great enough to start any great movement necessarily are narrow. But I am glad of the opportunity to come before the Y. M. C. A. and say anything that may encourage them. Anyone who in jest or in earnest has ever pointed the finger of scorn at anyone trying to make the world better, has done something he will always regret and always be secretely a little ashamed of.

"I imagine most all of us are agreed that there is such a thing as the universe, and that it is ruled by some great power, whom the Christians call God. We agree on that one thing, yet few of us live up to our doctrine.

"We have our agnostics who don't know. The greatest agnostic the world has ever seen, said on his deathbed that he could hear the rustle of the wing of hope.

"No mortal man could have come to this world, and have lived less than a third of a century, and have left the stamp of himself for 2,000 years. A sceptic never made anything. Sceptics and agnostics and iconoclasts tear down, and don't give any valid reasons for it.

"It is well sometimes to stop in our mad race for wealth and power and just take inventory. What credentials have we got. If it should come tomorrow, what kind of a showing could we make?

"Society is divided into two classes, those with more dinners than appetites and those with more appetites than dinners.

"The first thing a man thinks of in this organized society of ours, is self-preservation. That is its first duty, and growing out of that come the different avocations and professions. At the end of each of these roads, lies success and toward this goal all men are striving along these different paths. There are many standards of success, but in my opinion the falsest of them is that which raises up the mere accumulation of dollars and cents, as the thing most to be desired. Don't misunderstand me. I don't rail at wealth itself. But the man who thinks of that only never reaches the goal. Why down in New York there is a man who has set his mark at a billion of dollars, and do you suppose he will stop there? But he has been so busy accumulating his pile that he has not had time to digest his food. The first essential of a good citizen is a good alimentary canal.

"A man doesn't need a million dollars. No man should have more than $10,000 a year to live on and live in the right manner. There are too many men of the stamp of Yerkes and too many women like Mrs. Yerkes in this country. There is too much voluptuousness.

"They tell me that you have more millionaires in Duluth than any city in the Northwest. No doubt the majority of them came by it honestly. This is a city of vast opportunities and you have been alert to see those opportunities. I would thank any one of them if he gave me $100,000. But I wouldn't thank him if he gave me a million dollars. No man needs a million dollars.

"I have often thought that if I had come to Duluth in 1854 and had grown up with the city, I might have done much better than if I had lived in the little town of St. Peter and gone into the newspaper business. But if I had come here in 1854, I would have been dead now, and there are no opportunities in this world for a dead man—whether he is buried or not.

"But there is the opportunity for every man to be just as big and great a man as Napoleon, minus the things that Napoleon did to make him famous. Is it fame you want? Cole Younger was the greatest man in his profession this country ever saw, but do you want that kind of fame? Why do you want fame? Is it to have people know where you are and what you are doing? The man who does the best he can all of the time is just as good and great a man as he who conquers countries.

"How many you have ever read the Bible from cover to cover? Many of you have a prejudice against it because it lays down a law for you to follow. But, my friends, the law is there whether you read it or not. Don't you suppose the laws of the state of Minnesota are there whether you are familiar with them or not. And don't you think it would be wise for you to become familiar with them? The Bible contains more poetry, more fine literature, more true revelations of the deepest human emotions than any library of books ever written. It is the first book a young man should read.

"The good books that have been written are the greatest treasure houses in the world.

"Wouldn't you as soon read of Napoleon and his exploits, Socrates and his teachings, Plato and his philosophy, of the wonderful cities of ancient Greece, of the armies of Rome, of the feasts of ancient times, as to go down here in a room and bet ten or fifteen cents on the face value of certain cards with spots and pictures on them?

"If you are worth spending any time on yourself, you will never cease to regret every moment spent in debauchery, when you are forty, if there is anything left of you to regret with.

"The greatest thing in the world is man, and the greatest thing in man is character. I want to tell you the railroads are not employing men because they are good poker players. They sometimes go to the legislature. They employ men whom they can trust with their funds and know that they are just as safe as if they were locked in the biggest safe in the world.

"It isn't reputation that counts. It is character. Reputation comes from being elected governor, but that isn't character. You ought to have that kind of character that grew beside the sea of Galilee 2,000 years ago; the kind of character that makes the man the same when alone by himself as when before crowds on the street.

"Storms may come and beat about it, and obscure it for a time, but the thickest clouds will part and it will stand revealed.

"If I was going into business in Duluth tomorrow I would do two things. First, I would go and engage a liberal amount of space in the newspapers for advertising. I am in the newspaper business myself, and know the value of advertising, and if you are going into business you want to toot your own horn. Then I would resolve never to take a dollar from anybody that I hadn't earned. It is well to have a horn to toot, you know.

"If I were starting into politics tomorrow, I might dispense with the advertising, for you can sometimes get too much publicity, you know; but I would make the same resolve in regard to the dollars. There is no place where an upright character stands out so brightly as it does in the political life. Reputations may suffer, go down and come up, but character once violated never becomes perfectly pure again.

"There is a patriotism higher than the patriotism of war. It is the patriotism of peace, of good government and good citizenship.

"This is the age of opportunity. We all have the opportunity to do right, to fear God and to do no wrong."

KNEW NOTHING.

Los Angeles Times: "An Englishman came to New York to make some investments," said Governor Folk of Missouri.

"He got the annual reports of all the biggest financial institutions in the land. These reports were very favorable. All the Englishman now needed was a little personal testimony.

"Accordingly he sought out a man prominent in public life.

"'I think of investing,' he said, 'in the Sure Thing company. You are connected with it, aren't you?'

"'I am,' the public man replied.

"'Will you kindly tell men, then,' said the Briton, 'something about the financial standing of the concern?'

THE LAW.

Gen. Gilman Marston of Exeter, N. H., had no very exalted opinion of the law as it was sometimes expounded by the court, says the Boston Herald. The late Chief Justice Charles Doe once ruled adversely upon a point that the general had made, and Gen. Marston retaliated as follows:

"Your honor's law reminds me of the definition of law given by an old darky. He said: 'De law, my frens, am like a ground glass window. It may afford a little light to guide us trew de dark and uncertain ways of dis life, but de very devil hisself couldn't see trew it.'"

WIN BULK OF PRIZES

Ole Mangseth of Red Wing Only Runner in Same Class.

Ole Mangseth of Red Wing was the only rider who was in the same class with the Duluth men. He captured the first prize of $50 in gold, but the Duluth men won six of the remaining eight prizes.

The second prize, consisting of $30 in gold, went to John Mangseth of Duluth, who won the second highest number of points. The third prize consisting of $15 in gold for the third highest number of points, was taken by Ole Feiring of Duluth, and Olaf Larson also of this city won the fifth prize, a pair of skis.

The gold medal for the runner having the highest number of points in any one jump, went to Ole Feiring of Duluth, who also captured the cup for the longest standing jump, with his leap of sixty feet. John Mangseth of Duluth won the cup presented by the ladies of St. Paul to the most graceful runner.

The three prizes which the Duluth men failed to capture were the first prize of $50 in gold won by Ole Mangseth of Red Wing; the fourth prize, a shotgun, won by A. Heliand of Cameron, Wis.; and the sixth prize, a pair of skis, won by K. Helland of Cameron.

This afternoon the Duluth jumpers will take in the tournament at Stillwater, and will return to the city on Tuesday morning. If they are as successful at Stillwater as they were at St. Paul, the trip will be a profitable one. The Bovey tournament will be held on February 18, and the Duluth club will be represented there by the same men.

The three tournaments will put them in good shape for the national tournament to be held next week at Ishpeming, and they should carry off some of the prizes there.

DULUTH RINKS KNOCKED OUT

Saturday's Play at Winnipeg Was Disastrous for Local Curlers.

Winnipeg, Feb. 12.—Dunbar of St. Paul is the only American skip remaining in the bonspiel events here. He is still in all three open events and the Royal Caledonian event. Saturday's play saw the Duluth rinks and the Bowesmount rink knocked out of all events.

Bolton of Minnedosa disposed of A. H. Smith in the morning draw of the Empire trophy, by the score of 13 to 12, and in the same draw the Myron rink of Duluth met defeat at the hands of Braden's all-star quartet, in the Royal Caledonia event, by the score of 12 to 8. Rule of Collingwood put Thomson of Bowesmount out of the Dingwall event in the same draw, by the score of 13 to 10.

The two Duluth rinks had a battle royal with the Oxbow rinks in the Tuckett event. Smith won his game from Walsh by four up, and just as he finished his game, Myron was four down on his opponent, with one end to play. But Bishop made three on the last end, and the Duluth rinks were put out of the event.

PARENTS ARE NOTIFIED.

Relatives of Former Duluthian, Murdered in Denver, Are Located.

The parents of Thomas Johnson, who was murdered in Denver by a drunken policeman, have been located. F. A. McElroy of the Northern Dredge company, for whom Johnson had worked for many years, yesterday broke open a valise which belonged to him and in it found letters which showed that his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Johnson Kerlom, live at Mondovi, Wis., and that a sister, Mrs. George Rumsey, lives at Leroy, Minn. Both have been notified.

F. H. Cody, 1703 West Michigan street, who was Johnson's boyhood playmate, confirms this. They practically grew up together.

TWO-YEAR-OLD CHILD BURNED

Blazing Oil Ends Life of One of Twin Sons.

According to the story told Dr. Potter of South Superior, the attending physician, Mrs. Britt left the twin babies with her 8-year-old daughter and two smaller children, while she went out to look after some work at the barn. During her absence one of the twins pulled a can of kerosene oil from a shelf, the fluid spilling on its clothes. The child ran to the kitchen stove and threw the can on the fire. The blazing oil soon ignited the child's clothing and, before the mother could reach the house, it was a mass of flames.

Mrs. Britt threw a blanket about the baby and smothered the flames, but did not get the fire out until it had done its terrible work.

The oil had been used frequently in starting the fires in the morning, and the other children did not notice what was going on until their baby brother was wrapped in flmaes.

The funeral was held from the family residence today.

GOOD REPORTS RECEIVED.

Rich sulphide deposits have been encountered on Crosscuts Nos. 1 and 2, on the 700 level in the Shuttuck-Arizona mine, according to telegrams which have been received by Martin Pattison from his son, Supt. B. M. Pattison, of the mine.

The find on Crosscut No. 1 was made Jan. 24, and now comes the find in Crosscut No. 2. Work in the first crosscut has been in rich ore for eighteen days, and as yet there is no sign of the end of the vein. Supt. Pattison is of the opinion, however, that this latest strike is better than all the others.

The miners will determine the extent of the new strike as soon as possible. The main drift on the 800-foot level has shown a great deal of ore. It has just reached the level of the Leo claim. The Leo and the Roy claims, which are to be developed later, are said to give the greatest promise of any in the Shattuck group.

STORY OF ROBBER RAID IN CHINA

Not a Hand Raisad to Discover or Arrest Raiders.

New York, Feb. 12.—An interesting story of a robber raid in China has come here from Rev. C. E. Patton, a Presbyterian missionary stationed at Canton. The incident occurred during a missionary trip in the country, and is told by Mr. Patton as follows:

"We were just going ashore at Shui Tung when we had the first intimation of trouble. Out in midstream lay a cluster of boats, filled with men, women and children and a motley collection of household goods. Our boatmen excitedly told us of the raid. The poor folks peopled the ramshackle huts you see perched high on poles over the water's edge. Poorest of the poverty-stricken, they were so panic struck that they were moving all their scanty possessions out to escape the dreaded raid of the soldiers, when they should follow in the wake of the robber band.

"Although still mid-afternoon, the streets were all but deserted. Business was suspended. The usual litter of street booths had disappeared. Few were the pedestrians even. There was a subdued awe as when some great local calamity befalls a home town. Only the bolder spirits dared appear, others fearing a return of the raiders who had left such a wake of terror behind them. The raid began on the morning of the day before, just at breakfast time. Preceded by the booming of guns and the blaze of trumpets, the raiders came through the main street three to four hundred strong. Evidently a fairly organized band, the leader was borne in a sedan chair, while two subordinate officers rode horseback; in this country a mark either of wealth or power. A number of coolies carried loads, evidently the plunder of previous raids. They seized only money or such things of gold or silver as could readily be converted into it.

"The door of the drug shop of the elder of our church was several times attacked, but eventually passed by with the remark that there was probably nothing of value within. Several of the church members lost property, one to the extent of $40. One member was killed by a shot fired through the door of his shop. In all fourteen men were shown through the Yamon, where the official's boxes were ransacked while he 'lay low' within.

"The elder related how he and others of influence went out and 'saved' the official. It seems that after the disappearance of the raiders the official had mustered the ten soldiers under his care and had sallied bravely forth to overtake and annihilate the raiders, several hundred strong. The others 'saved' him by following and persuading him to return to the city. The official seems an earhest man desirous to do his duty, yet he is in danger. With but the paltry half-score of soldiers allowed him, he is held responsible for anything that many happen within his jurisdiction. The powers that be allow about 200 soldiers for a dozen points scattered over 3,000 square miles of lawless territory, yet hold the petty officials responsible. Just how many men were in this raid on Shui Tung can scarce be said. Making due allowance for fright and Chinese exaggeration, there must have been several hundred. Current rumor says three or four hundred marched through the city.

"A sequel to the raid was learned on a later visit to Shui Tung. The official showed us an order from his superior calling upon him to close twenty of the leading shops and to bring the owners and employes to Tin Paak, the former for trial, the latter for witnesses. It was charged that during the chaos following the raid these shops had taken in certain of the loot left by the raiders in the street. For this they were to be punished. Not a hand has been raised to discover or arrest the raiders. They're scattered, and what's the use trying to find them?"

A SINGING HEN THAT TRILLS GRAND OPERA.

Patten, Me., Feb. 12.—Sembrich, Nordica, Eames and all the other hifalutin singers in New York can look to their laurels if they expect to keep a vocalistic pace set by Ben Christian's prima donna hen, Nordina. Her bell-like notes now soar a whole octave, and Ben believes that she will increase this by six notes before spring.

Nordina is probably the only singing hen in the world, and is valued accordingly. When she was hatched last March out of an ordinary Plymouth Rock egg of an uncertain orgin, she clucked just like any other chick, but one day, when the hired man went into the barnyard whistling, the feathered youngster hopped on a perch and chortled the chorus of "Yankee Doodle" so perfectly that the man almost dropped dead from surprise. He thought his ears were deceiving him, and tried "Sweet Marie." Again the chick followed the notes, and Christian was called.

He put her in a cage and tried her with the melodeon. It was all the same. Up and down the scale she went, half a measure behind the groaning, squeaking keys, and Ben was so delighted that he named the feathered prodigy Nordina, after Lillian Nordina, who was a native of Maine. Nordina's voice was a rich soprano, but of course untrained, and Ben set about cultivating it. The hired man was instructed to confine himself to classical music when he whistled; the melodeon was tuned, and Ben himself sent for the scores of "La Boheme" and "Carmen," and brushed up his own musical education.

Cultivating the voice of a hen is no unusual undertaking, and the owner of the fowl met with many difficulties, but on the whole he has succeeded admirably, and the countryside admits Nordina is a wonder. As yet, however, she is a bit rusty on grand opera, and her voice is still "throaty."

FOUR MEN KILLED IN WRECK OF TRAIN.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The official report of the accident on the Southern railway at Greensboro, N. C., early yesterday morning, received at the offices of the company in this city, states that four employes were killed, as follows:

OWEN NERVILE, engineer train No. 34.
YARD ENGINEER SELLERS.
YARD CONDUCTOR NEWMAN.
FIREMAN JOHNSON.

Fireman Sparger of train No. 34 and William Bailey, an outsider, who was on the switch engine, were badly injured. No passengers were injured.

DYSPEPSIA-PROOF

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed by Any Stomach.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will lie in being able to stand the flash.

It is only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting face to face at a two-by-four table, he handed his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Boston Clam Chowder.
Strained Gumbo.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms.
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Ox Tongue with Sauerkraut.
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Conibination Crab Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered a "little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company." But Mr. White could not be deceived; "I am afraid you can't stand the gleam, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it? You'll always have that hungry look anyhow as long as you have dyspepsia. Now listen. My stomach was in just as bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia business is robbing you of your spirit, of your energy and ability to think quickly. I can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now I'll tell you what to do," and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There, there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food. For even the worst dyspeptic it's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason is it relieves the stomach of nearly all the work it has to do, digests everything in the stomach and stimulates the gastric juice. I can't get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package."

Yes, it is true, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets absolutely stop heartburn, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and all eructations and irritation, and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the good there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

The Safe and Helpful Beverage—

GOOD beer helps the stomach to perform its offices. It aids the digestion. The percentage of alcohol in good beer is very small. GOOD beer—Wiener—quenches the thirst and refreshes instantly and naturally. Athletes drink Wiener beer when in training. They know that it is good for them.

BLATZ WIENER BEER

The absolute wholesomeness of Blatz Beers is predetermined by the Blatz Method, months before it comes to you. Pure, sparkling water—hops—barley malt—brewed and matured in the good Blatz way. The ideal home beverage.

Y. W. C. A. BANQUET.

Annual Event to be Given Wednesday of Next Week.

The annual February banquet of the Young Woman's Christian association will be given Wednesday evening, Feb. 21, at the association rooms on West Superior street. The affair is always the most pretentious social affair of the year in the association entertainments and this year very careful plans are being made for an even more successful banquet than usual. The guests at this affair are usually the people who have a deep interest in the work of the association and who come in contact with it but seldom during the year.

Rev. T. H. Cleland will preside as toastmaster and the following responses will be given:

"The Young Woman's Christian association in the World's Work," Mrs. L. W. Kline.

"Our City's Progress," Principle C. A. Smith.

For the Governor.

Governor and Mrs. John A. Johnson, who were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Weiss of 1615 East Superior street, were the guests of honor at a reception Saturday evening, at which Mr. and Mrs. Weiss were hosts. During the receiving hours Flaaten's orchestra played and a large number called. Assisting about the rooms were Mrs. Whitney Wall, Mrs. M. B. Cullum, Mrs. George W. Peck, Mrs. C. F. MacDonald, Mrs. W. E. Richardson, Mrs. F. O. Sherwin, Mrs. W. J. Suffel and Mrs. W. G. Hegardt.

Bible Class.

A bible class will be organized tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the rooms of the Young Women's Christian association with Rev. J. C. Faries as teacher. The book of Colossians will be studied and any one interested is invited to attend. Mr. Faries is so well-known here for his that many women will be glad of this opportunity to study with him this writing of Paul.

Events of Interest.

Layer Cakes With Different Fillings as Mrs. Telford Makes Them

EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Mocha Tart and Layer Cake.

My Dear Mr. Telford:

Will you please publish in The Evening Herald how to make layer cake; also how to make filling and icing for a mocha tart? Do you use butter or cream? G. W. M.

Layer Cakes and Their Fillings.

Layer Cakes may be made of either sponke cake or butter cake mixtures, according to the filling that is to be used. In making either kind have all your ingredients and utensils ready before commencing operations. Use only the best butter and eggs, the latter cooled by keeping in an ice chest or in cold water. The flour should be the fine pastry flour, and sifted before using. If cold, it may be warmed slightly. The sugar should be fine, the spices pure. Cakes made with butter require long and vigorous beating after the flour is added that they may be fine grained. Sponge cakes should not be beaten after adding the flour. Both flour and the whites of eggs that have been beaten until stiff and dry should be folded in, not stirred. All cake batters should be baked as soon as possible after mixing. For most cakes the oven should be of moderate, steady heat. Cake is baked enough when it shrinks from the pan. Never move a cake until the center is thoroughly set, and in watching the cake open and shut the oven door as gently and quickly as possible. Grease the tins with sweet lard rather than butter, and sift a little dry flour over the bottom.

Sponge Cake Foundation.

Beat the yolks of three eggs until lemon colored and thick; add a cupful and a half of sugar, a half cupful of cold water and a teaspoonful of lemon juice or extract. Have ready two cupfuls of flour that has been sifted, with one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and half a teaspoonful of soda; fold in lightly, adding at the last the whites of three eggs beaten stiff. Bake in round, shallow pans.

Simple Butter Cake Mixture.

Cream together quarter of a cupful of butter and a half cupful of sugar; add one well beaten egg, one-half cupful of milk and one and a half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix, flavor to taste, spread thinly on tins and bake.

Richer Layer Cake Mixture.

Beat to a cream one cupful of butter and two cupfuls of fine granulated sugar; add five egg yolks well beaten and a good grating of nutmeg. Sift together two and a half cupfuls of pastry flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and a half teaspoonful of soda; then stir in with the butter and sugar mixture, alternating with one scant cupful of milk. Beat the whites of three eggs stiff on a platter and fold in at the last. Bake in three layers. This is especially good for chocolate filling.

Chocolate Filling.

Beat the whites of the two eggs left from the batter until stiff, adding to them one cup of powdered sugar, or enough to make the frosting quite stiff. Add one square of chocolate that has been melted. Spread the tops of two of the cakes with a thin layer of slightly acid jelly, such as currant, plum or grape, then put the cakes together with the chocolate frosting. Spread the top layer with some of the frosting. This cake keeps well if put in a tin box and covered.

Chocolate Filling No. 2.

Boil one cup fine granulated sugar with one-third cup hot water until it spins a thread. Have ready the white of one egg beaten stiff with one-eighth teaspoonful cream of tartar. Pour the boiling syrup slowly into the egg, beating steadily until thick enough to spread. Add two tablespoonfuls powdered cocoa or chocolate while the syrup is still hot, and the last thing add two tablespoonfuls whipped cream, if you wish it extra nice. Spread between the layers and on tip and sides of cake.

Orange Filling.

Beat one egg thoroughly, and add one scant cupful sugar with which one large tablespoonful of cornstarch has been mixed by sifting. Add the grated yellow rind and juice of an orange, and the juice of a half lemon. Mix thoroughly, and pour over the mixture one cupful boiling water. Cook, stirring all the time until it thickens slightly. Cool before using.

Sour Cream Filling.

Whip very sour cream until stiff; add a cup and a half of English walnuts or hickory nuts, chopped to a powder; sweeten to taste and flavor lightly with vanilla. This is extremely nice, and moreover a novelty.

Tutti Frutti Filling.

Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatine in water to cover for twenty minutes, then melt over the tea kettle. Cook two cups of granulated sugar with eight tablespoonfuls of water until it threads; pour in the melted gelatine, add a teaspoonful of vanilla or rose water and beat in a cool place until white and thick. Toward the end of the beating stir in two or three tablespoonfuls of various crystallized fruits, cut in small bits, add fine chopped nuts if desired.

Maple Cream Filling.

Put into a saucepan a cupful grated maple sugar and a half tablespoonful of butter, then cool and beat. At first it may look as if it was going to curdle, but it will grow smooth in the beating. Do not let it boil long enough to candy, but only until it forms a soft, thick mass when a spoonful is dropped in cold water.

Mocha Filling.

Cook together, one cup cream, two-thirds of a cup of sugar, and a heaping tablespoonful of butter. As soon as it threads remove from the fire; add quarter of a cup of strong coffee and cool before spreading.

Apple Layer Cake.

Beat the white of one egg until light, but not stiff, then add little by little and alternately, one cup granulated sugar and one tart apple peeled and grated as it is added. Continue the beating in long, even strikes for twenty minutes until you have a white feathery mass that will hold its own. Spread between the layers of a sponge cake.

Lemon Filling.

Stew one apple and rub through a sieve. Add the grated yellow peel and juice of one lemon, one cup of sugar and one beaten egg. Cook until the mixture thickens, then put between the cake layers.

Directions for the mocha tart will be given later.

New Year's Cake.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Can you favor me with a recipe for "New Year's cake" containing caraway seeds? G. C. R.

New York's Cakes with Caraway.

To make the familiar caraway cakes beat to a cream a half pound of butter and a half pound of sugar. Add two and a half pounds pastry flour well sifted, and mix well. Make a hole in the center of the mixture and pour in a cup of lukewarm milk, with a half compressed yeast cake dissolved in it. Let the batter stand over night in a warm place to rise; in the morning add an ounce of caraway seed and beat vigorously. Cover and set in a warm place again to rise, and when double its bulk roll out until about a quarter of an inch thick. Cut into oblong cakes about two and a half inches wide by five inches in length. By the time all are cut out, the first will have risen enough to bake. Put into a moderate oven and bake until a delicate brown. When they come from the oven brush over with milk to give them a glossy surface.

The illustration—from La Nouvelle Mode—shows an attractive model for a gown of white cloth or linen. The long jacket is a particularly pretty model for a severe style of coat. The skirt is long but very full.

The gown shown is of blue chiffon cloth trimmed with velvet bands some shades darker in tone. The guimpe is of Alencon lace, as are the medallions on the velvet. The hat is of white felt trimmed with a large pink rose in the center, while beneath the brim is placed a full ostrich plume of shaded blue and mauve. The model is from La Nouvelle Mode.

Those of their elders, both as to material and models. Charming Empire styles are seen for small girls' wear, and a complete toilet imported for a child of 8 could scarcely be surpassed for sumptuous elegance even by that of her mother's, provided for the smartest occasions. The frock was a pretty little affair in water green silk, accordion pleated, depending from a square, plain yoke, cut a trifle low, and square at the neck; this yoke, outlined with a real Valenciennes beading lace "trou-trou," as it is called, of an ecare shade, through which narrow black velvet baby ribbon was drawn, from, which a number of streamers fell to the hem. Little puff sleeves caught with a trou-trou trimming and rosette of black velvet. With this a gorgeous Empire coat of handsome chinchilla fur was worn over the shoulders of which fell a large collar of Irish point lace. Bishop sleeves. The hat was a marvel, Empire shape, of course, the same shade of the frock, and adorned with two black plumes.

Even these little ones have their trimmings of gold and silver lace, or flowers made of metal gauze on their hats. Lovely little bonnets are made up in close-fitting pleasant cap style, with roses of exquisite silver gauze, resting on fair or dusky curls.

Then the most charming little dressing gowns are made up in Empire style for these tiny croquettes of soft China crepe or silk, wadded and trimmed with ribbon. In pale pink and pale blue they are most fascinating. The same styles prevail, too, in underwear, to go with the Empire frocks, lace betrimmed, with ribbons running through it, tied into bows or caught with rosettes.

All this is most enticing, but not at all necessary to the small girl's happiness, especially as dainty fabrics are within the reach of the most moderate purse and Empire styles are not at all beyond the skill of the home dressmaker.

Chinchilla and real lace may be out of the question, but an Empire coat in gray broadcloth with gray fur collar and cuffs will be equally smart and effective, and the loveliest poke bonnet in white beaver, trimmed with a couple of white ostrich tips caught with white ribbon bows tied at the counter, is not at all difficult to fashion, nor nearly so expensive as the result would suppose.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Onions:

Silver skinned, 60 cents a peck.

Spanish, 8 cents a lb.

Shallot, 2 bunches for 5 cents.

Canned asparagus, 30 to 50 cents a can.

Of course everybody likes onions, although there be people with such perverted ideas, or delicately refined taste, that shudder esthetically at the mere mention of the plebian and highly-scented little vegetable, and the hopeless vulgarity of the person who will admit that he or she can eat onions, boiled, raw, baked, in hash or stuffing, and oh, delectable or delectables, fried with a steak as an accompaniment—well, they're hopeless, that's all, and courses in Browning studies to detect thet rue inwardness of George Bernard Shaw, and all that sort of thing, are lost, for they are doomed inevitably to the canaille. This, of course, in the estimation of the folks who, blatantly, do not like onions. To the select majority, they are a joy. And just now, if you want to have a good salad, get a few hothouse tomatoes, a sprinkle of finely minced onions, dressed with quantities of oil and a bit of vinegar and served on lettuce leaves, will be the salad of salads.

Asparagus on toast is one of the joys which the season will provide, says an epicure. The asparagus can be bought in cans and you can scarce detect the difference when it is fixed in the accepted way. Try it.

Smart and Serviceable Materials for Children in Spring Days

BY ELIZABETH LEE.

Materials for children's garments are seen upon the counters in a most charming variety, the mild weather, too, coming as an extra inducement to would-be purchasers, reminding them that all too soon clothing of such fabrics will be necessary.

The jacquard designs bid fair to be popular, and these are seen in mohair, voile and a kind of mixed cotton and silk poplin, all of which, in their own way, are excellent for children. Then there is a new weave of heavy silk, neither canvas nor crash, but something between, that should make up into smart spring coats, the natural shades being especially good; and touched up either with black taffeta combined with a bit of red or with golden brown velvet, the result should be both stylish and practical.

A lighter weight of this silk in a similar weave is the Burlingham. This, too, will be used for coats, while rajah, a lighter weight silk, almost identical in weave with the Burlingham, will develop into charming frocks for afternoon wear with guimpes. Both of these silks have excellent wearing qualities, while the heavy crashes should, I think, prove exceedingly durable, making them, perhaps, a good choice for boys' clothing, besides having the advantage of being easily laundered, a necessary consideration where boys are concerned.

The mohairs in jacquard design are exceedingly pretty and bright-looking, requiring little or no trimming, and are the very best choice for garments for general use, whether for best, school or afternoon wear, as they come in all colors as well as all quantities.

In the thinner cotton goods the staple plain and dotted swisses are again to the fore, the latter being modelled into sweet little dancing frocks, which will come in later on for summer wear, so that such a purchase will be seen to be a good investment, for, as everyone knows, a good quality of dotted swiss will stand the laundry perhaps better than any other sheer cotton material, and while a dainty fabric, a child will never look overdressed wearing a frock of this material. The dimities are perhaps more charming than ever, tiny bunches of buttercups and rosebuds being scattered over ivory grounds and single pink rosebuds displaying themselves over a pale blue surface. Pale yellow dimity with tiny brown flowers is most exclusive looking, and will be the color par excellence for the brown-eyed girl.

Organdies showing the border have not yet appeared among the offerings for children's wear, but they may be expected, so closely do the toilets of little ones follow those of their elders, both as to material and models. Charming Empire styles are seen for small girls' wear, and a complete toilet imported for a child of 8 could scarcely be surpassed for sumptuous elegance even by that of her mother's, provided for the smartest occasions. The frock was a pretty little affair in water green silk, accordion pleated, depending from a square, plain yoke, cut a trifle low, and square at the neck; this yoke, outlined with a real Valenciennes beading lace "trou-trou," as it is called, of an ecare shade, through which narrow black velvet baby ribbon was drawn, from, which a number of streamers fell to the hem. Little puff sleeves caught with a trou-trou trimming and rosette of black velvet. With this a gorgeous Empire coat of handsome chinchilla fur was worn over the shoulders of which fell a large collar of Irish point lace. Bishop sleeves. The hat was a marvel, Empire shape, of course, the same shade of the frock, and adorned with two black plumes.

Even these little ones have their trimmings of gold and silver lace, or flowers made of metal gauze on their hats. Lovely little bonnets are made up in close-fitting pleasant cap style, with roses of exquisite silver gauze, resting on fair or dusky curls.

Then the most charming little dressing gowns are made up in Empire style for these tiny croquettes of soft China crepe or silk, wadded and trimmed with ribbon. In pale pink and pale blue they are most fascinating. The same styles prevail, too, in underwear, to go with the Empire frocks, lace betrimmed, with ribbons running through it, tied into bows or caught with rosettes.

All this is most enticing, but not at all necessary to the small girl's happiness, especially as dainty fabrics are within the reach of the most moderate purse and Empire styles are not at all beyond the skill of the home dressmaker.

Chinchilla and real lace may be out of the question, but an Empire coat in gray broadcloth with gray fur collar and cuffs will be equally smart and effective, and the loveliest poke bonnet in white beaver, trimmed with a couple of white ostrich tips caught with white ribbon bows tied at the counter, is not at all difficult to fashion, nor nearly so expensive as the result would suppose.

CHILDREN'S SPRING COATS.

Posed by Martha McGraw of Maude Adams' company.

Early models of spring coats for children show little change from those worn last fall, or, indeed, this winter, except that they are a trifle shorter. Serges and closely woven goods will be used, and loose models are preferred. White will be as smart as ever ,and blue as good form.

HISTORY OF JEWS.

The history of the Jews is perhaps the strangest of that of any nation in the world, says the Philadelphia Ledger. The dwellers in a little mountain city, with their Divine revelation and sacred temple and holy worship of God, today are conspicuous in the world. Still racial hatred pours out their life-blood. Their ancient traditions peopled this earth with angels, but in Russia they meet with men who are almost devils. The widening out of Judaism in ancient days is shown in the fact that the naturally exclusive Jews named their children after Alexander the Great, and every nation with whom they have come in contact is represented in their first names, Chaldee, Greek, Latin and German appellations are found among them. Rome, the ancient London of the world, had its collection of all nationalities and religions, and here Horace notices the Jew Satire I, ix, 69, and Juvenal, Satire XIV. They intermarried with Greeks, but the Roman ever feared their rebellious spirit, as he strove to put his iron heel on the necks of this noble race, whose intense courage had anciently shone out in the Maccabees. The unity of God and the thunders of Sinai's law ever sounded in their ears in heathen lands.

The customs of Moses kept the nation peculiar, where the old men dreamed dreams, and the young men saw visions of the glory of the coming Messiah to eclipse the splendors of the reigns of David and Solomon. Isaac Taylor speaks of the Jews as holding human nature as in a mold, and God made them a chosen and separate people for a special purpose, to show His name to the heathen, and yet to keep the line between themselves and idolators. Now the mold is breaking. Still the old Egyptian bondage casts its shadow over them, and a murmur rises from dying throats like that in the wilderness.

As Taylor Lewis shows in Lang's Commentary on Genesis x, the Jew and a "word idea," in Messianic promise, which "Grecian culture and Roman conquest lacked." "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."—Genesis xxviii, 14.

RAT HUNTS.

Rat catching as a pastime is fast bounding into popularity, says the London Express. It is claimed by the many fresh devotees of this peculiar hobby that it provides excitement and sport, while as its aim is the extinction of vermin its usefulness is beyond question.

Mr. H. F. Willoughby Greenhill, a stock broker, and a party of friends, with the assistance of four dogs, bagged ninety-two rats on Saturday, and nearly as many during the preceding week. The sport is general all over the county of Surrey, and the services of those who follow the pastime are in requisition in all rat infested quarters.

SHE LIES IN AN EXILE'S GRAVE

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 12.—Santa Teresa, once sainted by the people of her native town, Cabora, in the state of Sonora, Mex., and later banished from Mexico by superstitious officers who believed that she possessed superhuman power and was responsible for an attempt to incite a revolution, has just died, an exile in Clifton, Ariz.

With the death of Santa Teresa, or the Saint of Cabora, as she was known in Mexico, passes one of the most wonderful characters of the past generation.

A few years ago in the little pueblo of Cabora, in the hills of Sonora, Mexico, Teresa Urrea, a plan faced Mexican girl of lowly parentage and about 18 years of age, began to attract the attention of her people by her alleged wonderful healing powers. She claimed that she was endowed with power to heal the sick and afflicted and went about among the poor people of her town demonstrating her power.

It was claimed that she accomplished some wonderful cures in the cases of people supposed to be incurably afflicted and wrought such apparent wonders in this line that her native people made her a saint, and from that time on she was affectionately known as Santa Teresa.

During the time that she was attracting so much attention revolutionists were at work trying to incite an insurrection in Sonora. Santa Teresa was accused by the officials of the state of being the controlling influence that was stirring up the revolution and threats of banishing her were freely made.

The sainted girl protested her innocence of any connection with the revolution and she found a few champions among influential citizens of Mexico, some of them public officials. Among these was Lauro Aguirre of this city then a captain in the Mexican army. Banishment was the punishment meted out by the government of the state of Sonora to Capt. Aguirre for his defense of the Saint of Cabora, and he came to this city, where he has since edited a Spanish paper known as La Reforma Social.

Santa Teresa was also banished, and in the year 1894 came to El Paso, where her fame as a divine healer had preceded her. She set up in a small tent in the southeastern part of the city and the Mexican people flocked to see her in great numbers. The blind, the lame, the halt, the afflicted in every form crowded around her tent to receive the healing touch of alleged divinely appointed hand.

There are many Mexicans in this city now who believe that Santa Teresa was really possessed of some kind of healing power, and claim that she wrought cures that were nothing short of miraculous.

A Healing Gospel.

The Rev. J. C. Warren, pastor of Sharon Baptist church, Belair, Ga., says of Electric Bitters: "It's a godsend to mankind. It cured me of lame back, stiff joints and complete physical collapse. I was so weak it took me half an hour to walk a mile. Two bottles of Electric Bitters have made me so strong I have just walked three miles in fifty minutes and feel like walking three more. It's made a new man of me." Greatest remedy for weakness and all Stomach, Liver and Kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at all drug stores. Price 50c.

AUSTRIAN WOMAN

Throws Vitriol in Order to Get a Prison Sentence.

Vienna, Feb. 12.—Frau Barbara Bruckner has just been committed for trial in the police court here for seriously injuring two girls whom she did not know, by throwing vitriol at them. She told the magistrates that she had committed the crime in order to be sent to prison for life, so that she could get away from her husband.

The woman had a remarkable record. Four times she had run away from home, but on each occasion had been forced to return. Once she was sent to prison for four months for attempting to put out her husband's eyes while he slept, so that, as she stated, he could not find her.

When she left prison the man once more obliged her to live with him. She left her husband again but he obtained an order from the court compelling her to go back to him. Then she resolved upon committing the crime for which she is now to be tried.

Mrs. Anna Moore, for years Press Representative of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the largest temperance organization in the world, states that has brought joy and gladness to thousands of homes.

Here is an extract from her last letter to us:

"I have tested White Ribbon Remedy on very obstinate drunkards, and the cures have been many. In most cases the remedy was given without the patient's knowledge. I cheerfully recommend and advise any woman to give it to any relative suffering from drunkenness. Members of our union are delighted to find a practical and economical treatment which can be recommended as safe, sure, secretly and safely given."

This is but one of thousands of testimonials that are constantly sent to our offices telling us of loved ones restored to their former selves; of happy homes, once houses of despair.

White Ribbon Remedy can be administered without the patient's knowledge in water, milk, tea, coffee or food.

It creates a lasting dislike for intoxicants and restores the victim to normal health and strength.

If he cannot help himself, you can help him.

Will you?

PRICES ARE ADVANCED

Retail Prices of Lumber Increased in Local Market.

Prediction Made That Lumber Will Never be Cheaper.

"Lumber will never be any cheaper in Duluth," remarked a local contractor who has been in the building business in this city for a number of years, today.

Following, as it does, an advance made in the retail price of lumber in the Duluth market, Feb. 1, the statement has a great deal of significance. No price lists have been put out by the local retail dealers, but it is understood that the advance is in the neighborhood of $2 for what in building parlance is termed No. 1 dimension stuff. A corresponding advance affects the cull grades.

The advance in the retail prices is claimed by the lumber trade to be due to the advance in prices maintained by the lumber trade to be due to the advance in prices maintained by the wholesalers while they, in turn, point out the increasing cost of stumpage and the increased cost of getting the logs to the saw.

That the retail lumber dealer of the Northwest are pretty well organized is a generally admitted fact. They are said to be far better organized than are the dealers in any other line of building material. Retail lumber prices, according to the contractors who are engaged in building enterprises in the Northewest say that the prices maintained are about the same, but that even if they should be somewhat lower at points tributary to Duluth, local buyers will find it impossible to secure a stock laid down in Duluth any cheaper than they can buy at home. In fact, some local contractors who have tried to buy lumber at retail from outside points in this state to ship into Duluth have been refused and were told to do their buying at home. It is reported that where this rule has been broken and lumber was shipped in from the outside the buyer had to pay 10 per cent over the scale of prices at the point where the lumber was shipped. Locally, retail prices are said to be maintained at 10 per cent over the wholesale prices.

The only instance known in local building circles where lumber has been bought at retail below the market prices maintained by the association dealers, have been purchases occasionally made at interior points where small mills have been operating and where the production is not of a quantity to cut much figure as compared with the total lumber output of the district.

An interesting comment on the lumber situation, recently made by the editor of the American lumberman, one of the prominent journals of the trade is as follows:

"Manufacturers of lumber and timber owners are beginning to appreciate the force of conditions that now control. Consumers apparently are not. The latter are of the opinion that prices sooner of later will weaken and that they will be able to supply their wants at practically their own terms. Sellers were they occupying a more defenseless position. Certain fundamental reasons control the industrial affairs of the world. One of these, and one that usually is given due weight by all manufacturers, is that it is against all principals of business to sell an article for less than it cost to produce it or for less than the amount required to replace it.

"Well, affairs in the lumber field have shaped themselves so that the cost of the lumber at the point of production constantly is increasing, yet it would not seem that the increase is greater, proportionately, than that which has taken place in other lines.

"Much is heard today about high prices of lumber, the lumbermen being censured for socalled arbitrary increases, whereas the value of forest products has scarcely kept pace with the greater purchasing power of such commodities as cotton, wheat, corn and other products of the farm. Today labor will purchase as much lumber—that is, a day's labor will buy as much lumber—as it would five or ten years ago. I am not prepared to give figures on this statement, but I believe it can be substantiated without difficulty."

The retail lumber dealers here, as elsewhere in the country have an eye out on the prospective trade and the outlook, on the whole, has been declared most promising. It is a foregone conclusion that there will be a heavy consumption of lumber this coming year. The forecast of building events shows that such will be true of Duluth and this is only one of many cities that will undoubtedly make a fine improvement record in 1906. Plans have been made for large buildings and reports show that the architects are generally pretty busy.

As to the building moovenment in the country this year there seems to be two opinions—one that owing to the price of material farmers may postpone building in the expectation of lower prices; the other opinion is that the farmers were never before better able to build and that new houses and barns are bound to go up.

The lumbermen claim that it is no more reasonable to suppose that the price of lumber will drop back where it was five years ago than to assume that the price of land will again go back to the figures that ruled that length of time ago.

FOR 1907 DELIVERY.

Weston Company's Steamers Not for Current Year Business.

It is interesting to note that the two 605-foot steamers which the Weston Transit company of Tonawanda has ordered the American Shipbuilding company to construct, are for 1907 delivery, and the fact that orders are given for so far ahead, demonstrates a confidence in the maintenance of lake trade which is encouraging. Besides the two steamers for the Weston Transit company, which has been ordered for delivery next year, is one to be built by the American Shipbuilding company for Chicago and Milwaukee people, represented by Capt. D. Sullivan of Chicago. This steamer will be 440 feet over all, 420 feet keel, 52 feet beam and 28 feet deep." She will be able to carry 7,500 tons of ore.

The steamers ordered by the Weston Transit company have the present distinction of being the largest steamers ever ordered for lake trade. They will be 605 feet over all in length, 585 feet keel, 60 feet beam and 32 feet deep. Their extreme width will prevent them using the Canadian canal at the Sault. These steamers will each have thirty-six hatches spaced on 21-foot centers. They will each carry about 13,000 gross tons of 19 feet draft.

CHARTERING PLACED

For Transportation of Ore by United States Steel Corporation.

It has been given out that the United States Steel corporation has made all of its charters for the present year, but it is not stated how the charters are placed or where. It was understood that at the first of the year about 9,000,000 tons were covered and that the company would furnish cargoes for the Provident Steamship company which comprises the steamers James H. Hoyt, D. G. Kerr, J. H. Reed and D. M. Clemson. These four it is figured will carry about 600,000 tons of ore in a season. It is doubted whether or not the company's fleet and that of the Provident Steamship company together can move 13,000,000 tons during the season and it is figured that charters of at least 7,000,000 tons must be placed to keep up to the mark. Concerning other charters, the Marine Review says:

"Chartering of vessels to hold coal is quite brisk, but coal rates have not yet been fixed. Shippers are endeavoring to forestall the effects of the coal strike, should the miners declare it, by hurrying coal to the Lake Erie docks and putting it aboard. Interests which do not usually carry coal, such as the Steel corporation and the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company are doing some figuring with coal shippers for the first trip.

"The board of managers of the Lumber Carriers' association in session at Detroit this week, established rates on lumber on the basis of $2.50 per 1,000 feet from the head of Lake Superior for the coming season. This is 25 cents above the freight rate of last year. The question of apportioning the tonnage among the carriers evidently was not settled, but will be taken up later. The plan proposed is to place the matter in the hands of a chartering committee, if 75 per cent of the tonnage enrolled in the association are in favor of it."

JAPAN HAS BAD FAMINE

Great Destitution Prevails, Particularly in the Northern Part.

Failure of the Rice Crop Said to be the Cause.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Northern Japan is in the grip of the most severe famine that has been known in the islands for many years. Urgent appeals for aid have been sent to this country, but the extent of the affliction does not seem to be realized, and the most of the requests for aid that have come have been from the foreign relief committee on behalf of the natives, who hesitate to ask foreign aid for thmeselves.

While there is urgent need of food and offerings of any sort will be gladly received, it is suggested that the most portable and convenient form of contribution is money. This may be sent to Mr. K. Uyeno, Japanese consulate, San Francisco, who will make the best use of all contributions.

One report that has been received by The Star is from Miss Flora B. Harris of Tokio, who says that the foreign relief committees, realizing the gravity of the situation, are doing all they can and co-operating with the local and provincial authorities, but there is such dearth, not only of money, but of food in many places that rice will have to be imported from the outside if the starving are to be fed through the winter.

The famine is due to the failure of the rice crop. In some sections only 5 per cent of a normal crop has been realized, and in some sections nothing at all. The Japanese papers have opened subscriptions and are doing what they can, but they say that outside help is urgently needed. Iwate and Miyagi provinces are among the worst afflicted and the trouble is aggravated by the fact that in the same region there was three years ago a severe famine and the people went heavily into debt and had not recovered when the war broke out. Of course, there were additional heavy taxes from which the whole of the country is now suffering, and there was no indemnity, which all of the people were expecting, the central government was even less able than ordinarily to meet the demands upon it. Now with an almost total crop failure and with the prospect of three feet of snow during the coming winter, the outlook is dismal indeed.

One of the ways in which this country is suffering from an educational as well as a food famine. Half of the schools in the afflicted districts are closing because the children have no meals to bring to school with them, and their labor is needed to help the rest of the family find what little food they can in the forests. The government in some places has remitted taxes and in others has thrown open the forest reserves, so that the people can dig for fern roots and collect the edible bark of trees. Not all of the population in the famine district is yet reduced to this necessity, but many people are, and when the snow comes there will be more who need even this scanty fare, and will not be able to get it at all.

Of the desttitution the Japan Mail says:

Shibata township, in Mayagi province is one of the worst afflicted districts, the crops being 5 per cent of an average crop. An official from this township writes that in the schools seven or eight out of ten children do not bring any lunch to school either because they do not have any, or because it is so poor that they are ashamed to have it seen. The small children, however, in their innocence, show their lunch. And what a mixture it is! Ten per cent foreign rice, 20 per cent barley and the rest made up of roots, nuts, leaves and daikons (radishes) made into cakes. On account of this poor food the children were pale and thin; even in November they were not lively and happy, as children ought to be, not even one. The number of children is decreasing every day and the schools will have to close, as the people cannot pay taxes. Even when the furniture of these poor people is taken for taxes there is no one to buy it, and money cannot be borrowed, so schools must close. Even with the help of the provincial authorities, and the central government all the needy cannot be helped.

This year's rice, nuts, roots and bark will not last three months, then the snow comes, and there is no work, so that many will die of starvation or of disease brought on by the poor food that no human being ought to eat.

The chairman of the foreign relief committee in Sendai says:

The worst village I have heard of is Kawasaki village, which has 5,000 people. This village has 685 acres in rice this year. From the same fields last year they harvested 30,500 bushels of rice, but the total crop this year is 5½ bushels. This was not enough to feed the town one day. On account of floods and frost even the straw was not worth anything, and great fields were not even cut. This whole town must be helped. Here the schools are closing or are already closed. The letter from Shibata township closes with these words: "In Shibata township many people will starve if outside help is not received."

I met the mayor, the vice mayor and the principal of the school of the village, and they told me that out of a population of 5,500, 4,000 would have to be helped, and that so far they had only received the pittance of 800 yen from the provincial authorities. This is the town of Akosu, in Miyagi province.

C. S. Davison, the chairman of the foreign relief committee of Fukushima, writes:

The population of Fukushima Ken is a little over 1,000,000; the extent of land under cultivation for rice is a trifle more than 500 square miles; the average crop is 1,825,240 koku, worth yen 18,553,360. The crop this year is only 329,938 koku, worth yen 4,619,762; a loss in rice of 995,257 koku, and in money of yen 13,933,598. This represents an average crop of 25 per cent for the entire province.

A quarter crop is bad enough, but that it is even that large is due to the fact that the crop in the Aizu region is comparatively good, about 53 per cent. But if we leave out the five provinces in this section, the average crop for the rest of Fukushima Ken is only 15 per cent of the yield for an ordinary year. Not only so, but in many places the net result of months of toil in the muddy fields is only 6 per cent of what the farmers reasonably looked for.

Altogether, the local situation is about as bad as it can be, and it is urgently suggested that the Red Cross of America should take up the matter and send provisions at once, if it possibly can be arranged.

COLONY GETS VERDICT

Against Alger, Smith & Company in Federal Court.

The jury part of the United States court calendar is over and the jurors are dismissed for the term. The last jury out came in last evening at 6 o'clock with a verdict for Harry Colony. Immediately after the jury had delivered its verdict, Judge Morris discharged the jurymen for the term.

Harry Colony was given a verdict against Alger, Smith & Co. in a personal damage suit, for $1,500. He sued for $10,000. The suit was tried in United States court in the July term of court and the jury disagreed; therefore the matter was put on the January calendar. The jury went out Saturday morning at 10:30 and came in that evening at 6 o'clock after a hard fight among themselves over the verdict. The basis of the suit was injury received by Colony while working for the defendant company in its mill at West Duluth about two years ago.

FAMOUS FRENCH FREE THINKER

Paris, Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Among the candidates for Academy honors, Maurice Barres, seems to have the best chances, and—a most significant indication of the change in public opinion—Barres is the "free thinker," who returned to the faith of his youth and now advocates that the state try to uphold the Catholic religion in the parts of France where its influence was always paramount.

In fighting against centralization, which makes wicked Paris the alpha and omega of religion-loving France, Barres has come to the conclusion that the safety of the nation lies in provincialism.

"The people of Lorraine for instance," he says in his latest novel, "should be brought up in the traditions of their province without reference to what Paris needs and wants. In Catholic Lorraine, education and administration should coincide with public opinion which, on its part, sympathizes with the church of Rome."

Barres preaches the return to tradition; he says philosophy has made France what she is, a disgruntled, party-torn country. Barres is against philosophy, particularly against Kant.

Bazin, who is already a member of the Academy, expresses himself in a similar strain in his famous novel "The Dying Agricultural Districts," and even Bourget has come to the conclusion that "Christianity, faith, is the conditio sine qua non for France's greatness. Only the church, tradition and authority can save her," he says in his latest novel.

EXPLANATION BY SECRETARY ROOT

May be Necessary in Connection With Request for More Troops.

Washington, Feb. 12.—It is probable that Secretary Root will have an opportunity to explain to congress through one of the house committees, the actual need of the proposed increase of the number of American troops in the Philippines, which led to the passage between Secretary Taft and the senate committee on appropriations recently. It is said that the war department in moving in this direction is simply following the suggestion of the state department and it is probable that Secretary Root will find it necessary unless the plan for holding a force ready for service in China is to be abandoned, to explain to congress the facts which have impelled him to make the suggestion to Secretary Taft. This explanation will doubtless be made in confidence, for although it is known in a general way that the state department has had many disquieting reports from its agents in China, it would scarcely re diplomatic to publish them. It can be stated, however, that the conditions in China at present bear a striking resemblance to those that preceded the uprising of 1900, and the position of the state department is that as only the presence of American troops made the Pekin relief expedition possible, and saved lives of the legationers it would not be justified in refraining from taking every precaution necessary to avoid a possible loss of American lives, not only in the legation at Pekin, but among the missionaries and the American business men in the Chinese trade centers.

S. S., and thousands throughout the country, cured of such diseases, are daily recommending it to others similarly afflicted. ITS FORTY YEARS OF EXISTENCE HAVE BEEN FORTY YEARS OF CURES. S. S. S. is a blood purifier of the highest order, containing properties necessary to cure blood troubles of every character, and which make it the greatest of all tonics. It goes into the blood and drives out any and all impurities, and makes this stream of life strong and healthy, and when this is done disease cannot remain. Being made entirely from roots, herbs and barks, chosen for their healing, purifying and building-up properties, it does not injure any of the delicate organs or tissues of the body as do those medicines which contain Potash, Mercury, Arsenic or other harmful minerals, but cures safely as well as permanently. S. S. S. reaches deep-seated and inherited cases on which the ordinary Sarsaparillas and tonics have no effect. It is no experiment to use S. S. S.; it is a remedy with a record; it has proven its worth and ability by its forty years of cures. If you need a blood remedy begin the use of S. S. S.; write us about your case and let our physicians advise you and send book on the blood; no charge for either.

CREMATORY IS TESTED

Two cartloads of manure, a ton of frozen fish, a dead horse and two boxes of cigars were consumed at the new crematory this afternoon.

The aldermen and city officials consumed the cigars and the crematory did the rest. If anything, the crematory did the better job, for it left no butts, and made less smoke in proportion to the amount of matter consumed.

It was the official inspection of the new plant which will consume all the garbage and offal from the central part of the city, and the plant did its work most efficiently. It was given as severe a test as it is likely to receive at any time. The manure, filled as it is with ammonia, is very difficult to consume, and the frozen fish was enough to dampen the ardor of any ordinary blaze, but the crematory quickly turned it into ashes and white smoke.

The alderman, the city comptroller, the treasurer, city engineer, health officer and practically all of the city officials took advantage of the holiday and the company's invitation to inspect the new plant. The party left the city hall at 2:15 p. m. in the large sleigh provided for the purpose, and after spending about three quarters of an hour at the incinerator, returned home.

During that time the material was dumped into the plant, dried and almost entirely consumed.

All of the officials expressed much satisfaction at the manner in which the plant did its work and it is looked upon as the beginning of a municipal system of collecting garbage.

OBSERVE HOLIDAY.

City Offices Are Closed and Council Meeting Will Be Postponed.

Owing to the fact that today is the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday, all of the offices in the city hall are closed with the exception of those of the health department, the municipal court, the treasurer and comptroller.

The regular meeting of the council, which should be held this evening, will be postponed until tomorrow night, when the election returns will be canvassed.

The board of public works held its regular meeting this morning, but only routine business was transacted.

LAWS OF CHANCE.

Result of the Researches of Washington Scientist.

While I shall be glad to do what I can to make it generally understood that "luck" is an unsafe guide, the results of my recent demonstrations of the laws of chance before the Academy of Science remind me how easily the late General Schenck made a reputation he found it impossible to get rid of, says a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. You remember how the paper he wrote while in England on the rules of poker overshadowed his services as a diplomat.

It is a fact which can be demonstrated with mathematical certainty that what is called "chance" has laws which operate to control final results. For those who begin as in a lottery, where it may be assumed that the chance is "against" one, even with all the fairness the drawing can give, a reliance upon what is passing instead of what is probable leads steadily toward final bankruptcy. In the common slot machine devices what appear to the player an even chance or a chance in his favor is always a small chance, much less than one half. The laws which govern the possible combinations he can play or play against control through various devices, so that all he wins merely encourages him to go on and lose, since he is obliged ultimately to submit to the mathematics of the game. My formulas apply to any number of dice and the "chance" for any particular throw is quickly calculated. Thus, with six dice the chances for a throw of 21 are 15,504 out of 93,024, or one sixth. In throws with three dice the chance of throwing eleven is to the chance of throwing six as thirty-six is to ten. That is the probability of throwing eleven is three and six tenths times the probability of throwing six.

As I said, my interest in the matter was purely academic, but it is interesting to note the high degree of probability that in every case the spider will get the fly if he lingers near his web.

In mathematics a "chance" is the mathematical expression of "probability." The value of a chance lies between zero and one. Zero means there is not only no probability, but no possibility, and one means absolute certainty. For example: With three dice the chance of throwing 19 is zero, because the throw is impossible.

On the other hand, the chance of throwing something between 2 and 19 is 1, because it is absolutely certain. Now, the chance of throwing any particular number between 2 and 19 is expressed by a proper fraction and its value varies. For example: The chance of throwing 7 is 1-16, the chance of throwing 10 is 3-20, and the chance of throwing 17 is 1-80, and so on.

When the chance is 1-2, then the chance is said to be "even;" when the chance is less than 1-2 it is said to be "against" the event aimed at; when the chance is more than 1-2 it is said to be "in favor" of the event aimed at. Which is called luck—which is generally understood to be good luck—covers the case where something actually occurs, while the mathematical chance is against it. For example: In a box containing 10 marbles, 6 white ones and 4 black ones, the chance is in favor of a white marble if one draws at random; but that does not shut out the possibility or the "luck" of drawing a black one. In all games of chance, which are organized in the hope of gain on the part of the organizer, the chances are in favor of the organizers—that goes without saying—and, of course, against the outsider, who often shuts his eyes to the chances and relies upon what he calls luck. There is no law against a fool throwing his money away, and it is as well, perhaps, that he should throw it away as keep it, being a fool.

With gambling and gamblers I have nothing to do. I am merely interested in the mathematics involved in the throwing of the very innocent articles used in every game of backgammon known as dice. It is, therefore, worth while, perhaps, to state clearly what we mean by chances.

The rationale of the figures is more easily seen if we individualize the dice, making one yellow, one red, one yellow, one white, while the spots are black. The figures I have given are easily verified. I will verify but one term, viz., the number of throws, aggregating seven, with three dice. Let the third dice have a blue ground. Then the throws aggregating seven are:

Red.	Yellow.	Blue.	Red.	Yellow.	Blue.
1	1	5	2	1	4
1	5	1	1	3	3
5	1	1	3	1	3
1	2	4	3	3	1
1	4	2	2	2	3
4	1	2	2	3	2
4	2	1	3	2	2
2	4	1

Effective Feb. 15, and continuing until March 31, 1906, "The North-Western Line" will sell one way second-class "colonist" tickets to points in California, Arizona, British Columbia, Alberta, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah and Washington. Some of the rates are as follows:

California common points, $34.90; Seattle and Tacoma, $25; Portland and Ashland, $25; Ogden and Salt Lake, $25; Denver and Colorado Springs, $22.50; Spokane and Walla Walla, $22.50; Helena and Butte, $22.50; Billings, Mont., $15. Intermediate points at proportionate rates. For full particulars call on or address city ticket agent, 302 West Superior street, Duluth, Minn.

Haven't you seen a "To Let" placard in some particular window so long that you come to wonder what was wrong with the property? Placarding is primitive—very primitive—advertising. It's just a little better than nothing—while Herald want advertising is a little better than anything else.

TO CURB THE DRUG HABIT

Thirty Lashes for Wife Beaters Advocated in House Bill.

Washington, Feb. 12.—A new gavel was dedicated to the memory of Lincoln by Speaker Cannon today in opening the house and the birthday of the martyred president was remembered in the prayer of the chaplain.

During the consideration of a bill to regulate the sale of poisons in the District of Columbia, the statement was made that the drug habit, particularly the use of cocaine had grown at an alarming rate during the past five years. Chairman Babcock said he had been called on at all times of day and night by mothers and persons interested to plead for a law which would make it impossible to obtain this drug.

The evil has grown, he said to be decidedly greater than the liquor evil. The bill was passed.

A ripple of interest was manifested when Mr. Babcock, at 2 o'clock, called up the bill to punish with thirty lashes wife beaters in the District of Columbia. Mr. Adams (Penn.) in favor of the bill was yielded thirty minutes. At once he was importuned to yield to questions, but positively declined to be interrupted and began with a rebuke of levity with which the subject had been treated. He said President Roosevelt and the district officials were in sympathy with the bill and it was only those possessed with that character of "maudlin sentiment" which sent flowers to the criminals' cells, who opposed it.

The chief of police of Washington, he said, has reported fifty wife beaters in the past two years. Adequate punishment for hundreds of "brutes" should be provided. Mr. Adams said he did not advocate the whipping post as it existed in Deleware.

Mr. Stevens (Pa.) interjected the query if the bill was not "class legislation." Mr. Adams "declined to be interrupted."

Mr. Wachter (Md.) said if the bill passed, the city of Baltimore had a very good whipping post in the Baltimore city jail, which the district could buy at a bargain. In fifty years, he said, it had been used but twice.

"The women of Maryland don't want it used any more than the men."

"Where does the gentleman get his information?" asked Mr. Adams.

"At home," replied Mr. Wachter, and then, "oh, I mean in Baltimore." (Laughter).

Mr. James (Ky.) wanted to offer an amendment to have the "post" established at Peace monument located on Pennsylvania avenue, at the entrance to the capitol. Mr. James was rebuked for levity by Mr. Adams.

Mr. Sims, (Tenn.) opposing the bill, predicted that it would get one vote only in the house. The president, he said, had advocated increased punishment for wife-beaters a year ago, "but he is a year older now, and his last message said nothing about it." He made the further point that the report of the local chief of police indicated that "common law wives and other females," received most of the beatings. "Some one has suggested we amend the bill to apply to wife-chasers," he declared further. "I don't know who that would hit." (Laughter.)

Mr. James made another attempt to advocate that the whipping of "beaters" should be done in public. Mr. Sims accepted this. If the whipping, he said, was to serve as an example, a platform should be erected on top of the Washington monument where the effect of the beating could reach afar off.

For five minutes Mr. Stanley (Ky.) made fun of the bill and incidentally took Mr. Adams to task for never marrying. It was, he said, a "brutal measure of brutalizing a brute."

All the arguments in defense of the instruments of torture buried 100 years ago with barbarism, he said, would apply to this bill.

"I am more surprised," continued Mr. Stanley, "at this unusual proposition, coming as it does, from the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania—of all the men in the house the last one to shed tears as big as buttermilk biscuits over a suffering wife." (Laughter.)

"If it had come from a gentlemen from Utah I could have listened with more patience.

"If you take all the suffering women in this country there are more of them really in pain that are not married and in pain because of that fact than women who are married and beaten. (Laughter.) And the gentleman from Pennsylvania belongs to the class which is really inflicting more torture than the wife beater. The mental anguish is more serious than pain and if you will think of the great number of whom he has left alone lamenting, he should have more mercy on others, who inflict agony on the fair sex.

"I shall move that a like punishment be inflicted on him who feloniously refuses to take a wife." (Laughter.)

The bill was defeated by "being laid on the table" by a vote of 155 to 57.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 12.—For the first time in two weeks Mr. Heyburn was in his seat when the senate was called to order today. His absence has been due to an attack of appendicitis from which he has almost recovered.

Mr. Tillman from the committee on interstate commerce reported a joint resolution directing the interstate commerce commission to investigate the alleged discrimination by railroad companies in the matter of transportation of coal and other commodities. The resolution directs an inquiry as to whether the railroad companies own stock in coal companies or in other commodities carried by them; whether any of the railroad officers are interested in such commodities; whether there is any monopolizing combination or trust in which the railroads are interested; and whether any of the railroad companies control the output of coal or fix its prices. The commission also is directed to investigate the system of the car distribution and also whether there is discrimination against shippers either in the matter of the distribution of cars or otherwise. The commission is required to report to congress. The resolution is the result of the complaint against conditions in West Virginia, but that state is not specifically mentioned in the resolution. Mr. Tillman took the matter before the committee today and it ordered a favorable report so that instead of merely introducing this resolution, as he had intended, he was enabled to present it with the committee's favorable report. He gave notice that later in the day he would ask the senate to take up the resolution with a view to acting upon it.

Mr. Patterson resigned as a member of the committee on privileges and elections and Mr. Frazer was designated to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Lodge then addressed the senate on the railroad rate question. He spoke to Mr. Clay's resolution on that subject and was listened to by an audience that filled the galleries.

RECENT SEISMIC DISTURBANCE

Felt in Copper Country Believed to Have Been Earthquake.

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—A canvass of the opinions of mining engineers and other experts in the Copper country leads to the conclusion that the recent seismic disturbance which was felt so severely throughout the district, and which damaged the Quincy mine to a considerable extent, was an earthquake, although the belief of the public that it was due to one of the familiar air blasts of the Quincy is hard to shake. If an earthquake, it is asked, why was the damage limited to the Quincy? However, the shocks were felt in a wider area than an explosion in the Quincy, no matter how severe, could have affected.

In reply to an inquiry, President McNair of the Michigan College of Mines stated that it was quite reasonable to suppose that the same conditions which caused the earthquake of last July, when the shocks were experienced for a long distance along the south shore of Lake Superior, were responsible for the more recent disturbance. These are believed to have been a slipping of the fault which marks the boundary between the Great Eastern sandstone and the Keweenawan series of igneous and conglomerate beds and which is also the eastern boundary of the copper-bearing rocks. This fault is an acknowledged plane of weakness, and if it is good theory that a slipping occurred there last July, then it is considered reasonable to assume that the recent seismic action was a further slipping on the same plane, or a further adjustment of the bearing surfaces in this fault.

As to the air blasts in the Quincy mine, they have been occurring with more frequency of late, and some people in Hancock have become alarmed, believing their houses in danger of being wrecked. These blasts are among the unsolved mysteries of the copper country. In general, they are believed to be caused by the explosion of accumulated foul air and gas in old workings. When long abandoned openings become surcharged with powder smoke, gas and foul air, it is explained that a natural law causes a rending of the surrounding rock. Another explanation lies in the yielding of the ground to the enormous pressure exerted upon it. The shock is generally severe, and its roaring, rumbling sound is of a sort to strike terror to the hearts of timid people living on the surface above. The surface danger has always been more imaginary than real, for in the many years that the Quincy has been afflicted with air blasts no accident resulting from them has occurred above ground. But lives have been lost below the surface by the sudden displacement of rock, and there are miners who have blacklisted the old Quincy for this reason. Mining engineers have investigated these air blasts, but have never arrived at any satisfactory plan for abolishing them.

TO LIVE IN DULUTH.

C. T. Fairbairn Will Make Headquarters at Head of Lake.

C. T. Fairbairn of Virginia, the new manager of the mines of the Republic Iron & Steel company in the Lake Superior country, expects to take up his residence in Duluth, which means that the company's properties both in Minnesota and Michigan will be directed from this city.

He has not removed his family yet, but it is generally understood that he intends to do so as soon as affairs can be satisfactorily arranged.

His residence in Duluth will permit Mr. Fairbairn to go back and forth between the different properties of the Republic company as often as it is necessary and with the least possible delay.

MANY NETS CARRIED AWAY BY THE ICE.

Marinette, Wis., Feb. 12.—All the ice in Green bay, north of Menominee, went out today and with it several thousand dollars worth of nets belonging to Marinette and Menominee fishermen. Some of the fishermen lost all they had and a number had a narrow escape from the moving ice in trying to save the nets. The ice in the lower half of the bay is expected to go out at any time.

NORTHWESTERN TRAIN LEAVES THE TRACK.

SHOCKING DEATH OF A PILE DRIVER.

Minneapolis, Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Peter Heinzelman, while engaged in steadying a large stick of timber for a pile driver, was instantly killed today. While holding on to the timber his feet slipped so that his head fell upon the pile. His feet tripped the catch of the suspended weight, which descended and crushed his head flat. He was unmarried and had recently arrived in Minneapolis.

HIS HARD LUCK.

Horse Owner Leaves His Wad Home When Horse Wins.

Washington Star: "There's a certain owner on these grounds now, who at the moment when I caught a flash at him the other afternoon could have done the male posing for a bas-relief of Grief all right," observed one of the Benning trainers.

"He's got a royally-bred-no-account horse that he'd been trying to softsoap into winning a race for him ever since the racing season began this year. But the bred-in-the-purple four-flush had all of his well-known sulkiness and roughness with him every time and wouldn't try a lick in any of his races.

"He'd work like a stampeded bobcat in the morning hours, and then go out in the afternoon to the races and prick his ears and swish his tail and gaze dreamily at the waving grass in the infield, loping along like a sand-weary desert camel four days out from the last oasis, and finishing away back with the rubbish every time.

"On that day that I'm speaking of the rogue was scheduled to go a little mile thing. During the morning the horse looked kind and unusually agreeable and docile to the owner, who told his friends that he wouldn't be surprised if the horse was to get something that day.

"As the field paraded to the barrier the owner chased from the paddock into the betting ring to get a bet down on his four-flush. When he got into the ring and started to dig through his clothes for his bank roll he couldn't find it.

"It took him some time, in the excitement, to recall that he had left his wad in another suit of clothes at the hotel. By the time this fact had trickled through his mind the cut-ups of the field of horses were hopping around at the barrier awaiting the signal.

"'Oh, well!' somebody heard the owner muttering to himself. 'I'll get a marker,' and he hustled over to one of the leading bookies' stools. The owner saw that his horse was chalked up at 15 to 1 on this bookmaker's pad.

"'Hey, pal,' the owner said to the bookmaker, whom he knew well, 'I want a hundred straight and a hundred place on that one o' mine, and—'

"'They're off!' bawled Jack Adler, the ring announcer, just at that instant.

"The bookmaker to whom the owner had been talking stood up on his stool to watch the bunch fly around the first turn, and his quick eye discerned that the horse of the owner who had just addressed him was out in front of the bunch and making play for the rail.

"'Oh, not today, old man,' replied the bookmaker to the owner, with a baffling grin, 'do you want a hundred straight and a hundred the plotz on that one of yours. Not on my little sheet, leastways, seeing as how your mutt is away on his little tiptoes. There he swings out in front on the back stretch, leading by two cunnin' lengths! Well, he's only tincanning home now, with all of the rest of 'em drunk proper behind him, and—'

"'Wow-ee!' bawled the crowd then, and the hoarsely-shouted name of the owner's horse rang through the grand stand and betting ring like the bellow of a victorious army as the horse swung down first past the wire by open daylight.

"Well, it was right then that that owner looked like the one to do the swell posing for the Grief bas-relief.

"But he wasn't the first of a large aggregation of sore owners I've met up with who, for one reason or another, had failed to get bets down on their whippets at the psychological second.

"At Detroit, one year I was booking out there, I saw an owner of a string of pigs lose I don't know how many thousands of dollars just for the sake of a miserable little $30 or $40 customs duty money that he saved on a fur coat that he smuggled from Windsor for his wife.

"A maiden 3-year-old that this owner had in a race that day had shown him such a lot in the way of shiftiness that he had told his friends they could bet on him after the prices had been up for about ten minutes.

"He meant, naturally enough, to take the cream of the price himself, and his friends who were let in on the good thing were perfectly willing to let the owner have the top betting figure.

"A couple of hours before he was due to go to the track the owner got a tip from Windsor that a fur coat that had been purchased for his account in Quebec was awaiting him at Windsor, the dry-as-dust little Canadian town across the Detroit river. The owner decided that he'd have time to hustle over to Windsor, snag the fur coat and sneak it into American territory without digging up for the duty on the coat.

"While he was in Windsor getting the fur coat and settling up the transaction, a heavy fog came up on the Detroit river, and the ferryboats had to slouch along through the mist as best they could. The ferryboat which the owner took back to Detroit reached the Michigan metropolis about three-quarters of an hour before the first race, the one in which his horse was to go, was scheduled.

"He hopped into a cab at the ferry and bawled at the driver to make the track in time for the first race and there'd be fifty bucks in it for him, and if he was pinched for fast driving he, the owner, 'ud do the settling for it with the magistrate.

"The cabman kept his plug at a dead gallop the entire distance. When the cab reached the track entrance the owner leaped out and ran toward the gate like a madman.

"But, somehow or other, he had left his owner's badge at home, and, of course, he was held up at the entrance gate. He thrust a $5 note at the gate-keeper and told him to take the price of a day badge out of that, but the gatekeeper replied that he wasn't allowed to do that.

"So the owner had to hustle for the badge window and buy himself a get-in paste-board. He slapped down his $5 for a badge and rushed away without his change.

"He went through the surging mob in the betting ring like an escaped smallpox patient at a county fair.

"'Hey, hundred straight on that goat o' mine!' he screeched at the first bookmaker he came to in his wild scramble.

"The bookmaker handed him the big, wide Otis Skinner lamp and laughed.

"'That 'ud be real cute and cunnin' for you, wouldn't it? said the bookmaker. 'Your goat came home about five minutes ago, like a hungry lumber jack in the north woods knocking off for dinner, and the yannigans on your large staff knocked it down from 10 to 1 to 4 to 1 before the field paraded to the stick. I'll be paying 'em off myself until next Tuesday week. Say, where do you do your pill cooking nowadays, anyhow?'

"Which was exactly how it had come off.

"The owner's friends, who had got the tip from him on the maiden, had acted on the level and waited for the books to have the price up for a quarter of an hour before they took the figure against the maiden, and then, of course, they'd gone to it like a herd of hanky-panks around a circus ticket wagon. The side-stepping of a little piece of change in the way of customs duty on the fur coat had cast that owner the clean-up of his whole glad turf career, and if he wasn't the sorest butcher that ever mistook a thumb for a sparerib in his cleaver work I never saw a clump of grass in the infield."

THE DARWIN THEORY.

Miss Agnes Mahony, a missionary to Liberia, was visiting Philadelphia with two African slave girls that she had bought for $15 apiece, says the Los Angeles Times.

Miss Mahony's pictures of Liberia were somber. They were pictures of savage physicians operating on savage patients with pieces of broken glass, of men content and happy if their wives provided them with enough rice to support life on, of a climate so humid that a few months' residence there impaired the white man's health.

She relieved the gloom of her narrative with a description of a pilot. This man was a character—a shellback like those whom W. W. Jacobs describes in his sea stories.

"The pilot," said Miss Mahony, "was once bringing a ship northward. The captain, toward sunset, bade him go below and help himself to a glass of cold tea.

"After taking the tea, the pilot proceeded to munch a biscuit.

"Now the captain owned a large monkey, and this creature sat drowsing in a corner. The pilot said:

"'A gusty day, sir, and the monkey shrugged his shoulders.

"The pilot with affable gruffness went on:

"'The south light is away on the port bow, now sir.'

"There was no answer.

"But the pilot was persistent. He continued:

"'We'll be over the bar, sir, in an hour.'

"Failing to get a reply even to this pleasant information, the pilot went up on deck again, and, taking his place beside the captain on the bridge, said:

"'What a quiet chap your father is.'"

BACK FROM CONVENTION

Y. M. C. A. Delegates From Duluth, Two Harbors and Proctor.

Rev. M. S. Rice Delivered Opening Address—Many Speakers.

Twenty-five delegates from the Head of the Lakes to the state convention of the Y. M. C. A. at Austin, Minn., returned home this morning.

The Duluth association was represented by seven delegates, the Proctor association by ten and the Two Harbors association by eight.

The Duluth delegates were N. H. Murray, Willis Hamblin, Norman D. MacLeod, F. T. Downing, Phil Bevis, Frank Maxwell and Rev. M. S. Rice. Dr. Rice returned to the city Saturday evening to take charge of his church services yesterday and attend the meeting yesterday afternoon at the Lyceum, but the others did not reach the city until this morning.

Dr. Rice delivered the opening address to the convention Thursday evening on the subject, "God and the Devil in a Bargain Over a Good Man." Governor Johnson made the address of welcome.

Among the other speakers were Henry Churchill King, president of Oberlin college; Dr. George J. Fisher of Brooklyn, the international secretary of the physical department of the association; Edward W. Peck, the state secretary; John R. Boardman of New York, international secretary of the county department; K. A. Shumaker of Chicago, the Illinois state secretary; F. A. McConack, president of the Y. M. C. A. of Sioux City; Milo B. Price, president of Pillsbury academy; Harry O. Hill, student volunteer secretary; Verling W. Helm, international secretary of the foreign department; E. W. Van Aken, president of Parker college; A. B. Marshall of Minneapolis, and Norman D. MacLeod of Duluth.

The people of Austin, Minn., took a deep interest in the meetings of the convention, and entertained the delegates in a most hospitable manner.

AMERICAN FRIENDSHIP

Agrarian Association Meets in Berlin and Discusses Treaty.

Berlin, Feb. 12.—The annual convention of the Agarian association, including in its membership 270,000 proprietors of estates, large and small, and forming one of the most powerful political bodies in the empire opened here today at the hippodrome. About eight thousand owners of estates were present. Dr. Von Floeckher, a large land owner of Hanover and until recently secretary of legation at the city of Mexico, made a carefully worded statement on the trade relations with the United States. He said:

"These relations have now become acute, because up to the present time we have not been able to conclude a new commercial agreement with the United States. You all know that we take twice as much from America as we send there. But unfortunately, the principle of closed home market has the upper hand in the senate. President Roosevelt in spite of his admiration for Germany cannot alter the intention of the senate. Diplomacy consists in reckoning with given facts and striving for the attainable and in this diplomacy differs from private and party life in which one so often tries to treat facts to suit one's self, and to attain the impossible. We might argue that, with the exception of cotton, maize and lard, we could get anything else we buy from the United States from other countries. But firm as we must be in our negotiations, it would be fatal if we did not do all we could to make an agreement possible. The English and French would be the chief gainers were we to engage in a commercial war with the United States. Such a war, therefore, could only have one result on our side and that would be to weaken us. But that must never be the aim of our policy. On the contrary we have every reason in the present complicated world situation to strengthen our ties with America, which is the only world power that can remain passive toward Great Britain and at the same time form a closer friendship with us."

Dr. Von Floeckher in conclusion said: "Do not think too little of American friendship, but do all you can to impress upon all classes the political importance of this friendship."

STRIKE IS SETTLED.

Cement Workers Go Back, Mr. Hilliard Recognizing Their Union.

The cement workers who went out on strike while at work Friday noon on the Hilliard contract, building the distributing station of the Great Northern Power company at Fifteenth avenue west, are all back to work now, Mr. Hilliard recognizing the union. He met with the union leaders on Saturday night and told them that he would recognize the union and for them to have the men at work this morning. This was done and there was no further difficulty, the men returning today.

The non-union men at work on the building are either leaving and union men taking their places, or making application for admission to the union. The strike lasted only a day and a half and twenty-five men were involved.

VERSATILE ATHLETES

Fultz is Lawyer, Great Ball Player and Crack Swimmer.

Sloan, Great as a Rider, Also a Fine Billiardist.

The retirement of David Livingstone Fultz from professional baseball removes a versatile athlete, says an Eastern exchange. A man may be versatile in a two-fold sense. He may be capable in the several departments of some one form of athletic competition, or he may be proficient in several forms. For that matter the accomplishments of Fultz are not bounded by the confines of sport. The retiring center fielder of the New York American league baseball team is a lawyer and a lecturer. He is now a lawyer by profession, but his lecturing is done in the amateur field. Fultz is a Christian who practices what he preaches, and to make addresses on the subject of clean and upright living is with him a labor of love.

This man, who has worried many opposing ball teams by his swiftness in running bases and by his ability to snatch down fly balls in all parts of the field, is not wanting in gifts as a vocalist. He knows something of music, plays the piano well and has a good bass voice. To return to his physical accomplishments, he was as good a footall player while at Brown university as he since has been a baseball player. Amphibiously, too, he excels. Put him in a tank of water and he can produce a line of flipflaps, somersaults, distance dives and other aquatic tricks that are an entertainment in themselves.

Tod Sloan is an illustration of the fact that a meager endowment of inches by nature is no bar to physical excellence in doing a number of things well. As a jockey, Sloan was one of the most skillful that ever guided a thoroughbred. His hands are the hands of an artist—delicate, strong. These, with a steady eye and cool darring, played a part in his premiership in the saddle and also in the fact that he plays billiards well, handles a gun well at the traps and delights in auto speeding. Chauffeur, jockey, billiardist and marksman, he evidently likes to go fast. Lately the little man has acquitted himself creditably as a monologist, and he is a connoisseur of tobacco.

Sloan, who likes to play billiards, made his reputation as a jockey, and the late Frank Ives, who was billiard champion in his day, and perhaps the greatest billiard player that ever lived, was once a jockey. Ives' versatility also carried him into the realm of baseball. He was a catcher at one time.

John Peter Wagner, intimately known as Hans, is not only about the best all around base ball player extant, but a fine wing shot in the field. He knows dogs. On the subject of the pointer, he is erudition itself, it is said. He is a child of nature, a companion of the wild things. He knows their ways and moods. That isn't all, either. He is a pinochle expert. A dog and a gun in the day time, a pinochle pack and a warm fire in the evening—what more could a man of simple tastes want?

The legal mind of John Ward finds much recreation on the golf links. Ward is an amateur golfer. He was a professional base ball player. He is a good golfer and was a fine ball player. He belongs to the clan that gets there. What he does he believes in doing well, and he has the application, the mental astuteness and the physical activity that are incompatible with mediocrity.

There neyer was a better athlete in what he tackled than Bob Wrenn, the broker and former tennis champion. He was quarter back on the Harvard 'varsity foot ball team and a first rate base ball player.

Herbert G. Leeds, the Bostonian, besides being a golfer, shooter and tennis player, has a profound knowledge of yachting. He held the watch on the Vigilant, Columbia and Reliance when those boats successfully defended the American cup. Clubland has many similar cases.

W. Gould Brokaw is a yachtman, automobilist, pigeon shot and whip. His skill as a motorist is such that he drives racing machines, he and W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., taking part in the Florida races last winter. Young Mr. Vanderbilt is also a clever amateur yachtsman, as is his brother, Alfred G., who, besides being a yachtsman, is a whip and dog fancier. Golf, yachting, and ice sports have an able disciple in Ralph N. Ellis, who goes in for the hunt, yachting, golf and automobiling.

The college world contributes many gifted men of music. Tom Shevlin, captain of the champion Yale football eleven of last year, has talent of unusually extensive range. He ranks with Hinkey and Campbell as one of the best ends that ever played the gridiron game, and besides that he could play any position on an eleven. As a boxer he once had the distinguished honor of putting on the gloves with Jim Corbett and earning words of praise from that shining light of the roped arena. He plays hockey, is a swift and powerful skater, played right field on the varsity ball team, won an intercollegiate championship at weight throwing and drives his own automobile. Also he has "studied some"—is a good scholar, in fact.

Al Sharpe, from the same institution of learning, played first base and pitched on the baseball team, was halfback on the football team, center on the basketball team and pulled an oar on the varsity boat. Sharpe was one of the very best athletes. So was Bowmen of Yale, who captained the baseball team and won a championship with it, and played fullback on the eleven.

Passing on to professional athletes, we find Christy Mathewson, who is premier pitcher and was a good football player; Jack Chesbro, pitcher, relinsman and pinochle player; Joe Donoghue, the one time champion skater and a cyclist and oarsman, and Johnny Johnson, one of the swiftest cyclists that ever whirled a pedal, and one of the swiftest skaters that ever vanquished time on the steel runners.

Never can tell when you'll mash a finger or suffer a cut, bruise, burn or scald. Be prepared. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil instantly relieves the pain—quickly cures the wound.

NO AGREENENT IS LOOKED FOR

Moroccan Conference Will Probably Break Up Without Result.

London, Feb. 12.—While the British government has not relaxed its efforts to bring about an agreement between France and Germany on the question of the Moroccan police, it has given up hope of an amicable settlement. It is expected in official circles that the Algeciras conference will break up, possibly during the present week, leaving the Moroccan situation, where it was before the conference was called. Germany is given credit for the failure. In fact, it is believed here that Emperor William, realizing that there is no hope of Germany's demands being endorsed by the powers, is now anxious that the conference shall fail. Great Britain maintains her position, supporting the French demands in regard to the police, and cannot see any reason for a compromise. Should the conference break up, it is expected that France will continue her policy of policing the Algerian frontier, and should serious troubles break out within the sultan's dominions, France will undertake to suppress them, notifying the powers that she cannot allow the disorder to continue, as it threatens the peace of her colony. Germany, then, will be in the position, it is pointed out, of having either to concede the right of France to police Morocco, or issue an ultimatum to the effect that France must not interfere in the affairs of the country.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS RE-ELECT OLD OFFICERS.

Baltimore, Feb. 12.—The following general officers were re-elected today by the Woman Suffrage association: Honorary president, Susan B. Anthony, Rochester; president, Rev. ELEVATOR WILL RUN AS OF YORE

L. M. Willcuts Gets Government to Allow Salary for Operator.

The government has paused in its wild flight in the matter of rate bills and pacific interventions and has ordered that Joseph L. Smith be again put to work as elevator operator in the federal building of Duluth. Smith's lay-off began Saturday last, but he will be put to work again tomorrow morning /so that the elevator has ceased operations for only today, and it would have been idle today anyway for the reason that this is a legal holiday and all government employes take a lay-off.

The reason Smith was laid off was because the appropriation for assistant custodians ran short. Orders were received here a few days ago laying Smith off, but that day L. M. Willcuts, the collector of the port of Duluth and custodian of the government building started for Washington. He did not go because of this order for he was going anyway. However, when he got there he and Senator Nelson called upon the secretary of the treasury and presented the case to him, pointing out, presumably that the little that the elevator attendant gets here is not going to put Uncle Sam on the bum. So the secretary said "All right" or words to that effect and Mr. Willcuts wired Special Deputy Linderberg this morning telling him to put Smith to work tomorrow.

ENTIRE CREW OF TRAWLER DROWNED.

London, Feb. 12.—The steam trawler Veronica, of Stavanger, Norway, has been lost off the Lossiemouth, Elginshire, Scotland, with a crew of ten. She was disabled and in tow of the steam trawler Zodiac, when the rope broke. The crew of the Veronica launched a boat, but when within eighteen feet of the Zodiac a high sea capsized it and they were all drowned. The Veronica went down soon afterward.

Problems of Municipal Administration

By Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago.

The two points at which government is developing most rapidly at the present moment are naturally the two in which it genuinely exercises its function—in relation to the vicious, and in relation to the poor and dependent. The juvenile courts which the large cities are inaugurating are supplied with probation officers, whose duties it is to encourage the wavering virtues of the wayward boy, and to keep him out of the police courts, with their consequent penal institutions—a real recognition of social obligation. In one of the most successful of these courts, that of Denver, the judge, who can point to a remarkable record of the bad boys of the city, plays the veritable game with them against the police force, he and the boys undertaking to be "good without the help of repression, and in spite of the machinations of the police. For instance, if the boys who have been sentenced to the state reform school at Golden deliver themselves without the aid of the sheriff, whose duty it is to take them there, they not only vindicate their manliness and readiness to take their medicine, out of his five-dollar fee, over which fact they openly triumph. A simple example, perhaps, but significant of the attitude of the well-intentioned toward repression government.

As the juvenile courts are beginning to take an interest in the social life of a child, in order to prevent arrest, on the same principle the reform schools are inaugurating the most advanced education in agriculture and manual arts. A bewildered foreign parent comes from time to time to Hull House, asking that his boy be sent to a school to learn farming, basing his request upon the fact that his neighbor's boy has been sent to "a nice green country place." It is carefully explained that the neighbor's boy was bad, and was arrested and sent away on account of his badness, and it is quite possible sometimes to make clear to the man that the city assumes that he is looking out for himself and taking care of his own boy; but it ought to be further possible to make him see that, if he feels that his son needs the education of a farm school, it lies with him to agitate the subject and to vote for the candidate who will secure such schools. He might well look amazed, were this advice tendered him, for these questions have never been presented to him to vote upon. Because he does not easily discuss the tariff, or other remote subjects, which the political parties present to him from time to time, we assume that he is not to be trusted to vote on the education of his child; and in Chicago at least, the school board is not elective. The ancestors of this same immigrant, from the days of bows and arrows, doubtless taught their children those activities which seemed valuable to them.

Again, we build enormous city hospitals and almshouses for the defective and dependent, but for that great mass of people just beyond the line from which they are constantly recruited we do practically nothing. We are afraid of the notion of governmental function, which would minister to the needs of the masses of people, although we are quite ready to care for him whom misfortune or disease has made the exception. It is really the rank and file, the average citizen, who is ignored by government while he works out his real problems through other agencies, and is scolded for staying at home on election day.

It is comparitively easy to understand the punitive point of view, which seeks to suppress, or the philanthropic, which seeks to palliate; but it is much more difficult to formulate that city government which is adopted to our present normal living. As over against the survival of the first two, excellent and necessary as they are, we have the many municipal activities of which Mr. Shaw has told us, but we have attained them surreptitiously, as it were, by means of appointed commissions, through boards of health endowed with exceptional powers, or through the energy of a mayor who has pushed his executive function beyond the charter limit. The people themselves have not voted on these measures, and they have lost both the education and the nourishing of the democratic ideal, which their free discussion would have secured and to which they were more entitled than to the benefits themselves.

Almost every Sunday, in the Italian quarter in which I live, various mutual benefit societies march with fife and drum and with a brave showing of banners, celebrating their achievement in having surrounded themselves by at least a thin wall of protection against disaster, setting up their mutual good will against the day of misfortune. These parades have all emblems of patriotism; indeed, the associations represent the core of patriotism—brothers standing by each other against hostile forces from without. I assure you that no Fourth of July celebration, no rejoicing over the birth of an heir to the Italian throne, equals in heartiness and sincerity these simple celebrations. Again, one longs to pour into the government of their adopted country all this affection and zeal, this real patriotism.

Germany affords, perhaps, the best example of this concern of government for the affairs of the daily living of its wage-earners, although Belgium and France, with their combination of state savings banks, with life insurance and building associations, backed by the state, afford a close second in ingenuity and success. All this would be impossible in America, because it would be hotly resented by the American business man, who will not brook any governmental interference in industrial affairs. Is this due to the inherited instinct that government is naturally oppressive, and that its inroads must be checked? Are we in America retaining this tradition, while Europe is gradually evolving governments logically fitted to cope with the industrial situation?

Did the founders cling too hard to that which they had won through persecution, hardship, and finally through a war of revolution. Did these doctrines seem so precious to them that they were determined to tie men up to them as long as possible, and allow them no chance to go on to new devices of government, lest they slight these that had been so hardly won? Did they estimate, not too highly, but by too exclusive a valuation, that shedding of blood?

Man has overestimated the spoils of war, and tended to lose his sense of proportion in regard to their value. He has ever surrounded them with a glamour beyond their deserts. This is quite harmless when the booty is an enemy's sword hung over a household fire, or a battered flag decorating a city hall; but when the spoil of war is an idea which is bound on the forehead of the victor till it cramps his growth, a theory which he cherishes in his bosom until it grows so large and so near that it afflicts its possessor with a sort of disease of responsibility for its preservation, it may easily overshadow the very people for whose cause the warrior issued forth.

We have not yet apprehended, what the scientists call "the doctrine of the unspecialized," what the religious man calls "the counsel of imperfection," and the wise educator calls "the wisdom of the little child." If successful struggle ends in survival, in latent and tangible success, and, as it is popularly supposed to do, in a certain hardness of heart, with an invincible desire to cling fast to the booty which has thus been hardly acquired, government will also have to reckon with the many who had been beaten in this struggle, with the effect upon them of the contest and the defeat; for after all, they will always represent the majority of citizens, and it is with its large majority that self government must eventually deal, whatever else other governments may determine for themselves.

Professor Weaver of Columbia has pointed out that "the cities have traditionally been the cradles of liberty, as they are today the centers of radicalism," and that it is natural that brute selfishness should first be curbed and social feeling created at the point of the greater congestion. If we once admit the human dynamic character of progress, then we must look to the cities as the focal points of that progress; and it is not without significance that the most vigorous effort at governmental reform, as well as the most generous experiments in ministering social needs, have come from the largest cities. Are we beginning to see the first timid, forward reach of one of those instinctive movements which carry forward the goodness of the race?

If we could trust democratic government as over, against and distinct from the older types from these which repress rather than release, the power of the people—then we should begin to know what democracy really is, and our municipal administration would at last be free to attain Aristotle's ideal of a city, "where men live a common life for a noble end."

RECOGNIZED IT.

The late Col. John C. Linehan, insurance commissioner of New Hampshire, was noted for his ability in telling from what part of the world a person came by his name, says the Boston Herald. A friend thinking to have a little fun with him, said: "Colonel, in Nashua we have a name which sometimes troubles us. It is spelt M-a-c-h-i-n-e-r-y."

"Oh, yes, MacHinery," the colonel replied. "They are quite a prominent family,, and come from the northern part of Ireland."

Nothing was said on the subject for a few minutes, until the gentleman from Nashua was about to leave, when he said: "Colonel, perhaps you pronounce it MacHinery, but most of the people in Nashua call it machinery."

TOOK A LOOK.

A few years ago the school in the little red schoolhouse between Nashua, N. H., and Pepperell, had for its teacher a young woman noted for her beauty, says the Boston Herald. As a well known wag named Williams and a young man were riding past the school, Williams, who had heard of the teacher's beauty, determined to see her. Alighting from his carriage, he rapped at the door, which she opened, when he asked if any of her pupils had lost a book.

She inquired if any one missed a book, but no loss was reported. She then said to Williams: "Why, have you found one?"

"No," he answered, "but I didn't know but I might."

RETORT COURTEOUS.

A barrister named Bushe was trying a case in Limerick before Chief Baron O'Grady, when, in the course of the lawyer's speech, an ass began to bray loudly outside the courtroom, the window of which opened on a pasture, says the New York Mail.

"Wait a moment," said the chief baron. "One at a time, Mr. Bushe, if you please."

The barrister presently had a good chance to retort. When O'Grady was charging the jury the ass again began to bray, this time at a greater distance from the courtroom window.

"I beg your lordship's pardon," said Bushe. "May I ask you to repeat your last words? There is such an echo here I did not quite catch that sentence."

REVOLUTION BREAKS OUT

Cape Haytien, Hayti, Feb. 13.—A messenger who arrived here today from Monte Cristi, in the northern part of the republic of Santo Domingo, reports that a revolutionary movement has broken out at Monte Cristi. Gen. Veney, at the head of a numerous body of troops, has attacked and captured the town of Dajabon, on the frontier of Hayti. Veney is a devoted partisan of Gen. Jiminez, former president of Santo Domingo, and it is generally believed that the movement is in favor of Jiminez, and that its object is to prevent the government from holding the approaching elections.

"There is an insurrection, small force, at Dejagon, twenty-four miles south of Monte Cristi."

Commander Southerland adds that there is no danger if de facto governments acts promptly.

TWO YEARS FOR BEAVERS

The Former Chief Pleads Guilty of Conspiracy and is Sentenced.

Washington, Feb. 13.—George W. Beavers, the former chief of the salaries and allowance division of the postoffice department, today pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the sale of time recording clocks to the postoffice department. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., where August W. Machen, Dr. George E. Lorenz and the two Groff brothers are already confined, the former for four years and the remainder for two years each.

The indictment to which Beavers pleaded guilty was the one charging conspiracy with Former State Senator George E. Green of Binghamton, N. Y. The six remaining indictments, four alleging conspiracy and two bribery, will be dropped. Under the agreement whereby Beavers pleaded guilty, he is not to appear as a witness in any postoffice cases unless called by the defense.

WIFE STOLEN BY HYPNOTIST.

Woman Who Disappeared With Husband's Money Writes for Help.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 13.—George Blowers has left for Cork, Ireland, in response to a letter from his wife, who wrote him she was there, in the power of a hypnotist. Mrs. Blowers disappeared several months ago, taking with her $1,700, the proceeds of the sale of her husband's farm here.

Last fall Blowers caught the Oklahoma fever, and, with his wife, started for Guymon, before the sale of his farm had been consummated. Shortly after his arrival there Blowers was notified that the sale of his farm had been made and that the $1,700, which was on deposit in a local bank, would be paid him upon execution of the transfer.

At her suggestion Mrs. Blowers returned North with authority to close a deal, and the $1,700 was paid to her. Early in November she started back to Oklahoma. She left the train at Kansas City and has not been seen since.

Blowers waited several days and finally became alarmed and returned here. About a month ago he received her letter from Cork, in which she says she is under the power of a man who hypnotized her while she was riding on the train through Missouri.

Friends of Blowers believe the letter is a blind and a scheme to get more money, but Blowers thinks it genuine and is determined to bring his wife home. Mrs. Blowers was an active church worker.

MRS. OELRICHS SELLS LAND TO GOVERNMENT.

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—A deal has just been consummated between agents of the United States and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, whereby the latter transfers the title to five blocks of submerged land west of Fort Mason to the government. The price paid is said to be in excess of $250,000. The property has been purchased, it is said, for the uses of the war department, which is counting on making many improvements in the vicinity of the fort. One of the improvements which the department has in view is the construction of a pier at Fort Mason, but the exact nature of the others can be only surmised. As the property sold by Mrs. Oelrichs is submerged, it cannot be made use of at once, time being required for filling it in. The possession of the property to the west of Fort Mason, it is said, is desired by the government to more completely isolate the fortifications—perhaps to extend them—and to give a clear field of vision to the gunners in case of hostile demonstrations from seaward.

TAFT TO LECTURE.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Secretary Taft has agreed to deliver a series of four lectures, in the Dodge series before Yale university next April. His subject will be "The Responsibilities of Citizenship."

CONGRESSMAN McCLEARY.

McCLEARY OPPOSED

To Any Modification of the Tariff to Favor Germany.

New York, Feb. 13.—The twentieth annual Lincoln dinner of the Republican Club of New York was held last night at the Waldorf-Astoria. The 420 men present were seated in the grand ballroom, but more than 200 women were seated in the Astor gallery and later heard the speeches from the boxes. Gen. Tremaine, president of the club, was toastmaster.

The toasts included: "Abraham Lincoln," Gen. Horace Porter; "The Republican Party," Representative J. S. Fassett; "Shall the United States Make Its Own Laws?" Representative James T. McCleary of Minnesota.

That the United States need not lower the tariff on products now imported from Germany for fear that our export trade to that country would be ruined if such a tariff reduction is not made, was the contention of Congressman McCleary. Responding to the toast, "Shall the Republic Continue to Make Its Own Laws?" he outlined first what he said was the true course for the new German tariff law which goes into effect next month. The framing of this law, he declared, was a revision of German tariffs, made necessary by the expiration of commercial treaties which Germany made over ten years ago. He added that it was a perfectly natural revision, and he called it an insult to the German empire to claim that this new tariff law was made for the purpose of "getting even" with the United States on account of our tariff laws.

"Ten thousand circulars," the speaker continued, "are being sent out from Chicago every day by an organization whose object is to stir up the American farmers, especially those of the Central West, against our present tariff law.

"One of the cries of this organization is 'Germany, our second best customer, will be lost to us if we do not make concessions to her.' Let us examine that proposition. During the fiscal year 1905, we sold to Germany goods to the value of $212,696,329. It would be too bad to lose a market like that."

To show that this market would not be entirely lost, Mr. McCleary said that American products to the value of $120,000,000, which were exported to Germany last year still would remain on the free list of the new German tariff law. Cotton is among these products. Another line of articles amounting to $20,000,000 of our total German exports, he said, would pay only one rate of duty under the new law, giving American exporters an equal competitive opportunity with foreign traders for this $20,000,000 worth of commerce.

"Inasmuch as this Chicago organization," continued Mr. McCleary, "is directing its energies toward trying to make our farmers of the Middle West feel that they are going to suffer greatly if we do not 'do something for Germany,' it may not be amiss to state that our total sales of wheat to Germany in 1905 amounted to only $2,200,452, and of wheat flour to only $1,854,307, or $4,468,196 in all; about our domestic sales of a single day. Of corn, we sold Germany about $7,000,000 to $12,000,000 worth a year ago. This is only about 1 per cent of our crop and if we lost it we would scarcely know of the loss without being told.

"How about meat products? Aside from something less than $15,000,000 worth of lard (which she cannot well get elsewhere anyway), Germany took only $1,-$77,405 worth of meat from us last year. Less than $2,000,000, then, measures the much-vaunted market in Germany for our animal and meat exports. For the last ten years our sales of cattle to Germany have amounted in all to $108,745, or about $10,000 a year. In sixteen years we have sold Germany just ten hogs at $258 and one sheep at $50. The Chicago organization is trying to make the mouths of our farmers water by talking of a market over there for meat products to the value of 'from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 per year.'

"I secured a table from the official reports of Germany, which shows that during the last five years Germany has imported from the entire world an annual average of only $3,690,040 of beef of all kinds, $5,662,220 of pork of all kinds and $63,600 of mutton. So that if we could sell Germany all the meats that she buys from the entire world our sales would average less than $10,000,000 a year."

CORBETT GOES ON DURPHY'S BONDS.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—G. W. Durphy, superintendent of the Chicago Dock company, who last night shot and wounded Daniel P. Padfield, of Belleville, Ill., when he discovered the latter in the company of Mrs. Durphy, was this morning released on bonds of $10,000, John J. Corbett becoming surety for him. Mrs. Durphy is still confined in the Harrison street police station on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Padfield is suffering from two bullet wounds, one just below the heart, and the other in the arm. Neither wound is serious.

DULUTH INVENTOR.

Washington, Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—A patent for an artificial limb has been issued to William M. Kespol of Duluth.

EVENTUAL DEADLOCK

Seems Certain Between France and Germany Over Morocco.

Negotiations Continue Although Hope of Agreement Has Vanished.

Algeciras, Feb. 13.—The reports circulating in European capitals that a crisis has been reached at Algeciras are not warranted by actual conditions here. The negotiations on the police and finance questions are proceeding uninterruptedly, but have reached a bed-rock point on which neither the French nor the German delegates show any disposition to yield. This firmness on both sides has caused some apprehension of an eventual deadlock, but the delegates, so long as the negotiations continue, will not admit that a crisis has been reached.

Inquiry today among the American and other delegates showed that they are confident of a successful result.

The delegates deprecate the alleged attempts of the German press to persuade the public that if the conference fails it will be the fault of France and Great Britain.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—Some exchanges of suggestions between this and other governments regarding the Algeciras negotiations are proceeding, although there is really no expectation of an agreement. Both France and Germany have taken up seemingly unyielding positions—France for a general mandate in Moroccan affairs, and Germany for a combined administration by all the interested powers. The view of the German foreign office is that if France intended to insist on a paramount position in Morocco, why did she take part in the conference? If Germany should now agree to give over Morocco to France, the efforts of years would be fruitless, and a long period of unrest in European affairs, it is believed, would begin, the issue of which no one ventures to predict. It is likened in official quarters, however, to the period from 1866 to 1870, when the economic life of the principal continental countries was disturbed continuously by fears and rumors of war. The dissolution of the Algeciras conference, while not in itself the cause of war talk, will certainly be succeeded by a revival of mutual distrust between France and Germany. Suspicion was aroused here today by the news from Lalla Marnia, province of Oran, Algeria, that the Moorish pretender, Bu Hamara, is assembling the independent tribes for a foray against towns near the Algerian frontier. As the pretender is considered to be fully controlled by the French, his activity at this moment is disquieting, as indicating that France has resumed her forward policy in Morocco.

FIRE AT DETROIT.

Detroit, Feb. 13.—The printing and binding plant of Winn & Hammond, 152-156 Wayne street, was gutted by fire today, causing a total loss of $75,000 of which $55,000 is on stock and machinery. The fire broke out on the first floor and swept through the building so rapidly that twenty-five girl employes were forced to escape across a bridge leading to an adjoing building with the flames at their heels.

T. F. COLE PURCHASES ENTIRE MINING INTERESTS OF F. A. HEINZE

DENOUNCED BY BRYAN

Says That Many Colleges Are Becoming Allies of Plutocracy.

Subsidized by Trust Magnates to Prevent Teaching of Truths.

Jacksonville, Ill., Feb. 12.—William J. Bryan, writing from Hongkonk, has sent his resignation as trustee of Illinois college and at length declares that he would not serve a school where the board of trustees was in favor of accepting funds from Carnegie or other trust magnates, who are attempting to subsidize the colleges of America to prevent teaching of economic truth. The resignation was accepted last night.

"The issue presented," writes Mr. Bryan, "seems to me to be a vital one, and even if Carnegie refused, the same question will likely arise if some other trust magnate invites requests. Our colleges cannot serve God and Mammon. It cannot be a college for the people and at the same time commend itself to the commercial highwaymen who are now subsidizing the colleges to prevent the teaching of economic truth.

"It grieves me to have my alma mater converted into an ally of plutocracy, but having done what I could do to prevent it, I have no other recourse than to withdraw from its management. I regret that the action, if it was to be taken, was not taken before I gave my notes, for I regard the money given as worse than wasted, if the college is to be under the shadow of a great monopoly."

BODY OF KING CHRISTIAN LYING IN STATE IN CHURCH.

Copenhagen, Feb. 13.—The coffin containing the body of King Christian was removed at 6 o'clock this morning from the palace to the Christianborg church, where it will lie in state until Feb. 15. The crown prince and other members of the royal family, the court officials and army and navy officers followed the hearse on foot through the crowd-lined streets. After a brief service at the church, the royal party returned to the palace, leaving the body in charge of a guard of army and navy officers, who will remain day and night stationed at the head and foot of the catafalque. The public will be admitted to the church at stated hours daily.

Before the church was opened the vicinity was densely thronged with those desirous of paying their last respects to the body of the old monarch.

The line from the church door was fully a mile long and constantly lengthening when the doors were opened to the public and thousands passed the bier during the subsequent two hours. The German minister during the morning placed two enormous floral tributes from Emperor William at the foot of the catafalque.

FORTRESS IS EMPTY

Last Inmates of Great Russian Prison Sent to Siberia.

Famous Schlusselburg No Longer Shelters Political Prisoners.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—Five famous political prisoners, the last inmates of the Schlusselburg fortress, were taken from their cells last night and sent to Siberia to serve the remainder of their sentences. They were Karpovich, who killed Minister of Education Bogaleff in 1901, for forcibly enrolling student demonstrators in the army; Gershunin and Melnikoff, accomplices in the assassination of Interior Minister Sipiaguine, and organizers of the fighting organization of the special revolutionists, Sasoneff, the murder of Interior Minister Von Plehve, and his accomplice, Sekorsky. The sentences have been materially ameliorated by the emperor's amenesty decree of November last. The frowning stronghold, the casements of which since the reign of Catherine II, when the authors, Radischeff and Novikoff, were imprisoned for their liberal ideas, have always harbored political prisoners and within which most of the executions of the terroritists of late years have occurred, is now empty and the keepers have been disbanded. The walls, however, will be left standing as a show place.

TENNESSEE EXCEEDS SPEED REQUIREMENTS.

Boston, Feb. 13.—The new armored cruser Tennessee made an unofficial speed of 22.16 knots on her speed trial yesterday, according to the report of one of the trial board. There was a slight accident in course of the trial, which was repaired, but which resulted in a delay of several hours. The speed shown is .16 of a knot in excess of the contract requirements. The members of the trial board were landed at this port after midnight and left on an early train for Washington.

MINERS STRIKE.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 13.—The miners and laborers at the two collieries of the Jermyn Coal company at Rendham, near here went on strike today. The men claim the company has discriminated against them in reduction of wages, contrary to the award of the strike commission and that the reduction is an entering wedge to a general cut in wages to be put into effect in the entire region before the award of the commission expires, April 1. Twelve hundred men are involved.

SENATOR CLAPP.

SENATOR IS CENSURED

Clapp Comes in for a Warm Roast at Republican Club.

Proposition to Endorse Senator Nelson Badly Defeated.

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota's national senators figured anything but harmoniously in the two big Republican gatherings held in the Twin Cities last night to commemorate the anniversary of the birth of the martyred Abraham Lincoln.

Following a marked division of sentiment at the Hennepin "harmony" gathering, on the proposition to endorse the re-election of Senator Nelson, where the motion to endorse him was badly defeated, a few hot roasts were tendered Senator Clapp at the Ramsey Lincoln club meeting, and the sentiments uttered by Dar F. Reese were cheered to the echo.

Mr. Reese attacked Senator Clapp for his announced intention of staying away from the senate committee meeting, because of bickerings in connection with the consideration of the Hepburn railroad rate bill, and in the course of his remarks practically characterized the St. Paul senator as a coward.

"I have no use for a coward, either in public or private life," said Mr. Reese, warming to his subject, "and Senator Clapp, by his course at Washington, has left himself open to censure."

The vigorous cheering and handclapping interrupted him, and it was interspersed with remarks of "Neither have we" from various parts of the banquet hall.

Continuing, Mr. Reese bitterly assailed Senator Clapp for what he termed a cowardly course. "The junior senator," said Mr. Reese, "has contemptuously turned his back on the firing line and retreated ignominiously. He assured us he was with the people, and would fight for their interests. Now we find him turning his back on the fray, simply because he does not like the attitude of the committee in charge of the house bill. His duty is to stay right there and fight to the bitter end. The people do not like a coward; they admire a fighter."

Mr. Reese's warm feelings were the sensation of the evening, and he was roundly applauded.

Naval Body Again Adjourns Until Some Agreement.

Annapolis, Feb. 13.—The courtmartial, which had been engaged in the trial of midshipmen charged with hazing and which adjourned two weeks ago, reassembled today, but there being no case for trial, the court took a further adjournment.

The court will not reassemble until a full agreement has been reached as to the course that will be pursued in relation to further trials of midshipmen on charges of hazing. There are three midshipmen against whom it is known that the authorities have charges.

The navy department has accepted the resignation of Midshipman Laurence M. Ellwell of Baltimore, Md., who graduated from the academy yesterday. It also accepted the resignation of Midshipman Joseph M. O'Brien of Somers, Mont. O'Brien is a member of the football team and resigned on account of the wishes of his parents.

TRANSFER OF PROPERTIES

To a New Company Will be Accomplished at Once.

Includes Amalgamated, North Butte and United Copper Companies.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Arthur C. Carson, representing Thomas F. Cole of Duluth, this morning took possession of all mines and mining properties of F. Augustus Heinze and the United Copper company in Silver Bow county, which have been in controversy or litigation with the Amalgamated Copper company. This means that peace has come to the warring copper mining interests of Butte.

The announcement that a sale of the Heinze property had been made, came in a telegram this morning from John D. Ryan, managing director for the Amalgamated Copper company, who is now in New York. Mr. Ryan, with his attorneys, left Butte for New York early last November on the business deal which was consummated today. He was closely followed by Mr. Heinze. Since then many reports had been received that a deal was pending, but no official announcement of the fact was made until today when the deal was concluded.

The transaction involves property valued at many millions of dollars. No intimation was received here today from official sources as to the terms of the deal. It is only known that Heinze has sold his interests in Silver Bow county and that he has been completely eliminated from the copper mining operations of this district. His properties have been acquired by interests friendly to the Amalgamated Copper company.

Included among the properties turned over to Mr. Carson today were the Minnie Healy, Rarus, Corra, Belmont, Nippon, Johnstown and the interests of the Hypockay Mining company, the Guardian Mining company and the Montana Ore Purchasing company. Among those interests are a number of properties not now producing, as well as producing mines and a smelter.

The deal concluded today settles for all time the litigation and disputes that have retarded the development of the district in the past.

The settlement effected by the sale of the Heinze properties released valuable ore bodies owned by each of the contestants and claimed by both. Included among such ore bodies are those of the Minnie Healy, the Michael Davitt, the Tramway, the Snohomish and the Nipper groups and there are many others. More than 100 law suits involving claims for more than $50,000,000 are settled by the deal which has just been consummated by Mr. Ryan and his associates. Thomas F. Cole is taking title to the properties which will be transferred to a new company in which the Amalgamated Copper company, the North Butte Mining company and the United Copper company interests will be associated.

REVOLUTION BREAKS OUT

Cape Haytien, Hayti, Feb. 13.—A messenger who arrived here today from Monte Cristi, in the northern part of the republic of Santo Domingo, reports that a revolutionary movement has broken out at Monte Cristi. Gen. Veney, at the head of a numerous body of troops, has attacked and captured the town of Dajabon, on the frontier of Hayti. Veney is a devoted partisan of Gen. Jiminez, former president of Santo Domingo, and it is generally believed that the movement is in favor of Jiminez, and that its object is to prevent the government from holding the approaching elections.

"There is an insurrection, small force, at Dejagon, twenty-four miles south of Monte Cristi."

Commander Southerland adds that there is no danger if de facto governments acts promptly.

TWO YEARS FOR BEAVERS

The Former Chief Pleads Guilty of Conspiracy and is Sentenced.

Washington, Feb. 13.—George W. Beavers, the former chief of the salaries and allowance division of the post-office department, today pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the sale of time recording clocks to the postoffice department. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., where August W. Machen, Dr. George E. Lorenz and the two Groff brothers are already confined, the former for four years and the remainder for two years each.

The indictment to which Beavers pleaded guilty was the one charging conspiracy with Former State Senator George E. Green of Binghamton, N. Y. The six remaining indictments, four alleging conspiracy and two bribery, will be dropped. Under the agreement whereby Beavers pleaded guilty, he is not to appear as a witness in any post-office cases unless called by the defense.

WIFE STOLEN BY HYPNOTIST.

Woman Who Disappeared With Husband's Money Writes for Help.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 13.—George Blowers has left for Cork, Ireland, in response to a letter from his wife, who wrote him she was there, in the power of a hypnotist. Mrs. Blowers disappeared several months ago, taking with her $1,700, the proceeds of the sale of her husband's farm here.

Last fall Blowers caught the Oklahoma fever, and, with his wife, started for Guymon, before the sale of his farm had been consummated. Shortly after his arrival there Blowers was notified that the sale of his farm had been made and that the $1,700, which was on deposit in a local bank, would be paid him upon execution of the transfer.

At her suggestion Mrs. Blowers returned North with authority to close a deal, and the $1,700 was paid to her. Early in November she started back to Oklahoma. She left the train at Kansas City and has not been seen since.

Blowers waited several days and finally became alarmed and returned here. About a month ago he received her letter from Cork in which she says she is under the power of a man who hypnotized her while she was riding on the train through Missouri.

Friends of Blowers believe the letter is a blind and a scheme to get more money, but Blowers thinks it genuine and is determined to bring his wife home. Mrs. Blowers was an active church worker.

MRS. OELRICHS SELLS LAND TO GOVERNMENT.

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—A deal has just been consummated between agents of the United States and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, whereby the latter transfers the title to five blocks of submerged land west of Fort Mason to the government. The price paid is said to be in excess of $250,000. The property has been purchased, it is said, for the uses of the war department, which is counting on making many improvements in the vicinity of the fort. One of the improvements which the department has in view is the construction of a pier at Fort Mason, but the exact nature of the others can be only surmised. As the property sold by Mrs. Oelrichs is submerged, it cannot be made use of at once, time being required for filling it in. The possession of the property to the west of Fort Mason, it is said, is desired by the government to more completely isolate the fortifications—perhaps to extend them—and to give a clear field of vision to the gunners in case of hostile demonstrations from seaward.

TAFT TO LECTURE.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Secretary Taft has agreed to deliver a series of four lectures, in the Dodge series before Yale university next April. His subject will be "The Responsibilities of Citizenship."

CONGRESSMAN McCLEARY.

McCLEARY OPPOSED

To Any Modification of the Tariff to Favor Germany.

New York, Feb. 13.—The twentieth annual Lincoln dinner of the Republican Club of New York was held last night at the Waldorf-Astoria. The 420 men present were seated in the grand ballroom, but more than 200 women were seated in the Astor gallery and later heard the speeches from the boxes. Gen. Tremaine, president of the club, was toastmaster.

The toasts included: "Abraham Lincoln," Gen. Horace Porter; "The Republican Party," Representative J. S. Fassett; "Shall the United States Make Its Own Laws?" Representative James T. McCleary of Minnesota.

That the United States need not lower the tariff on products now imported from Germany for fear that our export trade to that country would be ruined if such a tariff reduction is not made, was the contention of Congressman McCleary. Responding to the toast, "Shall the Republic Continue to Make Its Own Laws?" he outlined first what he said was the true course for the new German tariff law which goes into effect next month. The framing of this law, he declared, was a revision of German tariffs, made necessary by the expiration of commercial treaties which Germany made over ten years ago. He added that it was a perfectly natural revision, and he called it an insult to the German empire to claim that this new tariff law was made for the purpose of "getting even" with the United States on account of our tariff laws.

"Ten thousand circulars," the speaker continued, "are being sent out from Chicago every day by an organization whose object is to stir up the American farmers, especially those of the Central West, against our present tariff law.

"One of the cries of this organization is 'Germany, our second best customer, will be lost to us if we do not make concessions to her.' Let us examine that proposition. During the fiscal year 1905, we sold to Germany goods to the value of $212,836,229. It would be too bad to lose a market like that."

To show that this market would not be entirely lost, Mr. McCleary said that American products to the value of $120,000,000, which were exported to Germany last year still would remain on the free list of the new German tariff law. Cotton is among these products. Another line of articles amounting to $30,000,000 of our total German exports, he said, would pay only one rate of duty under the new law, giving American exporters an equal competitive opportunity with foreign traders for this $30,000,000 worth of commerce.

"Inasmuch as this Chicago organization," continued Mr. McCleary, "is directing its energies toward trying to make our farmers of the Middle West feel that they are going to suffer greatly if we do not 'do something for Germany,' it may not be amiss to state that our total sales of wheat to Germany in 1905 amounted to only $2,250,452, and of wheat flour to only $1,854,307, or $4,468,196 in all; about our domestic sales of a single day. Of corn, we sold Germany about $7,000,000 to $12,000,000 worth a year ago. This is only about 1 per cent of our crop and if we lost it we would scarcely know of the loss without being told.

"How about meat products? Aside from something less than $15,000,000 worth of lard (which she cannot well get elsewhere anyways), Germany took only $1,577,405 worth of meat from us last year. Less than $2,000,000, then, measures the much-vaunted market in Germany for our animal and meat exports. For the last ten years our sales of cattle to Germany have amounted in all to $105,745, or about $10,000 a year. In sixteen years we have sold Germany just ten hogs at $25 and one sheep at $50. The Chicago organization is trying to make the mouths of our farmers water by talking of a market over there for meat products to the value of 'from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 per year.'

"I secured a table from the official reports of Germany, which shows that during the last five years Germany has imported from the entire world an annual average of only $3,690,040 of beef of all kinds, $6,662,220 of pork of all kinds and $63,990 of mutton. So that if we could sell Germany all the meats that she buys from the entire world our sales would average less than $10,000,000 a year."

CORBETT GOES ON DURPHY'S BONDS.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—G. W. Durphy, superintendent of the Chicago Dock company, who last night shot and wounded Daniel P. Padfield, of Belleville, Ill., when he discovered the latter in the company of Mrs. Durphy, was this morning released on bonds of $10,000. John J. Corbett becoming surety for him. Mrs. Durphy is still confined in the Harrison street police station on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Padfield is suffering from two bullet wounds, one just below the heart, and the other in the arm. Neither wound is serious.

Washington, Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—A patent for an artificial limb has been issued to William M. Kespol of Duluth.

EVENTUAL DEADLOCK

Seems Certain Between France and Germany Over Morocco.

Negotiations Continue Although Hope of Agreement Has Vanished.

Algeciras, Feb. 13.—The reports circulating in European capitals that a crisis has been reached at Algeciras are not warranted by actual conditions here. The negotiations on the police and finance questions are proceeding uninterruptedly, but have reached a bed-rock point on which neither the French nor the German delegates show any disposition to yield. This firmness on both sides has caused some apprehension of an eventual deadlock, but the delegates, so long as the negotiations continue, will not admit that a crisis has been reached.

Inquiry today among the American and other delegates showed that they are confident of a successful result.

The delegates deprecate the alleged attempts of the German press to persuade the public that if the conference fails it will be the fault of France and Great Britain.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—Some exchanges of suggestions between this and other governments regarding the Algeciras negotiations are proceeding, although there is really no expectation of an agreement. Both France and Germany have taken up seemingly unyielding positions—France for a general mandate in Moroccan affairs, and Germany for a combined administration by all the interested powers. The view of the German foreign office is that if France intended to insist on a paramount position in Morocco, why did she take part in the conference? If Germany should now agree to give over Morocco to France, the efforts of years would be fruitless, and a long period of unrest in European affairs, it is believed, would begin, the issue of which no one ventures to predict. It is likened in official quarters, however, to the period from 1866 to 1870, when the economic life of the principal continental countries was disturbed continuously by fears and rumors of war. The dissolution of the Algeciras conference, while not in itself the cause of war talk, will certainly be succeeded by a revival of mutual distrust between France and Germany. Suspicion was aroused here today by the news from Lalla Marnia, province of Oran, Algeria, that the Moorish pretender, Bu Hamara, is assembling the independent tribes for a foray against towns near the Algerian frontier. As the pretender is considered to be fully controlled by the French, his activity at this moment is disquieting, as indicating that France has resumed her forward policy in Morocco.

FIRE AT DETROIT.

Detroit, Feb. 13.—The printing and binding plant of Winn & Hammond, 152-156 Wayne street, was gutted by fire today, causing a total loss of $75,000 of which $55,000 is on stock and machinery. The fire broke out on the first floor and swept through the building so rapidly that twenty-five girl employes were forced to escape across a bridge leading to an adjoing building with the flames at their heels.

T. F. COLE PURCHASES ENTIRE MINING INTERESTS OF F. A. HEINZE

DENOUNCED BY BRYAN

Says That Many Colleges Are Becoming Allies of Plutocracy.

Subsidized by Trust Magnates to Prevent Teaching of Truths.

Jacksonville, Ill., Feb. 12.—William J. Bryan, writing from Hongkonk, has sent his resignation as trustee of Illinois college and at length declares that he would not serve a school where the board of trustees was in favor of accepting funds from Carnegie or other trust magnates, who are attempting to subsidize the colleges of America to prevent teaching of economic truth. The resignation was accepted last night.

"The issue presented," writes Mr. Bryan, "seems to me to be a vital one, and even if Carnegie refused, the same question will likely arise if some other trust magnate invites requests. Our colleges cannot serve God and Mammon. It cannot be a college for the people and at the same time commend itself to the commercial highwaymen who are now subsidizing the colleges to prevent the teaching of economic truth.

"It grieves me to have my alma mater converted into an ally of plutocracy, but having done what I could do to prevent it, I have no other recourse than to withdraw from its management. I regret that the action, if it was to be taken, was not taken before I gave my notes, for I regard the money given as worse than wasted, if the college is to be under the shadow of a great monopoly."

Copenhagen, Feb. 13.—The coffin containing the body of King Christian was removed at 6 o'clock this morning from the palace to the Christianborg church, where it will lie in state until Feb. 15. The crown prince and other members of the royal family, the court officials and army and navy officers followed the hearse on foot through the crowd-lined streets. After a brief service at the church, the royal party returned to the palace, leaving the body in charge of a guard of army and navy officers, who will remain day and night stationed at the head and foot of the catafalque. The public will be admitted to the church at stated hours daily.

Before the church was opened the vicinity was densely thronged with those desirous of paying their last respects to the body of the old monarch.

The line from the church door was fully a mile long and constantly lengthening when the doors were opened to the public and thousands passed the bier during the subsequent two hours. The German minister during the morning placed two enormous floral tributes from Emperor William at the foot of the catafalque.

FORTRESS IS EMPTY

Famous Schlusselburg No Longer Shelters Political Prisoners.

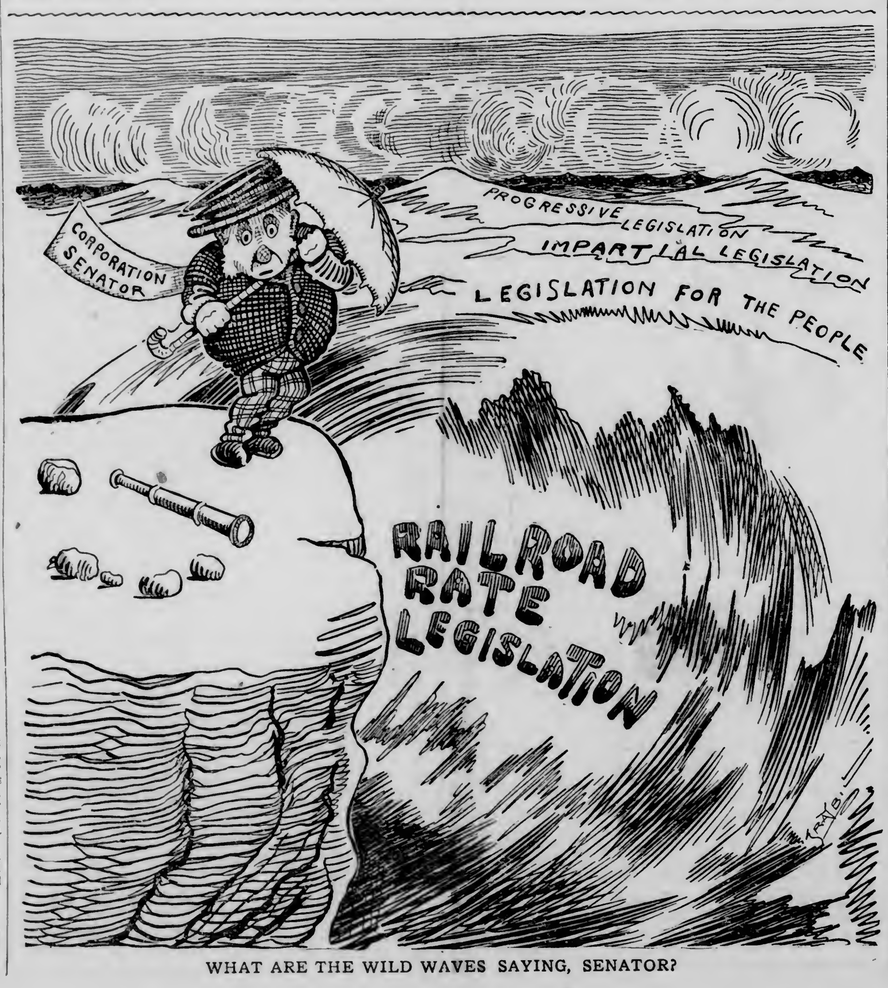

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—Five famous political prisoners, the last inmates of the Schlusselburg fortress, were taken from their cells last night and sent to Siberia to serve the remainder of their sentences. They were Karpovich, who killed Minister of Education Bogaieff in 1901, for forcibly enrolling student demonstrators in the army; Gershunin and Melnikoff, accomplices in the assassination of Interior Minister Sipiaguine, and organizers of the fighting organization of the special revolutionists, Sasoneff, the murder of Interior Minister Von Plehve, and his accomplice, Sekorsky. The sentences have been materially ameliorated by the emperor's amenesty decree of November last. The frowning stronghold, the casements of which since the reign of Catherine II, when the authors, Radischeff and Novikoff, were imprisoned for their liberal ideas, have always harbored political prisoners and within which most of the executions of the terroritists of late years have occurred, is now empty and the keepers have been disbanded. The walls, however, will be left standing as a show place.

TENNESSEE EXCEEDS SPEED REQUIREMENTS.

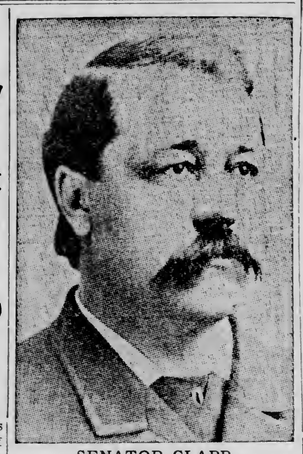

Boston, Feb. 13.—The new armored cruiser Tennessee made an unofficial speed of 22.16 knots on her speed trial yesterday, according to the report of one of the trial board. There was a slight accident in course of the trial, which was repaired, but which resulted in a delay of several hours. The speed shown is .16 of a knot in excess of the contract requirements. The members of the trial board were landed at this port after midnight and left on an early train for Washington.

MINERS STRIKE.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 13.—The miners and laborers at the two collieries of the Jermyn Coal company at Rendham, near here went on strike today. The men claim the company has discriminated against them in reduction of wages, contrary to the award of the strike commission and that the reduction is an entering wedge to a general cut in wages to be put into effect in the entire region before the award of the commission expires, April 1. Twelve hundred men are involved.

WHAT ARE THE WILD WAVES SAYING, SENATOR?

SENATOR CLAPP.

SENATOR IS CENSURED

Clapp Comes in for a Warm Roast at Republican Club.

Proposition to Endorse Senator Nelson Badly Defeated.

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota's national senators figured anything but harmoniously in the two big Republican gatherings held in the Twin Cities last night to commemorate the anniversary of the birth of the martyred Abraham Lincoln.

Following a marked division of sentiment at the Hennepin "harmony" gathering, on the proposition to endorse the re-election of Senator Nelson, where the motion to endorse him was badly defeated, a few hot roasts were tendered Senator Clapp at the Ramsey Lincoln club meeting, and the sentiments uttered by Dar F. Reese were cheered to the echo.

Mr. Reese attacked Senator Clapp for his announced intention of staying away from the senate committee meeting, because of bickerings in connection with the consideration of the Hepburn railroad rate bill, and in the course of his remarks practically characterized the St. Paul senator as a coward.

EVIDENCE IS CORROBORATED

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Frank S. Hayward, office manager for Swift & Co., was the first witness placed on the stand when the packers' case was resumed today. Mr. Hayward was one of the men who interviewed the agents for the government when they came to the office of Swift & Co., to make their investigations of the packing industry. His evidence differed in no respect from that of witnesses who had testified to similar occurrences in the offices of the Fairbanks Canning company and Nelson Morris & Co., and which has already been published.

The witness declared that nothing unusual developed in the investigation by the government until early in July, when the teamsters' strike came on. He declared at that time it was impossible to give the government agents men to walk on them because they were needed in working the plant. Mr. Durand, the government agent, declared that the investigation could not be delayed and that the strike was no fault of the government. When the teamsters' strike was over the men again assisted the agents of the government in conducting their investigation.

The witness declared that the government continually expressed its desire to extend the scope of the inquiry until it had gone considerably beyond what was first contemplated. Later, he said, he took the books of the company to Commissioner Garfield who desired to verify from them some of the data that had been secured by the government.

Henry A. Collins, Supreme Treasuer of I. O. F. Arrives Here.

Is Also Guest of Mystic Shrine as Imperial Potentate.

Henry A. Collins, imperial potentate of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and supreme treasurer of the Independent Order of Foresters, will reach here this afternoon at 4:30 from Fargo.

The Foresters in particular were very much disappointed by a telegram received last evening announcing that Mr. Collins could not arrive in time for the reception they proposed holding for him this evening; but this afternoon were notified again that he could make the necessary arrangements and would be here all right. The reception will be held at 6:30 this evening in Folz hall.

Tomorrow evening Imperial Potentate Collins will be the special guest of honor at a communication of Aad Temple of the Shrine. This will be his official inspection of the local body and will be the first time Aad Temple will have entertained an imperial officer for the very good reason that Aad Temple was formed only in September. This communication will be a large and wholesome affair and about twenty victims will be led across the hot sands and taught the wisdom of hanging onto the rope.

From here Imperial Potentate Collins, before his return to his home in Toronto, Ont., will have a number of dates to keep. He will visit the Osman Temple in St. Paul, Thursday night, Zuhrah Temple, Minneapolis, Friday night and from there will go to Chicago for the 23rd.

PRISONER DIES IN COUNTY JAIL

David Wellman Passes Away Shortly After Being Locked Up.

David Wellman, who was taken from the city jail this morning, apparently suffering from an attack of delirium tremens, died in thet county jail this afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock.

Whether or not the man died from the effects of alcoholism, is not known, but the coroner will make an examination this afternoon. He was arrested on a charge of drunkenness, but pleaded not guilty and his case was set over for a week. While being taken back to the jail from court, he fell in a fit, and had to be carried into the jail, frothing at the mouth.

The officers say he was suffering from tremens, but the coroner stated this afternoon, before he had seen the body, that the symptoms might also be those of meningitis. He was unwilling to make a statement of the cause of death until after he had made an examination.

Julius H. Schmahl Here.

Julius H. Schmahl of Redwood Falls, Minn., is in Duluth today. He is one of the best known newspaper men in the state, has been chief of the house at several sessions of the state legislature, and is a candidate for the Republican nomination for secretary of state. He says conditions look very favorable so far.

TONE MUCH STRONGER

After a dull period that has lasted some time, the copper stock market opened rejuvenated and with a much stronger tone. Early in the day, rumors of a big announcement in the Montana copper field made themselves felt, and although the news did not come until after the markets had closed, the market was under its influence all day.

Before the American market opened, Anaconda was up 12 points and Amalgated 3 points in London. Both of these stocks opened much stronger in the American markets. A feeling of expectancy gave the entire market the interest that it has lacked for some time.

All of the copper stocks were affected by the omnipresence of the big Montana deal, which resulted in the taking over of all the Heinze properties by T. F. Cole and his associates.

Amalgamated opened at $117.50 bid, considerably stronger than the close on Saturday. The price advanced to $118 and fell to $116.50. Before the close, however, the price rallied and went as high as $118.25. The closing price was $116.75 bid and $117 asked. Anaconda opened at $298 bid, fell to $295.50 and advanced to $300. United Copper opened at $76.75 and remained steady throughout the session, responding just before the close, when the tenor of the announcement became known, and advancing to $78. The closing price was $77.50 bid and $78 asked. North Butte opened at $88.50, dropped to $88 and advanced to $88.25. The price was steady throughout the session. The closing price was $88 bid and $88.37½ asked.

The Bisbee stocks were stronger today. Calumet & Arizona sold at $118.37½, Calumet & Pittsburg closed at $34.50 asked, Denn-Arizona at $26 asked, Junction at $25 bid, Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $43.50 bid and $45 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth at $24.50 bid, and $25.50 asked, after selling at $25.

Black Mountain sold at $11 and closed at $10 bid and $11 asked, Sullivan at $2 asked, Warren at $18 asked, and Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 asked.

BUYS LAUNCH FOR MEMBERS

Duluth boat club crews will this year have a launch of their own, fast enough to pace the crews.

Last year the eight and four oared crews had to depend upon the generosity of William Jones, Richard Schell and other owners of motor boats, for the use of their launches in pacing and timing the crews over the course. They were very willing to accommodate the oarsmen at any time, but the club members felt that it was something of an imposition upon them, and this year the club has purchased a launch of its own. The new boat will be fast enough to pace any of the crews, being capable of making sixteen miles an hour. It is twenty-five feet in length and very handsomely finished.

When not in use for pacing the crews, it will be rented out to members for picnic parties and other outings, and will also be utilized for transferring the boats and canoes to and from the branch boat house which is to be erected at O-at-ka beach.

"STRIKE OR BACK DOWN"

Mine Owners Have Come to a Complete Understanding.

New York, Feb. 13.—The coal mine operators have come to a full understanding and have agreed as to the general policy they will pursue at the conference with the committee of the Mine Workers' union, to be held here Thursday next. The presidents of the coal carrying roads are unwilling to discuss for publication the questions at issue between themselves and the United Mine Workers, prior to the meeting with Mr. Mitchell and his associates, but their position, elicited by careful canvas, is, as one president put it, "such that the miners will have to strike or back down."

"We do not propose," he said, "to accede to their demands in any way, and do not see what else they can do but strike. They are coming into this conference to demand an 8-hour day and recognition of the union, besides other things. It was clearly shown in the report of the anthracite strike committee, in 1902, that the miners do not work eight hours a day, and the claim is only a disguised demand for a higher rate of wages per hour, as was explained in Mr. Willcox's recent letter to Mr. Mitchell.

The anthracite commission also decided that it was the right of operators to employ either union or nonunion miners without discrimination. These are the two main points of the demand the miners' committee will make, and both have been already decided by an eminent commission and have been adhered to rigorously. "The miners have no complaint to make, simply another demand, which," said the operator, "they have a perfect right to do."

"But," he continued, "I wish the leaders would understand that these demands will not be met. We shall couch our refusal to meet them in the most courteous and diplomatic terms, and give them opportunity to back down gracefully. It is our sincere hope that there will be no rupture. We are willing to continue under the present arrangement, whereby the miners are receiving today the highwater mark in wages."

It was stated that there are 6,000,000 tons of coal already mined, which might serve as a reserve fund, not 10,000,000 tons, as has been stated. If a strike comes in March no serious hardship to the public will ensue, but, the operators say, a strike in November would be another matter.

New York, Feb. 13.—The sub committee of six made up of the presidents and secretaries of the three anthracite mine districts continued their conference today, with relation to the framing of a set of demands to be presented to the operators Thursday. While the scale committee has decided on the main points there still are some minor grievances on which they have not agreed, but which according to the district officers will be disposed of without causing any friction.

The sub committee probably will be in session all day. After it has concluded its work it will make a report to the full committee, which numbers thirty-five men. This probably will not occur until tomorow.

THE ROAD SETTLES

In the suit of Philip Oberst and Victor Linley against the Great Northern Railway company over the infringement of a patent car loader, stipulation was filed today in United States court, agreeing on judgment. It is stipulated that instead of the matter going to A. L. Agatin, master in chancery, for settlement, the road grants that an infringement has taken place and that the damages accruing be settled at $2,200 and that the costs be divided. Before the suit was tried, it is understood, the plaintiffs offered to settle for that amount but it was turned down.

An appeal from Judge Morris' judgment in the personal damage suit of Frank Cantwell against the Northern Pacific road has been taken. Judge Morris directed a verdict for the defendant last August in this case. The suit was for damages received by the plaintiff while acting as brakeman for the company at Aldrich, Minn. Both his legs were cut off by being thrown from a car when a train broke in two, and the train then backing over him.

Violated Parole.

Accused of having violated her parole from the Wisconsin state industrial school, Mary Osborne, a young girl, was arrested by the police this afternoon, from the house at 718 West Fifth street, where she was boarding.

The arrest was made at the request of the authorities at the school, who claim she has violated the terms of her parole.

MEDIEVAL POLITICS.

Los Angeles Times: Finely Acker, one of the leaders of reform in Philadelphia, said the other day:

"From time immemorial there has been room for reformation in town councils. From time immemorial the city fathers of every country have been, more or less justly, attacked.

"In a medieval German tale it says that the parish council of a small village met one evening to discuss certain improvements in the water supply.

"During this debate, the town's one watchman entered the room quietly, placed in a corner his lantern and spear, and sat down to listen to the argument.

"Suddenly a councilman turned on him fiercely.

"'Fritz,' he cried, 'what are you doing here? Who is to watch that nothing is stolen in the village?'

"Fritz, with an easy smile, answered: "'Who is there to steal? We are all here.'"

Galveston Ship Owner Does Not Want Any in Cuban Trade.

Senator Spooner Has Objection to Naval Reserve Provision.

Washington, Feb. 13.—At the beginning of today's session of the senate Mr. Hale, from the committee on naval affairs, reported the bill prescribing the method for procedure for hazing at the naval academy and gave notice that he would ask the senate to take it up for consideration at an early day.

Mr. Heyburn asked and obtained unanimous consent to take a vote on the pure-food bill after the disposal of the routine business of the 21st inst. No objection was made.

The shipping bill was laid before the senate and Mr. Gallinger suggested a number of amendments. The senate found itself in a somewhat awkward predicament. The agreement relative to the vote on the bill required that the entire time Tuesday and Wednesday be given to its consideration but no one appeared ready to proceed. A lull followed and Mr. Gallinger was about to move that the bill be laid aside when Mr. Culberson came to the rescue with a letter from a Galveston constituent who owns some ships. He opposed the proposed subsidy for vessels engaged in the Cuban trade from gulf ports.

Mr. Spooner admitted that the bill was the best shipping bill that had been brought to the attention of the senate in recent years, but said that it did not fully commend itself to him. He then pointed out some of the features which he considered to be defects. He made especial objection to the provision for a naval reserve.

The senate committee on naval affairs, today reported favorably the bill introduced by Senator Perkins to prevent hazing at the naval academy. The bill amends acts heretofore passed and was recommended by the secretary of the navy. It grants the secretary in his discretion power to dismiss midshipmen and regulates trials for hazing, defines hazing and provides that it shall be the duty of all officers at the academy to report to the superintendent all facts indicating a violation of the anti-hazing regulations.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Mr. Gillespie (Tex.) in the house today, offered what he said was a "privileged" resolution calling on the postmaster general to furnish the house at his earliest convenience a comparative statement showing the cost to the government for transporting the mails per ton per mile by railroads, and the cost of transporting express matter per ton per mile.

Mr. Payne said the resolution was not privileged because it would entail an investigation, that the postmaster general could not be presumed to have information as to express rates.

Mr. Gillespie held that if the postmaster general did not have the information on hand he would simply report that fact.

At 1 o'clock the house took up the fortifications appropriation bill with an agreement to limit the debate to 3½ hours. The bill carries a total of $4,838,993, which is $1,908,900 less than the current appropriation and less than half the amount asked for. The details of the bill were explained by Mr. Smith (Iowa).

RETORT DIPLOMATIC.

The late Archbishop Chapelle of New Orleans was a prelate of infinite resource, as witness merely one of the many mots which have been told of him, since his sad and sudden passing, says the Los Angeles Times.

It was in the days before his elevation to that ecclesiastical dignity which he graced at the time of his death, and his questioner was a little girl, whose troubled face showed clearly that her small heart and soul needed comforting. Hesitatingly she told her fault; she often and often dropped off to sleep while saying her prayers—and was that very, very wrong?

Hardly an instant did the priest hesitate. "My dear," then he said, laying a kind hand on the curling hair, "could you go to sleep doing anything better?"

MORMONS IN MEXICO.

The four American Mormon settlements situated in the state of Chihuahua are in a prosperous condition, says the San Francisco Call. An official report was recently made to the federal government by the chief official of these four colonies. The largest of these colonies is Colonia Dublan, which has a population of 989 persons, who own 37,000 acres of land. These colonists have established a large flour mill, and also operate a lumber mill, a tannery and an iron foundry. Most of their land is in a high state of cultivation. The colonists are also extensive fruit growers.

Next to Colonia Dublan in size is Colonia Juarez, which has 654 inhabitants and owns 50,000 acres of land. These colonists operate a large furniture factory, where all kinds of furniture is manufactured; a shoe factory, a tannery, a flour mill, a canning factory and an iron foundry. Several industries of minor importance are also oprcated there.

Colonia Diaz has 559 inhabitants, who own 79,530 acres of land. These colonists operate two lumber mills and other industries.

All of these colonists devote much attention to growing wheat and other staple crops. They live quietly and are all on the best of terms with their Mexican neighbors.

EVIDENCE IS CORROBORATED

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Frank S. Hayward, office manager for Swift & Co., was the first witness placed on the stand when the packers' case was resumed today. Mr. Hayward was one of the men who interviewed the agents for the government when they came to the office of Swift & Co., to make their investigations of the packing industry. His evidence differed in no respect from that of witnesses who had testified to similar occurrences in the offices of the Fairbanks Canning company and Nelson Morris & Co., and which has already been published.

The witness declared that nothing unusual developed in the investigation by the government until early in July, when the teamsters' strike came on. He declared at that time it was impossible to give the government agents men to walk on them because they were needed in working the plant. Mr. Durand, the government agent, declared that the investigation could not be delayed and that the strike was no fault of the government. When the teamsters' strike was over the men again assisted the agents of the government in conducting their investigation.

The witness declared that the government continually expressed its desire to extend the scope of the inquiry until it had gone considerably beyond what was first contemplated. Later, he said, he took the books of the company to Commissioner Garfield who desired to verify from them some of the data that had been secured by the government.

Conway Must Prove Claim.

In the garnishee proceedings of Henry Holland against Monaghan & Scott and the American Exchange Bank of Virginia, Judge Cant finds that on the affidavit of Mr. Holland there is reason to believe that the bank has funds belonging to the defendant firm, and orders that John Conway, who claims to have an interest in such funds by reason of some agreement, appear within twenty days and maintain his claims or be forever barred.

PRISONER DIES IN COUNTY JAIL

David Wellman Passes Away Shortly After Being Locked Up.

David Wellman, who was taken from the city jail this morning, apparently suffering from an attack of delirium tremens, died in thet county jail this afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock.

Whether or not the man died from the effects of alcoholism, is not known, but the coroner will make an examination this afternoon. He was arrested on a charge of drunkenness, but pleaded not guilty and his case was set over for a week. While being taken back to the jail from court, he fell in a fit, and had to be carried into the jail, frothing at the mouth.

The officers say he was suffering from tremens, but the coroner stated this afternoon, before he had seen the body, that the symptoms might also be those of meningitis. He was unwilling to make a statement of the cause of death until after he had made an examination.

Julius H. Schmahl Here.

Julius H. Schmahl of Redwood Falls, Minn., is in Duluth today. He is ono of the best known newspaper men in the state, has been chief of the house at several sessions of the state legislature, and is a candiate for the Republican nomination for secretary of state. He says conditions look very favorable so far.

TONE MUCH STRONGER

After a dull period that has lasted some time, the copper stock market opened rejuvenated and with a much stronger tone. Early in the day, rumors of a big announcement in the Montana copper field made themselves felt, and although the news did not come until after the markets had closed, the market was under its influence all day.

Before the American market opened, Anaconda was up 12 points and Amalgated 3 points in London. Both of these stocks opened much stronger in the American markets. A feeling of expectancy gave the entire market the interest that it has lacked for some time.

All of the copper stocks were affected by the omnipresence of the big Montana deal, which resulted in the taking over of all the Heinze properties by T. F. Cole and his associates.

Amalgamated opened at $117.50 bid, considerably stronger than the close on Saturday. The price advanced to $118 and fell to $115.50. Before the close, however, the price rallied and went as high as $118.25. The closing price was $116.75 bid and $117 asked. Anaconda opened at $298 bid, fell to $295.50 and advanced to $300. United Copper opened at $76.75 and remained steady throughout the session, responding just before the close, when the tenor of the announcement became known, and advancing to $78. The closing price was $77.50 bid and $78 asked. North Butte opened at $88.50, dropped to $88 and advanced to $88.75. The price was steady throughout the session. The closing price was $88 bid and $88.37½ asked.

The Bishee stocks were stronger today. Calumet & Arizona sold at $118.37½, Calumet & Pittsburg closed at $81.50 asked, Denn-Arizona at $26 asked, Junction at $25 bid, Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $43.50 bid and $45 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth at $24.50 bid, and $25.50 asked, after selling at $25.

Black Mountain sold at $11 and closed at $10 bid and $11 asked, Sullivan at $2 asked, Warren at $18 asked, and Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 asked.

BUYS LAUNCH FOR MEMBERS

Duluth boat club crews will this year have a launch of their own, fast enough to pace the crews.

Last year the eight and four oared crews had to depend upon the generosity of William Jones, Richard Scnell and other owners of motor boats, for the use of their launches in pacing and timing the crews over the course. They were very willing to accommodate the oarsmen at any time, but the club members felt that it was something of an imposition upon them, and this year the club has purchased a launch of its own. The new boat will be fast enough to pace any of the crews, being capable of making sixteen miles an hour. It is twenty-five feet in length and very handsomely finished.

When not in use for pacing the crews, it will be rented out to members for picnic parties and other outings, and will also be utilized for transferring the boats and canoes to and from the branch boat house which is to be erected at O-at-ka beach.

"STRIKE OR BACK DOWN"

Mine Owners Have Come to a Complete Understanding.

New York, Feb. 13.—The coal mine operators have come to a full understanding and have agreed as to the general policy they will pursue at the conference with the committee of the Mine Workers' union, to be held here Thursday next. The presidents of the coal carrying roads are unwilling to discuss for publication the questions at issue between themselves and the United Mine Workers, prior to the meeting with Mr. Mitchell and his associates, but their position, elicited by careful canvas, is, as one president put it, "such that the miners will have to strike or back down."

"We do not propose," he said, "to accede to their demands in any way, and do not see what else they can do but strike. They are coming into this conference to demand an 8-hour day and recognition of the union, besides other things. It was clearly shown in the report of the authracite strike committee, in 1902, that the miners do not work eight hours a day, and the claim is only a disguised demand for a higher rate of wages per hour, as was explained in Mr. Willcox's recent letter to Mr. Mitchell.

The anthracite commission also decided that it was the right of operators to employ either union or nonunion miners without discrimination. These are the two main points of the demand the miners' committee will make, and both have been already decided by an eminent commission and have been adhered to rigorously. "The miners have no complaint to make, simply another demand, which," said the operator, "they have a perfect right to do."

"But," he continued, "I wish the leaders would understand that these demands will not be met. We shall couch our refusal to meet them in the most courteous and diplomatic terms, and give them opportunity to back down gracefully. It is our sincere hope that there will be no rupture. We are willing to continue under the present arrangement, whereby the miners are receiving today the highwater mark in wages."

It was stated that there are 6,000,000 tons of coal already mined, which might serve as a reserve fund, not 10,000,000 tons, as has been stated. If a strike comes in March no serious hardship to the public will ensue, but, the operators say, a strike in November would be another matter.

New York, Feb. 13.—The sub committee of six made up of the presidents and secretaries of the three anthracite mine districts continued their conference today, with relation to the framing of a set of demands to be presented to the operators Thursday. While the scale committee has decided on the main points there still are some minor grievances on which they have not agreed, but which according to the district officers will be disposed of without causing any friction.

The sub committee probably will be in session all day. After it has concluded its work it will make a report to the full committee, which numbers thirty-five men. This probably will not occur until tomorow.

THE ROAD SETTLES

In the suit of Philip Oberst and Victor Linley against the Great Northern Railway company over the infringement of a patent car loader, stipulation was filed today in United States court, agreeing on judgment. It is stipulated that instead of the matter going to A. L. Agatin, master in chancery, for settlement, the road grants that an infringement has taken place and that the damages accruing be settled at $2,200 and that the costs be divided. Before the suit was tried, it is understood, the plaintiffs offered to settle for that amount but it was turned down.

An appeal from Judge Morris' judgment in the personal damage suit of Frank Cantwell against the Northern Pacific road has been taken. Judge Morris directed a verdict for the defendant last August in this case. The suit was for damages received by the plaintiff while acting as brakeman for the company at Aldrich, Minn. Both his legs were cut off by being thrown from a car when a train broke in two, and the train then backing over him.

Violated Parole.

Accused of having violated her parole from the Wisconsin state industrial school, Mary Osborne, a young girl, was arrested by the police this afternoon, from the house at 718 West Fifth street, where she was boarding.

The arrest was made at the request of the authorities at the school, who claim she has violated the terms of her parole.

MEDIEVAL POLITICS.

Los Angeles Times: Finely Acker, one of the leaders of reform in Philadelphia, said the other day:

"From time immemorial there has been room for reformation in town councils. From time immemorial the city fathers of every country have been, more or less justly, attacked.

"In a medieval German tale it says that the parish council of a small village met one evening to discuss certain improvements in the water supply.

"During this debate, the town's one watchman entered the room quietly, placed in a corner his lantern and spear, and sat down to listen to the argument.

"Suddenly a councilman turned on him fiercely.

"'Fritz,' he cried, 'what are you doing here? Who is to watch that nothing is stolen in the village?'

"Fritz, with an easy smile, answered: "'Who is there to steal? We are all here.'"

OPPOSES SUBSIDY

Galveston Ship Owner Does Not Want Any in Cuban Trade.

Senator Spooner Has Objection to Naval Reserve Provision.

Washington, Feb. 13.—At the beginning of today's session of the senate Mr. Hale, from the committee on naval affairs, reported the bill prescribing the method for procedure for hazing at the naval academy and gave notice that he would ask the senate to take it up for consideration at an early day.

Mr. Heyburn asked and obtained unanimous consent to take a vote on the pure-food bill after the disposal of the routine business of the 21st inst. No objection was made.

The shipping bill was laid before the senate and Mr. Gallinger suggested a number of amendments. The senate found itself in a somewhat awkward predicament. The agreement relative to the vote on the bill required that the entire time Tuesday and Wednesday be given to its consideration but no one appeared ready to proceed. A full followed and Mr. Gallinger was about to move that the bill be laid aside when Mr. Culberson came to the rescue with a letter from a Galveston constituent who owns some ships. He opposed the proposed subsidy for vessels engaged in the Cuban trade from gulf ports.

Mr. Spooner admitted that the bill was the best shipping bill that had been brought to the attention of the senate in recent years, but said that it did not fully commend itself to him. He then pointed out some of the features which he considered to be defects. He made especial objection to the provision for a naval reserve.

The senate committee on naval affairs, today reported favorably the bill introduced by Senator Perkins to prevent hazing at the naval academy. The bill amends acts heretofore passed and was recommended by the secretary of the navy. It grants the secretary in his discretion power to dismiss midshipmen and regulates trials for hazing, defines hazing and provides that it shall be the duty of all officers at the academy to report to the superintendent all facts indicating a violation of the anti-hazing regulations.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Mr. Gillespie (Tex.) in the house today, offered what he said was a "privileged" resolution calling on the postmaster general to furnish the house at his earliest convenience a comparative statement showing the cost to the government for transporting the mails per ton per mile by railroads, and the cost of transporting express matter per ton per mile.

Mr. Payne said the resolution was not privileged because it would entail an investigation, that the postmaster general could not be presumed to have information as to express rates.

Mr. Gillespie held that if the postmaster general did not have the information on hand he would simply report that fact.

At 1 o'clock the house took up the fortifications appropriation bill with an agreement to limit the debate to 3½ hours. The bill carries a total of $4,838,963, which is $1,908,900 less than the current appropriation and less than half the amount asked for. The details of the bill were explained by Mr. Smith (Iowa).

RETORT DIPLOMATIC.

The late Archbishop Chapelle of New Orleans was a prelate of infinite resource, as witness merely one of the many mots which have been told of him, since his sad and sudden passing, says the Los Angeles Times.

It was in the days before his elevation to that ecclesiastical dignity which he graced at the time of his death, and his questioner was a little girl, whose troubled face showed clearly that her small heart and soul needed comforting. Hesitatingly she told her fault; she often and often dropped off to sleep while saying her prayers—and was that very, very wrong?

Hardly an instant did the priest hesitate. "My dear," then he said, laying a kind hand on the curling hair, "could you go to sleep doing anything better?"

MORMONS IN MEXICO.

The four American Mormon settlements situated in the state of Chihuahua are in a prosperous condition, says the San Francisco Call. An official report was recently made to the federal government by the chief official of these four colonies. The largest of these colonies is Colonia Dublan, which has a population of 989 persons, who own 37,000 acres of land. These colonists have established a large flour mill, and also operate a lumber mill, a tannery and an iron foundry. Most of their land is in a high state of cultivation. The colonists are also extensive fruit growers.

Next to Colonia Dublan in size is Colonia Juarez, which has 654 inhabitants and owns 50,000 acres of land. These colonists operate a large furniture factory, where all kinds of furniture is manufactured; a shoe factory, a tannery, a flour mill, a canning factory and an iron foundry. Several industries of minor importance are also operated there.

Colonia Diaz has 559 inhabitants, who own 79,530 acres of land. These colonists operate two lumber mills and other industries.

All of these colonists devote much attention to growing wheat and other staple crops. They live quietly and are all on the best of terms with their Mexican neighbors.

RELICS OF CIVIL WAR

Proposed to Place It in the Congressional Library.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The bill recently introduced into the house of representatives by Congressman Gardner of Massachusetts, appropriating $20,000 for the purchase of the collection of drawings, proofs and essays of United States documentary and proprietary stamps, now the property of Hiram E. Deats of Flemington, has behind it thousands of stamp collectors in the United States. They ask that this unique collection be bought by the government and placed in the congressional library.

It is pointed out that to permit such a collection to be sold to individuals, thus dissipating the work of twenty years, would be to deprive the government of important and valuable relics of the period of Civil war and reconstruction. This collection covers the years from 1862 to 1883, and these drawings, proofs and essays are of decided historical and educational importance, philatelists assert, from the fact that this was the vital period in the life of the republic—the war and financial recovery from its terrific drain upon the resources. The methods employed to meet these conditions led to various forms of taxation, the outer evidences of which found expression in the use of stamps affixed to documents. Some of these stamps are extremely rare, and the original drawings, proofs and essays of these stamps are unique, many of them being unobtainable except in this collection.

Mr. Deats is an ardent stamp collector and has been president of the National Association of Stamp Collectors. Nearly twenty years ago, as a boy, he began making this collection, and has followed the work until at the present time it numbers more than twenty thousand pieces and is practically complete. It is said that all the collections of the world, including those already possessed by the government, do not equal that which Mr. Deats has offered to the United States.

The leading dealer in stamps in this country has assured Mr. Deats that he can sell the collection at private sale for double the price asked the United States, but the owner declines to permit it to be broken up. With him its collection has been a labor of love. It has been his ambition to see the collection made a part of the permanent possessions of the government, thus preserving for all time the records in connection with the inception of the plan to raise funds with which to carry on the war and to meet subsequent demands. Richard Rathbun, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian institute in charge of the National Museum, remarked, after examining a single volume of the collection, that it would be little less than a crime to permit the collection to go elsewhere than to the government.

The collection comprises fifteen volumes beautifully mounted and suitable for permanent display in the congressional library. During the last summer Mr. Yerkes, commissioner of internal revenue, was permitted to examine one of the volumes. He seemed much interested, and finally invited the gentleman who had the volume to step into an adjoining room and view the treasury collection artistically arranged in a great frame. Mr. Yerkes informed his guest that competent judges had informed him that the treasury collection was worth $20,000. The guest replied that he would make a perfect duplicate of the treasury collection from the Deats collection and still have left four-fifths of the collection, including all the very valuable pieces.

Mr. Deats, the owner of the collection, for fifteen years has been a member of the board of corporators of Peddie institute, Hightstown, N. J. Since 1894 he has been a member of the board of trustees of Bucknell university at Lewisburg, Pa. He would like to present the collection outright to the government, but cannot afford to do so.

Included in the fifteen volumes is the original order for private proprietary stamps of the Butler & Carpenter company, with 200 original approved proofs attached, a great many of which are the original designs, some in pen, others in pencil, and many made up in part of photos with added design in pen or pencil. The approved dies are signed by the different commissioners of internal revenue, beginning with George S. Boutwell, in August, 1862, the first commissioner, down to D. D. Pratt, in 1875.

Book No. 2 of the Butler & Carpenter company contains original proof of the first stamp, together with many rarities, including revenue stamps of the first issue, $200 denomination; second issue, $200 and $500, $5,000 and the high-valued proprietary stamps.

Book No. 3 contains proofs en bloc, nearly 3,600 pieces, and No. 4 contains nearly 2,100 pieces.

Book No. 5 comprises complete sheets with imprint and plate number, extremely rare. No. 6 contains revenue proofs, beginning with 1 cent express through to $200 first issue. Nearly 1,200 proofs, card, India and bond papers. No. 7 revenue proofs beginning second issue, through second and third issues; 1,045 proofs.

Book No. 8 contains many great rarities, including substitution of allegorical figure (Commerce) in place of portrait of Washington. Books 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 contain great numbers of proofs and essays and experimental drawings of revenue and match and medicine stamps. Book No. 14 is a magnificent collection of match and medicine stamps. Book No. 15 is a bound volume of proofs of second and third issues and first proprietary issue, and $200, $300 and $5,000 stamps.

The members of the great philatelic societies of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities, and collectors throughout the country will appeal to congress to save this wonderful collection intact.

BONI'S DEBTS TOTAL 18,000,000 FRANCS.

Paris, Feb. 13.—Conservative estimates place the debts of Count Boni de Castellane at 18,000,000 francs, of which 8,000,000 is said to be due to jewelers. He is also heavily indebted to money lenders.

As showing his picturesque and monumental extravagance and his method of "borrowing" it is related that he ordered a fur coat costing 100,000 francs. When the coat was delivered there were 90,000 francs in a pocket. However, this method of borrowing from tradespeople is practiced by many Parisian aristocrats.

WILL NOT OPPOSE BALFOUR.

London, Feb. 13.—Former Premier Balfour's non-committal speech at the banquet of the Conservatives of the city of London yesterday evening, has apparently satisfied the Liberals as, at a meeting of the city of London Liberal association today, it was decided not to oppose the former premier's election for the city of London. Mr. Balfour, therefore, is assured a seat in parliament.

PARLIAMENT IN SESSION

British House of Lords and Commons Meet Informally.

Formal Opening by King Will Occur on Feb. 19.

London, Feb. 13.—James William Lowther was unanimously re-elected speaker of the house of commons today. In accordance with precedent there was no opposition. The house afterwards adjourned until tomorrow without transacting any other business. The swearing in of members will occupy the rest of the week.

The new house of commons meets under conditions of unusual interest and evidence of this was seen in the wild rush for seat at midnight when the spectacle for seats at midnight when the spectacle ment at Westminster resembled the entry to a pit on the first night of a play by a popular author. Nearly 300 of the members are entirely new to parliamentary life as a result of the upheaval caused by the general election and the house of commons police had a difficult task in differentiating between members and outsiders who attempted to take advantage of the occasion to view the proceedings.

Outside the house a great crowd showed keen interest in the proceedings, criticising or cheering according to their political bias the better known members, while the arrival of the yeomen of the guard to make the historic search of the vaults for a Guy Fawkes, with all the time-honored formalities evoked unbounded enthusiasm.

The members trooped into the house of commons shortly before 2 o'clock, the time for the opening, and when that hour struck, the whole house was crowded. Both the floor and the galleries were filled and many members were compelled to stand behind the bar owing to the insufficient seating capacity. The party leaders were accorded a great reception by their adherents, the Unionists trying to veil the noticeable paucity of their numbers by an extra display of enthusiasm. A minute or two later Black Rod entered and summoned the commoners to the house of lords where the parliament was formally opened by aroyal commission. Only a few peers were present.

Five royal commissioners wearing robes of scarlet and ermine sat on a bench in front of the throne to receive the commoners. The lord chancellor then announced that as soon as the members of both houses had been sworn, the king would declare the cause of his calling of parliament together, adding that at the outset the gentlemen of the house of commons must appoint "some proper person to be their speaker and present him the following day for his majesty's approval. Upon the withdrawal of the commoners the peers met to present their writs and subscribe the oath, those recently succeeding to their titles being introduced in their robes. Meanwhile the commons had proceeded to the election of a speaker. The election of the speaker was attended by a somewhat quaint ceremonial. The clerk of the house, who is not permitted to speak, solemnly rose and pointed his index finger at Sir Wilfred Lawson. The latter, who has been a member of the house longer than any one else, was evidently posted regarding what was expected of him, for addressing the clerk, Sir Wilfred moved in set phraseology the re-election of James William Lowther.

Mr. Lowther was chosen by unanimous vote and returned thanks in a graceful speech.

The formal opening of parliament will take place Feb. 19, when the king's speech will be delivered.

GOV. MAGOON A POOH-BAH

Washington, Feb. 13.—Governor Magoon of the Panama canal zone, today testified before the senate committee on interoceanic canals, that he had not read the Poultney Bigelow article criticising the American administration of affairs on the isthmus. The article was given him and after familiarizing himself with it, he will comment on the charges.

The governor testified that his aggregate salary as canal commissioner, member of the executive committee, governor of the canal zone, minister to the Panama republic and counsel on the isthmus to the canal commission is $17,500 and that by reason of the concentration of these divers offices the government saves $17,500 a year.

Discussing living conditions on the isthmus, Governor Magoon said, that fourteen schools already have been established and that these are well attended. He said it had been difficult to build houses rapidly enough to accommodate employes, who desire to take their families to the isthmus. In his department, he said, there is not a single person having a family but would like to take it to the zone. The American employee, he said, is not so apprehensive of danger to health as is the medical force.

STORED FIFTY-ONE MONTHS.

Suit Reveals Aged Seafood is Used in Pittsburg Restaurants.

Pittsburg, Feb. 13.—Pittsburg people eat seafood that has been in storage for fifty-one months, according to testimony adduced in a suit of the Union Storage company against Knapp Brothers, dealers in seafood, for storage. It was brought out in the trial that the Union Market company, composed of the managers of the big hotels and restaurants of this city, buys its stock at the first of the season and keeps it in cold storage until used. Some of the stock has been in storage for fifty-one months. Knapp Brothers refused to pay storage on seafood they asserted had spoiled.

AWAIT DECISION OF THE MISSOURI COURT.

New York, Feb. 13.—A brief adjournment was taken today in the hearing in the case of the state of Missouri against the Standard Oil company of Indiana, and other oil companies. This adjournment, which is until late this afternoon, was granted after one witness had been placed on the stand and two questions had been asked of him. The questioning of this witness was a formality, employed by counsel representing Missouri, to secure the adjournment.

The purpose of the delay is to gain time until the supreme court of Missouri hands down its decision on questions affecting the materiality of evidence, such as it has been sought to bring out in the hearing at New York.

CURED BY FEAR.

Kansas City Journal: A case has been reported in Germany which suggests the curative value of fear. The subject, an old woman, had been bedridden on account of paralysis for ten years. Last August a tempest burst in the region where she lived. Hail destroyed the vineyards. A gale shook the houses. Premature darkness settling down caused general terror. The old paralytic, influenced by fear, leaped from her bed. There has been no relapse, and she may be set down, perhaps, as the only case of cure by tempest.

HORRIBLE EXAMPLES

Two Municipal Court Prisoners Show Terrible Effects of Drink.

One Victim Falls in Fit on Way to Lockup.

Gust Maki is a vag.

So he was marked up on the police court blotter last night, when Officer Tony Schulte brought him in, and so Judge Cutting adjudged him this morning.

In his day Gust has probably been as good a woodsman as ever swung a canthook, but between cheap whisky and lack of proper nourishment, Gust's day has reached about the hour of 11:45 p. m. He is a weak, broken-down physical wreck at 44, and when brought into court this morning he broke down and wept, while he chattered maudlin prayers for his pitiful freedom.

"I worked for Rockefeller on the Duluth-Missabe," he said. "Before that I worked for Jimmy Hill on the Great Northern. I am yust as good a lumberjack as anybody. I know Roosenvelt. I saw him once when he make a speech."

Gus Lahti, the secretary of the police department, stated that Maki was apparently insane, and that when he lapsed into Finnish he talked disconnectedly of a dozen different subjects. The police testified that Gust has been hanging about the Lake avenue saloons, until even the proprietors of these places have wearied of him. At times he is scarcely more than half dressed, and where he sleeps and eats nobody knows. He had 7 cents on him when arrested.

Judge Cutting sentenced him to fifteen days in jail to get the whisky out of him, and an effort will then be made by the police to have him go to work.

David W. Wellman was another example for a temperance society. He was in no fit condition to be brought into court, and Judge Cutting had the officers take him back to jail. On the way from the court room to the cell he fell to the ground frothing at the mouth in a violent attack of delirium tremens. It was feared for a time that the attack would be fatal, so violent were his ravings, and a doctor was summoned. The prisoner was sent up to the county jail for a week, his hearing being postponed for that length of time. Meanwhile he will be given medical attendance there, and he may recover from the effects of his prolonged spree.

The sight was too much for even the judge, accustomed as he has become to such sights, and it was some time before he was able to resume court after helping the officers take the prisoner back to the lockup.

FLEES FROM SURGEONS.

New Orleans, Feb. 13.—After having been placed on the operating table at the Charity Hospital Sunday to undergo an operation which was supposed to mean life or death to him, Joseph Donahue broke away from the surgeons and nurses, sprang from the table, climbed a ladder to a skylight, which he smashed, and was chased about the roof of the building for ten minutes before he was captured. Although several bones were broken and he was injured internally in an accident, the patient still had great strength, and the attendants had great difficulty in overpowering him.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Men Enter Tamarack Mine But Are Forced to Return.

Calumet—Ten men were lowered in No. 5 shaft of the Tamarack mine Monday, but the deadly monoxide gas generated during the recent fire compelled them to return to the surface. The party reached the twenty-ninth level. Possibly another attempt will be made Tuesday to locate the bodies of the three men caught in the fire. Powerful fans are in use clearing the mine of the noxious gases and it is believed that work will be resumed in a week.

Crystal Falls—The appointment of Querin Stephany of Iron Mountain as superintendent of the city electric lighting plant stirred up a family row at Crystal Falls. Mayor Corcoran, evidently, wasn't pleased with the selection and was negligent with his approval. The councilmen forthwith held a session and repealed the ordinance necessitating the approval of the mayor.

Iron Mountain—Alger, the 16-year-old son of Thomas Dixon of Iron Mountain, Mich., left home Oct. 15, 1905. Was last seen at Pembine. He has dark brown hair, blue eyes, is about five feet five inches in height, and weighs about 120 pounds. Wore black serge suit and tan shoes. Will our exchanges kindly reprint this notice and help heart-broken parents to locate their boy?—Iron Mountain Press.

Gladstone—The smallpox epidemic which broke out at Gladstone about two weeks ago continues and the board of education has decided on a general vaccination. It has been learned that one of the pupils in the Central school, the largest in the city, has been attending school while his two sisters were seriously ill from the disease. Many pupils have been exposed. A doctor was not called in this case until it was feared that the girls would die.

Norway—August Vanwolvelaer of Norway, a signal man on the sixth level at the West Vulcan mine, fell down the shaft, a distance of 800 feet, last week, and was instantly killed. No one was near him at the time and it is not known how he came to fall. His body, found at the bottom of the shaft, was badly mutilated. Vanwolvelaer was 53 years of age and leaves a wife and five children, the eldest a son, Alphonse, who was seriously injured in the same mine about a year ago.

Sault Ste. Marie—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ely have arrived in the Soo from Chicago and are stopping at a hotel for a few days. They are accompanied by two sisters of Mrs. Ely and two children. One of the latter has the distinction of being born on the train on the way to the city. The babe put in its appearance just before the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic train arrived at the Soo. The Elys are natives of South America, but have lived in this country for some time. At present they are enjoying a pleasure trip through the North country.

PLOT TO SECURE LIFE INSURANCE

Man, Reported Drowned, Said to be Alive and Hiding.

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 13.—That Theodore Schoemperlen of Litchfield, Minn., supposed to have been drowned in the Floyd river last summer, is not dead, but has conceived or is engaged in a plot to defraud life insurance companies of Minneapolis out of $9,000, is the startling declaration made public by the police.

The evidence in support of this statement is circumstantial, but convincing. Last September the police found the man's clothes on the bank of the Floyd, with a note asking that his father, G. H. Schoemperlin, a restaurant keeper of Litchfield, Minn., be notified of the finding of the clothes. It was stated as a reason for the suicide that Schoemperlen was engaged to a girl at Litchfield, and that he preferred death to marriage. The police, of course, thought it was a case of suicide, though the body was never found.

A brother-in-law applied to the State Mutual and the Woodmen's casualty, through state officials at Minneapolis, for payment of the insurance money. Then it was found that the policies contained a suicide clause. On Jan. 3, Chief Dineen received a letter signed "F. J.", saying Schoemperlen was murdered and did not commit suicide. The letter says that "F. J.," "G. S.," and "H. M." met Schoemperlen at the New Grand saloon the night of Aug. 13, 1905, and took him down toward the stockyards. After a quarrel, "H. M." told Schoemperlen to hold up his hanhs and drew a gun on him. He started to go through Schoemperlen's clothes when Schoemperlen hit him. Then "H. M." beat him over the head with a revolver till he was dead. The letter says the body was buried where the police will never find it. The clothes were taken from the body, cleaned, and a month later put on the river bank with the note found on them to divert suspicion.

The name "Schoemperlen" in this last letter of confession is in exactly the same writing as that of the note found on the clothes, and is identical with a signature by Schoemperlen, secured by Chief Dineen from Minneapolis. It is considered by the police as certain that Schoemperlen is alive and wrote the second letter when it was found the suicide clause would prevent him from getting the insurance money.

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

A federation meeting of the clubs of the Eighth district was held this morning at the club room of the library. This meeting is the first district meeting held in three years in this district, and the help of such a conference was felt keenly by the members of the clubs of the smaller towns. The out-of-town attendants at the meeting were Mrs. B. L. Hollister and Mrs. J. B. Galarneault of Aitkin, Mrs. O'Connell and Mrs. Claire of Grand Rapids and Mrs. W. C. Cobb of Cloquet.

The program opened with an address of welcome by Mrs. H. S. Ely, president of the Saturday club of Duluth, and the response was given by Mrs. B. L. Hollister, vice president of the Eighth district, who presided at the meeting. A paper by Mrs. W. C. Cobb of Cloquet on "The Value of the Study Club to the Women of the Smaller Towns" was a well presented one, showing the need of such intellectual help as a study club can offer to the women of the smaller places. An informal discussion on the benefits of federation followed, with Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the State Federation, and Mrs. H. C. Marshall, as speakers.

At the afternoon's session, Miss Baldwin of St. Paul, librarian of the state library commission, was present, and spoke of the help that women's clubs could be to libraries, in fostering the ideas and plans for libraries where none exist, and in giving their help after the library has been established. In many of the towns of the state the presence of the library is due to the work of library-clubs, and their assistance in many instances making the continuance of the library possible. The library commission was started in Minnesota six years ago, and they have now in circulation 300 traveling libraries.

A paper on "Why I Am a Club Woman" was given by Mrs. F. H. Barnard of Duluth, and an open discussion followed. The latter part of the afternoon was spent in a delightful reception in honor of the visiting women.

NEW CLAIRVEAUX.

Edward P. Pressey Speaks on Massachusetts Colony.

Last evening Edward P. Pressey was heard in a talk at Steinway hall on the work of the New Clairvaux. The speaker was introduced to the audience by Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., as "a preacher who has practiced." The work that Mr. Pressey and others have done at Montague, Mass has attracted much attention during the past few years and their efforts along the lines of intensive farming and the arts and crafts movement have been watched with interest. Mr. Pressey spoke at length of the ideal which the arts and crafts work stood for. It had been called, he said, a sign of decadence, for the people were going back to hand work, were weaving rag rugs as their grandmothers did and were hand-sawing wood for furniture as their great grandfathers did. But because the joy of life is not in things themselves, but the whole value lies in the process of creating, the movement is an advance. This is the thing that people are to learn and that they can learn through arts and crafts. A number of examples of the work in weaving and designing as done at the settlement at Montague were exhibited and were inspected with interest.

MATINEE MUSICALE.

Fine Program of Russian Music is Presented.

The Matinee Musicale held its regular meeting yesterday afternoon at Steinway hall and although the attendance was not as large as usual, owing to the mid-winter club luncheon at the Spalding, many of the members were present and enjoyed the program of Russian music. Mrs. F. G. Bradbury and Emily Ellis Woodward were in charge of the program and the compositions of Rubenstein, Tschaikowski and Wienlawski were presented. Mrs. Woodward sang "Since First I Met Thee" by Rubenstein and Miss Alice Sjoselius sang "A Dream" by the same composer, and was gladly received. Miss Ruth Rogers' piano number was "Meditation" by Tschaikowsky and two of his songs "Tell Me Why" and "Lonely Heart" were sung by Miss Frances Woodbridge. The remaining number of the program was a violin selection, "Souvenir di Moscow" by Wieniawski, played by Oliver Colbentson.

Herbert Witherspoon, basso, who will give the concluding artist's recital of the year under the direction of the Matinee Musicale, will appear at the Congregational church, Friday evening, March 2. The members of the society are delighted at having secured this place for the recital and are looking forward with pleasure to hearing this widely known soloist.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Imported figs, 25 cents a lb.
California figs, 25 cents a lb.
Louisiana head lettuce, 20 cents a head.
Strawberries, 60 cents a box.
Calves' brains, 10 cents a lb.
Grated Horseradish, 20 cents a pint.
Sweetbreads, 50 cents a lb.

A domestic goods enthusiast is a pleasure to meet, a pleasure, however, that contains more or less alloy. For instance, everybody knows that a Paris hat simply can't be equalled, and the possibility of living with a person who controlled the financial output, and who would insist that a West Fourth street hat was just as good—well, there's a time when the domestic goods enthusiast would be a pleasure that was all alloy. But when you don't care a fig, it's kind of nice to hear the market man dilate upon the virtues of all things American, although he shows you impartially the things imported. In one of the stores Smyrna figs are delicious looking, pressed things, and with their golden color, look like the best there is. However, around the corner in a show case are California figs, and they are plump and very inviting looking. The market man votes for the California, every time, you bet.

Head lettuce is in the market today for the first time in two weeks. This particular sort of green stuff is very scarce, but you can buy the leaf lettuce all the time and as much as you want. Grated horseradish is offered in one of the meat markets, all ready for any further fixing the housewife may desire. One receipt that has come to our notice involved whipped cream, and the yolk of an egg and lemon juice and horse radish, of course, and whenever we have the chance we'll vote for it. It sounds as though it would be perfectly fine spread thick on bread and butter.

Every Day Heroism

Most of us long to be heroines and in eager watch for the great opportunity that is to make us so, alas, we overlook the many cases which, if we met for the best that was in us, would in the end make heroines of us all. Scarcely a day goes by that has not in it something trying, something that requires patience, consideration or toleration, if not help from us, and the woman who puts aside her own preference or desire at a time like that, and does the best she can to help becomes a heroine of the finest kind. It isn't the big emergencies of life that are difficult; one can rise to the heights, elevated thereto by a consciousness of greatness; but it isn't easy to soar to heroism, it doesn't even seem like heroism, to rise above the pin pricks. Yet the woman who does it daily is a greater heroine in the end than the person who once risks her life to save another.

A heroic woman is one who daily makes the best of life, getting what she can for others, making the world better for her presence, though she may never see its results. Indeed as a rule heroines are modest and unconscious persons, falling far short of their own standards, with ideals so high that fulfilment is never reached in their own minds. Frequently other persons do not recognize their heroism until life changes so that the heroine passes. Then it is found that the person who seemed so quiet or insignificant was in reality the main spring of the home or circle, sinking her own pettiness and selfishness in the broad desire to do what was right or in helping others.

It is one of these who is devoting herself to making the life of her mother happy. She has an independent income in her own name and could, if she wished, spend money and time as she pleased. The girl is musical, artistic and not in robust health. The family home is in a little country town where there is not one person congenial to the girl, not even her mother, who is selfish and exacting, and wholly self centred. The mother is a widow, also independently wealthy.

A few years after her father's death the girl urged her mother to spend the winters in some city where they might have music, the theater and companionship of friends, but the mother is one of those housekeepers whose absence from home, even when the house is closed, is made miserable, by the thought of dust that is collecting, and wondering if any leaks have come in the roof. She refuses to leave for more than four weeks, and that month in the city is the only time that food is given to the girl's artistic soul and mind.

Yet she refuses ever to leave her mother alone. While they are in the city the mother complains the entire time; while they are at home she finds fault or criticisees incessantly. The girl almost never hears a happy or pleasant thing. Her efforts to amuse her mother are always failures, and her own thoughts are so hopelessly misunderstood that she no longer gives utterance to them. Withal she has her own ill-health to contend against.

Yet the girl never goes off to lead her own life. Day by day she stands by to do what she can, feeling at the end of each day that she failed, yet beginning over again with sincere purpose and determination.

From the point of view of those who know the girl's life is a moral triumph, and her unselfishness of living shines in the sweetness of her expression, the gentle tones of her voice and the ready wish to help in some way those with whom she comes in contact. Though neither realize it, her mother would be lost without her, and far from feeling the criticisms she frequently expresses the mother considers her daughter the most remarkable in the world.

The girl is one of life's heroines; doing cheerfully that which is at hand to be done, sinking self in the desire to make life happier for others, and in the end her own will have happiness which comes only to real heroines, not those of dime novels.

New French Fashion in Coiffure Eccentric

A NEW HEADDRESS-FRONT VIEW.

A NEW HEADDRESS-BACK VIEW.

FROM BLACK & WHITE.

A most eccentric style of hairdressing that, after all, is merely an accentuation of the present mode, has just made its appearance in London, having been introduced from Paris. The change consists in the pompadour being divided into three marked sections, the two sides standing far away from the head and the center portion. The front is brought down into the forehead in a deep point.

The effect is to make the knot piled on top stand alone, there being deep indentations all about it.

To do this requires no difference in the way the hair is put up, the effect being gained in the finish.

WHITE LACE HAT

Hints for Summer in Winter Millinery

Hats that are being made for the Southern winter resorts indicate fashions for the coming warm season. Few radical changes from last year are to be noted so far, and white is to reign over any color. Many of the hats are made of plateaux, and trimming continues to be put under the brim. Any decoration for the top of a flat hat is low, except in those cases where sweeping aigrettes are put on almost at right angles. Flower and velvet ribbons will be much used.

Model Room for Spring Sewing Will Expedite and Simplify Work

A sewing room is almost a necessity in a family where there are several girls, especially when the spring dressmaking begins. If there is not enough space in the house for a permanent sewing room then one of the bedrooms should be made into a temporary one until the spring dressmaking is finished. If possible a large, airy room should be selected, and one that faces the north, for a light from that direction lasts longer and is better for work, though a small room with a western exposure is better than none. When a suitable apartment has been decided upon all the furniture should be removed, together with the knick-knacks and the pictures above the space where the machine, cutting table, etc., are to be placed.

The floor, whether bare or carpeted, should be covered with white cotton, sewed together into strips and fastened about the edge with drugget pins. This coverlet keeps the carpet, etc., free from ravellings and scraps, and because of its color, pins, needles, bastings and bits of materials that are constantly being lost are easily found.

The furniture in the sewing room is distinctive as that used in a drawing room or a library, and the same rules for arrangement and comfort as well as to avoid crowding should be followed. The sewing machine is essential, as is a cutting table and a long pier glass that can be turned at all angles so the person being fitted can see just how the garments fits; stove, either for gas or oil, irons, for pressing, and a pressing table. Three comfortable lightweight bent-wood chairs are necessary in the room, one for the machine, another for hand work, and a third for person who is waiting to oe fitted or for a chance to cut or use the machine.

These should be low, rather than high; at any rate they should be comfortable, or a person who occupies them practically all day will have more fatigue than is necessary. As to the other furnishings, they are minor but quite essential, for without pin-cushions, needle books, pockets for thread findings, etc., the room would be incomplete.

Before moving the machine into the apartment, or, if the room is already established, before beginning the spring sewing, the machine should be thoroughly cleaned. All the working parts should be saturated with kerosene and left to stand for several hours before being rubbed off with a clean, dry flannel rag. If the machinery is gummy after this treatment I would take off the works and boil them in water and washing soda for twenty minutes until they are free from any suspicion of stickiness. Then rinse the parts thoroughly with boiling water and put them in a hot place to dry. Before putting them into place rub with a clean, dry flannel rag. Then oil the works generously with the best kind of machine oil, run at the top notch of speed and wipe off the superfluous oil before fastening the screws and nuts into place, setting the presser foot and properly adjusting the needle. After an overhauling and cleaning the machine should run for six months without needing another cleaning or regulating.

The position of the machine is all-important, for often the fineness of the work depends upon the light that falls on the work. It should, if possible, be in a position several inches from the wall, where a northern light falls from the back over the worker's shoulders to the sewing beneath the needle. In front of the machine a straight chair of a comfortable height should be set. It should be of lightweight wood, so that it can be easily moved from one part of the room to the other, and should be plain, for angles and knobs are as a rule in the way and catch on loose pieces of work when they are being hastily moved from one place to another.

A low dresser with a big mirror and wide shallow drawers should be placed where a good light falls on the glass. The drawers are especially valuable, for in them the materials and findings are placed. A folding cutting table, large enough to fashion skirts, etc., is another piece of necessary furniture. It is of added use in the room if fitted with drawers.

Without a press board or miniature ironing table the room would be incomplete. This board should have rounded edges and corners over which crooked seams can be ironed into shape. Near the pressing table the stove naturally belongs. It can be kept in a long narrow wood box, that is large enough to accommodate at least two flatirons, one large and the other small.

Between the cutting and pressing table is a good place for the sewing chair, which should be like that used at the machine, except for the rockers, which should be short, so that they will not be in the way. If the chair is finished with arms it is much more convenient, for on these bags with thimbles, thread, tape measures, scissors, etc., may be hung, and the worker will find them a saver of time and patience.

Near the cutting table a wicker basket with a cover is a help, for into it scraps, bundles of materials and unfinished work may be put and sorted out later, when needed. A scrap basket for small pieces of material, thread, etc., in a place near the machine is useful.

The room, now conveniently furnished, is not complete without wall hangings and decorations, and these should all be practical. Above the machine, fastened to the wall by brass hooks and rings, a case made of denim with at least twelve pockets is needed for holding thread. Each pocket should be labelled with the number and color of the thread it contains, as "Black silk, No. A," or "White cotton, No. 50." Beneath it a flannel needle book, with ten leaves, numbered from one to ten, each containing a needle that corresponds in size to the numeral, is convenient.

It is a help, though not a necessity, to have colored plates of the garments being made hung on the walls.

Birthday Cake.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Kindly give me a recipe for a birthday cake large enough to hold twenty-two candles. I would not like it too rich, rather plain. T. W.

Here is the recipe for an exceedingly good cake that meets your requirements, I think. The ingredients are one cup of butter, two cups of sugar, one cup sweet milk, the whites of six eggs, a small teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls cream of tartar, four cups flour measured after sifting, and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Rub the butter and sugar to a cream, sift the soda and cream of tartar with the flour, and after the cake batter is all stirred together and well beaten, add the stiffly beaten whites, folding them in at the very last. Have ready a milk pan lined with buttered paper, and pour the batter in. Bake in a moderate, steady oven, and frost when cold. Rose flavoring may be substituted for vanilla if preferred.

THE ANGLICIZING OF ANNE

By Belle Maniates.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When Anne sailed from New York for a year's sojourn in London, she was so bristling with patriotism for the Stars and Stripes, and so en garde at any slur or attack upon the land of the free, that she became known on board ship as Little Miss Uncle Sam.

Anne was adaptable when she wanted to be, however, and by the time she was landed in lodgings on British soil there was no outward and visible sign of her usual scorn for all things not purely American. She was a magazine illustrator, and had planned to spend a year in London for the purpose of increasing her facilities for living pictures and premeditated poses. She was accompanied by an elderly maiden cousin, a person whose presence never intruded. All her life had been passed in a little town of the Middle West, but the daring transfer had made no apparent effect upon her. She had taken it for granted that everything was to be entirely different, and she accepted the changed life with nonchalant heroism.

"We have no cistern, cellar nor yard," she wrote back home, and that was her only comment on life in lodgings.

"You'll want a neat little maid," suggested Mrs. Crupps, the landlady, to Anne.

"What for?" asked Anne.

"To lay the cloth," replied Mrs. Crupps.

"Very well, you may secure one for me," remarked Anne.

"Did she mean set the table?" asked Cousin Matty when the woman had left.

"Exactly."

"I could do that."

"That wouldn't be English, Cousin Matty, and I have now resolved to turn my thoughts and efforts to becoming Anglicized, though I have heard it said that an Englishwoman was born, not made. It's purely business with me. I shall publish a book—a story without words—when we go home. It will be told in pictures, and it will give a truthful portrayal of English life from eggs at breakfast to candles at bedtime, so we must cultivate no American acquaintances."

"My lodgers are all English except you," observed Mrs. Crupps the night of their arrival. "Mr. Steffins, a young attorney, has the apartments corresponding to yours on the second floor. He is very respectable."

"I thought all Englishmen were respectable," soliloquized Anne. "Respectability seems to be the ruling characteristic of Englishmen, just as cheek is of Americans."

"Haven't you found a maid yet, Mrs. Crupps?"

The landlady looked aghast at such haste.

"Not yet. I shall visit the intelligence offices and look up their references."

"I'll give her a sample of American enterprise," determined Anne, as she intercepted the jack-o'-lantern-faced boy who called for the laundry.

"Do you know where I can get a little maid?" she asked.

"What would she have to do, mum?"

"O, set—I mean, lay—the cloth and unlay it, bring up hot water and serve the meals and answer the bell."

"I believe," he replied solemnly and speculatingly, "that I would like that better than fetching parcels."

"Very well. You are engaged at once. What wages do you want?"

His reply did not convey much meaning to Anne, as she had not mastered as yet the science of pounds, shillings and pence. Mrs. Crupps received the intelligence with misgivings. She was slightly skeptical of James' ability to serve properly. "Boys do stand more bossing than girls," she admitted.

"Why didn't you come with the hot water when I first rang?" sternly demanded Anne.

"The kittle was off the boil, mum."

Anne's laughter rang out in American abandon.

"James, you are a dear. Stand right where you are, and as you are."

James wonderingly halted in obedience to orders, while Anne began rapidly sketching him.

"The hot water's gittin' cold," he finally hinted, but Anne sketched on.

"There!" she triumphantly exclaimed to Cousin Matty. "Character Sketch No. 1, entitled, "The kittle's off the boil, mum!'"

A man, tall and fair-skinned, came up the stairs and paused in momentary appreciation of the situation, and then quickly passed on. From Mrs. Crupps and from the fragments of conversation he had overheard between Anne and her cousin he was apprised of the object of their sojourn in London. The American ingenuity in utilizing James as a servant amused him, and the glimpse of the girl's face interested him. Mrs. Crupps hospitality effected a meeting, and he soon became a frequent caller at the apartments of the Americans.

Reginald Steffins was not devoid of humor, but he certainly failed to catch the point of many of Anne's character sketches. There was one of herself madly gesticulating to a draper whose puzzled countenance and the bewilderment of the whole force of clerks surrounded her were due to the fact that she had asked to purchase a spool of thread.

"What did you mean by that?" asked Steffins curiously.

"Oh, dear!" responded Anne, "I thought the clerks were a stupid lot, but I guess they weren't. They finally decided that I meant a reel of cotton."

He looked enlightened, but not entertained.

"If she were more like Englishwomen," he told himself that night when alone with his pipe, "she'd be simply perfect."

Thereafter he sought to teach her the beauties of English "as she is spoke." Anne by degrees became interested, enthusiastic and emulative. She was not aware that his Angelicanism was infectious until Cousin Matty dryly remarked as she gave her a commission in shopping one morning, "Anne, please ask for butcher's linen, not green grocer's linen."

Anne laughed as she replied:

"I asked Mrs. Crupp for matches and molasses this morning, and she said she had never heard of either. James finally solved the solution and said I meant treacle and Lucifers."

Gradually Anne adopted the English vernacular and ate marmalade for breakfast. She was tottering on the verge of total assimilation with "England, home and duty," including a half-spoken proposal from Steffens, when rescue came from her native land in the shape of a call one Sunday morning from one Billy Clarke.

"Oh, Billy!" she cried with fervor when James ushered him into their sitting room. Even Cousin Matty wept.

Hitherto Anne had snubbed Billy or else treated him with cheerful indifference, but he was from her home, and all the smothered patriotism within blazed to life.

"I was just about to go to church with one of the lodgers here in the house. You will go with us, won't you."

Billy acquiesced and took the measure of Steffens at a glance, and soon remarked and resented his attentions and intentions towards Anne. On the way to church he was a silent listener to their chat, and only replied in curt monosyllables when they politely tried to include him in the conversation. He was at a disadvantage, and he knew it. During service, his anger accumulated. When the collection was taken, he thrust his hand into his pocket for a contribution. He produced a guinea. Quickly he searched other pockets—nothing smaller. The white-haired dignitary was at his pew. In his present state of feelings, Billy was not willing to bestow so much money upon any English institution. He laid his guinea on the plate and then coolly and methodically proceeded to make change from the plate until his contribution amounted to 1 shilling, English.

There flashed before Anne's vision the whole scene—the awe-inspiring cathedral, the solemn music, the haughtiness of demeanor of the collector of coin, the silence, the lofty, aristocratic assemblage and the disgust of Steffen's shocked countenance. The situation was too much for American appreciation, and she laughed outright and audibly. Instantly the atmosphere of the three was changed. She felt Steffen's disapproval of her and Billy's resented it and was quite ready to champion her countryman. Billy realized the reversing of the scales. On the way home from church he was jubilant and jolly, Steffens, taciturn.

"Anne," pleaded Billy, as soon as they were alone, "haven't you made enough pictures to leave this land of fogs, showers, condles and extras, and come home with—me?"

"Yes, Billy. I've been homesick for Americans and Fourth of July ever since you made that little declaration of independence in church."

HOME FOR WOODMEN

Duluth Camp, 2341, Largest in State, Wants New Quarters.

May Make Deal With Henry Gujer—Would Furnish Elaborately.

Duluth camp, No. 2241, Modern Woodmen of America, wants a home. This is the largest camp in the state, and its present quarters in Columbia hall are getting to be a misfit, and the accommodations are not what the lodge desires. The camp has a large surplus which cannot be used except for expenses of the camp itself, and the members feel that they should have quarters in keeping with the prosperous condition of the camp.

A committee was appointed at a recent meeting to look into the matter and endeavor to get suitable quarters. The idea seemed to be that if someone could be found who would erect a building with a top floor for lodge purposes, the camp would take a long-term lease on the room, fit it up elaborately as a lodge room, and if it saw fit, rent the room out to a limited number of other lodges for meetings. Duluth camp figures on spending $1,000 or $2,000 for lodge furniture, having up to date cushioned seats for the members, and properly impressive seats, rostrums and pedestals, etc., for the officers.

H. E. Gujer, who is about to erect a building for the Anchor laundry, on Twentieth avenue west, close to Superior street, yesterday began figuring on providing Duluth camp with the home it desires. At present Mr. Gujer's plans extend only to a one-story building, which would be occupied by the laundry, but since the move of the Woodmen to get new quarters, Mr. Gujer has been figuring that if he can make a deal with the camp, he might as well add another story, and arrange it the way the camp would want. Should this be done, the camp will have quarters, 50 by 90 feet, and arranged as it pleases, heated with steam and with every modern convenience. Mr. Gujer will probably know within a few days whether or not he and the camp can get together. In the meantime his plans for a one-story building are ready.

UNION REVIVALS RESUME.

Scandinavian Churches Meet With Great Success Making Converts.

The union revival services of the Scandinavian churches in the West end have been so successful during the past three weeks that they will be resumed this evening, and will take place every remaining night this week. A large number of converts have been secured through these services, and each meeting proves successful.

This evening the service will be held at the Swedish M. E. church, corner of West Third street and Twentieth avenue, and Rev. F. O. Kling of the Swedish Mission church will be the speaker. Tomorrow evening the service will be at the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, corner of Twenty-first avenue west and First street; Thursday, at the Swedish Mission church, Twenty-first avenue west and Second street; Friday, at the Swedish Baptist church, corner of Nineteenth avenue west and First street, and Saturday, at the Salvation Army hall, corner of Seventeenth avenue west and Superior street.

TWENTIETH YEAR

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bjorlin of 1828 West Second street celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their wedding a few nights ago at their home. Quite a number of friends and relatives were present and the evening was very delightfully spent. Short speeches were made by Rev. F. O. Kling, Charles Schell, Rev. K. E. Forsell and others. All were congratulatory in their tone and expressed the hope that Mr. and Mrs. Bjorlin will enjoy many more years of wedded bliss before the grim reaper shadows their page of life. Musical selections were given by M. J. Olson. At the close of the affair, refreshments were served.

In token of the feeling of friendship felt by the friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bjorlin were presented with a beautiful china closet and numerous pieces of cut glass.

Grocers to Rochester.

A number of the grocers of the West end left yesterday for the state convention of grocers at Rochester, Minn. They expect to be back Friday if the elaborate entertainment planned for them there will leave them able to get home. Those wo went are Henry Johnson of Sundeen & Johnson, C. W. Davidson, P. S. Sjoselius and J. W. Lent.

NEED FINANCES.

New Athletic Association Will Ask Merchants for Aid.

The Zenith Athletic association, formed recently among the young men of the West end, is in good condition save for its finances. To cover this defect, a committee will be sent out in a few days to the merchants of the West end soliciting funds for starting and helping to maintain the association. The business men were largely instigators of the movement and will be asked to help it along.

The association has secured an empty store building at the corner of Twenty-fifth avenue west and Superior street and hopes to fit it up with a good supply of apparatus for the work of training the young men physically. A meeting of the organization will be held at the rooms this evening. Thirty-five members are now on the rolls.

West End Shortrails.

Miss Jennie Morrison of 2824 West Third street, and Theodore E. Schnuckle will be married tomorrow evening at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. J. J. Gorby of 2805 West Third street received a telegram to the effect that her mother is not expected to live, and she left for her mother's bedside on Monday evening.

Miss Ida Johnson of the firm of Johnson Sisters, will leave Thursday afternoon for Denver, Colo., where she will make an extended visit.

C. D. Swanson has returned to the West end after a visit to his friends at Little Falls, Minn.

The Young People's society of the Swedish Mission church of Twenty-first avenue west and Second street, will give a concert at the church on the evening of March 8. A good program has been prepared, including some musical numbers by a large chorus organized for the occasion.

Leslie E. Benson, formerly with the Northern Pacific at the West end, has taken a position with the Stevenson mining company at its mine near Hibbing.

The Woman's Home Missionary society of Grace M. E. church is being entertained this afternoon by Mrs. J. R. Randall, 1717 Piedmont avenue.

The Epworth League of Grace church will give a social this evening.

The 9-months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Erickson of 2713½ Helm street died yesterday. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral of Daniel Noel of Garfield avenue, who died in St. Luke's hospital a few days ago, took place yesterday afternoon from the Second Presbyterian church. Interment took place at Forest Hill cemetery.

Peter McHugh, who lives near the corner of First street on Twenty-second avenue west, is quite ill with quinsy.

Fred Bahr of Twenty-sixth avenue west and Fifth street is sick in the Northern Pacific hospital at Brainerd as the result of a fall on the sidewalk near his home.

No word as to whether he will come or not, has yet been received from Rev. A. Theodore Ekblad, called to the pastorate of Bethany Lutheran church.

Rev. M. Berglund of Minneapolis is in the West end this week in the interest of Bethel Academy of Minneapolis.

SOLAR MOTOR A SUCCESS.

Several Are Now in Regular Operation in Arizona.

Willcox, Ariz., Feb. 13.—The solar motor has proved a success in Arizona. As sunshine is its only fuel and its operation is automatic, there is practically no expense attending its operation beyond the initial cost of its installation. There are several solar motors in regular operation in Arizona. They are used principally for irrigation and farm work. One of these plants was installed on a big irrigated farm near Willcox early last summer and was run through the whole season. It operated a twelve-horse-power engine which pumped a four-inch stream of water from a depth of forty-two feet. It was so set as to blow off at 150 pounds pressure, and the sun's rays were so concentrated by the great circular mirror that the pressure was steadily maintained. It is claimed that these solar motors can be put to practical use in all parts of the Southwest, not only for irrigation purposes but for operating manufacturing concerns as well. There are very few cloudy days during the whole year. It is stated by experts that the amount of sunshine in Arizona, New Mexico and Western Texas is sufficient to keep a solar motor plant in operation twelve hours a day in summer and six hours a day in winter.

ACTION IS POSTPONED

On Erection of Village Hall and Jail at Cass Lake.

Cass Lake, Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—From present indications, the new village hall and jail which was contemplated for Cass Lake will not be erected—at least not for some time to come. Recently the village council secured lots and had plans drawn for a hall and a jail that would have been ample for all purposes. When the bids were opened last week, there was but one submitted, that of Mr. Manning of Bemidji, who offered to do the work for $6,945. This sum was considered altogether too high for the work. A. Siddon, president of the council, urged that, as the village election will be held within a month, it would be a wise move to leave the matter of a new jail and fire hall to the members who will be elected at that time, and his opinion prevailed.

William O'Neil, superintendent of logging under the Morris law, delivered a fine address at the Congregational church Sunday evening, taking for his subject Abraham Lincoln. The address was listened to by a large audience.

BOTH FOOD AND MEDICINE.

We like best to call Scott's Emulsion a food-medicine. It is a term that aptly describes the character and action of our Emulsion. More than a medicine—more than a food, yet combining the vital principles of both. It is for this reason that Scott's Emulsion has a distinct and special value in all wasting diseases. There is nothing better to remedy the troubles of imperfect growth and delicate health in children. The action of Scott's Emulsion is just as effective in treating weakness and wasting in adults.

WOMEN ARE PROTESTING

Say That Hucksters Make Altogether Too Much Noise.

Crusade in Eastern Cities May Strike Duluth Later.

Besides arguing for suffrage, entertaining state governors and making themselves "handy 'round the house," women have done many things and among the latest is to declare very forcibly against the old clothes man and the huckster.

Time and again they have declaimed against these grimy tradesmen on the ground that they are not always honest in their business dealings, but now members of the fair sex are waging war on them because they make too much noise.

The summer time usually sees some of the fruit peddlers in the residence districts of Duluth, crying their wares and there is talk to the effect that some women of this city will follow the example of those in New York and other Eastern cities in protesting against the noisy fish-mongers and fruit venders.

The women are arguing that the noise made by the peddlers causes epidemics of nervous prostration, not to mention those occasional shrewd trades wherein the housewife gets the worst of it.

The members of the West End Women's Republican association, New York, recenti met in the Hotel Astor there and drew up a protest which was sent to the board of aldermen, the health and police departments. Perhaps, "demme sir," Commissioner Bingham of the latter department will straighten matters out.

But now that the fair New Yorkers have called attention to the fact that the yells of the hucksters are very nerve-racking, women in large cities throughout the country are beginning to observe the same thing and anti-yelling legislation may sweep the country like inside tips on the stock market.

Will the Duluth council be asked to take a hand?

BALFOUR'S REPLY TO CHAMBERLAIN

Former Premier Speaks at Banquet of Conservatives at London.

London, Feb. 13.—Former Premier A. J. Balfour was the principal speaker at a banquet given last night by the Conservatives of the city of London to Sir Edward Clarke and Alban Gibbs. There were three hundred gentlemen present, including a number of the most prominent men of the city. Mr. Gibbs and Sir Edward responded briefly to toasts.

Mr. Balfour, whose speech had been anticipated with intense interest, as his reply to Joseph Chamberlain's pronunciament, spoke at length, confining himself mainly to fiscal questions. Mr. Balfour maintained that the results of the geneal election could not be accepted as a final verdict against fiscal reform. He declined to argue the question of protection versus free trade, but maintained that the policy he has hitherto advocated is altogether apart from the controversy. Mr. Balfour said his policy was designed so far as might be to diminish the burden on British industries which is hostile to the tariffs other industrial countries have imposed. In countries where hostile tariffs did not exist it was the intention to preserve neutral markets and at the same time preserve the interests of the British colonies on an equal footing. It was, he said, a policy intended to maintain an increased foreign market for British manufacturers. Protection was an attempt to keep the home market against unfair competition from foreign countries.

Mr. Balfour said the sentiment favoring his policy was not decreasing, but increasing and unless it were carried out he believed, as the world became more and more industrialized and as civilized nations brought more and more the weaker notions under control, the question of markets for Great Britian would assume proportions which could not be ignored. The world saw great nations using not only diplomatic but their whole military and naval force in order to push their commerce. To fight for British markets might again be inevitable; but fighting is a barbarous method where negotiation might succeed, and negotiation never could succeed unless it were backed by some power of dealing with the country with whom we might be negotiating, if the latter asked extravagant or impossible terms.

Mr. Balfour said he viewed the industrial conditions in the United Kingdom with the greatest alarm. He said possibly nations which built up industries behind tariff walls were acting foolishly, but nevertheless they did it, and the result undoubtedly was injurious to the United Kingdom. Mr. Balfour asked was it possible to carry out retaliation unless a general tariff formed a part of the scheme? He declined to commit himself on that point; but he said what the country had to make up its mind to was the question: "Is the end at which we are aiming worth making a sacrifice for?"

The cause of tariff reform, Mr. Balfour said, must be delayed some years; but in the meantime it was the duty of the opposition to watch the present government to point out the mistakes of the latter and direct the country along the best lines, looking to the future of the country.

Continuing, Mr. Balfour said that never had a government been returned with a larger majority without a cause which it wanted to carry out and without any great personality to guide it; but he was ready to concede the present government even longer life than five years.

In conclusion, Mr. Balfour welcomed the workingmen in parliament, but said he doubted if the present labor representation was destined to introduce legislation beneficial to the country or which the Unionists could support.

GIRL BURNED BY ALCOHOL

Severe burns about the arms and shoulders were sustained by Gunda Hatterstern, a domestic in the family of William White of 1421 East Superior street, as the result of an accident, yesterday morning.

The girl attempted to fill a small lamp with wood alcohol. The lamp had been burning under a coffe urn, as the flames had disappeared, the girl thought the alcehol had been exhausted. As she poured in more of the liquid from a can, there was an explosion and in a moment her clothes were in flames.

Mrs. White was attracted by her screams, and with rare presence of mind, wrapped a rug about the girl, extinguishing the flames.

An examination at St. Mary's hospital, where she was taken, showed that much of the skin had been burned from her arms and shoulders. A report from the hospital this morning, stated that she was improving, and that her condition was much less critical than was at first believed.

TITLE OF THE ISLE OF PINES

Should Rest With United States, Says Committee's Minority Report.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The senate, in executive session yesterday, made public the majority and minority reports from the committee on foreign relations on the treaty ceding Cuba the title of the Isle of Pines. The majority report has already been published. The minority report, which is signed by Senators Morgan and W. A. Clark, upholds the contentions of Americans who have invested on the island, that they were warranted in doing so by the language of the Platt amendment and the Cuban constitution, as well as early announcements made by Assistant Secretary of War Meklejohn, that the title was invested in the United States by the treaty of Paris. The minority reports that if the island is turned over to Cuba it will be unsafe to leave Americans there, for if they were maltreated, this government would be compelled to protect them. It is stated that from the hour this government again sent soldiers to Cuba, the destiny of that republic would be that of Ireland or Egypt, and the republic would disappear.

Senator Morgan, who drafted the report, contends that the adjustment of title in fact amounts to a sale, which congress alone is empowered to make. In that respect the report says:

"The treaty now under consideration has become a proceeding against our own people in a more pronounced sense than it can be regarded as a means of doing justice to Cuba, and in the changed conditions that have so rapidly occurred, and to meet new conditions that are extremely difficult and embarrassing, it not dangerous to all concerned, it is safer, wiser and more just to submit our present difficulties with Cuba to arbitration. It is still better that congress should settle the question of title by law, and make provision for taking proper care of the people and the interests of both government, whether we retain the title or concede it to Cuba. The Platt amnedment is not broad enough to cover the present situation, and the treaty making power cannot make it broader without the action of congress."

MIXED THE PACKAGES.

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 13.—David Jones, a colored man, walked into a clothing store in this city, yesterday afternoon, and bought a pair of suspenders, costing 25 cents. He made the purchase just as the woman cashier was wrapping up the day's cash receipts to take to the bank. She used the same kind of paper to wrap up the money and the suspenders and got the two packages mixed. As a result the colored man got a even $1,600, and the girl gave the suspenders to the manager to take to the bank. After the mistake was discovered the whole store force turned out to watch trains and depots, but to no avail. At 5 o'clock Jones walked into the store with his wife, having discovered the mistake on opening the package.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

In a fire that destroyed the home of Mrs. Emily Holt at Murphysboro, Ill., Mrs. Holt and Mrs. Anna Barringer were burned to death Monday, and Willis Barringer was seriously burned. Mrs. Barringer attempted to light a fire with gasoline, supposing it to be coal oil.

A young woman whose name is given as Miss Ethel Johnson, aged 18, escaped from attendants at the Battle Creek sanitarium Monday and plunged into the river, swimming a quarter of a mile before being captured. The girl is said to be the daughter of a high official of the city of Belfast, Ireland. She is an expert swimmer, and when almost overtaken by a man pursuing her in a rowboat, escaped him several times by diving.

Because he threw a bucket of coal at her during a family quarrel Monday night at Minneapolis, Mrs. Edward Dickens seized a pistol and shot her husband three times, fatally injuring him. Dickens died soon after reaching the hospital. His wife was arrested charged with murder.

Fire destroyed half a city block at Texarkana, Ark., Monday, entailing a loss of about $75,000. Total insurance is estimated at $25,000.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained a large party of friends at the White House Monday night to celebrate Miss Alice Roosevelt's 22nd birthday. Many of Miss Roosevelt's younger friends attended.

A statement issued by the postoffice department Monday shows that the gross receipts of the fifty largest postoffices in the United States for January, 1906, were $7,118,689 as against $6,860,300 for January, 1905, nearly 14 per cent increase. The only decrease was at Peoria, Ill., 1¾ per cent. Atlanta, Ga., showed the largest gain, nearly 27 per cent. New York's receipts were $1,490,227 and Chicago, $1,096,415.

A jury in the St. Louis, Mo., circuit court Monday returned a verdict for $27,884 in favor of Mrs. Appolonia Blair, widow of the former general counsel of the World's fair, in her suit against the Provident Savings and Life Assurance Company of New York, on a policy on her husband's life. The company refused payment on the ground that Blair contemplated suicide when he signed the policy contract.

For the most words made up from these letters

Y - I - O - Grape-Nuts

331 people will earn these prizes.

Around the fireside or about the well-lighted family reading table during the winter evenings the children and grown-ups can play with their wits and see how many words can be made.

20 people making the greatest number of words will each receive a little box containing a $10.00 gold piece.

10 people will each win a box containing a $5.00 gold piece.

300 people will each win a box containing $1.00 in paper money and one person who makes the highest number of words over all contestants will receive a box containing $100.00 in gold.

It is really a most fascinating bit of fun to take up the list evening after evening and see how many words can be added.

A few rules are necessary for absolute fair play.

Any word authorized by Webster's dictionary will be counted, but no name of person. Both the singular and plural can be used, as for instance "grape" and "grapes."

The letters in "Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts" may be repeated in the same word.

Geographical names authorized by Webster will be counted.

Arrange the words in alphabetical classes, all those beginning with A together and those beginning with E to come under E, etc.

When you are writing down the words leave some spaces, in the A, E, and other columns to fill in later as new words come to you, for they will spring into mind every evening.

It is almost certain that some contestants will tie with others. In such cases a prize identical in value and character with that offered in that class shall be awarded to each. Each one will be requested to send with the list of words a plainly written letter describing the advantages of Grape-Nuts, but the contestant is not required to purchase a pkg. These letters are not to contain poetry, or fancy flourishes, but simple, truthful statements of fact. For illustration: A person may have experienced some incipient or chronic ails traceable to unwise selection of food that failed to give the body and brain the energy, health and power desired. Seeking better conditions a change in food is made and Grape-Nuts and cream used in place of the former diet. Suppose one quits the meat, fried potatoes, starchy, sticky messes of half-cooked oats or wheat and cuts out the coffee. Try, say, for breakfast a bit of fruit, a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream, two soft-boiled eggs, a slice of hard toast and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. Some amateur says: "A man would faint away on that," but my dear friend we will put dollars to your pennies that the noon hour will find a man on our breakfast huskier and with a stronger heart-beat and clearer working brain than he ever had on the old diet.

Suppose, if you have never really made a move for absolutely clean health that pushes you along each day with a spring in your step and a reserve vigor in muscle and brain that makes the doing of things a pleasure, you join the army of "plain old common sense" and start in now. Then after you have been 2 or 3 weeks on the Grape-Nuts training you write a statement of how you used to be and how you are now. The simple facts will interest others and surprise yourself. We never publish names except on permission, but we often tell the facts in the newspapers and when requested give the names by private letter.

There is plenty of time to get personal experience with Grape-Nuts and write a sensible, truthful letter to be sent in with the list of words, as the contest does not close until April 30th, 1906. So start in as soon as you like to building words, and start in using Grape-Nuts. Cut this statement out and keep the letters Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts before you and when you write your letter you will have some reason to write on the subject "Why I Owe Grape-Nuts."

Remember 331 persons will win prizes, which will be awarded in an exact and just manner as soon as the list can be counted after April 30th, 1906. Every contestant will be sent a printed list of names and addresses of winners on application, in order to have proof that the prizes are sent as agreed. The company is well known all over the world for absolute fidelity to its agreements and every single one of the 331 winners may depend on receiving the prize won.

Many persons might feel it useless to contest, but when one remembers the great number of prizes—(331)—the curiosity of seeing how many words can really be made up evening after evening and the good, natural fun and education in the competition, it seems worth the trial; there is no cost, nothing to lose and a fine opportunity to win one of the many boxes of gold or greenbacks.

We make the prediction that some who win a prize of gold or greenbacks, will also win back health and strength worth more to them than a wagon full of money prizes.

There are no preliminaries, cut out this statement and go at it, and send in the list and letter before April 30th, 1906, to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., and let your name and address be plainly written.

HOME FOR WOODMEN

May Make Deal With Henry Gujer—Would Furnish Elaborately.

Duluth camp, No. 2241, Modern Woodmen of America, wants a home. This is the largest camp in the state, and its present quarters in Columbia hall are getting to be a misfit, and the accommodations are not what the lodge desires. The camp has a large surplus which cannot be used except for expenses of the camp itself, and the members feel that they should have quarters in keeping with the prosperous condition of the camp.

A committee was appointed at a recent meeting to look into the matter and endeavor to get suitable quarters. The idea seemed to be that if someone could be found who would erect a building with a top floor for lodge purposes, the camp would take a long-term lease on the room, fit it up elaborately as a lodge room, and if it saw fit, rent the room out to a limited number of other lodges for meetings. Duluth camp figures on spending $1,000 or $2,000 for lodge furniture, having up to date cushioned seats for the members, and properly impressive seats, rostrums and pedestals, etc., for the officers.

H. E. Gujer, who is about to erect a building for the Anchor laundry, on Twentieth avenue west, close to Superior street, yesterday began figuring on providing Duluth camp with the home it desires. At present Mr. Gujer's plans extend only to a one-story building, which would be occupied by the laundry, but since the move of the Woodmen to get new quarters, Mr. Gujer has been figuring that if he can make a deal with the camp, he might as well add another story, and arrange it the way the camp would want. Should this be done, the camp will have quarters, 50 by 90 feet, and arranged as it pleases, heated with steam and with every modern convenience. Mr. Gujer will probably know within a few days whether or not he and the camp can get together. In the meantime his plans for a one-story building are ready.

UNION REVIVALS RESUME.

The union revival services of the Scandinavian churches in the West end have been so successful during the past three weeks that they will be resumed this evening, and will take place every remaining night this week. A large number of converts have been secured through these services, and each meeting proves successful.

This evening the service will be held at the Swedish M. E. church, corner of West Third street and Twentieth avenue, and Rev. F. O. Kling of the Swedish Mission church will be the speaker. Tomorrow evening the service will be at the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, corner of Twenty-first avenue west and First street; Thursday, at the Swedish Mission church, Twenty-first avenue west and Second street; Friday, at the Swedish Baptist church, corner of Nineteenth avenue west and First street, and Saturday, at the Salvation Army hall, corner of Seventeenth avenue west and Superior street.

TWENTIETH YEAR

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Bjorlin of 1828 West Second street celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their wedding a few nights ago at their home. Quite a number of friends and relatives were present and the evening was very delightfully spent. Short speeches were made by Rev. F. O. Kling, Charles Schell, Rev. K. E. Forsell and others. All were congratulatory in their tone and expressed the hope that Mr. and Mrs. Bjorlin will enjoy many more years of wedded bliss before the grim reaper shadows their page of life. Musical selections were given by M. J. Olson. At the close of the affair, refreshments were served.

In token of the feeling of friendship felt by the friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bjorlin were presented with a beautiful china closet and numerous pieces of cut glass.

Grocers to Rochester.

A number of the grocers of the West end left yesterday for the state convention of grocers at Rochester, Minn. They expect to be back Friday if the elaborate entertainment planned for them there will leave them able to get home. Those wo went are Henry Johnson of Sundeen & Johnson, C. W. Davidson, P. S. Sjosellus and J. W. Lent.

NEED FINANCES.

New Athletic Association Will Ask Merchants for Aid.

The Zenith Athletic association, formed recently among the young men of the West end, is in good condition save for its finances. To cover this defect, a committee will be sent out in a few days to the merchants of the West end soliciting funds for starting and helping to maintain the association. The business men were largely instigators of the movement and will be asked to help it along.

The association has secured an empty store building at the corner of Twenty-fifth avenue west and Superior street and hopes to fit it up with a good supply of apparatus for the work of training the young men physically. A meeting of the organization will be held at the rooms this evening. Thirty-five members are now on the rolls.

West End Shortrails.

Miss Jennie Morrison of 2824 West Third street, and Theodore E. Schnuckle will be married tomorrow evening at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. J. J. Gorby of 2805 West Third street received a telegram to the effect that her mother is not expected to live, and she left for her mother's bedside on Monday evening.

Miss Ida Johnson of the firm of Johnson Sisters, will leave Thursday afternoon for Denver, Colo., where she will make an extended visit.

C. D. Swanson has returned to the West end after a visit to his friends at Little Falls, Minn.

The Young People's society of the Swedish Mission church of Twenty-first avenue west and Second street, will give a concert at the church on the evening of March 8. A good program has been prepared, including some musical numbers by a large chorus organized for the occasion.

Leslie E. Benson, formerly with the Northern Pacific at the West end, has taken a position with the Stevenson mining company at its mine near Hibbing.

The Woman's Home Missionary society of Grace M. E. church is being entertained this afternoon by Mrs. J. R. Randall, 1717 Piedmont avenue.

The Epworth League of Grace church will give a social this evening.

The 9-months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Erickson of 2713½ Helm street died yesterday. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The funeral of Daniel Noel of Garfield avenue, who died in St. Luke's hospital a few days ago, took place yesterday afternoon from the Second Presbyterian church. Interment took place at Forest Hill cemetery.

Peter McHugh, who lives near the corner of First street on Twenty-second avenue west, is quite ill with quinsy.

Fred Bahr of Twenty-sixth avenue west and Fifth street is sick in the Northern Pacific hospital at Brainerd as the result of a fall on the sidewalk near his home.

No word as to whether he will come or not, has yet been received from Rev. A. Theodore Ekblad, called to the pastorate of Bethany Lutheran church.

Rev. M. Berglund of Minneapolis is in the West end this week in the interest of Bethel Academy of Minneapolis.

SOLAR MOTOR A SUCCESS.

Willcox, Ariz., Feb. 13.—The solar motor has proved a success in Arizona. As sunshine is its only fuel and its operation is automatic, there is practically no expense attending its operation beyond the initial cost of its installation. There are several solar motors in regular operation in Arizona. They are used principally for irrigation and farm work. One of these plants was installed on a big irrigated farm near Willcox early last summer and was run through the whole season. It operated a twelve-horse-power engine which pumped a four-inch stream of water from a depth of forty-two feet. It was so set as to blow off at 150 pounds pressure, and the sun's rays were so concentrated by the great circular mirror that the pressure was steadily maintained. It is claimed that these solar motors can be put to practical use in all parts of the Southwest, not only for irrigation purposes but for operating manufacturing concerns as well. There are very few cloudy days during the whole year. It is stated by experts that the amount of sunshine in Arizona, New Mexico and Western Texas is sufficient to keep a solar motor plant in operation twelve hours a day in summer and six hours a day in winter.

ACTION IS POSTPONED

On Erection of Village Hall and Jail at Cass Lake.

Cass Lake, Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—From present indications, the new village hall and jail which was contemplated for Cass Lake will not be erected—at least not for some time to come. Recently the village council secured lots and had plans drawn for a hall and a jail that would have been ample for all purposes. When the bids were opened last week, there was but one submitted, that of Mr. Manning of Bemidji, who offered to do the work for $6,945. This sum was considered altogether too high for the work. A. Siddon, president of the council, urged that, as the village election will be held within a month, it would be a wise move to leave the matter of a new jail and fire hall to the members who will be elected at that time, and his opinion prevailed.

William O'Neil, superintendent of logging under the Morris law, delivered a fine address at the Congregational church Sunday evening, taking for his subject Abraham Lincoln. The address was listened to by a large audience.

BOTH FOOD AND MEDICINE.

We like best to call Scott's Emulsion a food-medicine. It is a term that aptly describes the character and action of our Emulsion. More than a medicine—more than a food, yet combining the vital principles of both. It is for this reason that Scott's Emulsion has a distinct and special value in all wasting diseases. There is nothing better to remedy the troubles of imperfect growth and delicate health in children. The action of Scott's Emulsion is just as effective in treating weakness and wasting in adults.

WOMEN ARE PROTESTING

Say That Hucksters Make Altogether Too Much Noise.

Crusade in Eastern Cities May Strike Duluth Later.

Besides arguing for suffrage, entertaining state governors and making themselves "handy 'round the house," women have done many things and among the latest is to declare very forcibly against the old clothes man and the huckster.

Time and again they have declaimed against these grimy tradesmen on the ground that they are not always honest in their business dealings, but now members of the fair sex are waging war on them because they make too much noise.

The summer time usually sees some of the fruit peddlers in the residence districts of Duluth, crying their wares and there is talk to the effect that some women of this city will follow the example of those in New York and other Eastern cities in protesting against the noisy fish-mongers and fruit venders.

The women are arguing that the noise made by the peddlers causes epidemics of nervous prostration, not to mention those occasional shrewd trades wherein the housewife gets the worst of it.

The members of the West End Women's Republican association, New York, recenti met in the Hotel Astor there and drew up a protest which was sent to the board of aldermen, the health and police departments. Perhaps, "demme sir," Commissioner Bingham of the latter department will straighten matters out.

But now that the fair New Yorkers have called attention to the fact that the yells of the hucksters are very nerve-racking, women in large cities throughout the country are beginning to observe the same thing and anti-yelling legislation may sweep the country like inside tips on the stock market.

Will the Duluth council be asked to take a hand?

BALFOUR'S REPLY TO CHAMBERLAIN

Former Premier Speaks at Banquet of Conservatives at London.

London, Feb. 13.—Former Premier A. J. Balfour was the principal speaker at a banquet given last night by the Conservatives of the city of London to Sir Edward Clarke and Alban Gibbs. There were three hundred gentlemen present, including a number of the most prominent men of the city. Mr. Gibbs and Sir Edward responded briefly to toasts.

Mr. Balfour, whose speech had been anticipated with intense interest, as his reply to Joseph Chamberlain's pronouncement, spoke at length, confining himself mainly to fiscal questions. Mr. Balfour maintained that the results of the geneal election could not be accepted as a final verdict against fiscal reform. He declined to argue the question of protection versus free trade, but maintained that the policy he has hitherto advocated is altogether apart from the controversy. Mr. Balfour said his policy was designed so far as might be to diminish the burden on British industries which is hostile to the tariffs other industrial countries have imposed. In countries where hostile tariffs did not exist it was the intention to preserve neutral markets and at the same time preserve the interests of the British colonies on an equal footing. It was, he said, a policy intended to maintain an increased foreign market for British manufacturers. Protection was an attempt to keep the home market against equal competition from foreign countries.

Mr. Balfour said the sentiment favoring his policy was not decreasing, but increasing and unless it were carried out he believed, as the world became more and more industrialized and as civilized nations brought more and more the weaker nations under control, the question of markets for Great Britian would assume proportions which could not be ignored. The world saw great nations using not only diplomatic but their whole military and naval force in order to push their commerce. To fight for British markets might again be inevitable; but fighting is a barbarous method where negotiation might succeed, and negotiation never could succeed unless it were backed by some power of dealing with the country with whom we might be negotiating, if the latter asked extravagant or impossible terms.

Mr. Balfour said he viewed the industrial conditions in the United Kingdom with the greatest alarm. He said possibly nations which built up industries behind tariff walls were acting foolishly, but nevertheless they did it, and the result undoubtedly was injurious to the United Kingdom. Mr. Balfour asked was it possible to carry out retallation unless a general tariff formed a part of the scheme? He declined to commit himself on that point; but he said what the country had to make up its mind to was the question: "Is the end at which we are aiming worth making a sacrifice for?"

The cause of tariff reform, Mr. Balfour said, must be delayed some years; but in the meantime it was the duty of the opposition to the present government to point out the mistakes of the latter and direct the country along the best lines, looking to the future of the country.

Continuing, Mr. Balfour said that never had a government been returned with a larger majority without a cause which it wanted to carry out and without any great personality to guide it; bue he was ready to concede the present government even longer life than five years.

In conclusion, Mr. Balfour welcomed the workingmen in parliament, but said he doubted if the present labor representation was destined to introduce legislation beneficial to the country or which the Unionists could support.

GIRL BURNED BY ALCOHOL

Severe burns about the arms and shoulders were sustained by Gunda Hatterstern, a domestic in the family of William White of 1421 East Superior street, as the result of an accident, yesterday morning.

The girl attempted to fill a small lamp with wood alcohol. The lamp had been burning under a coffe urn, as the flames had disappeared, the girl thought the alcohol had been exhausted. As she poured in more of the liquid from a can, there was an explosion and in a moment her clothes were in flames.

Mrs. White was attracted by her screams, and with rare presence of mind, wrapped a rug about the girl, extinguishing the flames.

An examination at St. Mary's hospital, where she was taken, showed that much of the skin had been burned from her arms and shoulders. A report from the hospital this morning, stated that she was improving, and that her condition was much less critical than was at first believed.

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 13.—David Jones, a colored man, walked into a clothing store in this city, yesterday afternoon, and bought a pair of suspenders, costing 25 cents. He made the purchase just as the woman cashier was wrapping up the day's cash receipts to take to the bank. She used the same kind of paper to wrap up the money and the suspenders and got the two packages mixed. As a result the colored man got a even $1,600, and the girl gave the suspenders to the manager to take to the bank. After the mistake was discovered the whole store force turned out to watch trains and depots, but to no avail. At 5 o'clock Jones walked into the store with his wife, having discovered the mistake on opening the package.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

In a fire that destroyed the home of Mrs. Emily Holt at Murphysboro, Ill., Mrs. Holt and Mrs. Anna Barringer were burned to death Monday, and Willis Barringer was seriously burned. Mrs. Barringer attempted to light a fire with gasoline, supposing it to be coal oil.

A young woman whose name is given as Miss Ethel Johnson, aged 18, escaped from attendants at the Battle Creek sanitarium Monday and plunged into the river, swimming a quarter of a mile before being captured. The girl is said to be the daughter of a high official of the city of Belfast, Ireland. She is an expert swimmer, and when almost overtaken by a man pursuing her in a rowboat, escaped him several times by diving.

Because he threw a bucket of coal at her during a family quarrel Monday night at Minneapolis, Mrs. Edward Dickens seized a pistol and shot her husband three times, fatally injuring him. Dickens died soon after reaching the hospital. His wife was arrested charged with murder.

TITLE OF THE ISLE OF PINES

Should Rest With United States, Says Committee's Minority Report.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The senate, in executive session yesterday, made public the majority and minority reports from the committee on foreign relations on the treaty ceding Cuba the title of the Isle of Pines. The majority report has already been published. The minority report, which is signed by Senators Morgan and W. A. Clark, upholds the contentions of Americans who have invested on the island, that they were warranted in doing so by the language of the Platt amendment and the Cuban constitution, as well as early announcements made by Assistant Secretary of War Mekiejohn, that the title was invested in the United States by the treaty of Paris. The minority reports that if the island is turned over to Cuba it will be unsafe to leave Americans there, for if they were maltreated, this government would be compelled to protect them. It is stated that from the hour this government again sent soldiers to Cuba, the destiny of that republic would be that of Ireland or Egypt, and the republic would disappear.

Senator Morgan, who drafted the report, contends that the adjustment of title in fact amounts to a sale, which congress alone is empowered to make. In that respect the report says:

A BRILLIANT FUNCTION.

The brilliant midwinter luncheon of the club women of the Head of the Lakes at the Spalding yesterday was uncommonly strong proof of some of the ideas advanced by The Herald last Saturday in discussing "Woman's Clubs." It was declared then, and a careful reading of the report of the breakfast in last evening's Herald will bear it out, that women's clubs are of great use and benefit, not only to the women interested but to the community, the state and the nation.

In the papers read yesterday may be found a wealth of suggestions for the betterment of this community, and for the improvement of social and economic conditions generally. Practical suggestions, too, most of them, which need only a little energy back of their enforcement to become living factors for good.

In a measure, parts of some of the papers were reviews of what has already been done by the women in Duluth, and this included a longer roll of accomplishments than many men would have imagined possible. Again, other parts were hints at what the women intend to do in the future, and from these it appears that some very tangible plans have been formed, which deserve strong support from every citizen who wishes his community well.

There is a vast field of endeavor open to these women, a field in which men seldom venture of their own initiative, since they are either too busy with other things or think they are too busy, which amounts to the same thing. Yesterday's discussions showed that the women's organizations of this city are awake to their opportunities, and that without any great fanfare of trumpets they are quietly going about the business of taking advantage of them.

So that it is, altogether, a most excellent thing that this function should have been given, that the public might be made aware of what the women have done, are doing and propose to do. Their plans are all progressive. They are steps upward and onward. They should be commended for their courage, ingenuity and industry, and supported in every step toward the ideals they have formed.

A LITTLE HEROINE.

The heroes and heroines of story and imagination are usually fairly well matured, and in connection with childhood, as a rule, such a thing as heroism is not often expected. Occasionally things happen however, that show heroism not to be a thing of growth but of character.

One of these things happened a few days ago out in the East end, and The Herald told about it last night. Ten-year-old Agnes Alexander and 5-year-old Willie Broughton were playing on the ice over Chester creek, when both broke through. While Chester creek is small, it contains many deep pools, and the children went into one of these.

The story of how 10-year-old Agnes, with a presence of mind that many much older people might envy, worked desperately until she had saved her helpless little companion, was told last night, and it was a story of courage, persistence and fevered energy seldom equalled. Wet to the skin, chilled to the bone, but forgetful of herself in her single thought of saving her smaller and more helpless companion, the little girl tugged away until finally she dragged the boy up out of the water and upon the firm ice.

Then they ran away home, their clothing fast freezing upon them, and presently they were wrapped in warm blankets, drinking hot liquids, and telling their relatives all about it.

In spite of the hardships incidental to this experience, so long as they came out of it whole and well it will be a wholesome happening for both. It was not surprising to read, at the bottom of the story, that the little girl who proved herself to be a heroine in this manner has the blood of heroes in her veins, and that she is the grand-daughter of one of the gallant commanders of the Confederacy.

MILD WINTER WEATHER.

It is an old superstition that "a green Christmas maketh a fat graveyard." So often is it repeated that most people have come to the belief that there is something unwholesome about mild winter weather. The result is that they are prevented from enjoying the delights of an open winter, because they are tortured by fears that its "unseasonableness" makes it "unhealthy." Not even the fact that they save money on coal bills and clothing bills is enough to keep them from longing for seasonable weather, which means cold, frosty conditions that eat into the coal pile and render an outdoor appearance desperately uncomfortable.

However, people are taking notice that the extra ordinary spell of open weather in the first half of the winter did not result in a corresponding increase in sickness. In fact, the record of vital statistics in New York showed that the January death rate was the lowest in five years. It was very low in Duluth, also. There was a notable decrease in the deaths from pneumonia, attributed to the mild weather.

It seems altogether likely that the thing that makes people look upon mild weather as deadly is that mild weather breeds carelessness, carelessness breeds colds, and colds breeds innumerable hordes of the ills "that flesh is heir to." If people were as careful of themselves in mild weather as they are in cold weather, the high winter temperatures would prove even healthier than the low ones. But every time the thermometer climbs up into hospitable regions, somebody goes out without an overcoat, leaves his throat uncovered when he has been in the habit of covering it, or otherwise carelessly disposes of his person. Then, of course, he catches cold, and everybody swears that mild weather is unwholesome in winter time.

Care is the best medicine. The decrease of pneumonia may be safely attributed to the fact that people have been scared by its prevalence into taking better care of themselves. This same care, which warded off pneumonia and doubtless saved many lives, also kept off ordinary colds, which have an embarrassing habit of developing into worse things if left to themselves. If people were careful about their bodies in winter time, whether it is warm or cold, they would have less sickness, and they would be in a position to appreciate what a blessing it is to have a little let-up in the rigor of a northern winter, that lessens the drain on the coal pile and permits outdoor traveling in comfort.

THE PEOPLE PAY.

In the face of the impending coal strike the great coal-consuming public of the nation is helpless, and must stand looking on while its comfort, well-being and prosperity are being seriously threatened.

All men familiar with the greed, rapacity and piratical propensities of the coal barons will sympathize with the workers who have threatened the strike. It is a case of daily bread and decent living on one side against unholy and criminal profits on the other.

Yet so serious and so widely felt are the effects of a coal strike that the nation, remembering those struggles of the past, shudders with apprehension at the prospects of another.

The coal operators have defied the laws of God and man in their search for greater profits. No other wielders of monopoly have oppressed their workers so bitterly and plundered the public so unmercifully. Public sympathy cannot fail to be with the men in their fight for better things. Yet the knowledge that it is the consumer that must pay the price, whatever the result of the struggle, causes the public to cling to the hope that in some way the trouble may be averted, and the coal operators forced to concede enough to satisfy the workers.

A coal strike does not stop at a suspension of industry in the coal mines. It strikes at the roots of industry everywhere. It brings cold and bitter want to the poor. If the strikers gain what they seek, the public pays for it. If they lose, the public pays the losses of the coal barons. Many of the poor in cities will long remember the last great strike, when the price of coal soared to heights impossible to many and burdensome to all.

That a strike is menaced cannot be denied. The operators are hoarding coal, erecting stockades and increasing the numbers of their armed guards. The men, having failed in getting what they sought, are angry and bitter, and ready for a fight. From some quarter must come efforts looking to a settlement of the difficulty, in the interests not only of the coal miners but of the great coal-consuming public compared to which the miners and the operators are as a handful of sand to an ocean beach.

A floating paragraph says: "Nature made coal free; men mine it for 60 cents a ton; railroad labor gets 10 cents a ton for hauling it; you pay $9.50 for it."

Though the strikes of 1900 and 1902 did not increase the cost of mining coal more than 15 to 20 cents, the price of coal has averaged over $1 a ton more since 1902 than it did before 1900. Meanwhile Reading coal railroad stock has gone from $19.50 in 1899 and $24.50 in 1901 to $164 this year, while Lackawanna has gone up from $157 to $474.75.

The people suffer, and the people pay.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"The one regret of the loggers is that the February cold spell did not come earlier in the winter," said H. R. King of Grand Rapids, Minn., at the Lenox. Mr. King is doing considerable logging on the Indian reservation this year. "If matters could have been just twisted around, putting the cold weather in the fall and bringing the heavy fall of snow later in the year, instead of the snow first, the lumbermen would have been better satisfied.

"The ground in the woods has been soft all winter, seriously interfering with lumbering operations. The success the individual contractors have met with so far this season has depended almost entirely upon whether their roads were through a swampy district or where the land was high. If the latter was the case there was no difficulty experienced in making roads over which to haul logs; but through the swamps it was so soft that hauling has been very hard.

"A remarkable instance of this softness of the ground was shown a week or two ago up near Grand Rapids, when a horse driven by one of the lumbermen, broke through the snow covering a swamp, and became so deeply entangled in the mud and water underneath, that it had to be killed on the spot. The man was driving along one of the regular logging roads in a swampy district and turned out of the beaten track to let a load of logs go by. No sooner was the horse well off the road than it broke through the thin ice covering the swamp, and sank almost out of sight. The more the men tried to free the animal the worse it got mired, and shooting was the only remedy. This is but a sample of what the men in the woods have had to contend with this year.

"The only way a road for hauling logs over could be made was by tramping the snow. This process is not as expensive as some people imagine. A gang of men go over the road and stamp the snow and kick it about. They do not necessarily have to pack it down to allow the ground underneath to freeze. If the snow is merely dislodged from its original position and scattered around a little it seems that the cold can penetrate the covering more easily, giving the ground a chance to freeze. Some loggers will get more logs out this season than they first planned on, and some less, but up in the reservation districts there will be no serious losses. Quite a lot of logging is being done on the reservation this year.

"The ore situation up around Grand Rapids is very promising. The township in which Bovey is located has just as good mines as any on the Mesaba range. Explorations are meeting with good results."

"Cuba is the Mecca of Americans who are traveling for pleasure this winter," said Harry L. Haskins of Chicago, traveling passenger agent of the West Shore railroad, at the Spaldnig. "The movement of tourists to the island is heavier this year than it ever was before. Every steamship carrying passengers is crowded each trip to its full capacity. There is scarcely room on board for those who want to make the voyage.

"This means a heavy travel over the railroads leading to Florida, and consequently they are doing a good business. The Florida resorts are also quite popular with the people. A trip to Cuba generally includes a visit to the chief points of interest in Florida, and there are a good many such in the state. Florida and Cuba are coming to be more popular as winter pleasure grounds, and people flock there from all directions. It makes a very nice trip to visit the South and then board a steamer for Havana.

"Passenger travel in other directions just now is more of a business nature, for it is the wrong season for tourists in the West and North. Railroads out this way have no kick coming, however, for they did a fine business last summer and fall, and are looking for a heavy patronage the coming spring and summer. This seeing America first idea is taking a strong hold on rich Americans, in the East as well as elsewhere, and the roads and communities in the interior are profiting thereby. There are so many interesting places in the United States that one may visit that one would naturally think the average American would want to see his own country first before starting for some foreign land with his hard-earned coin."

"Miss Lulu McConnell, the charming little soubrette of the B. C. Whitney 'Piff! Paff! Pouff!' company, to be at the Lyceum the latter part of this week, has a very bad case of the stocking habit," said W. J. Benedict, business manager of the company, at the St. Louis. "Most of the divinities of the farce or musical comedy are noted for the elegance of superabundance of their hosiery, but Miss McConnell is fairly at the top of the heap in this respect.

"Her collection is simply bewildering in its profusion and unlimited variety. Some of the colors are carnation pink, Stygian, black, canine ochre, crushed strawberry, peaches and cream, Asiatic elephant, Bob Fitzsimmons red, Coney Island blue, country green, striped tiger, Panama fever yellow, Confederate gray, studious brown, Jamaica ginger, absinthe apalescent, scarlet, jaundice tan, and, in brief, the colors of the rainbow have to take a rear seat when brought into comparison with the multifarious hues of Miss McConnell's hosiery.

"She is said to be the proud possessor of more stockings than any other two actresses extant. Her girl friends say it is impossible for her to pass a dry goods store without her unstaiable craving for stockings overpowering her, and that she goes in, through force of habit, and invariably makes a purchase of more hosiery. If she doesn't let up pretty soon we will have to be charging her for excess baggage."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

A woman has less sense than a man, but she always acts more sensibly.

Most of the things we'd like to have is only because somebody else has them.

It's queer how easy it is to explain to a woman the things you can't explain to yourself.

A man has to be a good deal of a pessimist not to like the world when he imagines people envy him.

THE WEATHER

Cover up your strawberry plants and take in your early bananas tonight, for the weather man says a cold wave is sweeping down upon us out of the Northwest and that by tomorrow morning the thermometer will get down to 20 degs. below zero. The cold wave is coming from such places as Winnipeg, where it was 30 degs. below this morning, and Prince Albert, where it was 42 degs. below, and while it will not be that bad here, it will be cold enough to notice, and there will be a brisk northwest wind to help the cold out. This morning it was mild, 9 degs. above zero at 7 o'clock. The coldest last night was 1 deg. above zero, and the highest yesterday was 16 degs. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"A slight barometric depression has moved its center from Utah to Oklahoma, while another disturbance has advanced from Florida to the Virginia coast, the latter storm causing rain in Atlantic states, while the former is responsible for snow or rain in most sections from the Mississippi river westward to the Rocky mountains. A strong high pressure and cold wave area has developed in the Northwest, attended by temperatures ranging from 3 degs. to 26 degs. in North Dakota and Montana, and from 10 degs. to 42 degs. in Western Canada. This cold wave will move to Duluth and vicinity tonight and by Wednesday morning the temperature will likely be close to 20 degs. below zero."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

MERRY JINGLES.

Somerville Journal: It is ten to one that a man is happily married if he can truthfully say that he has never seen his wife in curl papers.

Philadelphia Press: "It must be hard on the people of London to have a chief magistrate who is always like a bad dream."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Well, isn't he a knight mayor?"

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "What's your advice, Miss Paisley? Do you think a mustache would be becoming to me?"

"Why not rent one and see?"

Washington Star: "Why does all the world love a lover?"

"Because," answered Miss Cayenne, "it flatters our vanity to observe people who are in love, and think how much more sensible we are by comparison."

Philadelphia Press: "Is your mistress at home?" inquired Mrs. Borem, standing in the shadow of the doorway.

"I don't know, ma'am," replied the servant. "Can't tell whether she's at home or not till I get a good look at ye. If ye hov a wart on the side o' yer nose, ma'am, she ain't."

"She makes me tired," exclaimed the woman on the other side of the back yard fence. "The little limps stone our pigeons and tie tin cans to our dog's tail, just the same as the kids in the tenement house across the alley."

From which we learn that no boy is a hero to the next door neighbors.

Apostrophe to the Comma.

O mystic mark!
O symbol dark—
Beyond all comprehension!
How dost thou haunt—
Black, mean and gaunt—
My dreams! Avaunt,
Thou devil's own invention!

O fearful sign!
O thou malign
And impious creation!
Thy sable brow
Frowns on me now—
Oh, spare me, thou
Grim Goth of punctuation!

On printed page,
With shame and rage,
From thy type-fortified position,
I see thee grin—
Thou son of sin!
With soundless din,
And I consign thee to perdition.

But when again
We meet—ah, then
My proofs will prove your Waterloo!
With hearty zeal
And stroke of steel
I'll pen the del—
E on you—blessed institution!

L'ENVOI.

O curly caudled little dot,
Thou mak'st us say what we would not—
And what we would we cannot say,
For thou art ever in the way;
And there is no good in thee.

Use of Money in Elections.

Detroit Free Press: The use of large sums of money in elections is admittedly a menace to free institutions. Heavy contributors are generally prompted by a desire for individual gain. The interests thus represented are enabled to dominate political organizations, centralizing power and depriving the many of their political rights for the benefit of the few. It is useless to assert that practices of this nature cannot be eliminated. England has demonstrated the possibilities in this direction so conclusively as to leave dissenters no ground on which to stand. The corrupt-practices act in force there places restrictions upon candidates and their supporters which make the use of large amounts impossible. Responsibility is fixed with a certainty that leaves no room for evasion, and the result has been a complete transformation.

Ourselves.

Dean Stanley: Rest assured that our happiness, our dignity and our welfare, here and hereafter, depend not on what our ancestors were thousands of years ago, not on the construction of our outward frames—nor even on those high mental gifts of intellect, mind and genius—no, not on any of these things, wonderful as they are, and greatly as they contribute to our happiness, does the real destiny of man or of nations rest; but on our moral nature itself, on what we are, on what we do, on what we admire, on what we detest, on what we love, on what we hate.

When using baking powder it is always economy to buy the Royal.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

J. F. Cargill of Minneapolis is visiting his brother-in-law, Mr. Fisher, of the Northwestern Fuel company.

Work is now going actively on Lake avenue for the large ice warehouse which Booth of Chicago is erecting near Truelsen's fish establishment. This building will be 80 feet long by 53 feet wide and 22 feet high, and will be spacious enough to store 2,000 tons of ice. Near the ice house Mr. Booth will erect a freezing house, where he will store large quantities of fish. It is estimated that this enterprise, including land, buildings, boats and stock, will represent an investment of over $50,000.

Information comes from the office of a prominent railroad contractor that the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad will build to Duluth. It is said that a survey from Taylor's Falls will be begun within two weeks, and that there will be no hitch until the tracks are laid to Duluth.

Lumbermen report that the cut this year will exceed that of last by many millions of feet, and may, perhaps, be the largest for several years past. One Duluthian has 300 men and thirty teams of horses, besides several ox teams, in the woods, and estimates his cut at 20,000,000 feet.

Dr. Walbank has rented the West End hotel to Fred Russell. He has also rented the store for a clothing business to a Montevideo merchant.

The mild weather has given all outdoor work a stimulus, and few men who want to work are idle in Duluth.

Capt. Henri Dewitt has received his commission as commanding officer of Company K.

F. W. Collins writes from Groton, N. Y., that his health has improved wonderfully, and that he will not be home before the nesting of the robins.

The duties of E. E. Sherwin are manifold at present. George M. Smith and Charlie Peterson are both in St. Paul tobogganing, and Ed looks after the interests of numerous express companies, and also a railroad. And Ed has recently been married, too.

Ex-Governor Horatio Seymour of New York died yesterday. Deep regret is expressed in Duluth for the champion of the Erie canal, who always had a good word to say for the waterways.

MINNESOTA COMMENT.

Crookston Times: It is interesting to gossip as to the gubernatorial situation; it is the complexion of the next legislature, however, that means most to the people of Northern Minnesota.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Talking about "political assassins," Joel Heatwole is working hard for first prize. His greatest grief is that he fails so often.

Little Falls Democrat: Editor Mann has done some mighty shady things, but it is a question after all whether you could call it a felony to take candy away from a baby.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: Comes again the effort to pull J. Adam Bede into the state political game and run him for governor on the Republican ticket, but the little congressman is far too wise to give the opening desired by his Duluth enemies. Don't want to be governor, nohow.

Greenbush Journal: There are many great men born in the world who imagine that they are born with genius and lie down on the sofa and wait for an inspiration, until some other fellow rises by hard labor to a competency, buys the sofa and leads the waiting genius out by the ear.

Rochester Post and Record: It is the height of presumption for any court to assume, even as a postulate, that good Deacon Rockefeller knows anything about a wicked trust business.

St. Hilaire Spectator: The game of "high finance," in which you get the other fellow's money for nothing and loan it back to him at a high rate, is not as good a game as it used to be. In other words, the grafters are having trouble.

Brainerd Dispatch: J. Adam Bede tells the Washington people that the world is growing better. Adam has always advocated universal love, in a neighborly way of course, and he has evidently been made to believe that the time has arrived when we will all "love one another." There are some parts of Adam's congressional district where this feeling does not exist.

Red Lake Courier: If the anti-pass order ever becomes popular in Minnesota there will be a lot of walking delegates in future political conventions.

Henderson Review: An early convention is the cry of some of the Republican leaders. Are they afraid the people will become interested and dispossess them if the convention date is put off until the usual time?

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The Fergus Falls Journal and the Willmar Gazette both agree that Senator Hawkins is too close to the corporations to be acceptable as lieutenant governor, while the Princeton Union gives him unqualified endorsement.

Virginia Enterprise: The name of J. Adam Bede is being toyed with in connection with the gubernatorial nomination by some of his friends and by others who would like to get him out of the congressional race for personal reasons. But so far as heard from J. Adam is better satisfied with his present position than are some of those who do not hold postmasterships and other offices at his disposal.

A Canny Candidate.

Harper's Weekly: A practical politician of the first water came to light in a small Indiana town not long ago. In this town there is an officer, designated as inspector of streets and roadways, who receives the munificent salary of $250 per year. As the opposing political parties are very nearly balanced in this town, there is keen competition, so that when this office became vacant and the authorities ordered an election to fill it, there was a lively campaign for this small plum, no other elections being near. The Democratic candidate was a rather shrewd old fellow by the name of Ezekiel Hicks, and it looked as though he would be successful, as a neat little sum had been subscribed and turned over to him as a campaign fund. To the astonishment of everybody, however, he was defeated.

"I can't account for it," one of the Democratic leaders said, gloomily. "With that money we should have won. How did you lay it out, Ezekiel?"

"Hum," Ezekiel said, slowly, pulling his whisker. "Yer see, that office only pays $250 a year salary, an' I didn't see no sense in payin' $300 out to get the office, so I jest bought me a little truck-farm instead."

Whistler's Modesty.

At the Whistler exhibition in Boston a woman said:

"In Paris Mr. Whistler and an English painter got into a turbulent argument about Velasquez at a studio tea.

"Mr. Whistler at one point in the argument praised himself extravagantly. The Englishman, listening, sneered, and said at the end:

"'Isn't it, though?' said Mr. Whistler; 'I know, in my case, I should grow intolerably conceited.'"

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Pillager Leader: Duluth wants the state Republican convention this year, and in our humble opinion she should have it. The cool lake breeze ought to help some to keep the delegate's fever of enthusiasm for his particular candidate within proper bounds.

Mankato Free Pr
ald attributes the Stillwater Gazette:

they fear a shortag
of ice this summer, hasn't frozen over the Michigan peach
—as usual.

Minneapolis Telegram: How does the idea of holding the next state Republican convention in Duluth strike you?

Breckenridge Gazette: We would like to see the next Republican state convention held at Duluth. That enterprising city has always "made good" in the matter of entertainment whenever given a chance, and as the third city in the state she should be given a chance a little more frequently hereafter.

Brainerd Dispatch: Mayor Cullum, Democratic mayor of Duluth, has been re-elected, and even the Republicans up that way don't seem to be sorry. A good mayor is a joy forever in Duluth, regardless of politics.

Ortonville Herald-Star: The Duluth Herald thinks there are a lot of newspapers that want to save Frank Eddy for a more auspicious year. Well, we have generally used Frank Eddy when hope was at the very lowest ebb, and thrown him down when there was a cinch in sight.

Boston Globe: If Proctor Knott were alive now, he would undoubtedly be interested to know that building plans already announced for 1906 in Duluth foot up to $1,250,000, and that hundreds of other plans are incubating.

Winona Republican-Herald: The Duluth papers have taken a fall out of Editor Heatwole of Northfield for saying that nobody can go to the legislature from Duluth without the railroad or steel trust stamp. The Herald twits Joel with being only an eleventh-hour reformer, and the News-Tribune insinuates he doesn't know a blamed thing about the Duluth country. What's the use of taking Joel so seriously anyway?

Virginia Enterprise: Since his announcement that he considered a senatorial toga would make a fitting halo for his intellectual brow, Representative Dowling gives utterance in the last issue of the Eveleth Star that he "admires The Duluth Evening Herald. It is now up to The Herald to reciprocate in kind and complete the circuit; it takes two to form a well-balanced mutual admiration society.

Ely Miner: Duluth is being prominently mentioned as the place for holding the next state convention. Duluth is the ideal spot for gatherings of this kind, and we sincerely hope it may secure the honor.

DETAILS OF THE MUR...

...derer Had One and Possibly More Previous Victims.

Details of the shooting of Thomas Johnson, the Duluth engineer, in a Denver saloon, last Thursday night, are contained in copies of Denver papers received in the city yesterday.

The shooting took place in the Cottage saloon, at 1720 Curtis street, Denver, and Policeman Charles Secrest of the Denver police force, is under arrest charge dwith the crime.

"Secrest, who was off duty at the time, was standing at the bar, and he insisted on shaking dice to determine who should pay for the drinks for the house. Thomas Johnson, among others, yielded to his desire. They shook the dice. Se...rest lost. He bought the drin... insisted that the dice be ...done, and Secrest lost ...ught the drinks a second ...n lost his temper. He ...lozen words of abuse. ...him there was no ...for Secrest himself shake the dice. ...n of a madman in ...drew his big Colt's re... fired twice. Johnson fell ...floor with two bullets in his ...dy.

"Patrolman Durkin, who had been trying to persuade Secrest to go home, rushed into the saloon while the grayish smoke was still coming from the barrel of the revolver. Secrest waved the weapon menacingly, and Durkin, knowing just how desperate Secrest is, went to a telephone and notified police headquarters.

"The ambulance, with Surgeon Preston, and the patrol wagon with a squad of officers, under Sergeant Dougal, were rushed to the scene. Sergeant Joseph McIntyre, who heard the shots, hurried to the place also, and when these officers arrived Secrest was still standing over his victim, waiving his revolver.

"Sergeants Dougal and McIntyre walked up to the drink-crazed man, together with Police Surgeon Preston, and Secrest said: 'I don't give a ——, right or wrong.'

"He told the sergeants to look behind the bar and they would find the revolver he claimed Johnson had used. They found two weapons in a drawer, but neither of these gave the slightest evidence of having been used. One was a very small weapon, and the other was an old cap-and-ball affair used in the Mexican war."

Johnson was the second victim of Secrest's revolver. On the night of October 31, 1900, Henry Reed, an Omaha electrician, was shot and killed in another saloon by the same officer. The details of the shooting were strikingly similar to those of Johnson's murder. Reed and Secrest had been drinking and shaking dice together, when a dispute arose. Reed resented Secrest's abuse, and the latter drew his revolver and shot him dead, walking out of the saloon. He was later arrested, but discharged on the plea of self defense. A singular coincidence is the fact that an eye witness in each case was named Dixon. Joseph L. Dixon saw the first murder and A. T. Dixon saw the second.

Secrest had the reputation of being one of the bravest, and most fearless officers on the force when sober, but a perfect demon when under the influence of liquor. He had promised Chief Delaney never to touch liquor again, and had been kept on the force in spite of his occasional sprees. He was dismissed after the shooting of Reed, but reappointed a few months later.

He had been sober for months previous to the crime of last Thursday, but the illness of his daughter with appendicitis, had started him drinking again, and he was suspended from the force two days before the shooting, for intoxication. His spree had lasted about three days when the fatal shot was fired.

Since his arrest, rumors have been rife in Denver, that Secrest was a participant in one of the bloodiest shooting affrays of the early days in Kansas. He was one of the men accused of killing three men and wounding three others at Coranado in 1887. Evidence sufficient to convict him was not secured, but as a result of the affair, he is claimed to have moved to Denver.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict against Secrest, stating that the death of Johnson had been caused from gunshot wounds from a gun held by Secrest, and that the evidence further showed the shooting to be felonious. The charge of murder in the first degree will be laid against Secrest, and the only defense likely to be put up is the plea of insanity.

IT'S DIFFERENT

Since Coffee Left.

A Wisconsin lady says of coffee:

"From childhood I had been used to drinking coffee, and grew very fond of it.

"When in course of time I began to suffer from stomach and bowel troubles with accompanying headaches, pains in the chest and loss of appetite and flesh, I was slow to suspect that coffee was the cause. My sister, who had used and knew the virtues of Postum Food Coffee, persuaded me to try it. I gave up the old kind of coffee with reluctance, thinking that I would never find a hot table drink that I would relish so well.

"I was therefore most agreeably surprised to discover that Postum when properly made—thoroughly boiled, was so very palatable. It proved to be a rich, creamy, delicious beverage, soothing and quieting to the nerves and healthily invigorating. I also found it nutritious, as the old kind of coffee never was.

"Postum began to help me from the very beginning, and I was thus encouraged to continue its use, until, I am happy to say, it landed me safely in Wellville, where I have been for three years and where I propose to remain. I find it a glorious and happy place to be in.

"I never before had such good health as I have now. No trace of my former ailments remain. I have put on weight until I am almost 'fleshy' and my complexion has resumed the bloom of my girlhood days.

"My mother lost her life (as I can see now) through coffee drinking. Her ailments were precisely the same as mine were, but no one suspected at that time that they were due to coffee, and she continued to use it, her health growing steadily worse and worse till death put an end to her sufferings. If I had only known then what I do now, she might be living to this day.

"My father was also a great coffee drinker and tobacco user as well, and, I am sorry to say, too fond of liquor. He lives with me and I have taught him to drink Postum, with the result that he uses much less tobacco and has entirely lost his appetite for strong drink, to the great improvement of his health. I feel most sincerely grateful to the discoverer of Postum Food Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

IMPURE CANDY TO GO.

Dairy and Food Department to Enforce the New Law.

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—Candy brilliantly colored with coal tar dye will be outlawed at the end of this month, and merchants who have it on hand have only two weeks to dispose of their candy.

The new code, which goes into effect March 1, makes the use of coal tar dye prima facie evidence of adulteration and subjects the manufacturer or seller to fine or imprisonment. Under the old law it was up to the dairy and food department to prove that the use of coal tar dye was injurious. Although it is generally admitted that the use of the dye is injurious, to prove this in court is not always an easy matter.

It is comparatively easy to detect the presence of the dye, and Commissioner E. K. Slater says taht the law will be enforced without mercy. The law says "no person shall manufacture and sell adulterated confectionery; and confectionery shall be deemed adulterated if it contains terra alba, barytes, talle, coal tar dye, or any other poisonous or injurious coloring matter, or any substance injurious to health."

This will make a misdemeanor of the sale of all candy not made from pure ingredients and colored with anything else than vegetable color.

WILLIAMS DIES ON THE SCAFFOLD

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—William Williams was hanged at 12:30 this morning for the murder, on the morning of April 13, 1905, of John Keller, aged 16, and his mother, Mrs. Frederick S. Keller. Williams met his fate stoically, maintaining to the last the indifference which has characterized his actions during his trial and imprisonment. Williams originally was sentenced to be hanged on Aug. 9, but was reprieved in order to allow an appeal to the supreme court. The application for a new trial was denied and the governor fixed the day of execution for Feb. 13. His attorneys did not cease their efforts to save their client until the last, appearing before United States Judge Lochren at Minneapolis yesterday in an effort to secure a write of habeas corpus, in order to take the case to the supreme court. This was the first execution in St. Paul for twelve years.

NIGHTS OF UNREST.

No Sleep, No Rest, No Peace for the Sufferer from Kidney Troubles.

No peace for the kidney sufferer—
Pain and distress from morn to night.
Get up with a lame back,
Twinges of beakache bother you all day.
Dull aching breaks your rest at night,
Urinary disorders add to your misery.
Get at the cause—cure the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills will work the cure.
They're for the kidneys only—
Have made great cures in Duluth.

J. Vaughn of 532 First street west, Duluth, Minn., says: "In the summer of 1898 I told the people of Duluth through our local newspapers of the splendid results I had obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. My trouble was a kidney and bladder disorder that was painful and annoying, and had clung to me for a considerable time. The kidney secretions were quite irregular and contained a sediment which varied in color and condition. There were dull, heavy pains through the loins, and I was very restless at night, being unable to remain in one position for any length of time. The trouble was becoming worse, when I was induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I continued taking them until entirely relieved of the affliction. I am glad to say that the cure has been permanent, and will always be pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

LIBERALS IN CONTROL

Premier Campbell-Bannerman Will Have Majority of 85.

London, Feb. 13.—The fact that the Liberals have a clear majority of eighty-five over all combinations between Unionists, Nationalists and Laborites in the new parliament, has completely upset calculations as to the course of events or probable legislation during the coming session of parliament. Before the extent of the victory had been realized it was expected that the policy of the government on many important issues would be largely controlled by the Labor party and to a lesser extent by the Nationalists, or by a combination of the two. With a clear majority of eighty-five behind him Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman can carry out the general Liberal program without running much risk. But there are questions on which the party is not a unit and which will cause the session to be troublous if not stormy. One of the first and by no means the easiest task of the new government will be the tackling of the education acts of 1902-3, which have been the causes of so many long debates both in and out of parliament. Those who are demanding amendments to the acts claim that the mandate from the electors is clever, "genuine popular control: No religious tests for teachers." There are differences of opinion as to how the changes are to be carried out, but on the principles they agree. In detail they ask for a great proportion of the cost of education to be a charge upon the imperial exchequer; the training of teachers to be more of an imperial than a local charge; the appointment of teachers to be under local control, but that no conditions of employment shall include the compulsory giving or receiving of denominational religious istruction; that parents have the right to send their children to some other place than the school for the purpose of receiving specific denominational instruction at the hands of their religious pastors; subject to this, elementary schools to be opened each morning with a simply family religious service. In all this they expect powerful resistance on the part of Anglicans, with possible combinations against them among other denominations. In any event a change in the education act is a pledge to which the Liberal party in general, and the premier in particular, are positively committed.

That the act will be changed by a large majority vote in the commons goes without saying, but the difficulty in carrying out the pledge to the people comes when the amendments reach the house of lords.

The disestablishment of the Anglican church in Wales is another question bound to be raised, on which the different denominations will clash, but it is rather early to forecast the government's intentions in respect to this.

Changes in the Irish policy leading to what the premier describes as "that larger policy" may be expected. Home rule is still far off, though Irishmen profess to have some hope as a result of the introduction of a strong Labor party. The Labor candidates were supported by Irishmen as against Liberals, they favoring an Irish parliament. With the support of but fifty Laborites the Nationalists cannot hope to attain their ends, but in addition to Labor there exists in the present parliament a home rule element inside the Liberal party. Should Labor gain strength and elect another hundred members at the next election, absolute home rule will be in sight. Modified home rule, putting an Irish house absolutely subservient to the imperial parliament, might be an outcome of the life of the present parliament and be accepted as a step by the Nationalists and as a compromise by the house of lords. There is no reason to believe that Labor will lose the strength that it has gained. In fact, the leaders have announced their intention of contesting every bye-election where they have the faintest hopes of success, and home rulers claim that absolute home rule will come with the next elections. The greatest question at present, however, is: What will be the policy of the fifty Labor members who have secured seats at Westminster? There are two distinct groups of Labor members, but on the main subjects in which Labor is interested they are agreed. The parliamentary committee of the Trades' Union congress which endorsed thirty of the fifty success Labor candidates has drawn up a general program which includes a trades disputes bill, amendment of the compensation act, the amendment of the truck act, amendment of the factory acts, amendment of the unemployed act, abolition of Chinese labor in South Africa, establishment of a state pension fund at 60 years of age, extension of the housing of the working classes act, establishment of an eight-hour working day adult suffrage and generally for the maintenance of free trade, amendment of the education act, popular control of the liquor trade, extension of municipal trading and nationalization of means of transit and natural resources in the kingdom. The trades disputes bill is placed first by Laborites as it aims at restoring the legal status of trades unions, which was denied by the Taff Vale decision.

Among the amendments proposed to the compensation act is one providing "that some system of state compulsory insurance should be established which will secure that employes shall have paid the necessary funds to compensate for all accidents or injury, or for diseases arising out of or incidental to the nature of any employment."

The amendment to the truck act aims at "preventing stoppages of any description from wages;" the amendment of the unemployed act is desired "so that employment can be found at trade union rates for those unable to find work." The old age pension proposal is the establishment of a scheme to provide all citizens over 60 years of age with a pension of at least 5 shillings a week, the entire cost to be borne by the imperial exchequer. The miners' delegates brought the eight-hour working day to the front, but the Trades Union congress proposes that any union, if it so wishes can have its trade exempted. There is also a difference of opinion respecting adult suffrage, some of the unions favoring women suffrage and others opposing it. Labor members endorsed by the congress are pledged to an amendment to the education act securing educational freedom and state maintenance; compulsory attendance up to 16 years of age; secular education in state supported schools; establishment of training schools for teachers. Beyond the program outlined labor members are free to support or oppose the government but generally they will be guided by their leaders.

Keir Hardie, the leader of the group supported by the labor representative committee, in an article, has pointed out that he and his followers have "no option but to sit in opposition, since to do anything else would be to belie their professions of political independence. In all probability a sessional policy will be decided upon.

"Needless to say each measure introduced by the government will be judged upon its merits, but from time to time the party will be under the necessity of taking it bearings and of deciding how far its duty consists in giving a general support to the government or of entering upon a militant policy to force the hands of the government in respect to certain measures." Mr. Hardie expects the first conflict between the Labor members and the government to arise over the question of legislation to restore freedom of action to the trade unions.

Labor has many questions which they will ask parliament to consider and if the Labor members have their way, a great part of the session will be devoted to their bills.

EARLY STATE CONVENTION.

Republican Politicians Favor Holding Next One in June.

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—It is practically assured that there will be an early Republican state convention. A gathering of politicians at the Merchants yesterday was practically unanimous for an early convention and the earlier the better. June 1 was the date suggested, and by everyone canvassed it was stated that the date should not be later than June 30. One of the politicians close to the state central organization stated that a tentative meeting of the committee had been held and that it was the consensus of opinion that the date of the convention should not be later than June 30 and June 1 was given the preference.

Among those present at the Merchants were George W. Sommerville, Frank Clague, N. F. Hugo and Julius Schmahl. The meeting was accidental, as all of them were here to attend the Lincoln banquet to be held in Minneapolis last evening. Senator Sommerville stated that he was of the opinion that sentiment in the state had not at present crystalized as far as the gubernatorial situation was concerned.

"I am convinced," he said, "that this next convention will see fewer instructed delegations than many in past years. The man who is nominated for governor on the Republican ticket this summer must stand for something, he is not going to be a party-made candidate. This talk that Governor Johnson cannot be beaten and that a Republican candidate cannot be elected is all nonsense. With the proper candidate the party can be led to victory at the polls next fall. I believe that there is a growing sentiment among the Republicans of the state to forget party unpleasantness and gird themselves for a good contest."

Julius Schmahl, candidate for secretary of state, is among those urging an early convention. Frank Clague, candidate for the senate, and N. F. Hugo, who aspires to be the next speaker of the house, are also strongly in favor of an early convention.

Mr. Hugo admitted last evening that if Senator Hawkins is victorious in his fight for lieutenant governor that that would pocket him for the speakership.

MINNESOTA WOMAN

At Washington Opposing Any Change in the Forest Reserve.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Lydia Williams of Little Falls, an officer of the Women's Federation of Clubs in Minnesota, is here to oppose the proposed legislation to amend the Morris act of 1902, whereby the forest reserve in Minnesota will be changed in metes and bounds.

The house committee on Indian affairs yesterday voted to insert an amendment, providing for additional compensation of superintendents of logging. Their pay is $4 per day now, but each man must pay all expenses. It is proposed to allow $2 additional.

THE QUINCY MINE

Again Put Out of Commission by Earth Disturbance.

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 13.—The Quincy mine is again practically out of commission as the result of a severe earth disturbance Sunday evening, called an earthquake or airblast shock. In No. 6 shaft falling rock broke the air pipes, and the men were unable to descend. Nos. 2, 4 and 7 shafts are also out of commission as the result of caving in of drifts and falling of tons of rock in the wreckage levels.

Only one shaft, No. 7 of the Mesnard, is not wrecked. Nearly a hundred miners and other underground employes have quit, and things look dark for the mine and the adjacent territory.

One shock Sunday evening shook buildings in Hancock and Houghton, rattled and smashed dishes and trinkets and caused other damage.

The people are worked to a high pitch of excitement and fear, and many are making arrangements to leave the district. So far the Quincy is the only mine where serious trouble has occurred. This is accountable by the peculiar underground conditions at this mine. Most of the connecting levels are blocked, and it is impossible to pass from one shaft to another below the surface.

The greatest damage last week was in No. 2 shaft, where considerable damage also occurred Sunday night.

WADENA PIONEER DEAD.

Wadena, Minn., Feb. 13.—Mrs. W. R. Baumbach, one of the oldest residents, died yesterday morning at 10 o'clock after a lingering illness of several months, of Bright's disease. She was the wife of W. R. Baumbach, president of the First National bank. Aside from her husband she leaves one son, C. W. Baumbach, president of the Bankers' Trust company of Ardmore, I. T., who will be here within a few days.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

Cumberland, Wis., Feb. 13.—The frozen remains of Andrew Mortenson, aged 55, were found on Beaver Dam lake near this city Sunday morning. Mortenson, who was a very heavy drinker, started to walk to his home two miles across the lake, while intoxicated, and it is evident that he fell in a stupor in the ice and was frozen to death. He leaves a large family.

ALL TALKED HARMONY

But Objected to Resolution Endorsing United States Senator Nelson.

Minneapolis, Feb. 13.—Charles S. Jelly of Minneapolis made the principal address at the Lincoln day banquet here last night, taking the place of Frank O. Louden of Chicago, his subject being "Lincoln." M. H. Boutelle was toastmaster and paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Lincoln.

There were about 900 Republicans present at the banquet, which had been advertised as a "harmony dinner," and all the speakers talked harmony, but a discordant note was sounded when, upon the reading of a letter from Senator Knute Nelson, a resolution was introduced favoring the re-election of Mr. Nelson as United States senator from Minnesota. Much opposition was raised to the introduction of such a resolution at a "harmony meeting," and it was finally voted out of place.

CAIRO, ILL., DOCTOR SHOT.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Dr. D. P. Padfield of Cairo, Ill., was shot and probably fatally wounded last night by George W. Durphy, superintendent of the Chicago Dock company, in a room at the Grand Pacific hotel. The shooting took place in the presence of Mrs. Durphy, who has filed a suit for divorce. Two shots struck Dr. Padfield, one in the left side and the other in the left arm. Durphy and his wife, who is only 23 years old, have not lived together since last October, though they had been married only three years.

To the 800,000 Sufferers in America from CONSUMPTION

A Letter That Will Make WELL PEOPLE THINK About the Most Distressing Portion of This Country's Population.

Gentlemen: Thinking you will be interested in hearing from me in regard to the progress I have made while taking the Hoff formula, I will give you a brief history of my case. To make a long story short, after my doctor told me I had consumption and could not be cured, I traveled considerably in search of health, going to California and later to New Mexico, spending in all more than a thousand dollars, all to no purpose.

I came back to New York no better, and had hemorrhage after hemorrhage. Now, after taking the Hoff prescription for about a year, I am entirely well; feel like a new man; completely cured. How grateful I am to the man whose genius has given to the world this wonderful medicine, and to the dear aunt who supplied me with it. Words cannot express my gratitude for my return to health and ability to work.

I will call on you soon so that you can see for yourself just how I am.

Yours truly,

West Nyack, N. Y. WILLIS C. ECKERSON,

The above letter must be of consolation to the most deserving portion of our population—the 800,000 consumptives who are just now battling with the perils of pneumonia weather.

To others it may not mean a great deal—at least NOT NOW. But it is well for the robust, hearty reader, blessed with a sound pair of lungs, to remember JUST WHAT IT WAS that CURED a case of consumption.

You don't know exactly when the most treacherous enemy of mankind MAY cross your own threshold. Many a man and woman who deem the danger far off today will grow familiar with the sound of a harrowing cough before the Winter has exhausted its energy.

It is a good time for you WELL PEOPLE to think about it, when you are apt to see the poor, discouraged consumptive on his weary way about the city—in the street car, the factory, the workshop, the office, or even in his pitiful home—perhaps misguided into a mood of desperate resignation by well meaning persons who still look upon consumption in the old way.

This letter was addressed to the American Bureau of the Professor Hoff Cure, established after the New York American and Journal had proved that consumption was just as curable as any other serious malady, and which was the first to start an organized effort along this line in behalf of the consumptive.

Every body THINKS about consumption now and then—for instance, when they read an article like this—and congratulate themselves in a comforting sort of way that the efforts of scientists are being rewarded. Then they put the thought aside until some wan-faced sufferer reawakens the unpleasant subject.

These letters reporting SUCCESSFUL CURES are printed in order that people may be INDUCED TO ACT. Remember that one death in every eight has been caused by consumption—one working woman out of every three dies with it. That fact intimately concerns you.

And REMEMBER that to the 800,000 sufferers at present in the United States NO OTHER SUBJECT is ever present in mind. In their waking hours they are contemplating the grim and harrowing record of the disease that has fastened its clutches on them. Their burden goes with them to their pillows at night and awakens them in the morning.

If you can lighten the burden of one of these poor sufferers by showing him the record of a single cure it is your duty to do so.

THE PATHOS OF CONSUMPTION

A young man dying with consumption. It was a common enough case—a bricklayer who had moved in from the country with a wife and two children, in the hope of securing steady employment on some of the big buildings going up in town. Being a good workman he had no difficulty in getting work, and for a time all went well with the young family. Regular wages meant a sufficiently pleasant spot to live in and plenty to eat. Yet the children grew thin and white on the city milk, and the wife longed for the country garden, as she bought the wilted vegetables from the corner grocery. Then came swift destruction. A heavy cold—or was it the foul dust from a demolished building?—and the slow approaching death of tuberculosis laid the sole support of the family low.

What does it signify to such a family for its breadwinner to be restored and the patient who was expected to die to go back to work.

His physician, a man of the highest standing, indicates the view being taken of the Hoff medicine by the profession:

American Bureau of Professor Hoff Cure, Laboratories of Bendiner & Schlesinger, Third Avenue and Tenth street, New York.

Mr. Snyder, the bearer, has been taking Professor Hoff's Cure for Consumption with most remarkable results. He was all run down, analysis showed presence of bacilli, and the patient's condition was of the worst. The night sweats have all disappeared. He gained fifteen pounds in eleven weeks, and cough is practically stopped. In fact, the result is remarkable.

I have had, however, one other case which was in worse physical condition and is now absolutely cured.

You can use inclosed statement with appended examination of sputa as made by you, if you wish. Mr. Snyder will also make a statement for you. I NEVER DO THE ABOVE THING, BUT BELIEVE THAT SUCH A BOON TO HUMANITY SHOULD NOT BE HIDDEN UNDER A BUSHEL. Yours truly,

THOMAS J. WARD, M. D.,
Physician to the Elevated Railway Association.
217 West 133d street, New York.

This letter, like the first one, is but one of a hundred—of a thousand—similar communications. We wish we had space to print them all. Those reproduced here, however, will perform the desired mission of PROVING BEYOND QUESTION the wisdom of the New York American and Journal in sending the first test case to Professor Hoff, in Vienna, to see whether his medicine and his very simple home rules of diet and exercise could actually cure the disease.

It is not the purpose of the newspaper work mentioned—of the test case which was so eminently successful, or of the widespread work of The American Bureau, to criticise the very commendable efforts of multi-millionaires to bring about those better sanitary conditions which mean a vast decrease of the disease—let us even hope the final elimination of it from the face of the earth.

It is one thing to PREVENT consumption. It is an entirely different thing to CURE IT—to bear that all-important first aid to the army of afflicted ones who are NOW staring the ravages of the disease in the face.

The pinched features, hollow cough and desperate mental condition of the PRESENT sufferer from consumption appeals to the practical, whole-souled philanthropist much more strongly than does the possibility of others acquiring it.

The man who has consumption is little interested in preventing disease, as prevention is ordinarily understood. What he wants is immediate relief from the cough that is tearing him to pieces—one more chance to draw a full breath of God's pure air. The best way to prevent the spread of consumption is, first, to cure THOSE NOW SUFFERING FROM IT, and, next, to cure the cough that is about to lead to consumption.

Professor Hoff said when he gave his prescription to America that his medicine would do this—that it would increase betabolism, the corpuscular value of the blood, ability to assimilate up-building elements, and work a cure.

HOW YOU CAN HELP.

As you go about this season look at the doors of many of the institutions which believe they are doing great good in fighting consumption. The consumptive sitting on the steps of the institution begging relief is not relieved by the talk of PREVENTION ALONE. He is not benefited nor encouraged by the talk about SEGREGATING CONSUMPTIVES — ABOUT DRIVING HIM OUT OF THE COMMUNITY LIKE A LEPER.

WHAT THAT MAN WANTS IS TO BE CURED OF CONSUMPTION!

You, as an idividual, can do much to aid in the relief of such sufferers.

Point this article out to some one who is afflicted with weak lungs, whether the sufferer has consumption or is only threatened with it. Bring it to the attention of the sufferers from asthma and chronic catarrh, both of which are always liable to develop into the more serious malady.

Write to the American Bureau, which will send them free the Hoff Treatise on Consumption, giving, on page 11, rules for diet, prophylaxis and regulations making it safe to be in contact with a consumptive sufferer, and advice as to the true preventive treatment.

These rules have been widely copied by health boards everywhere.

The celebrated Hoff test case made by the American and Journal may be briefly given for the benefit of any who do not recall the circumstances, it being borne in mind that the announcement had been cabled to America that Professor Hoff of the Medical Faculty of the University of Vienna, had cured two hundred sufferers from consumption in the Vienan clinics by his prescription.

Over in Brooklyn, in a very humble home, there was a clerk who had been given up by the physicians as incurable. He had haunted the clinics of New York, with their great scientists, hoping for encouragement. Trips were recommended. But food was the problem staring in the face of that clerk's family, presided over by a hard working father and mother. California was farther away from his than the great Kingdom beyond.

* * *

Noted physicians were appealed to by the newspaper to find a patient about whose disease there might not be the slightest question. One of them, Dr. Daniel Cook, had seen the Brooklyn clerk. The clerk was singled out. He was submitted to examinations and tests by physicians and scientists of the highest reputation in America, Dr. J. Mount Bleyer, Prof. Brooks, Dr. J. Carleton Simon, five physicians of the Vanderbilt Clinic, the New York Health Department—all of these and many more examined the Brooklyn clerk. Examination and analysis both proved conclusively that he had consumption, and the case was properly termed incurable, one eminently fit for the test in Vienna.

The affecting scene at parting on the dock between the clerk and his parents was described in this newspaper. Every day's treatment while he was in Vienna was watched and fully published. Before Easter the joyful news came to the family that he was cured. In a few weeks he was again in Brooklyn, ready to go to work, and with a great deal to say about Professor Hoff.

AN ETHICAL DESCRIPTION.

The wonderful new agency which has achieved these flattering results is a purely scientific, ethical prescription, not to be confused with patent medicines. Physicians who have been disappointed in the treatment of consumption by the old orthodox methods, by cod liver oil, the various emulsions, creosote, expensive fad cures and inhalations, have readily adopted the prescription.

With some pride it is to be said that many of them, after having had the amplest proof—sometimes being converted by their own patients, who, unknown to them, have taken the medicine and been cured—now prescribe Prof. Hoff's cure in their practice, order the label to be removed and having the druggist dispense it in the form of an ordinary prescription. This is quite commendable, on the ground that anything adding to the general good result is justifiable.

Here are some specimen letters from physicians:

American Bureau, Prof. Hoff's Cure, Third Avenue and Tenth Street, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—It affords me gratification to report two positive cures of actual Consumption. These are since last June, when I wrote you of the success in my treatment after I adopted the use of Prof. Hoff's formula. I not only prescribe this medicine for tuberculosis, but also for asthma, and I find better results than with any remedy since I began practice in 1871. The cases now discharged as cured are George Gans, 88 Havemeyer street, Brooklyn, and Benna Sproutz, 54 Coerck street.

DR. H. G. BERGOLD.,
128 South Ninth Street,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

American Bureau, Prof. Hoff's Cure, New York City, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—Please send another bottle of Prof. Hoff's cure to the same address as before. The young man is cured and the tubercle bacili have not been noticed in his sputum for the past six months. He has gained from 130 to 184 pounds and is now teaching school.

Yours truly,
L. P. DE FOULKE, M. D.,
109 East 19th street, New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen—We are using Prof. Hoff's cure in our sanitarium, and we are glad to recommend it to all persons suffering with that dread disease, consumption. Our system here consists practically of the same methods employed and advocated by Dr. Hoff—proper diet, the most nourishing foods in abundance, a lot of pure mountain air, sanitary rules and conditions, and Hoff's Remedy.

Thanking you for the inquiry, and wishing you a continuance of the grand success you are achieving, we remain, yours respectfully,

WHITE MOUNTAIN TUBERCULOSIS SANITARIUM,
North Conway, N. H.

With her chilrren clinging to her skirts as she goes about her household duties, who can question this woman's words, who would not reproduce the scene in some other home?

American Bureau of the Prof. Hoff Cure. Laboratories of Bendiner & Schlesinger, New York:

Gentlemen—I have been taking your medicine now since last October, and I would like to tell you what it has done for me. Last spring I caught a heavy cold, and, not paying much attention to it, of course, it became worse. I had a terrible hacking cough all summer. Then I was taken with chills and fever, which pulled me down further. I got so thin my eyes sank back in my head, and my heart beat so fast I could stand no noise or excitement. I got so weak I could not walk across the room. I could not even dress my little children. My cough became worse.

I was being treated by our family doctor and I asked him if my lungs were affected. He told me no. A week after that I was taken with a terrible hemorrhage. All the next day I spit blood and there was no use doctoring any more. I spit blood all day, and at evening I had another slight hemorrhage. All the next day I spit blood, and I had terrible pains across my chest and between my shoulders. I could not eat anything. That same day I saw your announcement in the paper, and my husband asked me if I would try the Hoff Cure. I told him that I would try anything for the sake of my little children. So I began taking the remedy.

Before the first bottle was empty I began to show signs of improvement. My cough left me. The pain in my chest and lungs are gone. I do not feel any soreness in my lungs at all now, and I can eat anything that is set before me. I do all my own housework, and am very happy to say that I feel today as if I had never been sick at all. This is a great surprise to all my friends. They all thought there was no hope for me.

I can start out and walk two or three miles now and not get tired, and I could not do that last fall.

I have told a number of people about the Huff Cure, and have given away all the books and papers you sent me. Enclosed you will find one dollar for another bottle of Dr. Hoff's Cure for Consumption. Please send it to me as soon as you can, for I do not want to miss taking it.

This will be four bottles I have taken, and here is my testimonial, and my name and address. You can use them when and where you will, if it will only bring the medicine to the attention of those who so sorely need it. Rspectfully yours,

MRS. MAGGIE WILSON,
George's Road, New Brunswick, N. J.

PREVENTIVE TREATMENT.

By preventive treatment we mean that the COUGH which is the FIRST SIGNAL of lung trouble schould be arrested before the malady reaches a severe stage.

Prof. Hoff's prescription being the recognized treatment for all pulmonary troubles, is surely MORE EFFECTIVE in the milder forms of the disease than the syrupy concoctions and nauseating mixtures containing creosote, which, if they work any good at all, do so at the expense of the stomach, destroying its membranes and leaving a heritage of suffering only less severe than consumption itself.

Who knows but that an ordinary cough, if not checked in its career, may terminate fatally?

Gentlemen:

Enclosed you will find $1.00, for which please send me one bottle of Prof. Hoff's Cure for Consumption by return mail. Please send it as soon as possible, as I am taking it for a very bad cold and find it is the best thing I ever took for it. Yours truly, PETER SCHNAPP, 32 Darlington St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

American Bureau, New York:

Gentlemen—Enclosed find $2, for which please send me two bottles of Prof. Hoff's Consumptionu Cure.

My wife was suffering from some malady that made her weak with loss of flesh.

She had no appetite, and one of our physicians said she had consumption, while another claimed it was asthma, and still another said indigestion.

One bottle of your valuable medicine stopped her cough and caused her to gain ten pounds of flesh, and she regained her strength to such an extent that she now does her own work, which she could not do for months. Very truly yours,

CHARLES WHINNEN,
Oglesby, La Salle County, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I have taken nearly all of the medicine I got from you and can say it has no equal for coughs and colds. Enclosed find $1.00 for one more bottle of Prof. Hoff's Cure for Consumption. Yours truly, JOE DAWSON,
Box 141. Kinsman, Ill.

AROUND THE HOME FIRESIDE.

When the Vienna scientist began his work in the clinics of that city—a work to which his life is given—he knew that a vast majority of consumptives are people in medium or even poor circumstances.

THE MOST IMPORTANT FEATURE OF PROF. HOFF'S PRESCRIPTION IS THAT HE INSISTS ON PATIENTS REMAINING AT THEIR OWN HOMES, WHERE, SURROUNDED BY RELATIVES AND FRIENDS, THEIR COMFORT IS ASSURED, WHERE EACH STEP OF IMPROVEMENT IS MET BY THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF LOVED ONES.

ASTHMA AKIN TO CONSUMPTION.

Just three letters more to show how this prescription reduces the number of paroxysms and eventually works a cure in almost every case of asthma—for the relationship of asthma to consumption is conceded:

Gentlemen—Enclosed find money order for one dollar for one bottle of Prof. Hoff's Cure. It is the only medicine for asthma, as I have tried everything invented, and Prof. Hoff's Cure is the only cure that has done me good, and I believe it will cure me. Yours truly,

WM. GEO. HURST,
1213 W. 12th St., Pueblo, Col.

American Bureau, New York:

Gentlemen—Enclosed find $1.00, for which please send me another bottle of your Prof. Hoff's Cure. I think it is a grand medicine. I have not been troubled with asthma for about two months. Can now do all my work without an attack of it. Before taking your medicine couldn't be in even a little dust or a little wind, as it would almost choke me to death, but now I can go out and don't think about my old time trouble. I am very thankful to God, who has inspired to me to send to you, and also to you, who have been so prompt in forwarding it. Hoping to hear from you at your earliest convenience, I am, respectfully yours,

MRS. ASHER J. STERN,
1910 Freemansburg Ave., Easton, Pa.

American Bureau, New York:

Gentlemen—Enclosed find two dollars in money for two more bottles of your Prof. Hoff's Consumption Cure. I think it is a great medicine for asthma and catarrhal affections. I think only for it I would be in the grave now, but it keeps me so I can do my work, which is more than I have done for the last three winters. Yours truly,

Seneca, Neb. JOS. F. GREEN.

HOW THE NEWS SPREADS.

In every community where a cure takes place and a man returns to work, he becomes an enthusiastic missionary and looks about him for others who may be benefited.

Back again at his humble employment, exposed to the roughest storms, this bridge carpenter is happy to be restored to the proud position of a bread-winner.

Gentlemen—Enclosed find order for $2.00 for which please send me another bottle of Prof. Hoff's Consumption Cure.

I was examined by no less than twenty physicians, and was given up by all of them. They said there was no hope at all.

I had night sweats, chills, fever, rapid pulse and the most discouraging symptoms. I could hardly walk, and I myself did not think I could live but a little while. I have been taking your wonderful medicine for eight weeks without intermission, and am at present back to work on the C. N. R. R. as bridge carpenter. Yours,

J. C. WALDEN,
734 Mansion st., Marshall, Mich.

American Bureau, Bendiner & Schlesinger, Third avenue and 10th street, New York:

Gentlemen—I write to say that the cure effected by the use of Hoff's Consumption Cure, in the case of our son two years ago, when the doctors had given him up as past all hope, was so gratifying that I want to briefly tell you that he is well today and free from any complications of tuberculosis.

If it brings relief to others as great as it did to us, the world of consumptives should know of the merits of Hoff's treatment, and at least give it a fair trial.

In our city I am distributing the medicine and Prof. Hoff's literature on consumption wherever a case of consumption presents itself. Your truly,

C. W. MUNSON,
338 Huron St., Toledo, Ohio.

This good work is being conducted by a Sunday School superintendent:

American Bureau, Bendiner & Schlesinger, Third Avenue and 10th Street, New York.

Gentlemen—Through Mr. C. W. Munson, of Toledo, Ohio, my attention was some months ago called to your Hoff's Consumption Cure. Impressed by the wonderful cure it had effected in Mr. Munson's son, I have been constantly advertising it wherever I have gone, and have seen many consumptives cured through its use. Yours truly,

MR. JOSEPH CLARK,
79 Ruggery Building, Columbus, Ohio.

American Bureau Prof. Hoff's Cure:

Gentlemen — Enclosed find check. Please send me one dozen bottles of Prof. Hoff's Cure. I want to have some on hand continually to supply any one who needs it. Since I have been cured of consumption my life has been insured by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and all who know me can hardly believe that I could be cured. I have every reason to be thankful. Yours truly,

ROBT. AUTEN,
507 S. High st., Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

What form of philanthropy can equal this:

American Bureau of Professor Hoff Cure, Labortories of Bendiner & Schlesinger, New York:

Dear Sirs—Enclosed please find three dollars for which you will please send me three bottles of Hoff's Consumption Cure. It has almost cured a young man who had spent two hundred dollars this last winter doctoring in Chicago, and he is now beginning to talk about going to work. Respectfully,

WILLIAM GIELOW,
Michigan and Sixth streets, Michigan City, Ind.

LATENT CONSUMPTION

It is a fact known to all physicians that in every community there are hundreds of cases of LATENT CONSUMPTION, which is only recognized when the disease has made great progress, and the patient is in an advanced and dangerous stage.

In any case, doubt should not be tolerated for a moment. If there is the slightest question about the matter, the chances are highly in favor of consumption being actually present in its hidden form.

It has been demonstrated that with the chronic cough or the chronic cold which does not give way to ordinary treatment—that stage of the disease where those sufferers who can afford it hasten with the first realization of the truth to resorts far removed from home. How pitiful and useless are these pilgrimages in search of a cure which forever eludes its pursuers.

It has been demonstrated that with the chronic cough or the chronic cold which does not give way to ordinary treatment, there is more than the usual chance that there are germs present. Loss of appetite may indicate the presence of consumption in its unsuspected form. A feeling of weariness after the slightest exercise is present in a majority of cases of latent consumption. Persistent or even slight rise in temperature without apparent cause is another symptom, often attributed to something else.

But one way exists to cope with latent consumption. That is if there is the slightest ground to suspect the presence of the disease, to begin at once with the Prof. Hoff prescription, where the diagnosis is doubtful.

To further the ready accessibility of the Hoff medicine, arrangements have been made with every large jobbing house in the country to supply the local druggists.

KUGLER, YOUR DRUGGIST, at 108 West Superior street, Duluth, Minn., one of the most progressive drug houses in the Northwest, is retail distributing agent for Duluth.

Samples of the medicine, containing one week's treatment, will be furnished FREE OF COST at Kugler, your Druggist, on application.

If the drug store with which you deal is remote from Duluth and not sufficiently progressive or accommodating to procure it from the wholesale house, write to the American Bureau direct and it will be sent to you by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

But always BE SURE that it bears the trademark, registered at Washington and reproduced below. If it does not, it is a substitute and IT IS DANGEROUS. Do not allow an unscrupulous druggist to force on you something "just as good."

Professor Hoff desires his cure to be in the hands of every sufferer. It is humanity's medicine. For the purpose of absolute correctness in compounding and ready distribution the American Bureau has been established in the laboratories of Bendiner & Schlesinger.

For $1.00 we will mail a bottle of Professor Hoff's Cure for Consumption, containing one month's treatment.

Lincoln's Birthday is Fittingly Observed With Speeches and Songs.

Veterans of the Civil war and members of the auxiliary orders of the Grand Army of the Republic observed Lincoln's birthday last evening as the guests of Duluth camp, No. 5, Sons of Veterans, at a camp fire in Flaaten's auditorium. After the program dancing was indulged in and refreshments were served.

All of the speakers touched upon the character and deeds of Abraham Lincoln. Capt. W. H. Smallwood devoted his entire address to a review of the martyred president's life, and the commander of the camp, John H. Norton, dwelt upon his deeds and the man, in his address of welcome to the guests.

"The conquests that have been made toward liberty and equality have been painfully slow, and the heroes who have impressed their personality on the ages, so as to be remembered a generation after their death, are few," said Mr. Norton. "Of these few names none stands higher, or shines brighter, than that of Abraham Lincoln.

"What was it that made the wrinkled face of Lincoln gleam with a halo of glory? It was the same divine spirit that exalted Oliver Cromwell, and enabled him to wrest the sceptre of power from a weak and wicked sovereign, and it was the same quality that made George Washington, the hero of the American revolution, and caused his name to be revered wherever liberty is cherished and tyranny despised.

Dr. Charles M. Wilson responded to the address of welcome on behalf of the G. A. R., and Mrs. James H. Sullivan on behalf of the Women's Relief corps. Miss Etta Spohn gave a violin solo, Mrs. G. E. Budd gave a reading, and W. S. McCormick some of his inimitable selections.

GOVERNOR FOLK

Jefferson City, Feb. 13.—Governor Folk has issued an explicit statement of his convictions concerning the abolition of personal taxes in Missouri and the shifting of a large part of the burden upon the big corporations. He says:

"It is asserted by some persons that the removal of state taxes from personal property, thus placing upon real estate and corporate monopolies the burden of government, would benefit the rich at the expense of the poor.

"On the contrary, in porportion to property, the personal property tax (and by personal property is not meant corporte franchises and privileges) falls heaviest on the poor and the honest.

"The abolition of this tax and putting it on corporate privileges cannot be to the advantage of the rich as against the poor, for the poor man has no monopoly privileges and no corporate holdings.

"Every farmer, under the present system, pays on every cow, horse and hog; every widow or orphan, whose estate must go through the probate court, must pay in full, while too often the man of wealth, having his personaity in such shape it cannot be reached, pays practically nothing.

"Some persons object to corporations and real estate bearing the burdens of state government. But the state gives to corporations, which are artificial creatures of the state, rights and priviledges which the ordinary citizen does not enjoy, and it is only just that the state should receive full return in the way of revenue for the powers granted."

A $500,000 ATTACHMENT

Placed on Property Owned by Gould, Ramsey, Et Al.

New York, Feb. 13.—An attachment upon property in this city valued at nearly $500,000, owned by George J. Gould, Joseph Ramsey, Jr., and William E. Guy, has been received by the sheriff of New York county. The attachment was filed in connection with the suit instituted by John S. Jones, to recover $466,000 which, he claims, is due him from the defendants for services, expenditures and commissions in purchasing 18,000 acres of coal lands for the defendants in Southern Ohio. The purchases upon which the suit is based were made in 1900.

HASTINGS, MINN., HAS GRIEVANCE

Says It Pays Unreasonable Rates From Head of Lakes.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The Hastings Malting company, of Hastings, Minn., today filed with the interstate commerce commission two complaints against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad company, one alleging that themselves, the city of Hastings and dealers, manufactures and shippers therein, are required to pay unjust and unreasonable rates of transportation on coal from Superior, Wis., to Hastings and also that on shipments of grain they were discriminated against in favor of merchants, dealers and shippers to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

They ask the commission to require the defendant road to desist in their alleged violations of the interstate commerce law and to grant such other redress as may be determined upon.

A TUG RAMS SEVERAL VESSELS IN NEW YORK.

New York, Feb. 13.—At least three lives are believed to have been lost in the East river today, when one vessel was cut completely in two, and two others had holes stove in them, by a tug boat which was running blindly in a fog and rammed into shipping at the foot of East Twenty-first street.

A FAMOUS FREAK.

Wild Man of Borneo is In Wilds of Ohio.

The Wild Man of Borneo has just come to town.
The Wife of the Wild Man of Borneo has just come to town.
The Dog of the Wife of the Wild Man of Borneo has just come to town.
The Flea on the Dog of the Wife of the Wild Man of Borneo has just come to town.
Oh, the Wild Man of Borneo has just come to town.

Plutaino, the Wild Man of Borneo, stays at home nowadays, says the Boston Herald. His savage life is ancient history. The hero of song and circus tradition is meek and old. They say his age is eighty years, and probably they speak truly; unquestionably he is old. Plutaino's beard is streaked with white and his face is wrinkled, and there are other marks of age upon him. And so Plutaino has retired from the show business and entered upon the simple, uneventful life of a country gentleman.

Three years ago, with his twin brother, he came back from a successful tour of Europe with the Barnum & Bailey circus and settled in Waltham with his guardian, Hanford A. Warner, the veteran showman. Last March Waino, the twin brother, died of old age, and then Plutaino quit the platform forever.

Today this little creature has nothing in common with a bloodthirsty wild man of Borneo. He is neither fluffy-haired nor vicious-eyed; his mouth is as passive as any old man's. You see, Plutaino never really was a wild man. His wildness was good show business, for, during fifty years, Plutaino was one of the greatest attractions of the circus.

You all remember: "Captured in the recesses of the wild and savage island of Borneo, in the limitless Pacific. This curious freak of nature, as vicious as a lion and as strong as that same king of beasts, has been secured by B. & B.'s circus menagerie at enormous expense and danger. Plutaino, the only, original Wild Man of Borneo. Come in and see him! Hear him roar and gnash his teeth like the beasts of the jungle!"

Poor, little, wild-natured Plutaino! He was never wilder than any other curious, mentally deficient product of humanity. But he was a spectacle for the curious; everybody paid money to see the dwarf. That is what Plutaino really is—a dwarf. He is regularly formed, of once powerful physique, and is about three feet tall. He hears, but speaks very infrequently. In many respects he is a child—a quaint and dignified child.

Plutaino greets you after the manner of the circus attraction—with a half salute, half wave of the hand, a mechanical smile and a mechanical bow from the hips. Then he straightens up and stands before you, conscious of your scrutiny, but composed.

How could this creature, with Teutonic ancestry written all over his head, ever come out of the wilds of Borneo? But they say a certain Capt. Hammond brought him over from some island of the Pacific. So you look at Plutaino again—at the only, original Wild Man og Borneo, the hero of the song, like the Sultan of Sulu, and the fearsome chimera of the dark and lonely night. There are the light hair and blue eyes again. His eyes are as meek as a child's; his face is reposeful. He doesn't run up and down the room restlessly, like a repressed animal of the jungle; he doesn't glare wolfishly; he doesn't snarl and snap and claw, as in the show days of old.

You see, Plutaino has retired. He doesn't have to snap or snarl or cut up dime-museum antics; he doesn't have to pose any longer. Plutaino is an old man; 80 years old, in fact, and so the show life is forever a thing of the past for the Wild Man of Borneo. Doubtless he could appear now as an interesting dwarf, or as the last surviving member of the Liliputians of the heart of the Congo or of some other remote haunt of savage races. But his age prevents him cavorting about the platform and lifting 500-pound men.

You remember then that the side show announcer used to credit Plutaino with unusual strength. So you grasp his arm and press it. It is about as large as a boy's wrist. Plutaino shakes his head with a wry grin, and points to his gray beard and sunken cheeks. Then he tries to squeeze your hand. The pressure is almost imperceptible; it is gentle, like a child's. However, they tell you that Plutaino is very old. That is quite true.

There is this wonder about Plutaino: Today, in spite of his advanced age, he is spry, active and vigorous; there is nothing senile about him. His movements are surprisingly quick, are quickly expressive, and often he runs instead of walking. They say he never shows fatigue, never complains of weariness; that he goes to bed every night at 8 o'clock purely from force of habit, and not on account of drowsiness. This virility in a being 80 years of age alone constitutes its possessor a phenomenon—a freak.

Well, they tell you that Plutaino's strength in other days was prodigious; that it was much superior to the ordinary man's strength. "Once," says his guardian, Mr. Warner, "he lifted 500 pounds several inches from the floor. Well, if Plutaino's muscular strength has deserted him, his endurance remains."

Plutaino and Waino, the "only, original Wild Men of Borneo," first startled the world in the late fifties. A certain Capt. Hammond picked them up, he claimed, in the jungles of Borneo. He said they were roaming through the underbrush when he and his sailors captured them.

As a matter of fact, Hammond found them somewhere in the fastnesses of Ohio.

They were freaks without definite origin, and it was easy show business to throw further mystery around their early life. So Waino and Plutaino, the Wild Man of Borneo, evolved from two unfortunate freaks of nature and proceeded to startle the circus-going world.

Mr. Warner, their present guardian, became connected with them during their New York engagement. Thereafter he accompanied them everywhere in the capacity of manager. The two little creatures appeared in all parts of the country, and everybody flocked to see them. They compared equally as attractions with the celebrated Tom Thumb.

They used to scamper up and down a platform, properly chained, of course, and deliver many snapping and snarling noises. It was said that they were prodigiously strong, and brave men in the audiences were requested to try their strength with Waino and Plutaino. The throngs gazed at the two freaks with tremendous awe.

A strong-lunged announcer recited tales of theid wild life in the jungles of Borneo, and described lengthily nothings concerning their origin and their species. They were supposed to be the descendants, or the survivors of lost tribes of Lilliputians—occasionally of Gulliver's Lilliputians; they were attributed to an entirely new race of human beings, a cross between ape and man; they were called the missing links—the missing links of science; in short, much high-sounding pseudo-scientific language was employed to convince the public that Waino and Plutaino were the greatest curiosities of the age. This was all good show business, and nobody was disappointed.

Consequently, wherever the two dwarfs went they attracted no end of attention. They toured this country for nearly fifty years, passing through every state and large city several times; they exhibited in nearly every country of Europe. London, Paris and Berlin knew them as well as New York and Boston. During their early show career they appeared in halls and small museums; later they joined the big circuses.

Everybody who ever patronized the side-show of the big circus remembers the Wild Men of Borneo; and the expression itself is a classic. It will be associated with Rajah Brooke's island as long as the present generation of Americans and one or two generations of the future. The birth of the ditty about "The Wild Men of Borneo" gave lasting renown to the dwarfs.

The earnings of these two freaks is a matter of conjecture, and definite information on that point is difficult to obtain. Some people say Waino and Plutaino must have earned $200,000; some people, fairly well informed, name a higher figure. Certainly during their professional lives they received big salaries, and consequently made a large amount of money.

In legal charge of Plutaino today is Hanford Warner of Waltham, their old manager. Mr. Warner accompanied the twins everywhere until a few years ago, when he became totally blind. Between him and the surviving dwarf there exists an extraordinary affection. The two are inseparable. "So long as Plutaino lives," declares his guardian, "he shall have a comfortable home with me."

Waino's death last March, was a blow both to Plutaino and to Mr. Warner. Waino died mainly from old age. Shortly before his return from Europe, three years ago, he became infirm generally. He lost his sight and the use of his limbs; he was in a state of total collapse, and a constant care. Plutaino grieved for many days after Waino's death, and Mr. Warner seriously feared that the separation would result fatally for the survivor. However, Plutaino eventually recovered his spirits, and then his health, and today seems destined to live out a century. At any rate, the home life of the Warners agrees decidedly with him; this erstwhile celebrated "Wild Man of Borneo" is completely satisfied with the calm obscurity of retirement.

THEIR CAPACITY.

Mrs. M. W. Swift, the president of the National Council of American Women, was making a brief address on the subject of Christmas gifts, says the Los Angeles Times.

"Don't give presents," she said, "that demand on their recipent's part a certain special kind of knowledge. Don't, for instance, give a Japanese toy dog to a woman who scarcely understands fox terriors. Don't give a white Persian monkey to a woman who can't keep a cat. Don't give an aquarium of Ceylonese goldfish to——"

"Mrs. Swift bit her lip to hide a smile.

"A friend of mine in Santa Barbara got from her husband last Christmas a superb aquarium of goldfish," she said. "The fish did well till my friend changed her parlor maid. Then they began to thin out and to weaken.

"One morning, finding two of the fish afloat on their backs at the surface of the aquarium, my friend called the new maid to her.

" 'Harriet,' she said, 'have you given the fish any fresh water lately?'

" 'No, ma'am,' Harriet answered. 'They haven't finished the water I gave them last month yet.' "

LIGHT NEEDED.

In the little town of Wilmington is a fire department in which the citizens take great pride, says the Boston Herald.

It is composed of volunteers, and at the first alarm the force assembles so hurriedly that the equipment is not always complete.

Not long ago a fire broke out at midnight. When the department arrived only one lantern could be found. The smoke was pouring out of the building, but no flame appeared, and the night was very dark. Finally a tongue of flame shot out of one corner of the building. The crowd cheered as the man at the nozzle directed a stream of water toward it.

At this crisis the excited captain shouted: "Be careful what you are doing, man! Keep the water off that! It is the only light we've got to put out the fire by."

"As odd a client as you can imagine" he said, "called on a legal friend of mine in Rye one morning.

"She was an extremely pretty client, but her clear, soft eyes were quite bleared with tears, as she entered my friend's office. Her little form shook with sobs.

" 'Well, my dear,' said he (perhaps I should explain that this client was hardly more than 7 or 8 years old)—'well, my dear, what can I do for you?'

" 'Please, sir,' said the child, weeping piteously, 'I want to get a divorce from my papa and mamma.' "

Washington Star: "That recent story of the exposure of a card swindler in the progress of a big poker game on the Cedric reminds me of something," observed a Washington man who goes abroad every year. "When I was making the voyage across in the summer of 1902, Liverpool bound, one of the victims of a poker swindler worked a pretty adroit scheme to make the cheat disgorge, but in working his scheme the victim of the cheat showed himself to be not much better than the swindler when it came to underhandedness, and his get-even stunt was viewed with anything but admiration by the men in the card room who witnessed it.

"The heaviest loser in the four-handed game of draw, which the professional card shark got going after the ship left this side, was a Pittsburg chap, who wore the Indian sign of the hard loser all over him.

"There was really no excuse for that particular game, nor for any other game of draw on that steamer between men unknown to each other, for as soon as the professional card worker of the ship had come on board he had been spotted by the purser. The purser immediately put up placards of warning, notifying all hands that a professional gambler was on board, and advising them to play cards with nobody not personally known to them.

"In spite of this, as usual, the professional sharper had little or no difficulty in getting the four-handed game started, and the three suckers that he assembled around him looked like pretty meaty picking.

"The professional shark's unerring eye informed him that the young Pittsburger would probably stand to drop the largest wad in the progress of the game, and so he directed his phony work particularly at that player, setting him back more than $2,000 before the game was forty-eight hours old.

"The gambler's unerring eye wasn't clever enough, however to tell him what the Pittsburg young man was going to do about it. And, when it comes to that I suppose that no man on earth could have figured out in advance just what the Pittsburg man did do near the close of the third day of the game, when he found himself nearly $3,000 to the bad.

"It took the Pittsburger these three days to reach the conclusion that the man who had organized the game was the swindler against whom the placarded warning of the purser had been directed. Then the Pittsburg man watched the sharper's work closely. He finally snagged him in the act of dishing 'em out from the bottom of the deck.

"But the Pittsburger didn't say anything about his discovery. When the game was adjourned for luncheon, however, he got hold of one of the discarded decks with which they had been playing. The cards all came from the ship's stock, and all had the same kind of backs.

"The Pittsburg man went to his stateroom, and with his fingernail he carefully marked all of the aces and picture cards of the discarded deck. Then he slipped the deck of cards into his pocket and went to luncheon.

"When the game was resumed after the meal the Pittsburg man waited till it became his turn to deal. He engaged the other players in conversation with regard to the betting pools on the steamer's daily runs, and while this talk was on he deftly substituted the deck which he had marked for the deck with which they had been playing, shuffling and dealing the marked deck.

"Then, when he picked up the deck to deal cards afte rthe discard, he began to scrutinize the backs of the cards carefully, and, as he did so, he worked himself up into a pretty good lather. The swindler and the other two players watched him narrowly.

"'This game is off!' shouted the Pittsburg man, pushing back his chair and jumping to his feet. 'These cards are marked,' and he tossed the cards into the middle of the table, backs up, and pointed out the fingernail markings which he himself had made. 'We've been played for suckers,' he went on, stormily, addressing the other two players, 'and there's the swindler!'

"He pointed to the swindler. It wasn't a finger with which he pointed. It was a short-barreled bulldog gun that he flashed as he accused the professional shark.

"'You shell out the three thousand that you've tapped me for, you short-carder, or I'll drill you,' the Pittsburg man howled at the shark, sticking the gun right into the man's face.

"'The gun wins, all right,' said the shark, pretty pale, and he pulled out his big roll and skinned three thousand from it, pushing the money across the table to the Pittsburg man, who still held him under the gun. 'But, all the same,' went on the sharper, 'you're a dirty scut, and you're worse than I ever will be. You know that I didn't mark those cards.'

"And it was right at this point that the Pittsburger made his mistake. He could have stood pat on his statement that the sharper had marked the cards, and got away with it, but he was a shifty shuffler without much nerve or pride, and he did the other thing.

"'Yes, he said, lowering his gun and sticking the money that had been passed to him by the shark into his pocket, 'I do know that you didn't mark those cards—I marked them myself. But I do know that you are a professional short-card player, and when I stack up against that kind it's a case of dog-eat-dog with me. I advise you two fellows,' he wound up, addressing the other two players, as he started to leave the card room, 'to make this swindler dig up what he has cheated you out of, too.'

"'Well, he's welcome to what he got out of me,' one of the players replied, pretty gruff, 'and, in my opinion, it's a stand-off between the pair of you.'

"And that's how it came about that the Pittsburger was 'couped in the betting,' so to speak, with the card shark for the remainder of the voyage, and ostracized by all hands just as plainly as the genuine short-card swindler was."

HOST WAS PLEASED.

"Edward Everett Hale," said a lawyer, "was one of the guests at a millionaire's dinner" says the Los Angeles Times:

"The millionaire was a free spender, but he wanted full credit for every dollar put out.

"And, as the dinner progressed, he told his guests what the more expensive dishes had cost.

"'This terrapin,' he would say, 'was shipped direct from Baltimore. A Baltimore cook came on to prepare it. The dish actually cost a dollar a spoonful.'

"So he talked of the fresh peas, the hot-hous asparagus, the convent garden peaches, and the other courses. He dwelt especially on the expense of the large and beautiful grapes, each bunch a foot long, each grape bigger than a plum. He told, down to a penny, what he had figured it out that the grapes had cost him apiece.

"The guests looked annoyed. They ate at the expensive grapes charily. But Dr. Hale, smiling, extended his plate and said:

"'Would you mind cutting me off about a dollar and eighty-seven cents' worth more, please?'"

LUMINOUS MUTTON.

A phenomenon of a remarkable nature has been observed at Christchurch, says an Auckland, New Zealand, correspondent of the London Express.

Consumers of mutton have been moved to alarm on going to their meat safes at night and discovering the interior bright with a phosphorescent glow which appeared to be exuding from the meat. Scores of householders have noticed this strange appearance on the day on which they had purchased the meat.

Expert authorities who have inquired into the matter declare that the phosphorescence is of bacterial origin. It is stated, however, that no injurious effects have been found to arise from consuming the affected meat.

RISING BREAST

And many other painful and serious ailmens from which most mothers suffer, can be avoided by the use of Mother's Friend." This great remedy is a godsend to women, carrying them through their most critical ordeal with safety and no pain. No woman who uses "Mother's Friend" need fear the suffering and danger incident to birth, for it robs the ordeal of its horror and insures safety to life of mother and child, and leaves her in a condition more favorable to speedy recovery. The child is also healthy strong and good natured. Our book, "Motherhood," is worth its weight in gold to every woman, and will be sent free in plain envelope by addressing application to

ECONOMY IS NECESSARY

Fire Department Must Cut Down Expenses to Break Even.

The most careful economy will be necessary in the fire department during the next two or three months in order to avoid ending the fiscal year with a deficit, and it may be necessary to allow the positions which fall vacant through resignations to remain unfilled.

In the year 1905 the department had $111,449.99 to spend. This sum included the balance carried over from 1904, and also the appropriation for the year 1905.

The department started the year 1906 with a balance of but $529.46 in the fund. The sum of $70,000 was appropriated to the department's use from the general fund, and it will receive $30,328.97 as its share of the levy, estimating the tax collections at 90 per cent. This will make a total amount available for the fund of $100,859.43, or more than $10,000 less than the department had last year.

The small balance in the fund at the beginning of the year forced the council to issue certificates of indebtedness against the fund to the amount of $20,000, in anticipation of the collection of taxes, and the department is now running on this money.

Last year the department had a monthly allowance of $9,287.50, and this year the monthly allowance is but $8,404.87. When it is taken into consideration that the monthly pay rolls of the department amount to $7,600, it will be seen that there is not much of a balance for general and incidental expenses. During the first three months and the last month of the year, the department is under very heavy expenses for fuel and feed. The bills for these two items alone would more than exhaust the balance of $800 remaining for incidentals, and as a result the department is now overrunning its allowance. During the summer the item of fuel will be cut out, but even then the most rigid economy will be necessary to keep the expenses within the appropriation.

MINISTERS MAY BECOME ACTIVE

Pastors at Superior Plan to Mix in Politics.

The ministers of Superior churches are said to be planning an active participation in municipal politics across the bay this spring, with the idea of accomplishing a so-called reform, especially along the lines of Sunday closing of saloons. It is said that the ministers' organizations are likely to endorse the candidate who goes on record in favor of the desired reform.

The first intimation of the intention of the ministers is said to have been made in a temperance mass meeting held Sunday evening under the auspices of the Scandinavian ministers in Superior. Two of the ministers, in order to get material for their talks, are said to have made the rounds of the saloons from Saturday evening to an early hour Monday morning, also visiting alleged places where there is gambling and cheap amusement going on.

The Superior Ministerial association, comprised of the English-speaking pastors, is also said to be contemplating a move in the same direction. The association is said to have been carrying on an investigation into existing conditions with a view to taking steps later.

Lame Back.

This ailment is usually caused by rheumatism of the muscles, and may be cured by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm two or three times a day and rubbing the parts vigorously at each application. If this does not afford relief, bind on a piece of flannel slightly dampened with Pain Balm, and quick relief is almost sure to follow. For sale by all druggists.

Files In Superior.

A petition of bankruptcy has been filed in Superior, Wis., by M. L. McMinn of this city, who formerly resided in this city across the bay, where he conducted a brokerage office on the board of trade. Mr. McMinn, in his schedules, sets his liabilities at $35,000, with no assets.

MAY SELECT A LOCATION

County Board and Courthouse Commission to Discuss Sites.

Two Downtown Locations Have Been Prominently Mentioned.

There is a strong possibility that the question of a site for the new county courthouse will be determined by the board of county commissioners and the courthouse commission at a meeting of the former body to be held Thursday.

The courthouse commission has not yet organized and is not likely to until after the next meeting of the county board, but it is understood that while the members of the commission will confer with the county board members in an unofficial capacity some definite site for the new building may be agreed on between the two bodies.

The county commissioners and the courthouse commissioners may view several sites before taking any action, but just which locations any member of either board may have in mind has not yet been intimated.

It seems to be understood, however, that the site on Second street between Third and Fourth avenues west will not be considered. A year ago the half block, it is said, could have been purchased at a figure below what the same property would bring in market today, or even if it were secured under condemnation proceedings, basing values on that of adjoining property.

It is understood that two other sites have been called to the attention of the commission and the board, one being the half block on the west side of First avenue East between First and Second streets and the other being the east half of what is commonly termed the postoffice block, that portion of the block on the upper side of First street, between Fifth and Fourth avenues west, not now occupied by the federal building.

No preference has yet been given out by any member of the board or the commission, but there are a great many taxpayers in the city who are especially favorable to the last named site, believing that it is quite central, off a street car line, near the federal building and close to the depot. This latter fact has appealed strongly to taxpayers in the range towns who come to Duluth to do business at the courthouse.

When the half block east of the federal building was first considered for the location of a courthouse it was supposed that the United States government would buy it for an extension of the federal building now or in the future, but that project, according to the latest reports, is in too indefinite a condition to cut much figure and the property, so far as it is known, is available for a courthouse site if the county chooses to condemn it for the purpose.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. DUNBAR RINK IN AT FINISH

Crack St. Paul Skip Advances Toward Finals in Three Events.

Winnipeg, Feb. 13.—The famous Dunbar rink advanced a step in both the Dingwall and Empire events yesterday, by defeating the Flavelle rink of Lindsay by the score of 11 to 6 and the Pitblado rink of the Winnipeg Granites by the score of 13 to 8. Dunbar also won his game in the Tetley Tea tankard from Anderons of Assiniboine by the score of 15 to 5, but lost his fourth game of the day to Hicks of Napinka.

Braden of Winnipeg won two more games yesterday, and has not yet been defeated since the bonspiel opened. The Strickland rink of Dawson City lost to Steele of Boissevain, in the Tetley Tea tankard, by the score of 13 to 10, but won from Lemon of the Winnipeg Granites by the score of 14 to 7.

Rochon of the Granites lost to Rennie of Toronto in a close game, bylpoint.

LEADER ORDERED EXECUTED.

Pekin, Feb. 13.—The imperial government has ordered the viceroy of Fochow to immediately execute the leader of the Changpu mob and to punish severely the others connected in that affair. The viceroy reports that the trouble at Changpu arose over the detention of a Chinaman by the Catholic mission there. The populace destroyed the mission and then the anti-foreign element arose and wrecked the English mission. Troops, which were sent as soon as possible, fired on the mob and killed twelve of the rioters.

DEMOGEOT WINS AT HAVANA.

Havana, Feb. 13.—Victor Demogeot, the winner at Ormond, Fla., of the title of the world's speed king, earned another triumph yesterday by winning the Cuban cup in the same machine which, driven by Hemery, won the two great road event of last year, namely, the Adrennes circuit in France and the Vanderbilt cup race on Long Island. It was the lightest machine in the race, being only eighty horse-power, the others being respectively 90 to 115.

NUMEROUS PRESENTS

For Miss Alice, and Capacity of White House Taxed.

Erroneous Impression That Nicholas Longworth is a Millionaire.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Presents to the bride-elect of Congressman Nicholas Longworth continue to be received at the White house and the storage capacity of that historic building is taxed to its utmost to accommodate the gifts which the friends of Miss Alice Roosevelt are showering upon her. These presents are literally fit for a princess or the bride of a mining king. But as much cannot be said for them when it is remembered that neither the bride nor the groom is wealthy.

There is an erroneous impression throughout the country that the bride-groom-to-be is a millionaire. The fact is that Mr. Longworth has literally nothing aside from his salary as a member of the house of representatives. His mother has a moderate fortune, but nothing compared with that which she is credited. As for Miss Roosevelt, herself, she has neither money nor expectations, according to the declaration of those who are posted intimately on the affairs of the president's family.

If the bridegroom-elect had been as wealthy as he is credited with being, it is natural to infer that he would install his bride in a house commensurate in its appointments with his income. Yet the house which has been leased is no better than those occupied by scores of Mr. Longworth's colleagues, who depend entirely upon their salaries as members for support. Reports of the character of the presents which have already been received or on their way indicate that the givers have gone upon the assumption that the young people are able to live in an atmosphere of regal magnificence.

"We can't give them anything in silver without duplicating some other gift," said a member of the New York delegation when the question of a present was being discussed. "I have learned that the best silver and goldsmiths of the country have exhausted their ingenuity in designing beautiful gifts. Already the White House is filled with enough silverware to stock the vaults of a score of dukes, and not even the London Guilds, those repositories of silver plate, can approach the magnificence of the display that has been sent to the president's daughter," and then the delegation decided upon a service of fabric glass. But glass is not needed, either, according to reports, for it is said that enough specimens of high art in cut crystal have been received to stock a dozen houses as large as that selected by the congressman for his bride.

In fact it appears that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been generously expended by the legion of friends of the bride and groom who have vied with each other in selecting something magnificent. The useful has been almost entirely ignored. The days when a chest of linen was considered one of the essential presents to a bride have passed away. No one thought of purchasing a house and furniture because everyone believed such a present would not only be unnecessary, but really offensive, and perhaps it would have been so regarded. But certainly Mrs. Longworth will experience great difficulty in finding use for half a dozen gold and silver punch bowls, fifteen or twenty silver candelabra and a score of epergnes of great value, much beauty but of doubtful utility. There are said to be bronzes enough to fill a room and silverware sufficient to stock a modern hotel. In fact, as asserted above, the presents would do credit to an Eastern princess, but they will doubtless prove burdensome to the sensible American girl who on next Saturday will be united to a well-bred, up-to-date, brainy American congressman, with a future before him but no bank account to speak of.

Carpenters, plasterers and painters are transforming the historic Chamberlain hotel, that for years has stood at the corner of Fifteenth and I streets, into a club house, family hotel or residence. Here in the olden days when John Chamberlain was alive and the king of hotel men of his generation, senators, representatives, governors, financiers, the captains of industry, mine owners, army and navy officers and the bonvivants of a decade ago, clinked glasses and made merry. Here the details of legislation were worked out. Here men were promoted or demoted, and within the historic place now being remodeled the world's best stories have been told. John F. Chamberlain died in 1897, and when he died the hostelry which bore his name began to show signs of decay, and although efforts were made to keep the house running and retain the atmosphere that prevailed in Chamberlain's time, they were unsuccessful, and for the past four years the rats and mice have held unlimited sway.

James G. Blaine lived in the second house now occupied by the Chamberlain club, and ex-Governor Swan of Maryland lived in the house adjoining, and which was included in the Chamberlain hotel during the flourishing days of his regime.

Some of the most fastidious parties and feasts have spiced the history of this old place, and some of the most noted sporting events have been "pulled off" here. Not that there have been prize fights within its walls, but the "sporting events" to which reference is made include the tremendous poker games which were almost nightly occurrences during the lifetime of John Chamberlain. An anecdote connected with the hotel's history is that of John Chamberlain's pat hand. The story as it has drifted down from the misty past concerns Chamberlain and a former Kentucky senator. One night when the wind was blowing a gale and snow was piling in drifts on Washington streets, a coterie of congenial spirits were in Chamberlain's back room, among them being Roscoe Conkling and a member of President Hayes' cabinet. The Kentucky senator, who for identification shall be called "Phil," sauntered in and seated himself in front of John Chamberlain. There was a pack of cards on the table at which Chamberlain was sitting, and "Phil" said: "John, suppose we run off a jackpot hand just to see how the cards are running today?"

"Don't care if I do, Phil, just to kill a little time. What's the limit."

Two hundred dollar bills were passed to the center of the table, and the players picked up their hands.

"Now, I don't want to be hard on a good friend," said Chamberlain, after looking studiously at his hand, "but I couldn't mistreat a pretty hand like this by being bashful, so I will ask you to put up $500 if you want to stay, Phil."

"Well, John, I want to show you how I appreciate your generosity, and at the same time be loyal to my own benign collection of cards, so I will 'see' the $500, and raise you about $500. How many cards?"

"Aw, you needn't trouble to give me any more; I'll try to make out with these. I don't like to bear down on such a good thing."

"Well, I think I'll observe the same patriotic spirit, and keep what I've got. It's your bet, John."

"Phil, you know I wouldn't take advantage of your ignorance of the game of poker for anything in the world, and I must advise you not to keep up your hazardous looseness. I'll bet $1,000, hoping to bluff you out, because, really, Phil, I don't want to take your money."

"You know, John," said the Kentuckian, "I have been feeling the same way toward you, but since you are proving so headstrong, I see that the only thing I can do is to teach you a good lesson. In other words, I'm going to punish you if you stay with this $1,000 raise."

Chamberlain drew a bank book and a fountain pen from his pocket. "I've resolved vengeance," he said. "You mistrust my sympathy for you, and—there. Will that stop you?"

"Nope; loan me the pen."

The Kentuckian called the proprietor of the Chamberlain hotel and both spread down their hands together with $14,700 in the pot. The witnesses were standing behind each chair.

"You win," said the Kentuckian; "let's have a drink."

On Feb. 26, 27 and 28, the United States civil service commission will hold an examination at many places throughout the Union to secure eligibles to fill vacancies of cadets in the revenue cutter service. Among the places where this examination will be held are Albany, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Ithica, Plattsburg Court House, Rochester, Syracuse and Utica, N. Y.; Grand Island, Lincoln and Omaha, Neb.; Fargo, Grand Forks and Pembina Court House, N. D.; Logan and Salt Lake City, Utah; Boise and Moscow, Idaho; Cheyenne and Larable, Wyo.; Des Moines, Dubuque, Fort Madison, Iowa City, Mason City and Siouxe City, Iowa; Aberdeen, Deadwood, Sioux Falls and Watertown, S. D.; Duluth, Mankato and St. Paul, Minn.

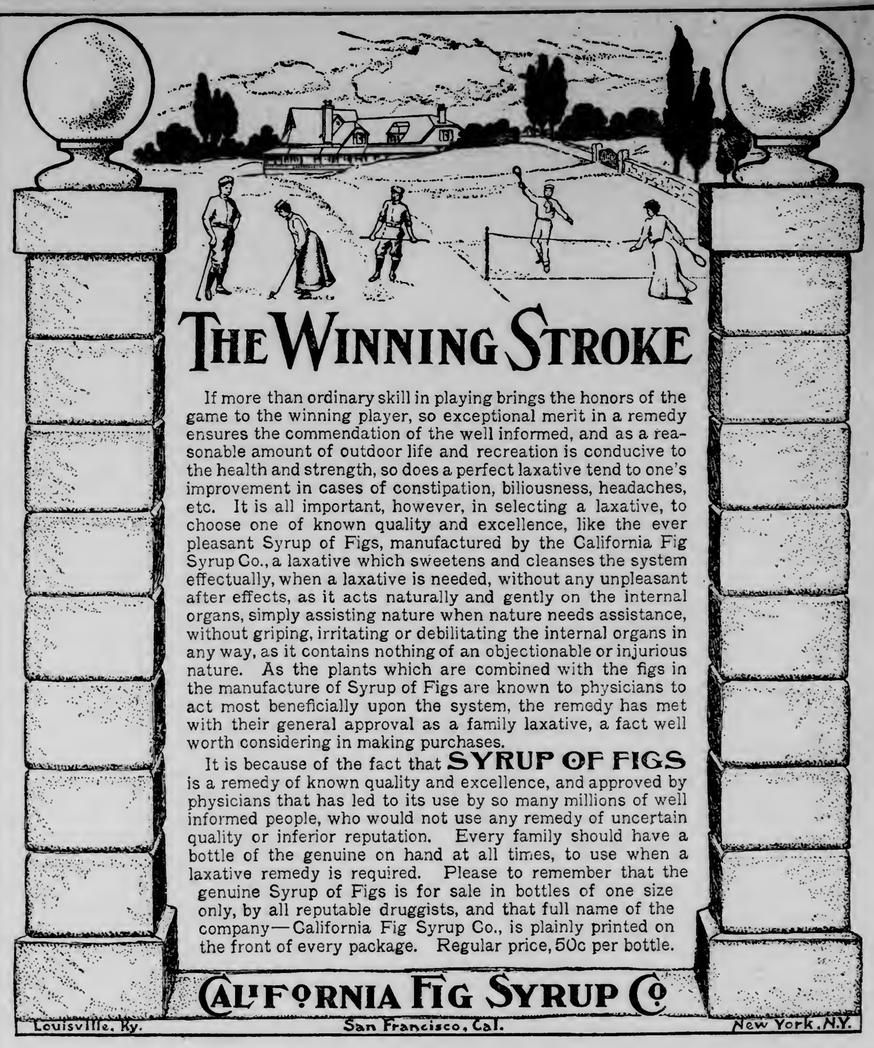

This examination offers an opportunity to bright energetic young men after beneficial training with pay of three years, to become commissioned officers in the service of the United States. Applicants for examinations west of the Mississippi are urged to forward their applications so as to reach the commission not less than ten days, and for examinations east of the Mississippi not less than six days prior to the date of the examinations so that arrangements may be made to examine them.

The examination consists in the following subjects: Spelling, arithmetic, algebra, general geography, geometry, plain and solid; world's history and Constitution of the United States, physics, general information, trigonometry, grammar, rhetoric and composition, English literature and one modern language, French, German or Spanish. Under the law and the regulations of the treasury department, cadets, when appointed, must be not less than 18 nor more than 25 years of age, of vigorous constitution, physically sound and well formed, not less than 5 feet 3 inches in height, of good moral character, and unmarried. The marriage of a cadet is considered as an equivalent to his resignation.

The salary of a cadet is $500 per annum and one computed ration per day. There are in the revenue cutter service twenty-five cruising vessels and fourteen harbor tugs and launches.

A Habit to Be Encouraged.

The mother who has acquired the habit of keeping on hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy saves herself a great amount of uneasiness and anxiety. Coughs, colds and croup, to which children are susceptible, are quickly cured by its use. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and if given as soon as the first symptoms of croup appear, it will prevent the attack. This remedy contains nothing injurious, and mothers give it to little ones with a feeling of perfect security. Sold by all druggists.

RAILROADS

IMMIGRANT MOVEMENT

Many People From Foreign Lands Passing Through Duluth.

Imports of Railroad Equipment Into Canada Show Falling Off.

Quite a few immigrants are now coming in over the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road and passing through Duluth on their way to other Northwestern points. The movement of this class of passengers usually begins about this time of the year, but does not reach its height until along in April or May.

These immigrants generally arrive in groups of from five or six to thirty or forty. For the most part they are going farther West with the intention of settling on farming lands, but many of them are bound for range points, where they probably have relatives working in the mines, or where they themselves intend to begin such work. Last year the movement was heavier than ever before.

It is believed that it will also be heavy this season, but there is no accurate method of calculating just what it is likely to be, and the railroad officials never know just how extended it will be until the immigrants actually arrive.

IMPORTS ARE LESS.

Canada Getting Fewer Locomotives and Rails From the United States.

The Railway Age says that a significant feature of Canadian development is exhibited in figures showing the imports of Canada from the United States of steel rails and locomotives. In 1904 the export business of the United States with Canada in locomotives amounted to $1,353,331—a slight increase over the preceding year—while in 1905 the amount was $393,624, according to figures published by the bureau of statistics, department of commerce and labor.

"The fact is all the more significant," says the Age, "taken in connection with the figures showing the volume of export business of the United States with other countries by which the million dollar loss on Canadian business is not only counterbalanced, but an additional million is added to the total for 1905 over that shown for 1901. It is not strange that such should be the case when the activity of locomotive building plants in Canada is taken into account. It does indicate, however, that a considerable volume of business upon which American locomotive builders have been accustomed to reckon has been diverted into Canadian home markets, with a strong probability that it will remain there. Statistics covering the steel rail business are hardly less significant. In 1901 the exports of steel rails amounted to 252,885 tons, while in 1905 the amount was 24,159 tons. It is true that the volume of this business in 1903 was only 21,219 tons, and it may therefore be considered that conditions were more nearly normal in 1905 than in 1904; nevertheless some credit for the falling off should be given to the establishment of rail mills in Canada.

STANDARD OIL GETS IT.

A Controlling Interest in the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton.

Cincinnati, Feb. 13.—The Commercial Tribune today says: "Controlling interest in the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad has passed into the hands of the Standard Oil company and the route which has long been the ambition of the old Northern Securities contingent in the financial world has been secured, if statements verified by Cincinnatians interested in the road are to be believed.

Several days ago it was rumored in Wall street that the stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton which had been in the hands of J. Pierpont Morgan since the Zimmerman episode had been turned over to a syndicate headed by George W. Perkins and Norman B. Ream.

Yesterday the statements of men high in the financial world were received by brokers and railroad officials of Cincinnati. According to one man closely connected with the affairs of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, it was declared that enough stock had passed over to the Perkins' syndicate to control the affairs of the road. As the men who head the syndicate are leaders in the affairs of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the connection between the present deal and the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific is established in the opinion of local railroad men.

Fifty per cent of the Cincinnati Southern stock is owned by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, and with the control of these two roads the Northern Securities interest will have an outlet to the Southeast from the rich fields of the North and Northwest.

When seen regarding the matter, Secretary Thomas Walsh of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, declared that he had nothing to say regarding the statements of men who are generally admitted to be in close touch with the affairs of the road.

Special Ski Rates.

The Great Northern has granted special excursion rates to parties desiring to attend the Bolsey, Minn., ski tournament next Sunday. It is believed that there will be quite a large attendance from Duluth, it has not yet been definitely decided whether a special train will be run over the South Shore road to accommodate Duluthians who wish to attend the Ishpeming ski tournament, Feb. 22. The meeting of the local club, called to consider arrangements for the latter tournament, will be held Friday evening instead of tonight, as was originally planned, because several members of the club have not yet returned from Stillwater.

A few pretty girls, hoop skirts of prodigious size and the wonderfully easy way in which the girls, pretty and otherwise, manipulated the hoop skirts were the distinguishing and most interesting things about "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," the military two-act comic opera which was produced at the Lyceum last evening.

The songs are even more numerous than is usual in the average comic opera, and some of them were pretty. Especially popular were the patriotic airs at the close of the first act. So insistent was the applause that the curtain had to be raised five or six times at this point. "Katie, My Southern Rose," always popular, was one of the song hits of the evening as sung by W. P. Carleton and Miss Gertrude Vaughn.

Miss Gertrude Vaughn was one of the pretty girls. She took the part of Kate Pemberton and did very well in it. Miss Bertha Darel appeared as Cordelia Allen, and put a good deal of spirit and energy into her work. Miss Jean Salisbury made a very charming and pretty Widow Pemberton. Miss May Belding appeared to advantage as Robert Pemberton. Nothing particularly good was noticeable about the acting of the men in the cast.

THE AVENUE GIRLS

Make Fine Impression Upon Patrons of Metropolitan.

The Avenue Girls are at the Metropolitan this week with an entertainment that is considerably better than any which have been seen there for some time. Their show surpasses, in some respects, that given by the High School Girls, who made a big hit with the patrons of the "Met."

The company is a large one and the Campbell-Drew Amusement company has mounted both burlesques lavishly. The costumes are elaborate enough to be used in a Henry W. Savage production. The principal comedian of the company is George P. Murphy, and he is one of the funniest ever. A regular Louis Mann!

Most burlesquers are clever and with Mr. Murphy to interpret the principal comedy roles, things are fine and daisy. Maxwell Reynolds plays an Irishman less offensively than some of them and Jack Vincent and Jules Bennett are excellent in male roles. Olga Orloff and Grace De Mar sing most of the songs.

A charming miss whose name is given on the program as May Curtis contributes the best stunt of all to the olio. Miss Curtis has a pleasing contralto voice and all of her songs are good. She is the first to sing "If a Little Boy Like You Loved a Girl Like Me," which is very pretty. Her imitations of Ethel Levy and Fay Templeton are also good, although last night's audience was not very well acquainted with either of them.

The Three Gregory Brothers are in need of some rehearsals. Otherwise, they are good hoop manipulators. Jules Bennett sings some good parodies; Olga Orloff and the members of the chorus do the same old military stunt; the moving pictures are good and Murphy and Vincent accomplish a fair sidewalk conversation. It would have been better, however, to have omitted Messrs. Murphy and Vincent's stunt in the olio. Mr. Murphy is the principal prop of the burlesque and when he is stuck into the olio with a mediocre act, there is apt to be too much Murphy.

AT THE BIJOU.

Patrons of the Bijou theater declare that the bill this week is a good one. There is hardly a weak act on the entire bill. It is started off by Al Christal, who calls himself a "singist, talkist and paper tearist." Mr. Christal's act is worthy of the time that is given to it. Ida Russell is a very clever woman and her monologue was greeted with all kinds of applause last evening. Her songs are good and she sings them well. She is assisted by a small dog.

The Savoys are acrobatic comedy sketch artists—and good ones. They close their turn with a burlesque boxing bout. Harrie Wilmot sings "In Dear Old Georgia" well, and to the accompaniment of colored pictures, Florilla Sanford is a clever cornettist.

Bert White tells some new and some old stories, but tells them all well. Herbert, the frog man, has mounted his act handsomely and accomplishes some marvelous feats of contortion, and the moving pictures are very interesting.

The Jar of Coughing

Hammer blows, steadily applied, break the hardest rock. Coughing, day after day, jars and tears the throat and lungs until the healthy tissues give way. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral stops the hard coughing, heals the torn membranes.

WEST DULUTH

CITY ASKS LAND GRANT

For Ramsey Street Dock and Approach To It.

Business and Workingmen Hope It Will Come Soon.

The matter of the Ramsey street dock is still a very live topic at West Duluth and the business men are particularly anxious to see the matter brought to a head. The West Duluth Land company has not yet given its decision as to what kind of a grant it will make the city for a dock and a right-of-way over its property to the dock site. Until this is done the city can do nothing as City Attorney Fesler will not sanction action regarding the building of the dock otherwise regarding it as a sheer waste of money, as the city could be shut off from it at any time should any other concern purchase the property. In this view of the matter the aldermen from West Duluth and the business men coincide, but the need of a dock is great and it is with anxiety that the business interests and the working men look forward to a grant from the company. It will save much time and expense for those of West Duluth who work in Superior and there are many of these.

It will also be of value if a grant is made before the ice goes off the bay as pile driving for the dock will be much easier and cheaper than otherwise. It is hoped that the work of building a dock will be completed before the time for running a ferry will have arrived.

MRS. SENNOTT DEAD.

Spinal Meningitis Takes Away Well Known Old Resident.

Mrs. Mary Sennott, one of the best known residents of West Duluth, died this morning at her home, 5310 Gosnold street. Spinal meningitis was the cause of her death and she has been sick from this for four weeks, suffering to a considerable extent until death relieved her. Mrs. Sennott has been a resident of West Duluth for thirteen years and was widely known here. She was probably, it is said, one of the most popular women in this end of the city and her death will be widely regretted. She leaves a son and a daughter, William Sennott and Miss Tessie Sennott, both of whom live in West Duluth.

The funeral will take place Friday morning from St. James Catholic church and interment will be in Calvary cemetery.

Evangelistic Services.

Evangelistic services are being held in the various churches of West Duluth this week and next week union services of all the churches will be held in Westminister Presbyterian church, during which Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church of Duluth will be the speaker.

Tonight at Asbury M. E. church, the pastor, Rev Thomas Grice will preach on "Our Duty." At Westminster Presbyterian church tonight the pastor, Rev. W. J. Lowrie will speak on "Confessing Christ."

Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given last evening in honor of Gust Rakowsky of 611 North Fifty-eight avenue west, and a most enjoyable time was had. The following were present: Messrs. and Mesdames Charles Rakowsky, Ernest Rowe, H. W. Hanson, John Cashel and Bushart, and Misses Gertrude Rowe, Mrs. Knowles and Mr. McVan.

West Duluth Briefs.

Walter Evered of the National Iron works has gone to the Sault to look over some work there which his company may take.

The dance given last evening in Wade's hall by the Degree of Honor was well attended and was in every way a success.

Edward Warner will shortly start into business on Central avenue again. This time it will be the confectionery business, not a restaurant.

Miss Sophie Lindgren has gone to Chicago on business.

At the card party given last evening in Wade's hall by the Modern Samaritans and the Beneficient degree, Miss Dow won the ladies' prize and Curtis Sliger the men's prize.

Miss Zula Henneberger, superintendent of the Duluth hospital, has resigned, and Miss Brockey, well-known here, has been appointed to succeed her.

Jewelry repairing—Hurst, 301 Central.

Frank Pokerney, chief engineer at the match factory, is expecting his father from Wisconsin today or tomorrow, and will entertain him here for a few days.

Michael Haley is back from the Sault and will leave this week for Washington state to work for a lumber company near Spokane.

Fram lodge, No. 5, Sons of Norway, will hold a special meeting Saturday night at Gilley's hall.

WILL TAKE UP CHARGES

Council Committee Will Investigate the Case Against Chief Black.

Hearing Will Be Taken Out of Fire Board's Hands.

The charges against Chief Black are likely to be heard before a council committee instead of before the board of fire commissioners.

Mayor Cullum will submit a communication to the council this evening requesting the council to appoint a committee to hear the charges preferred by Don Cameron, the former member of the fire department, against the chief.

Cameron brought his case before the board and the members told him to set a date when it would be convenient for him to state his case through his attorney, Porter J. Neff. The date was practically set for tomorrow evening, but at the council meeting this evening some action will probably be taken which will render the meeting of the board unnecessary. If the matter is taken up by the council it will no doubt be dropped by the board.

In case the council conducts the investigation, it will doubtless be held in public, especially since Chief Black has requested that it be conducted without any appearance of secrecy.

The charges which Cameron has to bring are understood to be based upon certain methods employed in purchasing supplies for the department. The charges first came up several weeks ago, but the hearing was postponed until after election. It is now proposed to give the matter a thorough airing before a committee appointed by the council for the purpose. The committee will be chosen tonight and a date probably set for the hearing.

ANOTHER COLD WAVE COMING

Temperature is Expected to Take Quite a Drop.

Be prepared. A cold wave is coming from the Northwest and it is due to play an engagement in Duluth, beginning in all probability on the morrow.

There is every indication that it will be 20 degs. below zero tomorrow morning and the cold is expected to keep up all day. The day will be enlivened and made colder at times by a brisk Northwest wind. This breeze will probably begin operations this afternoon and continue this evening.

JOHN M'KEE DIES.

John McKee, an old resident, passed away Friday morning at his late residence, 2126 West Second street, at the age of 81 years. He was stricken with paralysis Wednesday morning and lived until Friday. His body was laid to rest in Oneota cemetery.

He was a graduate of a college in the North of Ireland, where his parents lived before his birth and where they owned a large estate. He was a noted mathematician, being learned in trigonometry and all the higher branches. When a young man he went to Canada and engaged in the lumber business, and later had a contract with the Union Pacific at the time of construction. He was a prominent figure in the California gold fields in 1849. He crossed the continent eleven times and had been in every state in the Union.

At the time of the Civil war, his only brother enlisted in the Seventy-seventh Pennsylvania, was taken prisoner and cast into Libby prison, where he died. Mr. McKee came to Duluth in the fall of 1881.

Besides a wife he leaves six children, Mrs. E. W. Nichols of Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. M. L. Fraser, John I. and W. A. McKee of Duluth, Mrs. E. E. Taylor of El Paso, Tex., and Mrs. W. F. Kohagen of Hibbing.

LIFE'S FRILLS ARE COSTLY.

Omaha School Trustee Scores Teachers for Asking More Pay.

Omaha, Feb. 13.—"Plain, every-day living—the simple life—perhaps, has not increased in cost; it is the artificial living that costs more," says David Cole, member of the Omaha board of education to the school teachers' who are aggrieved that their request for higher salaries was turned down by the board. The teachers and their friends argue that the cost of living has increased, but Cole combats the argument, and adds: "The trouble lies in the fact that people are not content to live these days as they used to.

What To Eat and When to Eat

Two Important Questions Answered Easily After Reading This.

Every nutritive element of the best white wheat grown is found in Malta-Vita. This famous food is the whole of the wheat thoroughly steamed and cooked in absolutely purity and mixed with the finest malt extract that was ever made, thus it is the richest, strongest food in the world. You understand, of course, that the cooking and steaming of the wheat gelatinizes its starch, and then the malt extract, a powerful digestive agent, quickly converts this starch into maltose, or malt sugar. Maltose is great food, and the weakest stomach digests and assimilates it without effort.

We all know that for many years physicians of high standing in their profession have prescribed malt extracts, which contain a large percentage of maltose. Malta-Vita, the crisp, delicious whole-wheat food, contains from eight to ten per cent of maltose.

When Malta-Vita comes from the ovens, it is the crispest, most delicious food in the world, containing only one per cent of moisture. The other 99 per cent is food—brain and bone and nerve and muscle food—and most easily digested.

A New Magazine for You

I am bringing out another new magazine that you will come pretty close to liking. I wouldn't be surprised if it hit you harder than anything in the shape of a magazine you have ever seen. There isn't much style to it, but it has the stuff in it that you and everybody else will want to read. It is called

THE SCRAP BOOK

Something New in Magazine Making

THE SCRAP BOOK is the most elastic thing that ever happened in the way of a magazine—elastic enough to carry anything from a tin whistle to a battleship. Everything that appeals to the human brain and human heart comes within its compass—fiction, which is the backbone of periodical circulation; biography, review, philosophy, science, art, poetry, wit, humor, pathos, satire, the weird, the mystical—everything that can be classified and everything that cannot be classified. A paragraph, a little bit, a saying, an editorial, a joke, a maxim, an epigram.

Nothing Like It in the World

There isn't anything in the world just like THE SCRAP BOOK. It is an idea on which we have been working for several years, and for which we have been gathering materials. We have bought hundreds and hundreds of scrap books from all over the country, some of them a century old, and are still buying them. From these books we are gathering and classifying an enormous number of gems, and facts and figures, and historical and personal bits that are of rare value. Furthermore, we have a corps of people ransacking libraries, reading all the current publications, the leading daily papers, and digging out curious and quaint facts and useful facts and figures from reference book, cyclopedia, etc., etc.

Don't fail to get a copy of this first issue of THE SCRAP BOOK. It sells at the price at which all our other magazines sell—Ten Cents a Copy and One Dollar by the Year.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

A Railroad Man Meets a Terrible Death at Kindred.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Severt Hongslo, in charge of the Great Northern watertank at Kindred, in this county, met death in a peculiar manner. The pipes from the well to the tank had become frozen and he was engaged in thawing them out. The pipes are wide at the top and run to a point in the bottom of the well, forming a V-shaped affair. Hongslo started to crawl through the trap door, slipped and fell headlong into the well and his body was caught between the pipes, being crushed and crowded together as the pipes narrowed. He was held in this manner until he slowly suffocated.

His little 3-year-old boy burned to death, his little girl so badly burned she may die, and his home destroyed. John Jensen, a settler in Sargent county, feels the fates have dealt harshly with him. Mr. and Mrs. Jensen were in the barn doing some work when the house caught fire and gained such headway that the children started the fire by playing with paper in the stove.

Judge Polock has taken under advisement the injunction proceedings by the Typothetae against the members of the Typographical union. The job house people claimed the printers were causing annoyance and trouble by picketing, intimidation and threats, and asked for a permanent restraining order. The printers entered a general denial, and also complained the Typothetae was an illegal combination to stifle competition and to control the price of job work.

A damage suit for $20,000 has been instituted in the United States court by Amos Touscany of Hennepin county, Minnesota, against Edward Towns of Dickey county, in this state. Touscany was employed on Towns' farm. They became involved in a quarrel which resulted, it is alleged, in Towns shooting the hired man. The latter was taken to Aberdeen, S. D., and his injuries were of such a nature as to cause the amputation of his leg.

New Rockford—T. P. Morris, who is an old resident of this place, has been retired on full pay after more than half a century of continual government service. His life was begun under rather difficult circumstances, he having been born on the ship Rolling Phoenix Nov. 9, 1828, during a voyage across the Indian ocean. He enlisted in the United States army at Boston Feb. 2, 1852, at which time he was made a drill sergeant. He participated in most of the battles with the Indians since the time of his enlistment, and though now nearly 78 years of age, still retains his mental faculties, and relates many experiences of his early travels through the West, as well as adventures of his earlier service.

Grand Forks—Matt Doyle, charged in Cavalier county with kidnaping, and who was recently released under a cash bond of $1,000, is visiting here. Doyle is charged with kidnaping Vincent Weild about Nov. 1, and absolutely no trace has been obtained of the missing man. The authorities blame Doyle with being responsible for the disapearance of Wield because of the fact that the latter had just transferred some valuable real estate to him. Doyle denies any knowledge of the whereabouts of the missing man.

Quite a number of North Dakotans have been victimized the last few months, by a so-called detective agency of New York, against which a fraud order was issued by the postoffice department Jan. 8. The agency found numerous victims by addressing letters to each, setting forth that they had found they were entiteld to a share of some estate in the old country, and following with the proposition taat on receipt of $2 in each case the agency would investigate further and take charge of the case for the persons who were to benefit by the division of the estate mentioned. Just how many were victimized will probably never be known, most of them being of foreign birth. The matter was reported to Vice Consul H. Bendeke by some of those who received the letters, with the result that he took up the matter with the postmaster general. His letter was referred to W. J. Vickery, chief postoffice inspector, and Mr. Bendeke has been advised that the business methods of the detective agency have already received the attention of the department, and a fraud order was issued early in January, denying the use of the United States mails to the World Detective agency. Letters and remittances made since the issuance of the order will be returned to the senders.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sturgis—Fire broke out Sunday morning in the Francis block, a two-story brick building, and had a big headway when it was discovered. The building was destroyed. The loss is $12,000, with insurance about $9,000.

The building was occupied by S. T. Voorhes, hardware and furniture; J. W. Brackett, drug store; John Monheim, dry goods.

The losses are: Voorhees, $10,000 in stock damaged by fire and $3,500 in breakage, insurance, $3,000; Brackett, total loss $3,500, insurance, $1,000; Monheim, total loss $4,500 and insurance, $3,000.

The fire is said to have started in Monheim's, but the cause is not known.

MANKATO ATTORNEY

Gives His Friends a Surprise by His Marriage.

Mankato, Minn., Feb. 13.—Mankato is all agog over a wedding that was solemnized at Richmond, Va., last Friday afternoon. The first news of the secret marriage came late Saturday afternoon, and it was a great surprise to almost every one in Mankato. A. E. Clark, a prominent attorney of this city, was united in marriage to Mrs. Marcella Man, a former resident of this city, and the divorced wife of A. P. Man, a prominent Eastern railroad man and for several years in the employ of the Plant system. Mr. Clark has a legion of friends in Mankato, and the bride is a charming lady of many social and literary attainments, and a daughter of the late Judge James Brown. Mrs. Clark went to Virginia several weeks ago, and Mr. Clark followed her there a few days ago, and the wedding no doubt was a quiet one. They are expected to return to Mankato in a short time, but whether they will make their home here for any length of time is a question that has engaged the attention of Dame Rumor for some time. Mr. Clark is a young man of brilliant parts, and possesses a very bright future in his profession. His parents live at Redwood Falls, and he is connected professionally with several large enterprises. Mrs. Clark was born and reared in Mankato and is popular with a large circle of friends.

WHY HE MOVED.

John Hield, a genial Scotchman, is floor walker in a large department store in New London, Ct., says the Boston Herald. One day a customer said to him: 'Do you keep stationery?"

"No," he replied; "if I did I should lose my job."

WEAKNESS IN WHEAT

Rain in Winter Wheat Region and Lower Cables Break Prices.

Lower Flax Markets Abroad and the Home Market Suffers.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 13.—The winter wheat country had some moisture, and as it has been in need of it, this was used to depress prices of wheat this morning, together with a decline of ⅜d to ½d at Liverpool. Paris was unchanged to ¼c lower, Berlin ½c lower, Budapest ¼c lower and Antwerp unchanged. World's shipments were liberal.

The May option fell ⅜-½c in Duluth, ⅜c in Chicago, ½c in Minneapolis, ⅛c in New York, ⅝c in St. Louis, ½-⅝c in Kansas City and ⅜c in Winnipeg.

Corn was also weaker, the May option in Chicago closing ¼-⅜c lower and Liverpool ½d lower. May oats in Chicago closed ⅛-¼c lower.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week of last years were as follows:

WHEAT.	Last week.	Previous week.	Last year.
America	3,088,000	2,968,000	1,152,000
Russia	2,296,000	2,432,000	2,792,000

Argentina	634,000	292,000	214,000
Total	5,411,000	6,126,000	2,479,000

The amount of wheat on passage increased 4,824,000 bus., and corn decreased 2,186,000 bus.

Car receipts at Duluth were 134, against 30 last year, and at Minneapolis 728, against 486 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 862 against 486 last year. Chicago received 33 against 23 last year. Winnipeg received 167 against 90 last year. Primary receipts of wheat were 1,180,000 bus, last year 767,000 bus. Shipments 362,000 bus, last year 345,000 bus.

The visible supply of wheat last week decreased 754,000 bus, and is now 47,783,000 bus, against 38,098,000 bus last year.

Primary receipts of corn were 1,774,000 bus, last year 721,000 bus. Shipments 746,000 bus, last year 583,000 bus. The visible supply of corn last week increased 477,000 bus, and is now 15,327 bus, against 10,504 bus, last year.

Wheat was quiet in the Duluth market today. May wheat opened ⅜c lower at 83⅝c, fell to 83½c at 9:36 and rallied to 83⅝c at 10:14. At 11:57, the price fell to 83⅜-½c and at 12:07 rallied to 83½c. The closing price was 83½-⅝c, a loss of ⅜-½c from Saturday. July wheat opened ⅜c lower at 84¾c and closed at 84⅞c, a loss of ½c from Saturday.

Flax was lower in the foreign markets and the lower prices abroad were largely responsible for those in the local market. Laplatta linseed was 2¼c lower and Calcutta ¾c lower in London and Antwerp quoted flax at ¼c lower. May flax opened ¼c higher at $1.18¼, fell to $1.17¾, rallied to $1.18 and ranged between that and $1.17¼ during the rest of the session. The closing prices was $1.17¼, a loss of ⅞c from Saturday. July flax opened unchanged at $1.19¼, advanced to $1.19⅜, fell to $1.19⅛, rallied to $1.19¼ and fell to $1.18¾. The closing price was $1.18½, a loss of ¾c from Saturday. September was inactive and closed 1c lower at $1.18.

Oats were ½c up and other coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wet Weather Causes a Weak Tone in the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Wet weather in the winter wheat section of the United States and lower cables caused a weak tone in the wheat market here today. Weekly statistics were favorable to the bears, reports showing liberal increase in world's shipments and also in the amount of breadstuff on ocean passage. Pit traders were the chief sellers, and the demand came principally from commission houses. The May option opened ¼c to ⅜c lower at 85⅛c to 85¼c, sold at 85¼@⅜c and then declined to 84⅞@85c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 811 cars against 223 cars last week and 538 cars a year ago.

After May had touched 84⅞c the market became steadier on covering by shorts, who were moved to action by the prediction of a cold wave. Prices remained steady for the remainder of the session. The close was steady with May off ⅜@½c at 85@⅛c.

The corn market was easy because of lower cables, liberal local receipts and the decline in wheat. May opened a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 43⅝c to 43¾@⅞c and then declined to 43½c. Local receipts were 752 cars, with 29 of contract grade.

The market became weaker on realizing by longs. The low point for May was reached at 43⅜c. The close was weak, with May off ¼@⅜c, at 43½c.

Sentiment in oats was bearish in sympathy with wheat and corn. Trading, which was not large, was for the most part confined to local traders. May opened a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 30c to 30⅛c, and for a time held within these figures. Local receipts 269 cars.

An advance from 10c to 15c in the price of live hogs caused an active and strong provisions market. May pork opened 15c higher at $15.15 and sold up to $15.20. Lard was up 5@7½c at $7.80½. Ribs were 5c to 7½c higher at $7.92½ to $7.95.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Considering the news received, the most ardent bear must admit market shows stubborn strength. At the start we were confronted with breaking of drought in the southwest, lower cables, and liberal world's shipments, and as the day advanced cash markets in the Southwest showed a crumbling away, with prices about 2 cents lower. The increase on passage was discouraging to the bulls and added to the bearish feeling. There is no denying shorts are timid about getting far from shore. They realize there are many uncertainties in the situation and feel, too, that the accidents to happen would naturally help the other side. At the same time it helps the bulls but little. The situation is mixed. The bears have the advantage in that it is too early yet to seriously consider crop complaints, and the situation in that direction has improved.

Corn and oats—The market took on a dragging tendency right at the start, and while the decline is not far reaching, the selling was discouragingly persistent. Corn closed ¼@¼c lower, oats unchanged to 1c lower. Cash business continues slow, demand being limited, with farmers more inclined to accept bids sent out over night. We see nothing at the moment likely to encourage anything lasting on the bull side.

Provisions closed strong and sharply higher right at the top of the day. While the extreme advance came in pork, lard and ribs were also active and well bought. The public are in this pit and confident of their position. An easing off from today's sharp advance would not be surprising, but on the soft spots think would buy provisions.

Broomhall's summary of crop conditions:

United Kingdom—There are occasional complaints heard with regard to the condition of the crops.

France—The outlook has improved owing to the seasonable weather; there is occasional continued talk of importing foreign grain up to the end of the season.

Germany—Snow has fallen but there is some anxiety concerning the crops.

Hungary—The weather is unsettled, but no complaints are heard.

Roumania and Bulgaria—The condition of the crops is satisfactory. The weather is very mild and navigation on the Danube has reopened.

Russia—The weather is very mild and the condition of the crops is generally very favorable. Trade is very dull, indicating lighter shipments.

Italy—The situation in this country is favorable.

Broomhall says: That according to an official Indian report for the week ending Feb. 3, 1906, rain has fallen in all the districts of the United Provinces except three, which has been beneficial for the crops, but more rain, however, is urgently wanted. Slight rains have fallen in the Punajub, while other droughty provinces have been generally rainless. The outlook is worse and commercial cables state that holders are very firm.

Treasury Balances.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

At the Market's Close But Sharply Strong in Spots.

Coppers and Smelters Advanced Early But Ruled Erratic.

New York, Feb. 13.—Opening prices in the stock market showed excited advances in some of the specialties, and fractional gains predominated in the body of the list with a few scattered losses. The copper and smelting stocks were conspicuous. Anaconda jumped 12½ and there were 12,000 shares of Amalgamated Copper sold at 117½ and 118 compared with 115½ on Saturday. The rise in Smelting reached 2⅝, Northern Pacific 4⅛, Great Northern preferred 2¾, Reading 1⅜, Kansas City Southern 1¼, the preferred and Union Pacific 1⅛, Colorado Fuel and Distillers Securities a point and Brooklyn Transit and National Biscuit large fractions. The United States Steel preferred, Southern Railway and New York Central were off a small fraction.

Hurried efforts to sell out at the attractive prices ruling at the outset, brought a great deal of stock on the market and prices had to be lowered very substantially before it was marketed. The reaction reached 7 points in Anaconda, 2 in Northern Pacific, 1½@1¾ in Amalgamated Copper and Smelting and 1 in Reading and Great Northern preferred. Some stocks that had not benefited very much in the opening rise declined to a fraction below Saturday's closing. Northwestern gave way 2 and Locomotive and United States Rubber 1. Bull operators renewed their efforts in new quarters after a while and there was a strong rally, but none of the opening features recovered fully. Consolidated Gas gained 3, Chicago Union Traction preferred 2½, Sugar 2¼, New York Central 2, New York, Chicago & St. Louis 1¾ and Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis, Illinois Central, Atlantic Coast Line, Beet Sugar and Biscuit 1 to 1¼. Northwestern rallied 3.

A few strong stocks failed to sustain prices where profit-taking sales were made and a general yielding occurred. Some of the important previous gains were wiped out. When Reading started up again with a gain of 1¾ there was a rally. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo rose 3. Bonds were heavy at noon.

The market showed a flash of animation and strength after 12 o'clock, the centralized strength of the Hill stocks and certain specialties encouraging a wider demand for the active stocks. Reading and New York Central were bought heavily, and some of the low-priced minor stocks were in demand. Northern Pacific advanced 6½, Chicago Union Traction preferred 4½ and Consolidated Gas 4.

Few features of interest attended the afternoon trading, the speculation being largely of a desultory character, owing to the uncertain sentiment. Anaconda rose again to 300 and Tennessee Coal made up nearly all of its 3 points loss. Northwestern improved 2½ and Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, Colorado Southern and American Car preferred yielded a point.

A rise in public utilities followed the mination of the 7⅝ point rise in Northern Pacific, but the general list was but slightly responsive and gave way to reaction later. Metropolitan Street Railway gained 2¼, Securities 2½, Brooklyn Transit 1¾, People's Gas and Pacific Mail 1¼ and American Ice 1. Prices ran off again abruptly to the low point of the day. Anaconda reacted 6¾, Northern Pacific and Great Northern 3, Amalgamated Copper 1⅝ and Reading more than its previous rise. United States Steel was carried a point below Saturday. American Car rose 1½ in final dealings and there were some rallies. The closing was barely steady but rather dull.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed irregular, sharply strong in spots, notably Northern Pacific. Copper stocks and Smelters were advanced with a rush at the opening, but ruled erratic and under pressure from realizing through most of the session. The expected announcement of merger was not forthcoming, but it is expected some time during the day. On strength in copper and allied stocks there was much profit-taking through the balance of the list. This was particularly true in Steels, which showed a dragging tendency. The reserve is getting down near the legal requirements and this may cause a higher rate for call money, with the banks inclined to husband their resources. The volume of business was not large and the irregularity seemed to testify to a mixed opinion. The immediate future of the market is likely to take its cue from the announcement of the copper merger.

* * *

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market opened very strong, with special strength in Anaconda and Amalgamated, and Northern Pacific. There was some good selling in Steel stocks, especially the common, which declined very easily and there also appeared considerable Union Pacific for sale. The terms of settlement of the Montana copper difficulty had not much effect, but there was heavy selling of the stock when it struck 118. There was a marked rally in prices about 2 o'clock but this was short lived and the market sold off rapidly and closed rather heavy and well under the best prices. Action on the North Pacific dividend is expected tomorrow.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened quiet considering the activity in Amalgamated and Anaconda, which advanced sharply from Saturday's close, on predicted favorable announcements regarding Montana litigation. Calumet showed much strength, up 10 points on small trading and light offerings. Old Dominion was active, strong feature on reports of striking rich body of sulphide ore. In the afternoon the whole market seemed to gain strength under continued advance of Amalgamated. We would buy good coppers for a turn, as we believe they will all sell higher this week.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Owing to the failure of the Greene Consolidated Copper company to comply with its agreement to give proper notice to the stock exchange of the proposed increase in the capital stock, its shares are stricken from the list, by order of the governing committee. On transactions in Greene Consolidated Copper company made on and after Feb. 1, 1906, the buyer is entitled to a due bill for the rights pertaining thereto.

THE SWEDISH LUTHERANS

Will Hold Their Annual Conference With Church at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual meeting of the Minnesota conference of the Swedish Lutheran church opened today at the First Swedish Lutheran church, Woodward and John streets. The conference will last a week and will bring to St. Paul more than 400 delegates, besides a number of other people who attend the meetings. The real business will not begin until tomorrow, but the ministers met at 10 o'clock this morning for a conference on the subject, "What Are the Distinguishing Features of a Truly Productive Sermon." The discussion will be led by Rev. J. O. Cavallin of Braham.

This evening the conference will be formally opened by an address of welcome by the pastor of the church, Rev. D. Peterson. The president of the conference, Rev. J. A. Krantz of Duluth will preach the "Conference Sermon."

The large jubilee chorus of the church will sing the 25th and 77th Psalms with solo parts.

The business sessions will open tomorrow morning, and will continue every morning at 9 and every afternoon at 2:30, until the business before the meeting is completed. Governor Johnson will address the delegates at the first session.

ADVANTAGES OF NEW FIELD GUN

Washington, Feb. 13.—General Crozier, chief of the ordance department, have given testimony before a subcommittee of the house committee on appropriations in explanation of his estimate for the field guns adopted two years ago. "The new gun," so he said, "is not very much more powerful than the old one. It is of a little smaller caliber nevertheless firing a little heavier projectile. The principal difference in the carriage is that for the new gun it permits a very long recoil of the gun upon the carriage in discharge. This recoil is sometimes over three feet. For this reason the action of the gun upon the carriage in the recoil is very gentle and the carriage is not displaced nor is any time lost in reaiming the gun. Instead of firing one or two rounds a minute as was possible with the old gun, the new gun will be ready to fire fifteen times in one minute."

The general hopes to supply the army with 250 batteries of these guns, that is at a rate of two guns per thousand men for an army of 500,000 men, which he says is a very moderate estimate. Thus far, he said, the committee had appropriated enough for sixty-nine such batteries of four guns each, of which thirty-five batteries have been of the regular army and the reserve and thirty-four have been for the use of the militia. At the present rate the supply will be completed in 1919.

COMMON SENSE.

"That was sound common sense," said the Rev. Madison Peters, apropos of a certain clergyman's resignation. "It was like the decision of old Bismark's soldier.

"There was a soldier who acquitted himself with singular gallantry on the battlefield. He carried a wounded comrade nearly two miles on his back through a fusillade of bullets. Accordingly he came before Bismarck to be rewarded for his bravery.

"He was a simple-minded fellow. The prince commended him, questioned him a little, and finally said, with a laugh:

"'Now, Hans, tell me which you prefer, the iron cross, or a hundred thalers?'

"The brave Hans thought a little.

"'How much, he said carefully, 'is the cross worth?'

"'About three thalers,' said the prince.

"Hans frowned, and thought again for a long time. Then his brow cleared. He smiled.

"'I think,' he said, 'I'll take the cross and ninety-seven thalers.'"

To make difficulties of trifles is the common tendency. Herald want advertising enables one to make trifles of difficulties.

VENEZUELA WILL YIELD

If France Can Disprove Statements Against Cable Company.

Otherwise She Will Submit Whole Matter to Arbitration.

Caracas, Vez., Friday, Feb. 9; via Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, Feb. 13.—The Venezuelan government yesterday, Feb. 8, transmitted to M. Maubourguet, the former charge d' affaires of Venezula at Paris, who is also Venezuela's representative in London, a long note dated Feb. 7, of which the following is a synopsis:

"To M. Maubourguet, London: You will answer Premier Rouvier's note of Jan. 18, addressed to you, as follows:

"I am ordered by my government to say that to appreciate the situation and the case, it is necesary to discriminate. The real facts are that the Venezuelan government said it would not treat through M. Taigny (former French charge d' affairs in Venezuela) until satisfactory explaination were given and not, as M. Rouvier's note states, that Foreign Minister Ybarra had notified the French representative that he would not have any further official relations with him.

"That regarding the cable company, France did not because she could not allege a denial of justice and instead of approaching Venezuela in a friendly manner accused her of violating French rights, thereby abandoning the legal road and assuming the responsibilities of the cable company.

"Venezuela asks, did the cable company fill its contract? Did the French government employes assist the wreckers of Venezuelan liberties?

"If not, Venezuela yields. Otherwise, she holds France responsible and is willing to submit this to arbitration.

"Venezuela throughout has acted in a friendly manner and withdrew her note when requested to do so. When she prohibited the relanding of M. Taigny it was in order to avoid greater unpleasantness, but France violently expelled M. Maubourguet without alleging any fault.

"It must also be remembered that the French before the mixed tribunals claimed eighty-six million bolivars, but they never had a quarter of this in Venezuela.

MARTYRED BRYAN.

Here is a record of an incident which took place in the Sunday school of a church not far from Los Angeles a short time since, says the Los Angeles Times. The superintendent of the Sunday school, while reviewing the school subsequent to the regular lesson, had occasion to speak of some of the presidents of our country. To focus the attention of the school he asked the question: "How many of our presidents have suffered martyrdom?"

"Three," came the answer from at least a score of pupils.

"Good! Who can name them?"

"Well, sir, who were they?"

As the school sat in breathless expectation this young Republican replied: "Garfield, McKinley and Bryan."

Needless to say, the chorister had to start a hymn to restore order.

CONSIDERATE.

W. B. Andrews, who keeps a large hennery on the back road in Warren, was requested one day by his next-door neighbor, Seth Wylie, to keep his chickens off of the latter's grass, says the Boston Herald. Mr. Andrews said he would fence them in.

Shortly afterward Mr. Andrews was burning caterpillar nests, when Mr. Wylie came along and, noticing what he was doing, said: "I say, Willard, what are you burning those poor things for? They don't hurt anything."

"Waal," replied Mr. Andrews, "I was afraid they might get over on your field and trample your grass down."

It takes a lot of preaching to convert some men to the value of advertising, but they always stay put.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

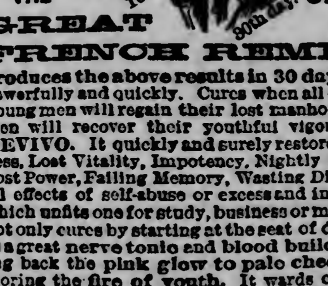

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of Education of the City of Duluth, up to March 2nd, 1906 at 7 o'clock p. m., for the construction of the new school building to be erected upon Lots 1 to 13 inclusive, Block 95; and Lots 1 to 7 inclusive, Block 94; all in West Duluth, Sixth Division, according to plans, specifications, and details on file in the office of Austin Terryberry, Architect, 614 Palladio Bldg., Duluth, Minn.

BACK FROM WINNIPEG

Duluth Curlers Report Most Enjoyable Trip to Canadian Spiel.

Myron and Smith Elected Honorary Members of Granite Club.

The members of the J. C. Myron and A. H. Smith rinks returned this morning from the Winnipeg bonspiel.

The two Duluth rinks failed to capture any of the prizes in the big spiel, but they all report the most enjoyable trip ever taken for curling purposes.

One rink from Dawson City was in attendance, and it is estimated that the trip cost the members of it $5,000, or about $1,250 apiece. At one time this rink was playing against the Flavelle rink of Lindsay in Eastern Ontario, and the odd sight of curlers from towns 3,500 miles apart playing against each other was witnessed.

In Northwestern Canada curlers think nothing of going 500 miles to the Winnipeg bonspiel, and almost every little prairie town between Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains was represented at the spiel.

The Winnipeg curlers outdid themselves in their efforts to entertain the visitors, and the trip was one continual round of pleasure. The Duluth curlers can't say enough about the manner in which they were treated in the Canadian metropolis.

Their failure to carry off any trophies is not worrying them much, as they were matched against the cream of the Canadian curlers, and to get into the prize winning class against such an array of talent, required some brilliant work.

A. H. Smith and J. C. Myron, the two Duluth skips, were chosen honorary members of the Granite Curling club of Winnipeg, and the good feeling of the Duluth curlers toward their brethren from across the border was evidently reciprocated.

The events are rapidly narrowing down and will probably reach the finals today or tomorrow.

WORK WAS THOROUGH

Burke Williams Claimed to Have Destroyed Much Personal Property.

Used a Novel Method of Breaking Up Housekeeping.

When Burke Williams started to tear loose in his home on Garfield avenue, he evidently intended to make a thorough job of it.

Burke, who is a colored gentleman, was arrested on the complaint of Rose Eckols, a woman who is said to be his common law wife, on the charge of destroying personal property, maliciously. The complaint looked like a bill of sale of household property, and the list of property claimed to have been destroyed, filled nearly a page. Following is an inventory of the goods that Burke is claimed to have destroyed in his wrath:

One dresser	$5.00
Two new hats	10.00
One silk waist	15.00
One skirt	15.00
One woman's suit	20.00
Six shirt waists	16.00
Two suits underwear	2.00
Three curtains	.75
One silk umbrella	5.00
Four glasses	.20
Eight pictures	25.00
Two lamps	.50
Two valises	7.00

In addition to these items, Burke is claimed to have partially destroyed a number of towels, plates and napkins.

Judging from the inventory, Burke must have had quite a playful time in the little house down on Garfield avenue, where the two have been living. The total value of the property is about $150, and the case is one for the grand jury. When arraigned before Judge Cutting this morning Williams asked for an examination, which was set for Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. His bond was fixed at $250.

"Ah guess ah have a right to ma own property," said he to the court. "Ah bought that with me hard uhned cash. They's a lot of things in there that ah didn't destroy."

The police say he evidently had a quarrel with the woman and in his wrath, decided to break up housekeeping in a sudden and violent manner.

FLAGS FLUTTER ON THE MATAAFA

Duluthians who are in the habit of looking out to sea were surprised today to see flags and pennants flying gaily from the masts of the steamer Mataafa, which has lain in the spot outside the harbor entrance where she was wrecked, ever since the terrific storm which swept the lake the last of November.

Those who noticed the flags wondered and wondered what could be their significance, on a wrecked boat which not three months ago was the scene of a terrible disaster which involved the loss of nine lives.

The stiff breeze kept the flags fluttering and they could be seen from all parts of the city. H. W. Brown, the Pittsburg Steamship company's agent, was called up on the telephone and asked the meaning of it all. He was forced to explain to all those who inquired that he knew nothing of the flags and that they would be removed as soon as possible.

Boys or older miscreants are supposed to have been the persons who had the bad taste to put up the flags. Perhaps they were prompted to do so by a misdirected idea of a patriotism, yesterday having been Lincoln's birthday.

McMullen-Hewitt Nuptials.

Miss Alberta McMullen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McMullen, 313 Second avenue west, and Cameron Hewitt, were united in marriage Saturday evening by Rev. H. S. Webster, pastor of St. John's Episcopal church. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few of the friends of the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt have gone to housekeeping in the Buffalo flats. Mrs. Hewitt has been for some time past employed on the clerical force at the Gray-Tallant company's store. Mr. Hewitt is municipal court stenographer.

FERGUS FALLS BOY

Fergus Falls, Minn., Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—George B. Wright of this city graduated yesterday at the naval academy at Annapolis, and stands fifth in the class. He was among those who graduated with a "star" rank, and received 8 per cent as an aggregate on all subjects.

Rev. E. L. Brooks of Hutchinson has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational church of this city, and expects to be here to commence active work in his new field about the middle of March.

O. O. Lofton of Pelican Rapids found a package of clothing which was lost by one of his neighbors, and instead of returning it, appropriated it to his own use. Complaint was made to the authorities, and the result is that Lofton is serving a 20-days' sentence in the county jail.

LONGWORTH'S BILL IS FAVORED BY COMMITTEE.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Representative Longworth's bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the purchase of American legations and embassies in foreign capitals will be favorably reported upon by the house committee on foreign relations, which voted unanimously today in favor of recommending the bill. The committee fixed Friday, Feb. 16 as the time for hearing Secretary Root on the consular bill.

SNOWING IN IOWA.

Des Moines, Feb. 13.—Iowa railroads began preparing today for another snow blockade. A heavy snow, which began falling early today in Central Iowa, became general by 9 o'clock, and the accompanying high winds is drifting it into the railroad right-of-ways. Snow plows are being made ready in anticipation of a general tie-up.

SIMON CLARK IS CHEERED

Duluth Man Greeted With Great Applause in Rochester.

Presiding Over Grocers' State Convention Just Opened.

Rochester, Minn., Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The tenth annual convention of the Minnesota Retail Grocers' association opened this morning with about 200 delegates present. The prospects are that the convention will be the largest in the history of the association, and the most successful. The delegates to the convention, as they arrive here, are cordially received, and Rochester people have made elaborate preparations for entertaining the visitors. The city has spared no expense in making these arrangements, and the private preparations for entertainment have been most complete and display a most unselfish spirit on the part of the citizens here.

The opening of the convention this morning was with prayer, after which Mayor Heffron gave the address of welcome, which breathed a hearty spirit throughout. This was responded to for the visitors by John W. Lux, president of the St. Paul Retail Grocers' association. Then State President Simon Clark of Duluth took the gavel, and on taking the chair was greeted with a burst of enthusiastic cheering which showed the hold he has on the feelings of his fellow grocers throughout the state. It is needless to say that Mr. Clark was pleased with his reception, but all he could do was bow and smile his thanks.

After the enthusiasm died down, President Clark read his annual report, which shows the association to be in excellent condition. Secretary Hall then read his report. He said that most of the counties in the state are organized under the banner of the association.

The place of the next convention is not yet decided, but President Clark, who is booming Duluth for it, says he believes it will undoubtedly go to the Zenith City.

A special train will arrive tomorrow morning from St. Paul and Minneapolis, bringing about 200 more delegates. Many courtesies have been extended the members of the convention from all over the state, and everything is made pleasant for them.

RENEWING THE SUPPLY

Cleveland-Cliffs Company Managing Timber Holdings on Forestry Plan.

Resident Forester Placed in Charge of Each District.

Negaunee, Mich., Feb. 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Now that all kinds of timber are rapidly becoming scarce, some provision for renewing the supply must be made. With this idea in mind, President Mather, about three years ago, conceived the plan of managing the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company's immense holdings in the upper peninsula according to forestry principles. That the conception was successful is quite evident when one views the large acreage of fast growing pine trees on the Baldwin Kiln plains, east of Negaunee, and also the trees growing on other tracts of land, in different parts of the upper peninsula, owned by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company.

Mr. Mather, knowing that the forests of the north country had been robbed of its most valuable timber, white pine, and that the remaining woods were rapidly disappearing, through careless lumber operations and destruction by fire, believed that the only way to prevent the occurrence of similar losses on his own lands was by some system by which more active and constant oversight could be given. The principles of forestry, which are simply administration of forest lands, with the aim of perpetuating forest supplies, naturally appealed to him as offering a solution of the problem, and so a forester was added to the company's land department.

The man selected for this position was S. M. Higgins of Flemington, N. J. Mr. Higgins was trained at Brown university and at the New York State College of Forestry, at Cornell, and came to Michigan as the first exponent of his profession in the state doing private work. Since he became identified with the company he has given much attention to the gathering of data and information necessary for a plan of management, and in controlling the forest operations on the company's lands. When one considers that the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company controls nearly 1,000,000 acres of land, which acreage extends practically the entire length of the upper peninsula, the advisability of an increased force of foresters, and an intelligent system of administration, is readily seen.

In February, 1905, Thomas B. Wyman of Painesville, O., a graduate of the Baltimore Forest school, became Mr. Higgin's assistant. The forest work of the company has progressed steadily during the past year with the result that it has been decided that a more elaborate method of control is necessary. The plan of control centers in the idea of sub-dividing the forest lands controlled by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company into districts, each of which will be administered by a resident forester who will be charged with all of the forest work within his district. This forest work will consist of active control of all lumbering operations and utilization of products, examinations, estimating timber, protection of fish and game, and silviculture which will include reforestation and propagation of forest plants.

The first of these districts to be created is the Munising district which will include most of Alger and the north half of Delta counties, including nearly two hundred thousand acres of forest lands under Cleveland Cliffs control.

This district will be in charge of Thomas B. Wyman who will be located at Munising and will enter upon his new work by the 15th of February. He will be assisted by Marcus Schaaf of Richmond, Ind., who was also trained in Forestry at Baltimore. Mr. Schaaf has recently been employed in the National Forest service, but it is expected to be ready for his new position about the 15th of this month. It is thought that one or two more districts will be created during the coming season and that eventually all of the forest holdings of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company will be included in the various districts.

The outcome of this advanced step taken by the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company will be watched with much interest by all large timber companies who may be planning similar methods of management as well as by all those interested in the introduction of practical forestry.

The sawmill of the Tyoga Lumber company at Deerton is completed, the machinery installed, and the plant will be ready for operation as soon as the belting for the mill arrives. The mill is one of the most modern in the upper peninsula, being equipped throughout with new machinery of the latest pattern. The capacity is about 50,000 feet of lumber a day, exclusive of the tie and shingle mill which is operated separately from the sawmill proper. The plant was ready to begin operations a week ago, but delay in receiving the belting will probably result in the mill not starting before Feb. 15.

The Marquette normal fared excellently at the meeting of the board of auditors held recently at Lansing. The board appropriated $53,000 to restore the south wing of the normal, destroyed by fire the night of Dec. 16. The appropriation is divided as follows: New building, $39,500; equipment, $10,000; cleaning away debris, $1,500; repairs to the library structure, $2,000.

The board of auditors proved as generous in its treatment of the Northern normal as even the most sanguine friends of the school hoped for, and the $10,000 item for restoring the fine equipment of the building is particularly gratifying. The appropriation for the new wing exceeds by over $10,000 the amount of money spent on the original structure, and its goodly size insures that the new wing will be substantially built. It is the expectation that it will be made practically fireproof. The $2,000 item for repair of the library will be amply sufficient, as that building was not materially harmed, and has been in use ever since the reconvening of the Normal student body following the holidays. Because of the generosity of the board in the matter of providing for equipment it will be possible to furnish the new wing with duplicates of many of the handsome gifts made by Marquette people when the Normal was first built.

Construction work will be started as soon in the spring as it can be undertaken to advantage and a particular effort will be made to finish the building expeditiously.

American With Dope Pills Beats the Whole Country.

Los Angeles Examiner: "Well, I see the ponies will soon be running again," said the low comedian cheerfully. "They cost me quite a bunch of coin last year, but I'm wise now. This time I'll have to know something before I bet. And in about two weeks I'll have those bookmakers hollering for the police."

"Yes, you will," snorted Nosey Gardner scornfully. "You don't think they bet on horse races in this country, do you?"

"Well," said the low comedian in an injured tone of voice, "I don't know what you call betting, but I was throwing it 'em fifty at a clatter last season for awhile! I guess that's going some!" And he looked around for support.

"Ho!" jeered Nosey, unsympathetically. "He thinks fifty to a race is going some! He calls that gambling! What would you think of a country where they only race three days a year, and bet so strong that the entire money balance of the country switches plumb over?"

Mr. Gardner ignored the rather broad insinuation and beckoned for papers and tobacco. His story began at once.

"When I was down in Yucatan—"

"Who-satan?" came the chorus.

"Aw, get a map and look it up," snarled Mr. Gardner testily. "You'll find a country that sticks out into the Gulf of Mexico like a sore thumb. That'll be Yucatan. Well, when I was down there I heard about a job further down the line in Honduras. They wanted a telegrapher who could eat in the Spanish fandango, and that was me.

"Well, I stuck around there for four months, and I got good and sick of it, too. Then I began to hear a lot of talk about the grand races to be held down toward Tegucigalpa—kind of tickles your tongue to say that word, don't it?—and of course when they talked races to me I began to get interested right away.

"All the talk was about what the new horses would do, and the whole population went daffy on the question. They sat up late at night arguing about this colt and that colt, and the owners of the coffee plantations all chipped in with their horses, and business just naturally went to smash around where I was. I wired to see if I could get off, and when they said 'No,' I just kissed 'em goodby over the wire and blew anyway.

"The people went out on the plains, where they had a sort of a straightaway course laid out in the grass, and for a week in advance they worked those horses out, getting 'em in shape. I made the acquaintance of a Mexican kid named Manuel, who was going to ride a few of the poorer horses. He was as smart as a whip and was all the time crying because he never got a chance to ride a winner. That gave me a sort of an idea. I had a box of small, innocent-looking sugar pills that an old horseman gave me once. I asked him what they would cure and he said they would cure the losing habit, but he never told me any more except that the horse ought to have one about ten minutes before the start.

"I stuck that box of pills in my coat pocket when I went out for the opening races. Say, I wish you could have seen those plains! The whole country was there! Coffee planters in their white suits, grandees in their caballero outfits, peons in their working clothes and even a few white men from the coast. And every man had his whole possessions with him. Down in that country they don't have much money, but if a man has a dozen silver-embossed saddles he can manage to worry along all right, and they bet even the clothes they stand in.

"Manuel was to ride a poor looking skate in the first race—about six furlongs, I should call it. He told me he hadn't a chance in a million to win, and then I brought out my box (gave him one pill and told him to feed it to his mount when he put the saddle on him. Then I butted into the crowds and listened to the talk

"A horse named Pronto was the top-heavy favorite. Nothing else was conceded an outside chance, and when I chirped up and said I liked this thing Manuel was on, they fairly mobbed me to get me to bet something. I didn't have much money and they had everything but that, but they put up saddles and bridles and suits of clothes and sacks of coffee—giving the craziest odds you ever saw. One old man who owned the Pronto colt, bet me ten acres of coffee plantation against my hat—and I took him.

"Pretty soon they began to fool around for a start and finally the red flag fell and the race started. When they got near enough to tell which horse was leading, the yell that went up was enough to curdle your blood. That good for nothing skate that Manuel was just making a runaway race of it. He won by a city block and kept right on going—Manuel couldn't stop him. The boy didn't get back with him for twenty minutes, and when he did, he took me to one side and said: 'Senor Nosee, of what was the confection I feed heem the horse? He is one locoed jackrabbit when he eats of it!'

"I told Manuel it was a charm to make a horse run, and hired a tent to put my winnings in. The next race I picked out some skate with no chance and sent Manuel down to feed him a pill. Then I went into the tall grass where the betting was going on. They came at me from all sides. One tall, lean old gent with a nose like a hawk took off his hat and made me a bow.

"'I desire to wager upon my brown mare Rosita,' says he.

"'Go as far as you like,' I told him.

"'Good!' says he. 'I will wager you 10,000 sacks of coffee of the new crop!'

"'You're on!' I told him. Now, I didn't have any coffee, but I thought I could take a chance on the field against him. Then I made a few hundred trifling bets on my outside skate and when the flag fell I stood to win a controlling interest in the coffee market and half the saddles and bridles and fancy clothes in the country. When that race started my skate turned clear around and was thrown completely out of the running and Rosita was out in front. That race was only half a mile or so, but just when I was wondering what I was going to say to the old sport who bet me the coffee, along comes a sort of a whirlwind and my skate nails Rosita about four jumps from the finish.

"Well, it won't be any use for me to string this thing out. That box of pills lasted me the three days and by the end of that time I had six full grown coffee plantations, a warehouse full of saddles and junk, a few hundred head of horses and coffee enough to bull the market for a thousand years. I guess I was about the richest man in that country and I cleaned up quite a bunch of money, too, all in that big silver stuff that goes about $7.50 to the pound.

"The last day around the race track I saw that the populace was sore on me for some reason or other. They wouldn't bet against me at any price and every time I came near a bunch of sports they would fade away and leave me alone in the tall grass. Manuel was attending to my pill business and acting as a sort of confidential adviser.

"That night I was sleeping in this sort of a dobey warehouse along with the junk I had won when I heard a sound at the door. It was Manuel, and he was excited.

"'Senor Nosee,' says he, 'better you go now! It is known of the sugar pills that work the so potent charm on the horses. There is talk of killing. By thousands they are gathering at the cantinas!'

"I stepped out into the moonlight and listened. I could hear the hum of the crowd, and I didn't wait to explain. I started for the coast. Out in the coral I had a few hundred head of horses. I grabbed the first one I came to and jumped on his back. Manuel ran up and fumbled at the bridle. I saw something white in his hands, and he looked up at me and grinned.

"'It is the last of the pills, Senor,' said he, 'for there is need of great speed in the escape.' And he gave my skate five of these pills.

"As I swung out into the street I heard a yell behind me and the patter of hoofs. They had spotted me. I didn't have any saddle, but I took a general hold on that pony's sides with my toes and began to do a Tod Sloan away on the neck, and, say! maybe you think that horse didn't RUN! I don't know what was in those pills, but it saved my life that night. I got such a start in the first two miles that they never even caught sight of me again.

"I hid in the daytimes and worked by way to the coast nights. When I got there I had just six dobey dollars and some coppers—me, the owner of thousands of acres of coffee plantations and half the saddles and junk in the country!

"I bummed my way back to the United States on a fruit steamer, and little old New York looked pretty good to me when I saw it again. But that's the country where they really bet on the races. A man can be a bum there one day and the next he can own a coffee plantation and get into the government blue book."

The low comedian drew a long breath. "Me for Honduras!" he said at last. "But before I start, I'd like to know what was in those pills!"

THE CAPTAIN LED.

It was in the latter portion of the Civil war, says the Boston Herald, when great calls for troops were in process of being filled, that notice was served on the adjutant general of one of the smaller states of the North that the quotas of some of the towns were not full, and that the men must be forthcoming. Orders to that effect were issued, with the result that when the matter was closed there were about enough men for a single company. It was organized and sent to the front and attached to one of the regiments from the same state.

The first time this little body of soldiers saw service was at the battle of the Wilderness. The action was going on during one of the terrible days of that battle, and the shells and bullets were getting in their work. The captain of our company fell called upon to make a speech to his men, and he said:

"Soldiers, we are now up against the enemy. When the orders are given to fire, do your best and kill all you can with the forty rounds of ammunition you have. When you have fired it all away you had better retreat. I am a little lame, so I am going to start now."

DRAMATIC CRITIC.

Kansas City Times: "The best dramatic criticism I ever heard," said Will Winch, the theatrical press agent, "was made by a man who was in his cups. Not that I advise dramatic critics, therefore, to get hilarious before they attempt to review a play, not at all. The piece I refer to was an English comedy. You know the English idea of what is entertaining often differs widely from the American. The play was dragging awfully. The curtain had been up nearly half an hour, I guess, and nothing had happened to check the yawns that were seen on the faces in the audience. At this point one slightly intoxicated friend straightened up, yawned, looked at his watch and said in a voice heard through the theater and on the stage: 'Say, what time does this show begin?'"

Publicity will always help a legitimate business, just as sunshine will make plants grow.

CURIOUS NAMES.

Henry Gannett has recently published a report on the place names of the United States, from which a few interesting instances are given below, says a writer in Leslie's Weekly. Chicago is an Indian word, meaning wild onion or skunk weed; Chesapeake is also Indian, and is variously interpreted as highly salted water, great waters or country on a great river. Chautauqua is also an Indian word, and has had several interpretations—as a foggy place, a bag tied in the middle (referring to the shape of the lake), a place where a child was washed away, where the fish are taken out, place of easy death, or, finally, place where one was lost. Des Moines is usually supposed to refer only to the Trappist monks, but it is also connected with an Indian word, meaning the road. Niagara is an Indian word, signifying across the strait, or at the neck. Shenandoah is Indian, and means the sprucy stream, or a river flowing alongside of high hills. Massachusetts means near the great hills, or the hill shaped like an arrow head; or, again, the blue hills. Mississippi means great water, or gathering in of all the waters, or an almost endless river spread out.

HERALD WANTS BRING QUICK RESULTS

"SOME ROADS open stately enough, with planted trees on either side to tempt the traveler, but soon become narrower and narrower, end in a squirrel path and run up a tree."

And many advertising campaigns get switched off into roads of this kind—expend their forces in newspapers of "squirrel path" circulations and influence—and end "up a tree."

THE RIGHT KIND OF ADVERTISING MEDIUM IS:

COPPER COMBINATION OF LARGE MAGNITUDE

Expected to Follow the Purchase of Heinze Mines by Cole Syndicate.

Rumor That the Bisbee and Bingham, Utah, Properties Will be Included.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The copper interests in Butte united on a peace basis yesterday, when F. Augustus Heinze transferred practically all of his holdings in this city to Arthur C. Carson, acting for Thomas F. Cole of Duluth, who is said to represent the North Butte, Amalgamated and Guggenheim interests. The United Copper company is said to have received for its interests about $25,000,000, one-half in cash and the balance in preferred securities. The company disposes of all its lawsuits, litigated ground and smelter, but retains the Lexington group and some undeveloped claims and has a favorable contract for the treatment of its ores at the Washoe smelter. Mr. Cole and his associates furnished the money for the purchase of the property and will organize a new company on a cash basis with at least $5,000,000 in the treasury and agreements with the Amalgamated company under which the litigated territory will be immediately developed. The amount of capital for the new corporation will depend upon the final determination of the operating relations in connection with the Amalgamated company. In some cases vertical lines of ownership may be drawn; in others joint ownership may be continued, and in still others purchases from the Amalgamated company may be made.

When final confirmation of the transfer of the Heinze properties to the Cole syndicate was flashed over the wires from New York, a new era of prosperity for Butte was assured. The conciliation means that within a reasonable period of time at least 2,000 men will be added to Butte's already big payroll and the copper output swelled to 400,000,000 pounds per annum, or more than 40 per cent of the American copper production.

Frederick Eckstein, representing the United Copper company, and D. B. Hennessy, conveying instructions to Arthur C. Carson from Thomas F. Cole, arrived in Butte on Monday evening from New York. A meeting was arranged with Mr. Carson and others and the time set for signing the papers and completing a transfer fixed at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Messrs. Eckstein, Hennessy and Carson and the rest were on hand at the appointed hour, but owing to a delay in New York final confirmation of the transfer was not received until 12:20 o'clock.

In the conciliation effected yesterday F. Augustus Heinze and the United Copper company sacrifice nothing, and Henry H. Rogers and the Amalgamated sacrifice nothing, while the latter company, it is said, acquires a settlement of all its copper controversies without one cent of cost except in the possible concession of some disputed property to the new corporation.

This is said to be the first step toward carrying out a copper consolidation plan, the most gigantic the world has ever known, that will cover much more than the disputed Butte properties. It is reported that the Bonanza Circle group at Bisbee, Ariz., and the mines at Bingham, Utah, will also be included in the deal.

By the transfer the Amalgamated Copper company undoubtedly secures control of the copper trade and the production of the red metal. On the other hand the United Copper company gets a large payment in cash and still remains an important factor in the trade, and the Heinze men are not barred from becoming stockholders in the new company. Litigation of nine years' standing, involving the bitterest legal warfare over the ownership of copper mines in the history of mining, is brought to a close, and twenty-five ore bodies are released for operation. The warfare between Heinze and the Amalgamated Copper company was carried from the courts to below the ground, and deep in the bowels of the earth the forces of the Amalgamated and Heinze miners would clash over the different ore bodies, fighting each other with powdered lime and hot water, two men finally being killed by an explosion of dynamite dropped upon the contending gangs.

The Heinze mines transferred to Mr. Cole and his associates are the Rarus, Corra-Rock Island, Minnie Healy, Belmont, Johnstown, all of the Hypoca companies, and all the property of the Montana Ore Purchasing company, including a smelter. Heinze retains his interest in the Lexington and LaFrance properties and the big concentrator at Basin. The Heinze properties employ about 2,000 men.

There are many surmises as to who will be the president of the new company. One New York report received here states that John D. Ryan, managing director of the Amalgamated Copper company, will head the consolidation, and Mr. Ryan refused to affirm or deny the report, as did F. Augustus Heinze. Another report says that Thomas F. Cole will become president of the new company. To Mr. Cole is given the chief credit for the amicable adjustment of a most complicated problem.

BENEFITS ARE SMALL

Which the United States Will Receive From the Philippines.

Natives Can Buy Food Stuffs Cheaper and Closer at Hand.

Washington, Feb. 14.—Secretary Taft was before the senate committee on the Philippines today and was examined by Senator Hale concerning the benefactions the Filipinos have received from congress. The senator said that a great deal had been brought out concerning the obligations of the United States to the Philippine islands and it was his desire to balance the debit and credit sides of the ledger to determine which is indebted to the other. He said that if the account is found to be in favor of the Filipinos it does not seem worth while to legislate further to disturb industries in the United States since Manila was taken in August, 1898, was reviewed by the senator's examination of the secretary. Among the benefits the Filipinos have received were included the expenditures of this government in maintaining forces to remove the Spanish yoke and bring about good order and stablish a government, education of the people, organization of civil forces, aiding of the people by direct appropriation of $3,000,000, establishing a currency system, payment of salaries in connection with the geodetic coast survey, purchasing of the friar lands to restore them to the Filipinos on long-time payments, and the admission free of duty of 82 per cent of their products. Senator Hale called attention to the exports of the United States to the islands in comparison to exports from other countries to the islands, and Secretary Taft admitted that these intimate that the United States portion of the Filipino trade "is, has been, and will be small." He explained this by saying that the Filipino people can buy food stuffs from a closer and cheaper market. The examination of Secretary Taft was continued until Friday, although the committee will hear representatives of the sugar interests tomorrow.

THREE LOSE THEIR LIVES

By Being Burned to Death in Wreck of 'Frisco Train.

A Missouri Pacific Train is Ditched Near Jefferson City.

Fort Scott, Kas., Feb. 14.—St. Louis & San Francisco passenger, No. 118, northbound, was wrecked at Columbus, Kas., early today. Harry Roundtree of Fort Scott, the express messenger; one passenger and a newsboy, names unknown, were burned to death. George Woods, the engineer, was badly hurt, and W. F. Runyan, the fireman, sustained a broken leg.

The train ran into a string of boxcars that had broken loose from a freight train and run back down onto the main line. The entire passenger train, except the sleeper, was burned.

St. Louis, Feb. 14.—Missouri Pacific fast mail train No. 7, which left St. Louis for Kansas City at 3:05 this morning, jumped the track at 4:30 a. m., while crossing the Gasconade bridge, 88 miles west of St. Louis, the scene of the "Gasconade horror" of fifty years ago. Five men all railroad employes were hurt, two of them dangerously, two mail cars burned and two were partly demolished in running off the approach of the bridge.

The mail train is not scheduled to stop at Gasconade and was running forty miles an hour when the accident occurred. A spreading rail caused it to leave the track 500 feet east of the bridge. The engine ran on the bridge and past the first two spans, crushing the cross ties, and tearing down a portion of the approach. The bridge is of steel. The first two mail cars were smashed and caught fire.

St. Louis, Feb. 14.—Two sleepers on a Frisco train entering St. Louis today, took a siding, tore loose from the train and crashed into a box car loaded with terra cotta. The passengers were hurled pell mell, but none was hurt beyond bruises. Charles Lewis, a negro porter, was badly injured.

DELEGATES RESTLESS

Over Prolonged Inability of France and Germany to Agree.

Firmness on Both Sides Renders Any Progress Very Slow.

Algeciras, Feb. 14.—The delegates to the Moroccan conference, at their session today, examined at length the proposed reforms in the customs of Morocco and the plans for the suppression of the contraband traffic in arms, and then adjourned until Saturday. No word was spoken during the session concerning the main feature of the Franco-German controversy, namely, the control of the Moroccan police, as this still remains the subject of private efforts to bring about a compromise. However, repeated conversations between the French and German delegates have not resulted in any perceptible progress towards a solution, each side showing much firmness. The American delegates, while optimistic, admit that the prolonged inability of the French and Germans to reach an agreement, renders the situation increasingly difficult each day. Ambassador White, head of the American mission, has throughout played the chief role in bringing the French and German delegates into confidential communication, his idea being to thus secure a private understanding before the issues are presented in open conference. However, if this private understanding is not arrived at, Mr. White still hopes that the open conference may find a solution. He and the Marquis Viscount Venosta, head of the Italian mission, and others, have discussed numerous tentative plans, but not one of them has taken concrete form, owing to the firmness displayed on each side. The delegates show restlessness at the prolonged inability to agree, as it is foreseen that this will create a feeling abroad that a virtual deadlock exists. It is also foreseen that another ten days without a Franco-German agreement may so accentuate the feeling as to lead to a renewal of the alarmist report, but for the present the delegates maintain that there is no cause for alarm.

SPEAKER IS CONFIRMED

Election of Lowther in Commons Acceptable to King.

Taking of Oath Will Occupy Rest of the Week.

London, Feb. 14.—Shortly after the reassembling of the house of commons at noon today, the election of James W. Lowther, as speaker, was confirmed by the royal commission.

The speaker-elect occupied the chair in the lower house and awaited the arrival of Black Rod from the royal commissioners. When the officer had delivered his message the speaker-elect, accompanied by a majority of the commoners, went to the house of lords and acquainted the commissioners that "his majesty's faithful commons, in obedience to his command, had elected a speaker, and as the object of their choice, he submitted himself with all humility to the king's gracious approbation."

In reply the lord chancellor declared that "his majesty most fully approved and confirmed him as speaker."

On behalf of the commons the speaker then laid claim "by humble petition to all their ancient rights and privileges," and these being confirmed the speaker and commons retired from the bar.

On his return from the house of lords the speaker reminded the house of commons that the first thing to be done was to subscribe the oath required by law and standing upon the upper step of the chair he himself took the oath of allegiance to the king.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the premier, and the other cabinet ministers took the same oath and the swearing of the rank and file commenced and will be the only business transacted by the house for the rest of the week. Members who prefer to do so, on the ground of religious belief, can make affirmation instead of taking the oath.

WISCONSIN'S BLIZZARD FOLLOWED BY COLD WAVE.

Milwaukee, Feb. 14.—Last night's blizzard ceased during the early hours today, with a record fall of snow for the season, six and one half inches fall being reported by the weather bureau. The snow drifted badly, rendering travel very difficult in some places. The storm is followed by much colder weather today, the government thermometer recording 9 deg. above zero.

The Milwaukee Street Railway company had its heavy sweepers in operation all night to keep various lines open. Trains on steam roads are running irregularly.

La Crosse, Wis., Feb. 14.—A cold wave, which is expected to culminate in the coldest weather of the winter, has arrived here today. The temperature was 5 below zero and is rapidly falling. At the same time a blizzard has buried the tracks of all railroad lines and trains are running from two to three hours late.

CHILD DRINKS POISON.

Farmer's Tot Has Narrow Escape From Death.

Gary, Minn., Feb. 14.—A 2-year-old daughter of John Dieckman, living on a farm near here, drank the contents of a bottle supposed to contain picture gilding. When the child's mother discovered it, its jaws were firmly locked and had to be pried open to allow the administration of an emetic. It was feared that death would ensue, but later reports say that it is thought the child will recover.

HAMILTON MUST RETURN $1,000,000

New York, Feb. 14.—The Tribune today says: Thomas P. Fowler, chairman of the New York Life Insurance company's house cleaning committee will depart for Europe, March 1. While Mr. Fowler's trip is ostensibly for pleasure, it is said that he will see Andrew Hamilton, who, by last accounts, was in the Riviera, and demand of him, on pain of extradition, an immediate accounting or restitution of the $1,000,000 detailed in the Fowler report.

Mr. Fowler, it is said, has been in close communication with Attorney General Mayer and District Attorney Jerome in the last few days.

The trustees of the New York Life will meet today, when the Fowler committee's report on campaign contributions may be submitted. Samuel Untermeyer last night when shown a statement that he had consented to act as counsel to the committee of policyholders of the New York Life and Mutual companies, and that Thomas W. Lawson had offered to turn over the proxies collected by him to that committee, said that this was not accurate. Mr. Untermeyer did not deny that he had been asked to act as counsel for the committee. It could not be learned precisely what answer, if any, he had made. It is understood however, that he expresses his willingness to act, provided the purposes and perfect satisfactory to him.

NEW POSTMASTER.

Washington, Feb. 14.—The president sent to the senate today the following nomination among others: Postmaster: Wisconsin—F. B. Kinsley, Barron.

"WON'T YOU BE MY VALENTINE?"

GREAT NORTHERN MESABA LANDS

To be Operated by Company With Capital of $120,000,000.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—It is stated that the United States Steel corporation will not secure the Great Northern ore lands in the Mesaba range. The deposits, said by James J. Hill to be worth $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000, will not be sold, but he proposes a company, composed of Great Northern stockholders, to operate the property. Mr. Hill laughed at the steel corporation's offer of a royalty of 50 cents a ton. The latest offer, 75 cents, also was refused.

In the operating company every Great Northern stockholder will be given a pro rata interest.

It is understood the capital will be $120,000,000.

Of course, a renewal of negotiations with the steel corporation would end the present plan, but it will have to be on a different basis than the offers heretofore made.

MINERS ARE SECRETIVE

Scale Committee Has Completed Its Report Ready for Conference.

Will Say Absolutely Nothing in Regard to Its Contents.

New York, Feb. 14.—The special scale committee of the union anthracite mine workers, to which has been entrusted the duty of presenting to the operators the demands of the men, has completed its work, and everything is now practically in readiness for tomorrow's conference. The work of the sub-committee, which is made up of the three district presidents and secretaries, has been ratified, and the district officers were today engaged in putting the finishing touches on the communication to be handed to the employers. President Mitchell said today that the full membership of the special committee, which, including the miners' chief, numbers thirty-six men, would be taken into the conference.

The same secrecy which surrounded the work of the scale comittee at Wilkesbarre and in this city, still obtains, not the slightest intimation of the exact nature of the demands to be made having leaked out. Not one of the committeemen will discuss the anthracite situation in any of its phases, referring all inquirers to Mr. Mitchell. He has no desire to keep from the public the grievances of the mine workers, but he feels that if they were made known at this time, a public discussion of the merits of the miners' case would probably ensue, which would have a tendency to upset well laid plans.

President Mitchell devoted much of today to business connected with the bituminous situation. All communications pertaining to the soft coal regions are being forwarded to him here. Asked whether he had anything to say in reply to various statements made by Western coal operators, Mr. Mitchell said he preferred not to discuss conditions in the bituminous fields at this time. It has been learned from an authoritative source, however, that the resolution adopted by the miners, to the effect that no district should sign an agreement until grievances in all districts have been adjusted will not be permitted to stand in the way of an agreement. If the occasion rises it can easily be rescinded.

RECEIVER'S STATEMENT NOT VERY ENCOURAGING.

Washington, Feb. 14.—The comptroller of the currency has received the first report of the receiver of the Enterprise National bank of Allegheny, Pa., which closed its doors on Oct. 18, 1905. The receiver classified the assets of the bank as follows:

Bills receivable estimated good, $753,413; bills receivable estimated doubtful $1,002,318; bills receivable estimated worthless $75,786; other assets estimated good $121,514; other assets estimated doubtful $187,575; other assets estimated worthless $57,923. Total $2,199,529.

The liabilities are given as follows: Individual deposits $2,669,797; certificates of deposit $30,800; outstanding drafts $9,593; outstanding cashiers checks $43,707; rediscount papers $78,671; bills payable $297,927; total $3,130,585.

CLARK WILL NOT ACCEPT

Rochester, Minn., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Simon Clark of Duluth, for several terms president of the Minnesota Retail Grocers' association has positively refused to accept a re-election, although he has been repeatedly urged to again serve. As Mr. Clark is undoubtedly out of the field, the question of his successor comes up. At present it looks as though John Lux, president of the St. Paul Retail Grocers' association will be elected.

The convention work is progressing well and some interesting discussions are being heard. Yesterday afternoon a resolution opposing the national parcels post idea was passed unanimously, and another to push county associations was also adopted. The papers read to the convention were all good. They were as follows: J. J. Ryan of St. Paul on "Credits and Collections," W. C. Webber of Rochester on "Country Merchants," and Thomas Gunness of Barnesville, and John A. Latson of Winona on "The Bankruptcy Law."

Last evening, Fred Mason of New York, secretary of the national organization addressed the delegates at a smoker, and Hon. W. I. Nolan of Minneapolis entertained them with one of his humerous talks.

This morning E. K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner, addressed the convention on pure foods and gave a very interesting and instructive talk.

BAD FIRE ON OCEAN STEAMER

Cargo on the Texan at Honolulu Probably Seriously Damaged.

Honolulu, Feb. 14.—At 10 o'clock last night the steamer Texan was lying at her wharf with clouds of steam and smoke issuing from the after hatch and tors of water are being pumped into her.

The entire cargo has been surrendered to the underwriters. Water from between decks, running into the hold, is being pumped out but it is probable that considerable damage has been done to the cargo. Captain Lyons said that there is absolutely no danger of the vessel being burned. A continuation of pumping will probably result by tomorrow in the slacking of all the lime aboard and then it will be possible to discharge the cargo. Steam is being forced into the compartment containing the fire by heavy pressure and it is expected that this will save the hull and beams from damage by heat. The smoke pouring out of the hatch has a strong odor of burning lumber. This may come from the barrels containing the lime. The steamer is probably safe.

CAUSES OF DESERTION

Statistics Gathered by Charitable Societies of New York.

New York, Feb. 14.—Owing to a law which went into effect in New York state on Sept. 1, last, it is no longer possible for the deserter of a family to hie him to New Jersey and look upon their destitution from that point of view with a sense of entire security. The desertion of children has been made a felony in this state. A man may desert his wife with comparatively small risk, but not his children.

Under the law referred to a man deserting his children can be brought back to this state on extradition proceedings and upon conviction of the offense may be confined for a term in prison.

The state laws referring to desertion and non-support of wife and children vary greatly. Desertion is not a crime in five states. These are Iowa, Nevada, Oregon, Tennessee and Texas.

It is a misdemeanor in forty states. It is a felony in five states. These are, as to both wife and children, Michigan, Nebraska, Wisconsin; as to children only, New York and Ohio.

The passage of the New York law was due in part to the efforts of various charitable organizations. Among other facts urged in support of the law were data gathered by twenty-six charity organizations while assisting 571 deserted families. According to the record these deserters were not men unfitted through illness or incapacity for work to support those depending on them, but men who earned good salaries and who, tired of the restrictions of home life, pined for freedom. They were almost invariably described by the wife in search of them as "tall, handsome men." They were not, moreover, men afflicted with the wanderlust, in the name of which in America much is forgiven. Cases frequently come up in which husbands and fathers after deserting their families have established new homes only a few blocks away from their old residences.

"These 574 cases of desertion," said Mr. Carleston of the Charity Organization society, "occurred among the poor—among people who in their extremity were obliged to go to charitable societies for help. Cases of desertion were more frequent among people better off."

In some cases, he said, the wife submits very cheerfully to the desertion, the family being better off, really, without the husband. Often she gets her deserting husband put under order to pay a certain amount weekly for her support, and needs nothing more. The "allmony clerk" in New York city, Mr. Carleston said, collected in 1904 about $110,000, two-thirds of which was from deserting husbands, and he had constantly about $90 of them on his books.

The first attempt to collect data which should help to a better understanding of the problem and serve as a basis for laws for the protection of deserted wives and children was made by the Associated Charities of Boston in 1901. As a result Miss Smith published a study of 234 deserted families which had been under the care of the society during that year.

Next, a special committee of the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity made a classification of the types of deserters found among the 211 cases under its care in 1902, presenting at the same time a summary of the legislative situation in Pennsylvania and other states.

In April, 1902, a conference on the subject was called by the New York Charity Organization society, at which workers from Philadelphia, Buffalo, Brooklyn and New York exchanged opinions as to causes and remedies. As a result of this conference, resolutions were adopted the following week at the national conference of Charities and Correction, petitioning the governors of the various states to exercise their power of extradition in cases of deserting husbands whenever possible.

The governors of most states acquiesced in the opinion that the offense was extraditable. Within the last three months the governor of New York has sent back one wife deserter on a requisition from the governor of Massachusetts and another on a requisition from the governor of Pennsylvania.

The 574 cases of desertion referred to give little idea of the prevalence of the offense and the amount of desertion that it causes. Reports of charitable societies show that deserted families form between 7 and 13 per cent of the total number of families in their charge. Twenty-five per cent of the commitments of children to institutions in New York are attributed to desertion.

There are no facilities for estimating the extent of the practice in any city, said Mr. Carleston, for the reason that it is only when the family is obliged to ask for help outside of its immediate acquaintance that the facts become known. That many deserted families get along without charitable assistance is evident from the very considerable number among these 574 who, although the husband had deserted them before, had never before been dependent.

Among the deserters there are husbands who desert systematically on the reoccurrence of certain conditions in the family. Some leave just before a child is born, some immediately after, others when they lose their job, others when their wives make the unreasonable demand that they contribute to the support of the family.

In some cases repeated desertions save the effect of weakening the home tie until the husband stays away altogether. Occasionally, when he returns after an absence of several years, he finds that the children have been so widely distributed among different families, by adoption or otherwise, that it is impossible to gather them together. Finding the home thus demolished, he thinks he has a reasonable excuse for absconding again.

The 574 men abandoned 574 wives and 1,695 children, including 102 who were born just before or not long after the desertion. Including the 102 babies, there were 476 children under 5 years of age, 861 between 5 and 14, and only 240, less than fifteen per cent of all, 14 years old or more.

The total number of children affected was 1,665, or an average of about three to each family. The prevailing type of family deserted is not a large family, but, rather, one with two or three children, families with less than four forming seventy per cent of the total.

When the man's mother had invaded the home precinct, two deserted. Where the woman's mother had taken hold on the reins, twenty-nine had vamoosed the ranch. Nieces of the wife and women friends appear to have taken an important part in breaking up households.

The number of nationalities among the families represented suggests, said Mr. Carleston, that desertion is a failing common to the human race, and not confined to any particular sections of it. Among the 574 families there were seventy-eight Irish deserters, twenty-two from British America and 222 from the United States.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Fergus Falls, Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. P. S. Washburn of this city, died at an early hour yesterday morning of heart disease. She retired as usual, but about 4 o'clock awoke her husband and told him she was sick. He got up to get her help but on his return a few minutes later found her dead. She was about 78 years old, and has been a resident of Fergus Falls about twenty-five years.

WEST DULUTH

DOCK PLAN MATURING

West Duluth Land Company Communicates With Council on It.

Trying to Get Consent for Right of Way From Others.

The matter of the Ramsey street dock came up last night in council meeting in the form of a letter from O. H. Simonds, representing the West Duluth Land company. Mr. Simonds said that in regard to the right-of-way to the proposed Ramsey street dock, the company owns only half of it. Mr. Simonds added, however, that he is trying to get into communication with the owners of the other half and get their consent to a right-of-way for the city. In case he does, he said, the West Duluth Land company is willing to give a right-of-way over its half of the land.

This places the matter in a much more satisfactory form and is in consequence very pleasing to the West Duluth interests, who believe that this will ultimately result in the right-of-way being granted and in the building of the dock. The only thing West Duluthians are urging now in the matter is expedition.

REVIVALS SUCCESSFUL.

Meetings in West Duluth Churches Up to Expectations.

The revival services being carried on in the various churches of West Duluth are already proving successful, and it is believed that these independent services will prove a first rate forerunner for the union revival services to be held next week at the Westminster Presbyterian church.

Tonight, at the Baptist church, Rev. Arthur J. Hoag will preach on "Personal Work;" at the Westminster Presbyterian, Rev. W. J. Lowrie will preach on "Getting Right With God," and L. A. Marvin will also speak; and at Asbury M. E. church, Rev. Thomas Grice will speak on "How and When to Refuse."

Hears From C. H. Martz.

H. R. Patterson of West Duluth has received a letter from C. H. Martz, formerly a citizen of Oneota and ex-member of the board of public works. Mr. Martz is now a resident of St. Hilaire, and is getting into various lines of business there. Recently he purchased some select shorthorn stock, and will breed this kind of cattle. He has been elected president of a company formed there which is building a flour mill and an elevator. The world seems to be dealing well with him.

Has Surprise Party.

Lester Whalen was given a surprise party at his home, 424 South Fifty-second avenue west, on Monday night, and a delightful evening was spent. HELD ON FORGERY CHARGE.

James J. Harrington of Muscatine County Arrested at Iowa City.

Iowa City, Iowa, Feb. 14.—James J. Harrington, a well-known resident of Muscatine county, is in the county jail here, charged by the grand jury of Johnson county with forging the name of D. W. Teefy, a dead man, to a note for $650. Interesting features in the case promise to bring it into the supreme court before it is ended. One of these is the fact that the note bears a date that fell on a Sunday. The prisoner contends that, even if he did sign the note, it is null and void, because made on Sunday, and therefore he cannot be prosecuted for forgery.

LAY IT TO LONGSTREET.

His Delays Said to Have Lost Gettysburg for Lee.

London, Feb. 14.—Not in years has a historial work attracted the attention now being given to a new story of the civil war in the United States by the students of military tactics. The authors of the work, W. Birkbeck Wood, M. A., and Major J. E. Edmonds, R. E., have in a single volume presented a compendous study of that conflict. For many years it has been the fashion of students of military history to speak slightly of the strategy and the Southern commanders. All that is now changed. The late Colonel Henderson, professor of strategy, showed in his writing and teaching that the conduct of the war, especially by Grant and Lee, offered examples of military movements not unworthy to be placed besides those of Bonaparte himself. Lee's most daring brought on the battle of Gettsburg, and those historians show how it was fought on Northern soil, Lee reckoning that a victory there would compel the North to grant terms of peace. Strangely enough the Confederate leader and his opponent, General Meade, were both obliged to assume positions that they did not desire, neither of them having intended to fight at Gettysburg. The authors endeavor to show that the issue of that momentous conflict might have been otherwise but for the delay of Gen. Longstreet, who should have made his great attack at daybreak, but did not make it until 4 p. m. General Lee said afterwards: "If I had had Stonewall Jackson at Gettysburg I should have won the battle, and a complete victory there would have resulted in the establishment of Southern independence."

WORKMAN HITS DYNAMITE; IS HURLED TO HIS DEATH.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—One man was killed and seven others injured at the plant of the Illinois Steel company, in South Chicago today, when one of a party of workmen struck with his shovel some dynamite that had been left lying in the trench in which the men were digging. The man who struck the dynamite was instantly killed, his body being hurled many feet into the air. The other men are all seriously hurt, but will recover.

NATURE'S ESSENCE

Extracted from the Roots of Native, Forest Plants. Go Straight Back to Nature for Your Health. There is Your Strength.

Consider your body as an engine which supplies you with all activity of mind and body. Keep the machinery well oiled and it runs smoothly. It does not groan in doing its work. But let the stomach, which is the fire-box to the human engine, get "out of kilter" and we soon meet with disaster. The products of undigested and decomposing food is poison to the system.

We do not live on what we eat but on what we digest, assimilate, and take up in the blood. The blood in turn feeds the nerves, the heart, and the whole system, and all goes well with us if the blood be kept pure and rich. If not, then the liver, which is the human filter within us, gets clogged up and poisons accumulate in the body from over-eating, over-drinking, or hurriedly doing both. The smash-up occurs when the blood is poisoned by the stomach and liver being unable to take care of the over-load! The red flag of danger is thrown out in the shape of eruptions on the skin, or in nervousness and sleeplessness, the sufferer becoming blue, despondent and irritable, because the nerves lack nourishment and are starved.

Nature's laws are perfect if only we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to Nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries there, some of which we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the Wild-cherry tree, with Mandrake root, Stone root, Queen's root, Bloodroot and Golden Seal root, make a scientific, Glyceric extract of them, with just the right proportions, and you have Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists and pharmacists, many months of hard work experimenting to perfect this vegetable alterative and tonic extract of the greatest efficiency. To make rich, red blood, to properly nourish the nerves and the whole body, and cure that lassitude and feeling of weakness and nerve exhaustion, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It bears THE BADGE OF HONESTY upon every bottle in the full list of its ingredients, printed in plain English, and it has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the invigorating tonic which gives life to it and the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated in the system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is just the tisue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, pneumonia or a long siege of fever or other prostrating disease. No matter how strong the constitution, our stomach and liver are apt to be "out of kilter" occasionally. In consequence our blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

It is a trite saying that no man is stronger than his stomach. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body and thus cures both liver and kidney troubles. If you take this natural blood purifier and tonic, you will assist your system in manufacturing each day a pint of rich, red blood, that is invigorating to the brain and nerves. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people suffer from, is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin and the feelings "blue." Dr. Pierce's "Discovery" cures all blood humors as well as being a tonic that makes one vigorous, strong and forceful. It is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that contains neither alcohol nor harmful drugs, and the only one, every ingredient of which has the professional endorsement of the leading medical writers of this country. Some of these endorsements are published in a little book of extracts from standard medical works and will be sent to any address free, on receipt of request therefor by letter or postal card, addressed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. It tells just what Dr. Pierce's medicines are made of.

The "Words of Praise" for the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, by leaders in all the several schools of medical practice, and recommending them for the cure of the diseases for which the "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised, should have far more weight with the sick and afflicted than any amount of the so-called "testimonials" so conspicuously flaunted before the public by those who are afraid to let the ingredients of which their medicines are composed be known. Bear in mind that the "Golden Medical Discovery" has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle wrapper, in a full list of its ingredients.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, invigorate the liver and regulate stomach and bowels.

THESE WIN THE HONORS

Principal Smith Names Twelve Best Pupils in High School.

But Two Young Men Win Places in the List.

At the meeting of the senior class this afternoon Principal Smith announced the names of the twelve students whose standing for the past three and a half years of their course has been the highest. The last semester of the senior year is not counted because there is so much work of an unusual character for the graduating class that it is thought that it would not be a fair test of scholarship. The list is as follows in the order of their standing:

Ruth Ringsred.
Howard McAdams.
Charles McFadden.
Huldah Paulson.
Hazel Britts.
Sadie Stevens.
Amy Magnussen.
Ida Spence.
Frieda Bler.
Ruth Sahlberg.
Edna Ericson.
Ruby Harris.

It has been certain for some time that first place would be won either by Miss Ringsred or Mr. McAdams, and, while the difference between their averages is not large, it is sufficient to give Miss Ringsred an undisputed title as the best student in the class of '06. The differences in marks all through the list are sufficient to establish every one's place positively and all the courses are regular, so no allowances for extra work or other reasons had to be made. But two young men appear in the list.

The position of being one of the first five does not carry with it as much honor as it once did, since the honor pupils are no longer the ones who deliver the orations on the graduating night of the class. Their names will be printed on the commencement night programs, however.

MASS MEETING.

Property Owners Will Endeavor to Raise Guaranty for Proposed Extensions.

This evening the property owners in the part of the city affected by the water main extensions to the "hill" district, will hold a mass meeting in the city council chambers for the purpose of raising the necessary guarantee to insure the extensions.

The bonds have now been voted, and all that is necessary is to pledge the 8 per cent income on the cost of the work. A number of signatures have already been secured to the petitions, and the meeting this evening is for the purpose of taking stock and seeing how much more work is necessary.

NO UNANIMITY ON RAILROAD RATE BILL.

Washington, Feb. 14.—At the conclusion of today's session of the interstate commerce committee of the senate, it was admitted that a bill regulating railroad rates cannot be reported with anything like a unanimous endorsement. This is the form in which it is announced that a compromise on the question of authorizing judicial review of orders by the interstate commission fixing rates is impossible. Neither is it certain that a vote can be had in the committee on Friday in accordance with the agreement reached a fortnight ago. It is said that nearly a hundred amendments are pending and if there is a disposition on either side to interfere with a vote on the house bill itself, votes may be demanded on each of the amendments.

CLAIMS GRAN BROKE WORD

Matt Clark Sues to Enforce Delivery of Timber Title.

Loses Case Because Acceptance of the Option Was Oral.

Following the rule of Minnesota courts that a written acceptance is necessary for an option to buy, Judge Dibell this morning ordered findings for Lando Gran in the action brought against him by Matt Clark to enforce the conveyance of a large quantity of pine and norway timber in township 65-20, valued at $35,000.

Mr. Clark claimed that Oct. 10, 1905, Mr. Gram gave him an option, good until the noon hour of Oct. 12 following, to purchase for $25,000 the timber mentioned. He claimed that he took the option with the general understanding that he was to find, if he could, another purchaser at an advanced price.

It is alleged by Mr. Clark that he went to Mr. Gran, shortly before 12 o'clock noon, Oct. 12, and told him that he had not yet heard from a party with whom he was interested in the prospective purchase, but rather than take any chances of losing the timber he would close the deal. He alleges that Mr. Gran requested him to wait until after lunch, and promised to close the trade that afternoon before 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. Clark claims that he relied on the good faith of Mr. Gran in the latter's alleged promise, and went back in the afternoon within the time limit and again renewed his offer to close the deal. He also alleges that he tendered $25,000 and demanded a conveyance, but that Mr. Gran then refused to convey the timber or to accept the money.

It is alleged by Mr. Clark that he had found a purchaser, and that the timber was of a value not less than $35,000. He claims that in case of his inability to secure title to the pine he will be damaged to the extent of $10,000.

The court was asked to require Mr. Gran to deliver a deed, or in case he could not do so, to give Mr. Clark judgment for the amount of his alleged damage.

Mr. Bailey, of Washburn, Bailey & Mitchell, appeared for Mr. Clark and J. R. Donohue, of St. Paul and H. B. Fryberger, of this city, appeared for Mr. Gran.

In his answer, Mr. Gran admitted the option for the sale of the timber, but denied that there was any acceptance of the option by Mr. Clark, either in the morning or afternoon, or at any time. He denied that there was ever any tender of money on Mr. Clark's part, and characterized many of the allegations of the complaint as false and untrue.

Mr. Clark, who testified in his own behalf, was the only witness called. He had not completed his testimony when the question of an acceptance of the option was raised by objections of Mr. Gran's counsel, the grounds being that a written, not an oral, acceptance was required of Mr. Clark.

Mr. Bailey offered to prove the various things set forth in his complaint, also the alleged conversations and agreements had between Mr. Clark and Mr. Gran, but the court sustained the objection of opposing counsel that they were immaterial, and that the offers were attempts to prove an oral contract when, under the laws of Minnesota, a written contract was required.

This being the situation, Mr. Bailey said he had no further testimony to offer.

Mr. Gan rested his case immediately, and the court ordered findings for Mr. Gran, with a twenty-days' stay, at the request of Mr. Bailey.

It is understood that an appeal will be taken to the state supreme court from the district court ruling.

AUTOS ARE A NUISANCE

Says Congressman Sims Who Has Bill Controling Them.

An Effort to Lop Off Philippine Appropriation Fails.

Washington, Feb. 14.—When the house met today, Mr. Sims (Tenn.) endeavored to take the floor on a question of personal privilege based on a newspaper interview, which criticised his automobile regulation bill. It was ruled that no question of privilege was presented, but Mr. Sims was allowed fifteen minutes to explain the bill.

Mr. Sims was opposed both to the excessive speed and the excessive "tooting" of automobiles. His bill was drawn to reduce both "nuisances."

A resolution was agreed to asking information of the secretary of the treasury as to the existence and location of the deed to the old New York customs house, sold by the government to the national city bank.

Consideration of the fortifications appropriation bill was resumed, the bill being taken up for amendment under the five minute rule.

An amendment was offered by Mr. Sullivan (Mass.) cutting off the $400,000 for fortifications in the Philippine islands. Every fortification in the Philippines he regarded as a barrier to their inhabitants. All indications now, he said, pointed to the fortification and construction of a naval station at Subig bay. If this was correct, it was useless to waste money at Cavite. Until a definite conclusion was reached he was opposed to appropriating anything.

Mr. Graff (Ill.) regarded the amendment as simply an emphasis of a proposed abandonment of the Philippines. He objected to departing from the policy of allowing defense works to be located by the experts of the army, and their location or extent guarded from public knowledge. No matter under what flag the Philippines were governed they would need coast defenses.

Mr. Sullivan's amendment, cutting off the $400,000 for fortifications in the Philippines was lost by a vote of 51 to 113.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 14.—Immediately after the routine morning business had been disposed of today, the subsidy shipping bill was laid before the senate and its consideration resumed with the understanding that it would be voted on before adjournment. Mr. Gallinger offered a number of amendments on behalf of the merchant marine commission. One of them limits the number of officers and men in the proposed naval reserve to 10,000.

U. P. INCREASES DIVIDEND.

New York, Feb. 14.—The directors of the Union Pacific Railroad company today declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent on the common stock. This is an increase of half of one per cent as compared with the last semi-annual declaration. The regular semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent was declared on the preferred stock.

GRIP CURED

MR. W. A. RUTH.

His doctor unable to aid him, Mr. W. A. Ruth, of Bridgeville, Del., after he had given up hope began to use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. It cured him in one week. In writing he says:

Last winter I contracted a severe case of Grip, and my doctor did not aid me. I was in despair. My druggist told me there was nothing like Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to drive the Grip out of one's system, and it was just one week after I began to use your medicine before I fully recovered from this terrible plague. I heartily recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to every one who is suffering from Grip or colds. W. A. RUTH, Bridgeville, Del.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Cures Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Grip, Bronchitis and Pneumonia. It is used in over two thousand leading hospitals as the most valuable tonic stimulant known to medicine. It stimulates and enriches the blood, aids digestion, builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart and fortifies the system against disease germs. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey prolongs life, keeps the old young and the young strong. It contains no fusel oil and is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine. This is a guarantee.

CAUTION. There is but one Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Sold by druggists and grocers—$1.00 a bottle—in sealed bottles only, never in bulk. Insist on having the genuine, and see that the strap over the cork is unbroken. Refuse all cheap substitutes, as they are put up only for profit and are positively injurious to the health. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label. Medicinal booklet and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

SHRINERS WILL PLAY

Aad Temple Has Imperial Potentate as Guest of Honor.

Will Initiate About Twenty Tender Novices With Much Ceremony.

The ceremonial session to be held this evening by Aad Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, promises to be something startling. Not only are there about twenty young and tender victims listed for subjection, but the imperial potentate of the order, Harry A. Collins of Toronto, Ont., will be present to make his official inspection of the temple, and the Shriners will probably do a few extra stunts for his regaling. The affair will start at 8 o'clock. After the imperial potentate will have been received and the usual courtesies of such occasions will have been gone through with, the novices will be handed their valentines, which they will try to untie and cannot. A new supply of litters was received yesterday on which the novices will be carried out, where it is necessary, after the ceremony.

Following the ceremony a banquet will be served. Imperial Potentate Collins will be the special guest of the evening and as many of the local Shriners know him and as he is popular with all, the affair will have more of a personal than an official air. The reception committee is headed by John T. Armstead, the refreshments committee by John W. Miller, and the decorations committee by John Panton.

Some additions have been made to the list of officers and Dr. A. W. Shaw has been added to the list of physicians for the reason that Drs. Braden and Graham were overworked last time. The full list of officers of the Temple follows:

Jesse Norton, illustrious potentate; Joseph B. Cotton, chief rabban; William A. Pitcher, assistant rabban; W. D. Underhill, high priest and prophet; Harry Nesbitt, oriental guide; J. W. Lyder, Jr., treasurer; S. L. Frazer, recorder; A. P. Cook, first ceremonial master; William W. Brooke, second ceremonial master; Samuel O. Sterrett, marshal; Will C. Brown, director; C. H. Bagley, Isaac Black, L. L. Culbertson, Joseph F. Parker, assistant directors; Charles A. Stewart, A. W. Shaw, A. J. Braden, Robert Graham, medical directors; James E. Watt, captain of the guard; Charles A. Payne, outer guard; Henry S. Ely, musical director; A. F. M. Custance, chief musician; Fred E. Hough, electrician; Fred E. Hough and John Cox, alchemists.

LITTLE HOPE FOR JOHN A. McCALL

Former President of New York Life Not Likely to Recover.

Lakewood, N. J., Feb. 14.—Although John A. McCall, former president of the New York Life Insurance company, was resting comfortably today, Dr. Charles L. Lindley, his physician, said he has very little chance of recovery. The physician said he did not, however, think that Mr. McCall's recovery is impossible, and that he anticipates no immediate crisis in the disease. The nature of Mr. McCall's complaint was not stated by Dr. Lindley, but it was said at the residence to be a form of liver trouble.

The last rites of the Catholic church were administered to Mr. McCall yesterday, when a sinking spell attacked him. He rallied again, with his strength returning to a marked degree, and he passed a fairly good night.

Your Tongue is Coated!

LOOK inside your watch cover and see!

That's bad business, Bill!

What you been Eating?

What were you drinking?

What kind of Lazy Chair did you take exercise in?

Now don't think it doesn't matter!

Because, it's your Bowels that talk now, every time you open your Mouth.

That doesn't help your Popularity, nor your Earning capacity.

And, a Coated Tongue, or a Bad Breath, are sure signs of bad Bowels and poor Digestion.

'Finest thing in the world for Constipation, Indigestion, or Dyspepsia, Ten Mile Walks.

Haven't time? Too Lazy?

Well,—there is another Way.

Take Artificial Exercise for your Bowels.

That's—CASCARETS.

'Waken them up, Strengthen them so they Contract and Expand the Bowels and Intestines in a healthy active manner.

That's how these muscles work the Food along, through your thirty feet of Intestines, to its Finish.

That's how they squeeze Gastric Juice into the food, to Digest it.

That's how they make the millions of little Suckers in the Intestines draw the Nutrition out of Food, and transform it into Blood, Brawn, Brain and Bone.

No purging from CASCARETS, because there is no flooding of the Bowels with a waste of precious Digestive Juice, as with Salts, Castor Oil,—"Physic," etc.

ENTERTAIN H. A. COLLINS

Supreme Treasurer the Guest of Local Independent Foresters.

Reception is Given in Honor of Man From Toronto.

Harry A. Collins of Toronto, supreme treasurer of the Independent Order of Foresters, was the guest of honor at a reception given in his honor at Folz hall last evening.

In the receiving line were W. A. Hicken, past chief ranger of the state, who introduced the distinguished visitor and delivered a brief address; Senator George R. Laybourn, Frank Crassweiler, state high chief ranger; I. Ridge, high secretary; John D. McPhail, high treasurer, and Dr. Clark of Superior, past high vice chief ranger of the state of Wisconsin.

Mr. Collins, in a strong address, reviewed the work of the order since it was reorganized twenty-five years ago, with Dr. Oronhyatekha as supreme chief ranger. Then the order had 349 members and a debt of $4,000 with which to begin business. The membership now is somewhere in the neighborhood of 250,000, of which 135,000 is in the United States.

Mr. Collins declared that during the Spanish-American war, the Independent Order of Foresters was the first fraternal insurance order to announce that it would pay in full the policies of men who fell fighting for their country's flag. He said he considered this a pretty good record, considering that the headquarters of the society was in Toronto and that most of the executive officers were Canadians.

He said that the surplus on hand today amounted to $10,000,000, all of which was invested in the very best bonds and real estate. Of all this, he declared, not a cent had ever been lost by foolish speculation in any direction.

A brief address was made by Dr. Clark of Superior, and Miss Harriet Noble of Superior sang.

Miss Madalene Blake, past chief ranger of the women's auxiliary, was presented with a beautiful signet ring, set in jewels, in recognition of her excellent services in office. The presentation was made by Mr. Collins.

Dancing was indulged in during the remainder of the evening.

All old-time Cough Syrups bind the bowels. This is wrong. A new idea was advanced two years ago in Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. This remedy acts on the mucous membranes of the throat and lungs and loosens the bowels at the same time. Sold by all druggists.

COUNT BONI IS EXCLUDED

Paris, Feb. 14.—Count Boni de Castellane had a long conference yesterday with the lawyers of the countess, his wife. This was one of several meetings at which the two parties concerned have carefully gone over the financial features of the case with the view of determining the exact form of the future proceedure and ultimate decree. In the meantime the countess' bill of complaint is being prepared, but has not yet been filed, as the form will depend upon the pending conferences over financial affairs. If these are satisfactorily adjusted the countess' bill of complaint is likely to be materially modified so as to contain only incompatibility or other grounds within the statute, but avoiding all allegations of a scandalous nature. However, the conferences are not for the purpose of reconciliations as all concerned, including the count and countess and their lawyers, appear to recognize the futility of any further attempt to reunite the family. The present indications therefore are that after the parties reach a financial understanding, the bill will be modified and a decree entered by mutual consent. This decree probably will be for a separation, as the French law permits such a decree being extended to a complete divorce, after three years. Thus far, however, the countess has not decided whether the bill shall ask for a complete annulment of her marriage. Her friends are rather inclined to restrict the decree to a separation, as this would prevent the remarriage of either party within three years, thus putting an end to the rumor that the countess intended to marry again, which her friends characterize as absurd. Until the bill is finally framed and filed, the courts will not formally possess the document explicitly setting forth the grounds of the action. The preliminary plea did not enter into the merits of the case, but was a formality under the French law whereby the wife must ask the court's permission to begin an action against her husband. In order to sustain this plea the countess presented papers establishing a prima facie right to begin an action against her husband. These prima facie papers did not specify the names of the co-respondents, but recited incidents in which the count is alleged to be implicated. The present negotiations tend to further eliminate these names from appearing during the official proceedings. As a result of the countess' prima facie showing, the court has awarded her the temporary care of her children and a separate domicile at the Castellane mansion on the avenue Du Bois De Boulogne. The effect of this interlocutory order is to exclude the count from the mansion as the law considers it to be incompatible for two separate domiciles to exist under the same roof. The countess remains there with the children and she expects to be joined soon by members of Howard Gould's family.

Count Boni expresses to friends his deep desolation over the affair, and asserts his continued affection for his wife and children. He pays the fullest tribute to the wifely loyalty of the countess and does not intend to file a cross bill.

BAKER KILLED BY TWO NEGRO ROBBERS.

Phoenixville, Pa., Feb. 14.—Max Elkins, a baker, aged 34 years, was shot and instantly killed today by negroes who had entered his bakery for the purpose of robbery.

Before killing Elkins, the negroes entered the bakeshop and held up two of his assistants. While one of the burglars stood guard over the two bakers, two other negroes went to Elkins' bedroom. The latter was awakened by the men, but before he could reach his revolver one of the burglars sent a bullet through Elkins' heart. The three men then stole a horse and wagon and escaped.

BOARD TO INVESTIGATE BLACK CHARGES FIRST

Council Declines to Take Matters Out of Commissioners' Hands.

Bill for Gasoline for Chief's Automobile is Held Up.

The council last evening—

Refused to hear charges against Chief Black before the board has given them a hearing.

Held up bill for gasoline used in chief's automobile while it was in city's service.

Accepted new garbage incinerator and ordered it paid for on terms agreed upon.

Canvassed returns of recent municipal election, and found them correct as published.

"I have never believed that there was anything unlawful, but I have always held that the fire department was conducted in too extravagant a manner, and that there was no call for the petty tyranny over the men in the conduct of the department," said Alderman McEwen, last evening, when the mayor's letter to the council, asking for a committee to investigate certain city departments, was under discussion.

"I believe it is wrong for the chief of any department to have any of the men act as his special servant. It makes little difference to me who makes the investigation. I have as much confidence in the fire commissioners as any one here, but I sometimes think it should be conducted by some one outside the immediate environment of the department. These men hear how the chief smooths things over from time to time."

Alderman Barnes favored allowing the fire commissioners to go on with the investigation.

"I know nothing about the charges, or what they are," said Alderman Barnes, "but I have confidence in the members of the fire board and think they should be permitted to try these charges. I move that this council resolve in favor of the investigation, but that it believes it should be held by the board, and that a meeting of the board be held tomorrow night for that purpose, and that the council respectfully refuse to take up the investigation."

The motion was seconded by Alderman Waugh.

Alderman Moore stated that he was not willing to vote for such a strongly worded motion, but was in favor of the board holding the investigation first, since it had conducted matters up to the present time, and since the members of the board were all men of exceptional standing in the community.

"If that last clause is taken out, I am willing to support it," said Alderman Wilson, "on condition that the city attorney tells us who is the proper party to conduct this investigation. If the board is the proper party, I will vote for the resolution. If the council is the proper party, I will vote to have the council do it."

"We would be taking it out of the hands of a nonpolitical board and placing it in the hands of a political body," said Alderman Barnes.

"It seems to me that since it has come to a head while in the hands of the board, it would be a little premature to take it out of their hands," said Alderman Moore. "If they don't conduct the investigation in a proper manner, I stand ready to support the council's jumping in at any time. But these men are all of exceptional standing in the city."

The city attorney was then called upon for an opinion.

"There is no question in my mind, but that the council has every right to conduct such an investigation," said Mr. Fesler. "It is absurd to think that the leading legislative body of the city has not the power to remove Chief Black, but it can investigate the conduct of the department at any time. The board also has such right, so that there is no legal question involved. It is merely a question of policy with the council."

"I just wish to state my position in this matter," said President Haven. "I haven't known until tonight that there were any charges officially before this council, although I have heard more or less talk for years. I wish to state, that although I will support the motion to have the board hold its investigation first, I stand willing and ready to investigate any charges that are brought before this council at any time, no matter whom they involve. I do no wish to vote for any motion that will bind me to do otherwise."

The amended motion then carried, and under its terms the investigation is thrown back on the board of fire commissioners, who are requested to report to the council.

No action was taken in regard to Mayor Cullum's communication, which asked for a committee of the council to investigate charges against any city officer, but it was laid on the table pending the report of the board on the Black investigation.

There was a bill for $16.30, which was held up by the committee on claims for a time, but at the last moment was included, on the statement by the fire commissioners that if the city did not pay it, they would pay it out of their own pockets. According to the statement, Chief Black was using his private automobile for city purposes, as the department was short one horse. The fund was running low, and for several months the board postponed purchasing another. Meanwhile the chief was using the automobile, and the fire commissioners agreed to stand good for the gasoline, since he was saving feed bills for the horse.

The bill has been held up for three or four months, but on a motion by Alderman Waugh it was placed before the council for approval last evening.

"I have seen him running around town with his family in his automobile during the day, and then out in the evening with his horse," said Alderman Lyle. "Let him pay for his own gasoline."

"I won't vote for it either," said Alderman McEwen. "Maybe he used it for city purposes, and maybe he didn't. We heard the same story about saving the city money when we were asked to buy him an automobile."

The motion was lost, Aldermen McEwen, Moore, Lyle, Getchell and Mueller voting against it, and Alderman Barnes, Haven, Wilson, Waugh, Trevillion, Ribenack and Tessman in favor of it. Alderman Ribenack said he voted for it only because he had signed the bill, but that he was opposed to allowing any more bills for gasoline. Alderman Wilson also intimated that he would support no more such bills. It required a two-thirds vote to carry, and was consequently defeated.

* * *

The council formally accepted the new garbage incinerator last evening, on the favorable report of the garbage commission, consisig of Health Commissioner Murray, Bishop James McGolrick, Aldermen Haven and Moore, and A. C. Weiss.

The commission reported that the test of the new plant had been very satisfactory, and recommended that the city accept it and pay for it as agreed upon.

* * *

The returns of the recent municipal election were canvassed, and the payrolls for thee lection judges and clerks were passed. The total cost of the election was $3,096.70.

* * *

W. M. Hughes, the engineer engaged to examine the ferry bridge, reported progress, and stated that he would make another inspection in thirty days. The substance of the report has already been published in the Herald.

* * *

Alderman Ribenack asked the city attorney for an opinion, regarding the rights of house movers, and whether or not they could he held responsible for trees damaged.

"A case has been brought to my notice," he said, "where a housemover tore a branch off a shade tree."

"They have no more rights to destroy property than anyone else," said Mr. Fesler. "I have no doubt but that if two reliable witnesses can be secured, the assistant city attorney, Mr. McKeon, will issue a warrant for their arrest, and will prosecute them."

The Duluth Boat club secured the vacation of the portion of Vine street west of St. Louis avenue, as requested, and the property can now be used for an additional building for the club members.

Chester A. Congdon, J. Uno Sebenius, J. L. Greatsinger and the Duluth & Iron Range road, petitioned for the vacation for the ends of Thirty-first, Thirty-fourth, Thirty-fifth, Thirty-sixth, Thirty-seventh, Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninths avenues east, which project below Lake street, and Lake street between West avenue and the cemetery. The signers of the petition own all of the property in the vicinity, and they point out that the streets can never be used as thoroughfares. The petition was favorably passed upon by the committee, but on its recommendation, was held up pending report from the city engineer, as to whether or not it will ever be necessary to construct outlet sewers through the property in question.

MANILA RAISED AND COMING IN

Crew Will Have Her in Port in Few Hours.

The barge Manila, which went ashore on Encampment island with the Lafayette, during the storm of Nov. 28, will arrive here, convoyed by a number of tugs, some time today, or at least tomorrow. Capt. Reid, who has had the contract for the work, has succeeded in raising the Manila from the bottom to which her nose sunk after she was taken off the rocks at the island. A bulkhead gave away, and her bow went down, drawing twenty-seven feet of water, while her stern drew only five feet. However, a diver was sent down to fix the bulkhead and the boat was pumped out.

When the Manila arrives a bed will have to be found for her in the harbor somewhere. She will be allowed to rest on the bottom until spring, when the ice will not interfere with taking her to the shipyard.

After the work on the Manila, Capt. Reid will immediately tackle the proposition of getting the Mataafa off the beach at the canal, and will try to take her into the harbor. Yesterday bunting was seen flying from the Mataafa, and many people thought it had some significance. However, it turned out to be the work of some boys, who evidently thought they were man-o'-war's men for the time being. Men were sent by the Pittsburg Steamship company to take the bunting down.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Soldier at Fort Brady is Accidently Shot by a Friend.

Sault Ste. Marie—Private Thomas Stewart, a member of Company E, Fourth infantry, was shot and killed by Joseph Young while on duty at the Fort Brady guardhouse at the Soo. The killing is believed to have been accidental. The men were marching with a prisoner when the shooting occurred. Stewart was ahead and Young's rifle was discharged, striking Stewart in the back. The weapon was an old-fashioned carbine and carried a multi-ball, or three bullets, one of which penetrated the heart. As soon as shot, Stewart turned partly round, clutched the air, and fell dead at the feet of his comrade. The men had been friends for years.

Norway—Peter Vankerckhove, a prominent hardware merchant of Norway, departed for the West recently, without advising his friends of his intentions for the future. It is claimed that financial embarrassment was the cause of his sudden departure. He has since been heard from at Omaha, Neb., but it is supposed that he only stopped there temporarily.

Menominee—The ice harvest on the Menominee range is an excellent one. One Iron Mountain company is cutting about 2,000 tons at Lake Antoine for home consumption and has contracts to fill a number of private houses in the city and in neighboring towns. The supply is bountiful and of unusual purity, the ice being some fifteen inches in thickness.

Iron River—It is given out on reliable authority that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad will build a branch to Iron River as soon as the work can be done in the spring. The length of the line, which will extend from Crystal Falls, will be about fifteen miles. It will run through a comparatively level country and can be constructed cheaply. It will give Iron River a second much-desired passenger and freight service with the outside world. The St. Paul has been assured of much traffic in the Iron River and Stambaugh district, in addition to the outputs of several mines.

Sagola—A weary traveler wandered into Sagola, Dickinson county, a few evenings since, and gave his name as Tom Nelson. Being under the influence of liquor, he was promptly arrested and lodged in jail, the night watchman remaining with him to keep up a fire. About 11 o'clock the prisoner was sleeping soundly. At 2 o'clock in the morning the officer, not hearing the accustomed snore, went to the cell occupied by the prisoner and found him lifeless and cold. A coroner's jury was summoned. On examination of the body nothing was found whereby the man could be identified. The only article found in his clothing was a red bandanna handkerchief with four silver quarters tied in one corner. The man was a half-breed Indian, and death is supposed to be due to paralysis of the heart, the effect of too much drink. The remains were shipped to Iron Mountain for burial by the county officials.

CROSS IN THE HEAVENS.

Rare Phenomenon is Seen by Gitizens at Moorhead.

Moorhead, Minn., Feb. 14.—A fiery cross in the heavens, such a phenomenon as that which is said to have induced the Emepror Constantine in 313 A. D. to become a Christian, was witnessed here Monday night between 8 and 9 o'clock.

To scientists the phenomenon is known as double halos, appearing about the moon in diameters of 45 and 90 degrees.

Extending perpendicularly entirely across the halos was a broad shaft of light, while another shaft somewhat fainter appeared horizontally, forming a perfect cross. At the top of each halo was a crescent of light which greatly added to the beauty of the sight.

A single halo about the moon is of frequent occurrence, but the double halo is said to be very rare and in ancient times many miraculous events were attributed to its appearance. Among the chief of these is related of the Emperor Constntine, who in 313 A. D. was marching at the head of his army against Maxentius. In the night the emperor related that he had seen, stretched across the heavens, an immense fiery cross ,and this he interpreted as a sign that the Christian religion, whose symbol the cross was, was the true and only religion, and he forthwith allowed himself to be baptized and became a convert.

JOHNSON IS FREED.

Police Find No Evidence on Which to Hold Suspect.

Minneapolis, Feb. 14.—Carl Johnson, the Bader murder suspect, arrested by Charles Brown, an ex-city detective in the hire of a paper, yesterday was released on motion of the county attorney.

He was brought from the South by the ex-officer and he may demand to be returned with expenses paid.

Johnson, who had joined the navy, suffered because of the suspicions cast upon him by the actions of the detective. He is now entitled to reinstatement in the navy.

HAS CHIP ON SHOULDER

The Belligerent Attitude of Japan as a Nation Explained.

Average Peasant Judges Opponents' Strength by Numbers.

Tokio, Feb. 14.—Japanese people as a nation have been rather in the attitude of a man carrying a chip around on his shoulder. Of course this is not true of the educated Japanese, but of the so-called lower classes it may be said that they have the idea that they are destined to conquer the earth. Even where ignorant they are intensely patriotic, and sometimes their patriotism increases in direct proportion to their ignorance. But given an ignorant and war-like people and it can readily be understood that the leaders of the race might be forced into a war against their will by the very war spirit of the people. Though the emperor had the situation well in hand at the time of the signing of the treaty of Portsmouth when it was apparent that if Russia had not agreed to pay the indemnity, it would have taken but a little to have overturned the government; the rebels themselves promising the people that they would carry on the war with Russia until an indemnity had been secured.

Said one of the leading merchants of Japan, a man who has traveled around the world a dozen times, who is probably better informed upon world matters than the majority of business men in Europe and America:

"Of course I know what your civilization of sky scrapers and gatling guns; your wonderful material resources, really means, but I cannot explain this to my people. The average man in Japan today reasons it out this way: China has 400,000,000 of people and the United States 80,000,000. We whipped China, and the United States is only one-fifth as populous. We could whip the United States five times as easy as we whipped China. Russia has 120,000,000 and the United States has 80,000,000. We could whip the United States one and one-half times as easy as we did Russia, and we could take the Philippine islands away from them.

"This method of reasoning is one that might be common to the ignorant classes of any country. It would do little good to tell the average peasant of the poorer orders that there is a wide difference between the American or the English soldier or marine and the Chinese soldier or the Russian sailor who were defeated by Togo. To him a man is a man, and he counts them by number only, and imagines that Japan could whip the whole world combined, in case of necessity."

On the other hand, it should be thoroughly understood that the Japanese government is extremely friendly to the United States. This friendliness is not the result of diplomacy or a make-believe policy—it is genuine, and has its foundation in the recognition of the fact that the United States was instrumental in opening up Japan to trade and commerce, and that as a result Japan has been admitted to the family of nations, and that its influence upon the affairs of the world has been tremendously increased.

The educated Japanese have philosophic minds, and it is not a difficult task for them to reason from analogy and understand the differences today between the political standing of Japan and China and the causes which contribute to these differences. The question, however, which will confront the Japanese government of the future is not whether the government of Japan is frindly to foreigners—that may be taken for granted—but whether the poorer Japanese can be educated out of their natural policy of exclusion—an Oriental trait—and taught to understand that no nation today has the right to become a "hermit nation." If this can be accomplished many things will be easy—if this is difficult to accomplish, then the Japanese lower orders must be whipped into line with world politics in the sad school of experience.

These points have all come out in connection with the discussion which has been going on as to whether the Japanese government is really behind the Chinese boycott of American goods. It may be said right here that there is no evidence to substantiate the widely circulated reports that the Japanese government is behind the Chinese boycott. It is perhaps true that Japanese newspaper men, Japanese priests, Japanese students, as individuals, have taken a hand in fomenting an anti-foreign and anti-American feeling throughout the Orient. And it may be that persons in the employ of the Japanese government, acting as individuals, have been foremost in the boycott agitation. But this is not because the Japanese government has wanted this to be done. The Japanese government is naturally regards China as a great field for future Japanese commerce, but it believes that Proximity to the Chinese markets and the subsidization of Japanese-Chinese steamship lines is all that is necessary to enable Japan to compete with the other nations of the world. Hence the real leaders of the government would never resort to so uncivilized a method as the introduction of the boycott.

But when it comes to pride in army and navy, Japanese pride is a thing which must be reckoned with. This was seen during the recent discussion in the Japanese parliament, when a supporter of the government, during a course of questioning, inadvertently admitted that the fact that the English army was not up to date was giving the Japanese government some concern, evidently not stopping to think that this statement might give Japanese diplomacy some concern. Yet the Japanese member of parliament only voiced the feeling of the average Japanese that the army and navy of the island kingdom is the finest in the world.

Some conception of the task to be performed by the Japanese in regulating the finances of Korea may be derived from the document which has just been officially published under the authority of Mr. Megata, financial adviser of the Korean government. Perusal of the document creates surprise, not that the Koreans found themselves perennially in a state of monetary confusion, but that they had succeeded in getting on at all under the system. At the root of the many evils which had become chronic before the Japanese intervened was the habit of farming out the taxes. The central government, provided it received a certain sum from a certain locality, made no scrutiny into the methods pursued by the officials of the locality to collect the money or into the amount collected. Thus the taxes that the people had to pay were regulated in the last instance by the rapacity of the tax collector. All this it has been necessary for the Japanese to change, introducing modern methods of taxation and fiscal government.

INJURED BY LOGS.

Two Men Badly Crushed While Working Near Ingram, Wis.

Ingram, Wis., Feb. 14.—While decking logs for the C. A. Coon Lumber Company of Glen Flora, Wis., Monday, Carl Stewart and George McConnell were perhaps fatally injured by the giving way of a rollway of logs. They were taken to the hospital at Ladysmith for surgical treatment.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Minneapolis, Feb. 14.—Harriet E. Hatch, proprietor of a lying-in hospital at 32 Western avenue was arrested yesterday afternoon on charges relating to the death of Mrs. Ella Rogers of Pillager, Minn., who died Friday at St. Barnabas hospital. The victim was taken to St. Barnabas from the Hatch hospital, where, it is alleged, the prisoner had performed a criminal operation upon her.

Ladies' Suits at LESS THAN HALF PRICE Thursday.

We say "less than half" because some of them show the old mark to be more than twice as much as the "markeddown" price.

It's giving you a long coat suit in any one of the finest materials and styles of the season for less than half what even we asked you a month or two ago.

There are a couple months of the season when their value will be justly appreciated, still coming—and styles are not so fickle as to render them impractical for another season.

Then at $8.75, there'll be, Thursday morning, a rack of broken lines, not all sizes in any one model, but a splendid range of sizes and materials in the lot.

They are jacket and Eton styles—mostly in fancy mixtures—but a nice lot of plain colors, blacks, navies, browns, etc.

Women who wish to realize practical savings will be here to see them—and seeing them is buying.

(Suits and Cloaks—Second Floor.)

98c Buys WOMEN'S Fancy Black PETTICOATS

They have 14-inch flounce, accordion pleated, with three tucked ruffles; are cut in extra full width, giving the full, graceful hang so desired.

You rarely find such excellent looking, and excellent wearing petticoats as these—at a price that represents so little of their real value.

(Skirt Section—Second Floor.)

Fancy BUTTONS, were $1.50 —go for 20c doz.

for the simple reason that we don't want them here when the new things come.

Not all were $1.50—some were only 25c—but they all get together on a single basis now, for a quick selling.

Dressmakers or others who use large buttons for coats or tiny ones for dress trimmings will find variety enough in this collection.

Some are enameled buttons, some are gilt, and many other novelties—all good—and all at one price—20c a dozen.

PANTON & WHITE COMPANY

THE BIG GLASS BLOCK STORE — WHERE QUALITY IS PARAMOUNT

STORE OPEN AT 8:30 A. M.---CLOSES 5:30 P. M.

We wish to go on record with this statement—The best ties we have ever sold for 25c.

We refused to lay aside any for employees—though many want them—and they go on sale for you Thursday morning.

But they'll not last any too long and our forewarning is to be spry after these.

Four-in-hands (and a few English Squares)—of fine poplin silks, in new French folds, lock stitch,—designs in plaids, dots, stripes, solid colors and figures:

Men—you're now wearing ties like these for which you've paid 50c to $1. Our former prices were 50c and 75c, but our new furnishings will soon be coming and these must go now.

(Men's Furnishings Dept.—East Aisle.)

WASH STOCK COLLARS at 10c.

You may have them with or without tabs—and 10c each for as many as you want.

(Neckwear Counter—West Center Aisle)

Black SATIN RIBBON 19c yd.

A little out-of-the-ordinary price for 6-inch black satin ribbon, maybe,—but if you're willing, we are,—for we have nearly 100 pieces.

You've often seen a quality like this selling for up to 40c a yard—we usually ask more than 19c—but that's Thursday's price.

(Ribbon Counter—West Center Aisle.)

"Q. Q." Shoes of Quality

for women—the "Queen Quality"—at $3 and $3.50 per pair,—and there are none better at the price.

See our window and then come in and try a pair for your own feet.

(Second Floor—Rear Elevator.)

Good Books.

Are good companions. We've a big lot and can get you anything we haven't in stock.

Our prices are always lower than the publisher's prices—and often afford big savings.

Special—Soiled books in many grades and all sorts and classes are selling at less than half.

(Book Dept.—Main Floor)

Ladies' Underwear.

79c—fine white Merino vests and pants—$1 till we found there was but a small lot.

(East Center Aisle.)

$2.98 Will Buy WHITE Shirt Waists Worth $6.00—Linen

Why? Because some of those in our $2.98 lot are tumbled or mussed waists that were originally in the $5.98 class.

The others are new white waists—bought in that immense waist purchase a few weeks ago—at an under-value figure.

But mind you this—they're real linen—genuine Irish, and have hand-embroidered fronts, in many beautiful designs.

Then, too, they're made with the new style sleeves and the new tucked cuffs, in various details of finish.

(Shirt Waist Section—Second Floor.)

Muslin UNDERWEAR at Very Little Prices—Wear

that you'll be wanting badly about the time when you'll have to pay more than now,—so there's reason for heeding this offering.

29c Corset Covers of muslin, embroidery and lace trimmed and run with ribbon in the necks—all of which are round shape; there are several different styles.

Better grades at 39c, 49c, 59c, 75c and up

49c Night Gowns of good quality muslin, with dainty trimmings in either embroidery or lace, and combinations of both; slipovers and both V and square shape yoke, button fronts; extra full cut—both ways.

Better ones at 75c, 98c, $1.19 and up.

39c Drawers—either open or closed style—lace inserted wide ruffles, lace edged; some have quite elaborate ideas in the trimming.

Better ones at 49c, 75c, 98c and up.

75c White Petticoats—not the little short ones, but good full size skirts, full cut; an 18-inch flounce, three rows of lace insertions, and edged with pretty laces, makes them a desirable and attractive item to women.

(Muslin Section—Second Floor.)

Still Cleaning Out the EMBROIDERY Lots of insertions that have been left in broken lots—at little over half their regular selling price or actual value.

Nainsook and Swiss edges and insertions—all widths and so many dainty and beautiful patterns that we couldn't tell you of them.

They're fresh, clean—perfect in every way—except that we know they're broken lots—you'd never know it if we didn't say so.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION

Undoubtedly the Cause of Fire on the Transport Meade.

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—The facts concerning the Meade disaster, so far as they can be known, are set forth as the findings of the board of inquiry, composed of Captains Wendel L. Simpson and A. E. Williams and Lieut. T. D. Cabel, made public yesterday, as follows:

"That the fire was confined entirely to hatch No. 2; that this hatch was loaded with baggage pertaining to the Second infantry officers and men; that the origin of the fire was at a point remote from the hatch and at a considerable depth in the hold; that the fire started in one of the packages, viz., arms chest, containing rifles and quantities of mosquito netting and crate containing mirror, probably former. (The rifles were generously oiled about metal parts, and mirror was wrapped with a blouse and poncho and wrapped about with loose hay).

"That the loading of this hatch was completed, and the hatch closed, at 10 a. m., Jan. 31; that the fire was not discovered until 12, midnight; that it would have been impossible for any person to have had access to the origin of the fire between the time of the closing of the hatch and that of the discovery of the fire; that the officers and crew were prompt, efficient and energetic, and that water was at once turned on the fire and the fire extinguished by flooding the apartment.

"The board finds that the fire department of this city rendered immediate and most able assistance. Damage to the vessel consisted only of the charring of the ceiling on the underside of the orlop deck, this ceiling being for the purpose of holding insulating material on the underside of the refrigerating chamber, and that the damage can be repaired at an expense not to exceed $50.

"That the packages mentioned belonged to Company A and Company C respectively, and the interior of each was charred throughout, the halves of the boxes, which were adjacent, being entirely burned away, showing that the fire originated within one or the other, presumably through spontaneous combustion, the remote end of each box being entirely clean and unburned or charred on the exterior."

Everybody Knows What Constipation Is

Everybody Should Know What Hunyadi Janos Is.

HUNYADI JANOS is the original Hungarian Natural Mineral Laxative Water, which has been in constant use the world over for nearly half a century as the surest, best and most effective remedy for constipation, sluggish liver and all disorders resulting therefrom, such as bilious attacks, indigestion, rheumatism, gout, etc. Eminent physicians acknowledge its wonderful curative properties and freely prescribe it, not only to regulate the liver and bowels, but as a splendid tonic when the whole system is run down. What makes it such a wonderful remedy so far above all others is that, although absolutely harmless, it is always reliable, acting naturally and pleasantly, even in the worst cases. An inexpensive remedy well within the reach of all, for a large bottle containing many doses costs but a trifle. At all druggists. Try it.

SAYS BOY ROBBED HIM.

Merchant of Randolph, Wis., is Relieved of $1,200.

Sheboygan, Wis., Feb. 14.—A 14-year-old boy, John Laschinger, is under arrest here, charged with holding up A. P. Richards, a business man of Randolph, Wis., and relieving him of $1,260. Richards is said to have left a saloon in company with Laschinger, who agreed to take him to a hotel. Richardson, however, claims that the lad walked him into a side street, knocked him down and robbed him of a certified check for $1,200 and $60 in cash. Richards reported the matter to the police and Laschinger was arrested. The check and money are said to have been found in his pockets.

PURDY OR HALE TO BECOME JUDGE

President Favors Purdy, But Nelson Has Indorsed Hale.

Minneapolis, Feb. 14.—The Journal says: Either Milton D. Purdy or W. E. Hale of Minneapolis will succeed Judge William Lochren as United States district judge.

President Roosevelt favors Purdy, who is now serving at Washington as assistant attorney general, and has come under the president's eye. Senator Nelson, who, as far as the senators are concerned has the naming of the man, has indorsed Mr. Hale, and will not agree to a recommendation of Purdy.

The president has clashed with senators from other states several times in the appointment of judges, and has gone over their heads to name a personal choice. He may do so in Minnesota.

Judge Lochren will retire on full pay May 13, when he will reach the age limit of 70 years. He could contiue on the bench if he desired, but as his health is very poor it is understood that he intends to retire. For several months he has not been able to do full work, and for part of that time he has been confined to the house. Judge Lochren is a Democrat, and it is believed, would like to hold on in the hope of a Democratic president succeeding Roosevelt, which would enable him to give way to a Democrat.

The appointment must be settled, that is, before within the next three months. A great deal of quiet work has been done in the past few months. There have been a dozen prominent attorneys urged for the appointment, most of them naturally, from Minneapolis. The list included Judge C. B. Elliott, Judge D. F. Simpson, John H. Steele, M. H. Boutelle, C. A. Willard, Judges Haggard and Brill of St. Paul and C. C. Coupt of Fergus Falls, now United States district attorney. Judge Simpson especially had heavy indorsements, but Senator Nelson from the first favored W. E. Hale. If the president defers to his wishes, Hale will be appointed. If he insists on his personal choice, Purdy will be the man.

Either, it is believed, would be quite acceptable to the bar of the state. Mr. Hale is better known and the older man. The president has a liking for young men, and has appointed several under 50 to the bench. Judges Van Devanter and Hook of the circuit court are booth young men.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Two of Ward County Commissioners Are Removed From Office.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Judge E. B. Goss of the district court has ordered the removal from office of S. S. Richardson, chairman of the Ward county board of commissioners, and Commissioner L. R. Carroll, two of the defendants in an action begun two months ago against Commissioner Black, Richardson and Carroll by County Auditor J. W. Fabrick, charging malfeasance in office.

Grand Forks—William Husband and John Anderson were given first and second places in the annual university oratorical contest. They will represent the university in the state contest at Fargo. There were six contestants.

Fargo—There will probably be as manny applications for the superintendency of the Fargo schools as when the board last fall selected Superintendent Hicks from a field of thirty or more. Mr. Hicks has resigned to accept a better position in Cleveland, and many are after the place. The list of applicants includes many in the state who have been successful. There is also a favorable sentiment toward the selection of a North Dakota man, though it is not known how the board stands on that proposition. The fact that a new man must come by March 1 makes the matter more difficult.

Architect Bell of Helena, was awarded the contract for preparing plans for the Cass county courthouse and also for superintending the construction. While the work was in progress a new set of commissioners was chosen, and Bell was retired as superintendent and a local man substituted. Bell refused to quit and made frequent trips to Fargo. It is now claimed that he will bring suit against the commissioners not only for back salary, but for a large sum for damages alleged to have been done his reputation. The courthouse is nearing completion and the bar association has appointed a committee to arrange for the dedicatory exercises, which will be held this summer.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—The Old Settlers' association of Northern Spink and Southern Brown counties will hold its regular annual meeting in Mellette on Wednesday. W. T. Dale will read a paper on "The History of the Village of Mellette." A poem will be read by the association poet, G. A. Little. Impromptu speeches will be made by the old settlers present.

Sioux Falls—On March 1 a new superintendent will take charge of the shirt factory established at the Sioux Falls penitentiary a few months ago. O. S. Swenson, former warden of the penitentiary, has filled the position. He has now resigned, the resignation to take effect March 1.

Elk Point—C. L. Mallahan and wife of Jackson, Minn., are visiting here for the first time in years. For more than twenty years Mr. Mallahan was editor and proprietor of the Union County Courier, postmaster several years and prominent in city and state affairs. He is now proprietor of the Jackson Republic.

QUEER TITLES.

London Tit-Bits: But even the czar's proud array of titles cuts a poor figure beside that of the sultan of Turkey, who in a Turkish newspaper was described not long ago in these extravagant terms: "The Finest Pearl of the Age and esteemed Center of the Universe, at whose grand portals stand the camels of justice and mercy, and to whom the eyes of the kings and people in the West have been drawn, the rulers there finding an example of political prowess and the classes a model of mercy and kindness; our Lord and Master the Sultan of the two Shores and the High King of the two Seas, the Crown of Ages and the Pride of all Countries, the geratest of all Khalifs, the Shadow of God on Earth, the successor of the Apostle of the Lord of the Universe, the Victorious Conquerer (Al-Ghazi) Sultan Abdul-Hamid Kahn. May God protect his kingdom and place his glory above the sun and the moon, and may the Lord supply all the world with the goodness which proceeds from his Holy Majesty's good intentions."

There have been several sovereigns who have actually claimed to be divine; among them the Kings of Ava and of Ceylon, each of whom was called "God." His majesty of Ava, whatever his virtues, did not set an example of modesty to his subjects, for in his letters to his fellow sovereigns he spoke of himself as "King of Kings, whom all others must obey, as he is the cause of preservation of all animals, the regulator of the season's the absolute master of the ebb and flow of the sea, brother to the sun, and King of the four-and-twenty umbrellas."

One cannot help wondering what use a monarch who had such absolute control over the weather could possibly have even for a single umbrella, to say nothing of his liberal allowance of twenty-four. The royal umbrellas were, however, no doubt ornamented and symbolic of his dignity. The Kandyan monarch equally lacking in humility, described himself as "the protector of religion, whose fame is infinite and of surpassing excellence, exceeding the moon, the unexpanded jessamine buds, and the stars, whose feet are as fragrant to the noses of other kings as flowers to bees, most noble patron and God by custom," etc.

Some of the early Roman Emperors also claimed to be divine; their letters were referred to as "holly," and their subjects addresed them by such titles as "Your Eternity," "Your Perpetuity." An edict of Arcadius and Honorius runs thus: "Let the officers of the palace be warned to abstain from frequenting tumultuous meetings; and those who, instigated by a sacrilegious temerity, dare to oppose the authority of our Divinity shall be deprived of their employments and their estates confiscated."

The Shah of Persia has an amazing array of titles, ranging from Shah-in-Shah, (Kings of Kings) to such poetical attributes as "The Rose of Delight," "The Branch of Honor" and "The Mirror of Virtue;" while His Majesty of Arracan used to be proclaimed as "Emperor of Arracan, Possessor of the White Elephant and the two earrings, and in virtue of this possesion legitimate Heir of Pegu and Brama; Lord of the Twelve Kings who place their heads under his feet."

The King of Achem boasted almost as many high dignities as there are days in the year; among them "Sovereign of the Universe, whose body is luminous as the sun; whom God created to be as accomplished as the moon at her plentitude; whose eye glitters like the Northern star; a King as spiritual as a ball is round, who, when he rises, shades all his people, and from under whose feet a sweet odor is wafted." But perhaps the most remarkable title any monarch was ever proud to own was one borne by the King of Monomotapa, whose praises were sung by his court poets and musicians as "Lord of the Sun and Moon, Great Magician and Great Thief."

"FROM MISSOURI."

At the Lincoln day banquet of Republicans in St. Paul Monday evening a speaker attacked Senator Moses E. Clapp, alleging a lack of backbone in his participation in the fight for railroad rate regulation, and his remarks were cheered to the echo.

In Minneapolis, on the same evening, there was a great gathering of Republicans, and when it was proposed by a Minneapolis state senator that the meeting indorse Senator Knute Nelson there was a chorus of protest, and the motion was beaten two to one.

Now some people might imagine from this that the two United States senators from this state were unpopular with the rank and file of the party, and that conditions looked pretty ominous for both of them. This is not necessarily the case, however. These demonstrations need not be construed as reflections upon the senators.

They mean that this year and henceforth the people of this state are "from Missouri," and "will have to be shown."

They mean that hereafter no man's name can be brought before even a strictly partisan gathering and be assured of a politely unanimous indorsement simply because he is the party's representative.

It means that the peope are looking for deeds, not words; for acts of benefit to the people, not for empty reiterations of party fealty; for men, not for parties; for statesmanship, not for political cunning.

Not long ago these demonstrations would have been regarded by most Republicans as rankest heresy. It would have been enough for a Republican gathering that the name presented was that of a Republican, who had been selected by the party as its representative in the councils of the nation. It would have mattered little whether he had served the people or the corporations; they would have hardly given a thought to the question of whether he had served his state well or indifferently; he was a Republican, stamped with the seal of party approval, and that would have been enough.

Not so today. Not so in Minnesota, even though it was so but a short time ago. Today, even before partisan gatherings, men must have something to commend them to favor besides their party loyalty, or there will be no perfunctory indorsement.

Better still, and thrice more effective, it is no longer heresy, punishable by ostracism, for a Republican to criticize publicly a Republican officeholder, if there seems to be reasonable ground for the criticism. Partisanship will no longer cover a multitude of sins. A weak, ineffective public servant is that and nothing more; his Republicanism or his Democracy will no longer serve to shield him from reproach and censure. The time has come for "speaking right out in meeting," and that's what people are doing if they feel like it.

The people are from Missouri this year and henceforth, and will have to be shown.

THIS SEEMS FAIR.

No reasonable complaint of unfairness could be made of the joint statehood bill if the amendment proposed in the senate by Senator Foraker is adopted, since it leaves the issue wholly with the people of the two territories affected.

The Foraker amendment provides that on the twelfth Tuesday after the approval of the act the governors of the two territories shall call a special election, at which the sole question propounded shall be: "Shall Arizona and New Mexico be united to form one state?"

It would require the approval of a majority of the voters in each territory to make the law effective, and nothing more could be asked than this. To require the voters of one territory to submit to statehood because there were favorable votes enough in the other to carry the proposition in the two territories, would be clearly unjust and un-American.

It is the will of the people of Arizona and New Mexico that should govern, not the will of the people of Minnesota or Utah or Massachusetts, nor the will of the Republican party or the Democratic party. Each territory must agree to joint statehood, if there is to be joint statehood.

Since the Foraker amendments makes this point right, there could be no very reasonable objection to the measure. If it is passed as amended, the will of the people of the two territories will still govern. This is all that could be desired.

PERSONAL PROPERTY TAXES.

The efforts now being made in the New York legislature to pull the personal property tax system into some kind of effective shape are valuable simply because they tend to prove once more what a foolishly inadequate, unjust, and useless system it is.

In New York personal property has been assessed at the residence of the owner, and many have sworn off their taxes by proving that they lived in other states, though their property was in New York. The New York senate, therefore, passed a bill reversing this rule, and assessing the property wherever found. They may think, down in Albany, that they have accomplished something in passing this bill, but they have not. They have simply put another patch on a worn-out, useless garment, and perhaps opened the way to more and greater injustices.

The trouble with the whole personal property tax system is that it hits hardest those who can least afford it. The visible personal property is but a small percentage of the total, yet it is practically all that is assessed. The proposed change in New York will not result in reaching any more intangible property, but will make more certain the assessment of visible property.

Tangible property is generally composed of such things as household furniture, working tools, stocks of merchandise, etc., essentials to life and industry. Intangible property is usually stocks and bonds and such fruits of the industry of others, which can be soaked away in strong boxes far from the view of the assessor. If the assessor ever does get track of anything of this sort it is usually through rumor, and when the owner denies that he has any such property there is no search warrant that will permit the assistant officer to rifle his strong box.

Minnesota is bound at present to this superannuated and ridiculous system of taxation, but at the election this fall the voters will pass upon an amendment to the constitution broadening the powers of the legislature in the creation of tax legislation. If this amendment is adopted, the way will be open for better things, if the people elect a legislature that will take it. If they elect the old kind of a legislature, in the same old careless manner, the chances are that the open door will be unused, and that the same old unjust conditions will prevail.

The proper kind of legislature, one representing the people and composed in part at least of the "strong men" The Herald has been asking the people to select, would be in a position to clear away from the statute books the foolish collection of injustice and inconsistency known as the personal property tax system, and replace it with something that will spread the burden of taxation more equally among the people, relieving the poor of the unjust share they now bear, and imposing some of it on the richer holders of intangible property who do not begin to pay their share now.

LET THE PEOPLE RULE.

The Faribault Journal makes a timely appeal to the voters for the extension of the primary election system to state officers, and it is an appeal that should be taken up by every newspaper in the state, and made so clear and urgent that every candidate for the legislature will be compelled to pledge himself to vote and work for the passage of a measure to this end.

It is hardly necessary to call attention to the evils of the convention system, since they speak for themselves so loudly as to drown out comment upon them. A convention is subject to control, influence and dictation, while the people, who vote at the primaries, are not. This is reason enough, without going further into details, why the change should be made at the next session of the legislature.

Says the Journal, in effect: Besides the danger of control of conventions by the trusts and the railroads, there is another reason in the practice that has grown up of distributing officers along geographical and nationality lines, whereby these details are often given much greater weight than the qualifications of the candidates, and men are nominated who could never be successful in a campaign before the people based on qualification, the only thing the people are interested in.

This is all absolutely true. It is a part of the huge system that partisanship has built up to obscure the real issues and purposes of popular government. There is but one real issue on all elections: To select the best men possible for the places to be filled and to adopt the issues best adapted to the comfort and prosperity of the people. This one issue has been complicated and obscured in a thousand ways by the distortion of partisanship, and step by step the real power has been taken away from the people and given into the hands of the bosses. The only way to restore matters to a normal basis is to return the control of public affairs to the people, and this the primary election system of nomination will accomplish.

Under the present system there is an opportunity, through the vicious system of "trading," to nominate to important offices men whom the people, voting directly, would never select in a thousand years, because they represent interests hostile to them. In a campaign for nomination before the people, such candidates would never have the courage to present themselves. Their only hope lies in the intricacies of a convention fight, where most of the work is done underground, without the knowledge of the vast majority of the delegates, who are manipulated by the bosses whether they know it or not.

In every legislative district of Minnesota the voters should see that no candidate is nominated who will not pledge himself to the extension of the primary election system to state offices.

THE FIELD SURVEY

Some people in Minnesota are bound to have harmony this year, if they have to break somebody's back to get it.

"Fargo is afraid of Red River water," says a dispatch. One would think that the people of a prohibition state like North Dakota would be used to water by this time.

Lincoln Steffens says the senate is a deliberative body. Webster says "deliberate" means "not hasty or sudden; slow." Steffens appears to have guessed right.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"One of the most amusing incidents that ever happened in connection with my experience as a traveling man occurred in the state of Washington, when I first began making that territory," said L. J. Clarke of Minneapolis, at the Lenox. "While going by train from Aberdeen to Westport one day I became engaged in conversation with a business man of Ocosto, Wash.

"After talking with him for some little time, the conversation was turned into business channels, with the result that I succeeded in securing his order for ten cases of goods. I thought this was pretty good luck, and felt elated over it. I wasn't at all acquainted with the country at the time, and asked him whether the railroad ran to the town or not, and he said that it didn't; that it approached no nearer than two miles of the place.

"I promptly marked down $5 for livery hire in my expense account, which would make it appear that I had visited the place to land the order. This proceeding was perfectly legitimate, and would be so regarded by any traveling man.

"I thought no more of the matter until I received from the firm a letter which mentioned the order. The manager said that he did not in the least mind my charging the company for livery hire, but wrote that he was curious to know just how I went about it to get to Ocosto with a team, asking whether I engaged the services of a steam yacht or a United States cruiser.

"After reading this communication I began to wonder what was up, and looked up the location of Ocosto on the map. Imagine my feelings when I discovered that the place was a fishing village, located on an island which was two miles from the mainland. I wrote back that I didn't want headquarters to think I had started on a cruising or yachting expedition, so credited the expense to livery hire, but that thereafter, when I found occasion to use a sailboat I would let it be known definitely in my expense account. It was a long time before I heard the last of the incident."

"The men who are at the head of the purchasing departments under the contractors who handle big railroad jobs have quite a task on their hands," said O. S. Pierce of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "Their position is as important as that of the man who buys supplies for the army, and even more so, because if the provisions he procures are not of the right sort it may mean serious delays and even losses to the contractors. When times are good the railroad laborer will not work well or work at all in many cases unless he is fed well. It is different with a soldier, for he cannot quit his job if he wants to, no matter how badly he is fed.

"McIntosh Bros., who have the contract for building 800 miles of the Milwaukee road coast extension, recently placed an order for 400,000 bushels of oats. When one comes to think of it, 400,000 bushels is a pretty large amount. If that much must be ordered for the horses, not to speak of the hay, how much must be gotten for the thousands of men who will work on the job? It is a simple matter to feed the horses, for hay and oats are all they require, but the men have to have a certain variety of eatables, of the best quality and well prepared, before they will consent to remain in the employ of the railroad contractor.

"This will be true the coming summer, at least, for there are going to be a good many more jobs than men, or I am no judge, on account of the vast amount of railroad work that is to be done. If one contractor feeds his men poorly, or doesn't offer them enough variety, his best men will leave him, and the reputation of this particular outfit will pread all over the Northwest, keeping other men away from it where they can possibly secure employment elsewhere. This year the food placed before the workmen will count more in the profits or losses of the season than would ordinarily be the case, on account of the abundance of work. The loggers long ago learned the importance of feeding their men with the best, and all railroad contractors will be educated up to it this season, if they are not already graduates from the school of experience."

"If you will agree to keep my name out of the paper, together with that of the man most vitally interested, I will tell you a pretty good dog story," said a traveling man at the St. Louis. "The hero of my tale is a good fellow and I don't want to be the cause of putting him in a position where he will be likely to be made uncomfortable by the gibes of his acquaintances. He is pretty well known in Duluth, and likes dogs. That narrows the case down far enough.

"A valuable dog was picked up out in the East end one day. The animal was evidently lost. The man who found him didn't know just what to do with the prize, and might have let it go again, or watched the papers for advertisements, if another fellow hadn't advised him to take the dog down town to this dog fancier. The adviser explained how the fancier was always on the lookout for a good dog, and said the man should be able to get a fairly good prize, say $20 for the animal. He also gave valuable information as to how the buyer was to be approached, and, loaded to the brim with instructions, the finder of the dog started down town with the animal in tow.

"The fancier was easy meat. The visitor told how he had just arrived from Port Arthur with the dog, and said he was going to leave the city, and as he had no place to keep the dog at the other end of the journey, and did not care to be bothered with him, he wanted to dispose of it. He also explained how he wanted the canine to be in friendly hands, and how he had heard that the fancier knew how to appreciate a good dog.

"The victim gasped when he was offered the dog for $20, for the animal was easily worth $100. He made the purchase on the spot, and placed the new purchase with the several other dogs he owned, and which were being taken care of by a young fellow who made it part of his duties to look after them. He hadn't been in the place very long, and as there were several dogs he wasn't very well acquainted with them.

"On this trip to the kennels the owner asked to see one of his favorites, only to learn that it had disappeared two days before, and that the youth didn't know where it was. The boy knew the value of the canine, and had been afraid to tell his employer of the loss. The latter began immediately to search for the lost one, and advertised in all the local papers, besides making diligent inquiry around town. About three days afterwards he learning that the dog he had bought for $20 was the one he had lost, and that before he paid for it a second time he already owned it. He had noticed points of similarity from the first, but didn't suspect at first the trick that had been played on him. The East end friend knew who the real owner of the animal was all along."

THE WEATHER

The cold wave came last evening, promptly on schedule time, and it amply fulfilled the promises of the advance notices sent out by Press Agent Richardson. The brisk northwest wind began to get busy early yesterday evening, and the thermometer dropped until it reached 19 degrees below zero, the coldest last night, from 11 above yesterday. This morning the wind died down and became variable, so it began to moderate slightly, and the weather man expects it to keep on moderating a little at a time, getting up to slightly below zero tonight, and going above the zero mark tomorrow. It will be fair tonight and increasingly cloudy tomorrow. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"A severe cold wave and high presurse area covers the Northwest, Missouri and Mississippi valleys this morning, with zero weather extending southward to Iowa, westward to Montana and eastward to Northern Michigan. The lowest temperature at Duluth was 19 degs. below zero early this morning. Quite a disturbance is developing off the Oregon coast, causing rains in Pacific states and moderating temperatures throughout Western Canada. The easterly movement of the Dakota high and Oregon low pressure areas will be attended in this locality tonight and Thursday by rising temperature and generally fair weather. The Oklahoma storm has advanced to Lake Erie and has caused rain or snow from the Missouri and Mississippi Valleys eastward to the Atlantic coast."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, Feb. 14.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Thursday. Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Fair tonight. Thursday increasing cloudiness. Temperature tonight will rise to slightly below zero and to somewhat above zero during Thursday. Variable winds, becoming easterly.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Thursday: Wisconsin—Fair tonight and Thursday. Colder tonight. Rising temperature Thursday.

Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota—Fair tonight and Thursday. Rising temperature.

SUNNY GEMS.

New York Sun: Weary Willie—Can yer stope a ride under an auto?

Dusty Rhodes—Naw, that's where the owner stays.

New York World: Robinson Crusoe was talking to the parrot.

"Polly want a cracker?" he asked.

"I refuse to answer," replied the bird, "on advice of counsel."

Thus we see that the parrot was not as green as he looked.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "I see they are talking about importing Spaniards to dig the Panama canal."

"What's th' use o' goin' so far from home? Why don't they hire a tribe o' Digger Indians?"

Brooklyn Eagle: Sharpe—Your boy has a fine head.

Wise—It's too large.

Sharpe—Too large?

Wise—Yes; he can't wear my hats.

Philadelphia Ledger: The congressional insurgents were about to insurge.

"Merely an old-fashioned smooth-bore," they assured each other, and declined to be affrighted.

Cleveland Leader: "You ought not to work such long hours. Surely your boss can get along without you part of the time."

"Sure he can. But I don't want him to find it out."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Gosh!" exclaimed Farmer Korntop, after listening to the story, "he must be a regular dead beat."

"Hugh!" snorted the victim, "he's a plumb sight worse'n that. He's a live one."

Washington Star: "So you do not care to be an orator?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum. "The man who talks attracts attention, but it is the man he is talking about who stands a chance of getting the office."

Judge: "The main trouble with pedestrianism as an exercise," said the man with mental strabismus, "is that when a fellow first begins it his friends declare he is crazy, and that when he has been at it two or three days, he begins to share their opinion."

"I know the prices seem high," said the dealer, "but we can't regulate them. We've got to sell at these figures or go out of business."

"I'd rather be held up in the ordinary way," snarled Old Hunks. "The holdup man merely takes my stuff. He doesn't insult me by offering any apology."

The Gamin's Fling.

"You are all witty," he said. "From your millionaires down to your gamin you are quick, nimble and sparkling in retort.

"Your gamins' wit is sometimes cruel. It caused a friend of mine to flush and mutter an evil oath one day last week in New York.

"My friend, in a hurry to catch a train, ran out of his hotel toward a cab, and a ragged little boy opened the cab door for him and handed in his valise.

"He gave the boy nothing. In his hurry, you see, he forgot.

"The disappointed urchin smiled sourly, and called this order to the driver:

"'Nearest poorhouse, cabby.'"

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

The search for Peter H. Smith, the Tower butcher, who disappeared between two days with several thousand dollars of other people's money, continues and it is believed a clue has finally been found. Among Smith's effects left at Tower there were discovered yesterday letters from a Cincinnati girl whom it appears was enamored of Smith, which would indicate that he intended paying her a visit. Her photograph and address were also found and the Cincinnati officers have been telegraphed to be on the lookout for him.

Capt. Lloyd says he will put on an additional boat in the Hattie Lloyd for the Superior run this spring. He will also have the Queen of the Lake to attend to excursion parties.

The Duluth Lumber company has contracted to ship 30,000,000 feet of lumber to Chicago by lake, most of which is to find a Western and Southwestern market. The lake freight from Duluth to Chicago will be about $1.75 per 1,000 feet.

Mrs. Kate Rigby, Miss Swanstrom and David Swanstrom of Rice's Point visited Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Moses of Minneapolis last week, arriving home Saturday.

It is stated today that the projectors of the Duluth, Watertown & Denver railroad, who went East a short time ago to raise money for the building of the road, have been successful in so far as to be able to construct and maintain a line from Duluth to Watertown.

Rev. G. D. Pennepacker, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, has resigned on account of ill health and will return to his old home in Pennsylvania about the first of March.

W. S. Traphagen, brother of O. G. Traphagen, the wellknown architect, has taken a position with Iver Wisted, the contractor and builder, and will hereafter act in the capacity of bookkeeper, etc., for Mr. Wisted.

W. H. Lucas leaves this evening for Minneapolis where he will attend a meeting of representatives from the cities desirous of entering the Northwestern baseball league.

H. W. Pratt, president of the State Agricultural society; C. W. Case, superintendent of the river division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad; Harry A. Pratt, C. H. Morton, and G. W. Porter of the grain firm of Pratt, Morton & Porter, were guests at the Hotel St. Louis yesterday. They came to Duluth for the purpose of seeking investment and were piloted over the city by Thomas Dowse.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Walker Pilot: A dark horse for governor is the prophecy of the wise ones. A real dark one; Cole black, some think, if we read the exchanges aright.

Crookston Times: The dream of state division will never come true, but by virtue of the enterprise of its people, Duluth will always be the capital of Northern Minnesota.

Crookston Times: If Mayor Cullum of Duluth were only a Republican, what a fine gubernatorial mentionee he would make!

Ripple Compass: Congressman Bede is mentioned in Washington, D. C., as the most-likely-to-be-successful candidate for Governor Johnson's place this fall. If this is so, there is no better man for J. Adam's place than William E. Culkin.

Stillwater Gazette: The fellows who labor while they wait for something better, are the boys who will be up at the top of the ladder.

Mankato Free Press: The Minneapolis Journal says there is no row on between Governor Johnson and Frank A. Day. We are glad of that. It would not do for two such good fellows to mixup.

Moorhead Independent: The man who is living on what he expects to get, sometimes accumulates a vast amount of experience.

Lancaster Herald: The trouble with a good many people is that they will have to forget so much before they know anything.

Moorhead Citizen: Those Republican "insurgents" in the lower house of congress act very much like a lot of South American republic revolutionists—all noise and nothing else doing.

Hawley Herald: The village or city that does not own its public utilities is merely helping the grafters that much.

Hutchinson Leader: J. Adam Bede's shot at the New York senators seems to have reverberated to the four corners of the nation. He might easily be charged with invidious distinction, however, as there are several more of the senators we would like to forget.

Fergus Falls Wheelock's Weekly: This office acknowledges several packets of garden seeds franked from Washington by Senator M. E. Clapp. The seeds were fine, our canary says. Come again, Mose. Our latchstring is always out.

Warroad Plaindealer: The candidacy of Julius Schmahl for secretary of state seems to meet with general approval from the state press.

Warroad Plaindealer: We cannot but observe that the office of lieutenant governor is developing a most unusual amount of importance in the minds of some politicians.

Halstad Reporter: The present congress is acting like the farmer who tills the same soil for seven years without changing the grains.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: As yet the country exchanges have been unable to agree on a man to lead the Republican party out of the wilderness next fall. It is more than likely that they will settle the matter at their annual meeting at Minneapolis next week. We may expect some definite light on the subject when the boys get back to their chairs.

Killed With Kindness.

Detroit Journal: They were discussing the horrors that attended the hanging of Mary Rogers.

"But she suffered little," said a New York physician. "Every murderer who goes to the gallows or the electric chair is drugged to the point almost of unconsciousness. Otherwise the death sentence, unendurably hideous, would be abolished."

He frowned and continued:

"No man, alone in a cell with the knowledge that on a certain day, at a certain hour, he is to be killed, can keep his nerve.

"He stops eating, he stops sleeping, in a little while he begins to shriek.

"Then the drugging begins. With opium or with alcohol he is lulled into a torpor. On the day of his death he is so heavily dosed as to be, to all practical intents and purposes, unconscious.

"Condemned murderers, as the last day approaches, are so wild with terror that it takes an incredible lot of dosing to compose them. I have seen men untouched by three grains of morphia, and a pint of whisky would have no more effect on them than a shell of beer.

"Thank goodness, I say, that man is at least humane enough, before he slays his brother, to drug the poor fellow into a stupor. Thank goodness that, when we kill legally, we kill with kindness."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The simple life is the kind nobody wants to lead because it has such a good reputation.

When you see a girl out walking without a hat on, it is a sign she thinks it will make it curly.

When a woman suspects some one she knows of leading a double life, she has more fun than if she was sure of it.

It takes three days of experimenting in cold weather to get the furnace to burn like blazes when the warm wave strikes us.

A man would have to work overtime all day to do all the things he tries to make his friends believe he does before breakfast.

Constitutional Limitations.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: There can be a constitutional amendment for the regulation of divorce, but no constitutional amendment can prevent foolish marriages.

An Old Gem.

He who bends to himself a joy
Does the winged life destroy;
But he who kisses the joy as it flies
Lives in eternity's sunrise.

RAILROADS

MAY BUILD TO BORDER

Extension of Great Northern From Cass Lake is Reported.

Road Will Also Lengthen Sidetracks on the Fosston Branch.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The letting of a contract by the new Rainy Lake railroad for the building of a line from Duluth to Beaudette, in Beltrami county, has brought out the announcement from an apparently reliable source that the Great Northern railway will, in the spring build a line from Cass Lake north through the identical country which the Rainy Lake road proposes to tap. The authority for this rumor is an employe of the Great Northern system who is close to the officials of the general offices in St. Paul. He states that the surveyors, some three years ago, located a feasible route around the east shore of Cass Lake, which left the main line four miles east of this place and crossed the Cass river (Mississippi) at a point about two miles east of the outlet of Cass Lake, extending thence north in an almost direct line. This line would be practically a continuance of the Sauk Center-Cass Lake line, which connects at Sauk Center with the main line of the Great Northern to St. Paul, and in addition also crosses the Eastern Minnesota branch, traversing from Grand Forks to Duluth.

TO LENGTHEN SIDETRACKS.

Improvement is Projected on the Duluth-Grand Forks Line.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Great Northern has decided to lengthen all of the sidetracks on the Grand Forks-Duluth system, from Cass Lake to Brookston. During the past year, the company has run a large number of very lengthy trains on this branch—in fact, there being so many cars in the trains that it was almost impossible for two trains of freight cars to pass, as the switches are not of sufficient length to hold the cars of a single train as used in the fall to haul the grain to Duluth from the fields of Dakota. A construction train will this week begin the work of extending all of the switches.

SPECIAL SEED TRAIN.

Northern Pacific Will Educate Farmers in Growing of Grains.

"Arrangements have been completed by traffic officers of the Northern Pacific railway under which a 'seed grain special' train will make a trip over Northern Pacific lines in Western Minnesota and North Dakota early in March, carrying grain experts and a corps of men thoroughly grounded in knowledge of plant diseases and methods for the improvement of grain yields, who will lecture at local points along the railway to farmers and everyone interested in the production of better grain and an increase in profits from grain raising.

The trip of the seed special has been planned under the active supervision of Superintendent E. E. Kaufman of the North Dakota Farmers' Institute and Superintendent O. C. Gregg of the Minnesota Farmers' Institute. The lectures which will be given en route will be delivered by those authorities on grain raising and experts whom they have selected to make the trip with them. The lectures will be devoted principally to the important questions of the selection of grain seed, tests of seed grain, plant diseases and methods of selecting pure seed and arresting the development of smut and other dangers to the growing grain. The purpose of the trip of the special train is to broaden the knowledge of the farmers on matters of the handling of seed grain and to disseminate the latest and best scientific information of methods of increasing the grain yield and guarding crops from diseases and parasitic growths which cut down the returns from the farmers' labors.

On the trip over the Northern Pacific lines in North Dakota the special train will be in charge of Superintendent Kaufman and representatives of the railway. The other members of the corps of lecturers and assistants are being selected and the party will be confined to the representatives of the Farmers' Institutes lecturers and railway representatives handling the movement of the train. The special will consist of a sleeping car and coach, and the latter will be used for the lectures when halls and larger meeting places are not available. The lecture corps will give practical demonstrations of tests of seed grain and will be prepared to give those who attend the lectures complete instruction in simple methods which may be applied on the farm, for bettering the quality of the seed and improving the character and yield of the crop. Suitable apparatus and exhibits will be supplied by the Farmers' Institute of North Dakota and Minnesota and the lecturers will be provided with samples of good and bad seed grain for use in illustrating their talks to the farmers.

Superintendent Kaufman will co-operate with Superintendent Gregg during the trip of the special train over Northern Pacific lines in Minnesota. Representatives of the two states will jointly handle the lectures given on this portion of the seed special's journey.

NO SUBMARINE BOATS USED

In the Battle of Sea of Japan, Says Admiral Rojestvensky.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 14.—"Perhaps I am guilty to some extent for our defeat, and perhaps my subordinates did not do all they might have done, but at all events we who fought the battle were not thieves," said Admiral Rojestvensky, who addressed the Imperial Technical society yesterday evening on the causes of the defeat of the Russians, at the battle of the Sea of Japan. The admiral made no specifications regarding rascality in the construction or equipment of the ships, but he commented at length on the destructive effect of the heavy Japanese shells, which when they only exploded in the water near the Russian vessels cracked their plates and opened great leaks, while those which hit the Russian ships were as destructive as mines.

A young lieutenant during the discussion attempted to lay the blame on submarine boats, but the admiral denied that submarine boats or mines were used during the engagement.

FOUGHT FRANK JONES' BEAR.

Saloon Man Had to Rescue the Cowboy From Bruin.

Bliss, O. T., Feb. 14.—The appointment of John Abernathy as United States marshal, and the recitals of his deeds of valor in the chase, has called forth numerous stories of reckless feats in the capture of wild animals from the cowpunchers on the big ranches in the Ponca and Otoe reservations, which are about the only places where the oldtime cowboy is still to be found in Oklahoma. According to these stories, Abernathy's feat of catching a "lobo" wolf with his bare hands was excelled by Sylvester Flitch, who was in 1880 ranch foreman on the Salt fork for George W. Miller, founder of the "101" ranch, and father of the Miller boys, who now own and manage it, and Lee Coughenour of Texas, who were then partners in the cattle business.

Flitch was probably the most expert of the cowboys in Miller's employ, both in horsemanship and in the use of the "rope." His celebrated "stunt" was done during a round-up in the spring of 1880, during which several head of cattle had escaped into the Glass mountains, on the upper Cimarron river. Flitch, although foreman, volunteered to round up the missing animals, and set out with two companions, being gone for several days. While in the mountains he ran across two bears, and succeeded in lassoing them both, so that he was able to capture them alive and take them back to camp with him.

One of the animals was killed by the cowboys and a feast held to celebrate the finish of the roundup. The other was presented by Flitch to Frank Jones, now of Kansas City, who was then running a saloon at Caldwell, Kan. Jones kept the bear for several months, and the cowboys who had heard of Flitch's feat in lassoing the animal came for many miles to see it. During the animal's captivity "Young" Short, an Oklahoma cowboy, who was one of the visitors attracted by it, laid a wager that he could whip the animal with his bare fists. He found plenty of takers and the fight came off back of the main hotel in Caldwell. The bulky brute proved too much for the cowboy, however, and after a few rounds it became necessary for Jones and the cowboys who were witnesses of the contest to rescue Short from the bear's clutches.

COMIC VALENTINES BARRED.

Postmaster Says Those on Cards Can't Go Through Mails.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 14.—The postoffice authorities in this city have refused to carry some of Dan Cupid's mail matter on the ground that it is "scurrilous" and "reflects injuriously upon the character or conduct" of the one to whom it is addressed.

The censored valentines are really the old style comic valentines in a souvenir postal card guise. They bear pictures which are not in the least attractive and beneath is a rhyme which is more or less personal. One to which the postmaster took especial objections has an illustration representing a woman of mature years and angular features in the midst of a strenuous barrangue. The verse beneath, which bears the title, "the club woman," is:

'Mid a clatter of teacups and spoons
And an atmosphere suited for swoons
The president hen
Rails at the men
And talks of prisms and prunes.

"The saleslady" is another to which there is objection. It shows a young woman with a tremendous frizzled pompadour, yelling "cash," while she holds out a bundle. The lines beneath are:

With her hair tousled up like a mop
And her clatter that never will stop
With a glance for a "mash"
And a shrill cry of "cash"
She thinks she's the belle of the shop.

To upset the feelings of the college girl there is an illustration of a college girl's room, and the maiden herself, with her hair and gown stuck full of college flags, reading an invitation to a concert. The rhyme is:

To see her you never would judge
That her mother at home has to drudge
And scrimp so's to pay
Through college the way
Of the daughter who flirts and makes fudge.

The "conduct and character" of "the manicurist" might be injuriously reflected upon by a postalcard bearing that name which has as an illustration a billowy-haired damsel, wearing a low-necked, short-sleeved bodice and an exceedingly tight-fitting skirt, who is daintily cutting some enormously long nails on a masculine. The rhyme runs:

She is "a clip," and 'tis her plan
To flatter every silly man
Her manner's bland
She holds his hand
And "trim him" every time she can!

There are comic valentine souvenir postals to rap the dentist, the schoolma'am, the elocutionist, the singer, the fat man and the athletic lass.

The Springfield postmaster does not regard these cards as hilarious jokes, but as derogatory to character, and they will be promptly destroyed if they go into the Springfield postoffice.

TO APPOINT DUVAL.

Washington, Feb. 14.—It is understood that the president has decided to appoint Maj. Wm. P. Duval of the artillery corps and an assistant to the chief of artillery, to be a brigadier general, to fill the vacancy in that grade.

GOLD FOR ARGENTINA.

New York, Feb. 14.—Muller, Schall & Co. will ship $500,000 gold to Argentina by tomorrow's steamer. This brings the total engagements of gold for shipment to Argentina this week to $1,750,000.

THE MAYOR EXPLAINS

Disclaims Desire to Take Investigation From Fire Board.

Says There Are Charges Against Several Departments of City.

Any intention or desire to take the investigation of the charges against the fire department out of the hands of the board of fire commissioners was disclaimed by Mayor Cullum this morning. The following statement was made by the mayor in regard to the communication sent by him to the council last evening:

"The papers seem to have gotten this matter a trifle mixed. The purpose of my communication to the council was simply this: That there have been indefinite and definite charges made in regard to several of the departments—the greatest number perhaps against the fire department. I declined to take the matter up immediately before election, fearing that my motive might be misinterpreted, but told all parties that I would give them a chance to be heard under oath, by requesting the council to appoint a committee before whom they could prefer charges.

"The boards and myself have been accused of favoritism, and complaints have stated that they feared that they would not get an impartial hearing. Hence, without prejudice, I have taken this course, so that there could be no possible complaint of unfairness or star chamber sessions, and that all these accumulating charges might be heard and acted upon, so that we might start in with the coming administration with a clean slate. This seemed to me the only way in which this thing could be done, and be satisfactory and absolutely just to all parties concerned. This need not interfere with any special investigation by any of the boards."

The council also apparently viewed the matter in the same light as the newspapers, and understood that while the mayor meant that the council committee he asked for should investigate all charges, it was aimed directly at the fire department, and meant principally for the charges against Chief Black.

"While it does not state any special department in the communication," said Alderman McEwen, when the matter came up last evening, "everybody knows it is the fire department." The council postponed action on the mayor's communication until after the report of the board on the investigation of the Black charges.

At noon today it was not known whether the hearing before the board would be held this evening or not. The board is prepared to meet tonight, and Chief Black is ready to face his accusers, but Porter J. Neff, the attorney for Cameron, has but recently returned from a trip to Denver, and is not prepared to state his case as yet.

N. P. ENGINE IS WRECKED

Boiler Explodes While Hauling Freight Train Near Frazee, Minn.

Frazee, Minn., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—All traffic is blocked on the Northern Pacific railway, near Frazee, by the wreck of a through freight engine, which exploded. Fireman Thomson's leg was broken, and he was badly scalded. Engineer Green was internally hurt. They were taken to the Brainerd hospital. Seven cars were smashed, and the roadbed was torn up. The engineer's cab and the engine were terribly smashed.

WEATHER TO GET WARM.

Mr. Richardson Says Mercury Will Rise for the Present.

Weather Forecaster Richardson has decided to have a little mercy on Duluthians and will make the cold snap let up today and tomorrow. This morning the thermometer at the government station registered 19 deg. below zero, but all morning it has been letting up, and Mr. Richardson promises that it will not be so cold tonight as it was last.

The thermometer will rise gradually all today and tomorrow, until a fairly respectable temperature will have been reached.

NOT GUILTY, SAYS LINN.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—John A. Linn, clerk of the circuit court and ex-clerk of the superior court, who has been indicted on twenty-five counts, alleging embezzlement, forgery and larceny, appeared before Judge Dupuy today and entered pleas of not gullty to all the charges made against him. It is probable that his case will come up for trial within a short time.

Fashion's Fancies for February

February introduces novelties that are forerunners of spring fashions.

First and foremost are new hats.

Second and stout but stylish are the new shoes.

Waistcoats are now being worn on all occasions—light and dark effects.

Black and white ties to wear with Tuxedos.

Fawn castor gloves are another February novelty.

Another—tan shirt and blue cravats.

The new Columbia $1 shirts are beauties—you can see them in the window.

New scarf pins—those large four-in-hands require one.

CHANCE FOR CITY JOBS

Civil Service Board Will Hold Another Examination in March.

Will Establish Eligible Lists for Library and Fire Department.

Candidates for civil service positions in the city's employ will have an opportunity to show their fitness at an examination to be held on March 6.

At a meeting of the civil service board, held last evening in the city hall, it was decided to hold another examination on that date, to establish eligible lists for vacancies in the different departments of the city service.

An examination for the position of assistant librarian will be held at that time. There is at present no vacancy on the shelf, but one is expected, and there are two names on the eligible list. One of these persons is away studying at a library school at the present time, and the other is said to be no longer desirous of an appointment.

Should the vacancy occur, therefore, the board will have no person eligible for the appointment.

Examinations for positions in the fire department will also be held at that time. Vacancies are constantly occurring in the department, and the eligible list is exhausted. Any candidates who are successful at the examination are practically assured of positions within a short time, especially as a number of resignations are received every spring.

Candidates for promotions to stokers, drivers and lieutenants will also be examined at that time, and an eligible list established from which appointments to the higher positions may be made whenever vacancies occur.

No examination for the police department will be held at this time, as the roster of the force is now complete and there are several names on the eligible list.

The board will hold another meeting on Feb. 27 and pass upon the questions which will be prepared by the secretary, Reuben Johnson, in the city hall.

LOAN BROKER ON TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—W. L. Carter, the Des Moines loan broker, accused of murdering E. J. Gresser, a farmer, residing near Avonia, was placed on trial today. The murder occurred last October. Gresser was shot while at supper, his assassin secreting himself in the shrubbery just outside. Carter held a mortgage on the murdered man's farm, and is alleged to have put him to death in order to secure the property. The defense will endeavor to prove an alibi.

GROWTH OF ESPERANTO.

Universal Language is Making Rapid Progress in England.

London, Feb. 14.—Esperanto continues to make rapid progress in England, and in fact throughout the continent.

The new language is supposed to be used by two classes, the educated and the uneducated. It is difficult to persuade any ignorant person that he ought to communicate with anyone outside his own country, unless he is in a "state of war," when his words will usually be deeds. The uneducated person naturally cares no more about Esperanto than for any other language. The educated person naturally falls back upon his Latin or the French of his youth in case of an emergency. It is to the business world, the age of wireless telegraphs, of universal telephones that the ardent Esperantists are turning. They do not quite approve of the lecture in which Mr. W. T. Steed regaled his hearers with a description in Esperanto of his accurate prophecies about the downfall of Unionists members at the polls. Practical Esperantists frown down upon this sort of a thing just as they frown down upon the translation of a poem by Heine. They say that the language will come on a "survival of the fittest basis," just as the Socialists predict the triumph of their economic theories because the world is alleged to be moving in that direction, but that the attempt to translate Shakespeare or Dickens or Longfellow into Esperanto would only result in the production of a concatenation of harsh dissonances, and that the progress of the new language would be retarded instead of advanced by an attempt to adapt it for literary purposes in a manner in which it would not be suited.

CONSUMPTIVES ARE BARRED.

New Zealand is Determined to Stamp Out Tuberculosis.

London, Feb. 14.—The authorities of New Zealand are determined to stamp out consumption in that colony. Many intending settlers who sailed for that section recently have been returned to England on the ground that they are suffering from tuberculosis. One of these intending settlers had sold his business in Bradford and had emigrated to New Zealand in the hope that the climate would cure him. It is claimed that the medical authorities only subject emigrants to a superficial examination before leaving, while the authorities of New Zealand insist upon a thorough test. In the desire to keep its people immune from disease, the New Zealand government excludes emigrants of any nationality suffering from mental afflictions, or contagious diseases of a dangerous nature, and the authorities are especially severe in the matter of diseases of the lungs. So far has public sentiment carried the government in matters of this sort that laws will be passed prohibiting the marriage of consumptives under severe penalties. It is said to be the desire of the New Zealand government to have that colony known as the land without consumption.

HEIR TO HERMIT SOLDIER'S PROPERTY IS DISCOVERED.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 14—Adjutant Gen. Hughes is in receipt of a letter from Fred Reigger of Newark, Ohio, stating that his mother, Anna Reigger, is the only living sister of Michael Carlos, the rich hermit soldier, who recently died at Des Moines, Iowa. He writes that the only other heirs are the children of William Carlos, a brother who, when last heard from, lived near Omaha, Neb.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—Michael Carlos who died a month ago in this city left an estate of about $15,000. Carlos lived as a hermit after his sweetheart, to whom he was to have been married, in Ohio at the close of the civil war, jilted him because his face was disfigured by a bullet.

URIC ACID GRAVEL

IS CAUSED BY THE KIDNEYS BEING UNABLE TO CARRY THE POISONOUS WASTE MATTERS OUT OF THE BLOOD.

The urine of persons suffering from uric acid or gravel is generally scanty, and after it has stood a while, a reddish sediment like brick dust forms in it. In advanced stages the uric acid sometimes appears as fine sand, or large crystals.

Those who pass gravel in any considerable quantity are usually troubled with inflammation of the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs, sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, gout and rheumatism.

CURED BY WARNER'S SAFE CURE

"I have used Safe Cure for chills caused by uric acid poison in my system and I have been perfectly cured. It has done for me what I have never known any other medicine to do. It cures people in the South who suffer much from malaria, which always affects the kidneys. If all the doctors would prescribe Safe Cure instead of quinine for cases of malaria, there would be less bad after effects, as quinine does not remove the disease germs from the system like Safe Cure. I take 'Safe Pills' when I need a gentle laxative."—Mrs. M. E. DEAN, Treas. Lotus Club, Chattanooga, Tenn.

THIS TEST WILL TELL:

Put some urine in a glass or bottle. After it has stood 24 hours, if it is cloudy, or contains a reddish-brown sediment, or if particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased and unable to do their work, and if not attended to at once, Bright's Disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gout, uric acid, inflammation of the bladder, gallstones or urinary troubles will develop and prove fatal in a short time.

Safe Cure is the only absolutely safe and certain cure for all these forms of kidney, liver and bladder diseases. It is purely vegetable, free from harmful drugs found in many so-called kidney cures, contains no sediment and is pleasant to take.

For sale at all drug stores, or direct, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

ANALYSIS FREE.

If after making this test you have any doubt as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine to the Medical Department, Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and our doctors will analyze it and send you a report, with advice and medical booklet, free.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES AND IMITATIONS.

They are worthless and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it will cure you.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

SWAN MOLANDER A CANDIDATE

For Secretary of State, Reputedly Backed by R. C. Dunn.

St. Paul, Feb. 14.—Robert C. Dunn's presence in St. Paul last week is now explained. That he is going to enter the next convention to battle for recognition is now established by the announcement this evening by Swan Molander that he would be candidate for secretary of state. Dunn and Molander are fast friends, the latter having served under Dunn for several terms while he was state auditor. He was allied with Dunn during the gubernatorial battle and was one of his staunchest henchmen. It is no secret that the Dunn forces are behind Swan Molander and that his candidacy is being urged to offset that of E. A. Nelson of Hallock, who is not at all friendly to Dunn by reason of his allegiance to the Van Sant forces. Now that Molander has shied his caster into the ring a new color is placed on the already highly interesting contest for secretary of state. Molander is a Swede, Nelson is a Swede, J. J. Lomen is a Norwegian, Julius Schmahl is a German, Capt. Osborne is a Swede, which mixes that section of the ticket badly. It is intimated that Iverson will line up for Molander as he is a personal friend. The fight is to be directed against Nelson of Hallock, who will be the objective point of Molander's fight for the office.

Another reason is advanced—another plausible one, too—for Molander's candidacy. There is every evidence that it is a move to sidetrack Jacobson as a gubernatorial possibility. In his announcement, Molander regrets—which is the voice of Dunn—that some good strong and prominent Swedish Republican—P. E. Hanson—did not come out for the nomination for governor. With Molander on the ticket it is thought that Jacobson's forces will have to retire. Mr. Molander's statement is as follows:

"I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for secretary of state. In a humble way I have during the last twenty-five years served on county and congressional campaign committees. Six years ago when a candidate for secretary of state, I received enough encouragement to warrant me in trying again.

"I have deferred this public announcement, partly owing to a recent death in my family, partly in hope that some good, strong and prominent Swedish Republican would come out and make an open and aggressive fight for the nomination for governor. I am satisfied the fault does not lie with the party, as a large number of prominent party workers not only recognize the justness of the claim, but also the policy and political expediency at this particular time.

ONE-THIRD OF CASUALTIES

Occur While People Are Indoors or Around Their Houses.

New York, Feb. 14.—It is dangerous for New Yorkers to stay at home, no matter how happy home may be, according to the experts of the biggest accident insurance company in the country. They have figured out that one-third of all the casualties that happen to people take place when they are indoors or around their houses.

To pedestrians	24.14
At home, indoors	18.80
At home; outdoors	15.98
Horses and vehicles	18.16
Recreation	4.17
Railroad and street car travel	7.51
Other causes	11.24
Total	100.00

Next year the experts are going to find out which is most dangerous—automobiling or ballooning.

PITCHFORK WAS USED

To Torture a Child in Indiana, it is Alleged.

Jeffersonville, Ind., Feb. 14.—The board of children's guardians, of which M. E. Clegg, chief of police, is a member, has filed charges against Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kallenbach of Henryville, Ind., charging the brutal treatment of four children. Among the specific charges are that a little daughter was tied to a stake; that she was placed in a chicken coop several times, and, after a cloth had been thrown over it, a pitchfork was repeatedly thrust through the cloth though the claim is not made that the child was injured by the fork. It will be asserted that because the children were borne by Kallenbach's first wife, his present wife is mainly responsible for their treatment.

A NEW SMELTER TO BE BUILT IN CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—The Guggenheims and Rockefellers, through their recently formed American Smelters Securities company, have decided to build a $3,500,000 smelter at a point a mile back from Port Costa, and ground will be broken for the big establishment early next summer. The old Selby smelter on the bay shore, a few miles beyond West Berkeley will be abondoned when the new smelter is completed. Fumes from the Selby plant have been for years poisoning the surrounding vegetation, and farmers have suits for damages pending against that plant on that account. It is said that the new plant will have a location that will not give rise to such damage suits in the future.

It is said by some of the interested people that the building of a big smelter close by the city will undoubtedly be followed by the establishment of copper manufacturing plants in San Francisco and the prediction is made that within a couple of years copper wire and other copper products will be manufactured here.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTION.

METROPOLITAN—The Avenue Girls.

COMING ATTRACTION.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, "Piff, Paff, Pouf."

THE AVENUE GIRLS.

Tomorrow will be ladies' day at the Metropolitan and members of the fair sex will be welcomed both afternoon and evening by the management. Handsome souvenirs will be presented to every woman who attends and no smoking on the part of the male auditors will be permitted. The entertainment which is being provided at the "Met" this week by the Avenue Girls is excellent.

Friday is another day of importance at the Metropolitan. Friday evening, the first of the amateur nights will be inaugurated. Amateur vaudevillians are permitted to do their stunts and gold prizes will be awarded to those who get the most applause. These amateur nights are greatly in vogue in other cities.

"PIFF! PAFF! POUF!"

"Piff! Paff! Pouff!" the bright musical comedy of the season will be seen at the Lyceum, Friday and Saturday. It has made a most pronounced hit everywhere, and local theater-goers who relish tuneful music, unique dances, bright dialogues and entrancing songs may look forward to a very satisfactory entertainment.

The special song features are many, including the following: "I Am the Ghost That Never Walked," "Cordelia Malone," "Dear Old Manhattan Isle," "Shing-a-ling Foo," "Only You," "Love, Love, Love," "Dolly Dimple," "The Melancholy Sunbeam and The Rose," "Under the Goo Goo Tree."

The production is elaborately staged and sumptuously mounted. The scenic, electrical and costuming embellishment is entirely fresh and new.

JAPAN TO PAY OFF WAR DEBT IN 1939.

London, Feb. 14.—The second edition of the London Times today published a dispatch from Tokio, saying that the financial program of the cabinet, which has passed the lower house, will undoubtedly be endorsed by the upper house. According to the program, the war debts, which will aggregate $911,000,000 in 1907, will be completely paid off in 1939, during which interval there will be six operations of conversion. The program shows that the domestic debts, now amounting to $287,500,000, will be entirely discharged in 1942.

SIXTEEN INJURED IN STREET CAR COLLISION.

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 14.—Slippery rails caused a collision on the North Avenue car line yesterday, in which sixteen persons were injured, two of them fatally. One car coming down the hill got beyond the control of the motorman when the conductor got off to throw the signal lights on the switch and rushed down the track. At a turn it struck another car coming up and carried it 200 feet across the Erie tracks, narrowly missing a freight train. Those thought to be fatally injured are: Mrs. Hannah Rees, thrown from the car, cut about the face, head and chest, badly scalded. Mrs. Lavinia Barr, ribs broken and probably internally injured, may die.

SKI RIDERS BACK HOME

Won Four of Nine Prizes at the Stillwater Tournament.

Planning to Attend Itasca Club's Meeting at Bovey, Minn.

Duluth ski jumpers, who returned yesterday from Stillwater, were almost as successful at the Stillwater tournament as they were at the St. Paul meet.

Out of the nine prizes offered by the Stillwater club, the Duluth riders captured four.

Olaf Larson of Duluth won the second prize; Elling Disen won fourth prize; Ole Feiring won the eighth prize, and John Mangseth won the ninth prize.

There were thirty-eight entries in the tournament including the pick of the ski jumpers in St. Paul, Minneapolis, Red Wing, Stillwater, Eau Claire, Ashland, Starbuck and Cameron, and in winning prizes in such a competition the Duluth jumpers proved themselves on an equality with the best in the Northwest.

Ole Mangseth of Red Wing, who won the first prize at the St. Paul tournament, again carried off the first honors at the Stillwater meet. The following is the list of prize winners:

Ole Mangseth of Red Wing, first; Olaf Larson, Duluth, second; Ole Hendrickson, Red Wing, third; Elling Dieson, Duluth, fourth; Knute Helland, Cameron, Wis., fifth; A. Mellgaard, Ashland, sixth; Carl Ek, Red Wing, seventh; O. Feirring, Duluth, eighth; John Manseth, Duluth, ninth.

The Duluth men are planning to attend the tournament of the Itasca Ski club at Bovey on Feb. 18. This will be second only to the national tournament at Ishpeming in the number of the entries and the value of the prizes, and if the Duluth riders can carry off the prizes there, they should be in at the finish in the national meet.

The meeting of the club, which was to have been held last evening, was postponed until Friday evening. The plans for sending a large delegation to the Ishpeming tournament will be taken up at the time.

FAIL TO SECURE REINSTATEMENT

National Baseball Commission is Strict With Contract Jumpers.

New York, Feb. 14.—The National baseball commission was in session in this city yesterday and considered cases of a number of players, most of whom were seeking reinstatement to clubs acting under the national agreement. In nearly every instance adverse decisions were rendered.

The case of Right Fielder James Sebring of the Chicago Nationals, who jumped his contract to assume the management of the Williamsport Club of the Tri-State league, was one of the most important considered. The commission decided to give Sebring twenty days in which to submit a defense of the charge of contract-jumping. The commission was informed that Sebring had been endeavoring to sign, and in some cases had actually signed, players working under the National agreement, to contracts with clubs not under the agreement, and he was given the time noted to present his side of the case. The Chicago club was informed of the action taken.

Pitcher Ritchie of the Holyoke, Mass., club, made a personal application to the commission to have set aside his sale to the Brooklyn Nationals. The application proved to be something of a boomerang, as the commission decided that he was a contract-jumper and was ineligible to play with any club under the National agreement.

Pitcher Riesling, formerly of the Brooklyns, sought to be reinstated, but the commission decided against him. Otto Diomenger, formerly of the Toledo club, also was denied reinstatement. The commission imposed a fine of $25 on the Columbus, Ohio, club for violating the rules in selling Catcher Brown to Boston when he had already been drafted by Cleveland.

The claim of the Memphis club against the New York Nationals for $750, the purchase price of Shortstop Charles Babb, was disallowed. Babb is now manager of the Memphis team.

BOY'S HEAD ONE SOLID SORE

Hair All Came Out and He Suffered Very Much—Under Doctor Three Months and No Better—Permanently Cured at Expense of $2.

CUTICURA REMEDIES WORK WONDERS

Mr. A. C. Barnett, proprietor of a general store in Avard, Oklahoma, tells in the following grateful letter how Cuticura cured him and his son of terrible eczemas:

"My little boy had eczema. His head was one solid sore, all over his scalp; his hair all came out, and he suffered very much. I had a physician treat him, but at the end of three months he was no better. I remembered that the Cuticura Remedies had cured me, and after giving him two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, according to directions, and using Cuticura Soap and Ointment on him daily, his eczema left him, his hair grew again, and neither he nor myself have had any eczema since.

As to his own case, Mr. Barnett says: "I suffered with eczema, a burning, itching, breaking out on my face for more than a year. I took treatment from physicians for several months, which did no good. I was then advised to try Cuticura. I took six bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and used Cuticura Soap and Ointment freely every day. I began to improve soon after starting to use them, and when I had taken the six bottles of the Resolvent my face had become clear, I had good color, and all eruptions had left me.

"We use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment in our family now for general use, and it keeps our skin soft and healthy. I cheerfully recommend the Cuticura Remedies for all cases of eczema. (signed) A. C. Barnett, Avard, Oklahoma, Mar. 30, 1905."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for every Humor, from Pimples to Scrofula, from Infancy to Age, consisting of Cuticura Soap, 25c., Ointment, 50c., Resolvent, 50c. (in form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60), may be had of all druggists. A single set often cures. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Mailed Free, "All about the Skin, Scalp, and Hair."

MILLERS WIN AT BASEBALL

Defeat Their Old Time Rivals, the Big Duluth Team.

The indoor baseball game played last evening at the Lincoln Park roller skating rink, the Universal Millers won from the Big Duluth team by a score of 13 to 12.

The game was ragged during the early stages, but as soon as the players settled down they played fast ball. Each side made five runs in the first inning, but during the last three innings both pitchers were invincible.

The batteries were Simpson and Backman for the Millers, and Williams and Jones for the Big Duluths.

The score by innings was as follows:

Millers	5	1	1	2	3	0	0	0	—13
Big Duluth	1	0	4	0	2	0	0	0	—12

Sporting Notes.

Charles Rankin again defeated Carl Alroth of Superior at the Central ice rink last evening, and is now planning to skate Norval Baptiste, the speedy North Dakota man, at Grand Forks, Friday evening.

March 7 is the date fixed for the trip to the Copper Country by the Duluth city hockey team. Arrangements for the trip have been completed by Martin Adson of the South Shore road, and the team will play at Houghton and Calumet.

BIG MORTGAGE IS FILED HERE

Shenango Furnace Company Secures Bond Issue Recently Authorized.

A $4,000,000 mortgage running from the Shenango Furnace company of Pittsburg to the Union Trust company of the same city was recorded with the county register of deeds yesterday. The mortgage covers the furnace company's iron mine on the range and other extensive properties.

The issue is to be in bonds of $1,000 each, to run fifteen years, at 5 per cent, and was authorized by the stockholders of the company January 24 last. The bonds are subject to redemption at par and the accrued interest on any date after five years.

A trust deed on all the Shenango Furnace company's property secures the loan. The amount of the loan is said to be only $1,000,000 less than the company's capital stock.

In this county the mortgage applies to a mining lease issued May 26, 1900, by Patrick Rahilly to O. D. Kinney and George W. Howe. The lease terminates in thirty-five years from date of its issuance. It conveys mineral rights to the east half of the southeast quarter of section 22, the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 23, the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 27, all in township 58-20.

THE BEMIDJI POLICE

Will Organize Police Benefit Association and Give a Ball.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The police department of Bemidji has decided to organize a police relief benefit association. To further the project, a public dance will be given in the city hall, sometime during the month of March, which will be under the auspices of Mayor Carter and the members of the police force. The proceeds of the dance will be used to fix up police headquarters at the city hall, and also as a nucleus for a fund to start the relief association. This association will be organized under the same rules which govern the Duluth association, which latter, by careful management has accumulated a fund of $10,000, of which amount $7,000 is invested in Duluth city bonds.

W. A. Gould, president of the city council, has had prepared ten typewritten copies of the recently adopted city charter, which will answer all temporary purposes. It was the original intention to have printed and bound a number of copies of the charter, but as it is contemplated to make several changes in the document, it was decided not to incur the expense of printing the charter as it now stands.

Earl Geil, chief of the Bemidji fire department, has been selected as a delegate to represent Bemidji at the meeting of the executive committee of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association, to be held at Grand Rapids, Thursday evening. The Bemidji running team has won the championship banner of the association at three different tournaments. They did not participate in the meet at Eveleth last year, but will be at Cass Lake next June.

Olaf Tuseby, recently from Christiana, Norway, will start a Scandinavian newspaper here, to be known as the Vort Nye Hjem—"Our New Home." This new publication will make five papers in Bemidji.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The Hanover bank at Boston Tuesday was placed in the hands of Charles C. Barton of Boston as receiver by Judge Braley of the state supreme court. The bank, a West Virginia corporation, was closed last week on the ground that it was insolvent. Its liabilities are placed at $55,000.

Senator La Follette has declined the invitation extended by Thomas W. Lawson to become a member of the committee to vote the proxies of a number of policyholders of two of the life insurance companies of New York at their annual meetings this year, on account of pressure of public business.

Fire caused by the end of a broken electric wire dropping in a pot of varnish damaged the Colorado & Southern railroad shops at Denver Tuesday to the amount of $200,000. Eight shopmen and firemen sustained burns. Eleven passenger coaches, five of them Pullman sleepers, were burned. The shops will be rebuilt.

The Lincoln League of Indiana, in annual convention at Marion, adopted resolutions advocating the nomination of Vice President C. W. Fairbanks as the Republican candidate for president in 1908.

An engine running light on the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad crashed into the rear of a local freight near Thurston, Ohio, Tuesday night, and all of the twenty passengers on the caboose were injured. J. A. Johnson, a salesman of Cincinnati, suffered a broken leg. F. J. Oyer, another Cincinnati salesman, was injured and lost all his luggage. The mail car in front of the caboose was wrecked.

One hundred men harvesting ice on Saginaw bay with a dozen horses were driven ashore in a veritable panic late Tuesday at Bay City, Mich., when a sudden northeaster swept down upon them, breaking the ice field loose from shore. Men and horses raced madly for their lives, all reaching land. The ice field was driven against the west shore with terrific force, piling up ice barriers ten to twenty feet high.

NO HOPE OF RECOVERY.

John McCall, Former Great Northern Conductor, in Critical Condition.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Word comes from the insane hospital at St. Peter that John McCall, who is well known in Cass Lake as well as every station on the Great Northern system from Bemidji to Sauk Center, is in a critical condition, and that there is absolutely no hope whatever for his recovery. McCall was for years conductor on the Bemidji-Sauk Center branch of the Great Northern and he was a very popular official, and has a host of friends. Through a combination of circumstances, and the machinations of a zealous "spotter" in the employ of the company, McCall was given an unlimited leave of absence, almost the same thing as a discharge. At about the same time, his son died. The death of his son and the loss of his situation weighed heavily upon McCall and he worried exceedingly. Despite the assurances of many friends that everything would turn out satisfactorily relative to his position, the matter weighed heavily upon him until his mind nearly gave way. He was taken to the hospital at St. Peter, and while he apparently recovered somewhat, he eventually relapsed into his old melancholy condition, and now is almost a wreck of his former self.

Enters a Demurrer.

A demurrer to the damage suit started by Joseph Sheehy, for alleged malicious prosecution, has been filed in district court by Assistant City Attorney Thomas McKeon. The demurrer is based on the claim that the facts stated do not constitute a cause of action and that the allegations are not properly united. The demurrer will be argued Feb. 23.

SENTENCES APPROVED.

Washington, Feb. 14.—The president yesterday approved the sentences of the courtmartial in the two cases against Lieut. Sidney S. Burbank, who was tried in the Philippines. In one case he was charged with making false official statements with reference to his alleged marriage to a Filipino woman, and with embezzlement of company funds. He was sentenced to dismissal in each case, but in the latter he was sentenced in addition, to imprisonment for fifteen months.

SHERIFF MAY BE INVESTIGATED

Report That Law Was Violated at Execution of Williams.

St. Paul, Feb. 14.—"I will examine into the execution of William Williams, and if there has been the slightest violation of the law, even a technical violation of the same, Sheriff Miesen will have to answer for it. I meant just exactly what I said when I sent the letter cautioning Miesen, and if he has violated the law I will go after him. I have laid all the accounts in the newspapers aside and will examine them officially today."

This was the statement made by Governor Johnson when his attention was called to the fact that nearly thirty persons witnessed the execution of William Williams and among them were two representatives of the daily press, one of whom wrote a signed "story" of the execution with the caption: "The only newspaperman who witnessed the execution."

Governor Johnson stated further that he would investigate into the presence of the representatives of the press, and if it could be definitely proved that they were there with the cognizance of Sheriff Miesen or any of his deputies, however low their station on the sheriff's staff, that Miesen would be held accountable.

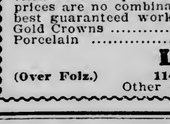

Governor Johnson was surprised when informed that upon the word of Chief Deputy Robert, there were twenty-five present at the execution and reiterated his declaration that there would be a searching investigation to ascertain if this were correct. It is likely that Sheriff Miesen will be asked to appear before the governor and explain how it was possible that representatives of the press were allowed to view the execution while other members were excluded and had to content themselves with receiving the details of the hanging second-handed.

One of the most startling things to come to light last evening was the filing of the death certificate of Coroner Miller, which states that Williams died from strangulation. Following fast upon this comes a statement from Dr. Whitcomb, which shows that Williams feet rested on the ground after the trap was sprung and that it was necessary for the executioners to lift his body and bring death to the condemned man by slow strangulation.

Jackson-Sammis Company.

The concert to be given in the Star Lecture course Friday evening at the First Methodist church will be a rare treat for all music lovers. Miss Lenora Jackson, the violinist, has an established position on both sides of the Atlantic, and has been rather long in coming to Duluth. Her fame has preceded her, and musicians are prepared to hear a truly great artist. No one without the elements of greatness could have been so highly commended by recognized critics and noted musicians.

Miss Sibyl Sammis, the soprano, is said to be a singer who delights all. Her voice is rich and sweet and her range of selections includes the finest numbers of the masters. Charles E. Clarke, the baritone, is a Canadian singer who has been winning laurels everywhere. Alexander MacFayden, the pianist, is a brilliant soloist and an accompanist of the most satisfying kind.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

A SCARCITY OF STAPLES

Has Caused an Advance in Prices of Manufactured Articles.

Doctrine of More Money and Less Misery is Right.

New York, Feb. 14.—Steadily and surely prices of manufactured articles are advancing, keeping pace with the higher prices of raw materials, and both the natural products and those of handiwork or of machine production prove the universal law of prices rising with the increase in the volume of currency or of available money. A few items gathered from the different lines of trade will serve to substantiate the reports of continued activity in business and the general and constant rise in prices. The leading mills manufacturing blankets have announced their prices upon those articles for the fall of 1906, and the prices are from 7 to 10 per cent higher than those prevalent in 1905.

In Wyoming wool to the extent of 500,000 to 600,000 pounds has been contracted for, to be delivered when clipped, at 21 cents per pound—2 cents per pound higher than was paid last year. Transactions in wool in Boston this week have been larger than any previous week for two months. Buyers from all over New England and New York and Eastern Pennsylvania are ready to purchase, but they find stocks very light and much broken in varieties. Receipts of wool in Boston since Jan. 1 are more than 4,000,000 pounds less than the shipments from there, and illustrate the activity and the extent of the demand for the fleeces. In New York wool dealers have very small lots to offer purchasers. Prices are very firm, the holders of wool being higher in their prices, and supplies only obtainable at advances. The worsted mills and other producers of cloths have opened their lines of goods for the next fall season at prices ranging from 7 to 10 per cent over those of last year, and report there is no hesitation upon the part of buyers to accept the situation, so trade is more than up in volume in quantity and in aggregate of values.

The wool growers of Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and neighboring states will again get excellent prices for their fleeces and have money to put in the banks from the flocks which they so intelligently care for.

Cotton manufacturers are getting higher prices on all classes of their production. Unbleached muslins on Thursday last were advanced one-quarter of a cent per yard. Twenty-seven-inch domestics, which last year brought 4 cents per yard, are today 4¾ cents per yard, are now 5¼ cents. It is said stocks of manufactured cottons in manufacturers' hands are down to a very scant basis and that no stocks can accumulate this season under the urgent and extensive demand from all quarters for goods.

In silk neither Europe nor America has large supplies, and Japan prices are rising to a very marked degree, with stocks in all the Asiatic countries very small indeed. It is not that less wool or cotton or silk has been produced; upon the contrary, more than normal production in each was the last year's supply to the world, but consumption has largely increased; the products have been rapidly absorbed by populations able to buy and to pay for, and the result is large, profitable trade to all, and at higher prices to producers. So much for the great textiles of commerce.

They are certainly doing splendidly for those who deal in them, while the money supply of the world keeps increasing. Those who produce them can sell all they raise at greater than normal prices. Those who manufacture them can dispose of the goods at remunerative profits and pay their employes higher wages. Those who require them are better able to pay for them, can use more of them and the number of consumers are vastly increased.

It really does seem now that the Ohio Democrats of years ago who proclaimed their doctrine of "more money and less misery" were right after all, and the world seems to have a singular prosperity with the gold dollar every year buying less than it did the year before. Is it possible that a depreciating dollar is a blessing to the world at large and to mankind in general? It is now admitted that the value of the gold dollar does change, though so strenuously denied by the gold men for many years, and we see prosperity with this depreciating value. Surely the bankers' conventions and the Republican bosses must look into this matter and see that the country is not endangered by this prosperity, and by this decline in the purchasing power of the gold dollar.

The old resolutions won't do. They don't fit in just now. The Republican leader and his party have now admitted the Democrats were right as to rate regulation, and have adopted the Democratic idea on that point, and they may yet adopt the Democratic financial idea, for not one of them can deny the change in value of the gold dollar. Plenty of money is assured to the country and to the world, and trade will continue to grow amazingly and will in the future break the great records of 1904 and 1905.

The weekly report of the Bank of England, issued on Thursday, showed the effect of recent arrivals of gold from Africa and from India, with the result of putting the reserve of the bank up to more than 46 per cent. This means speedy reduction in the bank rate of interest, and consequent ease of money in London. The Bank of France's report of same date was an excellent one, and there will be no necessity of either of those centers calling for money from any other point. The English and French financiers can now study the situation outside and place the cash they have where it will bring them the greatest rate per annum, be it Africa, South America or North America.

They have clear sailing at home now for at least six months, and these six months will see at least $150,000,000 of gold, today in the mines, turned into dollars and sovereigns doing duty as money.

Thus it goes on without cessation, day after day, month after month, year after year, the world has a greater amount of money to do business with, and more labor is employed, higher wages are paid. Consumption of all kinds is greater and prosperity is more widespread. It is so not only in the United States, but throughout the world, and with prosperity goes the modern methods of transportation of goods, of persons and of ideas, and these are the factors of modern civilization. The steamship, the steamboat, the railway, the telegraph, the telephone, these are the agencies through which and by which the commerce of nations, the trade of districts and of cities, the patronage of hamlets and of individuals are gathered in to the tremendous totals we behold today. From the plateaus of Tibet, Bolivia, Russia, Africa, Mexico, South and Central Africa over the trails of the Himalayas, the Andes, the Urals, the Cordilleras and the Rockies, through the snow and ice of Siberia, Alaska, Canada and Northern Europe, across the heated deserts and plains of Arabia, Australia, Egypt and Northern Africa, India's glowing fields and Guiana's burning, sandy beaches, down Amazonian floods and tangled swamps, from Nova Zembla to New Zealand's southernmost point comes now the commerce to enrich the manufacturers of the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany. The population of the world seek our friendship and our products. Our people can grow wealthy while adding to the wealth and prosperity of their customers. No sea limits us, The entire world is our market, and our manufacturers are wise enough to avail themselves of the advantages they possess and enjoy.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

IS GRANTED A DIVORCE

William Howenstine Legally Separated From Common-Law Wife.

Closing Chapter of Sensational Minnesota Point Case.

William Howenstine, the pioneer settler on lower Minnesota Point, has been granted a decree of divorce from Caroline Howenstine, his common-law wife, on the ground of desertion and abandonment, without cause and justification.

The findings and judgment in this action, one that was of more than usual interest from the fact that the parties to it are among the oldest residents at the Head of the Lakes, were filed yesterday afternoon by Judge Dibell, who decides that Howenstine is entitled to his decree, and Mrs. Howenstine to alimony, with no costs or disbursements to either party.

Both Mr. Howenstine and his wife are widely known in Duluth and Superior, their home on Minnesota Point opposite old Superior having stood there for the past forty years. Mr. Howenstine is 73 years of age, a man who has been active in all his affairs until crippled through a fall that happened last winter. Mrs. Howenstine is 50 years old, a daughter of Mrs. Lanner, who has lived on Minnesota Point about as long as the oldest inhabitant of the two cities can remember.

The court finds that Mrs. Howenstine deserted her home in September, 1898, and that there is no evidence to support her claim of cruel or inhuman treatment on the part of her husband.

The court further finds that the couple married on or about the year 1871, by the common-law process, and that they have six children, the oldest being 28 and the youngest 17 years of age.

The case came on for trial before Judge Dibell without a jury, excepting that the issue of adultery, which was one of the charges made by Howenstine in his cross-bill, was determined by a jury and was not substantiated.

Reynolds & McClearn represented Mrs. Howenstine and Porter J. Neff represented Mr. Howenstine.

SMALL BOY HURT.

While Stealing Ride Gets Into Collision of Sleighs.

Burton Denno, a small boy, had a close call Monday evening from being killed or at least seriously hurt. He had caught on a sleigh for a ride and was clinging to the side. At Fifth avenue west and First street another sleigh came down the hill at a good speed and as it rounded the corner, swerved so that it collided against the sleigh on which the boy was clinging. The youngster was caught between the two and knocked senseless. He was badly jammed and was carried to his home at 632 West First street, where he now lies in bed nursing some pretty sore places, but otherwise not much the worse for wear.

A great many youngsters are stealing rides on sleighs these days and some of them are getting bad falls. Drivers say they are scared to death for fear of accidents to children stealing rides on their sleigh, and they declare it is wonderful how the small boys and girls, too, escape as they do.

DYSPEPSIA-PROOF

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed by Any Stomach.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will lie in being able to stand the flash.

It is only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting face to face at a two-by-four table, he handed his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Boston Clam Chowder.
Strained Gumbo.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms.
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Ox Tongue with Sauerkraut.
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Combination Crab Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered a "little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company." But Mr. White could not be deceived; "I am afraid you can't stand the gleam, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it? You'll always have that hungry look anyhow as long as you have dyspepsia. Now listen. My stomach was in just as bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia business is robbing you of your spirit, of your energy and ability to think quickly. I can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now I'll tell you what to do." and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There, there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food. For even the worst dyspeptic it's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason is it relieves the stomach of nearly all the work it has to do, digests everything in the stomach and stimulates the gastric juice. I can't get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package."

Yes, it is true, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets absolutely stop heartburn, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and all eructations and irritation, and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the good there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

Constipation causes headache, nausea, dizziness, languor, heart palpitation. Drastic physics gripe, sicken, weaken the bowels and don't cure. Doan's Regulets act gently and cure constipation. 25 cents. Ask your druggist.

COPPER IS INACTIVE

Not Much Buying of Metal Though Consumption is Large.

Large Interests Will be Buying Soon, is the Expectation.

In his weekly letter, George L. Walker reports the copper market as unchanged and inactive. Bearish talk has had the effect of keeping consumers out of the market for metal, but consumption is going on at the same active rate. Walker says:

"The copper market continues inactive with prices unchanged. Lake and electrolytic are holding at 18¾ to 18¾ cents per pound, 18½ cents being the lowest quotation at which any considerable amount could be purchased. There are practically no offerings of round lots for immediate delivery. Producers are willing to sell copper at a price for shipment in March, April and May. Consumers, on the other hand, have been dazed to some extent by the bearish agitation and are refraining from making new contracts for advance account.

"The dullness of the market does not indicate any falling off in consumption. More copper is going into the melting pot every day than at any time in the history of the trade. The current supplies, however, represent deliveries on contracts made one to four months ago. There is no clogging or hesitation at the smelters and refineries, as consumers are urging quick delivery on old contracts which cover every pound of available copper that is coming from the mines.

"There is the best of reason for the belief that some of the largest consuming interests will come into the market for supplies within two or three weeks, and there is every indication at present that they will pay 18½ cents per pound for copper to be delivered in the late spring and early summer months.

COPPER SHARES.

"Aside from the continued rapid advance of Bingham and the slightly increased strength in Franklin, the local copper share situation has developed no new features. The public and the day-to-day traders are generally inclined to take profits and wait for a reaction. In fact, there is more or less bearish sentiment everywhere. The larger traders regard this as the best possible evidence of strength, and are buying stocks confidently on slight reactions. The market can best be described as one which has not yet discounted a 15-cent copper market, but in which traders are trembling at the possibility that there may be a decline of one-quarter of a cent in an 18½-cent copper market. Conditions are considered sound and healthy; and though it is quite probable that there may be occasional reactions, and that some of the higher priced stocks run off somewhat from this level, the general average of prices should work higher."

PYTHIAN CELEBRATION

Of Forty-Third Anniversary of Founding of the Order.

Next Monday evening the three lodges of the Knights of Pythias in Duluth will join in celebrating the forty-third anniversary of the origin of Pythianism. The affair will be held in Elks' hall and will be for members of the order only. North Star lodge of Duluth and Diamond lodge of the West end have appointed committees to arrange the matter, and Kitchi Gammi lodge, West Duluth, has agreed to endorse anything the committees do. The committee are:

On the evening in question the third degree will be worked on a number of candidates and the degree will be worked by the degree team of the Virginia lodge, headed by William Treadway; and by North Star lodge team of Duluth, which holds the championship of the state for degree work. The Virginia lodge degree team is said to do wonderfully good work and it is desired here to see them at it.

It is quite likely that after the work will have been finished a banquet will be given and something in the way of entertainment done.

Olsen Gets Divorce.

Judge Dibell has filed findings and judgment granting a divorce to Christ Olsen from Constante Olsen, on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. Mrs. Olsen made no contest. They were married at Duluth in February, 1905.

THEATER DOG CAME HOME.

Great Dane Stranded in Ogden Walked Back to Butte.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 14.—"Uncle Dick" Sutton, the well-known theatrical man of this city, has a dog that $500 wouldn't buy today. "Prince" is of the Great Dane variety, and during all of the time that the Lulu Sutton company was on the road the dog traveled with the car.

Four weeks ago the company left Ogden for Butte. When the start was made the animal could not be found. Either he had been stolen or had decided to locate in the Utah town. Regretfully the members of the company gave him up as lost. But a day or two ago a thin and wabbly Great Dane dog turned up at the Grand Opera house here, where the Lulu Sutton company is playing. He stood on the steps and feebly wagged his tail until someone opened the door, and then carefully picked his way into the building. The employes of the house recognized him as Prince at once, and he was soon the center of an excited group. Without doubt he had covered the entire distance from Ogden to Butte on foot. He was footsore and weary and fully thirty pounds lighter than he was four weeks ago. He was treated to a feed the like of which he had evidently not seen in days, and nothing is now too good for Prince.

His performance is made the more remarkable by the fact that the trip was made in the winter, the greater part of the way over deep snow. He had been taken to Ogden in the car, and hence was not familiar with the country over which he traveled.

Prince is not the first Montana dog to do a stunt of this kind. Several years ago, at the time of the first hold-up of the North Coast Limited train at Bearmouth, Neb., there was in the express car a dog that had been put on the train at Billings. The robber, just before dynamiting the safe, untied the canine and threw him outdoors, remarking that "he did not want to kill the dog." Several weeks later the animal turned up in Billings, fully 400 miles from the spot where he had been thrown from the train.

SORES That REFUSE TO HEAL

There is no surer evidence of a poisonous, polluted condition of the blood than that manifested by a sore that refuses to heal. Every symptom suggests pollution; the discharge, the red, angry flesh, the inflammation and discoloration of surrounding parts all show that the ulcer is kept open by a constant drainage through it, of impurities from the blood.

When the blood is pure and healthy any cut, bruise or wound will heal readily; when from any cause, however, the blood has become infected with germs or poisons the place becomes a sore or ulcer, sometimes scabbing over, but never fully healing, because it is kept irritated and inflamed by the impurities in this vital fluid. Often the rough handling of a wart, mole or pimple which has never shown any sign of trouble, a slight scratch or abrasion of the skin or insignificant hurt of any character will become a sore that refuses to heal, and remains for years, eating into the surrounding flesh, resisting treatment and sometimes terminating in Cancer.

I want to recommend your S. S. S. to any who are in need of a remedy for an old sore. In 1877 I had my leg badly cut by a barrel hoop and having on a blue woolen stocking my leg was badly poisoned from the dye. A great sore formed and for years no one knows what I suffered with the place. Nothing would heal the ulcer and I thought I would have to go through life with a discharging, angry sore on my leg. A short while ago I commenced to use S. S. S. and I soon saw that the place was improving. I continued the use of it until my leg was entirely healed and I am now a well man.

JNO. ELLIS.
250 Navy St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

I had a large sore or ulcer on my face and nothing that I tried would benefit me. It began with shooting pains and soon the itching was terrible. At first it discharged a watery fluid which changed to a thicker composition and the pain was very severe. It was nearly as large as a dollar and terribly inflamed in all the surrounding parts. It had been there so long and growing worse all the time, I became very much discouraged and alarmed. At last I began the use of S. S. S. At first the ulcer seemed to get worse, but soon I noted an improvement and continued its use until it was entirely cured.

MRS. W. A. WRIGHT.
Gary, Fla.

The poison in the blood may be the remains of some constitutional disease, the effects of a long spell of sickness leaving disease germs in the system, or the absorption of refuse matters of the body which have not been properly expelled through the channels of bodily waste. But whatever the cause the vitality and purity of the blood is so weakened and polluted that it cannot properly nourish the system, and the sore or ulcer is kept up.

Those most usually afflicted with chronic sores and ulcers are persons who have reached or passed middle life; the vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to weaken and the poisons in the blood which perhaps have been inherited and lain dormant in the system for years cannot be as effectually held in check as in early life when the system was strong and vigorous. While the old or middle-aged are the usual sufferers, the young are not exempt if the blood becomes infected with the germs.

Salves, plasters, lotions, etc., cannot cure old sores and ulcers because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. Such treatment keeps the place clean, relieves pain and perhaps reduces the inflammation, and in this way is beneficial, but can never permanently heal them. The only treatment that can do any permanent good is a competent blood purifier, one that goes to the very root of the trouble and removes the cause, and for this purpose nothing has ever been found to equal S. S. S. It goes down to the very fountain-head of the disease, drives out all poison and morbid matter, builds up the weak, sluggish blood, gives energy and strength to the entire system, and allows the sore to heal naturally and permanently. S. S. S. is purely vegetable, being made of roots, herbs and barks possessing cleansing, healing properties, and is not only the King of blood purifiers, but the greatest of all tonics. If you have a sore that is slow in healing do not waste time with external treatment nor experiment with unknown medicines, but begin the use of S. S. S. and by removing every vestige of the cause, cure the trouble permanently. Special book on sores and ulcers and any medical advice desired furnished without charge to all who write.

TWO KILLED IN TRAIN COLLISION

Trainmen Lose Lives in Wreck Near Maurice Station, Ky.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 14.—In a collision on the Louisville & Nashville railroad near Maurice Station, Ky., a few miles south of Cincinnati, yesterday afternoon, between the train which left Nashville at 8 o'clock yesterday morning and the local passenger leaving Cincinnati at 3:40 p. m., two employes were killed and five injured. The passengers were shaken up, but according to advices received by the Louisville & Nashville officers, none was seriously hurt.

The dead:
ENGINEER PETER MURPHY.
FIREMAN JOSTOUT.
Injured: Engineer James Maharney, Conductor Fitzgerald, Baggagemaster R. W. Lockwood, negro cook in dining car.

MYSTERIOUS BOX FOR THE MEADE EXPLODES.

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—The Post says that H. Laughran, an expressman, has been seriously injured by a mysterious explosion, and is now in a hospital, his condition being such that he cannot be interviewed. It is alleged that Laughran was employed to convey a box belonging to Company B, Second United States infantry, to the transport Meade and that he accidentally dropped the box, the contents of which immediately exploded. The box is declared to be similar to one which previously had been placed on the Meade in the section of the hold where the fatal fire occurred, the origin of which was a mystery.

Maj. Devol, chief of the transport service, said yesterday that he had appointed a commission of officers to investigate the matter.

'BE SOBER'

Says President Roosevelt

"It is of incalculable consequence to the man himself that he should be sober and temperate, and it is of even more consequence to his wife and his children; for it is a hard and cruel fact that in this life of ours the sins of the man are often visited most heavily upon those whose welfare should be his one special care."—President Roosevelt to the Miners at Wilkesbarre, Pa.

SMATHERS GETS BACK TROPHY

Recovers Possession of Cup on Depositing a Bond of $7,000.

New York, Feb. 14.—E. E. Smathers, the trotting horse owner, against whom a suit is pending for the return of the championship cup awarded him when Major Delmar defeated Lou Dillon in October, 1904, yesterday recovered possession of the cup by depositing a bond for $7,000 with Sheriff Hayes. The cup had been taken from Mr. Smathers' room in his apartments on a writ of replevin. Mr. Smathers will retain possession of the trophy pending the settlement of the suit.

The rules committee of the American Trotting association, yesterday postponing the program for the association's biennial convention, took no action on the matter. The members consider the time since the suit was announced and the beginning of the congress, only a week, was too short for a fair investigation of the charges. The next action, if any, will therefore come from the board of review in May.

A TWO-CENT RATE FOR WISCONSIN

Asked of Railroad Commission by the Secretary of State.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 14.—Steps were taken today looking to the establishment of a 2-cent per mile passenger rate on Wisconsin railroads, when Secretary of State Walter L. Houser yesterday filed a personal complaint with the Wisconsin state railroad commission against the Wisconsin Central railway in which he alleged he travels frequently between stations on the Wisconsin Ceneral road paying at the rate of 3 cents per mile, which charge, he believes to be excessive, and that a fair rate of compensation for such service would not exceed 2 cents per mile, either for the past or future service.

The petitioner prays that the aforesaid railway company be required to answer the charges herein and that after due hearing and investigation an order be made commanding said railway company to cease and desist from making the unreasonable and excessive charges referred to in said petition, and that an order be made by said commission fixing a reasonable rate of compensation for the carriage of persons between points on the line of said railroad in the state of Wisconsin, and for such other and further order as the commission may deem necessary in the premises.

It is understood the railroads will fight any attempt on the part of the state railroad commission to change the rate now in force.

COLD WAVE ARRIVES.

Chilly Package Handed Out by Canadian Northwest.

The Canadian Northwest handed Duluth a package of frost last night which has anything of the kind heretofore experienced this winter beaten. The Northwestern American and his Canadian brother seem to be in favor of reciprocity between the two countries, but it is doubtless the unanimous desire of the former that the cold waves of the latter be taxed high enough to keep them out. The thermometer dropped last night to the vicinity of 20 deg. below zero, and in addition to that nipping condition there was a small-sized gale, which made the cold almost unbearable.

Medicine Hat, of which one hears so much in connection with originality in raising weather, is not to blame this time, says Forecaster Richardson. Prince Albert is getting into the game, and previous to reaching here the thermometer was shoved down there to 42 deg. below zero yesterday, just by way of practice. Forecaster Richardson says that the cold wave is going to do business here today and tomorrow also, but that there will be little wind, if any.

MELLIN'S Food for the Baby

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

"G-g-goodness," chattered the girl, this morning as she stood before the first spring millinery display that Duluth has seen, "just l-l-look at the hats, and most of us have just begun on the second lap of our winter ones." And then she snuggled into her fur-lined coat, pulled the collar a little high and stood, Fen fashion, on one foot with the other out of sight, some place curled around some sort of invisible support for added warmth. But it takes more than 15 deg. below zero, no available money and disappointment, with a music teacher already fifteen minutes past, to drag the average feminine person past a display of millinery, particularly the first of the year. She will stand, and after her ears have been frostbitten, her nose turned purple and her eyes full of tears, she doesn't mind the cold a bit, and is quite ready to stand indefinitely.

"They's not quite as crazy as the winter hats, are they?" she wandered on. "They look as if they would have some relation to the head, and aren't they the loves of color. Do you 'spose I could wear violet,' she asked, rather anxiously, as her eyes rested on a joy of a thing of violet straw, turned up on one side, with a bunch of violets and a few crushed roses. Her companion gave her a withering glance, took in the purple nose, the teary eyes, and all the other disadvantages the freezing atmosphere had produced. "Well, I should say not," said she, quite definitely. "Oh, well, maybe that Alice blue would do," said the optimistic irrepressible one. "But I do love violet, and it would go so well with that suit you know I got last fall. It isn't anywhere near worn out, and will be just the thing this spring. It is exactly the right shade, and is made with elbow sleeves and lace in them."

And just then around the corner came a northeast or northwest blast that whipped the breath and the jacket out of her mouth at the same time, and with regretful steps she turned away from the half hour's contemplation of straw and lace and flowers and jaunty quills.

TO VISIT Y. W. C. A.

Miss Florence Simms, National Extension Secretary, Coming.

Miss Florence Simms, national extension secretary of the Young Women's Christian association, will visit Duluth this week in the interests of the local association. Miss Simms will arrive in the afternoon. During her visit in Duluth she will be the guest of Mrs. W. C. Agnew, who will entertain Saturday afternoon at a reception in her honor.

With the local work crowded as it is, the extension work that might be done in the city is not receiving the attention which the workers are anxious to extend in that direction. The progress that has been made in Duluth is always a matter of wonder to the national workers who visit here. The women prominently identified with the local work are looking forward with interest and pleasure to the visit of this prominent worker.

The Bible class, which was organized yesterday afternoon at the association rooms, under the direction of Rev. J. C. Faries, was attended by forty women, and this class evidently meets a need that has been felt by a large number of home women. The study of "Colossians" will be taken up, and the series will extend over eight lessons.

A valentine party will be given this evening at the association rooms. The young men friends of the members will be guests.

MOTHERS' CLUBS.

Mrs. H. S. Birch of Minneapolis Addresses Federation.

Mrs. H. S. Birch of Minneapolis who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. George S. Richards of this city, was present yesterday afternoon at the session of the district federation meeting, and spoke informally for a few minutes of the work in which she is most interested in, and has been for some time, "Mothers Clubs." Mrs. Birch is chairman of the Mothers' clubs committee of the State Federation and was heard with much interest yesterday afternoon. When asked to speak she said "I have but one thought and one subject, mothers' clubs, and if you wish to hear I will be very glad to talk on that. To those of you here who are mothers these clubs will not appeal, probably, but there is a possibility of extending much help to the women of the humbler classes in this work. Our committee has endeavored to hold mothers' meetings at the schools where we may gather together these women who can get help from these meetings, and an informal program is given by their children and a social half hour spent and with interchange of ideas, I feel that they can get very real help. It is not to change women into loving mothers, that is the object of the committee's work, for we are all that, but to make of us wise mothers, a class in which too few of us can be found."

Mrs. Birch continued her talk with illustrations of the real good this work can accomplish.

ARTS AND CRAFTS.

Woman's Council Starts the Movement in Duluth.

The Arts and Crafts movemnt has started in Duluth, for at this morning's meeting of the Woman's Council which was held at 11 o'clock at the library, a committee was appointed to investigate the conditions in Duluth, the reception that the movement would be likely to receive, the number of people who would probably be reached and the ways and means of procedure. The members of the Council feel that a great field in this work is possible in Duluth and that a vast amount of help might be extended to many people here. Many of the foreigners in and about Duluth are skilled in some kind of hand work, lace making, rug weaving or the like, and with the assistance that might be given them in instruction, new patterns, and beautiful colorings, they might be able to turn their old-country ability to pecuniary profit that would be most acceptable in many cases. Guild rooms have been established in many cities and here further instruction and help is given the workers and assistance in disposing of their work is arranged for. The committee of the council will look into these possibilities in Duluth and after reporting to the council, the work will doubtless be established.

The members of the committee appointed by the president, Mrs. J. L. Washburn, are: Mrs. H. C. Marshall, Mrs. R. N. Marble, Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour and Mrs. T. J. Davis and others to be appointed later.

A public playground committee was also appointed to look into the matter of a playground in Duluth in which the council is interested. The committee appointed consists of Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, Mrs. Ward Ames, Miss Statham and Mrs. Alexander Milne.

The details of business in connection with the luncheon given upon Monday by the council were disposed of and a vote of thanks was extended Mrs. G. A. Elder and her committee who were in charge of the luncheon and also to the Spalding management.

Events of Interest.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Endives, 10 cents a head.

Grape fruit, 15 and 20 cents each.

Sunny Brook farm sausage, 15 cents a lb.

No 2 sausage, 8 cents a lb.

Shrimps, 35 cents a lb.

Boiled ham, 30 cents a lb.

Endives and shrimp salad is a decidedly French combination and rather unusual, so if you are tired of the salads you have been having, try this one for a change, dressed with a French dressing of course.

This is pork and bean time. Any time is, of course, after the mercury has got much below zero, and pork and beans, as mother still continues to make them, will be seized with avidity. There is one masculine excentricity that a housekeeper can count on as sure as that she will put too much soda in her first biscuits of that breed, and that is, the protest he will always register against having molasses or sweetness of any sort in the beans. This is where the young creature who is cooking beans for the first time will say with an injured air, "But I like beans with molasses on them," with a very pronounced accent on the "I" and it is also where the woman experienced in how to feed "him" says, "All right, John" and proceeds to carefully and cheerfully place two tablespoons of molasses in the concoction. And then "John" says, as he takes a generous fork full of the sweetened beans, "You see how much better these are than the malosses dope. I can detect the least bit of sweetening in beans every time," and the wise woman at the other end of the table, eating beans just as she likes them never even suggests to "his nibs," not even after he has eaten all the beans he can, that they are made with molasses, according to Mrs. Rorer.

Some fine sausage is offered in the market, and the dainty ones that are carefully put up in pound packages are particularly nice looking. Boiled ham in pound packages, delicately boiled, nicely sliced and daintly wrapped in oiled paper is one of the things offered at one of the markets.

Street Car Courtesy.

There is a custom in Boston that strangers ridicule a good deal, but it has an excellent effect by developing courtesy. It is that of street car conductors requesting passengers who are seated too "move up a little, please," if by so doing they may make room for the last person to sit also. The result is that the street car glutton does not flourish in Boston as she does here, and conductors there are rarely obliged to ask persons to move. They have been trained to do it, and are courteous accordingly.

It's a pity that conductors here are not instructed similarly, for there is much opportunity for improvement in street car manners in Duluth. Once upon a time men more than women were the offenders in this particular, but the female boor seems to be increasing. She is the kind of woman who occupies two seats sidewise, instead of facing front. She even allows her children, for whom she has not paid fare, to sit while women stand, and, alas! omits to say "Thank you" when a seat is given her.

Courtesy is such a trifling thing, and it is so nerve and temper saving. If a person steps on your foot in a street car you don't feel as irritated if she says "Pardon me;" and the courteous spirit to help by trying to take a little less room in a crowded car aisle, so some one can get out, save not only temper, but gowns. Contrast the little action with that of a woman who refuses to budge an inch, and lets you struggle your way out as best you can. You step down to the street, then, in an entirely different state of mind.

Another type of feminine boor is the woman who gets into a crowded car and uses her elbows to try to thrust aside persons standing as closely together then as human sardines. She does not try to make her way considerately, incommoding the others as little as possible, still arriving at the part of the car she wishes, and has not the spirit of courtesy without which no woman has complete charm and graciousness; she is aggressive and rude.

Discourtesy of a similar kind is frequently seen at counters in large department stores. There, too, is the type of woman who, bargain hunting, uses her elbows quite as much as her feet as a means of locomotion, and makes one ashamed to belong to the same sex. If she who elbows her way through crowds were once to try the magic of a little courtesy she might be astonished at its effectiveness. A "May I pass, please?" or "Pardon me" will make a mass of people sway when the most vigorous elbowing may fail, for the instinct of human nature is to be helpful and obliging, and to do the thing that is asked.

If a bargain counter is the goal, courtesy exercised, once the place is reached, will help others even as the last arrival would fain have been assisted. It is not necessary to occupy a front place at a counter while waiting for change. A purchase made and address given, a spirit of courtesy will prompt a person to step back a little, still standing where change may be received, but making more room for others who have not then bought or had chance to see what they wished.

Courtesy is either a state of mind or a habit. In either case it is a thing which no woman can afford to be without.

Gentle Art of Arguing

To be able to disagree with a friend and do it amiably is an art. If it flourished more commonly there would be fewer quarrels and less hard feeling, two unpleasant results to be avoided if one can. It is childish for two women who have been friends for years to fall out over trifling matters, but one sees it happen all the time, and sometimes the breach begun about a trivial thing widens until the two never really come together again on the old basis.

On the degree of positiveness with which one contradicts is apt to depend its effect. An aggressive denial or contradiction is distinctly unpleasant to the person who hears it. "It isn't so much what one says as the positive way one says it," to paraphrase a trifle, and it is manner, not words that is potent. One may use precisely the same phrase with an entirely different manner and no offense will be given.

A person who always agrees is not only insipid, but is apt to be untruthful. It is not humanly possible always to reflect the opinion of one's companion, and therefore the art of disagreeing is one to be cultivated. It consists largely, one might think, in gentleness, in advancing one's own opinion as an opinion and not as though it were a fact. This habit of positiveness is one of the most irritating in and to human nature, and the person who avoids appearance of it, at the same time having tact and firmness, will accomplish far more by influence and association than she who is assertive. It is the difference between going around armed with a club or a cushion. The club of positiveness may be silencing, but it is rarely persuasive; the cushion of suggestion and opinion is sometimes more comfortable to lean upon than one's own previous thoughts. In any case it is not irritating.

It is no wonder that men declare women cannot argue. They not only as a rule lack facts and bring in personalities, but they use such information as they have with a positiveness that in a man another would call brutal. Flatly, women rarely show toleration of each other in difference of opinion. When two men disagree or are of different opinions the phrases, "I have found it so and so," or "it seems to me," or "I think" are frequently uttered. Women, like children, get together and say, "It is." There are, of course, cases where both are right in this positive assertion, but as a rule one is mistaken. There are even exceptional instances where one becomes convinced that she is mistaken, but the known cases of her admitting it under the circumstances are even more rare. Her whole nature has been so roused to combat by the other that she cannot suddenly become sweet and yielding and say, even figuratively, "Yes, darling; I am wrong and you are right." Human nature isn't built on any such angelic lines.

But that same woman who would rather die than admit herself to be wrong after an argument of that kind might do it cheerfully and without effort if her companion had a little tact and toleration in her way of advancing opinions. "I think" and "it seems to me" leaves room for the thought that the person so talking knows that after all she is merely human and so fallible and possibly mistaken. This is a cheering thought to the other, for if the first is trying to bolster up a weak argument she sees a possibility of being let down easily and without gloating on the part of the other, whereas if the first is convinced of the strength of her own position she is pleased at a semblance of readiness on the part of the latter to be convinced.

Arguing between women is not impossible when both have toleration and gentleness in expressing opinions. Gentleness is not weakness, any more than brutality is always strength. But the person who has gentleness of manner and strength of purpose behind it has force that will make many things give way before her, always pleasantly.

Handsome Furs For Sale Now at Very Low Prices

BY A. T. ASHMORE

In spite of this being such a warm season, furs were never more fashionable, but never before were fur coats, hats, boas and muffs to be had for such extremely low prices. It is an almost irresistible temptation not to take advantage of the sales going on everywhere in long fur wraps of every description, for fur is sure to be perfectly in style a second year, so if purchased now it will also be quite fresh to start next winter.

Fur trimming as well is now used in the most lavish manner. For example, if an astrakhan or chinchilla jacket is worn a deep band of the same fur is laid about the hem of the skirt and there may also be trimming of the same on the hat. Sealskin jackets are worn with velvet, and these gowns may also have sole little sealskin trimming.

There are not many women who can afford to buy an entire gown of baby lamb or astrakhan, but such costumes have been worn this year, and will be even more fashionable their second season, so that this time of year, when all skins are to be had so reasonably, is an excellent thus to invest. Baby lamb dresses are of necessity made up quite simply, the only trimming that is possible being some bands of satin and white or cream lace in the neck and sleeves. This gown need not be so very warm, for it should be made up over a light silk lining and in all heavy dresses this year there is a small unlined lace yoke. Then, too, the short sleeves keep the waist from being too warm.

Handsome furs are now as necessary to stamp the woman of wealth and fashion as are costly jewels, and very nearly the same figures can be expended upon the two. A long sable of chinchilla cannot be had under $1,000, and if of a particularly fine making that figure may easily be doubled. But that coat will wear for years and when there is so much fur in the wrap it can be altered to suit the change of fashion with very little extra expenditure. Sealskin will be more expensive next year than at present, for it is just returning to popular favor and is being made up in many beautiful models.

It seems almost absurd to think of caracul and astrakhan and pony skin coats in connection with the long wraps of ermine, sable and chinchilla, and yet caracul is today more in fashion even than last winter. Just now a caracul coat can be had for one-third the price demanded in the beginning of the winter. A long caracul jacket for $50 is certainly unprecedented, and yet this is the price now asked at many of the stores. Fur-lined cloth wraps are being practically given away, so that the automobilist—who even in warm weather must wear a fur coat—can have no excuse for not being comfortable on the coldest trip.

Stole and muff must be used all winter, no matter what the temperature, but these sets are also reduced by now and are many of them so inexpensive that it is better economy to buy a new muff or boa than to have the old piece remodeled. Fur hats are very much in style this winter, and all styles, from the tiniest toque to the broad trimmed picture hat are in vogue. The fur hats are trimmed with flowers, lace, aigrettes, quills, ostrich plumes, or simply head and tails of the animal itself.

The first figure in the illustration is a sealskin cloak, trimmed with bands of black satin. The little vest of pale blue taffeta. At the elbows are full lace ruffles. This is an excellent model for sealskin.

The next costume shows a brown cloth gown, with which is worn a little jacket of brown caracul. The cape and tabs on the coat are of brown satin, edged with white. The skirt is bordered with a deep band of caracul.

The third illustration shows a gown of gray velvet, trimmed simply with Alencon and Valenciennes lace. The long chinchilla wrap reaches to within a few inches of the chinchilla band about the hem of the skirt. These three illustrations are taken from L'Art et la Mode.

MARRIED A MAN BY PROXY.

Unconscious Bridegroom Arrested for Debts of "Wife."

Rome, Feb. 14.—One of the most remarkable stories of love and marriage of recent date has just been reported from Tunis. It is the story of an Italian girl who married "the man she loved" despite his absence from the ceremony. The girl became passionately fond of an Italian named Milheggi. But as he refused to marry her she stole his papers and induced another man to impersonate him. This man was married to the girl at the cathedral at Tunis last October in Milheggi's name, and Milheggi himself would not have known he was a married man if he had not been summoned for a debt contracted by "the wife."

The latter produced her marriage certificate in court, and then the whole story was revealed.

GHOST IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Seen by Card Players in Murdered Man's House.

Johannesberg, Feb. 14.—South Africa has its ghost story at last. As a general thing the towns in this section are too new and too raw to be associated to any extent with ghosts, which are supposed to have a partiality for ruins. However, this particular ghost is supposed to have its habitat in a village near Durban, haunting a house occupied by a lawyer, who died four months ago.

The house was taken by a gentleman who, after seeing "an unearthly shape cross the garden and disappear," invited some friends to come and stay with him.

The result was that two of them rushed to the Central hotel with the story that a ghost had passed through the closed doors and windows, and that a light had been seen in the study used by the previous tenant.

Eight persons were playing a game of cards in the house one night. Suddenly one of the players started up with the cry, "What is that?" Looking in the direction in which he was staring the others saw a horrible looking head protruding through the doorway. The head was like that of a skeleton. Suddenly it disappeared. The party went to the door and into the adjoining room, but the "specter" had vanished.

The Bloemfontein Post acknowledges the excitement which has been caused by the affair, but says that the skeptical believe that it is the work of some practical joker, and steps are being taken to lay the ghost by a party armed with revolvers.

TO "BOOST" THE BAGPIPE.

Amateur Society Formed in Scotland to Diffuse Its Cult.

Edinburgh, Feb. 14.—An amateur society has been organized for the diffusion of the cult of the bagpipe. Hitherto instructions in the art of playing the national instrument of Scotland has been confined to the pipe bands. The new society will endeavor to popularize the bagpipe, not only in Scotland, but through the entire world. In this work they appeal to music loving Scots all over the world.

Among the great enthusiasts of Hilary bagpipe playing is Lord Archibald Campbell, a brother of the duke of Argyll, to whom the increase of the popularity of the bagpipe in recent years is largely due. Like several of the heads of the Scottish clans, Lord Archibald Campbell maintains a very fine pipe band of his own. The marquis of Bute also possesses his pipers, who play a selection of national airs every evening during winter.

There are many grades of bagpipes, and although a plain set can be purchased for $25, at least $250 is frequently given by enthusiasts for instruments of especial finish. Highland sentiment itself is said to be largely responsible for the number of patriotic Scotsmen who cultivate bagpipe playing. In the Highland regiments many of the officers are proficient performers, and one or two well known Highland ladies are reputed never to travel without their "pipes."

WEDDED A LIMBLESS BRIDE.

Recent Marriage at Geneva Illustrates a Brace of Proverbs.

Geneva, Feb. 14.—The two old proverbs "Love will find a way" and "The course of true love never runs smooth," have just been illustrated in a wedding here. The Princess Anetta has been on exhibition here. She is a young woman 18 years of age and possessing neither legs nor arms. She fell in love with a handsome young German named Joseph Storker, and the couple arranged to get married. The manager of the "Princess," however, refused to give consent. In revenge Storker lodged a complaint of ill treatment against the employer with the police who placed the manager under arrest. Storker then carried off the "Princess" to church and the couple were formally married.

The bridegroom held the limbless bride in his arms during the ceremony.

WOULD RECOVER CONTRIBUTIONS

New York, Feb. 14.—Recommendations that legal proceedings be instituted to recover the campaign contributions made by the New York Life Insurance company were submitted to the trustees of that company today by the special investigating committee headed by Thomas F. Fowler. It is recommended that the money be recovered from such officers and trustees as counsel shall decide are liable therefor.

The report states that there is no record on the board of the company to show that campaign contributions were given, but that information was obtained from the testimony of President McCall and Vice President Perkins on the stand before the Armstrong committee. The following recommendation is then made:

"Your committee, therefore, recommends that special counsel be retained forthwith to institute such legal proceedings as may be necessary to recover the sums so contributed, from such officers and trustees of the company as in the judgment of counsel are liable therefor."

DIVIDEND DECLARED

North Butte Stockholders to Receive $1.25 on March 23.

Amalgamated and United Copper Have a Slump in Market.

The directors of the North Butte Mining company met this morning and declared a quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share, payable March 23. This is the third dividend since the company took possession of the property. On Sept. 30 stockholders received 50 cents a share; on Dec. 21, 75 cents, and on March 23 they will receive $1.25.

When this dividend is paid the company will have distributed, since July 1, the date when its operation of the property began, a total of $1,000,000. Its record is conceded to be one of the most remarkable in mining circles. At $1.25 a share it will be paying at the rate of $5 a year. It is anticipated that further increases in the dividend rate may be expected, for the company is said to be earning better than $12 a share at the present time, and an increase in its production is soon anticipated.

Contrary to the expectations of some persons, the copper stocks which were affected by the merger of the Butte companies were not all strong today. Amalgamated and United Copper, which figured most prominently in yesterday's deal, were weaker.

Amalgamated opened at $116.50, dropped to $115.50, rallied to $116.62½ and then dropped as low as $114. The closing price was $113.75 bid and $114 asked, three points under yesterday's closing price. United Copper opened 3 cents lower at $74.50, went to $75 and dropped to $74. The closing price was $72.50 bid and $73 asked. Anaconda opened at $293 bid, advanced to $294 and dropped to $286.50. The closing price was $287 bid.

North Butte opened at $88.50 and dropped to $87.50. The closing price was $86.50 bid and $87.50 asked.

The Bisbee stocks seemed to awake from the slumber they have been indulging in for some time past. Calumet & Arizona sold at $117.50 and closed at $118 asked; Calumet & Pittsburg was quite active at $35.50 and closed at $35 asked; Denn-Arizona closed at $26 asked; Junction sold at $26 and closed at $25 bid and $26 asked; Lake Superior & Pittsburg closed at $44 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $25 asked, after selling at that price.

Black Mountain closed at $10.50 bid, Keweenaw at $17 bid and $17.50 asked; Warren at $18 asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 asked and Sullivan at $2 asked.

SECRETARY OF BOARD.

MAKE REPLY TO THE GOVERNOR

The State Capitol Commission Say They Have a Grievance.

St. Paul, Feb. 14.—Special to The Herald.)—Surviving members of the board of state capitol commission have addressed a letter to Governor Johnson in reply to the criticisms on the board contained in the report by the public examiner of his investigation of the accounts of the commission.

The members collectively state that they feel a distinct grievance in that they were not in any way consulted by the public examiner, nor were they asked to explain any of the apparent irregularities. They also deny the right of the examiner to question their motives.

The letter then proceeded to take up the criticisms contained in the report and explain them in detail.

The request is made of the governor that he file the communication with the public examiners' report.

THE CHINKS CAN DRINK

Washington Startled by the Amount Visitors Can Carry.

They Take "Booze" Politely and Never Show Effects.

Washington, Feb. 14.—When the imperial Chinese commissioners departed from Washington, after their week's stay here, the officials of the government and officials of the army and navy detailed to show the Celestials around, sought the seclusion of Turkish baths and other restful places and remained under cover for a long time.

They had started out to make the pace, but had finished by following the clip set by the bland and wholly undisturbed Chinamen. Before the week's all hands around was over—long before—they awoke to a realization of how grievously they had underestimated the Chinese capacity and the Chinese ability to stay the full cup distance, to employ a metaphor that yet in this connection has some literalness about it.

There were nights when the day's swirl with the Chinamen all over until the following morn, some members of the convoying party were found standing in shadowy corners, gibbering and feeling tentatively of their heads. One naval officer, a man famous throughout the service for his invulnerability at mess service, who had never been known to miss his part in the chorus of the last of the chanties sung around the board, dropped out altogether upon the party's return from Mount Vernon, a trip made on the Dolphin.

The Chinamen's invariable and inviolable custom of taking theirs neat, unmixed and unchased, wrought upon him so that out of pure regard for the proprieties and his in'ards he was compelled to withdraw. The Chinaman views it as a profanation of the spirit to dilute the same with so contemptible and common a medium as water. To this view, bound by the etiquette of guests, the convoying party had at all times to give heed. Theirs, too, had to be gulped raw, and no wry faces, either, if proper deportment were to be observed. They made good, too, but when it was all over most of them were deeply glad.

But never a wry face made any of the Chinamen. Wassail fitted them as snugly as their caps of silk. None of them ever became even conversationally excited, much less florid. Hovering at or near the font through all the days and dipping thereof even oftener than their pantalooned escorts, they went to bed o' nights with serene, unclouded minds, and woke in the morning with clear eyes and keen appetites. Anybody who doubts that the Chinamen of mandarin rank and above can go the full route should have been in Washington and with the imperial Chinese commissioners last week. Members of the convoying party willingly believe now the scientific suggestion that irrigation was invented in China.

One of the young Chinamen of the eminent party was left behind here. He is the son of a viceroy, and he is to remain in Washington while he prepares, under a tutor, for one of the New England universities. While the youth's funds are unlimited, his viceregal dad being a man of vast wealth, it was decided that during his stay in Washington he should become a guest of a fashionable Washington boarding house. A hotel suite would be too lonely for him, it was thought. Moreover, the boarding house would enable him to pick up some English, of which he knew only a few words when he arrived in San Francisco. So the young man was installed in the star second story front room of the fashionable Washington boarding house.

From the hour that he took his lodging the drivers of delivery wagons began to clang the boarding house bell. They were from clothiers, haberdashers, hatters, shoe dealers and such like, and they were delivering things to the young Chinaman. The young Chinaman had bought about a ton of ready-made things, all in one forenoon. His desire had been to have his American clothing tailor-made, but when he was told that the American clothing could not be delivered at his lodging the same day, he demurred and sought out the ready-to-wear establishments.

His lodging piled almost to the ceiling with American gear fresh from the shops, the young Chinaman, a chubby, saffron lad of 20, who looked classy and ornate in his Chinese habiliments, started to rig himself out in American raiment.

He struck snags from the very outset, but he stood pat and purposed going it alone until the difficulty of the stiff bosomed shirts was encountered. He mistook the stiff bosom for a sort of back-warmer, or shoulder shield, and put it on that way. The scheme not working right as to the buttons and sleeves, he rang the bell to summon somebody who might show him about shirts. The servants being all engaged, the spinster landlady of the boarding house answered the bell herself. When she rapped he called out to her to enter, and enter she did. Her stay was the briefest imaginable—not longer than could be comprised within the space of one look. The young Chinaman, thinking no harm—used to the toilet ministrations of the sex in his own land—was most decollete, wrestling in the middle of the room with the obdurate shirt and muttering things to himself.

The spinster landlady summoned a young American student from one of the upper floors. The American lad went to the young Chinaman's room and showed him how to dress American style. When the toilet was complete the young Chinaman stood forth in his rather ill-fitting double-breasted sack suit, looking very ordinarily and certainly feeling very miserable. He pulled an Alpine hat down over his ears, supposing that to be the right manner of wearing the American top-piece, and he trudged about the room in his new American shoes as if his feet had been incased in iron. His high American collar and askew string necktie worried him greatly, too.

"Don't worry," the young American student said to the Chinese lad. "You're great. You look like a dead game sport."

"Dead game sport—dead game sport—" the young Chinaman gazed mystified at the American youth for a long time as he repeated the words over and over again. Then he squeaked his way in his American new shoes over to a corner of the room and pulled out a huge new dictionary to see what "dead game sport" meant.

When he left the boarding house for the first time diked out in his first set of American togs the Chinese youth looked like somebody bound for the rack. All of the distinction had gone from him. He looked like the kind of an American Chinaman that is seen at a New York race track, only less at ease in his apareling. He walked around the block three or four times, bent on determining whether he could, after the stroll, find his way back to the boarding house. He got back all right, but he was talking to himself about the misery of American shoes when he let himself in with the latchkey with which, to his delight, he had been provided before going out.

This young Chinaman, by the way, had had his queue cut off and his remaining hair treated to an American hair-cut before he donned American clothing. This caused some curious comment. It was the Occidental impression of those who noticed it that the Chinaman who had his queue removed disgraced himself, his ancestry and his posterity, and stood in danger of losing his head if he returned queueless to China. A young Chinese student who has been in Washington for some years, explains this matter. He says that Chinamen of rank will for the most part become queueless when the Empress Dowager Tsi An dies. She is the one, it seems, who holds out for the queues, while the general opinion of the majority of the upper crust of Chinese is that the queue should go. It is not expected, said the student, that the empress dowager will live many more years, so that young Chinese students coming to the United States for their education can now afford to take a chance and have their queues cut off upon their arrival in this country. When, some years from now, these queueless Chinamen return to their native land—said the student, naively—there will probably be no empress dowager, so it'll be all right.

But it does not take the Chinese youth long to catch onto American ways, means and manners. One of them, who has been here for more than two years, has recently been recalled in anger by his dad, also a viceroy and a man of great wealth. It did not take this Chinaman a year to become one of the warmest members in or around Washington. He was meant for a small New England college, but he ran away from that institution of learning after a short time, deciding that he liked Washington better and would pursue his studies here.

After a month or so here he wrote to his viceregal father that, inasmuch as the schools of Washington were all situated far out in the country, all of the students possessed automobiles, with which they rode out to their respective institutions of learning. Washington's educational institutions are mostly in the heart of the town, and the one which the young Chinaman attended was only four blocks from where he lived. But he was picking up American ways rapidly. By order of his father a neat electric runabout was delivered to the young man. He used it for a few days—long enough to become considerably disgusted with it on account of its inconsequent size. He wrote to his father that such machines were mere toys, and used only by children in Washington. He wanted a real buzz wagon.

A couple of months later one of the finest and largest automobiles then or now in Washington was delivered to the young man. He began to stake all the American girls he knew to rides in it, to the utter neglect of his studies. He went to the Benning races in it during the meetings, carrying hilarious bunches of American youths along with him, and he bet hundreds and even thousands on "scrub" races, drawing hugely on his viceregal parent for funds to make up his losses.

He hired the finest apartment in one of the most sumptuous apartment houses in Washington, furnished it like a section of one of the summer palaces of the Chinese sovereign, and started in to entertain his American friends of both sexes at Lucullan feasts that were sometimes bridged right over from one night to the next and the next. He was having so boisterous a time of it that he received his conge from the manager of the apartment house a few months ago. The matter reached the ears of Chinese official circles in Washington, and the rocketing career of the young man was written about to his dad in China. The youth received his come-home letter from his father a couple of weeks ago, and now is filling the air with lamentations as he packs.

This one, however, is not a fair specimen to cite of the Chinese student in Washington. There are many of them here. They live, for the most part, privately, in the quiet homes of refined people, and when they leave their behavior is nearly always above the average of youths of their age in circumspection.

"Poor-pay" tenants do not, usually, worry about their obligations to you—why should you worry about yours to them? "Get cruel and heartless"—and advertise in The Herald for new tenants!

LAWSON HAS WITHDRAWN

From Life Insurance Policy Holders' Committee, Says Rumor.

New York Feb. 14.—The Evening Post today says that Thomas W. Lawson has withdrawn from the life insurance policy holders' committee, for which he has collected proxies to the number of 50,000, and that definite efforts were made today to get Stuyvesant Fish to head the committee. This committee contains among its members several governors of states and other important men of affairs, especially Western men. Mr. Fish, the Evening Post says, gave no intimation of his decision in the matter, and while the belief prevailed that he would not accept, some of his friends declared that he might find it expedient to work with such a committee, if one should be formed upon proper lines.

Mr. Fish has been very active in the investigation of the affairs of the Mutual Life Insurance company.

WOULD RECOVER CONTRIBUTIONS

New York, Feb. 14.—Recommendations that legal proceedings be instituted to recover campaign contributions made by the New York Life Insurance company were submitted to the trustees of that company today by the special investigating committee headed by Thomas P. Fowler. It is recommended that the money be recovered from such officers and trustees as counsel shall decide are liable therefor.

The report states that there is no record on the board of the company to show that campaign contributions were given, but that information was obtained from the testimony of President McCall and Vice President Perkins on the stand before the Armstrong committee. The following recommendation is then made:

"Your committee, therefore, recommends that special counsel be retained forthwith to institute such legal proceedings as may be necessary to recover the sums so contributed, from such officers and trustees of the company as in the judgment of counsel are liable therefor."

DIVIDEND DECLARED

North Butte Stockholders to Receive $1.25 on March 23.

Amalgamated and United Copper Have a Slump in Market.

The directors of the North Butte Mining company met this morning and declared a quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share, payable March 23. This is the third dividend since the company took possession of the property. On Sept. 30 stockholders received 50 cents a share; on Dec. 21, 75 cents, and on March 23 they will receive $1.25.

When this dividend is paid the company will have distributed, since July 1, the date when its operation of the property began, a total of $1,000,000. Its record is conceded to be one of the most remarkable in mining circles. At $1.25 a share it will be paying at the rate of $5 a year. It is anticipated that further increases in the dividend rate may be expected, for the company is said to be earning better than $12 a share at the present time, and an increase in its production is soon anticipated.

Contrary to the expectations of some persons, the copper stocks which were affected by the merger of the Butte companies were not all strong today. Amalgamated and United Copper, which figured most prominently in yesterday's deal, were weaker.

Amalgamated opened at $116.50, dropped to $115.50, rallied to $116.62½ and then dropped as low as $114. The closing price was $113.75 bid and $114 asked, three points under yesterday's closing price. United Copper opened 3 cents lower at $74.50, went to $75 and dropped to $74. The closing price was $72.50 bid and $73 asked. Anaconda opened at $293 bid, advanced to $294 and dropped to $286.50. The closing price was $287 bid.

North Butte opened at $88.50 and dropped to $87.50. The closing price was $86.50 bid and $87.50 asked.

The Bisbee stocks seemed to awake from the slumber they have been indulging in for some time past. Calumet & Arizona sold at $117.50 and closed at $118 asked; Calumet & Pittsburg was quite active at $35.50 and closed at $35 asked; Denn-Arizona closed at $26 asked; Junction sold at $26 and closed at $25 bid and $26 asked; Lake Superior & Pittsburg closed at $44 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $25 asked, after selling at that price.

Black Mountain closed at $10.50 bid, Keweenaw at $17 bid and $17.50 asked; Warren at $18 asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 asked and Sullivan at $2 asked.

MAKE REPLY TO THE GOVERNOR

The State Capitol Commission Say They Have a Grievance.

St. Paul, Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Surviving members of the board of state capitol commission have addressed a letter to Governor Johnson in reply to the criticisms on the board contained in the report by the public examiner of his investigation of the accounts of the commission.

The members collectively state that they feel a distinct grievance in that they were not in any way consulted by the public examiner, nor were they asked to explain any of the apparent irregularities. They also deny the right of the examiner to question their motives.

The letter then proceeded to take up the criticisms contained in the report and explain them in detail.

The request is made of the governor that he file the communication with the public examiners' report.

THE CHINKS CAN DRINK

Washington Startled by the Amount Visitors Can Carry.

They Take "Booze" Politely and Never Show Effects.

Washington, Feb. 14.—When the imperial Chinese commissioners departed from Washington, after their week's stay here, the officials of the government and officials of the army and navy detailed to show the Celestials around, sought the seclusion of Turkish baths and other restful places and remained under cover for a long time.

They had started out to make the pace, but had finished by following the clip set by the bland and wholly undisturbed Chinamen. Before the week's all hands around was over—long before—they awoke to a realization of how grievously they had underestimated the Chinese capacity and the Chinese ability to stay the full cup distance, to employ a metaphor that yet in this connection has some literalness about it.

There were nights when the day's swirl with the Chinamen all over until the following morn, some members of the convoying party were found standing in shadowy corners, gibbering and feeling tentatively of their heads. One naval officer, a man famous throughout the service for his invulnerability at mess service, who has never been known to miss his part in the chorus of the last of the chanties sung around the board, dropped out altogether upon the party's return from Mount Vernon, a trip made on the Dolphin.

The Chinamen's invariable and inviolable custom of taking theirs neat, unmixed and unchased, wrought upon him so that out of pure regard for the proprieties and his in'ards he was compelled to withdraw. The Chinaman views it as a profanation of the spirit to dilute the same with so contemptible and common a medium as water. To this view, bound by the etiquette of guests, the convoying party had at all times to give heed. Theirs, too, had to be gulped raw, and no wry faces, either, if proper deportment were to be observed. They made good, too, but when it was all over most of them were deeply glad.

But never a wry face made any of the Chinamen. Wassail fitted them as snugly as their caps of silk. None of them ever became even conversationally excited, much less florid. Hovering at or near the font through all the days and dipping thereof even oftener than their pantalooned escorts, they went to bed o' nights with serene, unclouded minds, and woke in the morning with clear eyes and keen appetites. Anybody who doubts that the Chinamen of mandarin rank and above can go the full route should have been in Washington and with the imperial Chinese commissioners last week. Members of the convoying party willingly believe now the scientific suggestion that irrigation was invented in China.

One of the young Chinamen of the eminent party was left behind here. He is the son of a viceroy, and he is to remain in Washington while he prepares, under a tutor, for one of the New England universities. While the youth's funds are unlimited, his viceregal dad being a man of vast wealth, it was decided that during his stay in Washington he should become a guest of a fashionable Washington boarding house. A hotel suite would be too lonely for him, it was thought. Moreover, the boarding house would enable him to pick up some English, of which he knew only a few words when he arrived in San Francisco. So the young man was installed in the star second story front room of the fashionable Washington boarding house.

From the hour that he took his lodging the drivers of delivery wagons began to clang the boarding house bell. They were from clothiers, haberdashers, hatters, shoe dealers and such like, and they were delivering things to the young Chinaman. The young Chinaman had bought about a ton of ready-made things, all in one forenoon. His desire had been to have his American clothing tailor-made, but when he was told that the American clothing could not be delivered at his lodging the same day, he demurred and sought out the ready-to-wear establishments.

His lodging piled almost to the ceiling with American gear fresh from the shops, the young Chinaman, a chubby, saffron lad of 20, who looked classy and ornate in his Chinese habiliments, started to rig himself out in American raiment.

He struck snags from the very outset, but he stood pat and purposed going it alone until the difficulty of the stiff bosomed shirts was encountered. He mistook the stiff bosom for a sort of back-warmer, or shoulder shield, and put it on that way. The scheme not working right as to the buttons and sleeves, he rang the bell to summon somebody who might show him about shirts. The servants being all engaged, the spinster landlady of the boarding house answered the bell herself. When she rapped he called out to her to enter, and enter she did. Her stay was the briefest imaginable—not longer than could be comprised within the space of one look. The young Chinaman, thinking no harm—used to the toilet ministrations of the sex in his own land—was most decollete, wrestling in the middle of the room with the obdurate shirt and muttering things to himself.

The spinster landlady summoned a young American student from one of the upper floors. The American lad went to the young Chinaman's room and showed him how to dress American style. When the toilet was complete the young Chinaman stood forth in his rather ill-fitting double-breasted sack suit, looking very ordinarily and certainly feeling very miserable. He pulled an Alpine hat down over his ears, supposing that to be the right manner of wearing the American top-piece, and he trudged about the room in his new American shoes as if his feet had been incased in iron. His high American collar and askew string necktie worried him greatly, too.

"Don't worry," the young American student said to the Chinese lad. "You're great. You look like a dead game sport."

"Dead game sport—dead game sport—," the young Chinaman gazed mystified at the American youth for a long time as he repeated the words over and over again. Then he squeaked his way in his American new shoes over to a corner of the room and pulled out a huge new dictionary to see what "dead game sport" meant.

When he left the boarding house for the first time diked out in his first set of American togs the Chinese youth looked like somebody bound for the rack. All of the distinction had gone from him. He looked like the kind of an American Chinaman that is seen at a New York race track, only less at ease in his apparceling. He walked around the block three or four times, bent on determining whether he could, after the stroll, find his way back to the boarding house. He got back all right, but he was talking to himself about the misery of American shoes when he let himself in with the latchkey with which, to his delight, he had been provided before going out.

This young Chinaman, by the way, had had his queue cut off and his remaining hair treated to an American hair-cut before he donned American clothing. This caused some curious comment. It was the Occidental impression of those who noticed it that the Chinaman who had his queue removed disgraced himself, his ancestry and his posterity, and stood in danger of losing his head if he returned queueless to China. A young Chinese student who has been in Washington for some years, explains this matter. He says that Chinamen of rank will for the most part become queueless when the Empress Dowager Tsi An dies. She is the one, it seems, who holds out for the queues, while the general opinion of the majority of the upper crust of Chinese is that the queue should go. It is not expected, said the student, that the empress dowager will live many more years, so that young Chinese students coming to the United States for their education can now afford to take a chance and have their queues cut off upon their arrival in this country. When, some years from now, these queueless Chinamen return to their native land—said the student, naively—there will probably be no empress dowager, so it'll be all right.

But it does not take the Chinese youth long to catch onto American ways, means and manners. One of them, who has been here for more than two years, has recently been recalled in anger by his dad, also a viceroy and a man of great wealth. It did not take this Chinaman a year to become one of the warmest members in or around Washington. He was meant for a small New England college, but he ran away from that institution of learning after a short time, deciding that he liked Washington better and would pursue his studies here.

After a month or so here he wrote to his viceregal father that, inasmuch as the schools of Washington were all situated far out in the country, all of the students possessed automobiles, with which they rode out to their respective institutions of learning. Washington's educational institutions are mostly in the heart of the town, and the one which the young Chinaman attended was only four blocks from where he lived. But he was picking up American ways rapidly. By order of his father a neat electric runabout was delivered to the young man. He used it for a few days—long enough to become considerably disgusted with it on account of its inconsequent size. He wrote to his father that such machines were mere toys, and used only by children in Washington. He wanted a real buzz wagon.

A couple of months later one of the finest and largest automobiles then or now in Washington was delivered to the young man. He began to stake all the American girls he knew to rides in it, to the utter neglect of his studies. He went to the Benning races in it during the meetings, carrying hilarious bunches of American youths along with him, and he bet hundreds and even thousands on "scrub" races, drawing hugely on his viceregal parent for funds to make up his losses.

He hired the finest apartment in one of the most sumptuous apartment houses in Washington, furnished it like a section of one of the summer palaces of the Chinese sovereign, and started in to entertain his American friends of both sexes at Lucullan feasts that were sometimes bridged right over from one night to the next and the next. He was having so boisterous a time of it that he received his congé from the manager of the apartment house a few months ago. The matter reached the ears of Chinese official circles in Washington, and the rocketing career of the young man was written about to his dad in China. The youth received his come-home letter from his father a couple of weeks ago, and now is filling the air with lamentations as he packs.

This one, however, is not a fair specimen to cite of the Chinese student in Washington. There are many of them here. They live, for the most part, privately, in the quiet homes of refined people, and when they learn the ways their behavior is nearly always above the average of youths of their age in circumspection.

"Poor-pay" tenants do not, usually, worry about their obligations to you—why should you worry about yours to them? "Get cruel and heartless"—and advertise in The Herald for new tenants!

LAWSON HAS WITHDRAWN

From Life Insurance Policy Holders' Committee, Says Rumor.

New York, Feb. 14.—The Evening Post today says that Thomas W. Lawson has withdrawn from the life insurance policy holders' committee, for which he has collected proxies to the number of 50,000, and that definite efforts were made today to get Stuyvesant Fish to head the committee. This committee contains among its members several governors of states and other important men of affairs, especially Western men. Mr. Fish, the Evening Post says, gave no intimation of his decision in the matter, and while the belief prevailed that he would not accept, some of his friends declared that he might find it expedient to work with such a committee, if one should be formed upon proper lines.

Mr. Fish has been very active in the investigation of the affairs of the Mutual Life Insurance company.

Fears of Damage to Winter Wheat Cause Steady Prices.

Lower Flax Prices Abroad Cause Decline in American Markets.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 14.—Fears of damage to unprotected wheat in the winter wheat country caused by severely cold weather made firm prices today in spite of a decline abroad. The opening was lower, but a rally of fair proportions followed and then a later setback, prices closing practically at yesterday's figures. Liverpjool closed ⅛-¼d lower, Paris ¼c to ¾c lower, Antwerp ¼c higher.

The May option closed a shade off in Duluth, ⅛c higher in Chicago and New York, unchanged in Minneapolis and Kansas City, ⅛c lower in Winnipeg and a shade higher in St. Louis.

Corn was unchanged in Chicago for the May option, but was a little stronger most of the morning. Liverpool was ¼c lower. May oats in Chicago closed ⅛c higher.

Car receipts at Duluth were 31, against 4 last year, and at Minneapolis 250, against 188 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 28, against 192 last year. Chicago received 5 against 12 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 438,000 bus, last year 285,000 bus. Shipments 250,000 bus, last year 100,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 93,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 908,000 bus, last year 540,000 bus. Shipments 444,000 bus, last year 308,000 bus. Clearances were 1,252,000 bus.

Wheat was dull in the local market today. May wheat opened ⅛-¼c lower at 83⅜c, advanced to 84c at 10:28 and dropped to 83¾c at 10:46. The closing price was 83½c, a shade lower than yesterday. July wheat opened ⅛c higher at 85c and was inactive, and closed unchanged at 84⅞c.

Flax was 1¼c lower in Antwerp, and the local flax market was weaker and trading dull. May flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.17¼, advanced to $1.17½, fell to $1.17¼ again and then dropped to $1.16. After that the price rallied to $1.16¼, closing at $1.16¼, a loss of ⅞c from yesterday. July flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.18⅜ and advanced to $1.18½ and fell to $1.17¾. The closing price was $1.17¾, a loss of ¾c from yesterday. September flax was inactive and closed 1c lower at $1.16.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat: To arrive—No. 1 northern, 82½c; No. 2 northern, 80½c; on track, No. 1 northern, 82½c; No. 2 northern, 80½c; May, 83½c; July, 84⅞c. Durum—No. 1, 74c; No. 2, 71c. Flax—To arrive, $1.13¾; on track, $1.13¾; May, $1.16¼; July, $1.17¾; September, $1.16; October, $1.14½. Oats—To arrive, 29c; on track, 29c. Rye, 61c. Barley, 38½-45c.

Cars inspected—Wheat 31, last year 4, oats 6, barley 5, flax 13, last year 6.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

A Fair Demand by Commission Houses Gives Wheat Strength.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—A fair demand by commission houses created a steady wheat market here today despite a moderate decline in prices at Liverpool. Reports from the winter wheat section of the United States were that in many localities where the temperature was severe the ground was almost bare of snow. Fears of damage to the unprotected crop was the chief reason for buying. May opened a shade lower at 85c, and sold up to 85¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 256 cars against 266 cars last week, and 218 cars a year ago.

The market became firmer in the last half of the session on covering by shorts and buying of commission houses. The high point for May was reached at 85½c. The close was firm, with May up ⅛@¼c at 85¼c.

The corn market was firm on an increased shipping demand and receipts which were somewhat below the estimated amount. May opened unchanged to a shade higher, at 43½c to 43½@⅝c, and sold up to 43⅝c. Local receipts were 403 cars with 27 of contract grade.

There was very little trading in corn, and prices showed little change. The high price for May was 43⅝@¾c. The close was steady, with May unchanged at 43½c.

There was little business in oats and the market was dull and steady. May opened unchanged at 30c and sold at 30⅛c. Local receipts were 46 cars.

Active buying by shorts who were stirred to action by an advance of 15c in the price of live hogs, caused a strong provision market. Offerings came principally from local longs. May pork was up 10c, at $15.50. Lard was up 2½c to 5c, at $7.90 to $7.92½. Ribs were 7½c to 10c higher, at $8.17½ to $8.20.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The low point in today's market came at the opening, subsequently rallying ½ cent, and in the closing half hour losing ¼ of the advance. This tells the story of our market today. Business was restricted to a narrow volume, made up altogether by pit trade. The principal item of news was Bradstreet's figures on the visible, showing a decrease of 1,600,000 against an increase of 782,000 year ago, but bullish as this was it had no effect on price making. General character of the market seems to us unchanged. It is a scalping one purely.

Corn and Oats—A dull and narrow trade in the coarse grain list, market range being ⅛ to ¼. The news that in any way could be figured on in changing prices was at a premium. We see nothing in sight to warrant any sustained advance at the moment.

Provisions—This market continues the one bright spot. Trade again on a large scale and notwithstanding profit taking sales, market closed 2½ to 10c higher. There was a better outside demand, with buyers banking on underlying conditions to bring higher prices to the entire list. We continue to advise purchases on moderate reactions.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The large Northwest receipts were again readily absorbed by milling and shipping interests and not a bushel for ten days has gone into stocks for future supplies. Except for some selling when the price was above calls the market was under no pressure. In Chicago there was covering of an important short line by a prominent operator there. Outside markets were all stronger today and with any help from cables the market will work higher and we would again repeat our advice of yesterday, that it is a safe investment for good profits.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: General trade has ruled unsatisfactory, due to indifferent outside demand; receipts on the increase and of good quality. A little better demand locally for general purpose horses, but the market is still sluggish. All classes moving at the following values:

GOING AHEAD WITH REPAIRS

City Will Begin Work on the Lake Avenue Viaduct.

Plans for the permanent repairs to the Lake avenue viaduct were called for by the council last evening, and the city engineering department is now at work preparing them.

Under the recent decision handed down by Judge Cant, the Northern Pacific Railroad company is held liable for the cost of these repairs, but the case will doubtless be carried to the supreme court.

In the meantime the city will go ahead with the repairs to the viaduct, which has been condemned and closed to street car traffic for the last three or four months. By the time the legal controversy is finally settled the repairs will have been made, and if the city is again successful in the final trial, it can collect from the railroad company for the cost of the work.

It is the intention to have the bridge in shape for street car traffic as early in the spring as possible, in order that the summer visitors to Park Point and the increased population there, may not be greatly inconvenienced by being compelled to walk from Superior street to the ferry bridge.

Just a little Kodol after meals will relieve that fullness, belching, gas on stomach, and all other symptoms of indigestion. Kodol digests what you eat, and enables the stomach and digestive organs to perform their functions naturally. Sold by all druggists.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

There Were Some Strong Spots But General Tone Heavy.

Northern Pacific Scored a New Record on Large Buying.

New York, Feb. 14.—Aside from a few prominent features the dealings at the opening of the stock market today were small and the movement of prices sluggish in either direction with declines predominating. Realizing in Amalgamated Copper brought out 6,000 shares which were sold at 116 to 115½, compared with 116⅞ last night, and Anaconda ran off 6½ on varying quotations. New York Central, Union Pacific, Smelting and Locomotive were down large fractions. Northern Pacific rose 1½ and Colorado Fuel and Brooklyn Transit large fractions.

Buying orders were reached in the stocks that had succumbed to pressure at the outset, and there were pretty general recoveries. Confident buying of the Hill stocks and Reading assited materially in improving the general tone of the market. Anaconda rallied 7 points to ½ above yesterday's close, and Amalgamated Copper, 1. Northern Pacific advanced 4 points. Great Northern preferred 2, and Reading 1¼. International Paper preferred and Pump fell a point. The more active features were sold to take profits on the recovery and the market yielded to about the lowest again.

The decline carried Union Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, Southern Railway preferred and National Lead a point under last night. An active demand sprang up for Southern Railway, which carried it up a point, Louisville & Nashville gained 2 and Atlantic Coast Line and American Car preferred . Northern Pacific extended its rise to 5½, the general list remained sluggish and dull. Bonds were easy at noon.

Aggressive operations on either side of the market were confined to a few stocks with slight effect on the general list. A demand for Union Pacific on the dividend declaration and an upward spurt in New York Central carried them up a point each, but their gains were lost when the entire market yielded sharply upon the large gold engagements to Argentina. Amalgamated Copper fell back 2⅛ and Colorado Fuel, Biscuit, Wheeling & Lake Erie and the first preferred 1 to 1½. With the exception of a new fractional fluctuations in the stocks most often dealt in, speculation was practically stagnant. General Electric gave way 2¾ and Northwestern a point. Smelting advanced a point and Pacific Mail 1¾.

Smelting extended its gain to 3¼. But the sagging tendency elsewhere became more pronounced. Amalgamated Copper gave way 3¼, Great Northern preferred slumped to 5½ below last night, Northwestern fell 3, Kansas City Southern preferred 1¾, Illinois Central 1½, International Paper 1¼ and St. Paul, Reading, New York Central, Canadian Pacific, Sugar, American Car, Hide & Leather preferred, Locomotive and Lead 1. The closing was easy and quite active.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed weak. On the theory that the good news was out on the copper merger and Union Pacific dividend, in connection with disappointment over leasing of ore lands of Great Northern to the United States Steel corporation, the market suffered severely from profit-taking, and the bears, finding copper stocks a bit under pressure, did not hesitate to press their advantage. The strong tone in money rates undoubtedly contributed to the desire of long holders to trim sails. Volume of business was not large, which would indicate that as yet the period of urgent selling pressure has not been reached. The close is unsettled and weak enough to warrant looking for somewhat lower prices.

* * *

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has again been erratic and nervous today. Although there were many strong spots the general tone was heavy and net losses were the rule. The copper deal announcement was disappointing and was followed by heavy selling of Amalgamated. The Union Pacific dividend was made 6 per cent as expected and no further plans were announced by the management. There was also disappointment over the absence of news regarding the Great Northern ore deal. Taken as a whole the action of the market was disappointing to bulls.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened steady with large buying in Northern Pacific, which scored a new record on this advance. There was heavy selling in Amalgamated, and this continued throughout the day, and the weakness in this stock had a decided effect on the general list. Toward the close there were rumors that the coal strike situation looked less favorable. Union Pacific declared a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent, but this had little effect on the stock. The market closed weak, at about the lowest prices of the day.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 14.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 2@3 points or about as due on the cables. Some of the local professionals were buying, but New Orleans was relatively heavy; there was some scattered liquidation and a little bear pressure, and prices eased off after the opening to a net decline of about 8 points on the active months. This was followed by a rally to about the opening figures, but there was little snap to the demand and the market in the middle of the morning was quiet.

Spot closed steady, 10 points higher; middling uplands, 11.25; ditto gulf, 11.50. Sales, 1,200 bales. Futures closed steady; closing bid, February, 10.65; March, 10.71; April, 10.80; May, 10.89; June, 10.93; July, 11.00; August, 10.90; September, 10.51; October, 10.40; November, 10.43; December, 10.46.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: As usually happens when the good news is out, stocks are a sale for a turn. Amalgamated was heavily liquidated all day, closing weak at 113¾. The rest of the market was dull and inclined to sag. Copper Range, Mohawk, Osceola, Utah, Franklin and Parrott all showed a point decline. The mystery which has surrounded Amalgamated for a long time past is now cleared up, and for the next few days we shall probably see considerable selling of the stock by people who have been waiting for the deal to be closed.

FINISHES CONTEST.

Case of Cedar Island Lake Lands in the Land Office.

W. H. Shea's side of the case in the contest over Cedar island lake lands in the United States land office, rested at noon, and this afternoon the E. L. Rabb side of the case is putting in rebuttal testimony. It is likely that today will finish this case, but there are two more parcels of land in contest. These will probably be taken up at once. The present case has been on trial ever since a week ago last Tuesday.

Gained Twenty Votes.

The corrected election returns as canvassed by the city council last evening gave George Van Burgess, alderman-elect in the Fourth ward, an additional twenty votes.

He secured ninety-six votes in the first precinct of the ward, instead of seventy-six, and this will increase his plurality over B. J. Cook by twenty votes. Otherwise no changes were made in the returns.

Articles of Incorporation

We, the undersigned, hereby associate ourselves together for incorporation under and pursuant to the provisions of Title Two (2), Chapter Thirty-four (34), of the General Statutes of Minnesota for the year 1894, and for that purpose do subscribe and agree to the following Articles of Incorporation:

ARTICLE I.

The name of this corporation shall be Duluth Cedar Company. The general nature of its business shall be to purchase, own, cut, transport, improve, sell, convey and transfer timber and forest products of all kinds; to manufacture and deal in lumber and timber products, and to buy, hold, and sell such property, real, personal and mixed, as may be necessary, incident to or convenient in the conduct of its said business.

The principal place of transacting the business of this corporation shall be Duluth, Minnesota.

ARTICLE II.

The time of the commencement of this corporation shall be February 15th, 1906, and the period of its continuance thirty (30) years from that date.

ARTICLE III.

The amount of capital stock of this corporation shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00), which shall be paid in as required by the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE IV.

The highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which this corporation shall be subject shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00).

ARTICLE V.

The names and places of residence of the persons forming this association for incorporation are as follows:

Albert Baldwin, residing at Duluth, Minnesota.

Herbert A. Dancer, residing at Duluth, Minnesota.

Marie Cameron, residing at Duluth, Minnesota.

ARTICLE VI.

The government of this corporation and the management of its affairs shall be vested in a Board of three Directors, who shall be elected annually by the stockholders at the annual meeting of said stockholders, to be held at ten o'clock in the forenoon, upon the first Monday of November in each year, and in a president, a vice-president, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall be chosen annually by the Board of Directors from their number immediately after the annual meeting of the stockholders; and the offices of president and treasurer, or of secretary and treasurer, may be held by one and the same person.

In case of any vacancy occurring in the Board of Directors or in the offices, the same shall be filled by election by the remaining members of the Board at any regular meeting of the Directors or at any special meeting called for that purpose, or at the first meeting of the corporation, if there shall then be any vacancy or vacancies.

Until the first meeting of said corporation and until their respective successors are elected, Albert Baldwin, Herbert A. Dancer and Marie Cameron shall constitute the first Board of Directors; and Albert Baldwin shall be president, Herbert A. Dancer shall be Vice President, and Marie Cameron shall be Secretary and Treasurer.

ARTICLE VII.

The capital stock of said corporation shall be divided into five hundred (500) shares of $100.00 each.

Reduce Your Fat.

Rengo Fruit Rapidly Reduces Excess Fat Without the Aid of Tiresome Exercises or Starvation Diet.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY IT.

This Illustration Shows What Rengo Fruit Has Done in the Way of Reducing Fat.

Rengo Fruit is a product of South America and it has been recently discovered to possess some very remarkable properties which will reduce excess fat and build up the strength and health of anyone who eats it regularly for a short time. It is a product of nature, delicious to the taste and safe and harmless in all its properties. It will not injure the digestive organs as so many drugs and medicines do.

Rengo Fruit will positively reduce surplus fat rapidly and do so without harm to the subject. It is very palatable and pleasant to eat. It is prepared in a highly concentrated form and is convenient to carry in the pocket so one can have it with him at all times.

Rengo Fruit requires no exhausting exercises or starvation dieting to help it out as so many of the so-called fat remedies do. You can go right ahead and attend to your regular daily duties. It compels proper assimilation of the food and sends nutriment into the muscles, bones and nerves and builds them up instead of piling it up in the form of excess fat. It is not a medicine in any sense of the word, but a mild, pleasant, harmless fruit put up in concentrated form in small packages for convenience.

If you suffer from excess fat send your name and address today for a trial package of Rengo Fruit mailed free in plain wrapper. Fill out free coupon below.

SEARCHING FOR IDEAS

Secretary Bevis and Architect German Start on Eastern Trip.

Will Secure Best Features of Y. M. C. A. Buildings for Duluth.

For the purpose of examining the different Y. M. C. A. buildings of the country and gaining ideas for the new building to be constructed in Duluth, Phil Bevis, secretary of the association, and F. G. German, the architect for the new building, have started on a trip through the East.

From Duluth they go to Chicago, where they will look over the handsome main building of the association there. They will stop at South Bend, Ind., where a beautiful new building costing $250,000 has just been completed. The greater part of the money for it was contributed by the Studebaker brothers, and it is said to be one of the most complete structures of its kind in the world.

From South Bend they will proceed to New York, Brooklyn, Washington, D. C., Providence, Boston, Buffalo and Cleveland, stopping for a day in each of these cities and taking notes of the style and arrangements of the different buildings.

While in these cities they will also inspect the equipment of the different athletic clubs, in order to gain ideas for the arrangement of the gymnasium, locker rooms and swimming bath in the new building to be constructed here. Mr. Bevis is himself an architect, and the two men should be able to gather the most feasible and desirable plans for the Duluth building, taking the best features of all the old structures and combining them. They will be gone about ten days, and are expected back in the city on Feb. 24 or 25.

As soon as they return the work of drawing up the detailed plans and specifications for the new building will be at once commenced, and the association will then probably advertise for bids. It is hoped to have the preliminaries completed so that actual work on the foundations for the new structure can be begun early in the spring.

The trip and the consultation with other association secretaries, should enable the association board of directors to expend the $178,000 subscribed, to the best possible advantage, and give Duluth as good a building as can be secured for the money.

LETTER BY MITCHELL

On Dolan Matter is Read to Pittsburg District Convention.

Says Dolan Deliberately Lied in His Statement Concerning Him.

Pittsburg, Feb. 14.—The adjourned session of the Pittsburg district miners' convention reassembled today with President Patrick Dolan presiding. Vice President Lewis read a letter from President Mitchell to the delegates dealing with existing controversies. Mr. Mitchell says:

"The question involved is, 'Has the regular district convention of the mine workers authority to impeach and remove any official of district organization, who has been charged with malfeasance in office?'

"The president of the district alleges that inasmuch as he was elected by a popular vote of the miners of the district, he cannot be removed from office, except by the same power. I hold that a regular district convention has full power to impeach and remove any official who may be charged with neglect of duty, disobedience in office, or violation of instructions.

"The meeting now being held in Pittsburg is the regular annual convention of the miners of that field; the delegates there represent and speak for the membership; they are the supreme power. They may amend their laws, remove their officers or take any other action that is not in conflict with the constitution of the international organization, or in violation of the laws of the country.

"Entertaining these views as to the power of the district convention, I have no other choice than to decide in accordance therewith.

"It is not my intention at this time to made reply to the statement issued—although not written—by Mr. Dolan, which appeared in the various papers, more than to say that his allegation that I said to him during the Pittsburg conference of the American Federation of Labor, that I should be well satisfied with a renewal of the present agreement, is a deliberate, malicious and premeditated falsehood. No statement was made by me to him at Pittsburg or anywhere else.

"If I had ever entertained a sentiment in favor of the renewal of the present agreement, I should have communicated that fact to my colleagues in the international office or to the members of the international executive board. I certainly should not have gone to Pittsburg and divulged my feelings to one who has for years been unfriendly to my administration. Since the adjournment of the international convention I have refrained studiously from discussing publicly the affairs of the organization and have allowed to pass unchallenged many aspersions and reflections upon myself. It is my intention, however, at the proper time and in the proper place to reply to all of these.

JOHN MITCHELL."

At the close of the letter the convention adjourned to allow the delegates and officers to attend the final hearing in court on the temporary injunction secured last week by President Dolan against the delegates, restraining them from interfering with his powers as president.

New Spring Suits

And the Last of the Winter Garments.

A welcome to new suits and spring coats and lowered prices to the last handful of the winter garments. That sums up the splendid attractions of the suit section tomorrow.

The new suits that have just come fresh from the deft touch of skilled tailors deserve the special consideration of women who are accustomed to having their garments made to order. The tailoring is in every way equal to the best custom tailored garments, which as every woman knows, means so much to the correct hang of the skirt this season.

We call especial attention to the high class workmanship in the moderate priced suits—the beautiful lines in the Etons and pony coats and the perfect fit of the skirts. The materials are unusually "Smart" and the style and tailoring is ordinarily found only in suits costing from $10 to $15 more. We don't believe you have seen as stylish suits sold so moderately. We are also showing new early season coats in three lengths—in light coverts and black cheviots.

All Winter Suits and Coats at Half Price and Less.

Long Gloves

There is such an unprecedented demand for 16-button gloves that makers and importers are refusing to accept new orders for immediate delivery. Women who follow fashion's decree should make a note of this—and be early prepared.

GLACE KID GLOVES—splendid qualities in pearl gray, white and light mode—equal in style, finish and pliability any 16-button kid glove that you have seen sold in Duluth at $3.50—the Gray-Tallant Co. price..... $2.50

SPECIAL VALUE IN CASHMERE GLOVES—warm fleeced winter gloves in black with long wrists—have sold regularly at 35c a pair—tomorrow we will sell the last of the lot at— the pair 23c

New Shantung Silks

The real article—almost everlasting. It launders easily and no starching is required—fine for waists, suits, underwear and dresses and will be much used this season. In natural color only—33-inch width, $1.25 a yard—19-inch width 75c

New Wash Silks

The same weave as a good quality of Habutai silk, printed in neat checks and stripes—colors, blue, green and black—will wash perfectly. Sure to be popular for waists, sacques and girls' dresses—19 inches wide—the yard.. 50c

Warm Underwear Much Reduced

If you want underwear for yourself or the children you will save money by coming here tomorrow and taking advantage of the special values of which these four items are representive.

INSPECTOR GOES AWAY

Veteran Grain Man Leaves to Make Home in Minneapolis.

Members of the Board of Trade Remember E. A. McDowell.

E. A. McDowell, who has been a private grain inspector in Duluth since 1883, and who is about to depart for Minneapolis, where he will make his home in the future, was presented with a grain sack containing $254 in gold on the floor of the board of trade just before the close of the market today.

The money was given by the members of the board of trade, for whom the veteran inspector has worked for so many years and the presentation speech was made by George Spencer, president of the board. At a signal from him, trading ceased and the traders gathered about Mr. McDowell.

"You have inspected a great many sacks since you came to Duluth," said Mr. Spencer, after expressing the esteem of the board members, "and we have always placed great faith in your judgment. Sometimes it coincided with ours and sometimes it did not, but we have always felt that you did your best.

"And now that you are about to leave us and spend the rest of your days in Minneapolis, we would like to give you another sack for your inspection. It will not take you long to inspect it, and we know you will find it Duluth No. 1 hard."

Then Mr. Spencer thrust the sack containing the money and a list of the donors into the inspector's hands, amid the loud cheers of the traders. Mr. McDowell seemed deeply touched, murmured his heartfelt thanks and said good-bye to all of the men with whom he has come in contact during his long residence in this city.

Mr. McDowell's son-in-law died early this morning in Minneapolis, and the veteran grain man goes there to take charge of his feed store. He is more than 80 years of age, but the years that have warped his body have not touched his heart or his soul. He came to Duluth from Rochester, Minn., more than twenty years ago and was one of the first inspectors of the Duluth board.

COLDEST DAY OF SEASON AT SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

Sioux City, Feb. 14.—Today is the coldest of the season, 13 deg. below zero.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 14.—Six inches of snow fell during the blizzard last night, and the mercury sank to zero. It is predicted by the weather bureau that the mercury will be 6 to 8 below zero tonight.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—The cold wave which visited Iowa reached its climax at Sioux City today, that station reporting a mark of 13 below zero. A fall of 40 deg. in twelve hours here put the mercury to 2 below.

St. Paul, Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ten deg. below zero was the official temperature record for St. Paul and vicinity today.

Maki Wanted to Die.

Gust Maki, an inmate of the county jail, who is suffering from an attack of delirium tremens, attempted suicide yesterday by hanging himself with a strap taken from his canvas bed. Maki stood erect and strapped his head against the wall of his cell. His labored breathing attracted the attention of his cellmates, and they compelled him to desist. Maki has worked in the woods and on various railroad contracts all over the country. He was sent up to the county jail to serve time for drunkenness.

GOVERNOR IS COMMENDED

For His Action in Prosecuting Alleged Timber Trespassers.

St. Paul, Feb. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson today received a communication from the citizens of Park Rapids in which his action in reference to the prosecution for alleged timber trespasses in Northern Minnesota is heartily indorsed. The letter is written by W. W. Wooley and says:

"I have been asked to inform you that at a special mass meeting of the citizens of this city held last Saturday, it was voted to pledge to yourself and to Messrs. Finney and Batcheller our hearty co-operation and support in bringing about the immediate prosecution of all parties guilty of trespassing upon state lands in this and adjoining counties. Realizing as we do that sufficient evidence is here to convict, if taken up before the cases outlaw."

Governor Johnson replied heartily commending the action of the citizens.

BEACON AT MICHIGAN CITY IS WASHED AWAY.

Michigan City, Ind., Feb. 14.—One of the three beacon towers at the entrance to the harbor here was swept away today during a severe storm on the lake. The tower, which was recently completed, was thirty-eight feet in diameter at the base, and constructd of steel on a concrete foundation. It is believed the new fog signal has been badly damaged. It cannot be reached until the storm subsides.

CAN COLLECT FROM BROTHER

Municipal Court Jury Gives Happy Abalon Judgment.

Happy Abalon was given a verdict of $176.40 against his brother William, by the municipal court jury, this morning.

The case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon, and a sealed verdict returned, the verdict being opened this morning by Judge Windom.

Happy sued his brother for about $300 for money claimed to have been loaned, and goods advanced to start his brother in business. William claimed he had returned the money and had paid for the goods. The evidence of the two parties in the case was flatly contradictory, but the jury evidently believed that Happy's story was better substantiated than that of his brother.

UNION MEETINGS.

West End Series Very Successful---Close This Week.

A union meeting will be held this evening at the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, corner of Twenty-first avenue west and First street, at 7:45 o'clock and the sermon will be delivered by Rev. A. Edstam, pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church. The pastors of other West end churches will be present and also the officers of the Salvation Army, all of whom have been co-operating in the union meetings that have been in progress for several weeks. Tomorrow evening the meeting will be held in the Swedish Mission church and Rev. H. K. Madsen will be the preacher. Friday evening the meeting will be in the First Swedish Baptist church with Rev. John A. Anderson as speaker, and Saturday evening in the Salvation Army hall with the same speaker.

The meetings will close this week. They have been very successful and the churches have been overcrowded most of the time. There have been evenings when as many as 200 people were unable to gain entrance to the church where the meeting was being held. More than 100 conversions have been professed.

TWO SMALL FIRES.

Department Has Two Calls to Lakeside and the East End.

The fire department had two runs this morning, being called almost simultaneously to Lakeside and Twenty-third avenue east and Fifth street.

The Lakeside fire was at the home of Charles A. Pond, Fifty-eighth avenue east and Oneida street. Some little damage to the interior of the house was done by the smoke and flames, but the building itself was only scorched.

WANTED FIGURES KEPT SECRET

Packers Testify That They So Instructed Garfield's Agents.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—John M. Chaplin was on the stand when the hearing in the packers' case was resumed today. He was examined by Attorney Hincs for the packers in reference to a meeting of the board of directors of Swift & Co., which was held for the purpose of deciding what information had been given out to the agents of Commissioner Garfield.

The witness asserted that Mr. Swift told Mr. Durand, who represented the government at the plant of Swift & Co., that he desired all information to be held secret, as under a change of administration the figures relative to the business might fall into unwelcome hands.

Mr. Durand replied that Commissioner Garfield would decide what information would be given out.

District Attorney Morrison on the cross examination plied the witness closely with questions regarding the manner in which the evidence was given out by the packers, but did not produce anything beyond what had been detailed in the direct examination.

"Did you refuse to furnish the government with price lists?" asked Mr. Morrison.

"No," replied Mr. Chaplain, "we gave them the lists they asked for. There are other price lists than the wholesale price lists, but the government only asked for those."

Special Agent Robertson, who conducted the inquiry into the business of Swift & Co., stepped to the side of the district attorney and held a whispered conversation with him.

"Are you certain that the government did not ask for your confidential price lists?" asked the district attorney.

"Yes, I am sure."

On redirect examination Mr. Chaplin said that he had never known of such a thing as a confidential price list in the Swift plant.

COMPANIES MUST PROVIDE CUSPIDORS.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 14.—The state board of health has adopted a rule requiring companies owning and operating steam and electric cars, not confined wholly within one municipality, to provide cuspidors, and declaring it dangerous to public health to expectorate upon the wall or floor of any such car except in proper provided receptacles, and a circular letter has been sent to the various railroads of the state, stating the board's action.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Is Illinois Act Providing for Garnishment of Official Salaries.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Judge Richard S. Tuthill, in the circuit court of Cook county, today rendered an opinion declaring unconstitutional the act of the Illinois legislature of 1905, making the salaries of officials and employes of cities, towns and counties, subject to garnishment. The decision was given in a case where the salary of alderman Joseph Badenoch of this city had been attached for an unpaid judgment.

NEW ATLANTIC LINER DEVONIAN GOES ON THE ROCKS OFF SCITUATE

Big Steamer Missed Entrance to Boston by Four Miles.

Had But Four Passengers Who Were Rescued by Life Savers.

The Boat is Valued at $500,000 and Cargo at $700,000.

Scituate, Mass., Feb. 15.—Overrunning her distance in a heavy snow storm the Leyland line passenger and freight steamer Devonian, which sailed from Liverpool on Feb. 5, with four passengers and a crew of eighty-two, struck on the ledges at this place about 1 o'clock this morning. The officers of the Devonian had been trying to sight Minot's Ledge light house before entering Boston harbor, but missed it by four miles and brought up on the rocks. At daylight she was lying among the rocks and about 500 feet from the short. A volunteer crew headed by Capt. Stanley of the Third Hill life saving station, his own men being off duty, rowed to the steamer. Capt. Ridley, of the Devonian, informed the life savers that his steamer was tight and in little danger, though hard on the ledge and he asked that tugs be summoned from Boston. The volunteers returned to the beach to telephone for the tugs' assistance. Later they went back again to be near the Devonian in case of emergency. The passengers were not taken off then. During the forenoon the snow storm changed to rain. There was no immediate danger of the ship breaking up. The Devonian is one of the largest and newest trans-Atlantic liners.

The passengers are J. W. D. Page, wife and daughter and W. C. Gillibrand. The Devonian is valued at $500,000 and the cargo at $700,000.

FIRE CHIEF DROPS DEAD

William T. Cheswell of Boston Dies While Responding to Alarm.

Boston, Feb. 15.—While responding to an alarm of fire today, Chief William T. Cheswel lof the Boston fire department was stricken with heart trouble and died while being taken to the hospital. Chief Cheswell had been connected with the department since 1882 and was one of the best known fire fighters in the country. He was 63 years old.

THE MORPHINE HABIT

Responsible for Troubles of Former Cass Lake Physician.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Word comes from Minneapolis that Dr. R. F. Whetstone, a former physician and surgeon of this place, was arrested there on a charge of vagrancy. He sprung a surprise on the court by producing a roll of bills containing over $190, and wanted to know if the charges against him would stick. Whetstone pleaded not guilty to the charge of vagrancy, and told the court that for some time he had been addicted to the morphine habit and that he was willing to go to any institute and take the cure for the habit, providing the charge was dropped. This was done and Whetstone will take the cure.

When Dr. Whetstone lived here, he had much trouble. He finally had Charles Bryant, a conductor on the Great Northern, arrested for attempting to shoot him, Whetstone had a bullet hole in his arm, and Bryant was bound over to the grand jury. The jury failed to find an indictment against Bryant and the case never came up for trial in the district court.

UNIFORM SYSTEM

Of Reporting to the Census Bureau May be Adopted.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The conference of city comptrollers and auditors which closed yesterday resulted in the adoption of a a resolution on which, as a basis, it is believed all the cities of the nation may be brought to a uniform system of accounting and reporting to the census bureau.

The plan is to send the chief statistician or other representative of the bureau to address meetings in various sections of the country which will be called from time to time in cities where the municipal officers from a given section can be congregated. At these meetings the system of uniform accounting will be explained and blanks placed in the hands of the officials.

WOMAN ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Feb. 15.—Mrs. Henry C. Thiede of Glidden, while returning from a meeting at a church, was thrown from a buggy as the result of an accident to the gearing. Her neck was broken and she died instantly.

FIRE AT CLEVELAND.

Cleveland, Feb. 15.—Fire today destroyed a four-story brick building of the Glidden Varnish company, entailing a loss of $100,000. Several tanks of varnish exploded during the fire and a number of firemen barely escaped with their lives.

A DECISIVE STEP SOON

Crisis in Franco-German Controversy is Near at Hand.

American and Italian Ambassador Trying to Effect Compromise.

Algeciras, Feb. 15.—The situation of the Franco-German controversy over the vital points of the proposed Moroccan reforms remains unchanged, although a feeling prevails among the delegates that some decisive step is not far off. They are particularly cautious just now, in view of the alternate waves of optimism and pessimism and of the fact that the inability, thus far, to reach an accord, does not warrant overconfidence. But at the same time it is conceded that the continuance of the Franco-German pour parlers shows that the critical stage has not yet been reached, and that the adjournment, yesterday, of the sessions of the conference until Saturday, gives an opportunity for an active renewal of the efforts to reconcile the French and German contentions.

Ambassador White, chief of the American delegation, in his efforts to find a compromise, has not varied from the course which he has followed since the conference began. With the cooperation of the Marquis Visconti Venceta, head of the Italian mission, the American ambassador has already put forward several tentative plans for an adjustment, which had been unsuccessful owing to the unyielding attitude of one side or the other. These efforts continue, and the neutral delegates believe they will ultimately succeed, although recognizing the increasing difficulty as one proposition after another to secure mutual acceptance fails.

BARK GIVEN UP FOR LOST

The Drumcraig is Now 100 Days Overdue at Manila.

San Francisco Fe,b. 15.—The British bark Drumcraig, which sailed from Portland on Sept. 22 last for Manila, and is now 100 days overdue at that port, is given up as lost, having been advanced to the rate of 90 per cent on the overdue list. She was commanded by Capt. Neil McCallum, whose wife accompanied him on the voyage. The Drumcraig was a four-masted bark, 1,979 tons register, built in Barrow in 1885. She was owned by the Barneson-Hibber company of this city.

She had a crew of twenty men on board, whose names are as follows: F. W. Checkler, first officer; R. Gillies, second mate; J. Terry, carpenter; J. D. Stafford, W. Helme, Minsuffo Nagato, Herbert Potter, J. McClelland, George Butler, H. Thompson, Owen O'Neil, O. H. Lamm, rank Lutter, John McConnell, Julius Iless, T. Fredericks, T. Strelenbert and Guy Duckett, able seamen; also N. Barry, cook and steward, and T. Cockle, cabin boy.

THE ARCHDUKE JOSEPH WANTS TO AVOID TROUBLE

Vienna, Feb. 15.—In view of the impending dissolution of the Hungarian chamber and the consequent interregnum of absolutism, arising from the failure of the coalition to take the responsibility of forming a government on terms which the emperor-King is willing to sanction, Archduke Joseph has taken a significant step. He commands a cavalry regiment stationed at Budapest and has asked for eight weeks leave of absence, in order, it is said, to avoid taking part in any military measures which it may be decided to adopt against Hungary.

OLD LOVE AT WEDDING.

Longworth's Former Fiancee and Her Brother Will Attend.

Cincinnati, Feb. 15.—One of the most beautiful girls at the Longworth-Roosevelt wedding at the White House Saturday, will be a former fiancee of Nicholas Longworth, Miss Miriam Frences Bloomer of Cincinnati. Miss Bloomer is tall and statuesque, a great contrast to the future Mrs. Longworth, who is slight. Miss Bloomer's parents are prominent and wealthy. Miss Bloomer's gift to the bride will be an artistic bit of sterling silver.

The love affair of Representative Longworth and the beautiful Cincinnati girl was the sole topic of conversation in society about two years ago, when suddenly Miss Bloomer broke the engagement. She will be accompanied to Washington by her brother, Ralph Bloomer, a famous football player.

Congressman Longworth's gift to his bride has been sent to Wishington, having been made to order by a Cincinnati firm. It is a necklace of diamonds in a novel mounting. The stones are exactly matched and of about three-quarter karat weight each.

BEAVERS ILL IN JAIL.

Washington Feb. 15.—George W. Beavers, the former postoffice department official, who on May last pleaded guilty to conspiracy in connection with postal contracts and who was sentenced to imprisonment for two years, is ill at the jail here, where he is awaiting transfer to Moundsville, W. Va., prison. He is suffering from a malady which will necessitate a surgical operation.

COAL OPERATORS AND MINERS SAID TO BE IN A CONCILIATORY MOOD

Every Effort Possible Will be Made to Avoid a Strike.

The Scale Conference Between the Two Bodies Has Begun.

Some Concessions Are Likely to be Made by Each.

New York, Feb. 15.—The propositions to be presented to the mine operators by the union representatives today have not been made public, but more or less accurate reports of their nature have leaked out. It has been learned from various sources that among the proposals to be submitted are those for an eight-hour day without any reduction in wages for all employes paid by the hour, day or week; a uniform wage scale in the three anthracite districts for the different classes of employes, adequate compensation for "dead work" performed by contract miners, reconstruction of the board of conciliation, an increase in wages of from 10 to 20 per cent for all company men, the adoption of a system by which coal shall be paid for by weight wherever practicable and the recognition of the union.

The union mine workers in the anthracite region have never been entirely satisfied with the award of the strike commission. The men gained considerable through the award, but they feel that they did not receive all they were justly entitled to. The principal awards made by the commission in 1903 briefly stated were:

Ten per cent increase in wages for all contract miners; eight-hour day without any reduction in pay for engineers employed in hoisting water.

Five per cent increase in wages for engineers and pump men other than those engaged in hoisting water.

Eight-hour day for firemen without reduction in wages.

Nine-hour day for all employes paid by the hour, day or week, except those mentioned above.

A conciliation board of six—three representing the miners and three operators—to settle disputes growing out of different interpretations of the commission's award.

A sliding scale giving all employes an increase of 1 per cent in compensation for each increase of 5 cents in the average price of coal sold in New York harbor above $1.50 a ton f. o. b.

Before they went into conference today the operators and the representatives of

THE TEXAN STILL ON FIRE.

Honolulu, Feb. 15.—The decks and sides of the steamer Texan show increased heat and as yet the efforts to suppress the fire in her hold have been practically without result. Some cargo is being taken out of the other end of the vessel, away from the fire, but it is hot. The situation is believed to be serious, as it is impossible to approach or to definitely locate the fire.

MONUMENT TO AMERICANS DEDICATED AT EL CANEY.

Santiago De Cuba, Feb. 15.—Cuban gratitude, American cordiality and official dignity marked the celebration of the unveiling yesterday afternoon of the monument at El Caney, in honor of the Americans who lost their lives during the siege of Santiago. The American officers enthusiastically praised Governor Yerro, Mayor Bacardi and the Cuban military officers and citizens for their hearty reception. Many thousands of people crowded the El Caney road, but in spite of this there was no serious blockade, the police management being perfect, and the road equal to a city boulevard. At the battlefield the Fifth artillery and Cuban artillery bands alternated in playing military and other airs.

Dolan Says Labor Leader's Statements Are Barefaced Lies.

President of Pittsburg Miners Replies to the Mitchell Letter.

Pittsburg, Feb. 15.—When the Pittsburg miners' convention resumed its sessions today, President Patrick Dolan made a caustic address to the delegates, replying to the letter of President John Mitchell, which was read to the delegates yesterday by National Vice President Lewis. President Dolan said in part:

"I want to say that Mitchell's statements in his letter are barefaced lies. He claims that the statement in the newspapers last Monday was not written by me. I most emphatically say that it was.

"I want to go on record by saying that the present wage scale is the best the miners ever had, and we did not get it by selling out to the operators. John Mitchell and J. D. Ryan are not the only men in the country who understand the actual situation."

THREE KILLED AT JANESVILLE

By Head-End Collision of Trains on Northwestern Road.

Janesville, Wis., Feb. 15.—Three trainmen dead, one dying, three injured, six passengers hurt, were the casualties due to a head-end collision between a special freight and a De Kalb passenger train on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad two miles south of Janesville last night.

The dead:

THOMAS LAFFERTY of Baraboo, engineer.

JOSEPH MAHER, fireman, Janesville.

BERMISH, fireman, Baraboo.

Conductor Rapeck of the freight train is dying. Conductor George Devans of Janesville was cut about the head and shoulders. Engineer Briscoe of Baraboo has a crushed foot. Mrs. Crossby of Sycamore and five other passengers were injured, but not severely. The wreck was due, it is said to a snowstorm.

TO DOUBLE COMMISSIONS.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—The board of trade today decided to double the rate of commission to be paid to brokers on all transactions in the buying and selling of grain. The rate heretofore has been one-eighth of 1 per cent and it will hereafter be one-fourth of 1 per cent. The vote stood 557 for the increase and 488 against it.

WILL SUE NICARAGUA

Arrest of William Albers Has Cost Him Over $20,000.

Finally Released Through Intervention of the United States.

New York, Feb. 15.—William F. Albers, the American citizen who was imprisoned in Nicaragua last summer and served about six months of a three years and a half sentence, arrived in New York today on the steamer Panama from Colon, and told his story of the arrest, conviction and release.

Albers was released after efforts had been made in his behalf by the United States government and was given fifteen days in which to leave the country.

"I did not resist arrest," Albers said today. "I ran up the American flag on my house when an attempt was made to break in. I protested to American Minister Merry, but so far as I can understand, he did not do much. I make no charges but I want to see the letters he wrote regarding the case. If it had not been for the publicity the press gave the affair, I would not have been tried for two years. The trial was a farce and the judge, Mabarrios, told the jury that if it did not find me guilty, they would be led from the jury room to the jail.

"There was no boat leaving until one day after my time leave expired. I was forced to make my escape by rowing out to this steamer in a small boat.

"I am going to Washington to try and secure justice. The case has already cost me $20,000, and I shall fight the Nicaraguan government for its recovery."

RESOLUTIONS OF CONFIDENCE

Passed by Unionist Conference in Favor of Balfour.

London, Feb. 15.—With Former Premier Balfour's formal entry into the ranks of the "whole hoggers," as the Chamberlainites have dubbed the deal, public interest in today's meeting of the Unionists at Lansdowne house was discounted and little was left for the assemblage to consider but questions of party organization and a general plan of campaign. The presence of the duke of Devonshire, former president of the council, however, with his free food followers, was considered in some quarters as giving promise of enlivening the proceedings. From 500 to 600 Unionists attended the meeting, which lasted an hour and a half. No reporters were admitted, but it is known that the proceedings were amicable. The duke of Devonshire, however, showed no disposition to yield his views on fiscal reform. On all other questions he will give willing support to the party. A resolution of confidence in Mr. Balfour was passed.

AN UPRISING IS AT HAND

Recent Rioting at Shanghai a Precursor of Coming Events.

San Francisco, Feb. 15.—C. E. Young, an eye witness of the recent riot in Shanghai, arrived here yesterday from the Orient on the steamer Doric. He tells of the intense anti-foreign sentiment that exists among the Chinese and predicts that an uprising will take place within the next few months.

Young says that 200 Chinese were killed in the riot in Shanghai and that only the presence of the foreign gunboats at Shanghai prevented the wholesale slaughter of Americans and Englishmen. Young represents a local firm, but, because of the boycott, he was unable to transact any business with the Chinese merchants. Young said:

"The rioting in Shanghai had its inception because of the action of the British consulor court. I was in Shanghai on Dec. 18, the day of the outbreak and remained there for the few days following, during which all foreigners were compelled to carry rifles in order to protect themselves from harm.

"It seems that a Chinese woman, accused of trafficking in slave girls, was hauled before the consular court. She was found guilty and sent to jail. The Chinese protested and immediately a riot was started. The rioters ran from street to street searching for foreigners. Revolvers and rifles were used by the Americans, and the Chinese answered with volleys of stone. Many were hurt by the flying missiles, but I heard of no fatalities among the Americans or English. One English woman was attacked and dragged by the hair.

"I know of an instance where a party of foreigners were driven to bay by the mob and were compelled to kill

TO CONDEMN HALF BLOCK

County Board Unanimously Decides Upon Building Location.

Half Block Between First and Second Streets is Chosen.

County Attorney Directed to Institute Condemnation Proceedings.

The half block at Fourth avenue west, between First and Second streets, was selected by the county board this afternoon as the site for the new courthouse to be erected by St. Louis county. The condemnation of the site has been directed.

This action was taken after the board convened this afternoon and without any comment. The matter had been discussed at the morning session and it was understood when the board adjourned at noon that sites would be looked at during the interval.

"Resolved, That it is necessary to acquire for St. Louis county, Minnesota, to be used as a site for a courthouse and jail and buildings for county offices, situated in the city of Duluth, state of Minnesota, to wit: lots 65, 67, 69 and 71, West First street, and lots 66, 68, 70 and 72, West Second street, all in Duluth Proper, First Division, according to the plat thereof in the office of the register of deeds in and for St. Louis county.

"Be it further resolved, that this board does hereby find as a fact that this board is unable to purchase said land at a reasonable price.

"Be it further resolved, that the county auditor of this county deliver a certified copy of this resolution to the county attorney, whose duty it shall be to institute proceedings in condemnation of said land, as required by chapter 7 of the general laws of Minnesota of 1905.

"Resolved, further, that any and all resolutions heretofore adopted by this board in conflict with the terms of this resolution, be, and they are hereby, in all respects, rescinded."

Commissioner Kugler was not present at the afternoon session when the resolutions were passed, and they received the affirmative votes of all of the other members of the board.

Following the passage of the resolutions the board adjourned and the members of the courthouse commission then met and organized by choosing W. C. Agnew chairman. The resolutions of the board selecting a site were confirmed.

The site which the board has determined upon is one of the most central in the city. The government building is situated in the same block and the government is very likely to some day acquire the half of the block when the county does not take.

DOUBLE HANGING AN EDENSBURG, PA.

Two Wife Murderers Pay Extreme Penalty of the Law.

Edenburg, Pa., Feb. 15.—James Hauser and Stephen Fellows were hanged here today for murders resulting from domestic troubles. Because of differences Mrs. Hauser had left her husband and had returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barringer. On the night of Jan. 4, 1905, Hauser broke into the house, murdered his wife and her mother, dangerously wounded his sister-in-law and attempted to kill his father-in-law. The weapon used was a Filipino bolo.

Fellows shot and killed his wife and wounded his young son at the railroad station in Barnesboro, Sept. 15, 1904. The married life of the Fellows had been unhappy and Mrs. Fellows accompanied by her son, decided to go to friends in Connecticut. While waiting for the train, her husband appeared at the station and immediately opened fire on them.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

Are Favored by British Premier and Chancellor of Exchequer.

London, Feb. 15.—While declining to make rash promises, Premier Campbell-Bannerman and Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith this morning declared themselves in entire sympathy with a deputation which called on them to advocate the establishment of a national system of old-age pensions. The deputation urges that the scheme should be comprehensive and include all citizens, men or women, the money being found by means of imperial taxation. The premier and chancellor of the exchequer approved of the suggestions. The only difficulty at present, they pointed out, was the question of ways and means. They thought, however, that with greater care in the administration of the finances, it would not be impossible to find money for such a beneficent scheme.

WEST DULUTH

CLUB WILL TAKE IT UP

Ramsey Street Dock Matter Will Receive Attention Friday Night.

Arrangements for Annual Banquet Will Also be Started.

The West Duluth Commercial club will hold a meeting tomorrow night and considerable business will come up for consideration. Among other things the matter of the Ramsey street dock will be discussed. It is quite likely that a committee will be appointed to try to push the matter.

West Duluth business men are determined to have this dock no matter what steps they will have to take. Mr. Simonds of the West Duluth Land company, they believe, is acting fairly in the matter and they appreciate the consideration he shows in trying to get a right-of-way for the city to the proposed dock site. So far as his company is concerned the city can have a right-of-way over its property but part of the land over which the street must be arranged is on property belonging to other people. In case these do not want to grant the city an outlet to the water front, the sentiment generally seems to favor condemnation proceedings, but it is desired to avoid this expedient, if possible.

The grocers and others who get their goods from up town at the wholesale houses say that if the dock is put in they can have their goods transported much easier than they can now by wagon for the roadways to West Duluth are bad. The iron works and the brass foundry will be benefited greatly by water service, for they can more easily transport their jobs from outside, for instance from the Superior shipyards. The public sentiment regarding the docks in West Duluth is getting pretty much worked up.

At the club tomorrow night the matter of the annual banquet will also be discussed and committees will probably be appointed to arrange for it.

ALMOST A TRAGEDY.

The explosion of a range at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Boyd, 301 North Seventy-first avenue west, nearly caused a tragedy. The baby was asleep in the cradle in the kitchen at the time and Mrs. Boyd was working. Mr. Boyd was away from home. It is thought that gas from pitch blocks used as fuel caused the explosion.

At any rate suddenly the kitchen was filled with noise, smoke, flame and flying stove.. Mrs. Boyd seized the baby out of the cradle and got out of the house. The fire department had to be called and saved the house. The kitchen was pretty badly burned.

Revival Services Continue.

The revival services of the various West Duluth churches were well attended last evening. Tonight services will be held in them again. At Asbury M. E. church Rev. Thomas Grice will preach on "Paul's Glory," and at the Westminister Presbyterian church, Rev. S. A. Marsh will preach on "Acknowledging Sin." The pastor of the church, Rev. W. J. Lowrie will also speak.

West Duluth Briefs.

Mrs. William Tusken of 412 Fifty-eighth avenue west is able to be about now after her sickness. Her 4-year-old daughter, Irene, who suffered a relapse of measles is also recovering.

Miss Janie Hicks of New Duluth was taken home from the Duluth hospital today. She has to undergo amputation of the second toe on her right foot, that member being afflicted with a tumor.

The shoot between two teams of the West Duluth Rod and Gun club planned for Washington's birthday has been postponed because the trap is frozen. Capt. Holmberg says it will take place later in the spring.

Jewelry repairing—Hurst, 301 Central.

F. M. Hicks of the Coolerdge Lumber company of New Duluth was in town today and says he never saw the cedar business as brisk at this time of year as it is now. Already this month thirty car loads of cedar ties and posts have been shipped.

Mrs. Tusken, mother of William Tusken of 412 Fifty-eighth avenue is here visiting her son's family.

William Keeler is in from Swan River.

Walter Evered is back from the Sault.

John Mullery, formerly of West Duluth, is here from Portland, Ore., visiting friends.

The Woodmen's poverty social will take place this evening at Great Eastern hall.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Sennott took place this morning from St. James Catholic church. Interment was in Calvary cemetery.

Rev. C. A. Aldeen has returned from Cloquet.

I wish to announce to the public that I have purchased the interest in the cigar and confectionery store of Myre Bros., held by Ed Myre, and am now conducting the business as sole owner. John Myre, 5413 Ramsey street.

UNDER WHICH KING.

"The More Postum the More Food--the More Coffee the More Poison.

The president of the W. C. T. U. in a young giant state in the Northwest, says:

"I did not realize that I was a slave to coffee till I left off drinking it. For three or four years I was obliged to take a nerve tonic every day. Now I am free, thanks to Postum Food Coffee.

"After finding out what coffee will do to its victims, I could hardly stand to have my husband drink it; but he was not willing to quit. I studied for months to find a way to induce him to leave it off. Finally I told him I would make no more coffee.

"I got Postum Food Coffee, and made it strong—boiled it the required time, and had him read the little book, "The Road to Wellville,' that comes in every pkg.

"Today Postum has no stronger advocate than my husband! He tells our friends haw to make it, and that he got through the winter without a spell of the grip and has not had a headache for months—he used to be subject to frequent nervous headaches.

"The stronger you drink Postum the more food you get; the stronger you drink coffee the more poison you get." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

LOOK INTO CHARGES

Painters' Union Investigating Delegate Brandt's Accusations.

Result of Political Squabble in Recent City Election.

As a result of the charges and accusations made at the meeting of the Trades Assembly last Friday evening by Delegate Brandt from the painters' union, a committee has been appointed to look into the matter.

The disturbance came through the recent municipal election not going as Mr. Brandt desired. Some meetings before the election Mr. Brandt, who lives in the Sixth ward, tried to get the assembly to indorse C. J. Skoglund, the Republican candidate for alderman in that ward as against Charles Mork. He claimed that Mr. Skoglund signed the labor party platform and Mr. Mork did not. The assembly, however, did not refuse to mix in. Mr. Mork was elected.

Mr. Mork at the last meeting of the Trades Assembly claimed that Mr. Mork had never signed the union labor platform and neither had Mayor Cullum and yet that some of the labor leaders had supported both of these. Mr. Brandt became quite violent in the matter and one or two backed him up, but the majority of the assembly was clearly against him.

Now, however, the painters' union has taken the matter up and will look into the charges. Should it be found a fact that Mr. Brandt's statements are correct, the union may take some action of censure against the leaders who supported those who did not sign the platform. On the other hand, should it be found that Mr. Brandt has misrepresented things, the chances are that the union will talk plainly to him. The committee consists of W. B. Bradley, W. H. Vernon and Mr. Berverk. They will probably report to the union at its meeting next Tuesday night.

RACE PROGRAM OUT.

State Fair Will Have Larger Races Than Ever Before.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—The state fair race program has just been completed by Secretary E. W. Randall.

It is the largest program ever made up in Minnesota.

For 1906 the great $5,000 pacing and trotting races of St. Paul and Minneapolis days are retained on the program and they are supplemented by two $2,500 races, eight $1,000 races, two $500 and a good bunch of running events.

The fastest races of the week come on Monday and Saturday, while the St. Paul purse for 3:13 pacers is on Tuesday and the Minneapolis 2:21 trot on Friday.

Entries close on July 2 and horses may be declared out on or before Aug. 15. A new feature this year will be consolation races in any classes presenting over twelve starters. The purses will be 10 per cent and only non-winners in the main race will be eligible. Hopples are barred in all trotting races and in the 3.00 class pace.

CONVICTED MURDERER ESCAPES FROM PRISON.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 15.—Burton Jarrell, convicted of murder, escaped today from jail, while Garfield Hicks, who was sentenced to death for being implicated in the same crime, and is almost certain to be hanged, refused to flee. There was some doubt as to Jarrell's guilt, and the supreme court was considering his appeal.

A Curse Removed From Mother and Baby

Two Cured in One Family.

Your D. D. D. remedy is certainly a wonderful medicine, for we have used it in our family with great success. My wife suffered with a severe case of Eczema on her face, which soon spread until it covered all her face. Soon her eyes began to swell so much she could not hold them open, and her face burned as if on fire. When my baby was about a year old it contracted a similar case. I could not bear to see them suffer and at once procured a bottle of D. D. D. The relief it gave them was wonderful and I could see them both improve with each application. In three week's time they were both cured completely, and what has proved permanently. Hoping that you can show this to some one who is looking for a cure for Eczema, and if they have any doubts about it have them write me. ALBERT MULTER.

Portsmouth, Ohio, May 26, 1903.

Reader! This is more than medicine talk. It is humanity to enlighten sufferers about this. The most virulent skin diseases are conquered—every time—in all cases—without any exception—all cleared away in a few weeks—by the brilliantly clever new skin prescription.

D. D. D.

Its work is hardly equaled by any other wonders of modern medical practice.

WE GUARANTEE THIS TO BE TRUE.

Enough has been proven to us—regarding the above case and hundreds of others—to demonstrate beyond all question whatever that any of the known forms of skin disease—any eruption or breaking out—must quickly give way and disappear under the influence of this prescription (known as "D. D. D."). Cases of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Ring Worm, Psoriasis, Barber's Itch, Acne, etc., some of twenty years' standing have been cleared off and permanently cured in a few weeks. In many cases from one to five years have elapsed and there has been no returning sign of the disease. Hundreds of cases cured since the preparation has been placed on sale show no sign at all of the previous affliction, and we fully believe they are permanent cures.

WE PROVE IT.

To convince you we have arranged with the D. D. D. Co., so that any sufferer from any skin disease can get direct from the D. D. D. Co.'s laboratory a large free sample of D. D. D. prescription together with 32-page new pamphlet on skin disease and free advice on your particular case from the world's greatest skin specialists.

SIOUX CITY HAS A $75,000 FIRE

Two Women Were Nearly Suffocated by the Smoke.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—A special to the Dispatch from Sioux City, Iowa, says: Six business concerns in the Cohen-Magoun block, Fourth and Douglas streets, and adjacent buildings, lost heavily by fire early this morning, which started in the millinery store of Mrs. Nellie Sauter. The latter, with her companion, Miss L. Shindeic, were nearly suffocated when rescued by firemen. The total loss will reach $75,000, more than half covered by insurance. The Chicago Newspaper union, the Sioux City Journal and a half dozen other big concerns were endangered, from the fact that the fire engines refused to work and the pressure from the hydrants was not strong. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained.

The principal losses were: Cohen-Magoun block, $30,000; Kloster & Duncan, drugs, $15,000; Mrs. Luther, millinery, $3,000; Mrs. Nellie Sauter, millinery, $2,500; Nick Jearas, confections, $2,000; Al Rygg, saloon, $3,000; Georges Bakery, $3,000; office property on second floor and lodge paraphernalia on third floor, $12,000.

LIPTON CUP DUE FRIDAY

Famous Trophy Will be Put on Exhibition in Duluth.

Hoped It Will Influence Local Yachtsmen to Enter Races.

Duluth yachting enthusiasts and others who are at all interested in the sport will this week be given an opportunity to see the famous Lipton cup, given by Sir Thomas Lipton to the Interlake Yachting association, and to be sailed for annually by its members. The cup will arrive in the city tomorrow and will be put on exhibition in the window of F. D. Day & Co., jewelers, 315 West Superior street. Duluth men hope that the beauty of the costly trophy will act as an additional incentive to local yachtsmen in the efforts being made to have Duluth represented in the races for the cup, which will be sailed at Chicago under the auspices of the Columbia Yacht club on Aug. 18, 20 and 21.

The cup stands thirty-nine inches in height and is valued at $4,000. It is by far the most magnificent trophy in the United States, and yachtsmen who saw all the royal and emperor's cups at Kiel the past year, say that the Lipton cup is the most beautiful in existence on either hemisphere.

Silversmiths declared it to be the best work ever seen in this part of the world, and dwell especially on the colored enameled work, which, it is said, cannot be done in this country. The trophy was made by the Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Co., Regent street, London, and each piece of silver in it bears the hall mark of the British government, showing the generation in which the work was executed.

The trophy is in the form of a vase, having for handles two finely moulded figures holding in one hand a wreath of laurel and in the other a palm branch, representing "Victory" and "Good Will." The lid is surmounted by a trophy composed of four prows of Roman galleys supporting a globe with an American eagle above all.

The front has a panel surrounded by a laurel wreath, water lilies, etc., with a representation of two racing yachts under full sail, executed in bold relief. The reverse has a similar panel containing the shield of the United States, enameled in colors, and surmounted by a wreath of laurel. The stem and foot are decorated with water plants and laurel. The pedestal is of ebonized wood, having at each end a solid silver winged horse, indicative of speed.

The cup is really the property of the Columbia Yacht club of Chicago, and the winner is allowed to keep it for a period extending over one year, but no matter how many times any other club may win it, the trophy does not become its property for all time.

Any yacht of 21-foot cabin class, regularly enrolled in a yacht club which is in good standing, has the right to compete without time allowance, provided notice of entry is filed with the secretary of the Columbia Yacht club ten days before the date set for the first race.

CROOKSTON'S PROBLEM.

Public Improvements Delayed by Defeat of New Charter.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city of Crookston is face to face with a most serious financial proposition, owing to the fact that the charter presented by the charter commission at the election a year ago next April was defeated by the people. The result is that it is improbable that a single dollar's worth of public improvements can be contracted for this year. About $35,000 worth of asphalt paving was to have been laid this summer in the fashionable residence portion of the city. The old charter, however, provided specifically that no public improvements can be made unless the money to pay for the city's share of the work is in hand. In the above work the city's share is about $5,000, and at the present time there is but about $5,000 available for that work in the public improvement fund, and but little more will be received. The result is that the city council is up against it.

NOTES OF BOYS' DEPARTMENT

Members Will Hold Last Sleighing Party of the Season.

The outing committee of the boy's department have arranged for the last sleigh ride of the season Friday evening. The sleighs will leave the boys' department building at 7:30 and the boys will go to Mrs. Webster's for supper on the return. All members of the department are invited and they are asked to telephone their names in as soon as they are sure of going.

Saturday afternoon the boys will go for a bobbing party, leaving the building at 2:30.

The afternoon class of the manual training club opened yesterday and the evening class will meet again tonight.

The Minstrel Show club met last night and had their first rehearsal. The show will be put on some time in April.

At the Sunday lunch the delegates from the state convention will give their report.

EXAMS IN MARCH.

Positions Offered by Uncle Sam Tried for Next Month.

Notices have been sent out for civil service examinations to be held in Duluth for several government positions during March. On the 7th of that month examinations will be held for the position of copper and brass worker in departmental service at $720 per year, and that of laboratory assistant in the bureau of standards at a salary of $1,000 a year.

A marine fireman is wanted on the steamer General Batchelder at Fort Morgan, Ala., and the job will pay $540 a year. The examination for it will be held on March 14.

On the 21st and 22nd the position of medical clerk in the bureau of pensions will be tried for. This is for men only and will pay $900 per annum.

FISH CULTURE STATION.

For State of Minnesota Approved by the House Committee.

Washington, Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house committee on merchant marine and fisheries today ordered a favorable report on a bill appropriating $15,000 for the purchase of a site and the establishment of a fish culture station in Minnesota.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP-- RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

La Grippe Is Epidemic Catarrh.

LA GRIPPE spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are all subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

La grippe is well-named. The original term, la grippe, is French, but it has been shortened by the busy American to one word "grip."

Without any intention of doing so, a new word has been coined which describes the disease exactly.

The ailment clings to the patient as tenaciously as if some terrible giant had clutched him in a fatal clasp.

Men, women and children—whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of this terrible monster.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip caught you? If so, read the following letters.

These testimonials will show you the quickest and best means of ridding yourself of this tenacious disease and its after-effects.

Suffered Twelve Years From After-Effects of La Grippe.

Mr. Victor Patneaude, 328 Madison St., Topeka, Kas., a well-known carpenter and member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength—but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again.

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system.

"My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe—Pe-ru-na, the Remedy That Brought Relief.

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

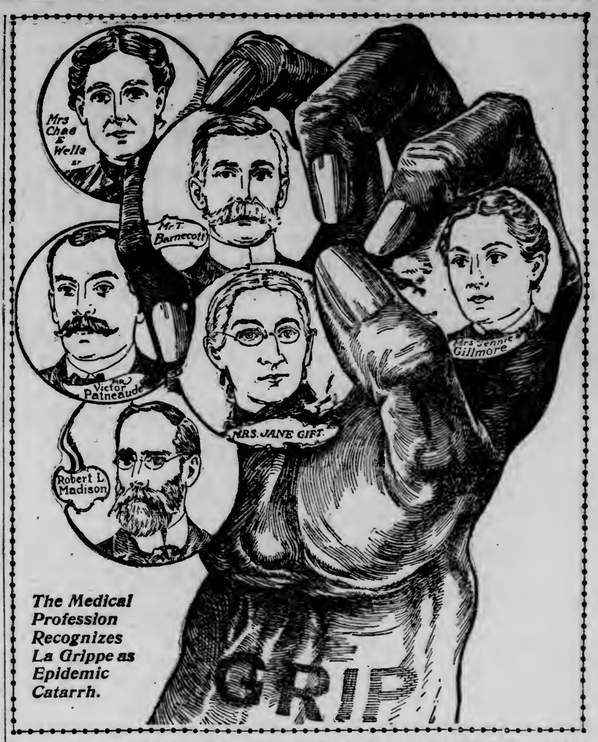

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time and at little expense.

"Every time I take a cold, I take some Peruna, which makes me well again.

"I also advised it for my daughter who was so ill with prostration that she could not follow her trade of dress making.

"A bottle of Peruna made such a change in her that she has been able to follow her trade ever since.

"I also induced a young lady, who was all rundown and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to follow her trade of tailoring.

The Medical Profession Recognizes La Grippe as Epidemic Catarrh.

"I can recommend Peruna for all such who are ill and require a tonic."

Systemic Catarrh, the Result of La Grippe. Pe-ru-na Receives Credit for Present Good Health.

Mrs. Jennie W. Gilmore, Box 44, White Oak, Ind. Ter., formerly Housekeeper for Indiana Reform School for Boys, writes:

"Six years ago I had la grippe, which was followed by systemic catarrh.

"The only thing I used was Peruna and Manalin, and I have been in better health the last three years than for years before.

"I give Peruna all the credit for my good health."

Pe-ru-na—A Tonic After La Grippe.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wells, Sr., Delaware, Ohio, writes:

"After a severe attack of la grippe, I took Peruna and found it a very good tonic."

Judge Horatio J. Goss, Hartwell, Ga., writes: "I had a severe spell of la grippe which left me with systemic catarrh. A friend advised me to try Peruna. The third bottle completed the cure."

"Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe."

Robt. L. Madison, A. M., Principal of Cullowhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education. He has for nearly six years been teaching in Painter.

He is a writer of occasional verse and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines,—religious, educational and secular.

In speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says:

"I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe.

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils.

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse, and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried."

For special instructions, address Dr. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

CROWE MUCH INTERESTED

In Arguments of Attorneys in His Trial for Kidnapping.

Omaha, Feb. 15.—Judge Sutton's court room in the criminal branch of the district court was crowded today to its capacity when arguments were begun in the trial of "Pat" Crowe, charged with the Cudahy kidnaping. Half a hundred women seated within the rail were interested listeners. Crowe himself, dressed in the height of style, sat quietly near his attorneys, taking an unusual interest in the address of John P. English, his chief counsel. Near him sat a number of relatives and friends, most of whom have been daily visitors at the trial.

Judge Sutton has not placed a limit on the arguments and it is probable that they will not be concluded until some time today.

NO COMPROMISE ON HEPBURN BILL

Members of Senate Committee Far Apart on Its Provisions.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The senate committee on interstate commerce was in session about two hours today, instead of continuing all day, as had been agreed upon yesterday. There was barely a quorum present at any time, and much less than a quorum most of the time. The adjournment was taken for the reason that it appeared at the outset that nothing could be accomplished by discussing the Hepburn bill, and that there could be no purpose in deliberating until tomorrow, when the bill is to be voted upon in committee, unless the large number of proposed amendments prevents.

The court review feature is the wall between the forces, and it is plain that there can be no compromise of the factions.

Bills with and without the court review feature will be reported from the committee, and it appears that the former will have a majority of the committee supporting it. Senator Aldrich, one of the five Republican members holding out for an amendment to the Hepburn bill, was at the White House today in conference with the president. It is known that he discussed the necessity of the court review amendment, and as the result of this conference it is expected a new amendment will be adopted, or that a selection will be made from one of those pending, on which these senators will unite.

CHINESE COMMISSION

Says There Will be No Trouble With the United States.

New York, Feb. 15.—The Chinese imperial commission, which has been studying American institutions, sailed today on the steamer Bleucher for Hamburg. As the steamer was leaving the dock, every member of the commission waved a small American flag and were cheered by several scores of Chinese on the wharf. Speaking for Tai Hung Chi and Tuan Fang, the leaders of the party, one of the secretaries said before the Bleucher sailed that any difference between China and the United States will be amicably settled and that there will never be any serious trouble between the two countries.

DEPOSITORS ARE SHOCKED

To Find Deed of Bank Property in Dead President's Name.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 15.—Receiver John B. Wilton of the Peoples Savings bank today discovered the deed to the bank building, and which had been missing since the minister president killed himself. While the building was bought by the funds of the bank, the deed was made out to George H. Simmons only, thus revealing an effort to swindle his partner, Rev. E. L. Kelly, who owned a half interest with him. The discovery of the deed has caused consternation among the 900 depositors of the bank. It had been regarded as the chief asset, its value being placed at $40,000. As it is in the name of Dr. Simmons, the widow will receive her dower rights, and the personal creditors of the estate an allowance of their claims, the residue, if any, going to the depositors pro rata.

ALLEGED MINING SWINDLE.

Arizona Man Arrested on Charge of Embezzling $300,000.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 15.—O. A. Pease, who was recently arrested at the Quartz Site Mining company, in Yuma county, by Sheriff Livingston of that county, has been taken to Yuma. Pease is a well-known mining man, and the charge against him is embezzlement of $300,000. The arrest is made at the instigation of H. J. Beemer of New York. Allegations are that Beemer and his associates were induced to invest vast sums of money in a mining enterprise, by fraudulent methods, the results not proving to be what was represented. There has been previous civil litigation in the case.

MATOS IN PARIS.

Revolutionary Leader Says Venezuelan Troubles Will be Adjusted.

Paris, Feb. 15.—The presence in Paris of Gen. Matos, who headed the last revolution in Venezuela against President Castro, leads to reports that Matos might again take measures to stir up an insurrection. He is receiving no recognition, official or otherwise, but the French government is aware of his presence here. Matos today denied there was any truth in the reports that he is organizing a revolution.

Referring to the Franco-Venezuelan difficulty, Gen. Matos said he thought the affair, which originated in a trifling difference between President Castro and M. Taigny, would be settled without coercion or armed intervention.

WEST DULUTH

CLUB WILL TAKE IT UP

Ramsey Street Dock Matter Will Receive Attention Friday Night.

Arrangements for Annual Banquet Will Also be Started.

The West Duluth Commercial club will hold a meeting tomorrow night and considerable business will come up for consideration. Among other things the matter of the Ramsey street dock will be discussed. It is quite likely that a committee will be appointed to try to push the matter.

West Duluth business men are determined to have this dock no matter what steps they will have to take. Mr. Simonds of the West Duluth Land company, they believe, is acting fairly in the matter and they appreciate the consideration he shows in trying to get a right-of-way for the city to the proposed dock site. So far as his company is concerned the city can have a right-of-way over its property but part of the land over which the street must be arranged is on property belonging to other people. In case these do not want to grant the city an outlet to the water front, the sentiment generally seems to favor condemnation proceedings, but it is desired to avoid this expedient, if possible.

The grocers and others who get their goods from up town at the wholesale houses say that if the dock is put in they can have their goods transported much easier than they can now by wagon for the roadways to West Duluth are bad. The iron works and the brass foundry will be benefited greatly by water service, for they can more easily transport their jobs from outside, for instance from the Superior shipyards. The public sentiment regarding the docks in West Duluth is getting pretty much worked up.

At the club tomorrow night the matter of the annual banquet will also be discussed and committees will probably be appointed to arrange for it.

SIOUX CITY HAS A $75,000 FIRE

Two Women Were Nearly Suffocated by the Smoke.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—A special to the Dispatch from Sioux City, Iowa, says: Six business concerns in the Cohen-Magoun block, Fourth and Douglas streets, and adjacent buildings, lost heavily by fire early this morning, which started in the millinery store of Mrs. Nellie Sauter. The latter, with her companion, Miss L. Shindele, were nearly suffocated when rescued by firemen. The total loss will reach $75,000, more than half covered by insurance. The Chicago Newspaper union, the Sioux City Journal and a half dozen other big concerns were endangered, from the fact that the fire engines refused to work and the pressure from the hydrants was not strong. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained.

The principal losses were: Cohen-Magoun block, $30,000; Kloster & Duncan, drugs, $15,000; Mrs. Luther, millinery, $3,000; Mrs. Nellie Sauter, millinery, $2,500; Nick Jearas, confections, $2,000; Al Rygg, saloon, $3,000; Georges Bakery, $3,000; office property on second floor and lodge paraphernalia on third floor, $12,000.

UNDER WHICH KING.

"The More Postum the More Food--the More Coffee the More Poison.

The president of the W. C. T. U. in a young giant state in the Northwest, says:

"I did not realize that I was a slave to coffee till I left off drinking it. For three or four years I was obliged to take a nerve tonic every day. Now I am free, thanks to Postum Food Coffee.

"After finding out what coffee will do to its victims, I could hardly stand to have my husband drink it; but he was not willing to quit. I studied for months to find a way to induce him to leave it off. Finally I told him I would make no more coffee.

"I got Postum Food Coffee, and made it strong—boiled it the required time, and had him read the little book, "The Road to Wellville,' that comes in every pkg.

"Today Postum has no stronger advocate than my husband! He tells our friends haw to make it, and that he got through the winter without a spell of the grip and has not had a headache for months—he used to be subject to frequent nervous headaches.

"The stronger you drink Postum the more food you get; the stronger you drink coffee the more poison you get." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

LOOK INTO CHARGES

Painters' Union Investigating Delegate Brandt's Accusations.

Result of Political Squabble in Recent City Election.

As a result of the charges and accusations made at the meeting of the Trades Assembly last Friday evening by Delegate Brandt from the painters' union, a committee has been appointed to look into the matter.

The disturbance came through the recent municipal election not going as Mr. Brandt desired. Some meetings before the election Mr. Brandt, who lives in the Sixth ward, tried to get the assembly to indorse C. J. Skoglund, the Republican candidate for alderman in that ward as against Charles Mork. He claimed that Mr. Skoglund signed the labor party platform and Mr. Mork did not. The assembly, however, did not refuse to mix in. Mr. Mork was elected.

Mr. Mork at the last meeting of the Trades Assembly claimed that Mr. Mork had never signed the union labor platform and neither had Mayor Cullum and yet that some of the labor leaders had supported both of these. Mr. Brandt became quite violent in the matter and one or two backed him up, but the majority of the assembly was clearly against him.

Now, however, the painters' union has taken the matter up and will look into the charges. Should it be found a fact that Mr. Brandt's statements are correct, the union may take some action of censure against the leaders who supported those who did not sign the platform. On the other hand, should it be found that Mr. Brandt has misrepresented things, the chances are that the union will talk plainly to him. The committee consists of W. B. Bradley, W. H. Vernon and Mr. Berverck. They will probably report to the union at its meeting next Tuesday night.

RACE PROGRAM OUT.

State Fair Will Have Larger Races Than Ever Before.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—The state fair race program has just been completed by Secretary E. W. Randall.

It is the largest program ever made up in Minnesota.

For 1906 the great $5,000 pacing and trotting races of St. Paul and Minneapolis days are retained on the program and they are supplemented by two $2,500 races, eight $1,000 races, two $500 and a good bunch of running events.

The fastest races of the week come on Monday and Saturday, while the St. Paul purse for 2:13 pacers is on Tuesday and the Minneapolis 2:21 trot on Friday.

Entries close on July 2 and horses may be declared out on or before Aug. 15. A new feature this year will be consolation races in any classes presenting over twelve starters. The purses will be 10 per cent and only non-winners in the main race will be eligible. Hopples are barred in all trotting races and in the 2:30 class pace.

CONVICTED MURDERER ESCAPES FROM PRISON.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 15.—Burton Jarrell, convicted of murder, escaped today from jail, while Garfield Hicks, who was sentenced to death for being implicated in the same crime, and is almost certain to be hanged, refused to flee. There was some doubt as to Jarrell's guilt, and the supreme court was considering his appeal.

A Curse Removed From Mother and Baby

Two Cured in One Family.

Your D. D. D. remedy is certainly a wonderful medicine, for we have used it in our family with great success. My wife suffered with a severe case of Eczema on her face, which soon spread until it covered all her face. Soon her eyes began to swell so much she could not hold them open, and her face burned as if on fire. When my baby was about a year old it contracted a similar case. I could not bear to see them suffer and at once procured a bottle of D. D. D. The relief it gave them was wonderful and I could see them both improve with each application. In three week's time they were both cured completely, and what has proved permanently. Hoping that you can show this to some one who is looking for a cure for Eczema, and if they have any doubts about it have them write me. ALBERT MULTER.

Portsmouth, Ohio, May 26, 1903.

Reader! This is more than medicine talk. It is humanity to enlighten sufferers about this.

The most virulent skin diseases are conquered—every time—in all cases—without any exception—all cleared away in a few weeks—by the brilliantly clever new skin prescription.

D. D. D.

Its work is hardly equaled by any other wonders of modern medical practice.

WE GUARANTEE THIS TO BE TRUE.

Enough has been proven to us—regarding the above case and hundreds of others—to demonstrate beyond all question whatever that any of the known forms of skin disease—any eruption or breaking out—must quickly give way and disappear under the influence of this prescription (known as "D. D. D."). Cases of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Ring Worm, Psoriasis, Barber's Itch, Acne, etc., some of twenty years' standing have been cleared off and permanently cured in a few weeks. In many cases from one to five years have elapsed and there has been no returning sign of the disease. Hundreds of cases cured since the preparation has been placed on sale show no sign at all of the previous affliction, and we fully believe they are permanent cures.

WE PROVE IT.

To convince you we have arranged with the D. D. D. Co., so that any sufferer from any skin disease can get direct from the D. D. D. Co.'s laboratory a large free sample of D. D. D. prescription together with 32-page new pamphlet on skin disease and free advice on your particular case from the world's greatest skin specialists.

LIPTON CUP DUE FRIDAY

Famous Trophy Will be Put on Exhibition in Duluth.

Hoped It Will Influence Local Yachtsmen to Enter Races.

Duluth yachting enthusiasts and others who are at all interested in the sport will this week be given an opportunity to see the famous Lipton cup, given by Sir Thomas Lipton to the Interlake Yachting association, and to be sailed for annually by its members. The cup will arrive in the city tomorrow and will be put on exhibition in the window of F. D. Day & Co., jewelers, 315 West Superior street. Duluth men hope that the beauty of the costly trophy will act as an additional incentive to local yachtsmen in the efforts being made to have Duluth represented in the races for the cup, which will be sailed at Chicago under the auspices of the Columbia Yacht club on Aug. 18, 20 and 21.

The cup stands thirty-nine inches in height and is valued at $4,000. It is by far the most magnificent trophy in the United States, and yachtsmen who saw all the royal and emperor's cups at Kiel the past year, say that the Lipton cup is the most beautiful in existence on either hemisphere.

Silversmiths declared it to be the best work ever seen in this part of the world, and dwell especially on the colored enameled work, which, it is said, cannot be done in this country. The trophy was made by the Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Co., Regent street, London, and each piece of silver in it bears the hall mark of the British government, showing the generation in which the work was executed.

The trophy is in the form of a vase, having for handles two finely moulded figures holding in one hand a wreath of laurel and in the other a palm branch, representing "Victory" and "Good Will." The lid is surmounted by a trophy composed of four prows of Roman galleys supporting a globe with an American eagle above all.

The front has a panel surrounded by a laurel wreath, water lilies, etc., with a representation of two racing yachts under full sail, executed in bold relief. The reverse has a similar panel containing the shield of the United States, enameled in colors, and surmounted by a wreath of laurel. The stem and foot are decorated with water plants and laurel. The pedestal is of ebonized wood, having at each end a solid silver winged horse, indicative of speed.

The cup is really the property of the Columbia Yacht club of Chicago, and the winner is allowed to keep it for a period extending over one year, but no matter how many times any other club may win it, the trophy does not become its property for all time.

Any yacht of 21-foot cabin class, regularly enrolled in a yacht club which is in good standing, has the right to compete without time allowance, provided notice of entry is filed with the secretary of the Columbia Yacht club ten days before the date set for the first race.

CROOKSTON'S PROBLEM.

Public Improvements Delayed by Defeat of New Charter.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city of Crookston is face to face with a most serious financial proposition, owing to the fact that the charter presented by the charter commission at the election a year ago next April was defeated by the people. The result is that it is impossible that a single dollar's worth of public improvements can be contracted for this year. About $35,000 worth of asphalt paving was to have been laid this summer in the fashionable residence portion of the city. The old charter, however, provided specifically that no public improvements can be made unless the money to pay for the city's share of the work is in hand. In the above work the city's share is about $5,600, and at the present time there is but about $5,000 available for that work in the public improvement fund, and but little more will be received. The result is that the city council is up against it.

NOTES OF BOYS' DEPARTMENT

Members Will Hold Last Sleighing Party of the Season.

The outing committee of the boy's department have arranged for the last sleigh ride of the season Friday evening. The sleighs will leave the boys' department building at 7:30 and the boys will go to Mrs. Webster's for supper on the return. All members of the department are invited and they are asked to telephone their names in as soon as they are sure of going.

Saturday afternoon the boys will go for a bobbing party, leaving the building at 2:30.

The afternoon class of the manual training club opened yesterday and the evening class will meet again tonight.

The Minstrel Show club met last night and had their first rehearsal. The show will be put on some time in April.

At the Sunday lunch the delegates from the state convention will give their report.

EXAMS IN MARCH.

Positions Offered by Uncle Sam Tried for Next Month.

Notices have been sent out for civil service examinations to be held in Duluth for several government positions during March. On the 7th of that month examinations will be held for the position of copper and brass worker in departmental service at $720 per year, and that of laboratory assistant in the bureau of standards at a salary of $1,000 a year.

A marine fireman is wanted on the steamer General Batchelder at Fort Morgan, Ala., and the job will pay $540 a year. The examination for it will be held on March 14.

On the 21st and 22nd the position of medical clerk in the bureau of pensions will be tried for. This is for men only and will pay $900 per annum.

FISH CULTURE STATION.

For State of Minnesota Approved by the House Committee.

Washington, Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house committee on merchant marine and fisheries today ordered a favorable report on a bill appropriating $15,000 for the purchase of a site and the establishment of a fish culture station in Minnesota.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP-- RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

La Grippe Is Epidemic Catarrh.

LA GRIPPE spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are all subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

La grippe is well-named. The original term, la grippe, is French, but it has been shortened by the busy American to one word "grip."

Without any intention of doing so, a new word has been coined which describes the disease exactly.

The ailment clings to the patient as tenaciously as if some terrible giant had clutched him in a fatal clasp.

Men, women and children—whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of this terrible monster.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip caught you? If so, read the following letters.

These testimonials will show you the quickest and best means of ridding yourself of this tenacious disease and its after-effects.

Suffered Twelve Years From After-Effects of La Grippe.

Mr. Victor Patneaude, 328 Madison St., Topeka, Kas., a well-known carpenter and member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength—but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again.

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system.

"My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe—Pe-ru-na, the Remedy That Brought Relief.

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

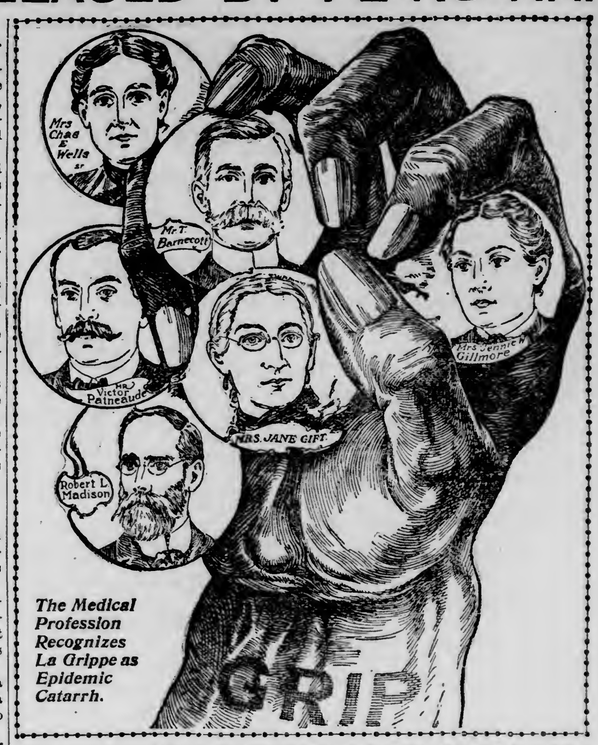

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time and at little expense.

"Every time I take a cold, I take some Peruna, which makes me well again.

"I also advised it for my daughter who was so ill with prostration that she could not follow her trade of dress making.

"A bottle of Peruna made such a change in her that she has been able to follow her trade ever since.

"I also induced a young lady, who was all rundown and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to follow her trade of tailoring.

The Medical Profession Recognizes La Grippe as Epidemic Catarrh.

"I can recommend Peruna for all such who are ill and require a tonic."

Systemic Catarrh, the Result of La Grippe. Pe-ru-na Receives Credit for Present Good Health.

Mrs. Jennie W. Gilmore, Box 44, White Oak, Ind. Ter., formerly Housekeeper for Indiana Reform School for Boys, writes:

"Six years ago I had la grippe, which was followed by systemic catarrh.

"The only thing I used was Peruna and Manalin, and I have been in better health the last three years than for years before.

"I give Peruna all the credit for my good health."

Pe-ru-na—A Tonic After La Grippe.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wells, Sr., Delaware, Ohio, writes:

Judge Horatio J. Goss, Hartwell, Ga., writes: "I had a severe spell of la grippe which left me with systemic catarrh. A friend advised me to try Peruna. The third bottle completed the cure."

"Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe."

Robt. L. Madison, A. M., Principal of Cullowhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education. He has for nearly six years been teaching in Painter.

He is a writer of occasional verse and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines,—religious, educational and secular.

In speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says:

"I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe.

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils.

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse, and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried."

For special instructions, address Dr. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

CROWE MUCH INTERESTED

Omaha, Feb. 15.—Judge Sutton's court room in the criminal branch of the district court was crowded today to its capacity when arguments were begun in the trial of "Pat" Crowe, charged with the Cudahy kidnaping. Half a hundred women seated within the rail were interested listeners. Crowe himself, dressed in the height of style, sat quietly near his attorneys, taking an unusual interest in the address of John P. English, his chief counsel. Near him sat a number of relatives and friends, most of whom have been daily visitors at the trial.

Judge Sutton has not placed a limit on the arguments and it is probable that they will not be concluded until some time today.

NO COMPROMISE ON HEPBURN BILL

Members of Senate Committee Far Apart on Its Provisions.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The senate committee on interstate commerce was in session about two hours today, instead of continuing all day, as had been agreed upon yesterday. There was barely a quorum present at any time, and much less than a quorum most of the time. The adjournment was taken for the reason that it appeared at the outset that nothing could be accomplished by discussing the Hepburn bill, and that there could be no purpose in deliberating until tomorrow, when the bill is to be voted upon in committee, unless the large number of proposed amendments prevents.

The court review feature is the wall between the forces, and it is plain that there can be no compromise of the factions.

Bills with and without the court review feature will be reported from the committee, and it appears that the former will have a majority of the committee supporting it. Senator Aldrich, one of the five Republican members holding out for an amendment to the Hepburn bill, was at the White House today in conference with the president. It is known that he discussed the necessity of the court review amendment, and as the result of this conference it is expected a new amendment will be adopted, or that a selection will be made from one of those pending, on which these senators will unite.

CHINESE COMMISSION

Says There Will be No Trouble With the United States.

New York, Feb. 15.—The Chinese imperial commission, which has been studying American institutions, sailed today on the steamer Bleucher for Hamburg. As the steamer was leaving the dock, every member of the commission waved a small American flag and were cheered by several scores of Chinese on the wharf. Speaking for Tai Hung Chi and Tuan Fang, the leaders of the party, one of the secretaries said before the Bleucher sailed that any difference between China and the United States will be amicably settled and that there will never be any serious trouble between the two countries.

DEPOSITORS ARE SHOCKED

To Find Deed of Bank Property in Dead President's Name.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 15.—Receiver John B. Wilton of the Peoples Savings bank today discovered the deed to the bank building, and which had been missing since the minister president killed himself. While the building was bought by the funds of the bank, the deed was made out to George H. Simmons only, thus revealing an effort to swindle his partner, Rev. E. L. Kelly, who owned a half interest with him. The discovery of the deed has caused consternation among the 900 depositors of the bank. It had been regarded as the chief asset, its value being placed at $40,000. As it is in the name of Dr. Simmons, the widow will receive her dower rights, and the personal creditors of the estate an allowance of their claims, the residue, if any, going to the depositors pro rata.

ALLEGED MINING SWINDLE.

Arizona Man Arrested on Charge of Embezzling $300,000.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 15.—O. A. Pease, who was recently arrested at the Quartz Site Mining company, in Yuma county, by Sheriff Livingston of that county, has been taken to Yuma. Pease is a well-known mining man, and the charge against him is embezzlement of $300,000. The arrest is made at the instigation of H. J. Beemer of New York. Allegations are that Beemer and his associates were induced to invest vast sums of money in a mining enterprise, by fraudulent methods, the results not proving to be what was represented. There has been previous civil litigation in the case.

MATOS IN PARIS.

Revolutionary Leader Says Venezuelan Troubles Will be Adjusted.

Paris, Feb. 15.—The presence in Paris of Gen. Matos, who headed the last revolution in Venezuela against President Castro, leads to reports that Matos might again take measures to stir up an insurrection. He is receiving no recognition, official or otherwise, but the French government is aware of his presence here. Matos today denied there was any truth in the reports that he is organizing a revolution.

Referring to the Franco-Venezuelan difficulty, Gen. Matos said he thought the affair, which originated in a trifling difference between President Castro and M. Taigny, would be settled without coercion or armed intervention.

RAILROADS

LOW RATES EXPECTED

Likely to be a Heavy Summer Tourist Business to Duluth.

Western Passenger Association Will Consider Rates Next Week.

It is believed that at the meeting of the Western Passenger association to be held in Chicago next Tuesday, Duluth and other Minnesota points will be given better summer rates than ever before. It seems to be the opinion of the railroad officials that if the rates are low enough during the tourist season the general public will travel extensively enough to make the reduction worth while.

Last year a round-trip tourist rate of $20 was put in from Chicago to Duluth and $16 to St. Paul and Minneapolis. The tickets were on sale from June 1 to Sept. 30, with the final return limit Oct. 31. For other Minnesota points the fare was a basing rate of $10 from Chicago to St. Paul, plus the one-way local fare, but the full rate had to be $16. It is believed that a proposal will be made at the meeting next Tuesday that more Minnesota resorts be taken in.

Duluth hotels are preparing for a big business the coming season, although it is hardly expected the travel will be so heavy as it was a year ago, when the Portland exposition drew thousands of people to Duluth on their way to and from the coast. Every person who came up the lakes is now a walking advertisement in praise of the advantages of a trip via the lake steamers to Duluth, and because of this fact the Portland fair is likely to be of lasting benefit to the Zenith City, by increasing the volume of business in this direction even after the close of the exposition.

The growing popularity of Isle Royale as a summer resort is looked upon by railroad officials as a further indication that summer travel to Duluth will rapidly increase from year to year. This seems all the more likely now that two or three new steamship companies are likely to be in the field, boosting the island as a summer resort and affording the best possible accommodations for pleasure seekers who patronize their boats.

RIVAL OF HILL LINES.

Canadian Pacific Coming to be Regarded as Dangerous Competitor.

According to dispatches from New York the belief that the Canadian Pacific is to be the strongest rival of the Hill lines within a few months is growing strong in the East. This belief is said to have grown almost to the respectability of established fact within the last two weeks.

A Canadian Pacific official, Mr. Whyte, has been quoted here recently as saying that the Canadian Pacific has strengthened its position on the water front at Seattle by the purchase of terminal grounds second only to the Great Northern holdings, and has other lands under option. This follows, by a couple of weeks, the denial by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy that the company has bought anything west of Spokane.

It is assumed here that the president's statement was a quibble, based upon the fact that the Canadian Pacific, per se, has not taken title to any of the shoreland property. At the same time, the rumors to the effect that the Canadian Pacific is going into Seattle will not down. The rumors, of course, are concerned with a direct line from the east into the city, and not not pay any attention to the possibilities with regard to an entrance over its own tracks from the north.

Special Train in Doubt.

It will probably be known by Saturday whether a special train will be run over the South Shore next week to the national ski tournament to be held at Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 22. Round trip rates of less than one fare will be in effect whether the train is run or not, with extension privileges on the payment of a small additional sum.

BLUEBERRY PRESERVES

Figured in Breaking Up the Home of Burke Williams.

He Painted the House With Jam Before Leaving It.

Blueberry jam played an important part in the actions of Burke Williams when he decided to break up housekeeping.

The story of how Burke went about it to dissolve home ties, was told by Rose Eckols in the municipal court this morning, before Judge Windom.

Both of the parties in the case are colored, and they have been living on Garfield avenue. They quarreled, and last Monday evening when Rose returned home from her work in Superior, she saw a strange sight.

At the head of the stairs she found the footboard of the bed, and entering the room a scene of devastation and destruction met her gaze. Her trunks had been turned upside down, and their contents scattered about the room. The table was reposing in the middle of the bed. The mirror was broken, and the back torn off the dresser. Blueberry jam was everywhere. Her clothes were covered with it. Two waists had been ripped to shreds and the rags smeared with the jam. A skirt was treated in a similar manner. A silk umbrella was broken and twisted past recognition.

The charred remains of two hats were found in the cook stove, nothing remaining of them but some ashes and the wires on which they had been built.

The glasses in the pictures on the wall were fractured, and everywhere visible in the scene of desolation was jam. There was jam on the windows, jam on the bed, jam on the clothes, jam on the floor, jam on the trunks. It was a scene to turn a self-respecting housekeeper into a raving maniac.

Williams was arrested in Superior on the charge of malicious destruction of property, and was given his hearing in the municipal court this morning. He denied some portions of the woman's story, but admitted destroying the hats and pictures. His defense was that he had given the woman the money to purchase them, and that when he left he had a right to do with them as he wished.

"And what about the jam?" asked County Attorney McClintock.

"Well, she furnished the berries and I furnished the sugar," said Williams. "I couldn't eat it and I wasn't going to leave it there."

"Were you trying to get your sugar out of it?" asked the county attorney.

"Do you think that you got all that was coming to you out of the dissolution?" he continued.

"Well, I guess so," said Williams.

"I guess you haven't yet," said the attorney.

Judge Windom bound the prisoner over to await the action of the next grand jury, and fixed his bonds at $250.

The Reason of It

The remarkable increase in our business during the past year, especially in our Millinery, Muslin Underwear and Infants' Wear departments has made necessary more room for those departments. We have therefore decided to devote our entire Third Floor to those departments, thereby giving us the largest, most beautiful and complete Millinery, Muslin Underwear and Infants' Wear departments in the Northwest, not excepting St. Paul and Minneapolis. You will remember that a year ago when we enlarged and reconstructed our beautiful Cloak and Suit department, we claimed a like distinction for it and you were not disappointed. All of which is in line with our determination to make this the best and leading exclusive dry goods store hereabouts.

And our motto shall be as it has always been—

FIND DEAD MAN IN BRUSH.

Dog Attracts Ranchman to Body Hanging to Tree.

Stevensville, Mont., Feb. 15.—Attracted by the barking of a dog, Thomas McDonah and Sterling Dobbins, who were hauling hay on the McDonah ranch, about fifteen miles from town, followed the animal into the brush and there, hanging by the arm to a tree discovered the dead body of Patrick Walker of Three-Mile. The dead man's arm was twined around the limb of the tree and his knees almost touched the ground. The coroner was summoned and after an investigation decided that the man had died from heart failure. He had been in town the day before, apparently in the best of health. It is supposed that while walking home he suddenly felt ill and went into the bursh to rest, death overtaking him suddenly.

BUTTE MYSTERY CLEARED.

Chinaman Thought to Have Been Murdered, is Safe.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 15.—The excitement created in Chinatown by the disappearance of Dr. Wong has been allayed, the doctor having telephoned from Gregson Springs that he is safe and recuperating at that resort. The doctor had not been feeling well and determined to go to the springs. Not wishing to alarm his friends with regard to the state of his health, he departed quietly not informing even his most intimate friends. As a consequence they became alarmed over his disappearance, and advanced a theory that he had been robbed, murdered and his body spirited away.

JACKSON-SAMMIS COMPANY.

Fine Organization to Be Heard at First M. E. Church.

Miss Leonora Jackson, who heads the Jackson-Sammis Concert company, which will be heard at the First Methodist church in the Star Lecture course tomorrow evening, is a violinist whose fame is already world wide, though she is still young in years. She has appeared at the concerts of many of the most famous musical organizations of the Old World and in America has won triumphs no less marked. She is proclaimed as the peer, if not the superior of any living woman violinist today, and far ahead of many of the male celebrities.

Miss Sibyl Sammis, soprano, is a charming singer, who has been winning the plaudits of the people everywhere. Charles E. Clarke, a baritone of high standing in musical circles, and Alexander MacFayden, pianist, complete the company.

FATHER ACCUSES HIS SON.

Aged Farmer Says He Was Fleeced of His Property.

Stillwater, Minn., Feb. 15.—A father's generosity and a son's ingratitude is the theme of a story related in the complaint in an action begun in the district court by Nicholas Brochman against Peter Brochman and his wife. The father alleges that he is 82 years of age, infirm in health and does not speak or write the English language; that his son Peter induced him to sign a writing which he thought was an agreement for an equal division of his farm in the town of Oakdale, worth $8,000, among all his children, with a reservation for his own support while life lasted. It turned out, the complaint alleges, that he signed a deed for the property and the son has mortgaged the farm for $1,000. The court is asked to order an accounting of rents and profits with a view to taking judgment against the son Peter for the amount of them and the mortgage and to compel the son to reconvey the farm to the father.

BERNHARDT SCHOLARSHIPS.

Actress Will Follow Example of Late Cecil Rhodes.

New York, Feb. 15.—When Sarah Barnhardt returns to France, she will express her appreciation of the courtesies extended to her by students of American colleges by obtaining for them several scholarships in French schools.

The exact form of the endowment has not been announced, but one of Mme. Bernhardt's representatives said that the actress had been greatly pleased by the ovation given her by students, and that the fund will be substantial.

It is likely that permanent scholarships will be established in one or two of the highest institutions of learning in Paris. It is also probable that several scholarships in the dramatic school, to be instituted in connection with the theater Sarah Bernhardt in Paris, will be placed at the disposal of American men and women.

THE GROWTH IN EXPORTS

Of Coal and Coke From United States is Rapid.

Holds Third Rank Among Nations as Exporter of Coal.

Washington, Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Exports of coal and coke from the United States in the calendar year 1905 aggregated over $31,000,000 in value, against a little more than $11,000,000 in 1895, a decade earlier. The United States now holds third rank among the nations as an exporter of coal, although she holds first rank as a producer of that article. The United Kingdom and Germany are larger exporters of coal than the United States, but the growth in our coal exports in recent years has been more rapid proportionately than that of other countries and suggests still further possibilities in the distribution to other parts of the world of our supplies of this article, which far exceed those of any European country, or probably any country of the world, except China, whose coal fields are as yet undeveloped. Exports of coal, exclusive of coke, from the United Kingdom in 1904 were 46,000,000 tons, against a little less than 32,000,000 tons in 1894, and from Germany in 1904 were about 18,000,000 tons, against approximately 10,000,000 tons in 1894. The United States, as above indicated, ranks next with 9,000,000 tons in 1905, against a little less than 4,000,000 in 1895. Belgium ranks next as a coal exporter with 5,000,000 tons in 1904, against a little less than 4,500,000 tons in 1894. Japan follows Belgium in rank as a coal-exporting country with a little less than 3,000,000 tons in 1904, against 1,250,000 tons in 1894. From the Australian commonwealth the exports of coal in 1904 were a little over 1,500,000 tons; from Canada, about 1,500,000 tons; from France, in the same year, 1,000,000 tons, and from Austria-Hungary a little less than 1,000,000 tons. Many of these countries, however, while they export certain quantities of coal, are large importers of that article. Germany, for example, while exporting about 18,000,000 tons imported in 1904 about 5,000,000 tons, while Belgium's imports of coal are over one-half as great as her exports of that article. Japan in normal years imports but small quantities, though her imports of coal during recent years have been very large, being especially for the use of her war vessels.

The coal exported from the United States goes chiefly to the nearby countries, but is beginning to find its way to other parts of the world. Of the $31,215,628 value of coal and coke exported from the United States in 1905, as shown by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, $17,867,964 was bituminous coal, $11,104,654 anthracite coal, and $2,243,000 coke. Of the $18,000,000 worth of bituminous coal exported last year, $11,500,000 worth of anthracite coal exported nearly all went to British North America, the total to other parts of the world being less than $200,000. Mexico is the next largest customer for American coal, the value of coal exported to that country in 1905 being a little less than $3,000,000, and practically all of it bituminous, the value of anthracite being but $8,486. Cuba is next in importance as a consumer of American coal, the value exported to that island in 1905 being, of bituminous, $1,487,776, and of anthracite, $121,117. Other West Indian islands took a little over $800,000 worth, almost exclusively bituminous. The shipments to Europe in 1905 were $308,624 in value, distributed as follows: To Italy, $187,395; to France, $15,700; to Germany, $9,483; to Belgium, $4,926, and to other Europe, $84,176. Comparing conditions in 1905 with those of 1895, it may be said that the exports from the United States to British North America of bituminous and anthracite coal combined were, in 1895, about 3,000,000 tons, against nearly 7,000,000 in 1905; to Mexico, 104,000 tons, against 927,170 in 1905; and to Cuba, in 1895, 348,000 tons, against $564,385 tons in 1905. To Porto Rico the shipments in 1895 were 34,000 tons, and in 1905, 63,133 tons.

The comparatively limited area of distribution of American coal exported, confined as it is almost exclusively to the adjacent countries of Canada, Mexico and Cuba, suggests an inquiry as to the area of distribution of the large quantities of coal exported from the United Kingdom, a quantity about five times as great as that exported from the United States and valued at $120,000,000. Of the 47,000,000 tons of coal exported from the United Kingdom in 1905, aside from that furnished to steamers engaged in the foreign trade, 7,500,000, speaking in round terms, went to Germany, 6,000,000 to France, about an equal quantity to Italy, a little over 3,000,000 to Sweden, 2,500,000 to Russia, nearly 2,500,000 to Spain, 2,250,000 to Egypt, a little less than 2,000,000 to Netherlands, 1,750,000 to Argentina, 1,000,000 to Brazil, 500,00 to Chile and 333,000 tons to Uruguay.

It is proper to add that the above figures relating to coal exports do not include coal supplied to vessels engaged in the foreign trade, which in the case of the United Kingdom amounted in 1905 to over 17,000,000 tons and in the case of the United States to about 5,000,000 tons.

The coal production in the principal coal-producing countries of the world was in 1904, the latest available year, as follows: United States, 314,563,000 tons; the United Kingdom, 232,428,000 tons; Germany, 118,907,000 tons; France, 33,393,000 tons; Belgium, 23,135,000 tons, and Japan, 9,701,682 tons, the quantities in each case being long tons of 2,240 pounds each.

WORK THAT TELLS.

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Duluth.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Duluth. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Duluth sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

J. H. Tomlin, lather and contractor, of 112 W. Palmetto street, Duluth Heights, says: "What I said in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills six years ago was not only true, but the cure I described at that time has been permanent, and I am pleased to inform other sufferers of this fact. My case was a severe one, and it clung to me persistently for two years. The backache finally got so bad that I was obliged to lay off work for days at a time, and I suffered such pain that it hurt to bring the slightest strain on the muscles of the back and loins. The kidney secretions were irregular, and I was unable to rest well at nights. All these irregularities yielded promptly to the treatment, and the result was a permanent cure."

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

United States Marshal Arrests Counterfeiters at Carrington.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Carrington—United States Marshal Shea, assisted by Marshal Callahan, yesterday arrested men by the names of Kidney, Partridge, Phillips, Smith and Mead, as counterfeiters. They are charged with making quarters and nickels. The dies and alloys have been found.

Grand Forks—William Husband and John Anderson were given first and second places in the annual university oratorical contest, and will represent the university in the state contest at Fargo. There were six contestants.

A score of dentists attended the meeting of the Red River Dental association. J. E. Argue, Red Lake Falls, was elected president; Dr. Tuomy, Bemidji, secretary; C. L. Tomkins, Grand Forks, treasurer. The next meeting will be held at Crookston.

Mandan—Activity has begun in business circles in advance of the building of branch lines of railways out of this city next spring. Both the southern and northern branches will tap a rich country and make Mandan the gateway city. Numerous small towns will be fed from here. One firm has signified its intention of opening a wholesale and jobbing house here, and a syndicate of Michigan capitalists will award the contract next week for the construction of a new hotel, despite the fact that the town already has eight hotels.

During the past few months the town has won fame as a marketing point for grain. More than 1,000,000 bushels of wheat alone were handled here. At no time were the elevators and mills in such shape that the grain could not be received at one place or another.

The recent bank statements show that the banks have on deposit $750,000, while the deposits of the banks in the county run up to more than $1,000,000.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Plankinton—A mystery of nearly five months was solved at Plankinton by the discovery of the dead body of George Ryan, who mysteriously disappeared on Sept. 20, 1905. Ryan was about 35 years old and was unmarried.

On the morning of the day on which he disappeared he is alleged to have made insulting remarks to the wife of the farmer by whom he was employed. During the day he went away, and no trace of him was found until recently, when D. E. Garver of White Lake, reported the discovery of the body of a dead man lying beside a straw stack on the farm of Joan Fenner, Ryan's employer. A watch and a pistol on the body were identified as having been the property of Ryan. A bullet hole through the skull of the dead man told how he met his death. The coroner's inquest returned a verdict of suicide.

The theory is that Ryan became frightened over the possible consequences of his alleged behavior toward Mrs. Fenner and committed suicide.

Madison—Dora Fox, who shot and killed Joe Lapine, was brought into justice court on preliminary examination.

She admitted the shooting, but claimed it was in self-defense. After hearing the evidence Justice Sponholtz bound the defendant over to the circuit court.

She was defended by Charles K. Porter of this city and ex-Judge Aiken of Sioux Falls.

The crime was committed in a resort near this city.

It will be the first murder trial in Lake county.

Sioux Falls—The remains of Irving D. Smith, the farmer millionaire, were interred here yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Odd Fellows of Madison and Sioux Falls. A special train brought four coach loads of mourners and others from Madison to pay their last respects to the dead.

A pathetic incident of the funeral march from the train to the cemetery occurred when the procession reached the South Dakota Children's home, where it was halted for the little inmates of the home to place floral offerings on the casket of the man whose philanthropy had extended to the home in a substantial manner.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Insane Man Nearly Severs His Head in Woods Camp.

Munising—While temporarily insane, Andrew Laoyerlunti, a Finn, thirty-five years old, committed suicide at a woods camp near Munising by cutting his throat. His head was nearly severed. The man leaves a wife and several children in his native land.

Sault Ste. Marie—Private Smith of Company F, of Fort Brady, had the misfortune to break his leg at the Soo ice rink. He was just about to go upon the ice, when he fell in such a manner that the limb was fractured. The ambulance from the fort was called and he was taken to the hospital.

Faithorn Junction—Walter Brandt, a fourteen-year-old boy living at Faithorn Junction, is credited with being the champion wolf and wildcat hunter of the peninsula. Within a year he has killed or captured eight wolves and the same number of cats. Three of the wolves he has succeeded in taming.

Menominee—The Menominee city council has made preparations for the expenditure in the near future of over $32,000. This sum is to be devoted to paving and otherwise improving Menominee streets during the coming summer and the larger part of it is to be raised by special assessment against the property to be benefited.

The ice stages between this city and Sturgeon Bay were started today. Although the ice in many places is but seven or eight inches thick and is not considered safe. This is the latest date on which the stage has been started in many years.

Iron Mountain—John Elmore, aged twenty-one, was killed at Iron Mountain by the train of which he was a brakeman. His home was at Plymouth, Wis.

PULLED ANTLER FROM DEER.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 15.—A remarkable hunting incident is reported from Pembine Falls, north of this city. A crew of men were working in the woods when a deer came down the roadway. The deer swerved suddenly into the woods where the crew was at work. One of the men saw him coming and dashed behind a tree, and just as the deer was going by caught him by one of his antlers. The deer, however, did not stop, and the antler was pulled off and remained in the man's hand.

Ozomulsion

The Cod Liver Oil Emulsion "Par Excellence."

The storage battery of the human system is the heart.

A MODERN PRODIGAL SON.

Fight to Become Dishonest Fails-Returns Home Prosperous.

Many fathers of prodigal sons have extended a helping hand to returned wanderers when the latter got tired of the husks, says the New York Sun. This is the story of a father who wouldn't get out of bed to welcome his son home with a bank roll, which he had honestly earned.

The story came out at a dinner in a Flatbush club a few nights ago. The man who told the story had played the part of the son.

"My governor," he said, "was a practical, unrelenting man. He gave me every advantage that any reasonable boy could want.

"But I came into the world with a spirit of unrest. I did what thousands have done—I ran away from home.

"For more than two years my people supposed I was dead. I became a hobo. I was a begger and an outcast in a number of towns.

"But, hard up and as ragged as I frequently was, I never stole a cent. I would work occasionally, but as soon as I earned a few dollars away I went and lived riotously while the earning lasted.

"Occasionally I was run in as a vagrant, but I was always released. Never in my career as a beggar was I sent to a workhouse. I had a number of aliases. I never disgraced my father's name by giving it as my name. Once I enlisted, but failed to pass inspection.

"One day I was employed by a railroad then under construction. For the first time since leaving home I gave my right name. I was a pretty good driver.

"When the work was done the contractor gave me a similar job in another state. Then he made me boss of the gang. I began to enjoy work.

"I was sent at one time on a mission of importance. On that mission I was intrusted with $5,000. If ever I was tempted to steal it was then.

"I walked a whole night debating the question. I concluded to try to be honest with this sum, but I don't mind telling you now that I said to mystlf that if I ever had $10,000 put in my hands I would skip with it. That was the pile I set my heart on.

"In less than a year that exact amount was given to me, and the point to which I was sent was 500 miles away.

"But as soon as I started I began to weaken. It was not altogether an honest intention that caused me to hesitate. It was the desire to get more.

"I thought it all out and concluded that it would not pay to be dishonest for $10,000. I said to myself—actually put myself under oath—that if I ever got $20,000 I would see the world while the money lasted.

"After my $10,000 mission the contractor who had started me at driving a team offered me an interest in his business. I declare to you that while I accepted his generous offer I did it with a sort of mental reservation.

"I did not do it with the intention of building myself up or of being square. I resolved that if I ever had an opportunity of getting $20,000 from my benefactor I would take it and quit work.

"About two years after this I was sent to Mexico. The firm of which I was a member had a big contract. It was worth nearly a half million dollars when the work was finished.

"When I reached Mexico I said to myself, 'Here is a chance to be honest or go to the devil.' For the first time in my life since I had left home I found it more difficult to do wrong than right. I know this is not the general idea. But I could not get my consent to go wrong.

"My ambition ran in the opposite direction. Strange as it may sound, I tried to take the other chute, but I couldn't budge. I can't explain it.

"I remained in Mexico until our contract was finished, and I handled big money in that time. On my return home the head of our concern retired. He had me put in his place.

"Soon after that I concluded to seek the paternal forgiveness. I went to the town from which I ran away. It was late when I got in. I walked around to the old home. The house was dark. The old knocker was still on the door.

"I gave it a bang and waited with palpitating heart. I heard a shuffle of feet, and then a voice.

"'Who's that?' asked a voice which I knew was my father's.

"I gave my name with more pride than I had given it in many years. I knew my father's sternness, and I hastened to inform him that I had come back able to take care of myself. The answer I received rather knocked me out, in spite of my knowledge of my father's severity:

"'Shove your money under the door and come around in the morning,' thundered the voice behind the door, and then I heard the shuffle of feet again in the hall, and then the side door closed.

"I wrote on the back of an envelope:

"'Dear Dad: Most of my money is in bank tonight, but I leave you a tenner as an evidence of good faith, and will take breakfast with you in the morning.'

"This I shoved under the door. Then I went away. I returned as I had agreed, and the blowouts that followed for a week would have put the father of that scriptural prodigal out of business."

NATIONAL HOLIDAYS.

There was a merry Thanksgiving party last evening in a large uptown hotel, says the New York World. Dinner was over and the small-talk moments had come. Every man there is prominent in the life of New York. All are men notable for distinction in their respective professions. The conversation finally swung round to holidays—national holidays.

"Let us see," said one. "There are only two national holidays—Thanksgiving and the Fourth of July."

"Wrong," said the man sitting next to him. "The Fourth of July is the only national holiday."

"No," put in a third, "there are two—the Fourth and Washington's birthday."

The discussion waxed around the table. Everyone knew it was either Decoration Day or the Fourth or Thanksgiving or New Year's or Christmas or Labor Day.

All this while one man in the party had been leaning back in his chair chuckling to himself. At last when all his companions had made a guess he woke up.

"There is no national holiday."

Immediately there was a chorus of "You're wrong!" and "Well, who'd have thought you would make a crazy statement like that?"

"All right," answered the chuckling one. "What I say is a fact. There is no national holiday. And if any one here is game, why, I'll bet him the champagne for the crowd."

All hands were eager to get aboard the wager, but the challenger chose a man who had flouted him the most.

"In a moment," and he sent to the hotel office for the World Almanac. Opening it at page 31, he called for silence and then read:

"There is no national holiday, not even the Fourth of July. Congress has at various times appointed special holidays. In the second session of the Fifty-third Congress it passed an act making Labor Day a public holiday in the District of Columbia, and it has recognized the existence of certain days as holidays for commercial purposes, but, with the exception named, there is no general statute on the subject. The proclamation of the president designating a day of Thanksgiving only makes it a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and the territories and in those states which provide by law for it."

All was silence for a moment while all hands looked sheepishly at one another.

"You see," said the wager winner, as the wine was ordered by the man who had picked up his statement, "I knew what I was betting on. It was only last year that I lost the wine myself on the same proposition. Now all go forth and stick somebody else."

THE CAPTAIN LED.

It was in the latter portion of the Civil war, says the Boston Herald, when great calls for troops were in process of being filled, that notice was served on the adjutant general of one of the smaller states of the North that the quotas of some of the towns were not full, and that the men must be forthcoming. Orders to that effect were issued, with the result that when the matter was closed there were about enough men for a single company. It was organized and sent to the front and attached to one of the regiments from the same state.

The first time this little body of soldiers saw service was at the battle of the Wilderness. The action was going on during one of the terrible days of that battle, and the shells and bullets were getting in their work. The captain of our company felt called upon to make a speech to his men, and he said:

"Soldiers, we are now up against the enemy. When the orders are given to fire, do your best and kill all you can with the forty rounds of ammunition you have. When you have fired it all away you had better retreat. I am a little lame, so I am going to start now."

WAGE SCALE CONFERENCE

Between Coal Operators and Miners Held in New York.

Committees Appointed to Consider the Demands of the Miners.

New York, Feb. 15.—The conference between the coal operators and the union mine workers of the hard coal fields of Pennsylvania, at which efforts will be made to formulate an agreement between the employers and the men to go into effect April 1, when the award of the anthracite strike commission expires, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. All the coal companies were represented, and the interests of the employes were looked after by the special scale committee of thirty-six which is made up of the mine workers executive board of three anthracite districts. President Mitchell is chairman of this committee.

Among those who attended the meeting are:

President George F. Baer, of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company; W. H. Truesdale, president of the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad company; D. W. Underwood, president of the Erie railroad; E. B. Thomas, president of the Delaware & Hudson company. The independent operators will be represented by Frank Pardee of Hazleton, Pa., and J. L. Cake of Pittston, Pa.

W. L. Connell of Scranton, Pa., an independent operator, who is president of the anthracite board of conciliation, was also in attendance. The Pennsylvania railroad was not directly represented, it not having been invited to the conference, but will abide by any action taken by the presidents of the other coal carrying roads. In case a technical discussion shall ensue after the miners have formally made known their grievances, the operators will call in officials of the various coal companies, who have a practical knowledge of the mining conditions. Among them are A. F. Law, manager of the Temple Iron company; General Manager Bryden of the Scranton Coal company; W. A. May, superintendent of the Erie railroad; Col. R. A. Phillips, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad; C. C. Rose, of the Delaware & Hudson railroad; S. B. Warriner, of the Lehigh Valley, and W. J. Richards, general manager of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron company. Messrs. Marriner and Richards are members of the anthracite board of conciliation.

The conference adjourned shortly before 3 o'clock. The following joint statement was issued after the meeting:

"There was a full representation of the mine operating companies and the miners. The meeting was called to order with Mr. Connell in the chair. Mr. Mitchell addressed the meeting, stating in general terms the proposition desired by the mines, and that the same had not been formulated in detail. After a brief discussion, it was concluded that the miners and operators should each appoint a committee to represent them in the future in reference to the matter, the committee to consist of seven each. Th following gentlemen were appointed to represent the miners:

Messrs. John Mitchell, John Fahey, George Hartlein, W. H. Dettrey, John P. Gallagher, T. D. Nicholls, John T. Dempsey, and the following to represent the operators:

"Messrs. Baer, Truesdale, Kerr, Willcox, Williams, Thomas, Cake. The understanding was that after the committee terminated their work they should report to the committee of the whole.

"An adjournment was then had with the understanding that the committee would encourage further meetings."

REHEARSAL OF WEDDING

Of Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth is Held.

Washington, Feb. 15.—A rehearsal of the Roosevelt-Longworth wedding will take place at the White House late this afternoon. Every detail of the ceremony to be performed on Saturday next will be gone over to the end that there may be no hitch in the formal proceedings.

In addition to the bridge and groom, President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the ushers and military attaches, who will participate in the formal ceremony, will take part in the rehearsal.

The east room and the lower rooms of the White House which, ordinarily, are open to visitors, are closed to the public for the remainder of the week. The east room in which the ceremony is to be performed is being prepared for the wedding. Already the platform for the wedding party is in place and the decorations will be completed by tomorrow evening.

Carriages and automobiles bearing close personal friends and relatives of the bride have been driving up to the White House throughout the day. These fortunate ones were given a peep at the wedding presents that have arrived already. The collection was on view in one of the upper apartments of the White House and presented a dazzling display of jewelry, ornaments and bric-a-brac.

TO TRY TO AVOID A TARIFF WAR

Von Sternberg, Secretary Root and President In Consultation.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Between now and March 1, the date of the lapsing of the trade arrangement between this country and Germany, a final and determined effort will be made by the Washington and Berlin governments to come to some agreement that will prevent a tariff war between the two countries, the evils of which are mutually understood. The prime movers in this last effort are Baron Speck Von Sternberg, the German ambassador, and Secretary Root and the president. The ambassador was at the state department today, and will have other conferences within the next few days. The success of this last depends largely upon the extent to which this government can modify its customs valuations, by which it is hoped certain injustices against foreign merchants may be remedied. Throughout the negotiations Germany has shown great readiness to do all in her power to come to a satisfactory agreement.

WORKED HIM.

Unexpected Happens in an Experiment in Telepathy.

New York Sun: "Philadelphia may be a slow burg, but it's $20 faster than I am," sighed one of the chair-holders of an Upper Broadway hotel. "The worst part of it all is that the man who turned the trick on me was an old friend. He had to move to Sleepville because he wasn't fly enough to do business on Broadway."

The speaker took a deep puff on a cigar of the sort that is usually named after a man that is dead.

"I dropped in on my friend just for the sake of old times. Cosey little joint he had. Two rooms, faro layout, sideboard, wheel, folding bed and telescope.

"He seemed tickled to death to see me. Wanted to know all about little old New York. Whether the pavement was down on Forty-second street yet, where the dead line was now and whether it sagged as much as it used to do. Then we gradually switched the talk over to the theaters.

"That reminds me,' he said suddenly. 'I know a young fellow right here in this town that's got every vaudeville artist on the boards today shooed to the flies. Say, you used to know all the big managers over in New York. Why can't you get him a job?'

"'What's his lay?' says I as discouragingly as possible. 'Impersonation of Sousa, or imitation of Bobby Gaylor?'

"'Bobby Gaylor nothing! This man's a mental telepathist and all that sort of thing. He does mind-reading that would make Heller look like a mental illiterate. Fact is, he's a sort of nephew of Heller's, come to think of it. But you don't believe it? Wait till I show you.'

"He hustled around till he found a pack of cards.

"'Now, I'll tell you what I'll do,' he said, spreading the cards out on the table. 'You plek any card you like from the deck and I'll call our friend up on the 'phone. If he's there, I'll bet you $20 even that he can tell you the card you picked over the 'phone.'

"Well, I hated to take money from an insane man like that, but I've always heard that they're apt to get violent if you don't let them have their own way. So I dug out a twenty and picked the king of clubs.

"'You're on,' I told him soothingly.

"'I think that his number is 306 Blank,' he said, taking a little notebook from his pocket. 'Yes, here it is: Mr. Adams, 306 Blank. Call him up yourself so's there won't be any question about it.'

"I went to the 'phone and got 306 Blank.

"'Mr Adams there?' I asked.

"'Yes, this is Mr. Adams,' came back.

"'Well, I took a card from the deck just now. What was it?'

"There was a little pause, and then 'Hello, yes, well, it's the king of clubs.'

"'Wouldn't that jar you?'

The speaker took another long puff on his cigar as if to make himself forget his other troubles.

"There certainly is something in this occultism that we can't understand," commented the man on his right.

"Yes, there's $20 of mine in it, but I can understand it, all right enough," continued the man behind the cigar. "Let me finish, will you?

"After my friend had pocketed the twenty he told me how awfully glad he'd been to see me and to drop in again soon and he'd try to have Mr. Adams up there to meet me.

"I was still thinking about it on the street a few minutes later when who should I run into but Spider McBride. You remember Spider? First man to put radium bricks on a commercial basis?

"Well, I told Spider where I'd been and all about Heller's wonderful nephew.

"'You don't say so!' said Spider. 'Why I dropped twenty on that same cuss. Ain't he a wonder, though? Jenkins, his name is.'

"'No, Adams,' says I.

"'What? Heller's nephew? Jenkins, I tell you. And his telephone number's 396 Blank. I don't drop twenty so often but what I can remember the details when I do.'

"'Oh, well, I know his name's Adams, but what's the use in fighting about it? Let's go in here and get a drink.'

"It was a pretty decent sort of a joint, and we had two or three drinks. Then Spider recollected that he wanted to telephone to a man named Smith, who occasionally did odd jobs for him as government assayer.

"Spider went to the 'phone, but just as he was about to take the receiver off the hook the bell rang. Spider took the message.

"'What?' he exclaimed through the 'phone. He glanced at the 'phone number. 'Hanged if it isn't! Yes, this is 306 Blank. What do you want?'

"'Say,' he called over to the bartender, 'some one wants to talk to Mr. Jones.'

"The bartender was busy mixing drinks.

"'I think Mr. Jones is the two of diamonds,' he called back to Spider. You'll find the list under the phone book.'

"I'd gone over to see what the game was.

"Spider pulled a long typewritten list out from under the phone book and glanced at it. Then he handed it to me, and started talking through the phone.

"That list had the fifty-two cards of the deck written out and opposite each one the name of some man. I noted with interest that the king of clubs was Mr. Adams. Mr. Jenkins, Spider's friend, was the nine of hearts.

"Spider was still talking through the phone.

"'That's what I said,' he was saying. 'The card the gentleman took was the four of spades. No, this isn't Mr. Jones. It's Mr. McBride, whom you introduced to Mr. Jenkins the other day. And I've got a friend here with me that is looking for a certain Mr. Adams with a gun.

"And he hung up the receiver.

"Well, anyway,' said Spider, as we paid our checks, 'we just made $20 for some poor sucker that didn't deserve it. I guess he hasn't got quite as good an opinion of Heller's young nephew as we had.'"

BUT HE'S BROKE.

He knows the age and pedigree of everything that gallops,
He can rattle off the running of the stakes of long ago;
He is Joseph to the prospect of the race that's run tomorrow,
He can stake you to the right price on the straight and place and show.
He will call you down on figures and contemptuously regard you
If a joke about a horse race you may feel disposed to launch;
A merry jest appeals to him as oil appeals to water,
For he has the situation by the haunch.
But he's broke.

He is pally with the Belmonts, the Hitchcocks and the Keenes;
He's familiar with the Corrigans and Dunnes;
He knows which way it's coming, he can tell you how it went,
He can separate the yeggmen from the guns.
He knows about the cheaters and those who're on the square,
He can tell you when your horse is going to try;
When he whispers you his special—the one that's really meant—
"Go play it if you have to soak your eye."
But he's broke.

SMALL COIN SCARCE.

London Daily Chronicle: Half pennies are very scarce in Australia, so much so that an attempt once made in Melbourne to run a half-penny evening paper soon failed because people had not the coin wherewith to purchase it.

And if halfpence are rare, farthings are curiosities. A shrewd Melbourne shopkeeper has imported some thousands of bright new King Edward farthings, and he is reported to be doing a roaring trade. They are piled up in heaps in his windows and attract gaping crowds. Every article he sells is so much and 3 farthings.

HAVE THEIR FEET BURNED

Twenty-five Led Across Hot Sands at Shriners' Session.

Imperial Potentate Guest of Honor at Gathering of Faithful.

The meeting of Aad Temple in ceremonial session last evening at Masonic Temple was one of the most vivid affairs which has occurred in Duluth in several decades. To begin with, the new regalia of the temple had arrived; the officers were arrayed in purple and fine linen and made Solomon in all his glory look like a "trey" spot. Then the further fact that Harry A. Collins, imperial potentate of the Shrine of America, was present on his annual visit of inspection, helped add to the gaiety of things. Mr. Collins is a genial soul and has no objection to playful Shriners adding stunts to the regular program, so long as said stunts will help chase away the cares that infest the day. As a result, dull care did not have a show at all and revelry prevailed. The fact that 25 candidates who appeared for the ceremony were young and tender and still at an age where they lost their tempers quickly enough to make it worth the degree teams attention, added much to the zest of the evening.

Besides local Shriners, many were present from other parts of the country, it being a fact that Shriners were present from the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and intermediate points. The attendance was immense.

Following the ceremony a banquet was served in the dining hall of the Temple. Four hundred Shriners sat at the tables. The room was handsomely decorated for the occasion and Flaten's orchestra furnished the music from the orchestra loft. Imperial Potentate Collins was the special guest of the evening, of course, and at the banquet gave an address in which he congratulated the Duluth Shriners on the excellent showing they have made in starting their shrine here. He expressed himself as very much pleased with the condition and prospects of the Shrine here and trusted that the Shriners would keep the good work going on and ever increase the size of their temple in Duluth. Other speeches were made by T. W. Hugo of Duluth, past illustrious potntate of Osman Temple of St. Paul; Jesse Norton of Duluth, illustrious potentate of Aad Temple; J. T. Armstead; J. B. Cotton, chief rahban of Aad Temple; S. L. Frazer, recorder of Aad Temple, and others.

Mr. Collins left this afternoon for St. Paul, where he will be the guest of Osman temple this evening, and Zuhrah temple tomorrow evening.

The novices trotted across the hot sand were: M. B. Shank, Fred B. Myers, W. L. Hill and H. G. Seeley, of Biwabik, Minn.; J. W. Lusk, Virginia; R. Fitzgerald, Tower; H. F. Reed, H. L. Dresser, A. G. Grochau, N. B. Merritt, H. G. Gearheart H. Burdon, C. A. Marshall, H. W. Cheadle, J. L. Stewart, T. C. Baldwin, T. E. Jones D. B. Shaver, John A. Anderson, Frank W. Helmick, C. W. Stillson and J. W. Harrison.

Children Face Many Dangers

The Work and Worry and Close Confinement of Their School Days and How They Can Be Safe-guarded.

To thousands of boys and girls the confinement of the school room and the duties imposed by their studies are a strain, a very serious strain. Many become broken in health by this strain and are physically weakened for life.

Give your boys and girls good, healthful, pure, strengthening food and you go far toward removing all dangers.

Malta-Vita, the crisp, delicious, whole wheat food, contains every food element necessary to the maintenance and upbuilding of the human body and mind—especially beneficial for children.

"Malta-Vita" is no meaningless coined word. It stands for its literal translation from the Latin, and means exactly what it says, "Malt Life." The original phrase, "For the blood is the life," is the starting point and final winning post of Malta-Vita, on account of its large percentage of maltose, or malt sugar, a natural sweetening agent, easily digestible and readily assimilated by the human economy, forming rich, healthy blood.

Malta-Vita is so good to eat—not at all like the tasteless variety of breakfast foods—that the whole family welcome its appearance on the table. And it's always ready to eat.

TWO MEN KILLED AT FAYAL MINE

Both Employed on Stripping Work of Drake & Stratton.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 15.—Two men were killed at the Drake & Stratton stripping work at the Fayal mine yesterday. Silvetor Santti, a Finn, had his life crushed out by being run over by an engine, near the dump between Fayal and St. Mary's lake. Santti was a brakeman on the dump train, and while going forward to make a coupling, was struck by one of the engines that leaves the train at this point and backs to the yard. His head was badly crushed, and life was practically extinct when other workmen picked him from the ground. Santti was 21 years old. His parents live on the Fayal location.

Just as the last blasts were being made before supper, Alexis Nordstrum met his fate, being killed by a stone hurled from a blast which he had fired 200 feet distant from the blacksmith shop in which he had sought refuge after igniting the fuse. The rock was hurled high in the air and came down through the roof of the shop, striking Nordstrum on the head and fracturing his skull. He was taken to the hospital, where he died. He was 25 years old and unmarried, and had been in Eveleth about six months.

"Jack" McNutt, aged 26 years, died at the Rood hospital yesterday of peritonitis. He entered the hospital last week suffering from pneumonia, and was getting over the trouble when the stomach disease appeared. Young McNutt had lived in Hibbing several years and was well known about town. His parents reside at Duluth.

At last evening's meeting of the Eveleth Business Men's association, a resolution was adopted that the city council be petitioned against granting a franchise to the Mesaba Traction company of Biwabik or the Northern Traction company of Hibbing, for a right-of-way through Eveleth during the next sixty days. This, it is expected, will give the local men a chance to mature their plans for organizing a company to build a line from Virginia through Eveleth to Ely. Supt. J. H. Hearding, president of the association, stated that the estimated cost of the proposed line is $50,000, and the motive power will be gasoline. The matter will be taken up at the meeting of the city council next Tuesday evening.

SHERIFF DENIED STORIES.

Governor Satisfied Williams' Execution Was According to Law.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—Governor Johnson yesterday had Sheriff Miesen on the carpet and put some very pertinent questions to him relative to the hanging of William Williams. The newspaper accounts aroused the suspicions of the executive, and he was determined to sift the matter to the bottom. Sheriff Miesen denied that any newspaper man had witnessed the execution, and declared that the account, signed by the "only newspaper man who witnessed the execution," was a hoax pure and simple. After a long conference, in which Governor Johnson said some very plain things to Sheriff Miesen, the matter was dropped, Governor Johnson expressing himself as satisfied that the execution had been carried out according to law.

CONTESTS FATHER'S WILL.

Mrs. Hattie Hanneman of Fergus Falls Starts a Suit.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A will contest which promises to be a long one has been instituted in the probate court of this city, by Mrs. Hattie Hanneman, who has decided to contest the will made by her father Carl Umlauf, who died Oct. 13, 1905. The estate is valued at about $35,000, and the property was left by the terms of the will to Mrs. Umlauf, without restriction. But those who were present at the time the will was made and signed the will as witnesses, claim that it was Mr. Umlauf's wish to give $2,000 to each of his daughters. It is upon this evidence that Mrs. Hanneman bases her claim, and asks that the will be set aside.

William H. Wentworth and Miss Catalia Friberg were united in marriage at the Wentworth residence in this city Tuesday night. They will make their home at Breckenridge, where the bridegroom is in business.

SHOT IN THE SHOULDER

Mike Lepanto Wounded in Quarrel Over Load of Wood.

Assailant Escapes--Police Have Difficulty in Getting at Facts.

With three bullet wounds through his right shoulder, Mike Lepanto lies in St. Mary's hospital, while the police are searching for his assailant, believed to be John Reno, his brother-in-law.

The wounds are the outcome of a shooting affair which took place about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the alley back of Lepanto's home at Eleventh avenue west and Second street. The shooting was the result of a quarrel over a load of wood.

The police are having great difficulty in getting at the facts of the case, and there is more or less mystery surrounding it. The shooting was not reported to the police by any of the principals. After Lepanto had been wounded a private conveyance was summoned and he was quietly taken to St. Mary's hostital, where the wounds were dressed. It was not until nearly two hours later that some outside person called up headquarters and said that shooting had been heard in the vicinity. An officer was immediately sent to investigate, but little could be learned of the details of the affair. Lepanto was examined at the hospital, but he proved to be a rather unwilling witness, and talked very guardedly.

From what the police have learned, Lepanto and Reno had a quarrel over a load of wood. Reno had sold Lepanto three cords of wood, which the latter claimed to be under measure. In the quarrel which ensued, Reno is claimed to have drawn a revolver and to have fired five shots at Lepanto, three of which took effect in his right shoulder. He then left the scene, and no trace of him could be found last night, although the police officers of both Duluth and Superior have been making a thorough search for him.

Lepanto's wounds are not looked upon as serious. The bullets fortunately missed the vital organs, and are simply flesh wounds which will heal rapidly under proper treatment, and unless blood poisoning sets in, it is likely that the victim will be able to leave the hospital within a week or two.

Lepanto's reticence leaves the police at a loss for any clue. Sergeant Fiskett talked to him in his native tongue at the hospital last evening, but little could be learned of the affair. The search for Reno will be vigorously pushed, however, in spite of Lepanto's evident unwillingness to prosecute.

Commissioners Finish Hearing.

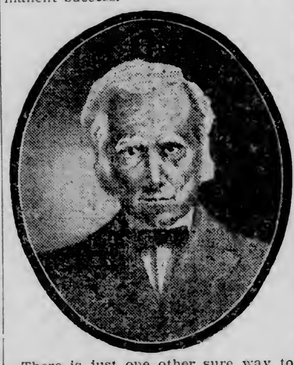

The commission appointed in the condemnation proceedings instituted in Superior by the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railroad company to obtain a right of way, has finished a hearing to determine the valuation of the lands that the company wishes to secure and have taken the matter under advisement. The property under consideration lies on Winter street between Tower and Cumming avenues, some of the most valuable lots being owned by the John Gund Brewing company and J. A. Link. As soon as the commission renders its report another hearing will be given the owners of other property within the city limits of Superior which the railroad company desires to acquire.

DATE FIXED FOR HEARING

Charges Against Chief Black Will Be Aired February 23.

Board and Cameron's Attorney Agree Upon Certain Conditions.

An investigation, which will take the form of a cross-examination of Chief Black regarding certain charges which have been made against the manner in which the fire department has been conducted, will be held Friday evening, Feb. 23, at 8 o'clock, in the city hall.

On Feb. 20, Porter J. Neff, the attorney who has charge of the case against Chief Black, will present the chief with a copy of the points on which he is to be cross-examined. The attorney is meanwhile to have full access to all the records of the department, and the board will request any witnesses he may name, to attend the meeting and give evidence of anything they may know against the chief. The fullest latitude is to be allowed in the investigation, and technical objections to questions which would hold good in a law court will not be considered if any information concerning the true state of affairs in the department is likely to be gained from the answer.

Meanwhile any person who has been retailing stories regarding the fire department about the streets of the city, or who has any definite information to give, is invited to attend the meeting or to lay his evidence before Mr. Neff.

The foregoing is the present status of affairs as the result of the meeting of the board of fire commissioners in the city hall last evening, when the agreement stated was received.

"You say there have been all kinds of stories going the rounds," said Chief Black. "I say bring those men here and let them substantiate what they say. I want the fullest and freest investigation of this matter and anything else, but I want the charges put in writing so I will know what I have to face."

"People have been jumping on me and saying we were afraid to hold an investigation," said Commissioner Merritt. "The idea is absurd. If there is anything wrong we want to know it."

"We have been put in the position of being unwilling to hold this investigation," said Commissioner Hollister. "We have been unable to get together, it seems. I have had a large quantity of advice on how this investigation should be conducted. One man said the only way to get at the truth would be to suspend Chief Black, and then the firemen would not be afraid to testify. Another man told me of several things that the board should look into. I said all right, and told him I would take his name and have him appear before the board and make his statements under oath. He then begged off and said he didn't want to be mixed up in it.

"The fact is that under the present system a great deal has to be trusted to the chief. I can buy supplies for a poultry house or a law office, but when it comes to buying a horse, I know when it is dead or alive, and that's about all. These details have to be entrusted to the chief. If there is any graft in the department we want to know it, however."

"In justice to the chief," said Commissioner Merritt, "I think we should state that he has repeatedly asked to be relieved of these duties."

"I wish to make my position clear," said Mr. Neff. "I am retained and paid by certain taxpayers in the city, who believe the department is not being conducted in a proper manner. I have no personal feelings against Chief Black, and it is merely a matter of business with me. All I want is to get at the truth of the matter, and if the chief can satisfactorily explain a number of things, I will be as glad as anyone to find that the department is being conducted in a proper manner."

LITIGATION IS SETTLED

Famous Stinson Estate in Superior to Be Divided.

After litigation covering a period of several years, that portion of the famous Stinson estate that lies within the city of Superior and Douglas county, Wis., has been placed in such shape that the various persons interested will acquire their rights.

This condition is said to have been brought about by a decision of the federal court at Chicago disallowing a $10,000 claim against the estate, made by R. M. Bashford of Madison. The decision affects only that portion of the estate within Douglas county.

According to the settlement, M. S. Bright of Superior, who has been receiver of the estate for many years, is to receive as his compensation 380 acres of the land in the county, the same to be selected by himself. The remaining 600 acres of the estate will be taken in charge by the city and county. Portions of the remaining acreage are likely to go to E. M. McCausland and others who hold tax certificates against the land. No taxes have been paid on the land since 1891 and it is expected that with the lands that will be conceded for the relinquishment of the tax certificates the remainder of the estate will be put in such condition that no trouble will be had hereafter in the collection of taxes.

NOTHING IS LEFT TO MAKE TROUBLE

Says John D. Ryan Regarding the Montana Copper Deal.

New York, Feb. 15.—Discussing the transaction by which a majority of the Heinze mines in Montana were taken over by the Cole syndicate, John D. Ryan, president of the Anaconda Copper company and the managing director of the Amalgamated Copper company, said:

"By the acquisition of the various properties from Heinze there is nothing left to make trouble or start litigation. The purchase has cleared the entire Montana situation for all time. The Montana copper producers will now be left in a position to produce copper cheaper than ever before and more of it.

"The name of the new company which will acquire the various Heinze properties has not been selected nor have the incorporation papers been filed. You can state, however, that the majority interests will be friendly to the Amalgamated Copper company and will be in a position to arrange all matters that might ever cause a dispute or conflict between themselves and the latter's subsidiary concerns.

"At the present time the pending litigation covers more than one hundred suits, involving $50,000,000 in claims. In the fight between the rival interests every possible claim was bought, so that there is now nothing left in the disputed area on which litigation might be started afresh. The purchase of these properties, therefore, includes the settlement of the suits."

Mr. Heinze, when seen, expressed satisfaction over the termination of the war and said the details which were made public during the day in Wall street were correct and that $25,000,000, which the United Copper company is reported to have received, was for the land in dispute and for that land only. Mr. Heinze says the amount of capital for the new corporation could depend on the final determination of the operating relations between the Amalgamated companies. Everything will be on a cash basis, and the details of settlement will be entirely with Thomas F. Cole and John D. Ryan of the Amalgamated Copper company.

VETERINARY GAVE MARE BELLADONIA

Sensational Affidavit as to Cause of Lou Dillon's Failure.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 15.—A sensational affidavit was made here yesterday in connection with the race at Memphis between Major Delmar and Lou Dillon. The affidavit is sworn to by A. H. Fehr, a veterinary surgeon, who claims that he was official veterinary at Memphis, officiating at the time the horses contested for the $5,000 gold cup. In his sworn statement Fehr says: "At the time of the trotting race meeting at Memphis when the celebrated race between Major Delmar, belonging to E. E. Smathers, and Lou Dillon, the property of C K. G. Billings, was trotted I was employed in the position of official veterinary of the association and was also in the employ of C. K. G. Billings.

"After the first heat between Major Delmar and Lou Dillon was trotted, I was summoned by Murray Howe in a great hurry. Howe seemed excited and the first thing he said to me was that Lou Dillon had an attack of the thumps or what we technically term in the profession, spasmodic contraction of the diaphragm. I went to the stall where the mare had been taken immediately after the first heat. She was closely guarded by a special officer and Murray Howe, who was at the time the personal representative of Mr. Billings, directed me to treat the mare for the thumps. I examined her and found nothing wrong with the mare more than some nervousness such as any horse would show after coming out of a hard race. Mr. Howe insisted that the mare should be treated for the thumps, and, of course, it is commonly known that belladonia is the drug used in such cases. It is also common knowledge that such a drug will deaden any animal and kill speed. Therefore, acting under orders, I administered a small dose of the drug which was sufficient to kill the speed of the strongest and fastest horse in the world for the time being. Under these conditions it was impossible for Lou Dillon to win the Memphis cup."

Publicity will always help a legitimate business, just as sunshine will make plants grow.

Buy Hair at Auction?

At any rate, you seem to be getting rid of it on auction-sale principles: "going, going, g-o-n-e!" Stop the auction with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It checks falling hair, and always restores color to gray hair. A splendid dressing also. Sold for over sixty years.

THE SCHOOL CITY.

A writer in the Century magazine describes interestingly the "school city," as it is being tried in Boston schools, and his report of results there leads to a hope that it may be tried in Duluth.

The school city is an experiment in self-government by the young people. They form their own government, make their own laws based on a fundamental law or charter provided by the authorities, elect their own officers, and in all practical respects govern themselves. A regular city government is formed. The pupils elect a mayor, judge, city clerk, aldermen representing the different rooms in a school, etc. They make laws in the council for the government of the school, subject to the provisions of the charter granted by the teachers or the school board, which secures the right of direct nominations and provides for the initiative and the referendum.

The need of a better training in citizenship than the people have had in the past has been shown conclusively by recent public events and disclosures. The training of citizens cannot begin too early, and it seems altogether probable that great good, not only in the discipline and government of the schools, but in the preparation of the pupils for their part in the world's affairs, can be accomplished by the school city.

One school adopted the Golden Rule as its fundamental law. The whole discipline of the school is put into the hands of the pupils, and with results astonishingly good. "In fact," says the writer, "there is more real self-government in these school cities than in most of our large cities. For there is no apathy, no stay-at-home vote, no political machine or boss. There is no graft, no boodle, no 'understanding' between the police and the wrong-doers."

It is claimed that the conduct and scholarship of the pupils in the schools adopting this plan were greatly improved. "A breach of order is no longer regarded as a defiance of an alien government, but as an injury and an insult to the community." Marked effects upon the character of individual pupils were reported. Bad boys, given positions of trust, became valiant supporters of law and order. Habits were formed that should make for good citizenship. A respect for the law and a comprehension of the privileges and responsibilities of self-government should surely grow out of the system.

It could do no harm, and it might do much good, to try this plan in Duluth.

A BOOMERANG ARGUMENT.

One argument that has been popular with opponents of federal rate regulation bids fair to prove a boomerang. This is the one showing that on some of the government-owned or government-controlled railroads of Europe rates are higher than on some of the railroads of the United States that are privately owned and whose owners want them to remain beyond the reach of lawful regulation.

Obviously, the point sought to be made is that the shippers are better off where the railroads make whatever rates they please than they are where the government either fixes the rates or fixes a reasonable maximum.

It is easily capable of proof that few European freight rates are very much higher than those of this country, and it is also easily shown that where they are higher the difference can quickly be accounted for by the denser population and the higher price of land.

But there are other features to be considered. In the house debates it was made to appear that the European rates include charges for drayage of goods from the consignor to the station and from the ultimate station to the consignee, this service being performed by the railroad company. It was also made to appear that the European rates include such high class traffic as the express companies carry in this country, and that while apparently rates may be slightly higher there, when it is shown that in this country much of this traffic has to be given to the express companies, who charge very much more for it than the European railroads do, it is made clear that the American shipper pays much more for shipping his goods than the European shipper pays.

This information makes it evident that those who have urged this argument against federal rate control have been guilty of telling but half the truth. They might as well have told a whole untruth, because the intent to deceive is present just the same. When the cost of drayage is considered, the difference in rates disappears at once. When it is realized that much matter that has to go at express rates in this country is handled by the European railroads at little more than regular freight rates here, it is quite clear that what was set up as an argument against government control of rates is about as good an argument in favor of federal regulation as anybody has yet offered.

CAUSES OF FAILURE.

It is entirely a natural instinct, when a man makes a failure of a thing he sets out to do, to blame it upon everything but himself. The baseball player who fans out blames the bat, the umpire, the wind, but never himself. The business man whose affairs come about his ears with a crash blames his luck, his customers, an enemy's machinations, but never himself.

In this connection Bradstreet issues some figures that show most failures to be due to the business men themselves. Bradstreet looks at things from a cold, unbiased standpoint, from which it seeks to get at the facts. It does not take it for granted, when there is a failure, that the cause came from without, but experience has taught it to look for a cause within. It usually finds it.

In 1905, for instance, there were in the United States 9,967 failures. These were the causes, with the number of failures that each produced: Lack of capital, 3,329; incompetence, 2,428; specific conditions, 1,629; fraud, 919; inexperience, 481; unwise credits, 346; neglect, 285; failures of others, 218; competition, 152; extravagance, 105; speculation, 75.

But three of the eleven reasons for failures can be blamed to outside causes: Specific conditions, which means disasters of various sorts, failure of others, and special or undue competition. All the rest—and they amount to four-fifths of the total—were chargeable to the faults of those who failed.

Business men, and those contemplating an entrance into business, can surely read lessons for themselves out of these figures. All these causes could be remedied. Incompetence, if recognized, can be remedied by hiring competent assistants; inexperience can be remedied by study; lack of capital can be remedied by starting in on a smaller scale, in accordance with ones means; unwise granting of credits can be remedied by proper caution; speculation outside of regular business, neglect of business and personal extravagance are all easily remedied. Fraud in business never pays, and never will pay. It may seem to pay for a time, but retribution is sure to come.

Only 20 per cent of the failures in 1905, therefore, out of nearly 10,000, were unavoidable because they came from outside sources. Lack of care, lack of honesty, lack of diligence, all personal lacks, are responsible for all the rest. Surely these figures should be full of value to the business world.

"NOT IN POLITICS."

One fertile source of carelessness in the conduct of public affairs is popular ignorance concerning them. When any considerable proportion of the public keeps posted on the affairs of local government, there is small chance of abuses of privilege on the part of public officers. Every effort, therefore, to inform the public concerning its affairs makes for better citizenship and better government.

President J. H. McFarland of the American Civic association tells in the Outlook about interviewing a "leading good citizen" of a prominent city, to get some points on public affairs, and this was the conversation:

"What is the debt of your city?" I asked.

"I—I don't know."

"Is there a legal limit to the bonded debt, and has it been reached?"

"Indeed, I've forgotten!"

"Do you remember the tax rate?"

"Er—well, it's pretty high."

"What is the total valuation, or assessment, for tax purposes?"

"Let me see; I think it is about—no, I don't remember."

"Do you know what the basis of the assessment is?"

"It seems to me it is about full valuation. Wait; no, it's 75 per cent, I think. You see," he added apologetically, "I don't look after these things. I'm not in politics!"

Very funny, isn't it? Ridiculous that a "prominent citizen," who doubtless figures in the local newspapers as a leading factor in the life of his community, should be so ignorant of things in which he, as a taxpayer, was so vitally interested.

But— How many citizens of Duluth could answer those questions if Mr. McFarland happened along and wanted to know something about Duluth?

Do you know the tax rate? Do you know the items that make it up? Do you know how much the county uses, how much the school district uses, how much the city uses, how much goes for fire and police and bond interest? Just ask a few leading citizens these questions and find out how much they know about it.

Duluth is not different from other cities in this respect. Most citizens only know that taxes come due once a year, that they don't like to pay them, that they have some vague sort of an idea that they pay too much, but they leave all the details and all the knowledge to the public officers whom they—or the political bosses—elect to handle these things. They "are not in politics," themselves.

Every citizen ought to know these things. Every citizen ought to keep track of public expenses, and object if he thinks they are not proper. The old way was to leave them to the public officers and let the bosses attend to selecting the officers. Is it any wonder things went wrong sometimes? On the contrary, where citizenship is so neglectful, citizens are lucky that the public buildings are not carted away.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"You can talk about your copper stocks and the satisfaction a person gets out of their possession, but for mine I will take shares in the Southwestern Wisconsin lead and zinc holdings, down around Platteville," said A. N. Sheldon of Milwaukee at the McKay. "The rise in value of mines in that district has been phenomenal.

"Some two or three years ago a few Platteville people clubbed together, leased some land in the city limits and started a drill. A little jack, or zinc was found and a shaft was sunk and drifting started. Many are the stories told of the disappointments, but the persistent faith and perseverance of a butter maker and a brewer, the prime movers in the project, kept the work going. In this manner, at an expense of $30,000, divided into 500 shares, the richest and one of the most famous zinc mines in the world was started and put on a paying basis.

"It is now, and for several months past has been paying a cash dividend of $10 a share on $500 shares every ten days, or equalling 600 per cent a year. How is that for a good investment? The Enterprise mine adjoining is following fast in the Empire's wake, and is now paying half the dividend of the Empire, with indications which make it look as if the mine would soon become the richest zinc property in the world from the stockholders' standpoint.

"There are seven or eight other mines in the city limits in the process of development, and probably twenty different drilling companies are conducting operations there. And yet lead and zinc mining in Southwestern Wisconsin is said to be only in its infancy. All over the zinc zone are thousands of drills and scores of mines in various stages of development. Scores of shafts are being sunk and a disposition is shown to develop the whole territory, which extends over quite a large area. The usual terms of the owner of the land is one-tenth royalty of the gross ore raised. Interested parties are going in there from all over the United States and many are from Canada, Mexico and England. The only talk one can hear is of mines, prospects, drilling propositions, sales and mining shares.

"The trains are crowded with people coming and going. Hotels are overflowing all the time, and private houses are taking in hundreds of boarders and roomers. In some cases it has even been found necessary to utilize livery barns as sleeping places for travelers at night. Dodgeville is just now the center of the lead craze. Chunks of lead weighing from 500 to 700 pounds, and 60 per cent pure, are being raised to the surface of the ground."

* * *

"Within the next four or five years Northern Minnesota will be as tame and domesticated as any other part of the country," said D. F. Carlson of Bemidji at the St. Louis. "I don't exactly mean that it will be thickly populated, and with the appearance of an old farming community, but it will be settled up sufficiently, with enough railroads and towns through the region, to change it entirely from the wild state it had been in since the world began.

"A remarkable change has been brought about in the last two years, and the two years coming will see even a greater development. Little towns are springing up all through the northern portion of the state, and one can go scarcely anywhere without finding a settler's cabin every quarter of a mile or so, where, a few years back, a person could sometimes travel a day or two without meeting a single white man, or running across his abode.

"And with the wildness is going the moose. I have always wanted to shoot a moose, but have been putting off the hunt from year to year, planning every summer to go after the big game the next fall, but, when the time came, contenting myself with deer. If I don't kill one of the big animals next fall I am afraid I never will, for the few moose that will be left in the state a season or two hence will be so shy that there will be small chance of their falling victims to the hunter's gun. The deer will last a good many years longer, for they do not object so strongly to the presence of man. I sometimes believe they like to be near town. Often deer hunting is as good two or three miles from a city as it is fifteen or twenty miles back in the woods. I don't know just why this should be, unless it is because the wolves are apt to be less plentiful nearer the towns."

"People out this way do not appear to believe me when I tell them how warm it has been in the East this winter, despite the reports that have appeared in the newspapers," said W. A. Dolan of Buffalo, N. Y., at the St. Louis. "Until about the end of January the weather down our way was like we usually get along in the fall of the year, and furs and winter clothes were in poor demand. Instead of taking sleigh rides the people looking for pleasure went boating.

"The same weather prevailed through Eastern Canada, playing havoc with the winter sports. In Montreal, you know, they generally have great times during the cold months. Tobogganing, snowshoeing, sleighing, skating and kindred sports are all the rage, and everyone takes part in them. Without them the people are at a loss, and don't know what to do to amuse themselves."

"The harmony banquet at St. Paul the other night stirred things up in Republican ranks in great shape," said State Senator William A. Smith of Windom, Minn., at the Spalding. "Nobody was able to see just where the harmony came in. It was pretty much the other way. The affair was really planned with the object of having a harmony gathering, and it was a mistake to bring up a subject that would make it anything else."

THE WEATHER

It was 8 degs. below zero last night, and the most of the moderation in temeperature expected last night was delayed until today. Those who fared forth into the open last evening looking for much milder temperature did not find any balmy June zephyrs to prove that it had come. This morning it was clear and fine, however, and few people realized that it was as cold as it was. The weather man says it will be partly cloudy and not so cold tonight, and that early tomorrow the temperature will get up close to 10 above. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The Oregon disturbance has gained energy and has moved its center to Alberta, causing a continuance of rains in Pacific states and a further moderation of temperature throughout the entire Northwest. The lowest temperature last night at Duluth was 8 degs. below zero and the weather tonight and Friday will be milder and generally fair under the influence of the easterly movement of the Alberta low pressure area. The cold wave is moving slowly eastward, being centered over Wisconsin, but it is somewhat warmer in all sections east of the Mississippi river, and some snow fell over Ohio valley and New England states as a result of the northeasterly movement of the disturbance off the North Atlantic coast."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man seldom ever has less sense than his children think he has.

Half the fun of having a good time is making people think you are having a better.

A woman can wear low shoes and keep her feet warm if she has on a hat that makes her friends jealous.

The devil doesn't worry about the churches so much as he would if he wasn't sure of the rows in the choir.

A woman would have a much larger bank balance if she weren't afraid the bank would play a trick on her and use it.

Governor Johnson's Fine Ideals.

Superior Telegram: Governor Johnson of Minnesota has been making some notable addresses at the Head of the Lakes. He is ecreainly stamping himself as a valuable official and a citizen of the soundest sense. The greatest service a man can render his fellows is to set before them true ideals of life. Governor Johnson in his address before the young men of Duluth on Sunday and at the Women's club breakfast at the Spalding on Monday was helpful in holding up the highest and best in life. These are the things which tend to make Governor Johnson popular with the people. When the people are reached it is always found that they most value the practical and the useful.

An Ounce of Prevention.

Oil City, Pa., Blizzard: An Oil City man, who believes than an ounce of prevention outweighs a pound of cure, conceived the idea, early in the winter, of winding the water pipes under his house with paper in order to prevent the water freezing. The scheme worked admirably, and only recently he was telling a friend about it and expatiating on the qualities of paper as a nonconductor. But last Saturday he met him again and said:

"You know I was telling you about putting paper around the water pipe?"

"Yes, I know; what about it?"

"Well, it worked all right, while the mild weather continued, but when this cold snap came the pipe froze up tighter than Billy B. Dam."

"What was the matter?"

"Nothing much, only when I crawled under the house to investigate I found I had wound the paper around the shut-off rod instead of the water pipe."

A Song of the Sea.

The poet who writes of the moaning sea,
Yo-ho!
He gets six lines for the price of three,
Yo-ho!
He needs but a ship and a roaring gale,
A spatter of spray and a flapping sail,
And then to the body he pins this tail:
Yo-ho!

No matter if weather be foul or fine,
Yo-ho!
He needs only write with every other line,
Yo-ho!
Just give him a biscuit and a glass of grog,
And when of his writing he heaves the log,
He never, no, never should slip this cog:
Yo-ho!

He needs never think of what's coming next,
Yo-ho!
If he only sticks to his seaman's text:
Yo-ho!
And this is a rhyme of the sea, because
With every odd stanza or so as you pause
And say, quite agreeably to these laws:
Yo-ho!

Dainty Foods Demand It

IN EVERY Receipt that calls for cream of tartar, soda, or baking powder, use the Royal Baking Powder. Better results will be obtained because of the absolute purity and great leavening strength of the Royal. It will make the food lighter, sweeter, of finer flavor, more digestible and wholesome. It is always reliable and uniform in its work.

Alum and phosphate baking powders—some of them sold at the same price and some of them cheaper—will make neither dainty nor wholesome food.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Arthur Russell Taylor of Nashua, Iowa, announces that he will open in Duluth, on April 5, a private school, open to boys and girls of 12 years of age or over, and with a limit of twenty pupils.

The Evening Herald has decided to publish the directory of Duluth for 1886-7. A canvass is now being made among advertisers by Joseph Stanton.

The members of the board of trade have established a pit in the center of the trading room. It is about sixteen feet long and is octagon in shape. There are three steps from the outer rim to the top, which is spacious. Inside are three other steps, which lead into the actual pit. Members were guessing today if it were possible to jump into the pit from the outside at a standing leap. Some one said that "a bear could do it, but a bull couldn't."

J. T. Rose has returned from a trip to Montreal, Buffalo, Cleveland and other shipping ports. The Grand Trunk railroad, he learned, will run the Roanoke and two other American steamers from Sarnia to Duluth next season for the interstate traffic, and the United Empire and other steamers will call here for Canadian business and for merchandise that is to be exported by way of Canada.

The St. Paul ice palace of 1887 is to be built by subscription of the business men, and no admission fee will be charged. The Hotel Ryan has already promised to start the list with $4,000. It is said that the barroom of this hotel has cleared on an average $600 a day during the present carnival.

A letter has been received from the Red Stocking Baseball club of St. Joe, Mo., asking admission to the proposed Northwestern league. It only remains to choose between St. Joe and Dubuque. The probable members of the league are Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Eau Claire, St. Joe and Duluth.

It was 20 deg. below zero this morning.

The Duluth, Park Point & Southern railroad has been incorporated to connect Rice's and Minnesota Points. The incorporators are Andrew D. Graff, Robert A. Smith, F. D. Banning and William Dawson, Jr., all of St. Paul.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Red Wing Republican: Patronizing home industry is spending money with those who are building up your own town. Isn't that better than spending it with those who are working to build up other towns?

St. Cloud Journal-Press: There is no occasion to get excited. If R. C. Dunn wishes to be a canddate for governor, that is his right. If Joel Heatwole wishes to use Dunn for his own private schemes, that is something he has done before. The Republicans of Minnesota are going to name the next governor, and the whims and wiles of the political schemers will not be permitted to stand in the way of victory.

Rochester Post and Record: Will Minnesota fall in line with the other states that have, or are about to enact anti-pass laws? It was tried at the last session of the legislature, but there were enough members who thought more of the seductive pasteboard giving them a free ride than of the people's interests, to defeat the bill.

International Falls Border Budget: The state central committee is in a quandry over the proper representation for the next convention and have conceived of a good many schemes, all of which have proven unsatisfactory. It would seem as though the vote cast for any of the state officials outside of governor would be a fair basis to go on.

Minneapolis Telegram: The hot-headed politician is frequently the one to show the first signs of "cold feet."

Bemidji Pioneer: If we base the coming political campaign on good citizenship, party principles and the welfare of the state, county and municipality we will find the substantial farmer, the good business and professional men working in harmony and interested in politics.

Crookston Times: Here are the Journal Press and the St. Cloud Times spitting at each other like two cross roads country papers, whereas both papers are as good as they make each other out to be bad.

Bemidji Sentinel: Some of our newspaper friends are busy naming candidates for governor. It reminds us of a saying of Horace Greeley in his trip across the plains, before the war. The stage was passing through droves of buffalo most of the time and as the passengers were all armed they kept up a constant bombardment, and as Greeley said, "It amused them but did not hurt the buffalo." Now, gents, when the city bosses, who elected Johnson and defeated Dunn, get the right candidate, they will let you know, so save all the ammunition you can.

Fairmount Sentinel: It is said that Roosevelt is ambitious to go to the United States senate. He ought to be there. Those old Madame Jarley wax works fogies need a few rough riders and cowboys to jar them off their pedestal of senatorial courtesy.

North Branch Review: Victor L. Johnson and C. M. Johnson are candidates for state senator from this district. If no other opposition appears, Mr. Johnson will win.

Staples World: According to the assessor's returns there are only thirty hogs in Minneapolis. We would wager a tin whistle that the farmers of the state could meet and name, off hand, more than thirty hogs in Minneapolis without exhausting the panel.

DOMESTIC PLEASANTRIES.

Detroit Free Press: "Beauty is only skin deep," wailed the pessimist.

"Well, what of it?" said the optimist girl. "Most women would be satisfied with that!"

Washington Star: "A French philosopher says jealousy is the greatest of misfortunes."

"Yes, it undoubtedly is. My wife's got so she won't invite any but old ladies in to play bridge, and most of these old stagers do know a lot about the game."

Boston Transcript: He—But, madam, you are quite mistaken. It was not so. I give you the word of a gentleman.

She—I refuse to have any third party brought into our discussion.

Cleveland Leader: Mr. McSosh—M'dear, why do you reproach me? Didn't you promise to share your husband's burdens? Hey?

Mrs. McSosh—Yes, Henry, but you have a load now that I cannot and will not help you with.

Philadelphia Ledger: Nell—Oh, that's your new hat, is it?

Belle—Yes, and such a bargain; only $18. What do you think? I dropped in to let Miss Grumley see it just now, and she pretended she wasn't interested. Didn't even ask how much I paid for it.

Nell—No, dear, she didn't have too. You've forgotten to take off that tag marked "$4.98."

Chicago Record-Herald: "Would you," she asked, "be satisfied with platonic love?"

"Well," he replied, "if it didn't involve an exchange of Christmas presents I might be willing to try it."

Philadelphia Press: Miss Knox—There goes Bess Mugley.

Miss Bright—Yes, she played the part of the heroine in the private theatricals at the church—

Miss Knox—Gracious! Did she have the face to play the heroine?

Miss Bright—No, but the costumer fixed one up for her."

Chicago Tribune: "When old Fladger came to this town, twenty-five years ago," said the man in the mackintosh, "everything he had in the world was on his back."

"And now?" queried the man who had his feet on the table.

"Well, his wife and six daughters have relieved him of the burden. They carry it all on their backs now."

OMINOUS RUMBLINGS FROM CHINA.

six of their assailants before they put them to flight.

"The officials, of course, were powerless to put an end to the uprising and it was only the warships that brought the affair to a speedy termination.

"That there will be trouble in China, is almost a certainty. All the Chinese want now is a leader. The hatred of foreigners is there and all the populace want is some one to stir them to repeat the atrocities of the Boxer uprising. The foreigner, who visits at Canton at present, does so at the risk of his life. The crowds gather about foreigners in the streets of the city, and on several occasions I have seen women insulted by the Chinese.

"The trade conditions in China at present are frightful. The boycott is as rigid as ever. Not one Chinese merchant would look at my goods. It is absolutely useless to endeavor to sell American manufactured goods to the Chinese. In the interior it is worse than in the larger cities."

BRITISH SEND GUNBOATS

Up to Canton to Protect Interests of the Foreigners.

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—The officers of the Doric bring the news of the dispatch of two British gunboats to Canton just before their departure from the Orient. The vessels were the gunboats Moorhen and Sandpiper, which were lying at Samshui and steamed up to Canton under secret orders. Just before the Doric left Shanghai, it was reported that there had been an uprising in the Sunning district, near Canton, and that the magistrate and many people had been killed. It was stated that rebels had gathered in force and were marching on Sunning City. The inhabitants of the district were fleeing to Macao.

In Canton the boycott is most rigid. There messages from San Francisco Chinese merchants urging a continuance of the boycott are posted on the walls. In addition to the anti-foreign agitation in Canton, there is also an anti-dynastic movement. The officers of the Doric learned that in Canton, Hunan braves were being drilled with a view of taking part in an up rising against the present dynasty.

CHINESE MERCHANTS

Forced to Boycott American Goods by Power of Guilds.

Washington, Feb. 15.—From the many reports received by the state department from its representatives in the East, relative to the anti-American boycott, its extent, the prospects of its continuance and the amount of injury it has inflicted on American trade, two, selected at random from the North and the South, have been made public. In neither is there any hint of violence and the movement, it is stated, is confined strictly to trade limits.

The report from North China, brings the history of events up to the close of 1905. At that date the boycott movement had been "nearly all talk" in the principal cities, says the correspondent, who adds:

"The student class, as the willing workers of the boycott organization, has done its best to keep the issue alive, and to some extent has succeeded much against the wishes of the merchants, who have had enough and never want to see another boycott. But this talk and undercurrent of agitation has not been shown to any great extent in the busines affairs related to American products. There has been timidity in buying and in some instances cancellation of orders under the spur of threats, but despite denials from some Americans, it is well known to the majority that such conduct on the part of Chinese buyers has not been the rule. This statement, however, does not apply to the product of the Standard Oil company, which has been opposed in many places outside of the principal cities of Northern China. As to that section it can only be said, that thorough investigation will prove that trade competition has as much to do with it as Chinese antagonism.

That underhand methods have been employed against the Standard Oil company and the British-American Tobacco company is becoming plainer every day. At present the attack on these two companies is apparently centered in and around Hankow where obscene circulars have appeared and also many evidences of unfriendly intent. But at Soochow, Chinkiang, Chang Chow, Wuhu, Kiuklang, and many other places tributary to and on the Yangtze there has also been more or less antagonism of late. The merchants are against the boycott, but under the lash of the guilds, they must give a half-hearted acquiescence at least. If the officials so desire they can squelch the recrudescense of the movement in this section and by so doing will gain the support of the merchants. But again there is the now powerful student class, which under the teachings of foreign educated Chinese and perhaps others not friendly to American interests where they conflict with their own, has developed an influence recognized by officials, guilds, merchants and laborers."

From South China and in fact clear down to the straits settlements comes the report that there is no improvement in the boycott situation; that trade is badly affeced in most lines and there is little or no business outside the small European trade. An American sewing machine company reports that Chinese are afraid to go into its places, "although some would like to buy, but dare not have a machine in their possession. Still the authorities claim there is no recognition here."

The report concludes: "If the boycott is called off tomorrow it will take many years to remove the ill effect from the injury done. At Penang American firms could not move any American goods in their godowns and Chinese refused to take the goods which they had already ordered."

COAL OPERATORS AND MINERS CONCILIATORY.

the miners hoped for an amicable agreement. The experience of both sides in the great strike of 1902 has caused them to approach the present situation in a conciliatory mood. In that contest the mine workers, according to estimates made by the strike commission, lost in wages about $25,000,000 and the coal production fell off 24,500,000 tons. The receipts of the coal companies in that year were reduced $46,100,000 and those of the railroads about $25,000,000, making a total loss in 1902 of $125,100,000. In order to avoid another contest and not disturb the industry the operators are ready to make concessions in the way of the correction of grievances that have arisen during the life of the commission's award.

This is indicated in the letter of President David Willcox of the Delaware & Hudson company to Mr. Mitchell. The attitude of the miners' union officials during the past week leads to the belief among those who have studied the situation that the men are so anxious to have an annual agreement with the operators, that they will not insist upon the granting of all their demands. While the union officials are silent on the subject, it is understood that if the operators are reasonably liberal, from the miners' point of view, and an agreement is in sight, the union will not push the organization to the front and press for its recognition. The operators are a unit against recognizing the miners' association as at present constituted. They have steadily refused to treat with Mr. Mitchell as representative of the union. When he appeared before the strike commission he was there as a foreign representative of the anthracite coal mine workers, and not in his official character as president of the union. The arbitrators declined to make an award of the matter of the recognition of the union because the organization was not officially before them, and also, because the question of the recognition of the union was not within the scope of its jurisdiction. The commission, however, was of the belief that the suggestion of a working agreement between employers and employes embodying the doctrine of collective bargaining contained many hopeful elements for the adjustment of relations in the mining regions.

COMING ATTRACTION.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, "Piff, Paff, Pouff."

"PIFF, PAFF, POUF."

"Piff, Paff, Pouf." Bright, cheery, entrancing, is the description given this comedy, which will be presented at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday. The music is tuneful, the dances unique, the dialogue bright, the music entrancing. The company includes such names as Fred W. Mace, Katheryn Osterman, R. E. Graham, Dorothy Maynard, James Devlin, Lulu McConnell, Lisle Bloodgood, and a number of others as well known. There is also the Pony Ballet, an octette of pretty,

The story of "Piff, Paff, Pouf" concerns a man by the name of August Nelson, who is left a fortune by his deceased wife on condition that he does not marry until all of his four daughters find husbands. As the gay widower cruised around Atlantic City, he met the handsome Widow Montague, whom he at once declares to be his affinity. She agrees with him, and they immediately formulate plans for marrying off the four daughters. Of course the situations resulting are exceedingly funny.

LADIES' NIGHT.

No smoking will be permitted at the Metropolitan this evening, it being ladies' night. Tomorrow night will be for amateurs and gold prizes will be given to those local performers who win the most applause.

The Avenue Girls have found much favor with the patrons of the "Met" and George P. Murphy and May Curtis seem to have made the greatest individual hits. Mr. Murphy is a funny German comedian and Miss Curtis is a veritable dream of loveliness, equipped with an excellent contralto voice. Her imitations of Ethel Levy and Fay Templeton are very good. She also sings a new song that has made a hit at every performance. It is called "If a Boy Like You Loved a Girl Like Me."

LITTLE CHANGE IN McCALL.

Lakewood, N. J., Feb. 15.—Little change in the conditions of John A. McCall, former president of the New York Life Insurance company, was reported by his physicians today. "Mr. McCall," said Dr. Lindley, "passed a pretty comfortable night and his condition is just the same as it was yesterday. I do not think he can be said to be in immediate danger."

AFTER THE GUARANTY

Property Owners in Hill District Organize to Secure It.

Committees Appointed From Each Ward to Push the Work.

Property owners in the hill district to the number of about fifty gathered at the city hall last evening to discuss plans for raising the necessary guaranty to secure the extensions of the water and gas mains.

The meeting was called by the aldermen of the Second, Third and Fifth wards. Alderman McEwen was chosen chairman.

The estimated cost of the hill district extensions is $125,000, which includes the supplementary reservoir. Exclusive of the reservoir, the cost of which will not have to be covered by the guaranty, the property owners will have to pledge an income of 8 per cent on $100,000, which is a liberal estimate. The city council, if it follows the usual rule, will take care of $1,000 of this in hydrant rentals, leaving about $7,000, which is the maximum amount to be pledged by the property owners in the district affected by the extensions.

The property owners have had petitions out for some time, but the progress in securing signatures has not been very rapid. As a result of the meeting last evening, however, an energetic campaign will be at once begun.

On the request of those present, Chairman McEwen named a committee of three citizens from each ward to take charge of the work of securing signatures to the petitions. Their names were as follows: Second ward—S. F. Staples, Alderman N. Mueller, B. Kribsback. Third ward—Alderman Tessman, Carl Wiberg and H. A. Nelson. Fifth ward—Andrew Johnson, H. A. Wing and Alderman Ribenack.

Each committee will have charge of the work of securing signatures to the petition in its own ward, and they will work together to raise the required guaranty of $7,000.

The members of the committee will meet Friday evening at the Labor World office to report progress on the work.

The property owners present last evening were very enthusiastic regarding the possibility of getting water extensions, and were confident of securing the required guaranty. The bonds have been authorized, and it now rests with the proprty owners themselves to say whether or not they want water extensions. If they can show the water board that the extensions will pay interest on the bonds and maintenance charges, the extensions will be made.

A NEW RECORD ESTABLISHED

By the Production of Pig Iron for Month of January.

New York, Feb. 15.—The Iron Age says: January established a new record for pig iron production, statistics showing a total of 2,068,893 gross tons of coke and anthracite iron as compared with 2,045,718 tons in December, an increase of 23,175 tons. The previous record was 2,053,174 tons in October, 1905. The weekly capacity active on Feb. 1 was 482,746 tons against 463,673 tons on Jan. 1, so that pig iron is now being made at a rate above 25,000,000 tons a year, in addition to 30,000 tons a month of charcoal iron. The United States Steel corporation for the past seven weeks has had eighty-eight out of eighty-nine furnaces in blast and now has eighty-seven active. The conditions of the iron market is one of steadiness and srength. Premiums for early delivery are less than they were and in some cases have disappeared.

In respect to tinplates, sheets, wire products and pipe the situation is unusual. At this time of year the plants of the Steel corporation in these lines ordinarily accumulate stock against the spring demand, but this year accumulation has been impossible. Of the corporation's sheet mills 100 per cent were in operation last week and of tinplate mills 90 per cent, steel not being available for all. Foreign steel markets show increasing strength and recently for the first time prices in finished lines abroad have risen to a parity with those on this side, in some cases being higher.

Structural business, both current and prospective, is far beyond precedent or expectation. In the territory immediately tributary to Pittsburg 100,000 tons of steel will be required for work now being figured on. In New York city the bulk of the 200,000 tons under negotiation is expected to be placed by early spring.

Railroads continued to place supplementary orders including in the past week 5,300 tons for the Boston & Maine, 12,500 tons for the Pennsylvania railroad and 5,000 tons for the Chesapeake & Ohio. In export rails is mentioned a good sized order for Panama. An advance of $1 a ton has been made in hoops. Bar iron continues to approach the level of steel after selling $8 to $10 a ton higher. The pig iron market has been quiet, apart from a burst of activity in the Chicago district where over 30,000 tons of foundry iron is under negotiation. Southern shipments have been heavy in view of the advance in freights on March 1. The Steel corporation has bought 15,000 tons of Bessemer from Valley furnaces for shipment to Chicago.

SURPRISE THE RECTOR.

Parishioners of Rev. R. J. Mooney Remember and Celebrate Birthday.

A most delightful surprise party was given last evening on Rev. R. J. Mooney, at his home on West Third street. Mr. Mooney had been out helping a couple into the holy bonds of wedlock, and on his return to the house found it in possession of quite a number of his parishioners of the Holy Apostles church at West Duluth and St. Luke's church at the West end. The visitors were very thorough in their surprise, for they not only brought with them the edibles for the affair, but an elaborate arrangement of flowers and red heart decorations, with which they adorned the house. They also brought a heart-shaped, birthday cake, with the requisite number of candles on it, the number of which Mr. Mooney refuses to have published. The refreshments were all heart-shaped, and the Valentine scheme was carried out consistently in red.

As a birthday present Mr. Mooney was presented with a handsome white stole, which Mrs. E. G. Swanstrom presented in behalf of the other friends. Mr. Mooney fittingly replied. The stole is of white corded silk and is beautifully embroidered.

Those largely creditable for the success of the surprise are Mrs. McPherson and Misses Dolly Simpson, Zulu Henneberger, Edith Bell and Ethel White.

FIRED JAIL AT LANCASTER.

Serious Charge Against Farmer Held to Grand Jury.

Hallock, Minn., Feb. 15.—William Amos, a farmer, was held to the grand jury in $500 bonds on the charge of setting fire to the village jail at Lancaster. It appears that Amos was arrested because of being drunk and disorderly, and when locked up, it is said, he set fire to the jail. While the firemen were putting out the fire Amos escaped, but was brought to Hallock by Sheriff Anderson yesterday.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

President Roosevelt Wednesday afternoon received and accepted the resignation of John G. Brady, as governor of Alaska. The resignation was handed to the president on behalf of Governor Brady by Judge Peele of New York.

The jury in the case of Mrs. Emmet Perdue, charged with the murder of her husband at Richmond, Mo., Wednesday, returned a verdict of not guilty.

The Red Cross Wednesday received from the Christian Herald of New York $10,000 for the relief of the famine stricken Japanese, as the result of the appeal issued Tuesday by President Roosevelt.

Dean Reese, aged 18 years, accidentally killed his mother at Guthrie Center, Iowa, Wednesday. Young Reese was playing with a revolver, which he pointed at his mother in a playful way and pulled the trigger.

Charles Raines, mayor of Milford, Ill., and Gilbert Vennum, a politician of Milford, who were bound over to the grand jury a few days ago on the charge of spiriting away witnesses in the first case. Both were bound over to the grand jury, each furnishing $2,000 bail.

The United States revenue cutter Seminole and the steamer Compton came into Wilmington, N. C., Wednesday night from a fruitless search all day for the Frying Pan shoals lightship, which was torn adrift from its moorings in Monday night's storm. The buoy tender Wisteria also is searching for the lightship.

Mrs. Carrie Nation appeared at a Hot Springs, Ark., barroom Wednesday, began lecturing the crowd, was ejected and lodged in jail charged with disturbing the peace. Later she was released.

Governor A. B. Cummins Wednesday wrote to Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, notifying him that he could not serve on the commission suggested by Mr. Lawson to vote proxies held by him in the New York Life and Mutual companies.

At the meeting of Methodist editors and publishers at Cincinnati Wednesday it was decided that every printing establishment controlled by the Methodist book concerns shall hereafter be run on the "open shop" plan. The decision applies particularly to the printing plants in Cincinnati, Chicago and New York.

The alienists who examined into the mental condition of James Brady, the young man who confessed that he stabbed women in the public streets at St. Louis Wednesday, reported that Brady shows no evidences of insanity. When Brady was informed of the report he said: "I knew they would find me sane. They could not do anything else, because I am as sane as any one."

The Widell-Finley company, extensive contractors of Mankato, Minn., applied in conjunction with creditors for the appointment of a receiver Wednesday and Fred Kron and W. J Morehart of Mankato and John A. Nelson of Minneapolis were appointed by Judge Lochren. The schedule of the assets and liabilities has not been completed and until it is no definite figures can be given.

WILL PUT IN FISHWAY.

Action Which Will be of Benefit to Akeley People.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Game Warden Rutledge was at Akeley and Park Rapids this week, and on Thursday had Louis Berg arrested and brought before Justice Estby, at Akeley, where he pleaded guilty to not having put a fishway in the dam which he owns on the Crow Wing river, after having been served with notice to do so ten days ago. Berg has agreed to put in the fishway, and will commence construction of the same within five days, in order that the fish may pass freely up and down the river from what is known as the First lake to Tenth lake, at Akeley. Another dam, at the mouth of First lake, on the line between Hubbard and Crow Wing counties, has been complained of and the Weyerhaeuser syndicate will be required to place a fishway in that dam.

The Commercial club of Akeley took up the matter of the dams, and Executive Agent Fullerton of the game and fish commission referred the matter to Mr. Rutledge, who has acted promptly in the matter, with good results. It is the intention of the game and fish commission to require every owner of a dam across any lake or stream which impedes the free passage of fish to put in fishways. The putting in of the fishway in the Berg dam will greatly benefit Akeley in the matter of replenishing the lake at that place.

FREAR'S CANDIDACY.

Hudson Man Aspires to be Wisconsin's Secretary of State.

Hudson, Wis., Feb. 15.—State Senator James A. Frear of Hudson, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for secretary of state. He has always been a strong supporter of Senator R. M. LaFollette, but, in his announcement, shows a disposition to promote political harmony in the state. He has been brought prominently before the public during the past month by reason of his position as chairman of the special legislative committee to probe life insurance companies of Wisconsin.

Senator Frear was born in this city Oct. 24, 1861. He studied in Lawrence university and graduated from the National Law university of Washington, D. C. He was in the law office once of Senator John C. Spooner at Hudson, for a year, has served as district attorney of St. Croix county for three terms, as assemblyman for two years, and was elected to the state senate in 1904.

Danderine

GREW THIS HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT.

MISS MARMARA HENRY,
5036 Forrestville Ave., CHICAGO.

Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handsful, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was."

Mrs. Eloise Atherton, Little Rock, Ark., says: "It is surely remarkable the way Danderine improves the hair. It has made my hair grow ten inches longer in five months and it is getting thicker and longer all the time. I believe in giving praise where it is due, and you can use my name as reference if you so desire."

FLORENCE RUSSELL,
Age 6 years,
215 Mohawk Street, CHICAGO.

Since it has become generally known that Danderine causes hair to grow just as abundantly on the heads of children as it does on those of matured persons, many truly marvelous cases are coming to our notice. Little Miss Russell, whose photograph appears above, is certainly one of the remarkable ones. Her beautiful hair is over thirty inches long and her mother says that "DANDERINE GREW EVERY BIT OF IT."

MISS SELMA HASSELL,
2728 North 42d Court, CHICAGO.

Miss Hassel says: "My hair would not reach below my waist when I began using your Danderine. It was also faded and splitting at the ends. Now it is over 2½ feet longer than it ever was and it has regained its original rich blond color. I used the tonic about four months all together."

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, fertilizing and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. IT IS THE NATURAL FOOD OF THE HAIR, SCIENTIFICALLY CHARGED WITH NEW AND GENUINE LIFE-PRODUCING ESSENCES UNHEARD OF BY OTHER MAKERS OF HAIR TONIC. NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and ten cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

Mrs. A. Whittington, Homestead, Pa., cured of consumptive cough by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

"I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for over 20 years and have always found it a successful cure. This winter I had the worst cough that I ever had in my life, and I took Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It did me a lot of good. Every one thought that I was going into consumption, but I am all right now. I have told many of my friends about this remedy." Mrs. A. Whittington, 240-17th Ave., Homestead, Pa.

Coughs, colds and grippe are prevailing generally, and few people realize how dangerous they are. No man, woman or child ever escapes them, and what is first considered only a trifling cold or cough, eventually develops consumption, and causes death.

When you have a cold; when you cough much; when you expectorate often; when there is shortness of breath, hoarseness, rattling and wheezing sensations in the throat and lungs, it tells the approach of consumption.

For this very dangerous condition is an absolute cure. It has given hope and restored health to thousands whom physicians had foredoomed to an early grave, and will do the same for you. Consumption is positively prevented by taking Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

Upon Wednesday evenings at the Y. W. C. A. rooms, charming cooks coquettishly concoct creamy cakes, custards and canny cookery to cultivate catering for capricious chaps, who candidly contemplate a certain ceremony. Carrots en casserole, cheese chafed, clam showder, carp, caulillowers, cucumbers and chocolate carefully combined contribute cleverly to concise courtship. Comelinesss constrains compliments, but competent control of the commisariat compels concentrated compilance to Cupid'ss commands. Cold consomme or conglomerate cooking conveys conviction of cursory culinary cultivation, and cynical contempt culminates in a crushing crash of corrected credence. Consigning cook and cooking to continuous crackling, the commercial crusader culpably countermands the civil contract, and the crestfallen cook contemplates a course in the domestic science department of the Young Women's Christian asssociation.

This Wednesday evening class is one of the most interesting of the educational classes that meet at the association rooms, for almost every one of the members wears upon the third finger of her left hand a sparkling gem, and at the end of the hour's lesson, flushd faces and slightly disarranged hair testify mutely to the efforts that are being made for the future comfort of the original owner of said glittering gem. Last evening the new term was begun, and although the lack of space limits the number of members, there are few classes so well attended, or work accompilshed with such interest.

The Valentine party last evening at at the Young Women's Christian association was one of the most delightful affairs that the association members and their friends have enjoyed for many months. Of course the men friends of the members were invited, for who ever heard of a successful Valentine party at which there was not a big sprinkling of men? The men were not only invited, but came. The rooms were decorated with countless hearts of one shape and all sizes. Games typical of the festival were played. Postoffice, not the kind, however, that made childhood's parties such hilarious and scampish affairs. At this postoffice all the guests received valentines. Hearts were hunted, and arrows were pinned upon one big muslin heart, and bachelors and maidens were weighed and auctioned, and the entire affair was most delightful and greatly enjoyed.

Birthday Party.

Mrs. George H. Anthony entertained at a delightful birthday party last evening, at her home in the Belvidere apartments, on Fifteenth avenue east. The affair was in honor of Mr. Anthony's birthday, and he was presented with a cut glass decanter and glasses. The hostess was assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Drake of Chicago and Miss Alma Anthony. Those present were:

Messrs. and Mesdames—
J. B. Hanson, C. F. Rowe,
William Burgess, C. L. Kennedy,
G. W. Mandeville, J. H. McFalzean,
A. E. Kirby, W. S. Chadwick.
Mrs. S. J. Bigelow,

To Give Reading.

A program will be presented at the church parlors of the Pilgrim Congregational church, tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the Altrurian club of that church. The feature of the entertainment will be the reading of "Monsieur Beaucaire," by Prof. Bergen of Superior. This exquisite little story lends itself admirably to the reader's art, and Mr. Bergen is a dramatic reader and Shakepearean student of prominence. Musical numbers will also be given by members of the club.

Valentine Affair.

Miss Alice Webster entertained at a valentine dinner last evening in the private dining room of Webster's restaurant. The centerpiece was four hearts formed of red carnations and jeqio aqi pauuuj sjaeus pai jeqjmus decorations. The place cards were charming little valentines with the menu inside. Covers were laid for:

Misses—
Webster, Lyle,
Pansy Wirth, Effie Mintle,
Elbrose Taylor, Evelyn Greenfield,
Elsie Prudden,
Messrs.—
Irving Lovett, Sidney Everett,
William Liddell, Garfield Wood,
Harry Rowe, Adolph Wirth.
Philip Ebar,

Wedded at Home.

The wedding of Miss Ethel McMullen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McMullen, and Alexander Graham, took place last evening at the home of the bride's parents, 313 Second avenue west. The bride was attended by Miss Harriet McMullen and the best man was William McMullen, Jr. The wedding music was played by Miss Leona Greiser and the wedding service was read by Rev. T. H. Cleland of the First Presbyterian church. The bride wore a dainty gown of white mull, trimmed with lace and carried brides' roses and the bridesmaid wore white mull and carried pink flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Graham left for a wedding trip to Canada and on their return will be at home on West Fifth street. The bride's going away gown was of dark red with hat to match.

Of General Interest.

Mrs. Clarence Taylor entertained at cards yesterday afternoon at her home, 1112 East Third street. The rooms were prettily decorated in pink hearts and dainty pink tulips. Six hand euchre was played and the favors were won by Miss Maginnis and Miss Grace Sheridan.

The Bachelors entertained at their February party last evening at the old Masonic Temple. The hall was prettily decorated in numbers of red hearts and La Brosse played a delightful program of music.

• • •

Mrs. L. P. Totman and Mrs. H. B. Moore entertained informally yesterday afternoon at bridge at Mrs. Totman's home, 711 East First street.

• • •

Mrs. Charles A. Dann and daughter Ruth of 207 South Seventeenth avenue east left last evening for a few days' visit with friends at Minneapolis.

Pupils' Recital.

The pupils of Miss Fulton appeared in a very pleasing recital last evening at the home of their teacher, 229 Fourth avenue west. A large number of the friends of the small musicians were present, and the program was thoroughly enjoyed. Especially pleasing was the contralto solo by Miss Vivian Maser, who sang "I Love and the World is Mine," by Manney, and "Sing Me to Sleep," by Greene. The violin obligato, by Miss Virginia Bean, added much to the enjoyment of the numbers.

Farewell Party.

Mrs. William Webb entertained yesterday afternoon at a surprise party at her home on Duluth Heights, in honor of Mrs. George Knight of that suburb, who will leave that suburb forhome at 2903 West Third street.

Pretty Wedding.

A pretty home wedding took place last evening, when Miss Jennie Penhale, daughter of Mrs. Lucy Penhale, became the bride of Theodore Schnuckle, at the home of the bride's mother, 2824 West Third street. The house was prettily decorated in ferns and smilax and flowers, and a large number of guests were present. The service was read by Rev. R. J. Mooney at 8:30 o'clock. The bride and groom stood under a bell of dainty ferns, with the clapper of bride's roses. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Van Rosmanlen. The bride wore a pretty gown of champaign color, trimmed in lace. Mr. and Mrs. Schnuckle left for a short wedding trip, and after their return will be at 2903 West Third street.

SILK AUTOMOBILE COAT. PINK TAFFETA SILK. GRAY CASHMERE GOWN.

Smart Gowns and Wraps of Light Material Seen Now.

Some of the smartest gowns seen in New York this season are those worn by Miss Ellis Jeffreys in "The Fascinating Mr. Vandervelt," at Daly's theater.

Decidedly charming is a pink silk taffeta seen in the first act. The skirt is slightly fulled into the belt, and about ten inches from the hem in front, graduating up slightly toward the back, are designs certainly three-quarters of a yard in diameter, made of the silk. These are almost perfect circles, the outer edge about an inch wide, formed by a scant puffing. This is held down by a fine cord, and within is another puffing so arranged as to be scalloped on the inner edge, it being three inches at its widest point. The cord again emphasizes the scallop, and within the design is repeated a little ladder formed of the cord. This ladder, of course, follows the circular scheme, but runs almost to a sharp point at the top of the loop. Within this is drawn another almost flat puffing of the silk, about five inches wide, and an oblong spider's web or cord forms the very center. There are six of these, completely circling the skirt, which has no other trimming.

The waist is a charming blouse, open in the front to show a flat waistcoat of white tucked chiffon. Over this is laid lace so that the edge comes from under the pink loose fronts. Across the bust line is a piece of Persian embroidery, like a chemisette, and below that the pink blouse meets and is drawn into a narrow pink belt of silk. The short sleeves have two lace ruffles. The collar is lace. The gown is a triumph of simplicity and style.

An automobile coat of ecru silk is long and tight fitting in back, the sole trimming being a wide border in brown done in the Greek key design. The garment is one that might be worn in the country in the summer, or for traveling.

In the last act a gray cashmere is another exquisite frock. A narrow panel front is defined in the skirt by piping the seams with the same stuff. Just below the knees is a tailored design of the cloth stitched on to form a wide border. The waist blouses, and like the pink has a tucked white front. Over it loosely drawn like surplice folds is white chiffon, also tucked and crossing at the bust line, where five fancy buttons on the edge of the folds make a trimming. Just back of this edge are two strands of lace like a fichu, coming from the shoulder seam, that are twisted below the crossing, and brought into a cut steel buckle with flat gray bow just above the belt, a distinctly novel finish. The edges of the cashmere are embroidered in raised flowers, all in gray, and the short sleeves have turn back cuffs.

Mrs. Telford's Recipes for Herald Readers

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

My dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly give recipe for aspic jelly and black bean soup and oblige, P. B. T.

Aspic Jelly (Quick Process).

Aspic jelly, in these days of hurry, is usually made with gelatine and requires but thirty minutes for its accomplishment. The cooling, of course, takes several hours. Soak half a box gelatine in a generous half cupful of cold water for half an hour; put into a saucepan a pint of any good stock or consomme, adding a slice of onion, a bay leaf, a stalk of celery and a couple of cloves; simmer gently for ten minutes, add the soaked gelatine, season with salt and pepper to taste, strain and set away to cool. If you do not have the stock on hand dissolve a teaspoonful of beef extract in a pint of boiling water and substitute for the stock. Pour into a mould or basin that has been soaked in cold water, and when hard serve as a border or cut in blocks for garnishing.

Aspic Jelly Without Gelatine.

Old-fashioned housekeepers cling to the old way of making aspic, claiming that its flavor is far superior to the easier made product. It is indeed excellent and in cold weather keeps its form quite as well as where gelatine is used to stiffen.

Get from the butcher, a knuckle bone of ham, a calf's foot and a knuckle of veal. Put into two quarts of cold water, and set over the fire where it will come slowly to a boil. Add one onion with four cloves stuck into it, a large carrot, a bunch of soup herbs and a spice bag. Cook gently for four or five hours until the water is reduced about one-half. Strain and set aside to cool.

When cold remove every suspicion of fat, and return the thickened jelly to a clean saucepan with the crushed shells and beaten whites of two eggs, a tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar, and lemon julce or wine as perferred, to season. Salt and pepper to taste, and keep stirring until the jelly nearly reaches the boiling point and a thick scum has formed. Remove that, then draw to one side of the fire and simmer gently for fifteen minutes. Set back covered, until the jelly settles, then strain through a jelly bag, two or three times until quite clear. Pour into a mould that has been soaked in cold water, then pack in a pan of snow or broken ice until hard. If you desire to have the jelly a pretty red color, add sufficient tomato to color, at the same time you add the lemon or wine.

Philadelphia Black Bean Soup.

Wash one pint of the black or turtle beans, cover well with cold water and let them soak over night in the soup kettle with five quarts of cold water, add a half pound salt pork cut in fine pieces and a quarter pound lean fresh beef. Cover closely and cook slowly over a moderate fire. Chop fine one carrot, one small turnip and two small onions. Add to the other ingredients and cook slowly two or three hours. Half an hour before serving season with salt, pepper, a tiny pinch of mace and a little ground clove. Strain through a colander and add a half gill of sherry or port wine. Have ready in a hot tureen three or four hard boiled eggs sliced and one lemon cut in thin slices. Pour the soup over them and serve.

Sometimes very small sausages are boiled for ten minutes in the soup and then served one in each plate.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly give me a recipe for crullers that won't get hard the first day? Also for fried cakes.

READER.

Recipe for Crullers.

The dryness of your crullers, I fancy, is due either to too much flour or too much egg. Try this recipe, which was given at the Boston Cooking school: Two cups flour, three-fourths teaspoonful salt, three-fourths teaspoonful of soda, three-fourths teaspoonful cream of tartar, one-fourth tablespoonful of butter, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup sour milk, one small egg, one-fourth teaspoonful nutmeg and cinnamon. Measure flour that has been already sifted, and put into a bowl with the salt, soda, cream of tartar and spices. Mix well, add the butter, rubbing in finely with the fingers. Now add the sugar, beaten egg and sour milk, stir into a soft dough and toss on a well floured moulding board. Pat and roll to a sheet one-fourth of an inch thick, cut out in rings and fry in deep hot fat. As soon as the cakes come to the top lift and turn by a fork passed through the ring and lay on soft brown paper to drain. When nearly cool roll in sifted sugar. When quite cold pack away in a stone crock, cover close, and you will have no trouble about their drying.

Doughnuts as well as gingerbread are always more tender and moist when made of sour milk. Do not have the lard too hot, as doughnuts should not brown as quickly as croquettes. They need longer cooking. If you try this recipe once, I am sure you will be so well pleased that next time you will wish to double the recipe.

Doughnuts may be made in the same way or with yeast like the old-fashioned olykoeks.

Dutch Doughnuts.

Beat to a cream one scant cup of butter and two cups sugar. Add two well beaten eggs, then stir in two cups milk that have been scalded and cooled to lukewarm. Mix with flour to a moderately stiff batter, beat well and add one cup good home made or brewer's yeast, or one compressed yeast cake dissolved in a little tepid water. Beat thoroughly, adding, if necessary, a little more flour. Rub the surface with a little melted lard, cover closely and put to rise over night in a warm place. In the morning the mass should be double its bulk. Turn out on to a well floured board, roll out about an inch in thickness, then with a round cutter stamp out in small cakes. With a sharp knife cut a slit in the side of each cake, and insert a raisin or bit of any sweetmeat. Dip the fingers in water and press the dough together over the fruit. Roll lightly in flour again, let the balls rise a few moments longer, then fry in a kettle of deep fat. Let the cakes cook about ten minutes, turning with a wire spoon. Drain on brown paper, then roll in powdered sugar, and when cold pack away in a stone crock.

Early Spring Street Suit from Model Made in Paris

A smart spring model is that shown in the illustration. The brown cloth coat is made in the empire style, the skirt being long and full, but not plaited to correspond. The model is from Le Moniteur de la Mode.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Bananas, 20 to 25 cents a dozen.

Spinach, 50 cents a peck.

Cauliflower, 20 cents a piece.

Sea fish.

Veal loaf, 20 cents a lb.

The market is hopelessly uninteresting, except to the starving man. The same things, occasionally renewed, stand in the same places, and are ordered by the same people to be sent to the same address. A tarantula among the fat and yellow bananas would be almost welcome, but there hasn't been one seen in this town for months, and if one happened to appear it would probably be the harmless kind.

"Them sea fish look nice," said the market man. "There's the 'alibut, salmon and cod that haught to taste good to them as like sea fish." It is more fun to hear him say "'alibut" and "sea fish" than it is to prepare trout for cooking. Veal loaf, rich and meaty looking, reposes on one of the counters, and a hard boiled egg is embedded right in the center, and the white and gold of the egg make a startling and pleasing contrast in color which attracts the eye of the unwary marketer, and the next thing in order is, "Send up a pound, please."

Spirit, Not Letter.

In great perturbation of mind a business woman in New York city writes to say that a man on entering an office where she is does not remove his hat, and asks if he would not do so north of Twenty-third street. She is really grieved about the matter, and unless she takes a good hold of herself, grasping something of the real values, she is going to bring a great deal of unnecessary unhappiness into her life.

The chances are that north of Twenty-third street the man would remove his hat on entering a room where she was, but it isn't because she is south of that point—in other words, in an office—that he falls in this courtesy.

Granting, for the sake of argument, that up town he would doff his hat, down town he does not because his mind is absorbed in important matters, and there is no room in it for the things that would do themselves were he up town in social life. He is no less a gentleman because of this omission, although there is no question that it would be pleasant to see down town the minor courtesies that up town are imperative; but if many are lacking a woman should not complain.

In the first place, as soon as she enters the business world and goes among men to do men's work, she must expect to be treated as a man. Sex, the fact she is a woman, should not come in, and a clever woman will try to eliminate any evidences of it. Even then, and at times when she is most unconscious of the fact that she is a woman is having any effect, the association may be most potent. Voices that might be raised in argument are restrained, and language is more polite. The girl may not know this, but it is observing her presence in the spirit of its refining influence, and not in its letter. And it is the spirit that counts.

Many girls in downtown offices go home evening after evening with grievances like that of the woman who wrote complaining of the man's not removing his hat. They think some one has been rude; or has tried to slight them. These girls are not broad enough minded to see that superficial courtesies are unimportant in the strenuousness of business life. An employer who lets up a little on a stenographer's work when she is not well is certainly one with kindly impulses, but it is extremely unlikely that when he goes into another office he will remove his hat because of the presence of a woman clerk. If he does take it off, all well and good; if he doesn't, what difference does it make? If a woman expects that he will, and is offended because he goes first through a door without holding it for her, she is not going to be much of a success south of Twenty-third street. She is too much occupied in applying the inch-rule of the north to a location where yards are the standard of measurement. Yet down town is full of these girls, which is a partial explanation of why women comparatively rarely succeed in competition with men in business.

How a man should conduct himself up town is another matter. The serious and important things of life he has left behind him; those that by comparison were trivial are important up town. Not to remove his hat in a room then would be as unpardonable as to swear at a woman down town; to go first through a door would be boorish.

Like everything else, it is a matter of relative value; if an employer is just, considerate about the work, reliable in his word and kindly in his thoughts, a woman employe should accept it quite as a man employe should.

She should work for him in precisely the same spirit, too, not watching to see what courtesies he may omit, but appreciative of the real things, ignoring, or placing at their proper value the trifling ones. She will be a happier woman and a better clerk.

AFTER THE SOUL WENT OUT

By Earl Marble.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Suddenly all was still.

A ghastly whiteness settled over the thin, yearning face on the pillow, and peace took the place of pain.

The end of a life of conjugal mismating had come at last.

"Can you not forgive me all the wrong you have suffered at my hands before you go?" he had asked.

She had remained silent with averted eyes and a faint flush overspreading the wan features.

The minister had joined the father and son at the bedside a short time before, and was watching the passage of his parishioner to the world beyond.

"It is your duty, Mrs. Marshall," he had said. "It is a dreadful thing to go into the other world with unforgiveness in your heart. It is so easy to speak that now, and afterward so impossible. The consequences to both of you are terrible."

He had said no more, but waited.

They all waited.

At last she spoke.

"If you have ever wronged me, Henry," she said, "I forgive you, as I hope to be forgiven."

"If I have ever wronged you," he echoed. "I certainly have, and it is so noble of you to say those words."

"But I have need to be forgiven also," she said. "You will not refuse?"

"There is nothing to forgive, Mary," he had said. "But if there were anything for me to forgive in you, it is given freely. I am only sorry it is said now, at the close of our lives together, instead of at the beginning."

The woman had caught her breath feebly, and all was over.

The physician had entered from the adjoining room at that instant, and he gazed at her a moment.

"It is all over," he said. "The soul has left the body."

"Her soul left her body many years ago," said the husband, bending over her and placing his face in his hands, between the fingers of which the tears slowly trickled.

When the undertaker arrived he was led away gently, and the sad arrangements were proceeded with.

"What did they have to forgive each other for?" was the current form of gossip through the neighborhood.

No one knew. Neither had ever mentioned it to any one in the circle in which they moved.

In the funeral discourse the minister talked very profoundly and feelingly on the subject of forgiveness, but he blundered in his remarks because he did not know.

"Father," said the young man, the evening of the day after they had returned from the cemetery, "why did you and mother always treat each other so coldly?"

"Because there was no love between us."

"But why. Was it always so?"

"Always."

"Won't you tell me why?"

"Let's take a walk down the road and I will see if I can."

"Certainly, father, but do not speak if it is anything against her."

"It is nothing against her."

"I am so glad, because you know how dearly I loved her, and how I revere her memory."

"The trouble began from the very beginning of our married life—in fact, before our marriage."

They had walked till they reached the edge of a little wood by this time, the cool breeze from which came out with insistent refreshment to their heated brows and faces flushed from the tears which had coursed over them from their streaming eyes.

"I had presumed to think that I might make your mother my wife, but had little prospect of success. Several others sought her hand. The only difference was, maybe, that I was the most persistent of the lot. A young man came into the neighborhood from Chicago. He was a summer boarder at a neighboring farm house. His name was Hubbard—Sidney Hubbard. He met your mother, and she fell in love with him at once. None of us had any chance then. Practically, we all gave it up. But one evening, toward the close of the season, I was passing the house where he boarded and was astonished to see him in earnest talk with a girl whom I had never seen before. They were standing at the open window, and he had an arm around her. I watched them a moment, and then turned to go away. I had gone toward the house of your mother's family, with the intention of telling my story, when I met your mother and brought her at once to the place where I had stood. We heard him use endearing terms to her, saw him kiss her, and then heard him promise to go with her at once. I took your mother home and left her almost completely prostrated. She did not say a word of what she had seen to anyone. She was very proud and high-spirited. The young man and young woman disappeared that night; and, as soon as your mother had recovered sufficiently, I renewed my suit, and she accepted me, on condition that I should take her away from the neighborhood. We did not wait to get married, but left at once, and were married at the first place where we stopped.

"Your mother never returned to the old place, her family having removed also a short time afterward. They had lived there but a short time and had no intimates, so none of them ever heard from the neighborhood again. I went out there to settle up some of my affairs, and heard that Hubbard had been there, learned the story, and inquired my address. A few weeks afterward, I went out during the late afternoon, for a walk, as we are doing now, and met him right here. He accused me of treachery to him, and said that the lady whom we had seen him in company with was his sister, who had come after him to aid her in untangling some property matter, which required their immediate attention. He made some slighting remark to me, saying he was going to the house to see your mother, with whom he would have an explanation, winding up with the remark that I had defrauded him of her, and he would have her yet. One word led to another and finally he struck me. I returned the blow with interest, and he fell, striking that rock there," pointing to a large rock by the roadside, "after which he never stirred. I had killed him, but had not intended to do so. I dug a grave over there," pointing to a mound so slight as not to be noticeable, "and buried him."

"Did mother ever know?"

"No, my boy."

"Did anyone else?"

"No."

"But that is why you and mother were always estranged from each other?"

"Yes."

"Oh, well, cheer up, father. It was not so bad—the killing, I mean. You did the only thing you could do. The estrangement was terrible. It might have been better if you had told mother."

"It would not—under the circumstances."

"Well, don't dwell on it now. We will go home now, and make the best of it, dear old father."

"But I am not your father."

"You—are—not—my—father? Then who is?"

"The man sleeping under that mound there."

And the elderly man walked deliberately into the dark wood, leaving the younger one sitting on the rock where his father had breathed his last.

RELIGION IS UP TO DATE

Colorado Churches Use the Billboard, Poster and Placard.

Sunday School Cheers as Ingenious as College Yells.

Denver, Col., Feb. 15.—The use of the billboard, the poster and the placard to advertise religious services is coming into favor in Denver. It was begun by the Rev. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, and if the present rivalry among congregations in the matter of the conspicuous display of their advertisements is not soon abated theater managers, who in the past enjoyed a practical monopoly of the billboard privileges, may be called on to pay an advance in the price of space on the boards.

Not only are the churches doing more advertising than ever before, but there is keen rivalry in the wording of the advertisements.

This activity dates from last spring, when the Rev. Billy Sunday, the former ballplayer evangelist, held meetings in the Colorado gold camps. He caused all the county seat towns in the neighborhood of the places where he conducted revivals to be placarded, and families drove for miles and traveled across the mountains to hear his sermons.

Sunday introduced what to Colorado was an innovation, in the form of stickers, bearing the legend, "Get Right With God." These were pasted on sidewalks, on lamp posts, on the windows of street cars—in every place where they would attract attention. One religious campaigner slipped into a fashionable hotel at Colorado Springs one night and pasted a sticker on the bands of all the hats he could find while the owners were at dinner.

The Denver Young Men's Christian association has adopted modern methods in raising money for a new building. It has set out to collect $200,000 in one month.

The organization has rented a large storeroom on a prominent downtown corner and there has established headquarters, much after the manner of a political campaign headquarters. A chairman receives reports hourly from his lieutenants, who have certain districts in charge, like precinct captains. New subscriptions are indicated on a large clock dial placed high outside the building in plain view from two streets.

The spirit of rivalry has spread to the Sunday schools, and school cries have been adopted by the children. When parties of pupils from different Sunday schools meet they give voice to their cheers with all the enthusiasm of students of rival colleges.

This cheer has been adopted by a society of youthful temperance workers in one of the Presbyterian churches:

Come, come,
Come, come, come,
Come join the forces fighting rum;
A cup of cold water is better far
Than all the poison upon the bar.
Come join our band,
The white ribbon wear,
And help spread the gospel
Ev-ery-where.

A Congregational Sunday school, whose pupils have made a special study of the Beatitudes, frequently reminds the community of its existence by perpetrating this cry:

Oh, my goodness, sakes alive,
Matthew's Gospel, chapter five,
Tells how blessings we may win,
How to rid our hearts of sin,
If we're lowly, pure and meek,
We may gain the boon we seek.
Food, when hungry; thirsty, drink.
Comfort, when on sorrow's brink.
Brother, find the key to heaven,
Ey reading verses one to eleven.

This yell, which occasionally breaks the Sabbath stillness at Cripple Creek, is an outgrowth of the Billy Sunday revival:

C-r-i-p-p-l-e-
C-r-e-e-k.
All the gold in our mines
Could not buy the way
To the Heaven that's our home.
Where we're bound to go.
C-r-i-p-p-l-e
Creek. Col-o-rad-o.

But Colorado by no means marks the Western limit of the territory in which this religious enthusiasm is rampant, as this cry arising from the Utah capital testifies:

Who, who, who are we?
We're the Methodists of Salt Lake C.
Are we Mormons?
No-sir-ee.
M-e-t-h-o-d-i-s-t.

Either the originators of the foregoing verse were guilty of plagiarism or else the offense may be charged against the authors of the following jingle:

Who, who, who are we?
We're the Merry Workers of Salt Lake C.
"Utah for Christ."
That's the banner we wave;
We're banded together
Our dear state to save.

The metropolis of Washington state comes to the front with this effort:

We're Sunday school scholars of Seattle,
Against all sin we're waging battle.
Come to the Lord and seek salvation,
Freedom gain from tribulation.
If you'd know the way,
If you'd learn the rule,
Come to the Baptist Sunday school.

The Sunday school of the Topeka church of the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," boasts of the following:

Topeka, Topeka,
Central church, Topeka.
We're waging war for prohibition,
To stamp out sin and crime's our mission.
When we have won we'll shout Eureka.
Hurrah for Central church, Topeka.

CHICAGO COUNCIL GETS INTO ACTION

Passes Gas Ordinance Over Mayor's Veto—Saloon License.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—The city council, at a special meeting held yesterday, took action on three important propositions. An ordinance fixing the price of gas at 85 cents, instead of 90 cents and $1 as heretofore, was passed over the veto of Mayor Dunne by a vote of 57 to 10; an ordinance, placing the saloon license at $600, instead of $500, the present figure, was adopted by a vote of 35 to 32, but Mayor Dunne ruled that the measure had failed of passage because it did not receive 36 votes, the constitutional majority. The $1,000 license ordinance was then introduced, but it was referred to the license committee, to be presented at the next meeting of the council on Feb. 26. It was also ordered that the question of voting $75,000,000 for the purchase of the street railways for the city be submitted to the voters at the next election. The importance of the measures, and the excitement which has attended their agitation, drew an enormous crowd to the city hall. Special guards of policemen were stationed around the building and all the doors were guarded, but despite these precautions the council chamber and its hallway were packed to suffocation. The police were compelled to remove several disorderly persons, and one man was arrested.

The question of saloon license, which came last, was productive of the greatest amount of feeling. The numerous crimes that have been perpetrated against women in this city of late has aroused much agitation, and it was believed by many that an increase in saloon licenses, from $500 to $1,000, would wipe out some of the saloons which have been harboring criminals. The council committee presented a majority report, placing it at $600. The latter was adopted by a vote of 34 to 33.

SUNDEEN MADE COMMISSIONER

E. M. Patterson Declines Appointment on Courthouse Commission.

County Commissioner, Edward M. Patterson, who was appointed by the district judges as one of the courthouse commissioners, has delined to accept the office and the judges have named Commissioner John Sundeen, of the Third district to fill the vacancy.

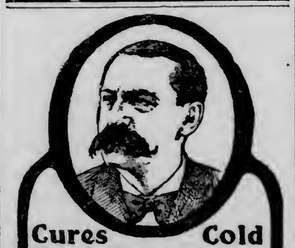

It was rumored for some days past the Commissioner Patterson would not accept the appointement, but his declination has been filed only lately with the judges.

Mr. Sundeen is a well-known business man of the West end and is one of the youngest members, in point of service on the county board. Mr. Sundeen introduced at the January meeting of the county board the resolution that provided the way for the appointment of a courthouse commission.

The courthouse commission is comprised of William C. Agnew, John Miller and John Sundeen, of Duluth; E. Morcom of Tower and Neil McInnis of Eveleth.

All the commissioners except Mr. Sundeen have filed their acceptances and have taken the oath to discharge their duties. It is expected that Commissioner Sundeen will file very soon and that the courthouse commission will organize.

Ladies, read this catalogue of charms. Bright eyes, glowing cheeks, red lips, a smooth skin without a blemish, in short, perfect health. For sale with every package Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

SPORTS

WILL PLAY IN ST. PAUL

Duluth Curlers Will Meet Nushka Club in Match Game.

Five Rinks From Each Club Will Compete for Trophy.

Five rinks of Duluth curlers will leave tomorrow night for St. Paul to meet a corresponding number of rinks from the Nushka Curling club of that city for the possession of the Nushka cup.

The Nushka cup is a new trophy which has just been put up by the St. Paul curlers, for competition in an annual match with the Duluthh members. The secretary of the Duluth club received notice of the posting of the trophy, and the invitation to the Duluth curlers to go to St. Paul, last week, and it was promptly accepted. The St. Paul curlers invited the Duluth members to be their guests in St. Paul during the match, and offered, if Duluth won the cup, to come after it next year.

The cup is a handsome silver trophy, and the annual match for its possession should do much to further the friendly rivalry between the two clubs.

Five of the oldest and best skips in the Duluth club will take the trip tomorrow night. They are R. J. McLeod, H. Hurdon, Ron Smith, George F. MacKenzie and A. H. Smith.

They will take the following curlers with them: Joheph Catlin, E. N. Bradley, J. C. Myron, A. W. Frick, D. W. Stocking, D. G. Cutler, T. F. McGilvray, C. A. Payne, S. Cleveland, W. C. Sherwood, S. H. Jones, Cameron Hewitt and J. M. Oldham, and two others yet to be chosen.

The match will be played on Saturday at the Nushka curling rink against five picked rinks of St. Paul curlers. The Duluth delegation is about as strong a representation as could be selected, and the curlers are rather counting on compelling the St. Paul men to make good their promise to play a return game next season if the cup was lifted.

SCHEDULE IS MADE PUBLIC

American League Season Opens April 14 and Closes Oct. 7.

New York, Feb. 15.—At the close of the meeting of the American league last night the schedule of games was made public. The schedule shows a slight increase of conflicting dates with the National league, there being twenty-five against twenty-three last year. Of these, nine are in Chicago, four in St. Louis, three in Philadelphia, six in New York and three in Boston. The National league considered its schedule and it will be formally adopted today.

The season will open in the East on April 14, with Philadelphia playing at Washington and Boston at New York. The Western clubs will open on April 17, Chicago playing at Detroit and Cleveland at St. Louis. The Western clubs will begin their first series in the East on May 11, and the Eastern teams will make their first appearance in the West on June 4.

The season will end in the East on October 6 and in the West Oct. 7.

The joint rules committee which met early in the afternoon, returned a report to both league meetings during the day. Some minor changes were made, mainly for the purpose of elucidating the present rules and correcting errors. The rules committee met again tonight and will make a further report to the leagues tomorrow. The representatives of the National league on the committee were instructed that no change should be made in the foul strike rule and no important changes are looked for.

Sporting Notes.

The Universal Millers will play Company I at indoor baseball next Tuesday evening at the Lincoln Park pavilion, and the following week will play a return game with the Big Duluth team.

* * *

"Bob" Dunbar's rink has been eliminated from all events in the Winnipeg bonspiel, which closes today. The St. Paul curlers captured but one prize, a third in the Empire event.

ST. LOUIS STUDENTS FIGHT.

St. Louis, Feb. 15.—Sophomores and juniors of the medical school of Washington university, engaged in a fierce fight yesterday, during which a student named Davis was knocked unconscious, a lecture room door was demolished and Prof. Warren's laboratory was invaded and considerable apparatus ruined. Shirts, coats and collars were torn off, and blood flowed freely for almost an hour. The juniors are considered the victors.

Planning Entertainment.

The guild of St. Luke's Episcopal church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 with Mrs. Gust Johnson of 2112 West Second street. The guild is arranging for a musical entertainment, to be given next Tuesday night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McFadzean of 1019 East Second street. A program will be given, and Rev. R. J. Mooney will give a short address.

Riley Held to Grand Jury.

William Riley of Virginia was lodged in the county jail yesterday afternoon to await the action of the grand jury on the charge of stealing a gold watch valued at $30. The timepiece belonged to Lee Blackburn. Riley was bound over by Municipal Judge Nelson of Virginia.

ANNA HELD

Cigar—5 Cents

A "star" smoke at a "matinee" price.
Good company for the man who usually smokes three-for-a-quarter.
The making of "Anna Held" Cigars starts with the growing of the tobacco. Experts know the quality required and how to secure it—not for one lot of cigars but for millions.
The several varieties of leaf necessary to produce a smooth, well-balanced smoke undergo delicate, complex and vital processes—hitherto unknown—of fermenting and blending. These processes extract all the original greenness and rankness and develop a rich, even, full-flavored, blended smoke.
Tested in any way you like—flavor, fragrance, evenness, workmanship—the "Anna Held" is a remarkable product of a remarkable system.
A genuine three-for-a-quarter cigar for 5 cents.
Sold by all dealers in good cigars.
Trade Supplied by
GEO. R. NEWELL & CO., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
The "Smoke Story" is a book which tells all about these new methods of cigar making. We send it free.

THE Y. M. C. A. IN CZAR'S COUNTRY

Young Men Who Met Secretly Now Hold Open Meetings.

New York, Feb. 15.—Significant of the spirit in Russia is the recent holding of a conference of the Y. M. C. A., in Livonia, where a National Y. M. C. A. Alliance was formed with headquarters at St. Petersburg. When a conference was held in Russia ten years ago the members met in private rooms, in fear lest they would excite the suspicions of the police. At the convention recently held in the halls of the city corporation, the delegates were officially greeted by the Lord Mayor. The conference presiding officer was recently a victim of the terrors of the revolutionary movement. An armed band entered his church and one of the soldiers, mounting the pulpit with a revolver in his hands, demanded that he cease to preach. This he refused to do and he was dragged down by force.

The world secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Christian Phildius, was in the midst of the railroad strike in Esthonia, where shops were pillaged and public buildings burned. He witnessed the ghastly work of the mob and the bloody encounter with the troops. He managed to escape to St. Petersburg on a small freight steamer.

At St. Petersburg he met the German, Esthonia, Livonian, Swedish and Finnish student Y. M. C. A.'s. A new era is breaking over Russia. Associations are being formed in twenty different towns in the Empire. The city association at St. Petersburg, called "Majak" (Lighthouse), has just moved into a building costing $75,000 given by James Stokes, which was equipped and furnished by M. Nobel, at an expense of $5,000. Of its 1,200 members, 175 are Protestants, and although the religious services are presided over by Greek church priests, the world's Y. M. C. A. secretary was invited to conduct gospel services without reserve. This is the first time that any but those of the Greek faith have been permitted to give an evangelistic address. There are hundreds of young men in the evening classes, the German classes alone having 200 students.

The association in Finland has well furnished quarters in twenty towns and in twenty-seven colleges and universities; there are four railway branches, and many new boys' sections. At Helsingfors seven men have promised $4,000 for a building. It is an interesting fact that in Finland the Bible classes have become so popular that it was necessary to charge a franc admission to the hall. The Finnish association have sent one of their number, a Lapp, as a missionary to Lapland. In Prussia the association has grown out of its position of insignificance, and many aristocratic and noble families are identified with it, among them being the Prince of Dohna. In Pomerania the superintendent-general takes the lead of an association, and in Halle, Saxony, Prof. Luddgart leads an association which occupies a building costing 250,000 francs.

It arouses energy, develops and stimulates nervous life, arouses the courage of youth. It makes you young again. That's what Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will do. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

TOWNE INVITED TO THE WEDDING

One of Lucky Four New York Democratic Congressmen.

Washington, Feb. 15—The invitation to the New York delegation in congress to attend the marriage of Miss Roosevelt to Mr. Longworth was not a blanket invitation. Only four of the Democratic representatives were asked to attend. The lucky four were William Sulzer, Charles A. Towne and W. Bourke Cockran of Manhattan, and Joseph A. Gould of the Bronx congressional district. The Democrats who were left out are George Henry Lindsay and J. J. Fitzgerald of Brooklyn; Big Tim Sullivan, William Randolph Hearst, Henry M. Goldfogle and Jacob Ruppert of Manhattan, and William Henry Ryan of Buffalo.

Every Republican from New York state got one of the precious cardboard squares which admits the bearer and his wife, if he has a wife, to the wedding ceremony. No discrimination was practiced against the Democratic contingent from Mr. Longworth's home state, possibly because there is only one of them, Mr. Garber of Greenville. Of course the whole Ohio delegation will be present.

Four hundred dollars is the price paid for an invitation to the Roosevelt-Longworth wedding to a speculative prospective guest, who, it appears, "needed the money." Word was received at the White House yesterday from an unquestionable source that an invitation to the wedding had been sold to a person more anxious to witness the ceremony than the original holder of the precious card.

Efforts are being made to locate the purchaser of the ticket, with a view to the canceling of the invitation. The limited list of invitations has been carefully scrutinized, and White House officials realize that they have a difficult task before them to spot the holder of the $400 card and turn it down when it is presented.

There are further reports of active speculation in the much-prized invitations, but the case above cited came to the White House so direct and so well supported as to justify investigation.

SENATE PASSES SUBSIDY BILL

Five Republican Senators Vote With Democrats Against Measure.

Washington, Feb. 15.—At a few minutes after 6 o'clock yesterday the senate cast its final ballot on the subsidy shipping bill, which was passed by a vote of 38 to 27. All the voters for the bill were Republicans, and five Republican senators voted with the Democrats in opposition. They were Messrs. Burkett, Dolliver, La Follette, Spooner and Warner.

The vote was preceded by action on a number of amendments, and this by an entire day of debate. Many important amendments were accepted, but only in one case was a modification agreed to that was not in accordance with the wishes of the managers of the bill. The exception was on an amendment offered by Spooner, eliminating the provision, giving half pay to members of the naval reserve who have served less than six months.

As passed, the bill establishes thirteen new contract mail lines and increases the subvention to the Oceanic line, running from the Pacific coast to Australasia. Of the thirteen new lines, three leave Atlantic coast ports, one running to Brazil, one to Uruguay and Argentina, and one to South Africa, six leave ports on the Gulf of Mexico, one going to Brazil, one to Cuba, one to Mexico and three to Central America and the isthmus of Panama; four clear from Pacific coast ports, two to Japan, China and the Philippines direct, one to Japan, China and the Philippines, via Hawaii, and one to Mexico, Central America and the isthmus of Panama. The bill also grants a subvention at the rate of $5 per gross ton per year to cargo vessels engaged in the foreign trade of the United States, at the rate of $5.50 per ton to vessels engaged in the Philippine trade, the Philippine coastwise law being postponed until 1909. Another feature of the bill creates a naval reserve force of 10,000 officers and men, who are to receive retainers after the British practice. Vessels receiving subsidies are required to carry a certain proportion of naval reserve men among their crews. The aggregate compensation for mail lines is about $3,000,000 annually. No steam vessel of less than 1,000 tons is to receive aid under the bill.

When the shipping bill was disposed of the statehood bill was made the unfinished business.

CORPORALS APPOINTED.

Company A Preparing for its Annual Ball Tuesday Evening.

Battalion drill of Companies A and C was held by Maj. Resche Tuesday evening. After the drill Company A held a meeting at which Privates William C. Wiesinger, Lindvald, Dittrick, V. Nelson and Karl Knutson were examined and promoted to be corporals of the company.

Company A will hold its annual ball Tuesday evening, Feb. 20. The committees in charge are making elaborate arrangements to make the event one of the best that the company has ever given. Something entirely new in the way of programs and decorations are being planned.

The confidence of the public is the final proof of merit.

MEANS MUCH FOR DULUTH

Leading Financial Journal Comments on Soo Road Extension.

Will Make This City Western Grain Shipping Center.

Commenting editorially on the Soo road extension to the Head of the Lakes, the United States Investor, published by Frank P. Bennett & Co. of New orYk, one of the leading financial journals of the country, puts the city of Duluth in a very favorable light before investors all over the United States. The article is especially valuable for the interests of Duluth, in that it is not a paid advertisement in any sense of the word, either for the railway company of this city, but is given a place of prominence 'n the financial journal by reason of the importance of the movement and the things it will mean in the future to the company and to Duluth. The article follows:

"The Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railroad proposes to undertake what is regarded as one of the most strategic movements in railroad extension that has been made in the West for some time. By the proposed construction during the current year of an extension from Duluth westward, some 200 miles to its main line, to the wheatfields of the Dakotas and Western Canada, an outlet will be gained at the head of Lake Superior, thus eventually placing the Soo in a position of equality with the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads in competing for the extensive traffic there developed. This in itself is an important undertaking, and one calculated to open up an important field for increased tonnage to this road. But this is not all that the Soo proposes to do this year in the building line. It is proposed to build southwesterly from Duluth to the main line in Wisconsin, which now connects St. Paul, Minn., with Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., where the Soo joins the parent road, the Canadian Pacific.

"By means of this construction a new trunk line will come into being, extending from the Missouri river, in the Dakotas, easterly through Minnesota, by way of Duluth, and through Northern Wisconsin and Michigan, shortening the haul by something more than 300 miles, as compared with its present route, which runs southwest to St. Paul and northwest to Sault Ste. Marie. This new undertaking, it will be noted, will give the Soo line entry into the territory east of the western boundary of Wisconsin, and consequently an advantage over the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads, which have no such entry. This new undertaking will open up the way for the hauling of grain from that section direct to the lake shipping port of Duluth, and also, in the winter time, for the hauling of hay through that point directly to the Atlantic seaboard by way of the Canadian Pacific.

"From the program thus laid out, it appears that the Soo proposes to occupy a much more important position than heretofore, the remarkable growth of its revenues during the past two years convincing the management evidently that much can be accomplished by a show of energy and enterprise."

Lame Back.

This ailment is usually caused by rheumatism of the muscles, and may be cured by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm two or three times a day and rubbing the parts vigorously at each application. If this does not afford relief, bind on a piece of flannel slightly dampened with Pain Balm, and quick relief is almost sure to follow. For sale by all druggists.

Died From His Injuries.

The Grand Marais Herald says: Eugene Garland, who was crushed by a rolling log at Gibson's camp at Hovland, two weeks ago, died at the hospital in this village last Monday afternoon. The man's father, who lives in New York, has been notified of his sickness and death, but no word has been received from him. He leaves no other known relatives. The funeral occured Wednesday afternoon, the remains being interred in the Catholic cemetery at Chippewa City.

Salvation for the

DRUNKARD

The habitual drinker may struggle and strive to overcome the terrible habit of drunkenness, but unless some helping hand is stretched out to succor him he is certain to reach the ultimate end—a physical and mental wreck.

SIDEWALKS ARE UNSAFE

Boys, Sliding on Avenue Walks Renders Them Dangerous.

Pedestrians Forced to Middle of Street Going Down Hill.

In going about the city one hears a great deal of kicking about the lack of attention paid to slippery sidewalks, particularly on the avenues. Scarcely anybody in Duluth who has had occasion to go up or down the avenues has not had at least one fall this winter and wonder is expressed that serious accidents have not happened.

Small boys seem to prefer the sidewalks on the avenues for coasting, to the middle of the street, their parents probably telling them to keep off the streets, out of the way of teams. At any rate they coast on the sidewalks, go down on skis, barrel staves or on the slippery soles of their shoes. As a result nearly every avenue sidewalk in the city is as slippery as a skating rink, and is absolutely useless for pedestrians who have passed the sliding age. Men and women are forced to use the middle of the street, especially in going down hill.

This could very easily be remedied by a little sand or some ashes being scattered on the sidewalk. That would stop the sliding and would permit pedestrians to go up or down with some degree of safety. This would not entail a great deal of trouble for the property owners, or the city officials or whoever is supposed to look after the condition of the sidewalks. One good dose of sand or ashes after each snow storm would do the business. It would not be a daily job and would make citizens feel much more comfortable. Rubbers or overshoes seem to be no protection and some is needed.

SHOULD WARN THE CHINESE

That Riots Will Not be Tolerated by United States.

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.—Edward H. Conger, for many years United States minister to China, and who is staying at Pasadena for the winter, is quoted in an interview on the present anti-foreign agitation in China as follows:

The United States should warn China against a repetition of the terrible riots of a few years ago.

A show of warships should be made to impress upon the government of China that the troubles must not be repeated and will not be tolerated.

I am satisfied that serious trouble will come, but do not expect that it will be directly, especially against the United States, but will be against the reigning Manchu dynasty.

The Manchurians are insignificant in numbers and the present uprising is for the purpose of establishing a new dynasty and not to oust foreigners.

The most violent disturbances will be in the southern provinces and will endanger all foreign interests.

Americans within the zone of the rebellion are liable to be hurt before they can get out and that is why the United States should let China know that it will not tolerate for an instant anything opposed to the interests of its citizens.

If the Chinese can be impressed that we are on the alert and that we mean business, our interests will be secure.

If China is permitted to think that it can ignore our interests, something terrible will happen.

The trouble now will be a great struggle within the empire—a battle of popular majority against the dynastic minority. It has been brewing for many years and has now apparently reached a climax.

I believe the boycott on American goods is now beginning to operate against the Chinese themselves. Chinese merchants long before this boycott was instituted stocked their establishments with goods from the United States. When the boycott was declared these merchants could not or dared not sell their goods.

We learned a lesson in 1900, and China learned one too. Our experience should compel us, and will, to take every precaution.

In the future it will be the part of wisdom to have our warships and troops ready, if only for the purpose of letting China know that we are watching her.

A NOTABLE CONCESSION

Made by France in Interests of American Insurance Companies.

Paris, Feb. 14.—The French government has made a notable concession to the American insurance companies, whereby the new insurance law will not be applied so as to injuriously affect their interests. This closes a long and animated controversy which threatened at one time to result in restrictions, making it difficult for the American companies to continue doing business in France. The concessions now granted are a distinct mark of the government's desire to continue and augment the friendly relations between the two countries. It is a coincidence that this friendly act occurs while the American delegates at Algeciras are able to exert important pressure in ameliorating the Franco-German differences. The insurance law permitted the government to require foreign companies to deposit French securities as a guarantee for the payment of French policies. The American companies agreed to deposit French bonds covering their future business, but they objected to making an enormous purchase of French securities covering their past business, approximately $20,000,000.

The government has now waived the latter deposit on condition that the companies publicly announce that their past business is guaranteed by American securities and not by French securities. The regulation to this effect with the government endorsement has been submitted to the council of state as a preliminary to is official promulgation by the state department. Though Ambassador McCormick, who is now at sea on his way back to his post, has taken an active part in the controversy, its satisfactory conclusion has been communicated to Washington by charge d'affairs Vignaud, who advised the department that it was the belief in diplomatic quarters that France's friendly course would be recognized by suitable acknowledgements from the American government and sympathetic consideration for French interests in other pending questions. However, France's action was entirely spontaneous, without the slightest suggestion of the Moroccan or other questions.

IS SPEAKER FOR MINUTE

Congressman Longworth Presides Over House for Brief Period.

Payne's Bill on Consolidating Customs Districts Turned Down.

Washington, Feb. 15.—On meeting today the house passed a bill authorizing the secretary of the treasury to issue duplicate of lost checks when the amount of the check is greater than $2,500. The secretary already has this authority regarding checks under that sum.

A bill was passed authorizing a seal for the United States commissioners.

Failing a few days ago, because of a point of order, to secure consideration of a bill authorizing a consolidation of customs collection districts, Mr. Payne (N. Y.) today entered a motion to take up that bill, it having been amended so as to make it "privileged." Opposition was immediately manifested. Mr. Thomas (N. C.) wanted to debate the motion, but not being allowed to do so, demanded a vote by tellers.

As this vote defeated the motion, 65 to 90, Mr. Payne demanded a roll call.

During the roll call, Mr. Longworth (O.) was called to the chair and presided over the house as speaker for about a minute.

Mr. Longworth arranged to "pair" his vote in the house for two weeks, or until March 4.

The house refused to take up the bill, the vote being 87 in favor of Mr. Payne's motion and 163 against it. Mr. Thomas, desiring to clinch the defeat of the bill, which was met with applause, moved to table the vote. The speaker ruled against this.

"Oh, the gentleman need not be alarmed," remarked Mr. Payne, "the bill will come up again some other day, and in the meantime I will endeavor to get some information before the house to let the gentlemen know what they are voting for."

"Will the gentleman give notice when he is to call it up?" asked Mr. Thomas.

"I will give no notice," concluded Mr. Payne.

The speaker ordered the call of committees, which proceeded until the merchant marine and fisheries was reached, when Mr. Grosvenor (O.) presented a bill to admit to American registry foreign ships wrecked and repaired in this country, when the repairs equal 60 per cent of the value of the ship.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The senate had as auditors today a number of the lady members of the equal suffrage association who, after their hearing before the committee on woman suffrage, repaired to the senate galleries. Many of them feel an interest in questions involved in the joint statehood bill, and they were present to see that measure launched upon its voyage through the senate.

At 2 o'clock the senate began the consideration of the joint statehood bill. Mr. Dick spoke in support of the bill, first explaining the committee amendments and then presenting the reasons for consolidating Oklahoma with Indian Territory and Arizona with New Mexico.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR CHURCHES

Apportioned by Minnesota Conference of Swedish Lutherans.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Today's session of the Minnesota conference of the Swedish Lutheran church on Woodward avenue was devoted to appropriations for the weaker churches of the conference.

Pursuant to recommendations by the executive committee that $12,000 be appropriated to aid the weaker churches during the year 1906, the following sums were voted:

For the Swedish Lutheran church at Hibbing, Minn., $300; at Virginia and Eveleth, $100; Carleton, $150; Moose Lake, $300; Monticello, $50; Superior, Wis., $75; Port Wing, Wis., $200, Washburn and Bayfield, $300; Amoy, $100; Grantsburg, $125.

The sum of $150 was appropriated towards the salary of a traveling missionary in the Lake Superior district; $30 for a theological student, O. J. Nelson, for work at Hibbing, Minn., and $200 for general missionary work in the Pacific district of the conference, along the Northern Pacific road in Minnesota.

Rev. A. D. Haupt, pastor of the memorial English Evangelical Lutheran church, St. Paul, and Dr. G. H. Trabert, pastor of the Salem English Lutheran church, Minneapolis, were this morning elected advisory members of the conference. The afternoon was largely devoted to a discussion of the spiritual side of missionary work.

LEANS AGAINST SHARP STAKE

Horse Stabs Itself and Owner is Arrested For Cruelty.

Because he attempted to break a horse of the habit of leaning up against the side of the stall while he was currying it, William Plutinsky was arrested on the charge of cruelty to animals, this afternoon, and arraigned before Judge Windom, in the municipal court.

The horse had a pernicious habit of attempting to make a sandwich of Plutinsky while he was currying it, and would repeatedly attempt to squeeze him between its body and the side of the stall. Plutinsky tired of this strenuous life, and he devised a scheme to break the horse of the habit. Breaking off a piece of a broomstock, he sharpened one end of it, and fastened it to the side of the stall with the pointed edge sticking out.

It was a badly surprised horse that leaned up against the stake the next evening, but the animal did not apparently know enough to pull away from the sharp point, and in leaning up heavily against it, broke off a small piece of the wood in its side.

Some neighbors heard of the case, and they swore out a warrant for Plutinsky's arrest on the charge of cruelty to animals.

Judge Windom, after hearing the story of the case, dismissed Plutinsky, but advised him to adopt some other means of breaking the horse of his habit in future.

ARE WEDDED AT MILWAUKEE

Miss Katherine Noyes and Donald R. McLennan Married.

The marriage of Donald R. McLennan of Chicago, formerly of Duluth, and Miss Katherine Noyes of Milwaukee, sister of Mrs. William Dalrymple of Duluth, took place at Milwaukee yesterday afternoon. The Evening Wisconsin reports it thus:

"St. Paul's church was the scene this afternoon of one of the prettiest of the winter weddings, when the marriage of Miss Katherine Noyes, daughter of Judge and Mrs. George H. Noyes, to Donald R. McLennan of Chicago, was solemnized there at 4 o'clock. The church was filled with a large and fashionable assemblage. The chancel was banked with palms and on the altar were vases of white flowers.

"At the appointed hour the vested choir met the bridal party at the church entrance, and preceded it up the aisle, singing the bridal song from 'Lohengrin.' The ushers, Messrs. Haskell Noyes, Frank Leach, John Dalrymple, William F. Dalrymple, Ward Ames and Robert Greer, marched first. Then came the bridesmaids, the Misses Margaret Noyes, Claire Oliver, Lois Hollister, Margery Lockwood, Edith Willis and Lola Bishop, wearing charming gowns of white radium silk, with trimmings of Irish point and heavy cream lace, and carrying pink roses. Their hats were stunning creations of white and pink. The bridesmaids were followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. William F. Dalrymple, a sister of the bride, who wore an exquisite gown of pink radium, trimmed with lace. Her hat was white, trimmed with pink tips and pink Paradise plumes, and she carried Golden Gate roses.

"The procession was closed by the bride, walking with her father. She wore a lovely gown of heavy white satin, trimmed on bodice and skirt with rose point and Venetian point lace. Her veil was of tulle and her shower bouquet was of white lilacs and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a necklace of diamonds.

"As the wedding procession reached the chancel, the bride was met by the bridegroom and his best man, William McLennan, and the service was read by Rev. William Austin Smith, rector of St. Paul's. As the wedding procession proceeded down the aisle Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by the organist.

"The ceremony was followed by a small reception held at the residence of Judge and Mrs. Noyes, 304 Prospect avenue. The receiving party, composed of Judge and Mrs. Noyes and the bride and groom, stood before the wide south window in the library, beneath a bower formed of graceful Australian ferns and asparagus vine. This room was done entirely in white and green, with large vases of white flowers placed about. The drawing room was decorated with pink roses, and in the dining room the table centerpiece was of orchids and lilies of the valley.

"Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. McLennan of Duluth, mother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Wells and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thompson of Duluth, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Bright of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Haskell from New York.

Mr. and Mrs. McLennan will sail Saturday on the Celtic for Italy, and after a trip abroad will reside at the Auditorium annex in Chicago.

BISBEE STOCKS ARE AWAKE NOW

Good Find on Calumet & Pittsburg Property Helps Things.

The feature of the copper stock market today was the strength and activity of Bisbees. These stocks have been slumbering for quite a time, but this week gave signs of awakening, and today those signs seemed to make good.

News reached Duluth today that sixty cars of 6 per cent ore had been raised out of the northeast drift of the Briggs shaft, on the Calumet & Pittsburg property, and also that the Hoatson shaft, on the same property, is in 1½ per cent ore. That stock, it is freely predicted, will go to $40. The stock sold at $37 and at $36.50, and closed at $36.25 bid and $36.50 asked.

Calumet & Arizona sold at $119 and $118.25, and closed at $117.50 bid and $118.50 asked. Denn-Arizona closed at $26 asked, Junction sold at $26.50 and closed at $26 bid; Lake Superior & Pittsburg sold at $44 and closed at $44.25 bid and $44.50 asked, and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $25 bid and $26 asked.

North Butte opened at $87.50, fell to $85.25 and advanced to $87. The closing price was $86.25 bid and $86.50 asked. Amalgamated opened at $114.12½, dropped to $113.50 and sold as high as $114.62½. The closing price was $113.12½ bid and $113.37½ asked. United Copper opened at $71 bid and went as high as $72.50. The closing price was $70.50 bid and $71 asked. Anaconda opened at $285, went to $287 and closed at $279 bid.

Black Mountain closed at $11 bid and $11.75 asked, Keweenaw at $17 bid and $17.50 asked, Warren closed at $18 asked, Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 asked and Sullivan at $2 asked.

EXTREMELY CHEAP AT THE PRICE

Those Columbia overcoats are the thing for dress as well as for protection. They are made right—hand tailored where hand work would be a benefit, and machines used when the mechanical work would improve them, and brains used at every step and stitch of the process—in other words, Columbia overcoats are not the common "ready-made" variety.

Study present and prospective wool prices. Don't take our word for it—you might suspect that we had an object in predicting a further rise. We noticed that The Evening Herald had a long article on that very subject in last night's paper. If you can't save at least a $10 bill by buying an overcoat now, we'll buy it back of you next winter.

If it were not that there are only odd sizes left now of every lot, we wouldn't think of giving away valuable garments at these February prices.

Our finest Stein-Bloch suits are going at $17.50 this month.

$14.50 for the unreserved choice of any fancy colored Overcoat in the store. This includes our finest Stein-Bloch and Sincerity Overcoats, made of fancy fabrics.

$29.00 for your choice of plain blue, black or brown $40 and $45 Stein-Bloch Coats.

$25.00 for any plain blue, black or brown Overcoats which were marked $35.

$17.50 for any plain blue, black or brown Overcoats which we sold at $25 regular.

SCHOOL BOYS' OVERCOATS

$10.50 for your choice of all our former $15.00 and $12.50 Coats.

$7.00 for your choice of all our former $10 School Coats.

$5.50 for your choice of all our former $8.50, $7.50 and $7.00 Coats.

$3.85 for your choice of all our former $6 and $5 School Coats.

$10.50 for any fancy colored Overcoat in the store which sold for $18.00 and less. From what customers tell us we know that Columbia prices are from $2 to $5 less in the first place. Consider this in gauging the bargains—and no marking up here.

$10.50 for any plain blue black or brown Overcoats, formerly marked $15.

$7.00 for plain colored Overcoats, which would have been $10 yesterday.

$5.50 for well-made black or blue Overcoats The Columbia sold for $8.

JUVENILE OVERCOATS

All our finest fur-collared and other $15 garments from famous makers like Skoiny and Sampeck $10.50

All our beautiful $10 coats for the little fellows are down to $7.00

All our former $8.50, $7.50 and $7 Children's Overcoats are now $5.50

All our $6 and $5 Juvenile Overcoats can now be had for $3.85

The Social Grafters

Society Leaders Who Offer Ice Cream and Cake in Return for Music.

Boston, Feb. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A very delicate social question is that of the payment of professional musicians who exhibit their skill at private houses. There's a reason why the matter is much in discussion these days. One of the most annoying forms of petty graft yet developed is that of the society woman who invites to her function a well-known musician, or musicians, and then virtually exacts a song or performance on the piano in return for her hospitality.

Most musicians are loud in asserting that there is no quid pro quo in this arrangement. Very delightful it is to meet socially eligible persons, and pleasant to give them pleasure by display of one's talents. Some prestige is perhaps gained by appreciative notices in the morning papers' society columns. At the same time the applause of the guests and the thanks of the hostess at the end of the performance do not go far toward paying laundry bills or studio rent.

The artists frankly do not like to be imposed on, though often for reasons of policy they have to submit. Occasionally, however, the social grafter meets with a degree of independence that is refreshing. A wealthy woman in New York, not long ago, gave a musicale, and invited as one of her attractions another woman, a professional contralto, who rendered several songs to the entire satisfaction of a large assemblage of guests. At the conclusion the musician asked her hostess for a fee of $10.

"Ten dollars for what" exclaimed the woman astonished.

"I have sung as you asked me to," replied the other. "My regular professional fee is $10."

A different ethical view prevailed with the hostess, who said snappishly:

"I asked you, not as a professional, but as my guest. You have had ice cream and cake in my house and have met socially a large number of important people whom you otherwise might never have known. Why, is not that reward enough"

The society leader felt certain that admission to her house was worth almost any kind of musical effort. Musicians, however, would probably be unanimous in upholding the young professional who insisted on her right to be paid for work, the preparation for which had required years of severe study and the expenditure of thousands of dollars. A well known teacher of singing in this city, one whose pupils are scattered all over the United States, said recently:

"Among the lessons I try to teach my pupils is that after they have finished their course of technical training they are henceforth professional musicians, who, even if they had an independent income, should not ordinarily sing or play unless they receive adequate compensation, and that they should uphold the dignity of their profession in order that people may not expect them to contribute, except occasionally, in the interests of a charity.

"Everybody knows, or ought to know, that to prepare for the profession of music is at least as expensive and arduous as to become a lawyer or physician. American young men and young women, even if they stay on this side where instruction is just as good and costs very much less than abroad, still have to expend considerable sums of money on their education. It is easier for a young person studying music in Boston to rub along on $800 than on $600, as desires and needs of students go nowadays.

"That implies sinking a good deal of capital in one's personal plant, if it may be so expressed. Those, certainly, who help to make easy the way of needy students of music realize what a sacrifice is implied in a musical education. We have in this city, for example, the Beneficient Society of the New England Conservatory of Music, an organization of which Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, the celebrated woman's rights advocate, was president for twenty years, up to the time of her death last spring, and of which the venerable Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," has been and is a vice president. This society, with all the difficulties that attend such undertakings in these days when even the wealthy have so many calls upon their resources, raises money from year to year to loan to promising and needy students at the Conservatory. It has to adopt all sorts of schemes to get the few hundred dollars which will enable a little group of earnest students to continue their work.

"Last year, for instance, the society tried a living calendar plan. Four members, that is to say, representing Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter, agreed to give each a certain amount and to find three other persons representing three months who would donate a stipulated smaller sum, each one of these to discover four persons who would contribute as one of the weeks of that month, and each week to look out for seven more victims to come in with the minimum donation. In that way a considerable amount was raised.

"The loans which are advanced by this Beneficent society to students of the Conservatory who need assistance are an indication of the money value that is rightly set upon a musical education. They are usually repaid some years after, so that the society's fund is a growing one. The members of the Beneficient society probably would not approve of asking any past beneficiary of their fund to sing or play for nothing, unless in exceptional circumstances.

"Although other sums of money expended for training young people in music do not always have to be repaid they represent, usually, capital which has been acquired with more or less difficulty and surely deserves an adequate return. Musicians are none too well paid, anyway. There are plenty of American cities, you know, in which the best singers do not get more than from $20 to $40 a month for their church work. Some other opportunities there may be for teaching or singing in private performances, but at best there is no gold mine in the profession.

"Musicians ought, in my view, to stand together and demand that if society wishes to annex them society shall pay a fair prices. It has always seemed to me there was some point in the retort made by Sarasate to a Parisian woman who said: "Dear Senor Sarasate, do come to tea tomorrow afternoon and bring your violin." To which the musician replied, 'I regret to decline, madame, but my violin does not drink tea.'"

In illustration of the difficulties under which music students obtain their education, and of the chances taken by some of them, almost countless anecdotes have been told. One which was related by a clergyman at the annual meeting in January, this year, of the Beneficent society of the New England conservatory concerned an American musician in Munich, who fell in love with a girl studying the same art and made her an offer of marriage. The young woman readily assented on the condition that he pay her debts of one year's standing.

"How much are they?" he asked.

"Oh, a mere matter of $1,500."

The young man, whose own circumstances were not too flourishing, put off the engagement until he should be better able to attend to his fiancee's obligations. To his consternation within a short time she married a wealthy American banker who capitalized her talent out of his own resources. This girl had gone to Europe with barely enough to pay her passage, and had trusted to the credit which is sometimes accorded to American students abroad. Hundreds of others who have attempted to "bluff it through" in the musical centers of Europe have been less successful, and have had to appeal to some one of Uncle Sam's representatives abroad to get them out of difficulty with the local authorities. In this country, of course, the danger of falling into the hands of the police is less, for there is more assistance for worthy students and the merely adventurous cannot ordinarily run up big bills, but it remains true that musical education is attained by sacrifices which society does not think of when they expect a talented musician to perform in return for ice cream and cake.

CHURCH'S CALL IS DECLINED

Rev. A. T. Ekblad of Chicago Will Not Come to Duluth.

Word has been received from Rev. A. Theodore Ekblad of Rock Island that he has declined the call of Bethany Lutheran church of Duluth to its pastorate.

In writing about this, Mr. Ekblad says that his present work as solicitor of Augustana college forbids him accepting, otherwise he would be glad to come to the pastorate of the Duluth church.

HEAVINESS IN WHEAT

Market Drags Most of the Session and Closes Lower.

Flax Has Early Break But Closing Prices Are Unchanged.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 15.—Wheat at the opening this morning was inclined to be weak, owing to the fall of snow in the Southwest, where it has been needed. Later prices rallied somewhat, but they again turned weak and the close was at a loss from yesterday. Duluth was the firmest market, the May here being off only ¼c, compared with ½c in Minneapolis, ½-⅝c in Chicago and Kansas City, ⅝c in St. Louis and ¼-⅜c in New York. Winnipeg was only ⅛c lower. A report had it that about 50 loads of Manitoba and durum wheat had been worked at New York, but exporters here say the amount must be greatly exaggerated. Liverpool closed ¼d lower, Paris unchanged to ¼c higher, Berlin ⅜c higher, Budapest ¼c higner and Antwerp 1½c to 2⅝c lower.

Corn was also weaker. The May option in Chicago fell ¼c and Liverpool was ¼d to ⅜d lower. Oats fell ¼c at Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 45, against 25 last year, and at Minneapolis 213, against 205 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 258, against 230 last year. Chicago received 20, against 13 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 437,000 bus; last year, 312,000 bus. Shipments, 181,000 bus; last year, 312,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 289,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 526,000 bus; last year, 199,000 bus. Shipments, 263,000 bus; last year, 351,000 bus. Clearances were 25,000 bus.

In the Duluth market May wheat opened ⅛c lower at 83⅜c, advanced to 83½c at 9:36, dropped to 83⅜c, again at 10:04, advanced to 83½-⅝ at 12:03, and dropped to 83⅛c at 12:55. The closing price was 83¼c, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. July wheat was inactive during the entire session, closing at 84½c, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday.

The weaknes of flax in the foreign market was responsible for lower prices during the fore part of the session of the local market today. Both Laplatta and Calcutta linseed were ¾d lower in London, and Antwerp cabled flax at ⅝c lower. It seems, however, that when the price of flax is between $1.15 and $1.16, the foreigners want it and the market rallied.

May flax opened ¼c higher, at $1.16½, fell to $1.15⅛, and ranged between that price and $1.16½ during the rest of the session. The closing price was $1.16¼, the same as yesterday. July flax opened ½c lower, at $1.17¼, fell to $1.16½, advanced to $1.17, fell to $1.16¾, and then rallied to $1.17⅞. The closing price was $1.17¾, unchanged from yesterday. September flax opened at $1.15½, and closed unchanged at $1.16, after being inactive.

Oats were ½c lower, and rye ½c off, with barley unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat, to arrive, No. 1 northern, 82c; No. 2 northern, 80c; on track, No. 1 northern, 82c; No. 2 northern, 80c; May, 83¼c; July, 82½c. Durum, No. 1, 74c; No. 2, 71c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Reports of Snow Has But Little Effect on Wheat.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—The wheat market was steady at the opening today despite the depressing effect of reports of snow in the Southwest. Pit traders and commission houses were inclined to sell, but offerings were small. May opened ⅛c to ⅛@¼c lower at 85@⅛c to 85⅛c and sold at 85¼c. Receipts at Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago were 278 cars, against 329 cars last week and 243 cars a year ago.

The market remained quiet all day and late in the session prices declined, apparently more because of the lack of buying than for any especial feature in the news. The low point for May was 84½@⅝c. The close was weak with May off ½@⅝c at 84⅝@¾c.

A steady tone prevailed in the corn pit, but trading was small in quantity. The weather was considered favorable for the movement of the crop and Liverpool cables were reported lower. May opened unchanged at 43½c, sold at 43½@⅝c and reacted to 43⅜@½c. Local receipts were 376 cars, with 13 of contract grade.

The market slumped off along with wheat, and trading was very quiet all day. The close was weak with May down ¼c at 43¼c, which was the low point of the day.

Trade in oats was quiet and prices were steady. The shipping demand was less brisk than that of the last few weeks. May opened unchanged o a shade lower at 30@⅛c to 30-⅛c and held within the opening range. Local receipts were 128 cars.

Profit taking by local holders caused an easier tone in the provisions market. Compared with yesterday's activity, trading today was quiet. May pork opened unchanged at $15.50, sold off to $15.40 and rallied to $15.50. Lard was off a shade at $7.90. Ribs were unchanged at $8.17½.

Close: Wheat—May, 84⅝@¾c; July, 83⅛@¼c. Corn—May, 43¼c; July, 43⅜c. Oats—May 29⅞c; July, 29⅜c. Pork—May, $15.45½; July, $15.30. Lard—May, $7.87½; July, $7.97½@8.00. Ribs—May, $8.15; July, $8.27½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—At no time during the session did the market give any evidence of desire to do better. Until the last half hour the tone had been steady, but the selling by disgusted longs with demand extremely limited brought the market to a lower finish, closing practically at the bottom. Disappointing cables and liberal moisture through the winter wheat country, were the factors that worked against the market. Outside trade is limited. Market is a narrow one and almost wholly a local one. Unless cables come firm to strong in the moring, would not be surprised to see today's loss in part, if not fully recovered. It is a scalping market, but its action today is extremely disappointing.

Corn and oats—These markets seemed to drift hopelessly along with the easier feeling in wheat. The lower prices coming in the last half, the slow action of the market holds out little hope for immediate improvement in prices. It seems as if each little rally would be met with pressure of long stuff. There will, of course, be a turning point, but it seems tonight as if the market would drag lower before anything good could come on the long side.

Provisions—The selling today was by fortunate holders taking advantage of small hog receipts and better feeling at the opening. Undoubtedly the action of other pits helped to depress values somewhat. Principal trade is still centered in the provision list and bids fair to continue. We feel like buying the list on the weak spots.

E. W. Dennis, Chicago: I am rather of the opinion that from present indications the situation in Argentina and India is likely to turn the world's wheat markets in an upward direction. For the six corresponding weeks to come, a year ago, Argentina shipped on an average of over 4000,000 bushels of wheat per week. If Slaughter & Co.'s representative in that country is right in his estimate of 67,000,000 bushels surplus and he has been the only correct forecaster of crops in Argentina for the past five years then the shipments for the next six weeks will fall nnough below those of a year ago to cause anxiety throughout the grain importing world.

Anxiety by that interest means a provision against needs and that means purchases of Manitoba wheat and American wheat and flour in such quantities as to make for higher prices in this country.

* * *

Dennis, Chicago: The London Statist says the absence of Indian wheat shipments may easily prove to be the means of preventing a decline in values, which the trade seems to expect after the extraordinary German purchases.

After a little preliminary sparring, market today turned strong and prices easily advanced. Advance has been rather spasmodic and very few shares changed hands. Prices should range 3 to 5 points higher before any quantity of stock comes out. Calumet & Pittsburg is easily the favorite, with sales 36¼ to 37, Junction, 26 to 27½, with same conditions prevailing as in Calumet & Pittsburg. In fact, the whole list closes with stocks wanted at slight recessions from top figures.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: General trade has ruled unsatisfactory, due to an indifferent outside demand; receipts about normal. WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Close Was Very Active With Rather Heavy Net Losses.

Rumors of Coal Strike Caused Market to Decline Sharply.

New York, Feb. 15.—The opening stock market showed evidence of light selling pressure in the prevailing fractional declines. Anaconda fell 2 points, Northern Pacific 1⅜ and Atlantic Coast Line, Great Northern preferred, General Electric and Hocking Coal a point. New York Central, Smelting, Amalgamated Copper and Pacific Mail made gains of a fraction.

A number of substantial advances were substituted for the opening array of losses. Northern Pacific and Amalgamated Copper sold at a point above yesterday's closing and Smelting and Great Northern preferred, 1⅜. Large blocks of stocks were unloaded from all quarters subsequently and there was a precipitate fall in prices which drove many of the leaders between 1 and 2 points below yesterday's closing. Great Northern preferred dropped 4 points below last night; Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, 3; Northern Pacific, Northwestern and Tennessee Coal, 2½; St. Louis, Southwestern preferred, 2, Colorado Fuel, 1⅝, and St. Paul, Union Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Illinois Central, Reading, Brooklyn Transit, United States Steel preferred, American Car and Sugar, 1 to 1¼. The market steadied and became dull at 11 o'clock.

The rally met renewed offerings and there was another dip, but the decline was arrested before the average prices reached the previous low level. The rise of a point in Amalgamater Copper helped to steady the market. The demand died out before recoveries proceeded far and the tone became heavy and dull. The rally in Great Northern preferred reached 3½ and Northern Pacific, 2½. Anaconda fell 5; Northwestern and United States Reduction preferred, 3½; Illinois Central, 2⅝, and Baltimore & Ohio and Louisville & Nashville, 1. Bonds were heavy at noon.

With trading curtailed to nominal proportions, there was little inducement for the professionals to attempt making a profitable turn and in consequence most stocks fluctuated not more than a trivial fraction between 12 and 1 p. m.

Speculative operations were conducted within very narrow limits during the greater part of the afternoon. The lack of interest contributed as much as anything else to a quite general selling off around 2 o'clock in which some of the low prices of the day were made. Lead went up 1¾. Atlantic Coast Line and Allis-Chalmers fell off 2 points each.

Prices moved narrowly, but the average touched the lowest in the final hour. Northern Pacific and Colorado Fuel fell 4½, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, 3½; Reading and Illinois Central, 2½; New York Central, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Louisville & Nashville, Brooklyn Transit, Sloss-Sheffield and Chicago Terminal, ½ to 2, and Ontario & Western, Kansas & Texas, Atchison, Wabash preferred, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, United States Steel, National Lead, Lackawanna & Western and Pressed Steel Car stocks and some others a point or more. The closing was very active and decidedly weak.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed weak. Rumors of a coal strike during the last hour caused the market to sell off sharply, but this could not be confirmed. The tone at the close tonight is weak. It shows little buying demand and we would not be surprised to see a lower range of values.

* * *

Dick Bros .to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been under the pressure of speculative liquidation today, and has shown considerable weakness throughout, although at times stocks seemed to be well taken on the weak spots. The selling, however, was persistent, being weak. Stocks closed at their lowest prices and showed rather heavy net loses for the day.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 15.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 2 to 5 points which was rather poorer than due on the cables, under liquidation of some of yesterday's buyers and a little selling by room bears. There seemed to be demand of a good character, however, and the undertone continued steady with prices advancing to about the closing figures of yesterday during the early session. Trading was quiet and reports of a good spot demand seemed the main bull influence.

Cotton spot closed steady; middling uplands, 11.25; middling gulf, 11.50. Sales, 110 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady; February, 10.65; March, 10.72; April, 10.80; May, 10.89; June, 10.93; July, 11.02; August, 10.91; September, 10.51; October, 10.41; November, 10.44; December, 10.47.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Heavy liquidation continued today, all through the list and the bears are making a determined effort to break the market. The money situation seems to be tightening again and rumors of a coal strike are being used to cause selling, Lawson brokers sold Range heavily, but found good supperting orders around 80. Bingham showed the greatest decline of any stock in our market, being offered at 43 at the close. The liquidation is liable to go further tomorrow, after which we expect to see a sharp rally, as the short interest at present is getting larger.

WORKS TWELVE HOURS A DAY

King Edward Tells Minister That He Oftens Does This.

London, Feb. 15.—King Edward told the Rev. Wilson Carlisle, head of the church army, who was received in audience at Buckingham palace today, that he often worked 12 hours a day himself. He knew the blessing of work and greatly sympathized with the unemployed. Therefore it was a great comfort to his majesty to know that the church army was furnishing work for so many. The king specially praised the emigration plans of the army and said to Rev. Mr. Carlisle:

"Encourage your good emigrants. Wish them from me every happiness that work can procure. They will still be in my dominions and their emigration will not only benefit themselves and their families, but the whole empire."

SELF HYPNOTISM.

Playing Part of Blind Girl Made a Woman Blind.

Stricken blind while playing the part of Bertha, the blind girl, in an amateur production of "The Cricket on the Hearth," Elizabeth Conger Heaton furnishes the most striking example of suggestive hypnotism that has come before the medical world in many years. She is a niece of Former Ambassador Conger, says a Des Moines correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In the darkness of the room in which she has been confined since the night of her wonderfully realistic performance, Mrs. Heaton told her experience:

"Of course, in the play, I tried to appear as nearly blind as I could. I would almost feel as if I was losing my sight at times, but I thought it was the earnestness of the acting. I rehearsed several times a day and always worked with my eyes shut and with that vacant look which blind people have.

"It was hard for me to assume this expression, try as I would. After the play was over I gradually felt the blindness I had assumed that night and for the rehearsals three times a day for several weeks. Finally it affected my sight altogether and for almost three weeks now I have not been able to see anything.

"In the midst of my darkness and despair I believe that God will cure me in time. If He will I will never take part in any kind of theatricals again."

That Mrs. Heaton's blindness is the result of her realistic acting and of hypnotic suggestion is conceded by all the specialists and scientists who have examined her. Mrs. Heaton practiced blindness for so many days that she gradually, slowly but surely, convinced herself she was really blind. Then the end was inevitable.

The unfortunate woman sacrificed herself in church work, the production of "The Cricket and the Hearth" being given under the auspices of the Unity Guild, an organization of the Unitarian church.

Discussing Mrs. Heaton's sad fate and similar cases which have been known to science, a local specialist declares:

"Mrs. Heaton's case is, of course, unusual, but it is not unknown to oculists. Our technical term for this peculiar affliction is hysteria amblyopia, or hysterical ,hypnotic blindness. It usually occurs in young girls, but males and females may be affected.

"The truth is that the patient simply hypnotized herself into believing she was blind. In practicing the part of the blind girl she was so powerfully impressed that she in reality became Blind Bertha in the flesh.

"The report that the retina of each eye was divided is incorrect. The retina can only be ruptured by a heavy blow. Now, the patient really could see, but by auto suggestion she thought through her sub-conscious self, that she could not see. The images were reflected on the retina, but her imagination had so wrought upon the hypersensitive optic nerve that it became paralyzed to the brain. So she was practically blind.

"Some of these cases are famous in the profession. For instance, actors have hypnotized themselves into the idea that they are lame, or hunchbacked and their muscles contracted as in the real disease, but these people always recover.

"Cases like the one of Mrs. Heaton serve to prove to the public mind that the claims of believers in the wonderful newly discovered facts of autohypnosis and the subconscious are well founded on scientific research and infallible evidence.

"A wonderful example is cited by Montgomery, the old English writer. He states that Mrs. Siddons won fame and fortune through auto-hypnosis. The great actress was playing an obscure part at Drury Lane as Patricia, the crippled flower girl in Bailey's 'Venice.' Mrs. Siddons hypnotized herself into believing she was really Patricia, and although the part was a minor one, the critics went wild over her presentation of the character and she awoke to find herself famous.

"But it was long before Mrs. Siddons could interpret any other part. She became physically shriveled up and her legs tottered with weakness. She was compelled to spend several months at Bath, and the doctors had a hard time in getting her out of the peculiar spell. That was the first step in the career of the Queen of Tragedy."

Articles of Incorporation

We, the undersigned, hereby associate ourselves together for incorporation under and pursuant to the provisions of Title Two (2), Chapter Thirty-four (34), of the General Statutes of Minnesota for the year 1894, and for that purpose do subscribe and agree to the following Articles of Incorporation:

ARTICLE I.

The name of this corporation shall be Duluth Cedar Company. The general nature of its business shall be to purchase, own, cut, transport, improve, sell, convey and transfer timber and forest products of all kinds; to manufacture and deal in lumber and timber products, and to buy, hold, and sell such property, real, personal and mixed, as may be necessary, incident to or convenient in the conduct of its said business.

The principal place of transacting the business of this corporation shall be Duluth, Minnesota.

ARTICLE II.

The time of the commencement of this corporation shall be February 15th, 1906, and the period of its continuance thirty (30) years from that date.

ARTICLE III.

The amount of capital stock of this corporation shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00), which shall be paid in as required by the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE IV.

The highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which this corporation shall be subject shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00).

ARTICLE V.

The names and places of residence of the persons forming this association for incorporation are as follows:

Albert Baldwin, residing at Duluth, Minnesota.

Herbert A. Dancer, residing at Duluth, Minnesota.

Marie Cameron, residing at Duluth, Minnesota.

ARTICLE VI.

The government of this corporation and the management of its affairs shall be vested in a Board of three Directors, who shall be elected annually by the stockholders at the annual meeting of said stockholders, to be held at ten o'clock in the forenoon, upon the first Monday of November in each year, and in a president, a vice-president, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall be chosen annually by the Board of Directors from their number immediately after the annual meeting of the stockholders; and the offices of president and treasurer, or of secretary and treasurer, may be held by one and the same person.

In case of any vacancy occurring in the Board of Directors or in the offices, the same shall be filled by election by the remaining members of the Board at any regular meeting of the Directors or at any special meeting called for that purpose, or at the first meeting of the corporation, if there shall then be any vacancy or vacancies.

Until the first meeting of said corporation and until their respective successors are elected, Albert Baldwin, Herbert A. Dancer and Marie Cameron shall constitute the first Board of Directors; and Albert Baldwin shall be president, Herbert A. Dancer shall be Vice President, and Marie Cameron shall be Secretary and Treasurer.

ARTICLE VII.

The capital stock of said corporation shall be divided into five hundred (500) shares of $100.00 each.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF St. Louis.—ss.
In Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of Charles H. Jones, Deceased:

On reading and filing the Petition of Benjamin E. Cook, executor of Charles H. Jones, deceased, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said estate, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate with their residences; and praying that license be to him granted to sell all the real estate in said County belonging to the deceased, at private sale; and it appearing by said petition that it would be for the best interests of the estate of said Charles H. Jones, deceased, and of all persons interested therein, that the same should be sold.

It Is Therefore Ordered, That all persons interested in said estate, appear before this Court on Monday, the 12th day of March, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Benjamin E. Cook, Executor, aforesaid, to sell all of the real estate of said deceased at private sale.

And It Is Further Ordered, That this Order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper, printed and published at Duluth in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 13th day of February, A. D. 1906.

NEW COURTHOUSE SITE DISCUSSED BY BOARD

County and Courthouse Commissioners Listen to Arguments.

West End People Want It Erected at Eighth Avenue West.

The board of county commissioners met this morning to take up the matter of selecting a suitable site for the new courthouse, but when at noon, an adjournment was taken until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, nothing definite had been accomplished and is looked very doubtful if any agreement resulting in the passage of a resolution naming a site would be reached today.

The board was in executive session nearly all the morning, with W. C. Agnew and John Miller, of the courthouse commission. These with the three members of the county board constitute the courthouse commission so that the full membership of both organizations was represented at the conference.

Commissioner McInnis said he understood that Commissioner Patterson has declined to serve on the courthouse commission and that he had given as one of his reasons for resigning that he did so, "for the sake of harmony on the county board." He suggested that Mr. Patterson explain to the board what he meant by that statement.

Commissioner Patterson declared that there was no intention on his part, when he inserted that clause in his resignation, to throw stones at any member of the board. He explained that he was active in getting the resolution passed for the appointment of the courthouse commission and claimed that if he served as a member it would look very much as if he had been working for the resolution with that end in view.

"I have repeatedly told members of this board, and others that I did not want the position and that I would not have it," asserted Mr. Patterson, "and after what I have said, I feel that I could not conscientiously accept the appointment.

"I am satisfied, and have so stated before you all, that I believe any member of this board appointed on that commission would fill the office honestly and satisfactorily and I feel that some other one of the city members of the board should be on the commission. That is what I really meant to state in my reasons for declining the appointment."

While the board was in executive session, talking over the site proposition, Capt. D. E. Stevens, representing the West End Business Men's club, J. J. Frey, representing the West Duluth Commercial club and A. C. Ribenack, representing interested property owners in the vicinity of Eighth avenue west, appeared to present to the board the advantages of having a courthouse at Eighth avenue west and Superior street.

When given a hearing a little later, Capt. Stevens said that the site had been discussed by both of the clubs and that the opinion of the members was practically unanimous in favor of the Eighth avenue west site for the courthouse. He declared that sentiment was strongly in favor of a steel structure along business lines instead of the old-fashioned style of public building and pointed out that a building on the site mentioned would be centrally located, being about two blocks from the government building, three blocks from the depot, away from noise and practically on the dividing line between the eastern and western ends of the city. He urged its accessibility as something in favor of the site and claimed that an investigation has shown that the site would probably be donated by property owners in that locality if the commissioners would consider the offer. Capt. Stevens also urged that the city is building up right along, that about half the population of the city is west of the Point of Rocks, and that the western part is building up twice as fast as the eastern part.

J. J. Frey stated that he was one of a committee appointed by the West Duluth Commercial club to look into the matter of a site at Eighth avenue and see what it could be bought for. He said the club had not yet taken any action toward recommending any site, but that the committee thought it advisable to find out whether the commissioners would entertain the proposition if the location was tendered them.

Mr. Frey said the property that had been considered was owned by three parties. The land has a frontage of 300 feet on Mesaba avenue, 200 feet on Eighth avenue west and from 250 to 300 feet on First street. Mr. Frey understood it could be purchased for about $25,000 and said he understood that people in that part of the city would come to the front, put up the money and donate the site if the board would take it. He urged that the commissioners at least investigate the property.

A. C. Ribenack said he had talked with a number of the property owners in the vicinity of the proposed Eighth avenue west site and felt assured that if the total amount necessary to purchase it could not be raised, nearly all of it could. He pointed out the improvements in that part of the city.

Commissioner Patterson admitted that some very good reasons had been presented in favor of the site, but suggested that when any blasting was done in that vicinity in the future to open up streets, that the jarring would crack every joint in any building that might be erected in the locality.

Commissioner Kugler thought there might be other people who would present other sites for consideration if they had the opportunity. He favored putting the matter over until the next meeting to give them an opportunity of coming in.

Commissioner McInnis said he had maintained from the first that if the people of Duluth wanted a courthouse and did not like the old site they should put up the money to buy a new location. He said that so far as he is personally concerned, the board would investigate the Eighth avenue site.

Commissioner Kauppi said that while he was from the West end of the city and did not wish to oppose the wishes of the commercial organizations, he could not say he was personally in favor of the Eighth avenue site. He thought that it would be rather too high in the air, that the building would have to face First street, and that if it were built down on the Superior street grade it would be too dark and damp.

The representatives from the West end and the West Duluth commercial organizations maintained that all they asked of the board was to look into the merits of the site they presented, and the board, by resolution, voted to consider this site and all others that may be donated. Commissioner Kugler introduced the resolution.

* * *

Before adjourning there was some desultory discussion in open meeting about sites. Commissioner Kugler urged delay until the next meeting. Commissioner Patterson opposed any further delay. He said that the matter had been delayed long enough already and the people wish the board to get busy and do something. Mr. Patterson said there could be no better time to come to some definite understanding, as all the members of the board and of the courthouse commission were present.

Commissioner Kauppi then made a talk in which he expressed his choice freely and fully in favor of the east half of the postoffice block on West First street. He claimed that it was the logical location for the new courthouse, that there are practically no improvements on the ground at the present time, and it would not be so difficult a matter to have the half block condemned from First to Second street.

Mr. Kauppi urged that the government if it ever does get ready to acquire more land for an extension of the federal building, could just as well buy through to Second street, and that the property thus acquired would be preferable to buying all First street frontage in the same block. Mr. Kauppi was the only commissioner to state publicly his preference of a site.

Mr. Agnew and Mr. Miller, members of the commission listened attentively to the discussion, but took no part. They agreed to meet with the board this afternoon.

Commissioner Kugler again attempted to have the site question delayed by moving to adjourn. The motion was lost.

Commissioner Patterson moved for an adjournment until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon and the same was carried, Commissioner Kugler voting in the negatives.

It was understood this noon that some of the downtown sites would be looked over before the board began its afternoon session.

* * *

Preliminary to the executive session, the board passed a resolution amending the franchise granted the Mesaba Traction company a month ago by including Biwabik in the list of range towns to be provided with car line in the system planned, and giving the company thirty days in which to file acceptance of the amendment.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.
State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis.—ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, February 7th, 1906.
In the Matter of the Estate of Carl Erik Bergman, Deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Johanna Bergman, executrix, of the estate of Carl Erik Bergman, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It Is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday, the 5th day of March, A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

And It Is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this Order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 7th day of February, 1906.

MOTHER AND CHILD.

Let the mother take Scott's Emulsion for the two; it never fails to benefit them both. One can eat for two, but nourishing two is a different thing. It calls for a degree of internal strength that the average woman lacks. People of luxury are not very strong by habit; overworked people are weak in some functions from exhaustion or their surroundings. Scott's Emulsion can be depended upon to overcome such conditions. It is a wonderful food for a mother and child.

CHARGED WITH FRATRICIDE

New Yorker Said to Have Burned and Poisoned Brother.

New York, Feb. 15.—Accused of having murdered his brother, Carl, for the purpose of obtaining life insurance money, amounting to $3,000, Alex Legler, Jr., was arraigned in coutr in Jersey City today. The examination of the prisoner was postponed, however, until next Saturday, at the request of Chief of Police Murphy, who desired time to get together his witnesses. The case is one of the most extraordinary in the police annals of Jersey City. In explaining the case to the court, Chief Murphy said that the prisoner was suspected of having poured benzine over his brother, Carl, and of having set him afire while he slept, and added that it was believed that when Legler saw his brother would not succumb to his injuries, he caused the victim's death by administering some powder, presumably of a poisonous nature. The police announce that they will endeavor to have the body exhumed by the authorities at Baxley, Ga., whither it was taken by Legler soon after his brother's death.

Carl Legler's death occurred on Dec. 19, five days after he was found ablaze in his room at a boarding house in Summit avenue, where he lived with Alexander. His death was reported as accidental, and Chief Murphy did not learn of the case until last Friday. He began an investigation, which resulted in Alex Legler's arrest last night.

BARGE MANILA NOT YET IN PORT

Heavy Sea Delays the Wrecking Company's Work on Her.

The good barge Manila has not reached port yet and not one appeared to know today just when she would reach this city. This vessel was wrecked on Encampment island, north of Two Harbors, during the big storm, and was to have been brought back to Duluth this week by the Reid Wrecking company, which has the work in charge.

The barge was not released when it was planned, however, owing to a very heavy sea. The local offices of the Pittsburg Steamship company had not been apprised today just when she would be and when she would reach this port. She is expected before the end of the week.

The Reid company also holds the contract for the release of the steamer Lafayette, which went aground on Encampment Island, too, but it has been impractical to do so, she is so badly wrecked. Her hull will be abandoned and her machinery may be installed on the Manila and that barge converted into a steamship.

ST. LOUIS GAS $75,000 FIRE.
St. Louis, Feb. 15.—A fire in the wholesale district this morning resulted in a loss of $75,000. A building at Lucas avenue and Ninth street, occupied by Epstein & Whizer, dealers in notions, the Monarch Waist company and several smaller firms, was burned.

SEARCHING FOR SISTER

Girl Was Adopted From Orphans' Home Many Years Ago.

Brother, Grown Rich, Seeks Companion of Boyhood Years.

Trying to locate his sister whom he has not seen in twenty-three years, Edwin William Drury of Watseka, Ill., writes to the Duluth police for assistance in locating her if she is still alive.

Twenty-five years ago the parents of Drury and his sister Kittie died, and left the children homeless. They were taken by the Home for the Friendless at Watseka, and cared for by the authorities of the institution.

In 1883 a man named Victor Killsowskly and his wife adopted the little girl from the home, and took her away. All trace of her was then lost by both her brother and the people in charge of the home.

The boy grew up, and as soon as he was able to support himself, he left the home and struck out into the world. He was successful in business, and after a hard struggle, gained a competence for himself. All of this time he was trying, without success, to gain some trace of his sister, but she appeared to have dropped out of existence after leaving the home. For twenty-three years he has not been able to gain any trace of her, but now that he is independent of fortune, he is making a systematic effort to locate the missing companion of his boyhood years, and the man who gave her a home.

In some way Drury heard that Killsowskly and his sister had gone to the Northwest, and he thinks it possible that they settled at some spot in the vicinity of Duluth. He has written Chief Troyer, urging him to use every means in his power to locate the girl and her adopted parents, stating that good news awaits them if he can but find them. The girl may be going under the name of Kittie Mary Drury, or Kittie Mary Killsowsky, unless she has married in the meantime.

The Duluth police have been unable to locate any person answering the description in Duluth, but Chief Troyer thought that through the columns of The Herald the news might reach some person who had known the missing girl or her foster parents.

SAYS PRESERVATIVES ARE NOT HARMFUL.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Prof. Edward Kramer of the chemistry department of the university of Wisconsin, appeared at the pure food hearing of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce and spoke at length of the chemical nature of benzoic acid and benzoate of soda, the preservatives most commonly used by manufacturers of pickles, preserves and condiments. He explained that both of the preservatives are found in many of the ordinary vegetables and expressed the opinion that they are not harmful in small quantities.

Common Colds Are the Cause of Many Serious Diseases.

Physicians who have gained a national reputation as analysts of the cause of various diseases, claim that if catching cold could be avoided, a long list of dangerous ailments would never be heard of. Every one knows that pneumonia and consumption originate from a sold, and chronic catarrh, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles are agravated and rendered more serious by each fresh attack. Do not risk your life or take chances when you have a cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will cure it before these diseases develop. This remedy contains no opium, morphine or other harmful drug, and has thirty years of reputation back of it, gained by its cures under every condition. For sale by all druggists.

AN AUTOMOBILE RIDE

By Adrienne Roucolle.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"We will take an automobile ride this afternoon, Dolly. Be ready by 2:30, please."

The tones were cold, incisive, almost harsh, while the face, handsome in spite of the frown on the brow and drooping of the tightly compressed lips, increased still more the impression of controlled anger of the voice.

Mrs. Markford looked up from the letter she was reading and gazed at her husband with a startled expression, then she said:

"This afternoon? Why, Hector, I have an engagement with some ladies at the club and will not be able to go. You know that—"

"Yes, I know that you will come. Your appointment can wait. You will go with me this afternoon. I don't often ask for a few moments of your time, but today I do insist on your coming. At 2:30, then."

He rose and without another word left the room. Mrs. Markford looked after her husband and shivered.

"How strange he looked and how cold his voice sounded. I wonder if—if he knows!" She went white to the very lips, then with a shrug of her shapely shoulders exclaimed, "Bah! what a notion! Our secret is well guarded and my husband, occupied as he is with his club, his dogs and his horses, is not the man to look too closely after the conduct of his wife. Still I'd better humor him today and go for the ride. I will write to Ralph that I cannot meet him this afternoon."

Mrs. Markford was a pretty woman, one of thise pink and white and gold beauties, shallow and cold, without any depth, either moral or intellectual; a doll in whom vanity took the place of a heart. She had married Markford because he was handsome and rich and most of the girls wanted him. After her marriage the social position of her husband threw her much in the fashionable world, and she soon became the society queen of the season. This triumph had now lasted three years, and still she held uncontested sway as the most admired woman of the capital.

As to Markford, he was not happy. His strong, loving nature was ill mated with her vain, selfish one. He wanted love, and he got but its shadow; he wanted a home and he simply had a fashionable mansion, a stopping place for the idle. Daily he became more morose and from a home-loving man he turned into a clubman.

Markford did not come home to lunch that day, but at 2:30 he was at the door with the automobile. She did not keep him waiting. Wrapped in her furs, for the air was cold, a heavy veil protecting her face, she descended the steps and tripped lightly to the machine.

"Why, Hector, where is the chauffeur?"

"I have given him a day off. I will run the machine myself," he replied, as gravely he helped her to the seat.

"But are you sure you know how to run it?" she asked, frightened without knowing why.

"Certainly. You will see," and a strange smile passed over his lips as he took a seat.

A few seconds later they were off. After a time Mrs. Markford's fears vanished; her husband, on the crowded thoroughfare, had proved beyond a doubt that he was able to take care of the machine.

"Where are we going?" she asked after a while.

"Just for a ride in the country, was his laconic reply; then he relapsed once more into his morose silence.

Seeing he was disinclined to talk she allowed her own thoughts to travel back to the city they were leaving behind them. Suddenly she was recalled to herself by the surprising rapidity with which they were speeding over the country road.

"Are you not going too fast?" she asked in alarm, the rapidity of their course making talking difficult.

He laughed, a wild, mirthless laughter, then replied:

"Oh, we'll go a good deal faster later on. We are just starting, you know."

"But we would get killed should we meet anything on the road. This is madness, Hector."

Aagain he laughed; then answered:

"We will encounter something farther down the road, when it takes a sudden turn to the left, and a huge oak tree will stand directly in the course we are now traveling."

"Then we'll be killed!" she almost shrieked, wild with terror.

"That is my intention," was his calm reply, as with his free arm he seized her around the waist and forced her back to the seat from which, in her terror, she had risen. Then in merciless tones he continued: "Yes, I have the intention to die and to take you with me in death, at the same time give to that death the appearance of an accident. Madam, I know your secret; you and Ralph Parkney! I have known of this for four months, and during the maddening days and sleepless night, battling with my rage and jealousy, I have thought out the plan which today I am carrying out. The world will never know of your cruelty or my despair; the papers tomorrow will speak of the awful accident due to my carelessness, and no one will guess ahat for one of the victims, at least, it was not an accident. This, I think, is better than the divorce courts. Now, madam, if you still trust in anything; if you have any faith in God, pray, for the bend of the road of which I spoke is only two miles away and a few minutes we will both be dead."

Paralyzed with fear, her eyes staring wildly before her, her breath coming with difficulty between her open lips, she did not move, did not utter one cry for help, one word of mercy. Terror, in freezing her blood, had destroyed her power of action. The machine was now going full speed and the oak tree down the road seemed to the frightened woman to be running to meet them, so rapidly did it seem to advance.

The suspense, however, was not long. With an awful crash the machine struck the tree, it rose in the air like a wounded thing, then fell backward, crushing in its fall the two occupants which lay buried beneath the ruins. Hector Markford was avenged.

HATCHED FISH.

There are prosperous and ambitious liars' clubs in many cities and villages of New England, though as yet Bangor has no regular organization dedicated to the perpetuation of the untrue and unbelievable, says the Boston Globe.

One reason for Bangor's backwardness lies in the fact that the city relies very much upon prevaricating talent from the outside, and as it is filled with passing fishermen from May until October, and crowded with wideawake hunters from October until Dec. 15, there seems to be no eyring need for a liar's guild in the city.

One cool evening late in the fall this year a Bangor hotel office was comfortably crowded with hunters going into and coming from the Maine woods, and as the men told of their adventures in turn the competition grew heated, and able liars strove with equally able rivals to determine which individual was the most gifted.

"I am not much at hunting," said Judge George H. Smith of Presque Isle, "but I like fishing mighty well. I not only like fishing for the pleasure of the sport, but I am very fond of what results from successful angling for the living jewel which lurk in the lakes of Maine.

"I have known times when I took great enjoyment in angling from a clean fish market with a $5 bill. The result is often more satisfactory than fishing from a lake with a $75 rod, and it is always cheaper.

"I am so devoted to fishing that I am about to establish a private trout preserve of my own. With this object in view, I sent to Chairman Carleton of the Maine Fish and Game commission, last spring and had him send me down six dozen of his approved trout eggs, which I set under a fine old hen, which I had borrowed from a neighbor late at night, and in a short time I found that I had sixty-three nice young trout running about under the old hen and screaming for worms and other kinds of food.

"As soon as the frost was out of the ground I built a pen for them in my back yard, where they have been all summer. They have burrowed more than two feet under ground hunting for earthworms, and are as healthy as young ducks. I am going to put them in Squawpan lake as soon as the ice forms and next spring I think I can have great sport fishing."

"I am no liar as others are," said James Cratty, the proprietor of the hotel.

"Hear, hear," cried the crowd. "Mark Antony is about to speak concerning Caesar!"

"I regret that I cannot enlighten anybody regarding fishing or hunting," continued Mr. Cratty, "but I know of a spring above the head of Mooschead lake which would be worth a million to any man if he owned ti and had it here in Bangor.

"It is a small spring hidden away on the side of a hill among some evergreens. Now let me tell you how cold the contents of that spring are. One warm day last June I had been fishing from Moosehead, and when our party landed to take dinner on shore I placed out surplus trout in this spring so they would be firm and cold when we took the night train to go home.

"Well, sir, when I went for those fish I found every one of them frozen stiff and frigid, as if they had been kept in a cake of ice all winter. And there was the fluid spouting and ripping and flashing all about them as limpid as if it had been boiled and was trying to cool off. I put my frozen trout into a bag and threw them on the back of a horse to carry them down to the steamer, and when we arrived at the landing that bag was frozen firmly to the poor horse, so we had to cut it away with our knives. That is what I call a cold spring."

"But, my dear Cratty," interposed ex-Mayor Beal, "if that spring is as cold as you say it is, why does not the water freeze?"

"Who said anything about water?" asked Cratty.

"Nobody; but I supposed your spring held water—most springs do, you know. What was it, then, that froze the fish?"

"The spring I speak of, like many of the gentlemen present, was filled with liquid air."

The hardwood logs crackled on the brass andirons for minutes. One could hear the big clock ticking away in the hall. Then Judge Smith spoke again, disclaiming any knowledge of fishing, but saying that he was beyond question the best marksman with a rifle in Maine, and that if he had belonged to the Maine militia and had gone to New Jersey with the riflemen, Maine's score would have been very different from what it was.

Then he related incidents that took place in a hunting trip which he took in Aroostook county this fall, saying:

"I slew two partridges. Likewise I shed the blood of a deer. It was a marvelous shot. She started to run down a narrow roadway between high cliffs on either side. There were two bends or angles in the first part of the roadway, and then a long, straight stretch. She was disappearing behind the first angle or bend just as I saw her. I knew the road.

"I recalled the rule laid down in natural physics that the angle of incidence is equal to that of reflection. I knew that a ball would glance at the same angle at which it struck. I aimed at the wall in the first angle or bend, and fired.

"The bullet glanced over against the other angle or bend in the wall, and again glanced from that wall and went whizzing down the straight stretch, overtook the fleeing deer and perforated her from stern to bow, and she dropped dead in her tracks, even as Ananias dropped dead when he lied to the apostles. She weighed 193 pounds after she was dressed."

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE—Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage which was duly executed and delivered by John McLean, a widower, mortgagor, to The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, a body politic and corporate by the laws of the State of New Jersey, located at Newark, New Jersey, mortgagee, dated January first (1st), 1891, and which was duly recorded in the register of deeds' office for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on January twenty-seventh (27th), 1891, at eight (8) o'clock A. M., in Book fifty (50) of mortgages, on page five hundred eighty-five (585); such default consisting in the nonpayment of the principal sum thereby secured, with interest thereon, at six per cent per annum from July 1st, 1905, and exchange, all of which became due on January 1st, 1906, and no part of which has ever been paid;

And whereas, there is therefore claimed to be due, and there is actually due, upon said mortgage debt, on the date of this notice, the sum of eighteen thousand six hundred forty-two and 62-100 ($18,642.52) dollars, principal, interest and exchange;

And whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form which has become operative by reason of the defaults above mentioned, and no action or proceeding, at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The Northerly one hundred twenty (120) feet of lots numbered fourteen (14) and sixteen (16), West Second Street (W. 2nd St.), Duluth Proper, First (1st) Division, according to the recorded plat thereof on file of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said St. Louis County; which premises will be sold by the sheriff of said St. Louis County, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the twenty-fourth (24th) day of March, A. D. 1906, at ten (10) o'clock A. M., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and two hundred dollars attorneys' fee, stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated, February 2nd, 1906.

PRESIDENT OF ARMOURS

Endorses Other Witnesses' Story of Garfield's Alleged Duplicity.

Packers Were Promised Permission to Look Over the Report.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Arthur Meeker, general superintendent of Armour & Company, resumed his testimony in the packers' case today. He declared that Special Agent Durand had given his men instructions to show Mr. Meeker all the statistics before they were taken from the Armour office.

"As far as I know that was faithfully carried out," said the witness. He also declared that Commissioner Garfield had told him that before the report was published he would permit the packers to look over it, and see whether anything it contained was injurious to the packers.

"He assured us of his good faith," said the witness "and explained that the Martin resolution called for statistics and that was all that he would publish." Mr. Meeker was then excused and his cross-examination being postponed to allow Charles W. Armour, president of the Armour Packing company, and vice president of Armour & Company to take the stand. The story of the investigation as detailed by Mr. Armour was similar to that of Mr. Meeker and other witnesses.

COLE TO HEAD NEW COMPANY

Heinze Says Cole Will Have the Controlling Interest.

New York, Feb. 16.—It is learned that Thomas F. Cole will be president of the new company which will take over the disputed ore lands in Montana as a result of the settlement of the Heinze-Amalagamated Copper war.

F. Augustus Heinze gave an interview yesterday, stating that he is in no way bound by any private agreement to abstain from fighting or from competing with the new company that is now formed to make peace possible.

"There can be no more fighting over properties that have been the subject of dispute," said Mr. Heinze. "There is no further possibility of conflict over the properties taken over by the holding company.

"I will continue as an independent producer, but the properties I still control outside of the new holding company are so far to one side of the hitherto disputed claims that there is not the slightest possibility of any dispute."

Mr. Heinze was asked if he was in any way bound not to start a new ught on the Amalgamated people and thereby bring on a new war.

"Oh, there is no private agreement," he said. "However, the properties taken over by the holding company carry every right and title and they cannot become again the subject of dispute. Of course I am free to secure claims and own mines wherever I please."

Mr. Heinze said he did not see any likelihood of a renewal of the fighting. When asked whether he or or the Amalgamated would have the larger interest in the new concern, Mr. Heinze replied:

"I cannot say as to that. We shall both be heavily interested, but Mr. Cole will have the controlling interest."

"Will Cole exert this control as the representative of the Amalgamated interests?"

"Oh, I believe Mr. Cole personally will control the company. He is big enough for that."

Mr. Heinze said that the United Copper company, virtually Heinze's personal property; the Amalgamated and the North Butte Copper company, would be in the new holding company. He believed the Guggenheims would be represented. He said he did not know if Mr. Cole represented the North Butte company.

IOWA YOUNG WOMAN KILLED BY TEAM.

Ames, Iowa, Feb. 16.—Miss Sadie White, aged 18, was instantly killed last night and her mother, Mrs. J. T. White, was probably fatally hurt when the carriage in which they were returning from church was run down by a fast Northwestern meat train. Mrs. White was thrown 100 feet and desperately injured. Her oldest daughter was carried a mile and a half on the pilot of the engine and terribly mangled. A younger daughter, Hazel, escaped practically uninjured. The husband and father is away on a business trip and cannot be located.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON

Invited to Speak at Jefferson Banquet at Kansas City.

Kansas City, Feb. 16.—Governor Joseph W. Folk and Senators Joseph W. Bailey of Texas and William J. Stone of Missouri have accepted invitations to respond to toasts at the Jefferson day banquet of the Democratic Editorial association of Missouri, to be held in this city, on April 13. Invitations also have been extended to Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, and Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota.

CRUISERS LEAVE FOR NAPLES.

Genoa, Feb. 16.—The American cruisers Brooklyn, Chattanooga and Galveston left this port today for Naples, where the Tacoma arrived yesterday.

IS UP TO GERMANY

To Make the Next Move in Regard to the Tariff Tangle.

Must Decide Whether American Changes Are Satisfactory.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The next move in the German tariff negotiations must come from Berlin, it is said. In other words, it will be for the German government to decide whether or not the comparatively slight changes made by Secretary Shaw in the treasury regulations, of which they complain, will afford a sufficient basis for the proposed suspension of the application of the German maximum tariff rates to American goods. It is feared that the action of the White House conference, yesterday, in rejecting the application of the German importers in New York for open hearings in all cases of contested valuations of German goods entering New York, may be regarded by the German government as unsatisfactory.

Of the concessions that have been made by the treasury, however, one at least is very much desired by Germany, and that is that invoices hereafter shall be consummated at the point where the goods are manufactured in Germany, and not at the port of shipment, as at present.

ENGINEER DEAD ON HIS ENGINE

Alertness of Crew Saves Train From Terrible Wreck.

Binghampton, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Joseph Leslie, a locomotive engineer on the Susquehanna division of the Erie railroad, was found dead at his post today at Wellsburg. No damage was done, because of the alertness of the train's crew. Leslie, who was engineer of a fast freight train, reached out of the cab at Corning to catch orders handed to him on a ring, when his head struck some projection and presumably he was instantly killed. Passing through Elmira his lifeless body hung out of the engine cab, the head striking semaphores and gates, blood being spilled all along the tracks. The towermen at Elmira noticed something wrong from the fact that the train was running at the rate of a mile a minute and they cleared the track ahead. The conductor made his way over the train and set the air brakes. The fireman was not aware of the death of the engineer until Wellsburg was reached, the engine being of the "Mother Hubbard" type.

TAGGART BOYS GIVEN TO FATHER

Lower Court is Sustained But the Children Are in Paris.

Wooster, Ohio, Feb. 16.—Judges of the circuit court today refused to grant the continuance asked for in the Taggart case because of the absence of Mrs. Taggart. Capt. Taggart was examined as to his ability to take care of the boys. The court then decided that the order of the court below should stand as to Taggart's custody of the boys, but reserved to Mrs. Taggart the right to come into the circuit court in the future and show that she is a proper person and able to care for the boys.

In the meantime Mrs. Taggart is understood to be in Paris with her boys and it is said will remain there until Capt. Taggart departs with his regiment for the Philippines.

CONDEMNED MURDERER

Against the Abolishment of Capital Punishment in Ohio.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 16.—Frank Castor of Canton, Ohio, who shot and killed Policeman Davis some months ago, while robbing a house, and who is condemned to die in the electric chair April 6, said today that the Ohio legislature ought not to abolish the death penalty for murderers.

"I am against the abolishment of capital punishment," he said, "although death is staring me in the face. The abolishment of the death penalty would lead to a terrible state of affairs in Ohio."

HALF BREED INDIAN

Sent to Prison for Fourteen Years for Abusing Wife.

Easton, Pa., Feb. 16.—Edward Bruce, a half-breed Indian, who married a prominent Easton girl, was today sent to prison for fourteen years for brutal treatment of his wife. Bruce came from Coupeville, Wash., where his forefathers owned practically the entire district, and his grandfather left him the bulk of his vast estate.

KAISER AT DENMARK.

Elsinore, Denmark, Feb. 16.—The German battleship Preussen, with Emperor William on board, arrived here today. The emperor came to Denmark to attend the burial of King Caristian at Roskilde, on Sunday.

LEADER OF MUTINY INSANE.

Odessa, Feb. 16.—Lieut. Schmidt, the leader of the naval mutiny here, whose trial was to have taken place at Otchakoff fortress next week, is said to have become insane, after refusing food or drink for three days.

DEPOSITORS WANT MONEY

Big Crowd Surrounds Bank of America at Its Opening.

Not Believed Depositors Will Lose Anything by the Failure.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—A crowd of depositors gathered around the door of the Bank of America as early as 7 o'clock today in the hope of securing their money. Among the number were many drug clerks, the bank having worked extensively through the drug stores in all parts of the city. In many drug stores notices had been posted informing the public that deposits would be received at the drug store for the bank and offers of interest in the institution were held out to the clerks as inducement to secure large deposits.

The first official of the bank to put in an appearance was R. H. Howe, the assistant cashier. He opened the doors and a crowd of depositors swarmed after him. Mr. Howe made a speech to the depositors, saying in substance:

"Within a week you will receive 35 to 40 per cent of your money, and the balance within a few days after that. All depositors will be paid in full. We have $100,000 in cash on hand and some securities that will be disposed of within a week. There is not the slightest fear that any of the depositors will lose any of their money."

When asked as to the cause of the trouble, Mr. Howe replied:

"The cause of the failure is injudicious loans. All money received after 3 o'clock yesterday has been put aside and customers can have it at any time they call for it."

Receiver Healy, who appeared at the bank a short time after Mr. Howe had addressed the depositors, confirmed the statements made by him.

"I have no doubt," he said, "that all depositors will be paid in full. We are making arrangements to care for the savings accounts at once, but the commercial depositors will be compelled to wait for a few days until we know just where matters stand."

President Abner Smith today deplored the fact that he should, at his age, have been brought into an affair of this kind. He said:

"I got into this thing through my connection with some real estate loans. Everything would have been all right if the stockholders had not squabbled as to who had and who had not paid in full for stock."

COLLECTION OF REFUND

On Railroad Mileage Books to be Stopped in Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 16.—Secretary of Internal Affairs Brown today instructed the attorney general to begin suit against the Pennsylvania railroad to stop the collection of the refund on mileage books. Each purchaser of a $20 mileage book on the Pennsylvania railroad lines is at present compelled to leave a deposit of $10, which, the company claims, is for the purpose of preventing the illegitimate use of the book.

LOUBET PRESIDES FOR THE LAST TIME.

Paris, Feb. 16.—President Loubet today presided for the last time at the council of ministers. He showed emotion in thanking the cabinet for its support and hoped that the same ministers would continue their labors.

Premier Rouvier replied, saying that M. Loubet retired from office with the love of the republic and esteem of the foreign governments.

Later the president received farewell visits from the diplomatic corps.

GERMANS AWAITING

The Reply of France to Their Proposals for Policing Morocco.

White Will Not Offer Good Offices Unless So Requested.

Algeciras, Spain, Feb. 16.—The German delegates to the Moroccan conference say they are now awaiting the reply of France to their proposals which contemplate having small powers assume the direction of the Moroccan police. It is significant that Count Von Tattenbach, of the German delegation, is now insistent on the certainty of a settlement but the other delegates concur in saying that some doubt remains. It is generally believed, however, that the financial question will be settled by Monday.

Ambassador White says he will make no proposal of good offices except as a last resort and if requested to do so by both sides. Yesterday's strong article in the Paris Temps was not inspired from here and is likely to embarrass French action.

DETAILS OF THE PROPOSITIONS

Made to Operators by Miners Are Being Worked Out.

New York, Feb. 16.—The anthracite miners' sub-committee of seven, appointed at yesterday's conference between the operators and the unions' special scale committee, today began the work of formulating in detail the propositions which have already been presented in general form to the employers. The task is an arduous one, and it probably will be at least a week before the committee will have its report in shape for submission to the sub-committee of seven appointed by the operators. In the meantime there is likely to be no development in the situation, as the operators will not be able to make a move until they learn specifically what the mine workers will demand.

The sub-committee of the miners is made up of President Mitchell and three district presidents and secretaries. The other members of the special scale committee are still here, but most of them will have returned to the coal fields by tomorrow night. Some of them will be kept here by Mr. Mitchell to assist the sub-committee in preparing the technical portions of the communication to be given to the mine owners.

Beside meeting with the sub-committee, President Mitchell will look after the general work of the miners' organization. He is receiving daily reports from various fields, including the Pittsburg bituminous field, with relation to the deadlock on the question of an increase in wages, in that innuences are at work in an endeavor to bring about an agreement before April 1, when the two-year compact between the operators and the union, in the central district, expires.

ASKS FOR A SEPARATION

Countess Anna Does Not Desire Complete Divorce From Boni.

Her Writ Filed, Reads "Separation of Body and Property."

Paris, Feb. 16.—An "urgent writ" was today served on Count Boni De Castellane, making him defendant in the separation proceedings of his wife, formerly Anna Gould. This decisive step was taken after renewed efforts to effect a reconciliation had proved fruitless. The count accepted service of the writ, even calling upon the countess' lawyers to facilitate fixing upon a place where the writ could be delivered. The bill of complaint was filed at the same time. It follows very closely the countess' prima facie showing when she first asked the court's permission to take action against her husband. It mentions no names, but particularizes certain incidents in which the count is alleged to have participated, and it asks for a decree for what the French law terms "separation of body and property," meaning complete material separation without a dissolution of the bonds of matrimony. The court holds the bill of complaint in the strictest secrecy, but the foregoing are the essential features of its contents. It can be stated with absolute positiveness, now that the countess has formally inaugurated her action, that it is her intention to secure a decree at the earliest date possible. The count will not contest the granting of a decree.

BUSINESS IS PROSPEROUS

Trustees of Mackay Companies Make Report for Past Year.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 16.—The annual report of the trustees of the Mackay Companies was issued today and states that the Companies owns a part or all of the capital stock of seventy-four prosperous cable, and telephone and telegraph systems in the United States, Canada and Europe, including the Commercial cable and Postal telegraph systems. The report further states that the Mackay Companies is one of the largest stockholders in the American Telephone and Telegraph company, commonly known as the Bell Telephone company, and during the past year it has acquired control of the North American Telegraph company, which for twenty years has owned and operated a telegraph system in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois. The report shows that the Mackay Companies has no debts and that there are $40,645,600 preferred shares and $41,380,400 common shares. During the past year $4,676,800 preferred shares have been issued in exchange for shares in other corporations paying a much or greater dividend than the corresponding dividends on the Mackay preferred shares. The report states that the income of the constituent companies is largely in excess of the amount required to pay the Mackay Companies' dividends. The excess is used for extensions and reserves. The trustees state that they confine themselves in their investments to first-class cable, telephone and telegraph stocks. The laying of a fifth cable in the Atlantic ocean and the establishment of cable communications with Newfoundland and the laying of the new cables to China and Japan are referred to. The trustees are Clarence H. Mackay, William W. Cook, George W. Ward, Dumont Clark and Edward C. Platt.

BORNE TO THE TOMB

The Body of King Christian Taken From Copenhagen.

Will be Buried Sunday Among Other Danish Kings.

Copenhagen, Feb. 16.—The body of King Christian was removed from the Christianborg church, here, today, to the cathedral at Roskilde, where it will be buried Sunday among the tombs of the Danish kings, who for 1,000 years have found their last resting place in the ancient capital of the kingdom. The whole of Copenhagen was given up to mourning. Business and work were at a standstill, while emblems of sorrow were displayed everywhere. The enormous crowds of town people, garbed in black, swelled by thousands of arrivals from the country districts, thronged the square in front of the Christianborg church, and the route thence to the railway station from early morning, standing patiently for hours, in order to pay a last tribute to the dead monarch. The windows all along the route were filled with spectators, who paid high prices for seats. Most of the owners of such places of vantage announced their intention of devoting to charity, in memory of King Christian, the proceeds of the sale of seats.

Shortly before noon the kings of Denmark, Greece and Norway, Queen Alexandra, the dowager empress of Russia and other royal relatives of the deceased, and the representatives of foreign sovereigns, reached the Christianborg church, where a brief service was held, at the conclusion of which the coffin, covered with the Danish standard, was borne high by naval and military officers to the waiting hearse. Then, headed by infantry and cavalry, a simple cortege was formed and slowly proceeded through the streets, three and a half miles between the church and the railroad station.

Immediately behind the hearse was led King Christian's favorite riding horse, Jussuf, which will be shot tonight, according to the ancient Danish custom.

The procession was closed with carriages bearing the male members of royal families represented at the funeral, the ladies watching the departure of the body from a neighboring building.

The bells of all the churches were tolled and minute guns were fired from the arsenal throughout the progress of the cortege and until the coffin was placed on the funeral train.

This was the first time in history that the body of a Danish king has been transferred by railroad to the burial place. At the time of the death of Frederick VII the predecessor of King Christian in 1863, the use of a railroad train for the conveyance of the king's body to Roskilde was not considered sufficiently dignified.

U. S. CONSULS IN POSSESSION

Of the Archives of Venezuela in the Cities of France.

Paris, Feb. 16.—The United States consul general in Paris and the consuls at Havre, Bordeaux, Nice, Marseilles and Nantes today received orders from the state department at Washington through the American embassy here to take possession of the archives of the Venezuelan consulates in those cities. The orders expressly limit the action of the consuls to taking possession of the archives. The effect of this is to suspend further consular business as the archives cover the old papers whereas the limitation prevents the transaction of new consular business. The limitation follows the rules by Premier Rouvier that Venezuela having taken the initiative in revoking the exequaturs of the French consuls in Venezuela, while also threatening to interfere with French shipping, it was incumbent upon France to follow the same course.

Pursuant to the instructions, Consul General Mason proceeded to the Venezuelan consulate on the Avenue Victor Hugo, which has been in the hands of a caretaker since M. Maubourguet's enforced departure from Paris, and assumed charge of the archives upon which he placed the American consular seal. The other American consuls similarly took over the archives of the Venezuelan consulates in their respective cities. The consulate of Venezuela at St. Nazare was entrusted to the American consul at Nantes as it was deemed inadvisable to turn over the archives to the American consular agent at St. Nazare as he is a French citizen.

HEADS TO COME OFF IN RUSSIA

Thorough House Cleaning to be Made in Naval Department.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 16.—Spurred to action by Admiral Rojestvensky's remarks regarding rascality in the construction and fitting out of the Russian fleet, which gave point to rumors which have long been in circulation, Marine Minister Birileff has decided upon a thorough house-cleaning of all the departments concerned. The dismissal of Lieut.-Gen. Maltsoff, who as chief of supply division in the department of naval construction was responsible for the purchase of material for construction, is announced and it is said that the ax will soon fall on other higher officials.

HAD KILLED SIX PERSONS

Two Murderers Executed at the County Jail in Chicago.

One Was Examined for Insanity at the Last Moment.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—John Mueller and Robert Newcomb, who had each murdered three persons were executed today in the county jail.

Newcomb, who was a negro, was taken to the scaffold first, as it was believed that there was a chance that Mueller might be reprieved by Governor Deneen at the last minute. Just as Newcomb was hanged, however, a message was received at the jail from the governor, saying that he had positively declined to interfere in Mueller's behalf, and preparations were made for his execution as soon as the body of Newcomb should be taken down.

As soon as it was known that the governor had declined to interfere to prevent the execution of Mueller, his attorneys applied to the court for a stay of proceedings until the condemned man could be examined by an allenist. They claimed that he was insane, and should not be executed. The sheriff agreed to the stay, and the attorneys went before Judge Kersten and applied for a stay of execution. He declined to interfere, and they went to Judge Smith. He declined to enter a formal order, but said he would request the sheriff to postpone the execution until the examination could be made.

Deputy Sheriff Peters agreed to the further delay, and Dr. Hugh T. Patrick, an expert in mental diseases, was taken to Mueller's cell. He examined the prisoner, and announced his opinion that he was sane and responsible. After this there was no more reason for delaying the sentence of the court and Muller was executed.

Newcomb was hanged for the murder of Police Sergeant John P. Shine but he had killed two other persons before shooting the officer. Newcomb had been on a debauch which lasted all of the night of Oct. 10, 1905, his companion being Mrs. Florence Poore, a negress. Early on the morning of Oct. 11, Newcomb took the woman to her home in Sixty-first street and made several visits to a saloon. When he returned from one of his trips he found the woman talking to another man. He fired three shots at her killing her instantly. From here he went to a saloon kept by Isaac Luce where, without the slightest cause, he shot Luce in the mouth and Walter Blue, a negro, in the abdomen. Luce recovered and Blue died within a few hours. Newcomb then sought safety on the second floor of his home and the house was surrounded by a large number of policemen. Sargeant Shine, who led the besieging party, was killed by Newcomb, who fired through the door.

The crime for which Mueller was hanged was one of the worst ever committed in this city, it being the wanton murder of his wife, Anna Mueller, 25 years old, and his two children, Mary and Martha, both under 3 years of age. The murders were committed early Jan. 11, 1905, in the Mueller home. Mary, the younger child, was shot twice through the breast, the elder child was shot twice through the head and her face and neck slashed with a razor.

Mrs. Mueller's head was almost cut off by a razor, one thumb was cut off and she was slashed about the head and face.

Mueller cut his own throat with a razor and shot himself in the breast, but recovered after several months. Drink and an unhappy domestic life were ascribed as the causes for the murder. Mueller has always said he knew nothing about the commission of the crime, and declared that he believed it had been committed by burglars.

NO REAL DANGER FROM CHINESE

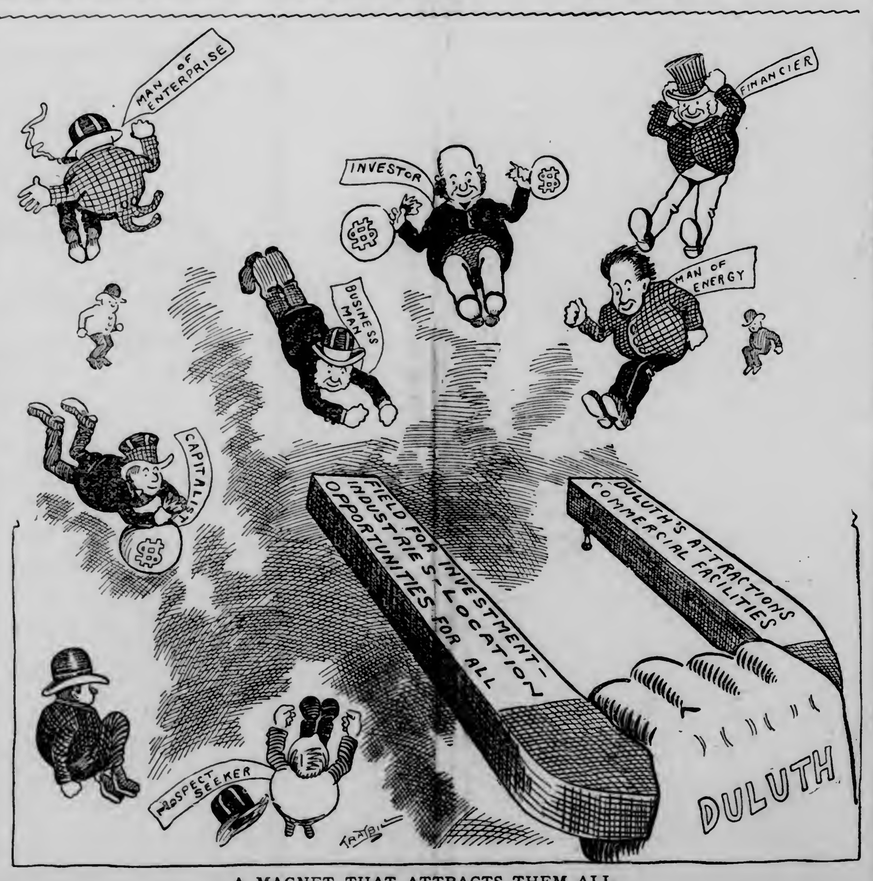

Senator Hale Believes Trouble Will be Settled Diplomatically.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Secretary Taft was expected to appear before the senate committee on the Philippines today, but Senator Hale announced that he had no desire to question him further. It was understood that the Maine senator would interrogate the secretary of war concerning the need of more troops in the Philippines, with a view to their use in China. It has developed that since the statement made by the secretary of war before the committee on appropriations, there have been several conferences regarding the situation in China, and that Senator Hale feels assured that there is no real danger of a clash in China, and that present difficulties will be settled by diplomatic negotiations.

The Philippine committee continued to hear the opponents of the Philippine tariff bill, Truman W. Palmer presenting the case of the beet sugar men.

LIBERALS TO CONTEST ELECTION OF BALFOUR.

London, Feb. 16.—The city Liberal association, at a meeting today, decided to nominate a candidate to contest the city of London against Former Premier Balfour, at the forthcoming by-election. The name of the proposed candidate has not yet been announced, but Thomas Gibson Bowles, who represented King Lynn in the last parliament, is supported by many Liberals, as the man most likely to effect a combination of the Unionist and Liberal free traders.

WEST DULUTH

IMPORTANT BUSINESS

Will Come Up at Meeting of the Commercial Club.

Some Action Probable Regarding Site Chosen for the Courthouse.

The meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club this evening promises to be an important one. Scheduled to come up are several subjects all of which are of importance, but it is feared that some of them will have to be put over to the next meeting, because of the importance of each and the consequent probable necessity of discussing them at length. In The Herald of yesterday it was mentioned that the matter of the city dock at the foot of Ramsey street will come up and some action will be taken.

Besides this it would not be surprising should some resolution regarding the courthouse commissions action be presented and probably adopted. When the West End Commercial club started a movement some weeks ago to have the commission select the property at the corner of Eighth avenue west and Superior street as a site for the new courthouse, the matter was called to the attention of the West Duluth club. While West Duluth business men stood in favor of such a move, they never considered that there was any show of bringing the matter to a successful conclusion; but the club appointed a committee to see what the site could be obtained for as it was understood that it could be purchased very cheaply and possibly some of it donated. That is as far as the West Duluth club ever went in the matter.

The site chosen by the courthouse commission yesterday seems to suit West Duluthians. This morning many comments were heard to the effect that the commission could not have chosen more happily than it has done. Those who spoke of it consider the site on Fourth avenue west just the place for the new courthouse.

The matter of pushing the settlement of farm lands in this vicinity may also come up in the club meeting tonight.

UNION MEETINGS NEXT.

Revivals in Several Churches Finish After Successful Week.

Tonight will finish the individual revival meetings in the churches of West Duluth, and the union meetings will begin on Sunday evening, and each will be held in the Westminster Presbyterian church. Each evening Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist Church of Duluth will be the speaker, and it is expected that the capacity of the church will be taxed. The meetings during the present week were for the purpose of working up interest in a preliminary way. While not largely attended, they have been very successful and entirely satisfactory.

At the West Duluth Baptist church tonight Rev. S. A. March of the Bethel will preach. Last night he preached at the Westminster Presbyterian church on "Acknowledged Sin." At the latter church this evening Rev. S. F. Sharpless of the Second Presbyterian church will preach. Rev. H. W. Johnson will preach tonight in Plymouth Congregational church on "Take my yoke upon you and follow me." There will be special music at this service. At Asbury M. E. church the pastor, Rev. Thomas Grice, will preach on "Jesus Illustrating the Great Change."

West Duluth Briefs.

The Epworth League of the Merritt Memorial church will hold a social tonight at the residence of Mrs. Culbertson, 3914 Magellan street.

Frank H. Wade will leave this evening for Oshkosh, Wis., where he will remain over Sunday.

A private dancing party will be given in Wade's hall next Friday evening by a number of West Duluth young people.

You save 40 per cent on cost of your medicines by going to City Drug store.

Avana Page is down from Saginaw station. He will go to work at Thomson.

J. Le Page will leave today to visit relatives at Munising, Mich.

WATCH REPAIRING—HURST, 391 CENTRAL.

M. D. Vlou of Munising, Mich., is visiting his brother, D. Vlou of West Duluth.

The poverty social given last evening at Great Eastern hall by the Modern Woodmen and the Royal Neighbors was a very distinct success.

The Modern Woodmen of West Duluth are planning a social session for next Wednesday night for members and their families only. Cards will be played and luncheon served.

M. Murphy has gone to Scanlon to visit his daughter, Mrs. Dean Holt, for a week.

S. Melsaacs has returned from Dallas, Tex., where he went to attend the funeral of his father and settle up the latter's affairs.

RAILROADS

TICKETS TO NORTHWEST

No Great Rush on Account of the Low Colonist Rates.

Harriman May Operate Line From Duluth to Gulf of Mexico.

The first two days of sale of the special low-rate, one-way colonist tickets to points in the West and Northwest have not resulted into an unusually active demand for the tickets, although a number of them have been sold, and numerous inquiries concerning them have been received in the Duluth offices of railroads leading westward.

The cheap tickets which went into effect yesterday, were put on sale fifteen days earlier than is generally the case this year. The heavier volume of travel does not begin until a little later in the year, along in March or April, but there are enough people desiring to start west earlier to warrant putting the tickets on sale Feb. 15, and this will probably be done right along now every year. Both the Great Northern and Northern Pacific out of St. Paul yesterday had two tourist cars attached to their trains in addition to the regular cars.

"The business bids fair to be the best into Montana, Washington, Oregon and British Columbia we have ever had," said a Northern Pacific official in speaking of the colonist movement. "During the year there will be a great deal of railroad building in the West, offering employment to large numbers and opening up many new towns. Many people are taking Mr. Greeley's advice and going West. Letters are being received at our general offices every day from people who are seeking attractive points at which to locate in the West. The Duluth office is also receiving a number of such inquiries."

All the railroad men express the belief that the movement will be quite heavy into the West on the colonist rates. It is hardly believed, however, that there will be so many of the ordinary laboring class who will take advantage of them as has been true in years past, because of the fact that there will be a great variety of railroad work in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Dakotas this spring and summer, offering employment to all the laborers in this part of the country who want it. This being the case many of the common laborers will prefer to remain in this part of the country on the assurance of plenty of work at good wages to going farther West in search of employment. But the movement of actual homeseekers, it is believed, will be heavier than ordinarily.

DULUTH TO THE GULF.

Harriman in Control of Duluth, St. Cloud, Glencoe & Mankato.

St. Paul, Feb. 16.—A Pioneer Press special from Mankato, Minn., says: It is reported to seemingly reliable authority that the Duluth, St. Cloud, Glencoe & Mankato Railway company has passed into the control of the Harriman interests, and that the Illinois Central road will operate the line when it is completed. It is further said that the road will be built through to Duluth, making direct connection between the Head of the Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico, forming a trunk line with no single competitor. One of the directors of the Duluth, St. Cloud, Glencoe & Mankato road was asked today about this report and replied that he would not be surprised if it proved true.

Railroad Club Booklet.

Each booklet giving the official proceedings of the monthly meething of the Northern Railway club is better than the one preceding it. The third issue is just off the press, and it is a model in every way. The feature is a full page photographic reproduction of W. A. McGonagle, president of the club and first vice president and general manager of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad. The addresses made at the last meeting are given in full.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Miners Successfully Descend Tamarack Shaft and Search for Bodies.

Calumet—A large party of miners went underground in the Tamarack mine Thursday, descending in No. 5 shaft. The men crossed No. 2, the scene of the fire a few weeks ago, and while dangerous gas still lurks in the opening, it is believed they will find the bodies of the three men who lost their lives in the fire. Indications are that the three idle shafts will resume operations in a few days, giving employment to 1,200 men.

Newberry—While temrorary insane Andrew Laoyerlunti, a Finn, committed suicide by decapitating himself with a razor. The scene of the tragedy was a boarding house at Coalwood, and not until the blood which had accumulated in a pool on the floor had found an opening in the ceiling through which it coursed in a stream, to the great horror of the occupants of the room below, was the suicide suspected. The man had gone to his room half an hour previously, after informing the landlady that two Frenchmen were digging a grave near the house and were going to bury him in it. A widow and several small children are left in destitute circumstances in Finland.

Menominee—Menominee county timber land owners are complaining of wholesale trespassing on their property. The high prices of timber at present renders the temptation to overcut boundary lines very great and it is said that already many hundred thousands of feet of timber have thus been dishonestly cut, representing a value of $100,000. Detectives are now looking for the trespassers.

Walter Brandt, a 14-year-old boy living at Faithorn, is the champion boy hunter in the Upper peninsula. He has shot several wolves and wildcats this year, and last year he killed a total of eight wolves and eight wildcats. He brought his last wolf to Menominee this week and claimed the $25 bounty.

After many years of separation, the Weir family of eight children has again been united through the efforts of one sister, Miss Della Aschen, who lives in Menominee. The Weir family was broken up many years ago and the children scattered. Miss Aschen is heiress to nearly $60,000 left by her foster parents. Several of her sisters in Lower Michigan have married wealthy men. One sister is living in California, where she was adopted years ago.

The annual state encampment of the Wisconsin G. A. R. will be held at Marinette, June 12 and 13.

Charles Setewski, a farmer living on the state road just outside the city limits, has reported to the Menominee police that he has been robbed of three sets of harness, several horse collars, a buggy and a sleigh by thieves that entered his stables during the night. The tracks of the vehicles could be followed from the farm to the state road. James Stiepek, a farmer living just within the city limits, reports that thieves entered his home and carried away ten bushels of potatoes, one barrel of apples and twenty quart cans of preserved fruit. A great deal more was taken, but the exact amount could not be arrived at.

Ironwood—ODudley Houk was quite severely burned about the face by the explosion of an alcohol lamp in the laboratory at the Luther L. Wright school at Ironwood. In putting out the flame the young man blew into the lamp, instead of pressing down the top.

Munising—Two girls and a boy, combined weight only nine pounds, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goshky at East Munising. The mother and babies are doing nicely. Mr. and Mrs. Goshky have twins seven years old and no other children were born to them until the triplets arrived.

A man who once had rough, horny hands made them soft and smooth with Witch Hazel Salve, but he used the genuine—that bearing the name "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. Sold by all druggists.

The Band Concert

With its usual fine program, the Third Regiment band will make its appearance at the Lyceum theater Sunday, playing in the evening at 8 o'clock, instead of the afternoon as formerly. It has been found that the public prefers this hour as manifested at the concert of last week, when nearly three hundred more people were present than on any previous concert of the season.

G. Johnson

brought into Tepisco a mule load of silver ore, which he sold for $200 to one of the local ore buyers. All efforts to induce him to reveal the place where he obtained the ore proved of no avail. When he found he was watched by spies of mining men, he went back to work upon a little corn ranch that he had in the neighborhood, and there he stayed until those watching him got tired. About two months ago he suddenly disappeared, and had not again been seen there at the time of my departure, two weeks ago. It is my opinion that he is again on the hunt for the mine from which he got the ore. Or, if he knows where it is, he is taking ore out of it on the quiet; for he sold out all his corn and realized on his other crops at a sacrifice before he left.

"It may be that he is taking out denouncement papers. But this I doubt, as an Indian in that country rarely does that, for it means the payment of taxes, and incidentally the revealing of the place where the mine is situated. The Indian about there has been so badly treated and cheated that he is afraid of every one, and suspicious of even the mining authorities.

"The silver ore which this Indian brought into the town was an oxide almost jet black, running like a great seam through a wide vein of hard lime formation. One of the pieces of ore brought in by the Indian assayed $1,800 to the ton in silver and $1,500 to the ton gold. Very little of it ran much less. The man who made the assay has tried every means in his power to induce the Indian to tell him where the hidden mine is. But the best he could get out of him was that it is in the north, at a considerable distance from Tepisco, and that the whole region, which is on the borders of the hot lands, is seamed with veins of silver ore.

"Many buscones have been seen on the hunt for this hidden mine ever since the Indian brought in the famous ore some months ago."

GOLD IN CHIMNEY.

Various sums of money were found by workmen in the old dwelling on the Neff property in Middletown, Frederick county, which is being extensively repaired by the new owner, Lew Flook, says an exchange.

While Carroll Feete was working at the old bake oven, he pulled the one loose brick out of the chimney and, reaching back in the opening, drew forth an old, rusty tin coffee essonce box. He shook it, and the contents rattled.

Others gathered around and in a few minutes the lid was knocked from the box and out rolled a pile of gold and silver coins. In this collection was one $10 gold piece of the coinage of 1805—just 100 years old, but bright and shining, nevertheless. The box also contained one $3 gold piece of 1854, one $2.50 gold piece of 1853, three Spanish silver dollars of the years 1775, 1812 and 1819, one 12½ cent piece of 1779, two 3-cent pieces so smooth that dates could not be made out.

The coins, when put in the box, were wrapped in a piece of muslin, but there were only small fragments of this left. The money was turned over to Mr. Flook.

William Gaylor, while working in the old house, pulled thirty-six silver quarters out of an apparent rat hole at the head of a stairway. A few days later four pairs of new scissors, wrapped in paper, were found sticking in the rafters in the garret. A number of gold dollars have been dug up in a garden bed on John Gardner's property adjoining the Neff property from time to time during the last six or eight years.

Before the war Jacob Neff, an aged bachelor, conducted a general store in the basement room of the property now being repaired by Mr. Flook, and he did a big business. There was no bank nearer than Frederick at that time, and the supposition is that when the war came on Mr. Neff hid various sums away and possibly forgot some of the hiding places, or before his death, which was sudden, had no time to reveal their whereabouts.

Governor Johnson Says That No One Should Ride Free.

St. Paul, Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Among the several speakers who addressed the State Editorial association meeting held in Minneapolis late yesterday afternoon was Governor Johnson. He was not on the program for a set speech, but was called upon by the president and said:

"I don't know that I have even an idea to talk upon. I am only here because I have a membership like yourselves that I paid for in this association. I agree with everything that every other speaker has said in his paper, and I have enjoyed hearing what has been read.

"I heartily agree with what has been said about transportation. That is one of the great questions that the American people will soon have to deal with. No one should ride on free passes. No set of men should be so fortunate as to ride free at the expense of others. No one should ride at all unless he can give value received for his fare. Some men ride for nothing, while other men have to pay 3 cents a mile for their transportation. I am among those who believe in a 2 cent fare for Minnesota. In fact it should come very soon and I am going to recommend it to the next legislature that we have a 2 cent fare and prohibit passes altogether."

The governor then went on to point out that country papers were being conducted upon a higher plane than the city newspapers; that the counting room did not run the country newspaper as it did the city paper. A certain St. Paul paper, he said, did not print the news if it hit at certain interests; a Chicago paper refused to print anything against the railroads, and other interests with which they were friendly.

"Every man should conduct his paper along good business lines," he said, "but do away with the small graft."

ST. LOUIS COUNTY LOSES TAX CASE

Lumber Roads to be Taxed in Counties Where Headquarters Are.

St. Paul, Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today decided that lumber and logging roads must be taxed in the counties in which is located the principal place of business of the company owning them.

The decision was rendered in the case of the Board of County Commissioners of St. Louis County vs. the State Auditor. The companies interested in the case are the Northern and the Cloquet Lumber companies of Carlton county. They are the owners of the Duluth & Northern and the Missabe Southern railroads. The St. Louis county officials sought to tax these roads in St. Louis county. The supreme court held that railroads not doing a regular passenger or freight business for hire should be taxed in the county where the headquarters of the owning company is located.

The supreme court, in a decision filed this morning, decided that the law passed by the last legislature, providing that the fee offices of Ramsey county should be governed by the federal census, should obtain.

According to the last federal census, Ramsey county has less than 200,000 population, while the last state census of last year gives Ramsey county over 200,000 population.

The court holds that the fee offices, under the special law of the legislature, must be governed by the federal census, and that the fee offices of this county must be run according to the law dealing with the counties of over 150,000 population.

With Justice Elliot only dissenting, the supreme court today filed an opinion affirming the Hennepin district court in the case of Carlton Graves, respondent, vs F. W. Bonness, appellant.

The suit involved an appeal from an order of the court, directing a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $37,827.23 for work involved in three seasons' cut of logs. The original damages asked were in excess of $75,000.

The verdict is held justified by the evidence and the calculation of its amount reasonable, in view of the testimony as to the terms of a contract and as to its performance.

ALL IS READY FOR WEDDING

The Roosevelt-Longworth Nuptials to Occur at Saturday Noon.

Washington, Feb. 16.—At noon tomorrow Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio will be married. The ceremony will take place in the East room, the Rev. Bishop Y. Satterlee officiating. The decorations will be the most elaborate ever seen in the famous East room. The work of preparing the room for the occasion is well under way.

The guests will number about 1,000. Immediately after the reception of the guests by the bride and the bridegroom, a buffet wedding breakfast will be served in the state dining room.

Presents have been pouring in from all quarters in large numbers, and for two days they have been on display to the immediate personal friends of the bridal couple who have come to attend the wedding.

The White House grounds will be closed all day tomorrow except to those who are invited as guests. Police arrangements have been perfected to prevent the streets about the White House becoming congested by people who may collect about the grounds.

PACKING A GRIP.

New York Sun: The traveling man lit a cigar, settled himself deeper in the car seat, and said:

"Did you ever have the good luck to watch a chap who thinks he knows all about packing a grip try to do it? Well, I have; and it's worth the price of admission.

"There is something of an art in packing a bag and also in knowing what to pack and what to reject. This knowledge can be obtained only by experience, and that means traveling, not for a day or a week, but for weeks, under all circumstances and at all times of year.

"Perhaps then you will learn what you need and what you can do without. It's remarkable the things you can do without when you find out how. I have a suit case of the smallest size and lightest weight, and I can put enough into it to be very comfortable for a week or ten days if necessary.

"To return to my young friend. He was a good chap, but the extent of his traveling was a trip from New York to Philadelphia or Boston once or twice a year and then two weeks at some summer resort and once I think he got as far away as Buffalo. The summer resort trips could never be made without a trunk large enough to contain the entire wardrobe of all his brothers and sisters.

"I happened into his room one evening and found him, collar off, cuffs turned up, hair on end and red as a lobster.

"'What's the matter, Billy?' I inquired.

"'Oh,' he grunted from his seat on top of a big suit case, 'I've got to get the 11 o'clock train for Boston and I'm having a fierce time; can't seem to get my stuff in here, and it's too late to send my trunk, and all the rest of the family are away, and this is the only dratted bag in the house, and I'll miss that train sure as a gun.'

"'Let's see the inside of that summer cottage you're sitting on,' I said. 'By the way, how long do you expect to be gone?'

"'Oh, I'll be back Saturday morning,' and the time was Wednesday evening.

"I opened up the thing he was packing and began to pull out his duds amid violent protests from the lobsteresque Billy. This is a starter on the contents of his case:

"Four shirts (and he had a clean one ready to put on), six pairs of socks, one dozen collars, eight neckties, one pair of patent leather shoes, two pairs of white spats, one pair of slippers, one hundred cigars, one pipe, one-half pound tobacco, two suits of underclothing, one set of pajamas, one dozen handkerchiefs; the usual assortment of silver-mounted rubbish that some kinds of people give you at Christmas and call a toilet set, and this particular one was a little larger and more useless than usual; two novels, bulky and bound, one bundle of papers; and on top of all this he was trying to crowd in a raincoat. He had laid out a light overcoat, umbrella and cane to carry.

"'Billy,' I inquired, 'aren't you mistaken as to the time you are to be away?'

"'No, no, of course not, but get out of the way; I'm late now, awfully.'

"'Softly, my son,' I answered, 'permit me to pack your bag.'

"I then allowed him the following list, which was even more than he needed: two shirts, three pairs of socks, six collars, two neckties (dark ones), twenty-five cigars, one pipe, two ounces of tobacco, one suit of underclothing, one suit of pajamas, six handkerchiefs, one bundle of papers.

"The toilet set was laid aside and in its place was substituted one hair brush, one comb, one whisk broom, one tooth brush and powder, one razor and strop, soap and lather brush, and one cake of hand soap, all of which can be tied up or rolled inside the pajamas.

"When I got through the case was not more than two-thirds full and vastly easier to carry.

"'Now, William,' I said, 'you have got more than you really need for so short a journey, but in deference to your tender feelings, I will permit you to take what I've packed. Don't you see you can have no earthly use for four or five shirts, a dozen collars or a dozen handkerchiefs?

"'If you were going to be gone a week or so I'd change your outfit some, allow you more socks, handkerchiefs, and perhaps nine collars; but every hotel in the country has a laundry where you can get your clothes washed in a day, from morning to night, and you can have no use—real use, I mean—for all the other things I fired out; that is, on a business trip.

"'Now, you have an hour and a half to make your train, and the station is only twenty-five minutes away. Calm yourself, and I will walk along with you.'

"Billy is only an illustration of a lot of folks who have the old bird cage idea. Every time they have a trip to make it's about like breaking up housekeeping, and they bolster up their foolish ideas by the thought: 'Well, maybe I'll need this or that, and if I do, and don't have it, what shall I do?'

"Do! Why, you'll do without, just like the rest of us, and you can do without a lot of things if you don't have 'em."

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

South Dakota Woman Accused of Killing Her Husband.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Madison—The coroner's jury investigating the killing of Joseph La Pine, who was shot in a resort near here, has rendered a verdict holding Dora La Pine, the reputed wife of the victim, responsible for the shooting. The woman has been arrested, and is held in jail to await the action of the circuit court.

Testimony taken at the inquest showed that the couple had quarreled frequently, and that their relations had reached such a desperate stage that the killing of one or the other seemed inevitable.

The woman's real name is said to be Dora Fuchs.

Yankton—John McQuay, a boy employed at the Gazette office in this city, met with a serious accident which might have cost him his life had not a loose belt caused the blocking of the machinery. McQuay was assisting to lace a belt, and was attending a pulley attached to the main shaft, when in some way his arms became drawn around the shaft. Fainting and limp from the shock, he hung on the shaft while employes reversed the shaft and released him. Both of his arms were broken between the elbow and wrist. The middle finger on the left hand was so badly crushed that it had to be amputated.

Deadwood—"I am going crazy, and I want you to take care of me," said Peter Nelson, as he took a seat in the office of Judge G. G. Bennet of the county court. Nelson had wandered up and down the street for hours, rushing from one point to another as fast as he could, trying to make up his mind to go home. He seemed to have lost entirely the ability to carry out any determination. He came in from Snoma on horseback as far as Centennial Prairie, where for some reason he sold his horse, saddle and outfit for $7. He does not know why he sold it.

"I wanted to die," he said, "and so I went out after that on the hills, hoping that the wild animals would come and eat me up. I built a fire out of some dry wood which a ranchman had piled up in one corner of his pasture and waited, but the animals did not come."

Nelson is a Dane about 43 years of age, and speaks excellent English. He has been working out on the government irrigation ditch. When taken before the examining physician it was found that he had an ounce and a half of laudanum on his person. He is in the county jail and probably will be sent to the asylum at Yankton.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Trustee Ramstad of the agricultural college board of trustees has tendered his resignation and S. S. Kulaas has been named by Governor Sarles as the new member. Both are from Minot.

Head of Carrington were arrested by United States officials on the charge of counterfeit money has been in circulation between Jamestown and Leeds. The matter has been undr investigation and the culuette is thought to be responsible.

Representatives of a wireless telegraph company are investigating conditions in this state and are reported to have determined on opening a station at Grafton with sub-stations in other parts of the state to complete a chain of stations through Northern Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana and Manitoba.

The commissioners of Cass county have adopted resolutions petitioning congress to enact the Hansborough bill to divert $1,000,000 of the reclamation funds to drain the Red River valley. The measure having passed the senate, local people hope to see it go through th house. The drainage situation is serious in parts of this county.

The best basketball game of the season is expected Saturday evening, when the girls' teams of the Minnesota university and the North Dakota agricultural college meet here. The locals are easily the champions of the state.

The Fargo board of education elected W. E. Hoover of Park River, N. D., superintendent of the city schools to succeed W. E. Hicks, recently elected assistant superintendent of schools at Cleveland, Ohio. Supt. Hoover has acted in that capacity at Casselton, Larimore and Park River, and is one of the best educators in the state. The conditions of his election are that he will assume his new duties March 1.

AMENDMENTS GO OVER.

Washington, Feb. 16.—All important amendments to the railroad bill pending in the interstate commerce committee will go over until Friday It was decided today soon after the committee mt. Senator Tillman has sent a letter to the committee saying that he is threatened with pneumonia and cannot attend for several days. It is also stated that Senator Cullom, who is in Florida, will be here next Friday.

Constipation the cause of Disease.

Nature's Own Remedy.

Constipation is not only disagreeable —it is dangerous. If allowed to run on and become chronic it will prove the forerunner of sickness and disease. Nature intended that the bowels should move regularly, at least once every day, and she will not be satisfied with anything less. The delicate stomach and bowels are the keystone of the arch of the human physical organization, and should be kept in normal working order to preserve health. When the bowels become sluggish they require a natural and harmless laxative. Too often they are permanently damaged by powerful drugs taken into them several times a day in the effort to force action. Nature herself has provided her own harmless laxative, the famous Natural Mineral Water—HUNYADI JANOS—which can be relied on for quick and sure results. One dose of this water (½ a tumblerful) drunk on arising in the morning (slightly warmed for best results) will, within an hour, move the bowels gently and copiously. A bottle costs but a trifle and contains many doses. At all Druggists.

TO STAMP OUT DIVES

Police and Prosecuting Attorney Gain Signal Victory in Court.

Judge Windom Rules on Fine Point in Sale of Liquor.

A signal victory was gained by the police and the assistant city attorney, this morning, in their efforts to stamp out the disorderly class of lodging houses along West Superior street, and put a stop to the sale of liquor in these places, which are thus transformed into ordinary wine rooms.

The majority of the lodging houses are located over saloons, and the keepers simply act as agents for the beer and whisky sold in the saloon, and deal it out to the lodgers in the rooms above. They claim that they are not selling the beer themselves, but merely act as waiters, and that the sale is consummated in the saloon. This is the situation the police have had to meet in their efforts to clean such places off the Bowery, but they won the first skirmish in their fight before Judge Windom this morning, when they convicted Jennie Nelson of selling liquor without a license, and had her fined $40 and costs, with the alternative of forty days in the county jail.

The Nelson woman runs the lodging house at the corner of Seventh avenue west and Superior street, and she was arrested on two charges, that of selling liquor without a license and of running a disorderly house. She pleaded not guilty to both charges, and M. H. McMahon defended her. The former charge was tried first.

Mr. McMahon claimed that the woman did not sell the beer, but that the sale was conducted in the saloon. A stoolpigeon, employed by the police, had given the woman the money for the beer in advance, and she had gone down and purchased it. According to her story he had given her a dollar and she had returned to him the change, but his story, supported by another witness, was that he had given her 50 cents, which, she said, was the price of the beer. Mr. McMahon claimed that she was acting merely as a waiter.

"If she is guilty," he said, "the driver of every brewery wagon in town is guilty when he delivers a case of beer to the private residence of some citizen. But the sale is conducted at the brewery not at the door of the house.

"And in the same way if a man should fall down sick here and should ask somebody to run and get him some brandy, that person would be guilty of the sale of liquor on his return.

"Every restaurant keeper in town would be guilty of the illegal sale of liquor, for liquor is served in nearly every restaurant. The sale is made in the saloon and the waiter merely acts as agent, as Mrs. Nelson did."

Assistant City Attorney McKeon, on the other hand, argued that Mrs. Nelson had purchased the beer for 25 cents in the saloon, and had resold it to the lodger for 50 cents, making a profit of 25 cents.

Judge Windom denied two motions to dismiss the case, and finally found the woman guilty, fining her $40 and costs. Her attorney asked for a stay of ten days, which was granted, and he will probably take an appeal.

Immediately following the first case, the woman was placed on trial for keeping a house of ill fame, the same witnesses being used by the prosecution.

GAMBLING WITH DEATH.

What Many of Us Are Doing Three Times a Day.

For everything we get something is taken away. Every act pulls two ways. Some men in power dole out their souls for it. They can't have soul and power at the same time.

And so, in this quick-living age, most of us can't have energy and health at the same time. One or the other must be lost, and it is usually health.

We know we are doing wrong and would like to reform, but we have a morbid fear of being laughed at if we aim to live and eat according to conscience and good sense.

Some of us break away for a while and enslave ourselves to a diet. We read about the hardy Scotsman being fed on porridge and oatcake, making soldiers of music and dash, and how Caesar's army was fed on corn. But the diet doesn't last long. We quickly swing back into the great line, eating and drinking to fulness like the rest, eating anything and everything, at any time, and any way we find it. We say "what is a stomach for if it isn't to obey the palate."

But there is really no one rule applicable to everybody's stomach. What one man may eat another may not.

But the dyspeptic should remember that the death list has a dark shadow hovering over it with a long bony finger pointing to "died of heart disease." Physicians will tell us that there are few cases of heart disease that do not come from a stomach derangement.

At every meal we may be brewing for ourselves a terrible case of dyspepsia. It may come upon us after breakfast tomorrow morning, or after that oyster supper tomorrow night.

Acute indigestion means that you have even chances for death or life. That's the gamble you are taking. That precious gastric juice decides, as a rule, whether you continue to live or not.

Therefore, if you feel your food lies like a "lump of lead" on your stomach, beware! Your gastric juice is weak. It can't dispose of the food in time to prevent fermentation. Take something that will do it effectively, and at once. Take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, the most powerful tablets in the world for the relief of all kinds of stomach trouble, nausea, indigestion, the worst cases of dyspepsia, fermentation, bloaty feeling, sourness, heartburn and brash.

One grain of an ingredient of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. Your stomach needs a rest an once. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will relieve your stomach of more than two-thirds of the work it has to do, digesting perfectly whatever food there is in your stomach.

You can't do your work well, or be cheerful, or have energy or vim or ambition, when your stomach is bad. Make yourself feel good after a hearty meal, feel good all over, clear your mind and make you enjoy life, by taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Give your stomach a rest, so it can right itself, then you need fear nothing. You can get these tablets anywhere for 50 cents a package.

WATER PLANT INADEQUATE

For Fergus Falls, Says Expert Employed by the Council.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Some time ago the Fergus Falls Waterworks company, when pressed to set a price upon the waterworks system now in use, offered the plant to the city for $89,000, the full amount voted by the people in the fall to either purchase or construct a water system. The city council employed John Adamson, an expert in such matters, to estimate the value of the entire system, and his report was read at a meeting of the council Wednesday night.

The report is to the effect that the plant is entirely inadequate and in bad condition; that in case of a serious fire which would require a heavy pressure on the water mains for any length of time, there is hardly a possibility of the pipes standing the pressure, and that the city is and has been for some time practically without fire protection, and will remain so until a new system can be put in. He estimates the entire value of the system at $25,000, or $64,000 less than the waterworks company asks for it.

The council, after some deliberation, voted to offer the company $25,000 for the plant, but it is expected that the matter will finally have to be settled in the courts.

George W. Roberts, the 17-year-old son of William Roberts, a farmer living in Bluffton township, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. He was temporarily insane as the result of blood poison.

The heirs of Iver Hanson who was killed in the recent wreck at Underwood, have applied for the appointment of Peter J. Medjaa as administrator of the estate of the deceased, and as soon as the probate court has made the appointment, the administrator will commence suit against the Northern Pacific Railway company for $5,000 damages. So far as known there are two heirs, Miss Gunda Hanson, aged 18, and Oscar Hanson, aged 19. The present whereabouts of the latter is not known.

A LUCKY REPORTER.

Success: It requires eternal vigilance for a reporter to bag his game, leaving not a single chance for escape. It might be further said, however, that the element of luck does creep in now and then, either to a newspaper man's advantage or to his ruin. When Reginald Foster was one of the craft, he became famous as the luckiest of reporters. He was alert, energetic and capable of writing an excellent story when he landed it, but seemed to have a mascot perennial and eternal. Wherever he went he stumbled upon a "beat." He happened to be reporting a St. Patrick's day parade and went into the Windsor hotel to telephone his office, when the fearful fire started in that hostelry, resulting in the death of several hundred persons. Foster abandoned the parade, and helped rescue the imprisoned patrons of the burning hotel, and that night wrote a graphic account of the fire from start to finish. He was the most available reporter in New York when the great Hoboken fire started, and, hiring a steamer in the name of his newspaper, he saved many lives before the firemen could render aid. When President McKinley was assassinated at Buffalo, the first news came to all the papers in New York in the shape of a very brief bulletin. A group of newspaper men simultaneously asked of each other, "Where is Foster?" Somebody explained that he was then on his vacation at Narragansett Pier; but even while he was speaking a telegram to the city editor was received and torn open : "I was right beside the president when he was shot, having come to the Buffalo exposition to close my vacation. Will send full descriptive story tonight." It was Foster.

SAVED HIS LIFE.

Literally speaking, the life of Hugh Criggan of Inniscrenery, charged yesterday at Belfast assizes with the murder of a farmer named John Gardiner, hung upon a thread, says the London Leader. The police based their case upon a human hair, a thread and a whisky bottle.

The two men had attended a sports' meeting at Lisnaskea and were supposed to have started together for home. Gardiner was never again seen alive, but there was evidence of a struggle having taken place at Ballynadarragh bridge, over which they would have passed.

At this spot Gardiner's broken umbrella was picked up the following day, and his dead body, with a number of wounds, was recovered from the river, 1,122 yards below the bridge.

The police investigations succeeded in discovering a hair on the parapet of the bridge, which, from its appearance, was stated to have been from the mustache of the victim.

They also found a thread near the hair, and this, it was alleged by the crown, was from the tab of the coat which the prisoner was wearing.

An important link in the chain of circumstantial evidence was a black whisky bottle.

This, it was stated, was sold to Gardiner at Lisnaskea during the day preceding the night on which he met his death, and it was not seen again until produced and opened by the accused at a time subsequent to that at which the murder was stated to have taken place.

The medical evidence showed that Gardiner was not dead when he was thrown into the river.

Only one of the injuries on his body was proved to be a wound made before death, which might have been inflicted by a blow from a full bottle, but could not have been caused by an empty one.

Prof. Barklie, analyist, stated that on the trousers, shirt front and the tie of the prisoner he discovered blood stains, which, however, he could not determine to be human.

For the defense, evidence was produced to prove that rowdy scenes had occurred at Ballynadarragh bridge at a time after the appearance of Criggan at the house of a friend, where he brought out the whisky bottle.

About this time cries of distress were heard by those there, coming from the direction of the bridge. So far as the thread was concerned it was shown that it was from a coat similar to those worn in this part of the country by numerous people.

In reference to the hair found—four days after the murder—a number of witnesses declared that the inhabitants, instead of going to a barber shop, obliged each other by cutting one another's hair at the bridge.

Only the day before the tragedy the deceased cut the hair of a neighbor at this spot.

After three-quarters of an hour's deliberations the jury found the prisoner not guilty and he was discharged.

Herald want advertising has just enough of the "spice of chance" to make it interesting—for the right person does, sometimes, fail to see the first insertion of the ad.

THE BONES OF INDIANS

Shot Down in Bloody Battle in 1872 Are Discovered.

Two Hundred Skeletons Found in a Cave in Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 16.—Grim and ghastly was the sight that met the eyes of Jeff Adams, Ivy Grabtree and two sons of the former when they entered a cave on Fish creek last Sunday afternoon and there discovered the whitened skeletons of 200 Indian men, women and children.

One of Arizona's bloodiest Indian fights is recalled by this important discovery—bloody for the Indians, all of whom were caught like rats in a trap and remorselessly shot to death by Capt. John Burns and his command of soldiers in 1872.

Adams was in Phoenix yesterday, bringing the first news of the finding of these skeletons, the location of which has been lost for many years. But few men are living today who could find the sepulchre, which contains all that is mortal of the massacred red men.

Adams says that the cave containing the skeletons is located about a mile from the bank of the Salt river, two miles above the mouth of Fish creek, east of McDowell. It is one of the roughest sections of Arizona.

The cave is about 100 feet long and 35 feet wide. It is formed by an overhanging cliff, and is an excellent place for an Indian rendezvous. The skeletons found by Adams are lying on the floor of the cave in all sorts of shapes, in heaps and singly. They are male and female from the age of 5 up.

All the party was able to find outside of the bleached bones was small pieces of clothing and a few saddle blankets. Outside of this there was nothing of interest, except several bundles of basket timber, such as were used in making these baskets.

To get to the cave it was necessary to go on foot for over a mile. In places the country is so rough that is is necessary to crawl on the hands and knees. An old trail leads from the mouth of Fish Creek to the cave.

No more terrible massacre of Indians has ever taken place in Arizona, than that brought to memory by the skeletons being found in the cave seen by Adams and Grabtree. It is one of the most interesting pages in the history of Arizona.

In 1872, Capt. John Burns in command of a Fifth cavalry troop, was ordered by Gen. Crook to search out and run down a band of hostile Apache Indians who had been marauding in the northern part of the Salt River valley.

Burns' command chased the redskins in the Fish Creek section and there lost track of all but a scattering Apache, until they captured an Indian boy about 11 years old, who led them to the cave. That boy is now Mike Burns of Mayer, Yavapai county, where he is employed by Joe Mayer.

When Burns reached the cave with his soldiers he found it in a small canyon. The only entrance was along a narrow ledge. To march the soldiers along this single file would have exposed them to the murderous Apaches.

Burns then stationed his men along the opposite side of the canyon, ordering them to lie down and fire against a standing rock in front of the cave. When the bullets struck this they glanced upwards and against the top of the cave, and then downward, striking the huddled and helpless Indians.

When Burns gave the command to cease firing two Maricopa scouts crept to the entrance of the cave and motioned for the soldiers to come. The sight that met their eyes was one they never forgot. On the floor lay the dead and dying Indians, many of them shot through and through several times.

With a rush the Maricopa Indians entered the cave, scalping the dead and dying and looting the bodies of all that was of any value. Out of the 200 in the cave only one was left unhurt. It was a small Indian babe, almost suffocated under his dead mother's breast.

This child was adopted by a Maricopa squaw and later taken in charge by an Eastern man of wealth. He is today Dr. Carlos Montezuma, and has been in Phoenix several times in past years.

The Indians were slaughtered without mercy because of orders issued by Gen. Crook to exterminate the whole band. Many were the bloody deeds they had committed before retribution in a terrible form overtook them.

Capt. Burns adopted the boy who had guided him to the cave. He was sent to Carlisle by Gen. Wesley Merritt and as stated, is now employed by Joe Mayer in Yavapai county.

BONI OWES A FORTUNE

Count de Castellane Indebted to Shylocks in Vast Sums.

Paris, Feb. 16.—The financial negotiations in the Castellane case do not relate to Count Boni's allowance after separation from his wife, formerly Anna Gould, of New York, as he has simplified this branch by stating that he does not expect a large amount. The count's announcement was made to one of the lawyers of the countess. It was most emphatic and is substantially in the following terms:

"I declare to you, and I swear to the exactness of my declaration, that I not only do not demand, but that I will not accept any sum beyond that small amount which constituted my income before marriage."

The count thus disposes of the statement to the effect that he contemptuously refused $40,000 a year on the ground that it was not sufficient for his pocket money.

The attitude of the count leaves the lawyers of the countess to consider only his outstanding indebtness, which reaches an enormous sum. The Castellane marriage contract gives the countess her separate income not subject to claims for the debts of her husband. This contract ensures the protection of the countess' fortune against being absorbed in the present controversy, and also prevents the count's creditors from taking legal action against the countess. At the same time she does not appear disposed to exact the strict letter of the contract and the financial negotiations are for the purpose of making some arrangement for a compromise with the count's creditors. The amount involved has been swollen to enormous proportions by excessive charges for money advances. One gentleman intimately familiar with every detail of the Castellane case said that when people sought advances of money lenders and these advances reached three years ahead on an anticipated income, the borrower usually got one tenth while nine tenths went to the usurers. This applies to the financial situation in the Castellane case, comparatively small advances now reaching a gigantic aggregate through excessive charges. The extent to which the countess will voluntarily liquidate these claims is the chief question under consideration and the determination of this will probably determine all the other proceedings.

Although the lawyers expect the case to proceed to an early decree they recognize that a slight element of indecision remains on the part of the countess, due to her continued feeling towards her husband and her repugnance to involve her family in a scandal.

The foregoing facts are from those directly in charge of the countess' interests, thus showing their desire to testify to the count's correct attitude during the case. The court has made a second ineffectual attempt to bring about a reconciliation. The next step will be the service of a writ upon the defendant, but the clerk of the court has not yet received orders to serve the document.

There's DOINGS Here for MEN — $1.50 SHIRTS 69c.

Won't have these shirts lying here when new ones come—even if they are pretty fine stuff to tie a "clearing" ticket on—so away they go.

They're negligee, with cuffs attached or detached—madras, percale, cheviots and the like, in mostly very light effects, (the few dark ones are exceptional qualities); plain and pleated bosoms.

Little dots, tiny stripes, light and medium checks, small figures—shirts for semi-dressy wear and shirts for the work hours.

Best of all, they're regular $1.00 to $1.50 values—none less than $1.00 — but Saturday they're all one price, and that almost too little —69c each.

79c—Men's ribbed, unshrinkable underwear; natural color, French neck, satin faced, pearl buttons; adjustable belted drawers with reinforced crotch, and "such an easy garment on you," as one man said. Regular $1.00 values —all sizes.

25c—Men's 50c and 75c French fold four-in-hands and English squares — silk ties. Doesn't sound right, we know—but they're here and that's the price—but don't delay.

19c—Men's merino cashmere hose—splendid weight, gray heel and toe; all sizes; lots of us have paid 25c for the same values.

79c—instead of $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 for cloth and fur-lined caps, inside or outside bands; newest shapes, plain colors and fancy mixtures.

39c for the 50c and 75c caps—keep your head warm at these prices.

WOMEN Find COMFORT Wearing "Queen Quality"

the most worn shoe in the world's shoe market today. It couldn't be such if it were otherwise than an ideal shoe.

See our window for an idea of the style perfection—then step into the shoe department for your idea of "fit perfection."

"Q. Q." shoes sell at $3 and $3.50 a pair.

(Second Floor—Take Elevator.)

Your ATTENTION, Please, to These Second Floor Specials.

Another instance of just "undermining" the prices on two or three lines of splendid, good, serviceable wear for women.

The reason is that they're winter goods, and we won't run any chance of carrying them over. These prices and your own judgment of big values ought to work together for your own good on these offerings.

69c—Fleece-lined and percale wrappers—made of pretty blue, black, gray and red figured patterns, prettily made with full flounce, ruffled or plain shoulders, extra full skirts—and such as we've formerly sold for $1.25.

55c—Outing flannel night gowns — that good, warm-looking kind of blue and pink striped outings, collars and cuffs braid trimmed—full length and extra width—regular 89c gowns.

$1.19—Eiderdown dressing sacques — the right thing for comfortable and "dressy" housewear—in pinks, blues, reds, lavendars and grays—in a dozen different ideas of satin and braid pipings and trimmings. Some were $2.25 —choice of the lot, $1.19.

36-inch SILKS. 36-inch SILKS. 36-inch SILKS.

Another Fortunate Purchase by Which Our Customers Benefit.

One of Chicago's largest jobbers tries to convince our Mr. Panton that Chicago, and not New York, is the place to buy silks. As a "bait" he offers him a splendid big assortment of

About 4000 Yds. 36-inch Black Taffeta and Peau de Soie Silks and Heavy Lining Satins

At a figure way below the actual value of the goods. Some are full pieces and others run from 5 to 20 yards in length—but not a yard in the entire purchase worth less than $1.39—some worth $1.95—and every yard is warranted for wear.

It did not take Mr. Panton long to see that it was an exceptional offer, nor to understand why it was given to him, just when he was on his way to New York with the corps of buyers; nor did it take long for him to snap up the offer and leave instructions for the goods to be "sent through" in a hurry. They arrived Friday morning, and will be ORGANDIES We've Been Waiting for Are Now Here.

Been delayed, somewhat, but—as is often the case with other things than organdies—they seem the more beautiful when they do come.

Don't know that we've ever seen a prettier lot of this most accepted material for party gowns, evening dresses, summer wear, etc., and we want you to come in and look at them—even if you don't want to buy any—they're here and you ought to know how pretty they are.

Silk Organdies—the beautiful, soft, clingy sort; "summery" as a balmy June day—make you wonder at the beautiful gowns possible within their folds.

Three separate weaves there are — each with its own little peculiar characteristic, and a price for each—but how little that price!

29c—Here you find that pretty little shadowed stripe effect in the ground—giving it an additional quality for rich appearance. Plenty of different designs, too.

50c—Silk and linen, so richly blended that it has an almost unbelievable richness; tiny silk dots in the ground-weave add a charm; a few on soft-colored grounds; exquisite designs in orchids, violets, roses, apple blossoms and so many others.

12½c—Caledon Batistes—dots, tiny figures, stripes, flowered organdy patterns—see them —for dresses, waists, shirt waist dresses, afternoon gowns, etc.

(Wash Goods—West Aisle.)

FINE HATS Cheap for Two Hours on SATURDAY.

PLOT TO WRECK TRAIN.

Two Men Captured Near Willmar Held on Serious Charges.

Wilmar, Minn., Feb. 16.—C. J. Hanson and Albert Kruger have been arrested here on charges of attempting to wreck No. 4, the eastbound Great Northern flyer, last Friday evening at a point about one and a half miles west of Willmar. A broken steel rail was placed across the track and the train was going at the rate of sixty-five miles an hour when it reached the obstruction. The rail passed under the pilot and under the forward truck, and was carried in this way for about 1,800 feet, when the end of the rail struck a whistling post and cleared itself from the engine.

The engine was considerably damaged, heavy iron bars being twisted and chains broken, and it was a miracle it was not thrown from the track.

Detective Edward Walsh of the railroad force has been at work on the case, and through his efforts the arrests were made.

Hanson is said to have confessed his guilt and to have given as an excuse that he was drunk. Kruger will not talk. A hearing will be had next Tuesday.

HOLD UP AT CLEAR LAKE.

Robbers Find Easy Victim in Farmer Who Gives Them a Ride.

Clear Lake, Minn., Feb. 16.—While driving home from town, Henry Gohman, living two and one-half miles east of here, allowed to men to enter his sleigh for a "lift." After they had gone a short distance one of the men drew a revolver and called upon Gohman to "hold up your hands." Gohman dropped the reins and complied, whereupon the second of the strangers searched him and took $4 in silver and a check for $15. After some consideration the pair came to the conclusion that the check might prove dangerous and it was returned to Gohman. In parting from their victim, the holdup men thanked him, saying that "they had money for a drink or two anyway." There is no clue to the robbers' identity.

PREACHER STARTS ROW

By Asserting That Double Moral Standard Should Prevail.

Pastor of a Neighboring Church Takes Issue With Him.

Des Moines, Feb. 16.—By declaring himself bitterly opposed to a single standard of morality for both men and women and by asserting that the double standard should prevail, that men should be judged more leniently than women and have more opportunities to climb back into decency; Rev. William Boynton Gage, pastor of the Highland Park Presbyterian church of this city, has started a seething discussion in which the leading clergymen and moralists of Des Moines are now engaged. So far, Rev. Mr. Gage is in the numerical majority.

"I am not in favor of the enforcement of a single standard for the judgment of both men and women," thundered the Presbyterian clergyman from his pulpit a recent Sunday evening, preaching on "The Young Man's Conception of the Ideal Young Woman." Continuing, he explained:

"As a rule, a girl or woman does not hear as much profanity as a boy or man, and certainly not so much obscenity, and her temptation to evil is less than his. Her temptations and tendencies in that direction are not so strong. It is easier for her to become a Christian and, usually, she joins a church or is a more or less frequent worshipper with some congregation.

"In view of these facts, the single standard of morality and moral judgment is wrong. It is not fair. It is not just. The double standard meets the demands of both justice and reason. When our boys have the same environment as our girls and are permitted to share with them in the same pure atmosphere in the days when character is formulated, then, and never till then, will I stand for this measure."

Already the Rev. James A. Beebe, pastor of the neighboring Highland Park Methodist church, has taken issue with his Presbyterian brother and, in a public address, stated:

"That this double standard should be defamed by any one who believes in the equality of the sexes is most unfortunate. In the first place, this doctrine affords too much comfort to men of impure lives. Again, to ask for men a larger liberty in these things than we allow women is to put womanhood in greater peril.

"Then, too, the glory of a man is in his strength. His claim to superiority over the other sex is based upon this fact. And he proves his claim by withholding many privileges, political and civil, from women, which are their just dues.

"Lastly, that a man meets more sin than a woman is no reason for not judging him by the same standard, for, if it is, it is not so bad for business women to be lax as for women of the home, because these meet much greater temptations than their more secluded sisters, and see more of sin than they. Yet, who thinks of asking that woman in business life be judged by a lower standard than is used in judging women in the home? Not even men themselves. Isn't it contemptible, then, to ask this liberty for men?"

TAWNEY IS FAVORED.

Only Minnesota Member of Congress Invited to Wedding.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Representative James A. Tawney, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, is the only member of either house from Minnesota who is invited to the Longworth-Roosevelt wedding, and he is furnishing up his wardrobe today and getting special pointers as to what he ought to wear.

Three members are invited from Wisconsin, Senator Spooner, because he is the president's personal friend and defender on the floor of the senate, and Representatives Otjen and Cooper, because they were members of the Taft Philippine party. Mr. and Mrs. Spooner will give the bride a handsome lace fan decorated with emeralds and turquoises, made by Tiffany.

Senator Alger and Representatives Loud and Denby are the only members of the Michigan delegation invited. Alger comes in the list, which include all senators who were formerly cabinet members. Loud was a member of the Philippine party, and Denby is a member of the foreign affairs committee. Senator Burrows of Michigan is said to be very indignant because he was overlooked.

SONS OF HERMAN'S ANNUAL FROLIC

Have Big Mask Ball at Armory—Many Prizes Awarded.

North Pole lodge, Sons of Herman, held its annual entertainment last night and it was such that it eclipsed even the memory of all previous attempts in the same line. It was in the shape of a masquerade ball, given at the Armory and that big auditorium glittered with tinsel and flashed with color. Some really excellent get-ups in the way of fancy costumes were to be seen on the floor and the judges had considerable difficulty in making up their minds when the time came for giving the prizes.

Flaaten's orchestra furnished the music for a program of twenty-four dances and excellent music it was, too. The grand march came at 11 o'clock and the maskers passed before the judges acting their various parts in the hope of capturing the prizes. After the unmasking there were some surprises and much merriment. Each was anxious to know who somebody else was and in almost every instance much surprise was experienced. The judges, who were Ben Grimm, Joseph Schober, George Farmer, William F. Henry, Capt. Resche, Fred Kreager and Bert Farrell, with considerable difficulty selected twelve people and a group for prizes, and even at that felt that there were others on the floor who had at least almost as much right to the decision as those who got them; the choice was very close. Those that did get the prizes were as follows:

Best women's mask, Mrs. Marcotte, as Irish woman; best man's mask, P. Paulson, as Happy Hooligan; second best women's mask, Mrs. McLean, as harvest girl; second best men's mask, Charles Behning, as German; best women's character mask, Mrs. Tibbett as Topsy; best men's character mask, B. Furnie, as the dandy coon; second best women's character mask, Mrs. Zillmer, as Turkish woman; second best men's character mask, William Metter, as Turk; poorest women's mask, Mabel Hagberg, as a double-faced woman; poorest men's mask, Peter Miller, as a lumberjack; best group, the Rube band; second best group, Mr. and Mrs. Todd, as Italian organ grinders.

WILL COME TO DULUTH

State Grocers' Association Selects Duluth for 1907 Meeting.

Simon Clark and Local Delegation Do Efficient Work.

Duluth will have the 1907 convention of Minnesota Retail Grocers' association.

Word that the state grocers' organization would bring its next annual meeting to this city was received in the city last evening from Simon Clark of Duluth, former president of the association, and who with a large delegation of the local grocers is attending the convention in session at Rochester, Minn.

The action of the convention in determining on Duluth as its next meeting place was taken yesterday afternoon.

The convention will bring to this city several hundred grocers from all parts of the state. The sessions usually cover a period of several days so that the city may figure on having a large crowd of visitors here for nearly a week.

Mr. Clark went down to the convention this year with the determination to secure the next meeting for Duluth. No stone was left unturned to bring this about and he was given the united and able support of the delegation from the Duluth Retail Grocers' association. They talked Duluth to the outside grocers from the time the convention began its sessions and by the time the vote was taken this city was clearly the popular choice.

The members of the local association are well pleased over the convention's choice and will begin early preparations for the entertainment of the visitors on an elaborate scale.

The convention at Rochester finished its work yesterday afternoon and the Duluth delegation is expected home tomorrow morning.

CROOKEDNESS IS ALLEGED

Receiver Appointed for the Bank of America in Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—The Bank of America, incorporated last December with a capital stock of $250,000, was placed in the hands of a receiver last night by Judge Chytraus of the superior court, on complaint of John E. Kavanagh, one of the stockholders. The bill asking for the receivership holds Former Judge Abner Smith, president, and three other officials of the bank, responsible for the insolvency of the institution.

In the few weeks since the opening of the bank, President Smith is charged with having so manipulated securities, mortgages and notes and the stock of the bank, that he has obtained amounts aggregating $146,000. The other three officials, who, in connection with President Smith are held responsible for the alleged insolvency of the bank, are: G. F. Sorrow, vice-president; Jerome V. Pierce, cashier, and F. E. Creelman, a stockholder and director. It is charged against all four officials that they had absolute control of the bank and its funds; that they have dominated the directorate of the bank; have done as they pleased with the funds of the bank; have voted themselves such salaries as they desired, and have loaned the money of the incorporation as they saw fit.

The operations of President Smith and the other officials mentioned in the bill, are said to have begun before the bank opened for business. Judge Smith is said then to have borrowed money and placed it in the treasury to deceive the state auditor into believing that the stock had been paid up. President Smith was one of the prime movers in the formation of the bank, having subscribed for $70,000 of the stock.

The apparent insolvency of the bank is said to have come to the notice of Kavanagh and other stockholders two days ago. When investigation seemed to uphold their surmises, it was agreed to appeal to the courts. In order to prevent, if possible, a panic and a run on the bank, it was decided to file the bill for the appointment of a receiver late last night.

Judge Chytraus and the clerk of the superior court had agreed to be in their offices. Shortly before 10 o'clock attorneys representing Mr. Kavanagh appeared with the petition for a receiver. Notice had been served previously on President Smith, but he did not appear either in person or by attorney. After reading the bill, the court entered an order appointing Daniel J. Healy, a stockholder, receiver. Bonds of $150,000 were furnished, and Mr. Healey took charge of the bank.

The other subscribers to the capital stock of the bank besides Judge Smith, were Ferdinand W. Peck, G. F. Sorrow, F. E. Creelman, W. J. Murphy, C. M. Savage, Alexander Harris, Frank Billings, Daniel J. Healy Jerome V. Pierce, L. G. Meller, L. A. Becker and H. M. Howe, who were appointed directors of the bank.

Among the specific charges made against President Smith are:

That President Smith borrowed $70,000 from the bank, giving in return notes signed by his wife and brother-in-law, which are declared to be of little value.

That within a few weeks after the bank opened for business, Smith secured from the bank $62,000 for himself, giving mortgages on real estate which, it is alleged, are inadequate.

It is also alleged that Smith entered into a contract with Creelman by which the latter was to subscribe to 250 shares of the stock and was to be permitted to withdraw $510,000 from the bank. This, it is stated in the bill was done, and Creelman has withdrawn nearly $500,000, giving in exchange drafts on other corporations in which he was interested. Many of these drafts, it is asserted, were sent back unpaid, and now Creelman owes the bank $80,000.

President Smith was a member of the Cook county bench for many years. He retired from the courts in 1904.

Mr. Creelman is a lumber merchant.

The bank had about $300,000 in deposits, of which $25,000 was in savings accounts. The representatives of the bank declare that there is 40 per cent of the cash on hand and a large amount of paper, the value of which is unknown. On this paper depends the chance of the bank's liquidating in full.

Attorney Clarence Darrow, who is a stockholder, paid up to the extent of $11,000 personally has come to the rescue of the savings depositors.

"All savings depositors will be paid in full," said Attorney Darrow. "I will buy their books as they are presented at the bank in the morning."

HELL PREFERABLE TO UNITED STATES

Says Bishop Turner in an Address to Negro Convention.

Macon, Ga., Feb. 16.—In an address before the 500 delegates attending the convention of negroes yesterday to discuss racial problems, Bishop H. M. Turner, declared the American flag to be a dirty and contemptible rag. He further said that hell is an improvement on the United States as far as the negro is concerned.

In concluding he said:

"If a little ignorant and stupid white man, who was never heard of and never would be heard of until ten thousand years after the resurrection trumpet, wishes a little notoriety, he begins to belie and slander the negro and bounds into popularity. And I challenge anyone and all of them to meet me in public discussion and I will show them that the negro is a far better man than any of them."

FIREMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Meeting of the Executive Committee Held at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—A meeting of the executive committee of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association was held in the village hall, here, Thursday evening. There were present President C. E. Leeman and Secretary Rutledge of Cass Lake; Treasurer Winship of Park Rapids, and the following delegates and representatives from other members of the department: Cass Lake, Dr. C. G. Gilbert and H. J. Broeker; Eveleth, G. W. Mulligan and M. Trevarrow; Park Rapids, P. D. Winship and K. Wright; Bemidji, Earl Gell; Deer River, P. Towhy and A. G. Hashey; Sparta, Peter Cosgrove; Virginia, A. E. Rickford; Grand Rapids, H. D. Powers, Mike McAlpin. The delegates from Ely failed to reach Grand Rapids, although that department had duly elected representatives. All of the departments, except Bemidji and Deer River, were members of the association last year, and participated in the tournament at Eveleth. Deer River enters the organization for the first time, but the Bemidji department has already won the championship of the association on two occasions. It was agreed that hereafter, at the tournaments of the association, any department having a running team will be entitled to two votes in the meetings of the executive association, but when not represented by a running team, it shall be entitled to but one vote.

The time for holding the next tournament was taken up and the dates set were June 20 to 23 inclusive, at Cass Lake. The treasurer was authorized to purchase such books as he deemed necessary. The president and secretary of the State Firemen's association were elected honorary members of the tournament association. The secretary was instructed to draw appropriate resolutions of condolence relative to the recent death of Mrs. C. E. Leeman, wife of the president of the association.

The Grand Rapids fire department provided refreshments for the visiting firemen, and all of the participants in the meeting voted it the most successful affair of the kind in the history of the association.

SPORTS

MEETING AT THE FORKS

Gathering on Sunday Will Settle Fate of Northern League.

Rumors That Wisconsin Will be Included, Not Credited.

Sunday is the date set for the meeting of the Northern league magnates at Grand Forks, and the fate of the league will be settled at that time.

All kinds of rumors are current regarding the future of the league, but nothing is definitely known regarding the course that will be adopted.

One rumor is to the effect that the Northern league will join hands with the Wisconsin state league. Such talk can hardly be credited, however. The towns in the Wisconsiun league are farther away than the Copper country towns, being located down in the vicinity of Milwaukee. The league last year included La Crosse, Oshkosh, Beloit, Green Bay, Neenah and Eau Claire. La Crosse is about the only good ball town of the bunch, and it is about 300 miles beyond what should be the limits of the Northern league circuit.

Another story is to the effect that Duluth will drop out of the Northern league, and join hands with the Copper country towns to form a six-club league there, with Calumet, Lake Linden, Houghton, Hancock and Iron Mountain.

Another rumor says that Superior and Crookston will be taken back into the fold; but all of these are simply guesses, and nothing definite will be known until after the circuit committee composed of J. M. Lambz, L. J. Van Praagh and E. H. Kent report on the progress made since the last meeting.

All negotiations with the Copper country towns are not off yet. They are still hanging by a thread, and there is just a possibility that the old plan will be revived, if some better inducements can be offered the Michigan cities in regard to allowance for transportation expenses.

None of the resident members of the Duluth club will attend the meeting, but this city will be represented by L. J. Van Praagh, who is a member of both the circuit committee and the board of control of the league.

The meeting should settle the future of the Northern league, and the outcome will be watched with much interest by the fans.

NORWEGIAN RIDERS

Will Take Part In the National Ski Tournament at Ishpeming.

Three ski runners direct from Norway will take part in the national tournament to be held at Ishpeming next week. They are Carl Bergstadt of Christiana, Ole Staranger and Hugo Hammerstadt. They arrived in Ishpeming last week and have been quietly practising on the hills in the vicinity of that city.

A meeting of the Duluth club will be held at 8 o'clock this evening in the St. Louis hotel, to complete the plans for a big representation at the tournament, and the boosting of Duluth for the 1907 meet.

THE SAFEST PLACE.

Tatler: A city gentleman was recently invited down to the country for "a day with the birds." Whatever his powers in finance, his shooting was not remarkable for its accuracy, to the great disgust of the man in attendance, whose tip was generally regulated by the size of the bag. "Dear me!" at last exclaimed the sportsman, "but the birds seem exceptionally strong on the wing this year."

"Not all of 'em, sir," came the remark. "You've shot at the same bird about a dozen times. 'E's a-follerin' you about, sir."

"Following me about? Nonsense! Why should a bird do that?"

"Well, sir," came the reply, "I dunno. I'm sure, unless 'e's 'angin' 'round you for safety."

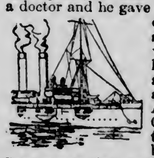

LIMB RAW AS PIECE OF BEEF

Suffered For Three Years With Itching Humor—Doctor Did No Good—Cruiser Newark, U. S. N. Man Cured in Three Weeks.

SPEEDY CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I suffered with humor for about three years, off and on. I finally saw a doctor and he gave me remedies that did me no good, so I tried Cuticura when my limb below the knee to the ankle was as raw as a piece of beef. All I used was the Cuticura Soap and the Ointment. I bathed with the Soap every day and used about six or seven boxes of Ointment. I was thoroughly cured of the humor in three weeks and haven't been affected with it since. I use no other Soap than Cuticura now. I remain, yours respectfully, H. J. Myers, U. S. N., U. S. S. Newark, New York, July 8, 1905.

"P. S. Publish if you wish."

MIDLAND IS SCORCHED

Bad Blaze Destroys Interior of Second Street Boarding House.

Dangerous Street Car Collision Occurs During Progress of Fire.

The old Midland hotel on Second street between Second and Third avenues west was badly gutted by fire early this morning.

The flames were first noticed about 5 o'clock coming from the kitchen, which is separated from the front part of the building. The smoke aroused the boarders, who hastily dressed, but the department quickly got the flames under control and left, thinking the fire was extinguished.

Breakfast was then served in the dining room, which had not been damaged by the first fire, and the boarders who had not gone to their work were seated in the parlor in the front of the house. About 7 o'clock some passerby opened the front door and shouted that the building was in flames. The boarders started from the parlor and as they opened the front door they were enveloped in the flames which seemed to rush through the hall. By the time they reached the street, fire was seen at almost every window in the building.

The department was hurriedly summoned back to the scene, and after about half an hour's work succeeded in again getting the blaze under control.

The fire is believed to have been smoldering beneath the back stairway, and gradually working its way through the walls, from the time the firemen left after the first call, until it finally burst forth and the entire building seemed to be enveloped in a moment.

The walls and exterior of the building are practically undamaged, but it is completely gutted. The woodwork is charred, and much of the plaster knocked from the walls.

About eighty boarders were stopping at the hotel when the fire broke out, and about half of these lost all of their belongings with the exception of what they were wearing. All of the men who were rooming in the rear part of the house lost everything they possessed, as they had no time to save anything. The men who had rooms in the front part of the house were more fortunate. Their clothing was partly damaged by the smoke and water, but the flames did not reach it, and in many cases the damage was very small.

The furniture in the house is practically a complete loss. The proprietor of the hotel was William Hargrave, who rented the building from R. B. Knox & Company representing George R. Flint of New York City, who is the owner.

Hargrave carried insurance on his furniture to the amount of $2,000 in the Northern Insurance company of New York, which is represented by R. B. Knox & Company. Mr. Flint, the owner of the building, carried all of his insurance in the East, and the names of the companies or the amount are not known here. The loss to the building, which apparently amounts to about $3,000, will doubtless be fully covered.

• • •

During the progress of the fire there was a street car accident which might easily have resulted very seriously. A small West Third street car was stopped on Second street opposite the fire, by the hose stretched across the street. It was enveloped in a dense cloud of smoke issuing from the building, and could not be seen more than a few feet away. Shortly after it stopped, the large Hunter's Park car came down the hill, west bound. The motorman thought that the West Third street car had gone by, and did not see it until within a few feet from it, when it was too late to stop. The car crashed into the rear end of the smaller one, and the rear vestibule of the latter was crushed like an egg shell. Fortunately the passengers on both cars escaped uninjured, although they were badly shaken up and frightened by the suddenness of the accident.

BETTER THAN PIE.

Not Only the New Food But the Good Wife, as Well.

When they brought the new food, Grape-Nuts, into the house the husband sampled it first, and said, "It's better than pie!" When it brought back the glow of health to the wife's cheeks, his admiration for it and her was increased, so she says, and the rest of her story follows:

"From childhood I was troubled with constant an often acute indigestion, and when my baby was born it turned out that he had inherited the awful ailment.

"A friend told me of Grape-Nuts, and I invested in a box and began to eat according to directions. It was after only a few days that I found my long abused stomach was growing stronger, and that the attacks of indigestion were growing less frequent, and in an incredibly short time they ceased altogether. With my perfect digestion restored came strong nerves, clear, active brain, the glow of health to my cheeks, and I know I was a better wife and mother and more agreeable to live with under the new conditions.

"When the boy came to be 10 months old he developed such an appetite (his dyspepsia disappeared with mine) that his mother's milk was not sufficient for him. He rejected all baby foods, however, till I tried Grape-Nuts food, at Husband's suggestion. The youngster took to it at once, and has eaten it daily ever since, thriving wonderfully on it. He now demands it at every meal, and was much put out when he dined at a hotel, a few days ago, because the waitress could not fill his order for Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Girlhood, Womanhood, Motherhood.

The first lesson that the young girl has of womanhood is usually a painful one. She learns to know what headache means, and backache, and sometimes is sadly borne down by this new experience of life.

All the pain and misery which young girls commonly experience at such a time may, in almost every instance, be entirely prevented or cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity. It tones up the general health, and cures headache, backache, nervousness, chorea, or St. Vitus's dance, and other consequences of womanly weakness or disease.

MOTHER OF THE FAMILY.

The anxious mother of the family oftentimes carries the whole burden of responsibility so far as the home medication of common ailments of the girls or boys are concerned. The cost of the doctor's visits are very often much too great. At such times the mother is invited to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for medical advice, which is given free. Correspondence is held sacredly confidential.

IT STANDS ALONE.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women the makers of which are not afraid to print just what it is made of on every bottle wrapper. It is the only medicine for women every ingredient of which has the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers of this country, recommending it for the cure of the very same diseases for which this "Prescription" is advised.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

A mother's love is so divine that the roughest man cannot help but appreciate it as the crown of womanhood. However, motherhood is often looked forward to with feelings of great dread by most women. At such times a woman is nervous, dyspeptic, irritable, and she is in need of a uterine tonic and nervine, a strength builder to fit her for the ordeal. No matter how healthy or strong a woman may be she cannot but be benefited by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to prepare for the event. It makes childbirth easy and often almost painless.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION is a powerful, invigorating tonic. It imparts strength to the whole system and to the womb and its appendages in particular. For overworked "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appertizing cordial and restorative tonic.

A STRENGTHENING NERVINE.

"Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea, or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

A SCIENTIFIC MEDICINE.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organism. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system. For morning sickness or nausea, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia and kindred symptoms, its use will prove very beneficial.

CURES OBSTINATE CASES.

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhea, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions and irregularities, prolapsus or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and tenderness of the ovaries, accompanied with "internal heat."

HOW TO LOOK BEAUTIFUL.

Young women or matrons should not allow themselves to look sallow and wrinkled because of those pains and weaknesses which become chronic and are the result of colds, tight lacing, and the imprudent care of the womanly system. Many a woman would look beautiful, have healthy color and bright eyes if it were not for those drains on her strength and those weaknesses which come all too frequently and make her life miserable. There is a ready-to-use Prescription, used a great many years by Dr. R. V. Pierce in his large practice as a Specialist in women's diseases, which is not like the many "patent medicines" on the market, as it contains neither alcohol nor any narcotic, or other harmful drug. It is purely vegetable. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and is sold by druggists.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS

cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation of the bowels, loss of appetite, coated tongue, sour stomach, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

Persons subjected to any of these troubles should never be without a vial of the "Pleasant Pellets" at hand. In proof of their superior excellence it can truthfully be said that they are always adopted as a household remedy after the first trial.

One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are cathartic. They regulate, invigorate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, take one each day. To relieve the distress arising from overeating, nothing equals one of these little "Pellets." They're tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

How to live in health and happiness, is the general theme of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. This great work on medicine and hygiene, containing over 1000 pages and more than 700 illustrations, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers.

EXCITING FINISH TO CAMPAIGN

Y. M. C. A. Boys Add Seventy-Four New Members to List.

The campaign for new members, which has been waged by the members of the boys' department Y. M. C. A., closed last evening in a whirl of excitement.

The boys were divided into two parties, the Reds and the Blues, under the leadership of Edward Borgen and Harwood Sturtevant, and they were striving to see which side could add the greatest number of new members to the list. During the last week the Reds have been in the lead, but last night the Blues came in at the last moment with a bunch of twenty-two cards, which they had been holding back and swamped their opponents.

In all seventy-four new members were added to the list, and the boys reached their desired mark of 500, the total membership of the department now being 504.

All of the new members and every boy who was instrumental in bringing in one new member will be invited to a banquet, which will be given in the near future.

LETS CONTRACT FOR GASHOLDER

Water Board Accepts Cincinnati Firm's Bid of $47,350.

The bid of Stacy & Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, for furnishing a new gas holder to replace the old holder on Garfield avenue, was accepted by the board of water and light commissioners at a meeting held yesterday afternoon. The contract price is $47,350 for a three-lift holder with a capacity of 500,000 cubic feet of gas. The contract will be awarded as soon as the money is available from the sale of bonds authorized at the recent city election.

In awarding the contract to the Cincinnati firm the water board declared it to be the policy not to construct any more gas holders where the pressure is dependent on weights. Otto E. Ostroff, a mechanical expert from Chicago, who passed on the plans and specifications for the new holder, advised the board that the weight plan was impractical and favored the purchase of a holder in which the additional weight was evenly distributed by the use of thicker metal in the construction.

Two of the bids submitted were for gas holders on the weight system plan. It is believed that the strain produced on the old gas holder by the weights used to increase the pressure, was the direct cause of the explosion last fall.

Manager Case has been directed by the board to notify the Lakeside residents petitioning for gas, also those in the hill district who want both water and gas, to get the guarantees before the department as early as possible that it may have information on which to base an estimate of the cost of the proposed extensions this year.

COURT REFUSES NEW TRIALS

Orders That Verdicts in Two Damage Cases Must Stand.

Judge Ensign has made an order denying the motion of Patrick A. Smith for a judgment, notwithstanding the verdict, or for a new trial, in the action brought against him by Kenneth A. McDonald, of this city.

Mr. McDonald sued Mr. Smith for a commission claimed to have been agreed on in case the former procured a purchaser for the latter's timber. The purchaser was claimed to have been found, but Mr. Smith, it was alleged, refused to make the transfer. The jury awarded Mr. McDonald damages in the amount of $12,000, which would have been the full amount of his commission had the sale been made.

Judge Ensign has also denied the motion of John Tolonen for judgment, notwithstanding the verdict, or for a new trial, of the damage action brought against him by Axel Pakkala.

Tolonen, who is a saloonkeeper on the range, struck Pakkala over the head with a billiard cue after a dispute over the payment of a drink in Tolonen's place. Pakkala's skull was fractured and for some time his life hung by a thread. He claims that he has never fully recovered from the effects of the blow. Pakkala was awarded a verdict of several hundred dollars when the trial was had during the November term of district court.

CIVIL WAR'S LAST SHOT JUST FIRED

Shell Long Embedded in Alabama Tree, Exploded by Campfire.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 16.—Lewis Hoopengardner of Ossian, is back from a trip to Scottsville, Ala., where he was inspecting property interests, and he tells a story that will interest veterans of the Civil war. He says that while he was there some boys were out hunting one night on the mountain just below town known as the "camel back," and when they reached the top they found it very cold. They built a fire at the foot of an old dead pine tree and fanned it into a big blaze. When they became warm they left.

They had not walked far when they heard a terrific explosion, and turned to see sparks flying in every direction. Everybody in town also heard it, and began to ring up their telephones to learn what had happened.

It sounded, Mr. Hoopengardner said, as if twenty-five or thirty sticks of dynamite had been exploded at once. It was like an earthquake in its effect on windows and houses. The boys returned to the site of their bonfire and found the tree, except a part of the stump, was missing. In the stump was a piece of shell blackened with age and the stain of the explosive. The shell had been imbedded in the tree in some battle of the Civil war, and failing to explode had lain there all these years.

COURT'S SYMPATHY ONLY.

Mississippi Physician's Petition to Be Released Is Denied.

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 16.—Tendering sympathy to a wife and daughter deprived of his society and attention and condolences to a community which was deprived of the benefits of his medical advice, Justice Calhoun, in an opinion rendered in the supreme court, refused to admit to bail Dr. Winegarden of Jackson county. The petition in this tribunal had set forth that Dr. Winegarden was held in confinement under a charge of grand larceny, that bail had been refused, that he had a wife and daughter, the latter an invalid, whose case was understood by none but him, and for whom none could render assistance on account of the complications of the disease. It was further averred that Dr. Winegarden was a specialist in the treatment of certain diseases, that he manufactured his own remedies, and that with him in confinement his patients would be wrongfully deprived of both his personal watchfulness and care and the supply of remedies.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

MILK FOILS WILDCAT.

Little Girl's Strategy That Probably Saved Her Life.

Altoona, Pa., Feb. 16.—While Sadie Miller, a 12-year-old girl, was carrying a pail of milk over the mountains near Lakemont, she was attacked by a catamount. The child splashed milk on the snow and ran while the animal stopped to scent it, then repeated the trick when the beast came up to her again and again.

In this way she managed to keep the catamount at a distance until she arrived within sight of her home, half a mile distant.

Her father, with dogs, came to the rescue, and on finding herself safe the child fainted in his arms.

LICENSE ISSUED.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The marriage license of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Nicholas Longworth was issued by the clerk of the court yesterday at 1:15 o'clock. Mr. Longworth gave his age as 36 and that of Miss Roosevelt as 22.

TRANSPORT SAILS.

San Francisco, Feb. 16.—The United States transport Sherman sailed yesterday for Honolulu, Guam and the Philippines with 160 cabin passengers, a few troops and 4,000 tons of military supplies. Among the passengers were Major Generals Brooke and Weston, the latter going to Manila under sealed orders. In army circles, it is surmised that he may succeed Gen. Leonard Wood, in case the latter should be ordered to China.

NELSON THE BATTLING

Traveling Man Poses as Man Who Knocked Britt Out.

Good Joke on One of Greatest Jolliers on Road.

Battling Nelson of Chicago is registered at the Spalding. He was not denied admission there as was Philadelphia Jack O'Brien when he sought to secure quarters in the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

It just happens, however, that this is not the Battling Nelson who knocked out Jimmie Britt in the eighteenth round in California. The Battling Nelson who is now in Duluth is not a pugilist at all, but W. G. Nelson, traveling out of Chicago for the United Shirt and Collar company of Troy, New York.

Mr. Nelson is one of the greatest jolliers that ever lifted a suit case and is one of those mortals who can tell the biggest whoppers and carry out the greatest hoaxes without cracking a smile or giving any intimation of the mirth that is bubbling within him.

He was introduced to a Duluth man yesterday afternoon in a Superior street retail establishment, as the famous Chicago pugilist and he lost no time in making good in his fistic role. Not that he squared off to the Duluthian and threatened to "beat his face in," but he began a line of talk that would have easily convinced a near-sighted man that he really was the man who made Jimmy Britt an "also ran." At first, the Duluth man was loath to believe the yarn but it sounded so good that he was finally convinced.

He left the store full of the fistic dope of the sort that prize fighters reel off by the yard and the sporting pages of the newspapers are full of. When he happened on to a reporter for The Herald he was almost delirious with joy.

"Come with me," he shouted, "I'll introduce you to Battling Nelson."

"Quit your kidding," said the incredulous reporter.

Nevertheless, he allowed himself to be towed to the store and was determined to carry out the joke, if there was one. He shook hands with the pugilistic pretender just as if he believed he was the real thing. The traveling man evidently thought that The Herald representative had swallowed the bait, hook and all, just as his fellow townsman had.

"What are you doing in Duluth?" asked the reporter.

"I can't give that out just now," said the traveler, mysteriously. "But I'll have a big announcement to make in a couple of days."

He rather bit off his words, after the manner of prize fighters.

The reporter sort of scraped and coughed, affecting to be embarrassed and awed in the presence of so great a boxer. This was great! It was evidently Nelson himself that was swallowing the tackle now.

"What do you think of Corbett's action in snubbing the Philadelphia sporting fraternity?" was asked.

Nelson chewed his cigar thoughtfully and then replied that there was probably some mistake, as he did not think that Jim would throw down his old pals. He also declared that in his opinion, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien was a great fighter.

"How about your approaching marriage?" asked The Herald man.

Here the collar man's work was good. He worked up a pretty good blush and seemed really embarrassed. He murmured something about her being the swellest "goil" in the world.

Then he seemed to grow uneasy and asked to be excused, on the plea that he had many letters to write. He said he was going to meet a delegation of local sports later in the day and asked the reporter to be present.

The tip got around the city, however, that Battling Nelson really was in town and inquiries were made at the Spalding for him. It would seem as if the joke were now on Mr. Nelson.

PREFERS DEEDS TO ENDLESS PRAISE

Miss Anthony Would Rather Have President Act Than Praise.

Washington, Feb. 16.—A celebration in honor of the 86th anniversary of the birthday of Miss Susan B. Anthony, was held in the Church of Our Father last night. The attendance included a number of public men, who delivered addresses and also delegates from the woman's suffrage convention, which has just finished its sessions in Baltimore. Rev. Anna Howard Shaw presided and addresses were made by Senator Dubois of Idaho; Representatives Keifer of Ohio, and Reeder, Kansas; Rev. John Van Schaack of this city and Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, New Jersey.

Letters of congratulation were read from President Roosevelt, Senators Beveridge, Platt, Gallinger and Patterson and Representative Payne of New York.

The president in his letter addressed to Rev. Anna Shaw, said:

"My Dear Madame: Pray let me join with you in congratulating Miss Anthony on her 86th birthday and in extending to her the most hearty good wishes for the continuation of her useful and honorable life."

Miss Anthony in an address expressed the wish that the men did something beside extend congratulations.

"I have asked President Roosevelt," she said, "to push the matter of a constitutional amendment allowing suffrage to women by a recommendation to congress. I would rather have him say a word to congress for the cause than to praise me endlessly."

BAGLEY WINS FIGHT.

Clearwater County Seat Trouble Settled By Judge Spooner.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 16.—The Bagley-Shevlin county seat fight, which has dragged along for the past two or three years, was finally settled Wednesday afternoon when Judge M. A. Spooner issued an order granting a permanent injunction against the board of county commissioners of Clearwater county enjoining them from considering the petition of the people of Shevlin asking that an election be held to consider whether or not the county seat be removed from Bagley to that village.

KENTUCKY ROMANCE

In Which Grandnephew of the Great Bismarck Figures.

Resigned Diplomatic Post to Win Hand of Beautiful Woman.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 16.—All Kentucky is talking about a local romance in which a grandnephew of the great Bismarck resigned a diplomatic post in Japan, came to the United States, bought an estate and settled down as a plain American to win the heart and hand of one of the Blue Grass state's most beautiful women.

The principals are Mrs. Louisiana Breckinridge Gibson Maxfield and Frederick Johannus Hugo Von Engelkin, who were married at the Alcazar hotel in St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 2.

The romance began in Kobe, Japan, in the fall of 1903 when Mrs. Maxfield was making a tour of Japan with United States Senator and Mrs. Foster of Tacoma, Wash.

The Kentucky heiress met the young German nobleman, who was connected with the German embassy. He loved the beautiful American from the first, and immediately began the conquest for her hand.

Before the courtship had progressed far, however, Mrs. Maxfield's visit was cut short by the receipt of a cablegram announcing the death of her father, Col. Hart Gibson, in this city, and she took the first steamer to America in order to be with her mother and family during their grief.

The old, old adage that "absence makes the heart grow fonder" evidently had the same effect on young Von Engelkin, for, shortly after Mrs. Maxfield reached her home in this city, she was astonished to receive a letter from him announcing that he would soon visit this country. He arrived here in 1904, after having severed all connections officially with the German office in Japan.

During his first visit to this city the young German nobleman was a guest of his future wife at "Ingleside," the noted country estate of the Gibson family just outside Lexington, and although Mrs. Maxfield was in mourning for her father and did not attend any of the gay festivities arranged for her foreign guest, he was handsomely entertained by the "Four Hundred" of the Blue Grass state. He was one of the central figures at the famous "Haggin baby ball" given by Mrs. James B. Haggin at the Elmendorf farm of the multi-millionaire turfman and breeder.

At no time during the visit of the young German, who was only 22 years old, did Mrs. Maxfield, by word or sign, intimate that she too had been captivated by his charms, and not even her immediate family realized that she had been caught in Cupid's dragnet.

But all of the time the youthful nobleman was slowly but surely making progress with his suit, until at last Cupid's dart struck home and he had won the prize for which he had given up home and future titles. Renouncing all claims to German honors, he announced that he would become a plain American citizen.

After his visit to this country, young Von Engelkin journeyed to Florida, where he purchased a large estate, upon which he settled.

No one in the city suspected that when Mrs. Maxfield announced that she would spend the winter in the South she was going there to be close to her German sweetheart, as no one knew that he was in this country. The announcement of their wedding came as a complete surprise to her friends here.

Mrs. Maxfield-Von Engelkin is well known in Kentucky and throughout the South as one of the most prominent club women in the country. She is a true colonial dame, being a daughter of the Revolution and the Confederacy, and at present the regent of the Lexington Chapter of the D. A. R.

Besides being a grandnephew of Bismarck, the hero is a grandson of Christopher Johannes Lodwig Von Doderlein. On his mother's side he is descended from a prince of the noble Italian house of Ditcentigegne, and is heir to some of the most important estates in both Germany and Italy. Besides the plantation he possesses in Florida, the groom also owns a beautiful place on the St. John's river, and there, in a cosy bungalow, the couple are now enjoying their honeymoon.

The bride is one of the most noted women travelers in America, having visited nearly all of the countries of Europe and Asia during the past few years. She has the distinction of having been entertained by royalty in every civilized country on the globe. She has an ancestral home in Fayette county, just outside of Lexington, which is typical of the castle-like manors of the South, and here the couple will likely spend their summers when not traveling abroad.

SCHEDULE OF THE NATIONAL LEAGUE

Completed for 1906 and Corps of Umpires Chosen.

New York, Feb. 16.—Both the American league and the National league of baseball clubs completed the business of their spring meetings yesterday. The American league adjourned without date, but the National league agreed to meet again June 19, next. The summer meeting is an experiment, and is designed to take up such matters as may arise between the beginning of the season and the date set for meeting. The principal item of news that came out of the meeting of the leagues yesterday was the schedule of the National league. The National league season opens both in the East and West April 12, on which day Boston will play at Brooklyn; New York at Philadelphia, Chicago at Cincinnati and Pittsburg at St. Louis. The season closes in the East on Oct. 6, Philadelphia playing at Brooklyn and Boston at New York. In the West, the season closes on the day following, Pittsburg playing at Cincinnati and Chicago at St. Louis.

The following umpires were appointed by the National league: Henry O'Day, Robert Enslie, J. E. Johnstone, William Klem, W. B. Carpenter and J. H. Conway. Carpenter and Conway are new members of the staff, the former coming from the Southern league and the latter from the Eastern league. The National league passed a resolution prohibiting visiting managers, officials or players from issuing passes on foreign grounds after the beginning of the championship season of 1906.

The National league constitution was amended in the matter of the waiver of players by clubs. Hereafter any player held by a club has to be cleared off the list within ten days after the beginning of the season. The players that are retained within the season may be held for thirty days. The purpose of the change is to prevent clubs from getting waivers on men and holding them indefinitely.

Among the amendments to a number of baseball rules reported to the two leagues by the joint rules committee, was one to rule 47, to make it read:

"A bunt is a legally batted ball not swung at but met with the bat and tapped slowly within the infield by the batsman. If the attempt to bunt results in a foul not legally caught, a strike may be called by the umpire."

The change merely defines the bunt more particularly than heretofore. The national board of the minor leagues met during part of the afternoon. No business outside of routine matters was transacted. The board will meet again today for a final session.

AFTER OLD LAKE BED.

Much Litigated Land Figures in New Deal in Iowa.

Webster City, Iowa, Feb. 16.—George T. Chamberlain of this city has begun four actions in the district court of Hamilton county to foreclose four second mortgages on the famous Iowa lake bed in Rose Grove township. There are nearly 900 acres in the old lake bed. The land is valuable and the title to it is in a more or less chaotic state. The four second mortgages aggregate $8,000.

This large and valuable lake bed was sold at sheriff's sale Dec. 26, 1905, on first mortgages held by the State Bank of Williams. The claims they held aggregated $7,000, and were in notes given by persons owning various portions of the lake bed. The foreclosing of both the first and second mortgages against this property will give a clear title. The land is worth a great deal more than the sum of all the first and second mortgages against it. It has been the subject of litigation for years, and costly court trials as well as hearings before different land commissioners, and even the department of the interior at Washington.

OVER THE FALLS.

Fisherman Has Excitement That Was Not on the Program.

Lindsay, I. T., Feb. 16.—An exciting incident that came near costing Hermandez Conejo, a laborer, his life, occurred at Larimore Falls, about two miles above here. Conejo was fishing in the Washita river, just above the falls, and his boat drifted down over the cataract. The falls are about twenty-five feet high, and the water rolls over these with a tremendous roar, which can be heard for a half mile away. The boat was crushed into kindling wood, but Hermandez clung to a part of the keel and was rescued by a farmer, who happened to be near there cutting wood.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The board of supreme directors of the Court of Honor, at a meeting held at Springfield, Ill., Thursday, ousted from his position as supreme director, Frank E. Dooling, of Springfield, who was found to have failed to turn over $3,000 which he had collected from members of Springfield district court No. 25.

Rev. Charles Palducek, pastor of St. John's Slavonian Catholic church, at Freeland, Pa., was attacked Thursday night by an unknown assailant, who cut the priest's throat and struck him in the head. Father Palducek is still alive, but unconscious.

H. Stantz, proprietor of the Pacific hotel at Pomona, Cal., who shot in the neck and mortally wounded Wednesday night by his young wife during a quarrel, Mrs. Stantz was arrested. Stantz and his wife came a few months ago from Canton, O.

WIFE ADOPTED MAN AS BROTHER

But Her Husband Shot Him on Learning the Truth.

Tulsa, I. T., Feb. 16.—Arthur Crocker, shot through the liver and intestines by a bullet from the revolver of Howell P. Stoker, is suffering a thousand deaths, though alive, for through his wound he is forever cut off from paying any attention to Mrs. Howell P. Stoker.

In every pretense brother and sister, Crocker and Mrs. Stoker were so known—even to the children of Mrs. Stoker by her first husband—two little tots, taught to call him Uncle Art.

But fate revealed the real relation one day, and in the shadow of a giant oak Stoker lay in wait, pistol in hand.

Crocker passed by the spot where Stoker was hid. He had met Mrs. Stoker, "his sister," downtown, taking her home, and started to return.

"You called me a liar!" shouted Stoker, rushing from behind the tree and firing. One bullet plowed its way through the lower cavity of the body, passing through the liver. Another struck the backbone, glanced and passed out. The third struck in the hip.

"You've killed me," moaned young Croker as he staggered away.

He had drawn his own revolver. Suddenly, as if he had recovered from the terrible shock, he commenced firing. His bullets went at random. Fourteen shots were exchanged—Stoker reloading.

With this battle there came hospital examinations, then arrest, and Stoker was taken to jail, where he now languishes—waiting for liberty, which is sure to come.

And when the doctors and the officers questioned Crocker, he unfolded a story that had been uncovered by Stoker previous to the shooting.

"Mrs. Stoker and I are not related. We started to call each other brother and sister up in Kansas a number of years ago. I knew her, and lived at her home as her brother. Finally she grew tired of me and then she married Stoker. During the time previous to the marriage she had taught the children by her first husband to call me Uncle Art.

"I married too. My wife lives at Cherryvale, Kan. After we were both married we grew tired of our new condition and longed to be together again as brother and sister.

"When Stoker moved his wife from place to place, in Kansas, I would follow, getting a job if I could.

"The fact that we were married made no difference to either of us. We continued our former relations.

"Under the guise of being her brother, I could see her any time I wanted to, and this continued, until a few days before Howell Stoker got wise, and then I had to leave. Now I'm going back to my wife in Kansas and live with her."

This confession was substantiated by Mrs. Stoker, who, too, said the deception was started as a joke, and that as it suited the purpose so well, it was continued for many months.

Mrs. Stoker, at the time of the shooting, left her husband, denouncing him as a coward, and refusing to see him after he was put in jail, but now she wants to join him and is preparing to go to Texas, where she has relatives, and only waits until the law has vindicated her husband.

Mrs. Stoker is a handsome woman, neat, modest and refined.

ASKS AN ACCOUNTING.

Peter Leneau Claims Partner Got More Than His Share.

The suit of Peter Leneau against J. A. Roberts, for the accounting of the affairs of the firm of Leneau & Roberts, following a dissolution of partnership was tried before Judge Dibell yesterday and today. Mr. Leneau has made application for the appointment of a receiver.

The firm was organized about two years ago to do a timber, pole and tie business.

Mr. Leneau claims that Mr. Roberts appropriated $2,000 more than his proportionate share of the profits and he demands an accounting.

Mr. Roberts claims that no money is due his former partner, but that Mr. Leneau really owes him.

WEST END

PASTORATE IS BEGGING

Bethany Lutheran Church Without a Head for Eight Months.

Rev. Mr. Ekblad's Declination Much Regretted--Another Call Soon.

The news printed in last evening's Herald to the effect that Rev. A. Theodore Ekblad, who has been called to the pastorate of Bethany Lutheran church of the West end, has declined, is received with much regret. When he was here about three weeks ago, he made a very good impression and it seemed to be the general hope of the members of the congregation that he would accept the offer which was quite a good one. At that time Mr. Ekblad said that if he alone was to be consulted, he would come, but he said that the board of directors of Augustana college of which he is solicitor might object. It is understood that the board did object, claiming that the work was in such condition now that should Mr. Ekblad leave at this time, it would prove a distinct set-back to the college. The board, moreover, advanced the salary substantially and in every way made it an object for Mr. Ekblad to stay. It is also understood that Mr. Ekblad's bachelor days will soon end, and the "other party" objected to coming up here among strangers.

It will be about two weeks before a meeting of the church council can be held to submit another name to the congregation; then in case the congregation chooses another clergyman on whom to bestow a call, the usual formalities of his coming here to preach, etc., will have to be gone through with. Then he will have three months, according to the church law, in which to accept or decline the call. Should he accept he will have three more months in which to give the church over which he presides at the time, a chance to fill his place.

Bethany church has been without a pastor ever since June and it bids fair to be without one for six to eight months more. The congregation is anxious to get on to a working basis again and therefore Mr. Ekblad's refusal is much regretted.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—"Piff, Paff, Pouf," also tomorrow afternoon and evening.
METROPOLITAN—The Avenue Girls.

COMING ATTRACTION.

LYCEUM—Monday evening, Grace George in "The Marriage of William Ashe."

"PIFF, PAFF, POUF."

B. C. Whitney's gorgeous musical production, direct from its phenomenal run of eight months at the New York Casino, will be at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon. The story of "Piff, Paff, Pouf" concerns one August Melon, who cannot touch two millions left him by his deceased wife, should he marry before his four daughters have found husbands. As the gay widower cruises along the sands of Atlantic City for a wife, he meets the dashing Widow Montague, whom he considers his affinity. Immediately they begin laying plans to marry off the four Melon girls. This situation leads up to a number of other amusing and excruciatingly funny ones.

Mr. Whitney's principals consist of an all-star cast, comprising the following well-known stage favorites: Fred W. Mace, Kathryn Osterman, R. E. Graham, Lulu McConnell, Walter H. Cluxton, Dorothy Maynard, Harry Stuart, Eveleen Dunmore, Martin Cheeseman, Mae Elwood, James Devlin, Lisle Bloodgood and others, including the "Great Pony Ballet," the greatest octet of dancing girls in the world, and the American Beauty Chorus.

AT THE METROPOLITAN.

Amateur night will be inaugurated at the Metropolitan this evening. A number of aspiring vaudevillians have been enrolled on the program and they have promised the management to furnish lots of entertainment. Gold prizes will be awarded to the most successful acts. In addition, the Avenue Girls will give their entire show.

The Avenue Girls will conclude their engagement at the "Met" with two performances tomorrow. Tomorrow evening the female wrestlers will contest for honors on the mat.

GRACE GEORGE.

What promises to be one of the great dramatic treats of the season at the Lyceum will occur Monday evening, when William A. Brady will present for the first time in this city the charming comedienne, Miss Grace George, in Margaret Mayo's dramatic version of Mrs. Humphry Ward's famous story, "The Marriage of William Ashe." The book has been the talk of the literary world of the entire country, its sales in the past year having reached over 2,000,000 copies. In "The Marriage of William Ashe" Miss George will be seen in the most difficult role she has yet essayed. The part fits her pleasing personality like a glove, and allows of many possibilities the star has never before had.

THAT NEW HOME

Under Discussion by West End Woodmen ---To Decide Soon.

The committee from Duluth camp, No. 2341, M. W. A. appointed to look for new quarters, got together with Henry Gujer a few nights ago to put an additional story on the new building which he is to put up for the Anchor laundry on Twentieth avenue west, near Superior street.

The committee seemed to be very favorable but when the report was made to the camp last Wednesday evening no action was taken on the matter. The camp will meet again next Wednesday night and something will probably be done.

It is understood that Mr. Gujer has made the camp a good offer if the Woodmen wish a new home. He guarantees to give them an opportunity to gratify that desire if they really want something good, which they can fit up so that they can be proud of it.

West End Shortrails.

Pure drugs at the "Lion Drug store."

C. O. Nelson has returned from Chicago and the West, to which he made a somewhat extended trip.

Jerry Murphy and Wilfred Harris have taken a trip to Houghton.

Joseph Miller has returned from Chicago, where he went to attend the funeral of an aunt.

Conductor H. P. Moore of the Northern Pacific railway, who was injured in a mix-up in the cut at Shortline Park, several weeks ago, will report for duty Monday. He has been confined in St. Mary's hospital.

George Cressy, local chairman of the grievance committee of the Order of Railway Conductors, and Peter McHugh of the B. R. T., have returned after three weeks in conference with the heads of the railroads in St. Paul.

Conductor Ed Kemp of the Northern Pacific went to St. Paul last night to take a job as conductor on the Minneapolis & St. Louis road.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. George Lowe, 2126 West First street.

Edward Finnerty of Centerville, S. D., returned home today after visiting with his aunts, Mrs. Thomas of Piedmont avenue and First street and Mrs. Anderson of Twenty-eighth avenue west and First street.

Mrs. Alfred Dahl has gone to St. Paul for a visit.

You are sure to get what the doctor orders if you take your prescriptions to the "Lion Drug store."

Miss Ida Johnson of 121 South Twentieth avenue west left today for Denver, Colo.

Rev. E. C. Clemans, presiding elder, will speak this evening at Grace M. E. church.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Forward is quite sick.

A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. C. Phillips.

The big sale is still drawing immense crowds to Johnson & Moe's store. The augmented force of clerks are worked to death, and sales each day are enormous.

THE INTERLOPER

By Elizabeth Seal Blakely.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Selfish little woman," teased Ben.

"Possibly," replied the young wife, half pouting, "but we have been so happy since you retired from practice, and—and I don't know your cousin."

Ben coughed to cover a sigh; the giving up of his chosen calling had been a trial of intense bitterness, for, young as he was, he had made two operations which brought him prestige. However, failing health had demanded immediate cessation from all work, though he did not despair of resuming it some day.

"Were you very fond of her" demanded Lucile, after a slight pause.

Ben laughed.

"Well—yes; there was a boy and girl attachment when she was about eighteen years old. Then I went to France and another man married her. He was always a lucky fellow—that is, until that burglar killed him last winter."

"I believe you love her still, "she declared. "How old is she?"

"What a woman's question," chuckled Ben. "Let me see—eighteen and twelve—no—fourteen—yes, she must be thirty-two."

"Old—isn't she?" remarked Lucile, secure in her own youth—not yet twenty-two.

"Then I must be?" inquired her husband, smiling.

"Oh, I forgot," and she rubbed her soft cheek against his arm. "Well, it's different with men." Then, with a sigh, "How long will she stay?"

"Several weeks I fancy."

"Weeks!" cried Lucile in dismay.

"Really," said Ben, rising with a slightly impatient air, "you make it rather hard for me." And he began walking up and down the veranda.

"I know—I know—" And Lucile winked away two foolish tears. "I am all wrong; I will make her as happy as I can, and Ben—is she—pretty?"

Ben laughed and lit another cigar.

"Is that some more worry?"

"N—o, I was just wondering."

"Not so pretty as you, dear." And Ben tenderly drew her up beside him. "Come, it's nearly 12 o'clock."

That was the last evening they had together before Bernice took them by surprise, and the days seemed to be weeks after she came, at least to Lucile.

One morning, Ben was starting for town when Bernice came tripping down the stairs, charming in a thin lawn and large hat covered with roses.

Lucile turned back to the kitchen where preserving was going on. No—she would not say goodbye to Ben, al lover-heated and in a soiled apron, with that radiant creature standing by, cool and—yes—beautiful. "The upstart!" muttered Lucile, pressing her nails into her hands, "and he thinks she is guileless."

Meanwhile Ben and his cousin were driving down a shady road, and she way saying:

"What pity Lucile does not leave more of the work to the servants—she must have had a very pretty hand once."

"I hadn't noticed her hands were harmed," said Ben, naturally glancing at his companion's, white and beautifully shaped, showing to advantage as she drew on her long silk gloves.

"Men are always a trifle thoughtless," she replied, with an adorable glance. "But really, you should prevail upon her to protect her face from the sun. She is getting quite covered with fine freckles, but don't mention me—I—I think she might not understand that I feel interested in her appearance. Oh, Ben, see those beautiful flowers," she exclaimed, with childlike delight. "Do you remember when we were—were—engaged?" Her chin drooped prettily and his hands tightened on the reins, for the past week had awakened many memories better forgotten. "You used to hitch the horse," Bernice continued softly, "and we gathered daisies. Oh, let us play we are children and gather some now—I just long to."

And Ben complied, for it was hard to resist her in that mood. Jumping from the carriage he hitched the horse and then came to assist her to alight. She hesitated, one small foot on the wheel, saying roguishly, "Do you remember how you used to catch me, you great strong man, when you were only eighteen?" she laughed, then cried gaily, "try it now; here I come!" And he caught her. Clinging to him for a second with a pouting, startled air, she murmured, "my, how it frightened me; I had no idea that I had become so timid; yet in those dear old days I was not very brave and you used to—"

He bent his head laughing, and she drew back with sudden shyness, very winning, adding faintly, "but that was long ago, before you went away and—and never wrote, nor—nor cared about me any more."

"I did write," cried Ben; Lucile had forgotten. "And I cared too much—you must have known how much, though you married."

"To show me that someone loved me even if you—" She held out her arms, her face raised to his, then she turned away and her eyes sought the earth, as she said softly, "I never loved but one man."

"And that one—" he urged, almost boyishly.

"You—always you," she answered with a half sob, and he caught her to him, the sweetheart of his youth, kissing her until she pushed him from her, crying, "Ben! How could you?"

"Forgive me," he plead remorsefully, "what a wicked fool I am."

"No Ben, no you are not; come let us gather the flowers and—and remember we are not children." Bernice turned aside to conceal the exultant light in her eyes.

The memory of that day never quite left their minds when their eyes met, and the old influence that Bernice once held, seemed awakening more each week of her visit, but there were no more kisses for Ben felt his weakness and almost welcomed the time when it came for Bernice to leave. She asked him to meet her for the last time, at a favorite rustic seat and he unwisely consented.

"I would not have asked you," said Bernice timidly as he sat down beside her, "but—tomorrow we part, perhaps forever. Are you sure Lucile is asleep?"

"Yes, poor child," he answered with a sigh.

"Why do you say that, Ben?" Bernice asked dejectedly. "She has you and—" her voice broke, "I have only the uncaring world and—" he bent his head to hear, for her voice seemed muffled with tears, "menfories of—dead days."

"Bernice! don't tempt me," he almost groaned, "I love you, to my shame I say it."

"Am I so poor a creature it is shame to love me?" she asked sadly.

"No, not that, you know I do not mean that, but—Lucile."

"What does she know of such love as ours?" whispered Bernice, turning swiftly to him. "She is jealous, shallow, exacting. Ben—Ben, this is our last hour together. Ben! take me in your arms just once—just once as in those dear old lost days if—if you love me." She leaned toward him, her face beautiful in the moonlight.

"Love you!" he echoed hoarsely, and he drew her toward him almost roughly then, as they kissed there was the sound of a sob.

"Yes, wait here and I will see what it was," answered Ben, "it was from the library."

"No one was there," said he, returning, but little uneasy. "Come, let us go in, I have been brute enough for one night.

"Never that, dear," murmured Bernice clinging to his arm, but unresponsive, and troubled, he walked on in silence. The sob haunted him, nor did he turn when Bernice looked back before she entered her bedroom, and she closed the door sharply.

She walked to the window and drew down the shade while a cruel curve marred her lips. "What a pity Ben was not free to marry again instead of being tied to a weak creature who permitted rides and walks without a protest." She turned and lit the gas, then her smile froze, for between her and the door, stood Lucile, a strange light in her eyes which made Bernice fear something, she knew not what.

"I heard every word," said Lucile slowly. "You have lured, almost cruelly and deliberately, my husband from me, and I, a long month, have known the tortures of hades. No—you shall not pass—you remain and listen."

"Stand aside! How dare you," cried Bernice boldly.

"If you attempt to leave this room I will kill you!" said Lucile very softly in a tense tone. "I have tried to warn Ben, but he thought me unwarrantably jealous. I have hoped and prayed that he was right for I love him as you, vile woman, could never love."

Bernice threw back her head and forced a smile, but Lucile seemed not to notice and went steadily on.

"You have tortured me and I have made no sign to delight you, but now—now I shall rest and you—" a terrible smile illumined her face, "will suffer for this." She screamed shrilly, "Help, help, Bernice is killing me—help!" As sounds of hurried steps approached, she plunged a knife deep in her own bosom.

With Lucile's cries ringing in his ears, Ben realized that life held nothing more for him. His brain was almost numbed with dread when he burst open the door and stumbled over the body of Lucile, a knife in the breast which held a heart ever faithful to him. As he drew it from the tender flesh, Lucile's eyes opened wide, "I was not—" She tried to confess her deed but her heavy lids sank, her lips became mute.

"Lucile—forgive me," Ben implored in an agony of remorse. Suddenly the surgeon in him awoke, and with a rush of despairing hope he tore aside her clothing and examined the wound. "Thank God," he cried, "I can save her."

"Save her," gurgled a voice and turning toward the sound, his blood seemed to freeze in his veins, for crouched in a corner, her face distorted, was Bernice, who had become a maniac.

FEAR DRAKE WAS KILLED.

Missing Mankato Engineer Believed to Have Been Murdered.

Mankato, Minn., Feb. 16.—No trace has yet been found of Arden N. Drake, an engineer of this city, who was lost some time ago near Roseburg, Or., where he had taken a claim and was living with his family. He went into the woods one day to bring back a deer he had shot and hung up the previous day, and that was the last ever seen of him, although the search was prosecuted by his wife and several lodges that he belonged to. A letter from there says that the only trace found of him was his mittens, which lay on a log near a trail leading to the place where he was supposed to have had the deer hung up. The supposition is that he was murdered and his body disposed of. The country at that point is wild.

TOMBSTONE STORIES.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "Abroad last summer I found a number of tombstones with murder stories on them," said a detective. "The poor folk under the stones were the victims of murderers undiscovered and unhanged.

"One inscription was in the English town of Merrington. I jotted it down in my notebook. It was on the tomb of two murdered children. Here it is:"

The detective read from his notebook:

'An unknown hand caused all our pain,
Sleeping we were slain.
And here we sleep till we must rise again.'

"Another was in Samdridge, the tomb of a custom house officer shot by smugglers. It said:

"'Thou shalt do no murder, nor shalt thou steal,'
Are the commands Jehovah did reveal.
But thou, O unnamed wretch, without dread
Of thy tremendous Maker, shot me dead.'

"A tombstone in the cemetery of Cladoxton, Glamorganshire, said:

"'To record murder

"'This stone was erected over the body of Margaret Williams, aged 26, living in service in this parish, who was found dead with marks of violence upon her in a ditch on a marsh below this churchyard on the morning of Sunday, the 14th of July, 1822.

"'Although the savage murderer escaped the detection of man, yet God hath set his mark upon him, either for time or eternity, and the cry of blood will assuredly pursue him to certain and terrible but righteous judgment.'

"Another stone made me laugh. It was in Dulverton. It said:

"'Mrs. Jane Winsmore, born 1794; died 1851.
Poisoned by the doctor, neglected by the nurse,
The brother robbed the widow, which made the matter worse.'"

ADVERTISE STATE LAND

Commercial Club Will Distribute Map and Descriptive Literature.

Will be Ready for Mailing Within a Week or Two.

The Duluth Commercial club, through its secretary H. W. Eva, is now preparing a map showing the state land that will be for sale in Northern Minnesota this spring, and giving all necessary particulars. The map includes Beltrami, Hubbard, Wadena, Cass, Aitkin, St. Louis, Itasca, Crow Wing and Carlton counties, and on its back is printed all necessary information as to the climate, soil, general characteristics, products, transportation facilities, etc.

The map and descriptive literature will be ready for distribution within the next week or two, and will be disposed of to interested parties largely through advertisements inserted in farm papers and magazines and in places where the advertising matter will go the most good. The map can be obtained by anyone who will write to or inquire at the office of Secretary Eva, at the Commercial club.

This is another important step in the settlement and development of Northern Minnesota, particularly the northeastern section of the state. From now on, a vigorous campaign looking to the betterment of this section of the commonwealth will be carried on. The particular state land sales which the literature will advertise will be held April 9 at Duluth and April 17 at Grand Rapids. At the first sale 50,000 acres of good farming lands will be disposed of, and at the second there will be placed on sale 40,000 acres. These lands will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price must be paid at the time of sale. The balance may run for forty years at 4 per cent annual interest, if desired. The title to all state land is perfect. These sales offer remarkably fine opportunities to secure homes of farming lands at small cost.

Particular attention is given in the folder to stockraising and dairying. "Nowhere in the West," says the folder, "can stock be kept with less labor or better condition than here. In the summer the dairy farmer of this region will find his pasture growing with the finest of grasses and clover. Red and white clover flourish abundantly, and timothy and blue joint spring up everywhere. The season of pasturage in this section is considerably longer than in Southern Minnesota. Stock is usually turned out about the middle of April and allowed to run until snow flies. For winter forage the farmer can provide an abundance of clover and timothy hay, wild hay from the natural meadows, pea straw, oat straw, root crops, and ensilage from corn and clover, giving him a large variety of winter feed at small cost and equal to that found anywhere in the South or West."

Space is also devoted to the sheep raising industry, and it is explained that stock growers are beginning to learn that better sheep and more wool are produced for less money in Northern Minnesota than in any other localities in the country. The folder goes on to say that any person who is familiar with the requirements for raising sheep and who intend to engage in the business, will, after investigating conditions in Northern Minnesota, at once come to the conclusion that no like area on the continent can offer equally favorable facilities. Among the advantages in this respect are named cheap lands, a climate perfectly suited to sheep and the best growth of their wool, pure water, ranges where foot disease rarely occur, the ease and cheapness with which the necessary forage crops are grown, abundance of timber suitable for sheds and folds, and the comparatively small amount of capital required to make a start in the business.

Low Rates to Coast Points.

February 15th to April 7th, Northern Pacific railway will have on sale daily, one way second class rates to all points in Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, as follows.

Billings, Mont., and intermediate points	$15 00

THE FIRST ROBIN SEEN

Foolish Redbreast Comes Hovering About Duluth in February.

Respectfully Advised to Start For New Orleans Without Delay.

There was no doubt about it. It was a real, live robin. A dozen people saw him, as he threw out his chest and warbled off a few lines just to show that his throat was clear. The people were all sober, respectable citizens, on their way to their dinners at noon today.

The robin sat in a tree, as self-respecting robins should. The tree was located between First and Second avenues east, on Second street. The date is Feb. 16, 1906. All of which goes to show that Duluth is well within the banana belt.

But there are wise robins and foolish robins. This may be one of the foolish, rash, young yearlings that has been tempted from its sunny South prematurely. If he is wise, he will begin to burn up the air behind him, hitting the trail for New Orealns, for no wise robin is caught north of the Ohio river in February, even if it is a mild winter.

It would be a burning shame for such a sociable, courageous, and altogether desirable robin to land on his back, with a pair of stiff little legs pointing heavenward from some ashpile.

He may be acting on the theory that the early bird catches the worm, but in this instance it is more likely that he will catch cold.

Of course, on the other hand, there is the possibility that he is dragging spring along behind him, and that in a few days more robins will begin to warble from the treetops, and commence building operations, while the sun makes its daily inroads into the snow piles. Perhaps the time has come when the dirty ash heaps and tin cans are due to show up, the days of warm, southern breezes, sloppy pavements, colds in the head and rheumatism. All this may begin to take place immediately as the result of the visit of that tramp robin, who in a moment of mental aberration took it into his fool head to visit Duluth in February, but if it does, the oldest inhabitant, disgraced and dishonored, will betake himself and his long beard and his longer stories into the tall and silent timbers of the remotest forest, and there, forgotten and alone, recount his yarns to the unhearing trees.

The weather man was consulted. But the weather man was wise. He offered some scientific observations of areas of low pressure and high pressure, and offered to tell what the weather would be for twenty-four hours ahead, but beyond that he refused to commit himself. He said he was not an authority on birds, and said that if a robin decided to break up his winter home in Alabama, or wherever it is that robins go when copper stock magnates strike out for Ormond beach, it was nobody's business but the robin's, and that having made his bed he would have to lie in it. He suggested that perhaps the robin was overdue with his rent on his Alabama nest, and had to move, but the robin bore every appearance of being a prosperous, well-fed bird. In the robin world he might have about the social standing of a bank cashier.

All of which goes to show that as weather prognosticators, robins only serve to stir up controversy.

ODOR OF BEAVER SKINS

Proved the Undoing of Aged Trapper in Upper Michigan.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The acute sense of smell possessed by Deputy Sheriff C. L. Sporley proved the undoing of Joseph Charboneau, an aged trapper, whose place of abode is in the wilds of Ely township. The hunter and the limb of the law were passengers on the South Shore's morning train between Negaunee and Marquette. Entering the smoking car, the officer was attracted by what he thought was the odor of beaver skins. He at once proceeded to investigate, and in a large, two-bushel sack aside the trapper's seat he found seventeen prime beaver pelts tucked away in the bottom and covered by other furs. The trapper was placed under arrest and later was turned over to the deputy game warden. Charboneau is 73 years of age, and has lived for a quarter of a century in a little cabin on the banks of a creek in Ely township. Besides the beaver skins, he had in the sack the pelts of eight mink, five skunks, three muskrats, three weazels and two wildcats. Beaver are protected by law, and Charboneau is liable to a stiff fine in addition to the confiscation of his skins.

Matter to Compromised,

On stipulation between the city and Zillah Titcomb, who appealed from the assessment for the construction of a sanitary sewer in London road, from Sixtieth avenue east to the center of lot 8, block 7, Lester Park, First division, that the assessment be set aside against one lot and be confirmed against the other two, Judge Cant has filed an order to that effect. The assessment against the one lot is set aside on the ground that the property is not benefited by the sewer.

LUX ELECTED

As President of the Minnesota Retail Grocers' Association.

Rochester, Minn., Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Retail Grocers' convention closed its successful gathering last evening, and the 500 delegates departed for their homes on the late trains. Just before the close the election of officers occurred and resulted as follows: John W. Lux, St. Paul, president; H. W. Kingsbury, Winona, first vice president; C. W. Meneilly, Minneapolis, second vice president; J. T. Williams, Minneapolis, treasurer.

Duluth was chosen as the meeting place for the next convention, although Red Wing made a hard fight for the honor.

SEEKING REVENGE.

Saloon Keeper Prosecuted by Two Men Whom He Had Garnisheed.

John Hollen, a West End saloonkeeper, was arrested this morning on the charge of selling liquor on Sunday.

The arrest is claimed to have been the result of the desire for revenge on the part of two railroad men whom he had garnished for a bar bill. The two men gave the information which led to his arrest, and swore out the warrant before the assistant city attorney.

He pleaded not guilty and the case was set over until tomorrow.

CHICAGO LUNCH ROOM.

New Idea Restaurant Opens at 311 West Superior Street.

Duluthians have now an opportunity of taking lunch in true Metropolitan style. The Chicago Lunch Room, branches of which are established in all the principal cities of the United States, has opened at 311 West Superior street, and will cater to the wants of the men of Duluth, on the new idea plan, which has made such a hit in other cities. Each patron is supplied with an individual chair and table combined, a feature that will be appreciated by every one. While everything will be of the best, popular prices will prevail, and it is a generally conceded fact that this up-to-date, new restaurant will be an immense success in Duluth.

Just a little Kodol after meals will relieve that fullness, belching, gas on stomach, and all other symptoms of indigestion. Kodol digests what you eat, and enables the stomach and digestive organs to perform their functions naturally. Sold by all druggists.

MATCH POSTPONED.

Duluth Curlers Will Not Go to St. Paul Until Next Thursday.

Owing to the illness of several of the curlers who were to take the trip to St. Paul to play for the cup put up by the Nushka Curling club of that city, the trip has been postponed until Washington's birthday.

The curlers were due to leave this evening, and the match was to have been played tomorrow, but bad colds and illness made inroads into the ranks of the curlers who were to represent Duluth, and it was decided to postpone the match. It will be played next Thursday, Washington's birthday, instead.

QUIET AT SHANGHAI.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The state department has received a cablegram from Shanghai, China, stating that the conditions in that city are not such as to cause any alarm. Although the boycott has not diminished, it is reported that no great fear is entertained of any outbreak.

MAY SHIFT POLE.

How Dynamite Could Cause Revolution in Seasons.

"I hope to save humanity from an incalculable peril." So wrote an Argentine lady lately to a London daily paper. According to this correspondent, a certain South American astronomer, willing as any Jules Verne hero to sacrifice himself, and, if necessary, the whole human race, for the advancement of science, is maturing a deep-laid scheme for removing our planet from its accustomed orbit, says Pearson's Weekly.

His object is to study the other planets at closer quarters than is at present possible, quite regardless of the fact that could his purpose be accomplished, his time for observation would be strictly limited to the period necessary for our little earth to plunge through space and drop into that flaming furnace we call the sun.

As a matter of fact, this South American enthusiast is not the first to make a similar suggestion. Some five years ago a French astronomer mooted the possibility of rectifying the earth's axis. His idea was that by transporting an enormous quantity of explosives to a point near the North Pole, and there touching them off, the axis on which the earth revolves might be straightened. Thus our days and nights would be equalized all over the world just as they are now at the equator, and the seasons likewise would be changed.

The bold Frenchman had evidently not gone very far into the question of the power necessary to move the earth. The weight of this planet in tons is 61 followed by twenty noughts. To move this weight one foot would need the vaporization into steam of enough water to cover the face of our planet 300 feet deep, while the coal necessary for turning this amount of water into steam would fill 400,000,000,000,000 ten-ton trucks!

After such Titanic projects as these, anything else seems comparatively tame. Yet the last few years have produced a crop of suggestions, any one of which is big enough in itself to positively frighten the average man in the street.

Some time ago, when the feeling between ourselves and our American cousins was by no means so cordial as it is today, a Yankee paper published an article declaring that going to war with Great Britain was absurd. Much better spend the money in blowing up the Isthmus of Panama.

This, he coolly wrote, would change the course of the Gulf Stream, which would then flow out into the Pacific ocean. The consequence would be that the British climate would be changed to something resembling that of Labrador, and that 40,000,000 Britishers would be seen on their knees imploring the states to give them back their Gulf Stream!

Much more startling is the project of an American scientist, Dr. Woolridge by name, for changing the arid deserts of Arizona and Southern California into gardens of beauty. He suggests that the American army should be employed in building an immense chimney on the Pacific coast. This would be miles in width at the lower end, and would slope inland, so that it would carry the moist ocean air to the top of the San Bernardino mountains.

The result, declares the doctor, would be the formation of an immense glacier, which would so cool the upper atmosphere as to produce a heavy rainfall. Also the glacier would become the source of rivers, which would fill artificial water courses dug all through the arid region. By this plan an area rather larger than France would, he says, be reclaimed and turned into the finest fruit-growing region in the world.

We have not heard much of late of Alfred Whitney and his big gun. His plan was to fire from the top of Pike's Peak, or some other tall mountain, by means of a thirteen-inch cannon, a spherical magnet of great size. To this was to be attached a coil of wire some thirty miles in length. Seventeen miles up, says Mr. Whitney, the power of gravity disappears, and projectile and cable will therefore fall straight into space.

Any number of miles of wire can then easily be unwound, and at a height of 150 miles up he expects to tap "the electric sea," as he calls it, and obtain electricity equal to 140,000 horse power. It is an extraordinary comment on the credulity still existing in this nineteenth century that this man was actually able to form a company to finance his scheme.

An Italian inventor recently mooted a bold suggestion for lifting sea water by means of gigantic pumps into the crater of Vesuvius. The heat of the volcano would, of course, turn the water into steam, and thus would be obtained power sufficient to run a gigantic electric plant sufficient to work every vehicle, light and factory in Naples and the surrounding country. What was to happen when an eruption occurred does not seem to have entered into this bold idealist's brain. He is offset by a New Zealander, who claims to have invented a new fire-extinguishing fluid so powerful in its action that a few tons of it will put out any active volcano.

HE GOT EVEN.

Dr. George B. Loring, whose eloquence was much sought after by the Republican committees of the various cities and towns of Essex county, was advertised to speak at a rally in a certain town, where the chairman went into ecstasies over his success in securing the orator's services, says the Boston Herald. The chairman, greatly excited, said: "Fellow-citizens, I have the distinguished honor of introducing to you the king of rare-bits." To illustrate which, he told the following story:

A farmer was at work on his farm one day, when he was accosted by an Irishman, who asked him if he wanted to hire a man. The farmer replied that he did, and the Irishman went to work. The next day was stormy, and but little work could be done on the farm, and the Irishman asked if he could go gunning, to which the farmer gave his assent. He had been gone but a few minutes, when "bang! bang!" went the gun, and the farmer rushing around the barn, beheld his hired man pulling at his old jackass and crying out: "I have shot the king of jackrabbits!"

Thoroughly proud of his effort, the chairman turned to Dr. Loring, and, amid vociferous applause, introduced him.

Dr. Loring rose. He did not speak, but looked puzzled. "Gentlemen," he finally said, "that was the most flattering introduction to an audience that I ever had. But it reminds me of a story. A man broke into a church and climber up the bell rope. The people, aroused, surrounded the church and captured the burglar, who was taken to a nearby house. He was then bound hand and foot and taken to the lockup. In passing the church, he looked up at the old bell and was heard to say: 'If it hadn't been for your long tongue I never should have been here.'"

SENSATION IN CHARGES

Made Against Officers of Miami and Erie Transportation Company.

Alleged to Have Issued Vast Amount of Stock on Wind.

Cincinnati, Feb. 16.—Sensational charges are made in a suit filed in the United States circuit court today by attorneys for Rudolph Kleybolte, the Cincinnati banker, seeking an investigation of the Miami & Erie Transportation company, known as the Electric mule.

The charge is that financiers of Cleveland, whose names are mentioned as defendants, floated $2,000,000 in bonds and $3,000,000 in stock on the sole strength of $10,000 paid up capital stock in that company, and that these stocks and bonds being placed on the market were taken in good faith by hundreds of innocent investors in Cincinnati and elsewhere. Banker Kleybolte brings his action on behalf of all the creditors of the company, including the holders of bonds.

The pith of the action is found in the allegation that these defendants presented to themselves $2,999,000 of the capital stock of the Miami & Erie company, which was issued to them as paid up stock, but for which they made no payments and on the strength of which the company caused $2,000,000 in bonds to issue and to contract other debts. The petition asks that these defendants be compelled to pay for their stocks and that the proceeds be applied to the debts of the company. There is pending in the Cleveland courts a suit to assess the liability against the stockholders on whom the original holders are alleged to have unloaded. Attorney General Ellis has also brought action to oust the concern from the canal banks. The bill seeks to set aside the contract between Lamprecht and associates and the company in so far as it exempts these defendants from paying for the $2,999,000 stock and seeks to require them to pay for the same to satisfy the debts of the company, which with the bonds amount to $2,000,000.

LOW RATE TO CHICAGO.

Round Trip $8 From St. Paul and $15.55 From Duluth.

A round-trip rate of $8 will be in effect between the Twin Cities and Chicago Feb. 17 and 18, with the return limit Feb. 28, on account of a dairying convention to be held in Chicago from Feb. 19 to the 25th. The rate from Duluth to Chicago will be $15.55 on the same days, or $2 more than one fare, for the round trip. Sharp competition between the Chicago-Twin City lines explains the $8 rate. One road began slashing rates and the others followed suit.

PRESIDENT DOLAN OUSTED BY MINERS.

Pittsburg, Feb. 16.—Delegates attending the Pittsburg district miners' convention unanimously adopted a resolution today declaring the offices of president and vice president of the Pittsburg district miners vacant. President Dolan presided at today's session, and refused to entertain the resolution, but it was passed, nevertheless. The delegates at once notified President John Mitchell, now in New York, of their action, and it is expected he will appoint men to fill the two offices some time during the day.

Indoor Baseball

Temple Roller Rink, Friday evening, Feb. 16. Company C, Duluth, vs. Company I, Superior. Game called at 8:15. Skating after game until 11:30. Admission: Gallery, 25c; including skates, 35c; wardrobe free.

COPPER STOCKS ARE VERY DULL

Copper stocks were weak today. Amalgamated and Anaconda opened practically unchanged at $113.50 and $279 respectively, but at the close Amalgamated was $111.75 bid and $112 asked and Anaconda $275 bid. Amalgamated went as high as $113.75 during the day and sold at $111.62½ just before the close while Anaconda dropped from $279.50 to $273, rallying a little at the close. The North Butte and United Copper, did not fare so badly. North Butte opened at $86.50, dropped to $86 and rallied to $87. The closing price was $86 bid and $86.50 asked. United Copper opened at $71.75 and closed at $73.37½ bid.

The Bisbee stocks were inactive. Calumet & Arizona closed at $118 bid and $119 asked, Calumet & Pittsburg $36 asked, Junction at $26.75 asked, Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $43.75 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth at $25 asked.

Black Mountain sold at $11.50 and closed at $11.50 bid and $12 asked, Keweenaw closed at $16.75 bid and $17 asked, Warren at $18 asked, Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 asked and Sullivan at $2 asked.

An article in the Boston News Bureau, with reference to the copper settlement, makes some statements of interest. It says that the new company to be organized by Thomas F. Cole to control the properties taken from the Heinze interests will contain no water, and there will be no public allotment of its shares.

Another statement of interest is this: "This is the first step toward the carrying out of very large copper plans that may cover much more than the Butte territory, although the Butte Mountain production will be expanded to over 400,000,000 pounds, or more than 40 per cent of the American copper production."

WORK STORY.

This story is told of Robert Smith, a well known man now living in Malden, says the Boston Herald. He was talking one night with a crowd of city laborers in front of City hall. Some of them had just been laid off from work, and were telling him how hard it was to get a job.

"The idea!" said Mr. Smith. "There is no such thing as a man not finding work. Why, if a man is a good worker it is easy to get a job. For instance, I will show you how easy it was for me to get my brother, my father and myself a job.

"I was out of work, and one morning I went down to the last factory and asked the boss if he would like to hire a good man. 'Well,' he said, 'are you a good worker?' I told him I was considered a very good worker. So he gave me a job.

"I had been working about a week, when I asked him if he could give my brother a job. 'Well,' he said, 'can he work as good as you?' I said he was just as good a worker. 'Well,' he said, 'bring him in.' So I brought him in.

"He was not there more than a week when I asked the boss if he could find my father a job. 'Well,' he said, 'can he work as good as you and your brother?' I said, 'You just bet he can. Why, he can do twice as much as my brother and me.' 'Well,' he said, 'you tell your father to come to work tomorrow and you two stay home.'"

First Woman On Postage Stamps

Of the United States Was Queen Isabella of Spain—A Good Hearted Woman Without Personal Enemies.

Congressman Sheppard's defense of women, in the house of representatives recently, in connection with the incident of the ejectment of Mrs. Minor Morris from the White House offices, in which Mr. Sheppard stated that if Queen Isabella of Spain had not risked her personal fortune in aiding Columbus to fit out his fleet, no ships would have left the Spanish shore, recalls the fact that Isabella was the first woman to be honored with a place on United States postage stamps.

In 1902, when the postoffice department decided to bring out an entire new series of postage stamps, it was suggested by a young lady stamp collector—there are thousands of women philatelists in this country—to the department that it would be a graceful thing to place the likeness of a woman upon one of the stamps of the new issue. The idea met with instant approval, and the announcement made that a woman's portrait would adorn one of the stamps of the proposed series. Incidentally it was suggested that the department would be glad to have persons interested send in the names of famous American women eligible for the honor of a place in the gallery of postal issues.

As might have been supposed, a vast number of names of illustrious women were forwarded, but a large plurality favored bestowing the distinction upon Martha Washington, wife of the first president of the United States. After due deliberation the department decided that Martha Washington's likeness should be substituted for that of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, on the 8-cent stamp.

The next question was to discover a suitable portrait of Mrs. Washington, and this proposition occasioned no little difficulty. Portraits of this distinguished first lady of the land appeared to be hard to find, in fact there were but one or two pictures at all suitable, notwithstanding the entire country was ransacked by stamp collectors and others in the effort to dig up some new portrait of Mrs. Washington. The picture finally determined upon represents the lady, full facing, the old-fashioned "head dress" on her head, tied about her neck by wide strings of chiffon. The oval within which the face appears is surrounded by a wreath of laurel leaves, and the entire design is one of extreme beauty. The stamp is printed in a delicate lavender shade, and has been declared to be the most artistic postage stamp the United States has ever issued.

The decision to place the likeness of Martha Washington upon a postage stamp, supplementing one of the great generals of the Civil war, was duly exploited in the newspapers. It was declared that to Mrs. Washington would belong the distinction of being the first woman to be honored by a place on our postage stamps, and the department officials accepted this statement, until a collector called attention to the fact this honor did not belong to Martha Washington; that the claim had been pre-empted ten years previously by another woman, and a foreigner at that, in the person of Queen Isabella of Spain. Attention was directed to the $4 stamp of the Columbian series, issued to commemorate the Worlds fair at Chicago in 1893. Upon this stamp appeared the likeness of Queen Isabella and Christopher Columbus, side by side in ovals, the stamps being twice as large as our current stamps.

In addition to the large portrait on the $4 stamp Isabella is depicted on the 5 cent denomination where she sits upon her throne and listens to Columbus as he appeals to her for aid in fitting out the ships to make the voyage to an unknown part of the world. The 8 cent stamp depicts Isabella restoring Columbus to favor; the 10 cent denomination presents the scene where Columbus introduces to Ferdinand and Isabella the Indians who returned with him. Isabella sits upon her throne and hears the official announcement of Columbus of his discovery, according to the scene on the 15 cent stamp and upon the one dollar denomination is engraved the dramatic scene where Isabella pledges her jewels to aid Columbus in his undertaking. The picture on the $3 stamp shows Columbus describing to Isabella his third voyage to the Western hemisphere. Thus it appears that Queen Isabella has been exploited upon seven United States postage stamps.

The likeness of Isabella also adorned the stamps of Spain, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands from their first issues, until about 1870, a period of about sixteen years. Queen Isabella II, a lineal descendant, ruled over Spain from 1833 until in 1868 she was driven from the throne by revolutionists who could no longer tolerate her personal misconduct and moral shortcomings. She fled to Paris and died there less than two years ago, April 9, 1904.

Isabella II would not have succeeded her father at his death in 1833, had not her mother, Queen Maria Christina, prevailed upon King Ferdinand, to repeal that part of the Salic law in force since 1713 by which females could ascend the throne only in case of the total extinction of the male line. The edict of King Ferdinand restored the old Castilian law by which the daughters and granddaughters of the sovereign took precedence over his brothers and newphews. As Ferdinand had no sons, this new law insured the succession of Isabella II, and thus deprived the king's younger brother, Don Carlos of his successsion under the Salic law. Here we have the beginning of the Don Carlos troubles that racked Spain for so many years.

Isabella II, though only 3 years old at the death of her father was immediately proclaimed queen, under the regency of her mother who was a dissolute woman. Don Carlos took up arms and war reigned for seven years. When 16 years old Isabella II married her cousin. She was never very attractive, even in youth and in her later years was even less so.

In 1875 the armies proclaimed Alphonso XII, son of Isabella II, king. At that time he was in Paris, with his mother, but he immediately came to Spain, took charge of the armies and defeated the Carlists. He died in the latter "eighties," leaving a son, Alphonso VIII, the present king of Spain, who according to reports, is soon to marry the Princess Ena of England.

Isabella II was a good-hearted woman without personal enemies, and her faults were due largely to her surroundings at the time of her girlhood. The stamps of Spain, Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, bearing her likeness have always been favorites with collectors, and the Columbian stamp, issued by the United States in 1893, upon which her ancestor is depicted seven times, were perhaps the most popular series of stamps ever issued, although the two colored Pan-American or "Buffalo Exposition" stamps pressed them hard in popular favor.

The placing of the large portrait of Isabella upon the $4 Columbian stamp is the only instance where one government thus honored a person from another country.

BASEBALL YARNS.

Some Good Stories of Happenings on the Diamond.

One of the nerviest plays ever pulled off was one that Jimmy Ryan turned out at Colorado Springs when he was manager of that team says the Chicago Tribune. He had been keeping a second-rate team in first-rate position, and jumping into the game himself occasionally to win out.

Colorado Springs was playing Denver, and Denver had the game won—5 to 4 in the ninth inning. Two men were out, runners were on second and third, and a good hitter up. That is, he was a good hitter against right-hand pitchers, but on that afternoon a wild, fast young lefthander was working for Denver, and he was making Ryan's star hitter look foolish. Ryan had a notion to take the hitter out and go to the bat himself, but he decided to take a chance, but when the fellow swung at two wild pitches and missed the ball a foot each time, Ryan took action.

With two strikes and no balls called he took the man out of the game and went to bat himself. He knew what the crowd would say if he missed the third strike, so he nerved himself. After two fouls he slashed a two-bagger to right field—and won the game, becoming a hero.

Al Selbach is one of the best fellows and one of the best ball players in the business—but he had a weakness. He can't get the drives hit over his head—and he knows it. Perhaps you have noticed what a deep field he plays. he can come in faster than any one since Tim O'Neill's day—but he doesn't like to go back.

I was coming up the field in the polo grounds, looking at the paper when "Kip" caught a glimpse of his picture and came trailing along, looking over my shoulder and trying to read it. He saw the title.

"What does that guy say in there?" he asked.

Then I proceeded to read—making it up as I went along:

"How to play the left field—by Allen Selbach.

"The beginner in left field should observe, first of all, this most important rule: Place your back against the left-field bleachers, so they can't hit the ball over your head—"

"Does that guy say that?" demanded Kip.

And, from his tone of voice, it is well that the writer was not near just then.

George Huff, the University of Illinois manager, who has found more good young ball players than anybody in the world during the last few years, relates a new umpire story. He was playing in the old Three-Eyed league and there was a large, pompous umpire who could make more mistakes than a civil service examination candidate. The game was played at Danville, and in the eleventh inning, with a run needed to tie, a Danville player tried to score from second on a short hit, and was thrown out at the plate by a few inches.

The umpire called the runner out, the game was over, and in an instant the angry crowd surged across the field. That umpire took one look at the crowd, turned and fled, with the mob in pursuit. He caught a delivery wagon, leaped into it, and, while the driver whipped up his horse, he huddled down in the bed of the wagon and howled for more speed. He distanced the crowd and reached his hotel in safety, going to his room. The pursuers reached the hotel and gathered in the lobby all around.

The umpire had supper in his room, but still the crowd refused to disperse. Dozens lounged on the sidewalk, still angry, and "waiting to get a crack at the robber."

At 10:30 a window in the third story opened, and the besieged umpire stuck his head out. "Gentlemen," he called, "gentlemen, I reverse my decision. The man is safe."

Frank Isbell, Comiskey's veteran utility man, has one of the strangest throws in the business. He started as a pitcher, and if he had used that underhand ball then he would have made the opposing batsmen look foolish.

He made one of his widest throws in New York when he was playing with Anson's team. He was subbing at short because Dahlen was sick, and in a close place late in the game Anson pulled the infield close in to head off a runner at the plate. Van Haltren slashed a fierce one at Isbell, who scooped it, rallied, and made one of his copyrighted sidewheeler underhand throws. The ball went whistling past the pitcher's head. Anson made a wild grab up the line toward it, a couple of runners scored, and the game was lost. Going into town after the game Anson fell upon Isbell. "What did you suppose that infield was pulled in for?" he demanded. "Why didn't you throw to the plate, instead of making the play to first base?"

"I was trying to throw to the plate," said Issy—and that ends the argument.

FRANKLIN IN FRANCE.

John Hay in Century Magazine: Franklin became the fashion of the season. For the court itself dabbled a little in liberal ideas. So powerful was the vast impulse of free thought that then influenced the mind of France—that susceptible French mind that always answers like the wind harp to the breath of every true human aspiration—that even the highest classes had caught the infection of liberalism. They handled the momentous words Liberty and Human Rights in their dainty way, as if they were only a new game for their amusement, not knowing what was to them the terrible import of those words. It became very much the accepted thing at court to rave about Franklin. The young and lovely queen, Marie Antoinette, was most winning and gracious toward him. The languid courtiers crammed natural science to talk with him. The small wits who knew a little Greek called him Solon and Aristides and Phocion.

It is said to think af the utter unconsciousness of these amiable aristocrats. They never dreamed that this man Franklin was a portent and a prophet of ruin to them. He was incarnate democracy, and they petted him! They never imagined that in showering their good-natured homage upon this austere republican they were sowing the wind which would ripen in an awful harvest of whirlwinds. Later, when the whirlwinds had hardly got beyond the frisky stage of their development, the queen lamented bitterly the folly of these ovations to the great democrat. There was one sagacious head that was wisely shaken over these indiscretions while they lasted. Joseph II, emperor of Austria, brother of the queen, who was in Paris on his travels, and who was as much of a democrat himself as an emperor can be, when his sister rebuked his coolness on the American question, replied, "Madam, the trade I live by is that of a royalist."

Court incense could not turn the philosophic head any more than the loud acclaim of the people. When Franklin found himself the honored guest of royalty, his thoughts reverted to those faraway days of boyhood, when his father used to quote to him, in the old candle shop at Boston, the words of the wise man, "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings." The old sage heard the echo of that paternal voice resounding over half a century, and a new and strange light, as of prophecy fulfilled, illumined the immortal words. Surely, no man ever lived more diligent in his business. Surely no man ever stood, with more of the innate dignity of upright manhood, before kings.

WINTER PASTIME.

As is generally known, the charming town of Waldoboro, Me., included among its first settlers a successful colony of Dutch, says the Boston Herald. The names of Ulmer, Helmerhausen, Winchenbaum, Sidensparker and many others of Dutch or German origin are now borne by the most respected families of Knox and Lincoln counties, and the old Dutch Lutheran churches of Waldoboro and Bristol, both erected in the eighteenth century, are visited by all tourists to that section.

One winter evening the solons of the village were gathered in the general store, and, having tired of the discussion of the latest "hoss trades" and other local events, were amusing themselves with constructing a steer from the names of those present.

Mr. Hoof thought his name answered very well for a starter; Joe Sides thought he was worthy of place in the animal; John Horn considered that he would be ornamental as well as useful. Still the "critter" did not seem complete, when, by good luck, "Old Jim Onbehind" came in, and by unanimous consent it was voted that he would do very well for a tail.

50 Coats for Girls

Call to mind all the smart styles of coats for girls 10, 12 and 14 years old that have been brought out this season—and you've an answer to the kinds that are included in this lot of fifty stylish coats.

Coats of tweeds, broadcloth, cheviots and pretty mannish stuffs. Long, loose coats, swagger box effects, belted and loose backs. Some have velvet collars, others have rolling collars—even the military coat with its embroidered emblems is here. Blue, green, brown, garnet, gray, plaids and mixtures.

At the prices at which we offer these 50 coats it hardly needs saying that every mother around the city who has a girl from 10 to 14 years old that wants a new coat should be here tomorrow.

$6.25 For Coats Formerly Sold up to $15.00. | $2.98 For Coats Formerly Sold up to $6.50.

Women are in love with the New Suits

Those who have seen the new spring suits are delighted at the easy graceful styles and are surprised at the very moderate prices at which they are selling. Tomorrow we shall have a number of new arrivals on display, together with several styles of early spring coats.

Between Season Hats

It is a little too early and a little too cold to put on a decided Spring hat—and yet many women want a change from winter styles. The problem of what to wear is solved by these simple, pretty hats which we will show tomorrow. A great deal of delicate chiffon, maline and shirred silk, in colors and in black, is used—and shapes are new. Prices range from $2.00 to $6.00

Untrimmed Hats Almost Given Away

Whoever needs a workday hat—a hat for stormy weather or a hat to tide over the winter, can secure one tomorrow for a ridiculously small sum. A little velvet, a ribbon, a twist here and a kink there, will convert these felt turbans into stylish winter hats. Tomorrow they will be snapped up at..... 10c

HURRYING Out Odd Lots of Women's Shoes

Nobody has any right to expect such bargains with leather up in the air in price. It's because these are broken lots of winter and spring shoes that we must hurry out of the way of a big spring stock. Chances like this will be rare this year.

$1.25 for $2.00 shoes—next fall $2.00 will not put as good a quality of leather in a pair of shoes as you'll find in the shoes in this lot. Light and heavy shoes of vici kid, velour and box calf—lace or button styles.

$1.98 for $3.00 shoes, including many Belmar shoes, hand turned—button and lace styles—patent leather or kid tips. Every size in the lot in narrow widths. If you can get the width you wear the saving is worth double the bit of rummaging.

ONE QUARTER OFF on all warm felt and lined slippers and shoes, including every style in stock. They will be very comfortable for the next three months and this is a mighty good chance to get a pair that'll wear through the cold weather now and all next winter—at a price you cannot duplicate at the beginning of next season.

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

The "Marriage of William Ashe," which will be at the Lyceum Monday evening, is written from the novel of Mrs. Humphrey Ward of the same title. To the readers of the novel, contradictory emotions were aroused by the heroine, Lady Kitty and the following part explanation by Miss Grace George, who interprets the part will doubtless be of interest to many. Miss George writes:

"One naturally finds it difficult to impersonate a character that is not congenial; but in the case of Lady Kitty Ashe that obstacle, at any rate, does not exist. I like Kitty Ashe. Hers is a personality into which one can enter with enthusiasm. Its scope and variety make is a most interesting other self. Lady Kitty never does what is expected of her, and yet in her own way I feel that she is consistent. She is charmingly independent, and in that sense, at least, is ture to herself. There is an artistic pleasure in attempting to impersonate a character so alive with suprises as that of Lady Kitty. Apropos of Kitty's unexpectedness, I am led to speak of another reason why I am peculiarly drawn to her. That is because her. I can understand the rebellion in her heart toward a lot of people who were no worse than they should have been. To feel hopelessly different from those with whom one must associate is hard enough for any woman to bear, and disapproval always goes with it. I try to understand how hard it was for Kitty Ashe, with her high strung nature. Isn't there something brave, too, in her sense of humor, that ecould not always be staid and proper?

"Of course, Kitty was not really to blame. She inherited some traits that explained her behavior. Still, I do not think the book or play is a 'study in heredity,' as it has been called. It would be better to call it a study of character. Kitty, it is true, speaks of something amiss with her head—she has 'overpowering fancies;' but William Ashe desires her for her heart, and one knows that her heart is true. Kitty does not belong with the decadents any more than with the staidly respectable. She is a brilliant, cheerful, light-hearted creature, who would like just to keep on living happily without stopping to take thought of herself. She is too vivid for her surroundings, like a gorgeous butterfly in a sombrely furnished room. In the midst of her respectable English surroundings she seems to me altogether charming and piquant, because of her daring and her delight in administering shocks.

"No one, I think, can fail to sympathize with the wife of William Ashe. She is very brave in her unwisdom, if one regards it in the proper light. What is more, she is womanly in her love for her husband, and in her desire to help him. She does it in the wrong way, of course, but that is true to her nature. When she writes that shocking book about Lord Parham, there is really nothing on the face of it to excuse outrageousness of the blunder. Ashe turns his back upon her because, with his traditions, it is scarcely possible for him to do otherwise.

"There is nothing disagreeable to me in the character of Kitty Ashe; on the contrary, there is everything that is attractive. I endeavor to think of her past life in the French convent, far from the influence of British respectability, and of the kind of mother she had, so as to get the right perspective for the part; but, to my mind, she justifies herself by her own personality, which is attractive, sincere and impulsive.

"In making over 'The Marriage of William Ashe' into a play, no great changes have been necessary. The playwright has kept to the spirit and letter of the story, and the drama follows the novel closely in the order of events. An interesting point to be noted is that it is made clear to the auditor that Kitty's going away with Cliffs is no ordinary elopement, but that Kitty sincerely believes that she can be, as Geoffrey tells her, of use to the people of the Balkans. Incidentally, it has been thought necessary to lay stress upon the important part played by Cliffe in the development of the action; that he is, almost from the start, the dominant factor in Kitty's life, and the principal force which moulds her destiny, is made even more evident than in the book."

MISS SIMMS.

National Extension Secretary of Y. M. C. A. Coming.

Miss Florence Simms, national extension secretary of the Young Women's Christian associations, will arrive in this city this evening from Minneapolis. Miss Simms will visit Duluth in the interests of the local association and during her stay here will be the guest of Mrs. W. G. Agnew. Upon Sunday Miss Simms will present the work of the association at three churches. In the morning before the sermon she will speak at the Endion Methodist church at Nineteenth avenue east; following the sermon she will speak briefly at the First Presbyterian church. Miss Simms will also be the speaker at the devotional service at 4 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. rooms.

Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Agnew will entertain at a reception in honor of Miss Simms at her home, 1925 East First street. The association members and any interested in the work are invited to call between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock to meet Miss Simms.

Y. W. C. A. Banquet.

The committee in charge of the annual February banquet which will be given next Wednesday evening at the Young Women's Christian association are making careful preparations that the affair may be the most successful in the history of the organization. The banquet will be served at 6:30 o'clock at the rooms of the association and at the tables throughout the rooms the following hostesses will preside: Mrs. A. C. Taylor, Mrs. Z. D. Scott, Mrs. A. H. Smith, Mrs. I. S. Moore, Mrs. W. C. Sherwood, Mrs. H. W. Richardson, Mrs. J. O. Milne, Mrs. Brewer Mattocks, Mrs. C. A. d'Autremont, Mrs. G. H. Claypool, Mrs. Oscar Mitchell, Mrs. W. C. Agnew, Mrs. J. A. Stevenson, Mrs. R. S. Manley, Mrs. W. A. McGonagle, Mrs. Ward Ames, Mrs. S. E. Matter, Mrs. H. H. Phelps, Miss Jenny Moody, Miss Olive Horne and Miss Dora Eaton.

Events of Interest.

Mrs. E. H. Smith was hostess at luncheon today at her home, 2319 East First street. The table decorations were in pink and white and covers were laid for eight.

Miss Olga Korth was pleasantly surprised last evening at her home at the Northland hotel. The guests were the members of the German Lutheran church and the evening was pleasantly passed with games and music. The guest of honor was presented with a gold bracelet.

Saturday Club.

The Saturday club will hold its regular meeting tomorrow afternoon, at the club room of the library. Current events, in charge of Mrs. C. C. Ames, will be "News From the Countries." The program is in charge of Mrs. W. G. Bonham, and the following topics will be studied:

"Sketch of Eighteenth Century Literature," Mrs. J. M. Barnes.

"Special Work of Peter the Great," Mrs. W. G. Bonham.

Writers of the time:

"Lomonosov," Miss Washburn.

"Propokovich," Mrs. Spring.

"Tatihschev," Mrs. E. M. Kaltenbach.

"Kantemir," Mrs. H. S. Ely.

Card Party.

Mrs. William Benter entertained yesterday afternoon at a delightful card party at her home, 1818 London road. The guests were the members of Rathbone Sisters, and the card favors were won by Mrs. G. H. Nichols and Mrs. Robert Forbes. Those present were:

Two French Model Gowns Pretty for American Summer

Fig. 1 shows a costume of black voile laid over pale blue louisine, and with Chantilly lace and bands of black velvet.

The second gown is an embroidered robe in ecru cloth, the quality sufficiently light for spring wear. Both models are taken from L'Art et la Mode.

Smart Cloths Costume to Look Well Traveling

It is never so difficult to look well dressed as when traveling, whether by land or sea, and the woman who can appear neatly gowned at the end of a long journey deserves the highest praise. If taking an extended land trip across the continent or embarking upon the ocean voyage, which may be anywhere from five days to two weeks, depending upon whether the direct or the southern route is planned, there must be due time and consideration given to the selecting of traveling costumes.

The material of the suit must depend largely upon whether the South or West is to be visited, but for traveling the same shades are generally used no matter what the weather encountered.

Dark colors are always best, whether on the car or on board a steamer, and such shades as do not readily show the dust should be chosen. For this season the separate waist should be of the same color as the skirt rather than white. Dark blue is always an excellent shade for traveling, but there are many women to whom brown is more becoming and this is equally good. A black suit is best of some rough cloth, as broadcloth shows at once on its smooth surface all dust and dirt. Dark gray is another serviceable shade. Tan is not so good, but there are some tones in brown as well as in all the other colors which are more becoming than the deep shades and that will stand quite as much wear and tear. In all colors the rough cloths have proved most useful. Cheviot is always useful. Cheviot is always good and serge in the finer qualities is to be worn considerably this spring. For a very light suit mohair is excellent for traveling as it sheds all dust readily and does not show every spot and stain.

There is no question but that the simpler a traveling costume is the better. These are always being advertised as smart for traveling, elaborate coat and skirt costumes lace trimmed and embroidered, but the plainer garments are in infinitely better taste. Indeed it is hard to get a smarter model than the severe fitted three-quarter tailor coat with full skirt just clearing the ground.

In France long skirts are now being worn on all occasions, but so far American women have kept to the comfort of a short walking skirt.

Skirt models are not materially different from those of last spring. Plaids are more clustered, perhaps, but the same effect is sought, that is well fitted about the waist and hips and then wide flaring below the knees. There should always be provided a thin silk or crepe de Chine waist of the same color as the suit, for it is impossible to keep a white bodice fresh for any length of time in a train. This waist need not be expensive, the elaborate models being considered in rather poor taste for the cars. There may be lace at the throat and waists, but fine linen collars and cuffs, hem stitched or embroidered are exceedingly attractive and are being worn once more with all dark silk waists. The silk bodice need not be lined, for a boned and well fitted lawn or silk slip can always be worn if desired.

While the majority of waist models still button in the back, there are a few of the simpler silk bodices which fasten in front, the bottons hidden by a wide flap unless jewel studs are worn. With a black suit there should be some color on the waist as else it would look too much like a mourning costume.

sistent to doff this for a becoming shade hat of all white. This, however, is now fully approved by Dame Fashion, and white crepe hats—with no trimming not made from the material—are indeed so attractive as to make it difficult to believe that mourning is being worn. Black crepe hats may also be worn with the all white gowns and, it must be confessed, are preferred by the more conservative.

All wraps should be black, if not of crepe, at least crepe trimmed. However, on days sufficiently cool to allow of a coat being worn the all black dress is necessary.

Woman Invents Packing Aid to Keep Clothes Fresh in Trunks

A society woman who travels much has patented a clothes hanger that, her friends say, will revolutionize the old-fashioned methods of packing trunks and economize closet room in small flats, as well as in cramped travelling accommodations, not to mention being a boon to the short woman who now stands on chairs to reach the hooks in her closets.

The invention was not worked out because the woman wanted something to occupy her time, but because she spent ten months out of the year traveling, and to keep her clothes in condition it became necessary for her to rig up some kind of a contrivance that would keep them from getting mussed and wrinkled while in her trunks, and orderly when hanging in her closet.

Her greatest difficulty was in hotels in France and Germany, where the hooks were all so high that she had to stand on chairs to reach them. Several bad falls and a few black and blue spots as a result decided her upon attempting an invention that would enable her to reach the high hangers without endangering life and limbs.

A long narrow shank of wire with a big hook on the end was first thought of. The hook was to be attached to the high hangers in the closet, and on the bottom of it a wire coat support was attached by means of a screw. This was satisfactory, but to have one of these for every waist, jacket and coat, besides others for skirts, etc., would be a nuisance, so she studied out a plan to make a hat, skirt and jacket hanger all on one piece, and in this way have fewer to take up space in her trunk.

She accomplished this after much mathematical calculation by making a duplicate of the first hook and hanger and fastening it upside down with screws, so that it could be easily adjusted. In this way she had a hook at the bottom for a skirt hanger and the cross wire for a jacket or waist, and could use the wrap support at the top by reversing it, so that the prongs would be upright and could be used for hat hangers, or for another jacket when in a natural position.

Not content with an invention that would not meet all the needs for traveling, she went to work at the hanger in the hope of making it into some kind of an arrangement that would keep her gowns from being wrinkled when packed for several weeks. She found this the most difficult and yet the simplest of all the contrivances, and after days of struggles suddenly discovered that by turning both coat hangers outward and sharpening the ends, so that they could be fastened securely into the sides of the trunk, that she had the desired contrivance for keeping her dresses in place and a method of preventing them from slipping and rumpling when the trunk was rolled around and turned end over end. She immediately had enough of these shanks made for twelve complete hangers, and in packing her trunks, separated gowns, furs, coats, etc., by this new invention. A gown or perhaps three were carefully folded and placed in the trunk, and above them the invention was screwed into place. To make them attractive and hold the sides of the clothing more securely, ribbons were attached to the cross pieces and tied in pretty bows.

Smart Automobile Coat of Leather

SPRING AUTOMOBILE COAT
PHOTO BY JOEL FELDER

A decided novelty in automobile coats for spring is shown among the advance models, this being of the lightest weight tan leather, quite after the manner of cloth. The fullness is pleated into a short empire jacket and the fastening is double breasted. The sleeves are loose, coming into a deep cuff, and the top, from shoulder to wrist, is ornamented with a design in dark leather, piped with light.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Turkeys, 23 cents a ¾.

Beef hearts, 8 cents a lb.

Calves' liver, 20 cents a lb.

Strawberries, 60 cents a quart.

Green corn on cob, 40 cents a gallon can.

New potatoes, 10 cents a lb.

Florida tomatoes, 35 cents a lb.

Radishes, 8 cents a bunch.

Green corn on the cob, just as good as the fresh corn, is what one of the stores is offering the diner who is longing for something that he thinks can't be had. The corn is preserved in some way or other on the cob, and put up in gallon cans that contain eight ears. If prepared for the table and served at once, they can't be detected from the fresh corn. At least that's what the market man says. Better order some for your Sunday dinner.

Strawberries this week at only 60 cents a quart, will make many people take notice for, at a reduction of 5 cents a week, it won't be more than two or three months before nearly everybody can have these, the very nicest berries that grow, for the first course at breakfast, and the last course at the two other meals of the day.

Much White Now Worn During First Mourning

By A. T. ASHMORE.

For winter a mourning costume is apt to be rather smart than otherwise, but in warm weather it is not such an easy matter to be attractively gowned when deep black must be worn. In the South, therefore, this question must be agitated, despite the fact that no fashionable resort is supposed to be visited after the death of a near relative. Mourning, however, could scarcely be expected to exclude one from the relief of change of climate, and some spot can be selected that will only be visited by a very few of the most select.

In the city all black must be worn, even in the hottest weather, but for the country this rule is less stringent, and all white, as simply made as possible, is permissible, and, in fact, fashionable. Black and white is now only worn in second mourning. Today, however, there are certain materials in white, just as in black, which are set apart for mourning.

First among these is white crepe, a texture which is even prettier in white than in the black. As with the latter, this material is employed more as trimming in the place of lace and embroidery than to build up whole gowns. However, among the newest models for the evening is to be seen a gown made up throughout of exquisite white crepe, the only trimming being a little white grosgrain ribbon. In a fine white lawn gown for afternoon, instead of a lace yoke the white crepe may be used and bands or folds of this same crepe may trim the skirt.

For first mourning a white gown is only permissible when made up in some thin material, such as lawn, organdie or linen, the excuse being that black looks so warm, and is, therefore, so uncomfortable to wear in a tropical climate. Evening gowns should be of chiffon, chiffon cloth, crepe de chine, or some such material that is not uncomfortably warm. If for a member of the immediate family, the dress should be trimmed with crepe, which is all the time being used in greater quantities.

If only light mourning is being used, a white waist of any order may be worn with mourning. Just at first, however, only the simplest bodice is considered correct. A lawn waist, simply trimmed with insertions of crepe, is attractive. For traveling it is necessary to have some cool waist to wear under a heavy cloth jacket—the washable China silk is good, but crepe de chine is smarter. Dull finished taffeta silk makes a good shirt waist.

When the mourning requires a crepe hat and veil it seems decidedly incon-

Quaint Lace Nightcaps Are Fad Now of Wealthy

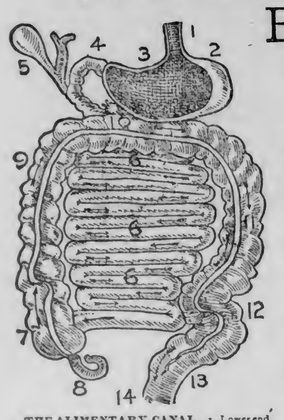

THE NEW DUTCH-SHAPED NIGHTCAP.

Women in the smart set of London have taken to wearing nightcaps, the Countess Fabbricotti being responsible for the revival of an old custom. The countess recently had a few made and shown in the millinery shop which she opened there a couple of seasons ago, and the quaint little caps caught on so that the demand for them has increased steadily.

Far from being ungainly and homely they are daintiest bits of lace and hand work that can be imagined, and are by no means inexpensive. A peeress not long ago paid $40 for one that fitted the head closely, after the fashion of a baby's cap. The sheerest materials are used, and the bonnets tie under the chin with white or light colored ribbons.

Their use is said to be really practical as regards the effect upon the hair. The cap keeps it in place, prevents tumbling, and aids in preserving the Marcel wave.

Your Thirty Feet of Bowels

THE ALIMENTARY CANAL. 1. Lower end of œsophagus (meat-pipe), which conveys the food from the throat to the stomach; 2. Cardiac end of stomach; 3. Pyloric end of stomach; 4. Duodenum; 5. Gall bladder; 6, 6, 6. Small intestines; 7. Cæcum; 8. Vermiform appendix; 9. Ascending colon; 10. Transverse colon; 11. Descending colon; 12. Sigmoid flexure; 13. Rectum; 14. Anus. The duodenum is continuous with the small intestines. The small intestine empties into the large intestine or colon at the cæcum. The arrows indicate the direction which the contents of the bowels must take in passing through the alimentary canal.

YOU have thirty feet of Intestines! What makes food travel through them?

A set of Muscles that line the walls of these Intestines or Bowels.

When a piece of Food rubs the walls of the Intestines these Muscles tighten behind it, and thus it starts a Muscle-wave which drives it through the whole length of the Bowels.

It should take about 12 hours to do this properly, so that nutritious parts of the food may have time to be digested and absorbed.

But,—If it takes twice or three times that period the food spoils in passing, and becomes as poisonous as if it had decayed before being eaten.

Now, the cause of delay (Constipation) is simply Weakness, or Laziness of the Bowel-Muscles.

Want of Exercise, Indoor Employment, weakens these Bowel-Muscles, just as it weakens Arm and Leg Muscles.

Castor Oil, or Glycerine, will grease the passages for one load of Food at a time, but these lubricants can't help the Cause of Delay.

* * *

"Physic" like Salts, Calomel, Jalap, Phosphate of Soda, Mineral Waters, simply flush-out the Bowels for the one occasion only.

They do not remove the Cause of Constipation.

Moreover, they waste so much of the precious Digestive Fluids, in the flushing process, that it takes a bigger dose every succeeding time to move the Bowel load.

But it is different with Cascarets.

Cascarets act on the Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines. They act just as Cold Water, or Exercise act on a Lazy man.

They act like exercise.

A Cascaret produces the same sort of Natural result that a Six Mile walk in the country would produce.

WILL SHOOT FOR SUPPER

Gathering of Gun Club Members on Washington's Birthday.

Hill Site is Decided on for Location of New Grounds.

Members of Duluth's new consolidated gun club, known as the Central, will hold a shoot at the Highland grounds next Thursday afternoon, Washington's birthday, for a supper to be served at the Commercial club in the evening. The affair will be conducted something along the lines of an old-fashioned spelling match, two leaders being selected to choose sides.

The shooters will be chosen from the members in attendance, good, bad and indifferent, and the losing side will be called upon to pay the bill for the supper, or dinner, whichever one may choose to call it. A. A. Farrington, president of the club, and J. W. Nelson, captain, are the two men decided upon as leaders of the two sides. Whichever wins the toss-up will be given first choice of the assembled enthusiasts. He will take one man, then the other fellow will take one, and so on down the line, until all are given places in the squads. This method will insure an equitable division of the shooters, so that each side will have poor shots among the cracks, making the chances of winning as nearly as possible. It will be a 25-bird event, and a good deal of fun is expected to result from it.

The vote of the members of the organization on the location of the site for the new club grounds favors the site on the top of the hill, near the incline railway. There were two sites under consideration, the one at the top of the hill and the other on the lake shore, at the spot which has been used by the Central club. The disadvantage about the latter location was that the lease on the property could be secured for only one year, whereas the other site can be secured for an indefinite period.

Up to the present time ninety-two votes have been cast to settle the site question, and sixty-six of them favor the hill-top site, while only twenty-six are for the other. There yet remain forty members who have not voted. It will need every one of these votes to even make a tie. This makes it appear as an absolute certainty that the hill location will be selected. Conditions there are ideal for shooting, and the grounds are only a few hundred feet from the car line, making it very convenient for the shooters.

Luckiest Man in Arkansas.

IS LOGICAL LOCATION

Public Sentiment Strongly Favors Selection of Courthouse Site.

Steps That Will be Taken to Acquire the Property.

The announcement made in yesterday's Herald that the board of county commissioners had decided to erect the new courthouse on the east half of the block containing the government building, a site on Fourth avenue west, between First to Second street, and that the board of courthouse commissioners had confirmed the selection, seemed to meet with expressions of favor from taxpayers all over the city. Even some of those who have advocated other sites admitted that as long as the commissioners could not be brought to their way of thinking, and were determined on a downtown site, the location selected is not objectionable.

Situated as it is, practically in the center of the city, about two blocks from the depot, only one block from Superior street, close to the business center, and yet near enough away to avoid the noise, even of the street cars, scarcely more than three or four blocks from the farthest office building whose occupants might have business at the courthouse, the site that has been selected is pretty generally looked on as the logical site, and comments are heard on every side commending the choice of the commissioners.

It is said that the location selected cannot be unfavorable to the West Duluth and the West end business interests, for the reason it is only about two blocks from the location they have advocated, that one being Eighth avenue west and Superior street. Aside from the wishes expressed through the representative of the commercial organizations of the western part of the city, sentiment has been strongly against going west of Fifth avenue west, or further east than Lake avenue. The site selected is regarded as far more preferable than the former site selected on Second street, because it cuts off a longer walk of a block up the hill.

The site is also regarded in a favorable light, because there are fewer improvements on the lots selected, to be paid for and disposed of, than on any of the other sites considered. The few frame residence buildings that are on the ground are old structures and of small value. It is not believed that as much elevation work will be necessary as in some other locations, and this, it is believed, will cut down a great deal of the prospective expense.

When the board of county commissioners adjourned yesterday noon, after Commissioner Charles Kauppi had advocated the east half of the postoffice block as the logical location for the new building, the prospects of any immediate agreement among the members as to a site seemed remote, in fact, it was not expected by very many of the commissioners themselves that any definite action would be taken toward determining a site at the meeting yesterday.

Through the noon hour, however, the commissioners looked over the ground at several proposed sites, including the Eighth avenue west location, and when they reached the courthouse for the afternoon session it was tacitly understood that there was only one site that had all the advantages and practically none of the disadvantages, and that was the site selected.

Comissioner McInnis, of Eveleth, introduced the resolution determining on the east half of the block bounded by First and Second streets and by Fourth avenue on the east. Comissioner Patterson moved its adoption and, without a word of discussion, the measure rereceived the unanimous vote of every commissioner present, and they were all there except Commissioner F. W. Kugler.

The prompt action of the board of courthouse commissioners which, as soon as it was organized, confirmed the selection made by the county board, evidenced the harmony between the two bodies and demonstrated that the idea of having a joint conference of the two bodies as to the selection of a site, was an advisable one in every way. Had there been no such conference it is regarded as possible that another month or more might have elapsed before definite action would have been had and the uncertainty regarding the courthouse prospects would have been prolonged.

The next move will be the county attorney's, as after the county auditor officially notifies him of the resolution of the county board and confirmation of the courthouse commission, he will start condemnation proceedings, within ten days, in the district court of St. Louis county.

The court has fifteen days within the time the petition is filed, to file the names of three appraisers with the clerk of district court. These appraisers must all be residents of this county, and the county shall pay their compensation, the amount to be fixed by the court.

Under the law passed by the last legislature the appraisers will proceed in the usual way, and must begin appraisal in not less than ten or more than twenty days from the date of their appointment. Owners of property proposed to be taken must be given notice of the meeting of the appraisers at least five days prior to such meeting.

The award of damages by the appraisers must be made and filed within sixty days from the date of the order appointing them, with the clerk of the district court, and with the county auditor.

Either party will then have thirty days in which to appeal to the district court from the award of the appraisers. The cause shall, in case of an appeal, come on for trial as any other action might in district court, except that the only question to be submitted to the jury, if the parties do not agree to try the whole cause to the court alone, shall be the question of damages.

At any time after the filing of the award of the appraisers the board of county commissioners may set aside from the general revenue fund of the county a sum equal to the amount assessed as damages by the appraisers, and make the same payable to the persons who the appraisers determine are entitled to damages, for the ground appropriated for public use.

The law provides that, at any time after the county board has adopted the resolution to start condemnation proceedings, the county attorney may file in the register of deeds office a notice of lis pendens, describing the property involved. This action is likely to be taken immediately by the county attorney. It will effectually shut out the attempt of any other person or interest in seeking to acquire the property while the county is after it.

It is understood that the half block that has been chosen is valued somewhere in the neighborhood of $125,000. The price that the county has to pay will be determined by the appraisers.

GIRL ORDAINED AS MINISTER

Hosier Girl's Zeal and Bible Knowledge Win Her Title.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 16.—Miss Una Dell Berry, daughter of Mrs. Helen M. Berry of West Lafayette, has been ordained a minister of the gospel. It is the first ordination of a woman in the history of the city and Miss Berry's case is unusual in more ways than one. From early girlhood she has taken a deep interest in church work and has devoted all of her time to it. Possessed of a beautiful soprano voice she has led revivals and has taken part in nearly every service of the First Christian church for several years, and in revival movements in many places. Miss Berry is still in her teens, but she has a remarkable knowledge of the Bible and other religious teachings. On examination she was found well qualified to become a minister.

EACH KIDNAPER FOILS THE OTHER

Father and Mother Seek Child and Both Get Scolded.

Columbus, Ind., Feb. 16.—"Two souls with but a single thought," is an expression that usually conveys the idea of joy and happiness, but not in the instance of Mr. and Mrs. H. Oldham, son and daughter-in-law of Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Oldham of this city, who met at the interurban station in this city after a separation of several months. Each attempted to kidnap the child that was in the other's possession and the result was that a commotion was raised that had to be quelled by a policeman.

Mr. and Mrs. Oldham have been separated since November. She has been living at Fairland and he has been in this city with his parents. When they separated it was agreed that she should take the girl and that he would take the boy.

During the separation there grew a strong desire on the part of each of the parents to see the absent child, and a correspondence resulted in their meeting here yesterday.

Just before the 5:40 o'clock car left for Indianapolis, Mrs. Oldham tried to get possession of her son and at exactly the same time Mr. Oldham attempted to kidnap his daughter. The children set up a wail, which gave the whole thing away, and the parents got into an argument that was settled by Marshal Horton, who happened to be in that neighborhood. He advised them to return home and that each take the child of the first choice.

WOMAN FLEES IN SNOWSTORM

Half Frozen, She Fights Overtaking Officers With Club.

Carmi, Ill., Feb. 16.—Outwitting two county sheriffs in their attempt to hold her prisoner, Mrs. Louise Whiffen, aged 40, escaped from the county jail here and fled thirty miles in a blinding snowstorm before the jailer discovered her empty cell.

Three years ago, Mrs. Whiffen was arrested on a larceny charge in McLeansboro, Ill. She savagely battled with the officer, and was taken after a desperate struggle to the county jail there and imprisoned. Ten days later she escaped and was not seen again until last November. Sheriff Buck found the woman visiting near McLeansboro, and went after her. While reading the warrant for her arrest she opened fire and felled the officer. Badly wounded, he arose and overpowered her. He rushed her to the jail here for safe keeping. She was held on the charge of shooting to kill.

While a ruinous snowstorm was raging and the wind muffling all round, she heated a poker and burned away the wood casing of her door lock. Scantily clad, the daring woman rushed out in the snow and boarded a freight train. The next day officers traced her to Thackery, where she was discovered in an abandoned hut half frozen. Two officers made a rush for the place, and were in turn attacked by the woman, who beat them back with clubs. Finally she was overpowered and hauled away.

ACTRESS INSISTS SHE ISN'T TOO OLD AT 47.

Paris, Feb. 16.—Mlle. Dudlay, former leading lady in classic tragedy at the Comedie Francaise and full member of the company, that is to say, drawing a full share of profits, since 1883, is in difficulties with the managing committee of her fellow actors, from which the actresses are excluded. The quarrel is a delicate one as it turns on the question of the lady's age. Three years ago she received a letter from the committee saying that the latter had unanimously agreed to retain her services "on condition that she should confine herself in future to playing tragic mothers and queens." She has done so whenever she has had the chance since then, but the committee gave her as few chances as possible, and now wants her to retire altogether. The lady's grievance is that she has been purposely left without parts, having in one year drawn her member's share of $7,000 for exactly one-quarter of an hour's work in the entire twelve months, namely, the recital of the "Marseillaise" at the July 14 National Fete free matinee. The committee now alleges this very argument in favor of her retiring. "I am too old, am I?" exclaimed the lady; "why, I know twenty actresses in Paris who play jeunes premieres, and are 5, 10, 15, 20 years older than I. I played tragic mothers when Sarah Bernhardt was still acting vestal virgins"—and the biographers say that Mlle. Dudlay was born as late as 1859.

RAM STOPS BIG RAILROAD PLANS

Guardian of Farmer's Field Routs Pennsylvania Engineer Party.

West Point, Ohio, Feb. 16.—A bellicose ram has stopped the survey for the proposed cut-off of the Pennsylvania railroad from Smith's Ferry, Pa., to Kensington, Ohio, where a connection is to be made with the main line of the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad. Civil engineers had staked out a line through the farm of James N. Stewart, when the ram strolled away from a flock of sheep and limbered into butting apparatus.

Then things began to happen rapidly. The atmosphere was perforated with flying civil engineers who, as fast as they alighted, were shot into space again by catapult-like charges. One engineer, who had just described a parabola through the air and landed on the back of his neck, in desperation seized the ram's horns. This gave the rest a chance to escape and there was an immediate hegira. From the safe side of a barbed-wire fence the crowd caressed sundry bruises, while they watched the line engineer in his frantic struggle to hang on.

Just as the latter, his grip fast weakening, was wondering whether his remains would look like ice or not, Farmer Stewart appeared, and with a red bandanna blindfolded the ram.

The engineers refuse to go back to work until the ram is removed. Stewart thinks the ram would be homesick if taken away, and is not particular about having the line run through his farm, anyway. Thus far Chief J. H. Semple has failed to arrange a truce.

Farmer Makes in West What He Lost in Indiana.

Plymouth, Ind., Feb. 16.—Fourteen years ago Amas B. Peters was a well-to-do farmer in the vicinity of Lapaz, and he also engaged in other enterprises which made him a free borrower of money. His enterprises proved unsuccessful and he was compelled to make an assignment. His total indebtedness exceeded $10,000. Mr. Peters surrendered all his property, himself and wife reserving only their clothing and a few household goods, less in value than $200, but the receiver was only able to pay a dividend of 6 per cent.

Many unpleasant things were said of Mr. Peters by his former neighbors because of his indebtedness, and he left the country, going to Chicago, where a friend aided him in getting transportation to North Dakota, and recently he returned to his old home, paid a dividend of 40 per cent on the indebtedness long since outlawed, and served notice that in time every dollar would be returned.

It is unnecessary to add that he is now being received with open arms.

BABY WAS DEAD IN SNOWDRIFT

Tiny Annie Woods and Dollies Lost Way in Storm.

Gravette, Ark., Feb. 16.—Lying beside a little mound within fifty yards of her home at Mayville, and with her dolls clutched in her arms, the body of 3-year-old Annie Woods, for whom a posse of 100 men had searched more than a week, was found.

Annie wondered from her home during a snowstorm. All kinds of rumors were started as to the cause of her absence. Some believed that she had been devoured by wild animals, others that she had been kidnaped.

So deep was the sympathy for the mother, who became hysterical from grief and worry, that a posse was organized at Mayville and fully 100 men began a daily search which had lasted until the tiny form was discovered. Sunday fully 500 men took part in the hunt.

All hopes of ever finding the child had been given up when a Cherokee Indian named Hildebrandt, stumbled over the body. It was lying within fifty yards of the Woods home.

The manner in which Annie met her death could easily be traced. She had wondered from her home in the snowstorm and had lost her way in the woods. Finally growing tired she lay down beside the mound. Then the snow covered her little body and thus she died.

The hunters in their search on horseback frequently passed within a few paces of where Annie lay. On the night of her disappearance a great bonfire was built within fifty paces of where she had gone to sleep. At that time she must have been alive, but apparently was not aroused by the great commotion near her.

The drift under which the body lay did not melt for several days, and then when Hildebrandt passed the spot he saw the body.

FREE READING ROOM

Opened at Hibbing by Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, an organization of young men under the leadership of Rev. Charles P. Bates, formally dedicated the free reading room, that they with the help of their friends have established in Hibbing. There is no Y. M. C. A. here, and there has been no reading room or place of any kind in town where young men can congregate during their leisure hours. The Brotherhood was organized by Mr. Bates about a year ago in the Presbyterian church. There were thirteen charter members, and now the organization has a membership of about fifty. Although the Brotherhood started as a Presbyterian organization, it has been opened to any young man of good habits, regardless of church relations. The pastors of all the churches in Hibbing, including Father Gamache of the Catholic church, are heartily cooperating with Mr. Bates and the young men in furthering this society.

Samuel G. McConaughy of Duluth delivered a splendid address to the young men and their friends at the formal dedication of the free reading room last night. The people were very kindly favored with vocal solos by Mrs. Louise McPike, Mrs. Geiser, Mr. Harry Angst, Miss Bardesono, Mr. Ned Kennedy and Miss Peterson. Miss Ruth H. Bates gave a beautiful piano solo. Father Gamache delivered a splendid talk, full of good advice to the young men. Rev. Frank Durant of the Episcopal church was to have spoken also, but was called out of town. Rev. Rupert Swinnerton was also detained elsewhere.

Scott L. Holtzlander, president of this chapter of the Brotherhood, had charge of the program and called upon several of the members to say a few words. R. G. Lacy gave a fine talk, full of snap and energy, and appreciation of what Rev. Mr. Bates, as well as others, have done for the boys. T. S. Stilliman also delivered a splendid talk. Harold E. Mitchell talked about the early organization of the Hibbing chapter in a very pleasing way.

A very important part of the program was the initiation of three new members, T. R. Hubbard, L. W. Brown and Prof. Boerner. The initiation was conducted by the chaplain of the Brotherhood, Rev. Mr. Bates.

MAYOR IS SENT TO AN ASYLUM

Friends Appeal to Court to Stop His Protracted Spree.

Knoxville, Iowa, Feb. 16.—Mayor Alexander of Chariton has been taken to the Iowa inebriate asylum to serve a term of one year—a fate that overtakes habitual drunkards, when so decreed by the state courts. His unwilling departure leaves the city in a peculiar predicament—that of practically being without a city government, as three of the six city councilmen are out of the city, so no quorum can be secured, even if one of the three were acting mayor.

Councilman Funk has moved to Ohio, Councilman Frank Manning is on an extensive trip to California and Mexico, and Councilman J. H. Darrah is serving in the Iowa legislature. Mr. Darrah offered to resign as a member of the council before he went to Des Moines, but his fellow-members urged him to remain, as the offices do not conflict.

Whether the city will run without government until the honorable mayor returns from Knoxville, or the city council will go to Knoxville to hold its meetings, in order to secure a quorum, is not known. Mayor Alexander has shown no inclination to resign, in spite of the predicament that has been brought to the city by his being sentenced to the inebriate asylum. The citizens feel their position keenly, and a petition is being talked of to demand his resignation. They say the idea of a city of 5,000 population having its mayor in the inebriate asylum is too much.

Mayor Alexander was in bygone years a heavy imbiber of intoxicants, but about ten years ago resolved to live a temperate life, and since that time, until the death of his wife, last fall, was not known to be intoxicated. During the last days of his wife's sickness he started drinking again, and since then has been drinking heavily most of the time. At the October term of court, his friends took steps to have him sent to the inebriate asylum for his own good, and the district court issued an order sending him to Mount Pleasant, but the order was withheld in the hope he would quit drinking. He did not, however, and another order was secured from Judge Roberts, committing him to the Knoxville asylum for treatment for one year. He has been placed in the asylum.

PACKED $6,000 IN CHESTNUTS

Uncle Sam Rewards Spinsters' Faith by Carrying It Safely.

Ravenna, Ohio, Feb. 16.—Because they were afraid of banks and didn't need the money, anyhow, the Misses Adelia and Lucy Clapp sent $6,000 to a cousin in far-away Oregon, shipping it by unregistered mail in a tin box with chestnuts for packing.

This tale of rare generosity and postal fidelity was told in court today by the spinster ladies themselves, and was corroborated by the cousin. Their appearance was caused by a suit brought against the sisters by the county, for $1,000, alleged to be due in back taxes on $5,000, which the sisters received from the sale of land several years ago.

The sisters testified that when the land was sold they debated the matter, decided so much money was really an inconvenience, packed it in a tin box with chestnuts and sent the whole thing by mail to their cousin, Mrs. Rose Brown, 4,000 miles away in Oregon.

"We didn't want to keep the money in our own home for fear of burglars," said Miss Adelia, "and we have no faith in banks. So many of them go to smash these days. Then we thought of Rose and we knew she could use the money to much better advantage than we, for she is married. If we kept it and spent it the whole amount would have gone simply for luxuries we dont need, and are probably better without. So we sent Rose the money."

Mrs. Rose Brown, the cousin, also testified and triumphantly produced the very tin box in which the money was sent, corroborating entirely the statements of the sisters. The chestnuts were not produced.

The sisters won the suit, for the jury found the county had no cause for action.

HUMAN PENDULUM HERO.

An Ingenious Boy Saves His Marooned Skating Companion.

York, Pa., Feb. 16.—Breaking through the ice, 19-year-old Louis Gangloff landed on a rock in about four feet of water about eight feet from the bank. He could not swim and his companions on the bank could not reach him, as the water is very deep at that point.

Edward Selak finally espied a wire hanging from a tree directly over Gangloff's head. He wrapped the wire around his hands and swung off from the bank. Gangloff clutched his feet and the two boys swung to and fro until the boys on the bank were able to reach Gangloff and pull him in.

TIDAL WAVE CAUSED SOME LOSS OF LIFE.

Panama, Feb. 16.—Confirmation of the reports of loss of life by a tidal wave, following an earthquake on Jan. 31, has been brought here by the captain of the steamer Quito, which has arrived from Guayaquil. On Jan. 31 several coast villages in the department of Cauca were destroyed and more than fifty persons were killed or drowned. On the same day an earthquake, lasting several minutes, was felt in the interior of Colombia.

The cable repair ship has not yet succeeded in restoring communication with Buena Ventura. It is understood the line was very badly damaged.

FATAL COLLISION IN BOSTON YARDS.

Boston, Feb. 16.—The Pacific express train on the Boston & Albany division of the New York Central system, which left the south union station for Chicago and other Western points, via Buffalo, at 8 o'clock last night, was wrecked in the Huntington avenue yard, about a mile from the terminal. Melke Johanssen, 14 years old, of Stockholm, Sweden, was killed, five were seriously hurt and several sustained minor injuries.

The express train was making good headway when it collided, head-on, with a moving string of empty coaches. Three cars in the center of the express train received the full force of the backing train and were piled up at a switch point. The majority of the passengers were emigrants going West. The railway authorities made up another train and all the passengers who escaped injury continued their journey.

CATARRH THE PLAGUE OF WINTER

Every Catarrh sufferer dreads the return of cold weather, for at the first cold breath of the season this plague of Winter is fanned into life with all its miserable symptoms. The nostrils are stopped up, and a constant dropping of mucus back into the throat keeps up a continual hawking and spitting, the patient has dull headaches, ringing noises in the ears and a half sick, depressed feeling all the time. Every inner lining and tissue of the body becomes inflamed, and secretes an unhealthy matter which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and the disease becomes constitutional. The catarrhal poison brings on stomach troubles, affects the Kidneys and Bladder, attacks the soft bones of the throat and head and if not checked leads to Consumption. A disease so deep-seated and dangerous cannot be washed out, neither can it be smoked away. Sprays, washes, inhalations, etc., are useless, because they only reach the membranes and tissues, while the real cause of the disease is in the blood. S. S. S. cures Catarrh because it attacks it through the blood; it goes into the circulation and drives out all unhealthy accumulations and catarrhal matter, and when this is done every part of the system receives a supply of rich, pure blood. Then the inflamed membranes and tissues heal, all discharge ceases, the depressed feeling of the body is relieved, and every symptom passes away. S. S. S. goes to the very root of the trouble, and by purifying and enriching the blood and building up the entire system, cures Catarrh permanently. If you have Catarrh do not waste time with local remedies, but begin S. S. S. and write for our book and any medical advice without charge.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN DULUTH

TO SUBSCRIBERS:

It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed to give both old and new addresses.

AN APPRECIATION.

Albert Lea Standard: If there is a more able, independent and cosmopolitan daily paper than The Duluth Herald, we do not know of it, and it sets an example to the Twin City papers that is far from flattering in comparison. The Herald ought to move to St. Paul or Minneapolis and show them how easy it is to run a newspaper that is big enough to prondly cover the field it occupies.

A SPLENDID SITE.

In designating as the site for the new St. Louis county courthouse the half-block just east of the federal building on First street, extending back to Second street, the board of county commissioners has chosen wisely and well.

While The Herald has always consistently stood for a downtown site for the new courthouse, it has championed no particular location in the downtown district, believing that the commissioners were amply capable of looking the field over and acting for the best interests of the county and its people. This, in The Herald's opinion, the commissioners have proved by their action of yesterday.

The First street site is admirably adapted to the convenience of those whose business involves visits to the courthouse. It is close to the railroad station, so that range visitors can do their errands quickly and still leave ample time between trains for other business or for shopping. It is within two blocks from practically all of the professional offices of the city, 95 per cent of which are within the two blocks running from Third avenue west to Fifth avenue west. Its closeness to the federal building will prove a convenience for those looking up titles and who have to consult the federal court records as an incident to the search, and the fifty feet of space east of the federal building, which will always be vacant, will provide ample light and air for that side of the courthouse building even if it is built closely up to the western line of the property. In short, there is no site that has been suggested or could be suggested that would meet so many demands and afford convenience to so many people.

The commissioners have shown great wisdom in selecting this site, and they have earned the applause of the people throughout the county who are interested in the location of the courthouse. For the courts and the lawyers who practice before them, the advantage of being on a street without a carline to make disturbing noises will be highly appreciated.

Under a law passed by the legislature last winter, the county is enabled to condemn the property for courthouse purposes, thus ensuring that it will be secured at a fair price. What this price will be, of course, cannot now be determined, but the courts will pass upon it, assuring a fair deal for the county.

There has been talk of buying a part of the proposed site for the extension of the federal building, but a bill to that effect has now been pending in congress for three sessions, without getting any farther. There is no assurance that it ever will be passed, and if it does the purposes of the government will be served quite as well by extending the building north to Second street as it could by extending it east to Fourth avenue.

The county board has performed its share of the work of arranging for a new courthouse with great credit to itself, and if the remainder of the task continues as smoothly the county will be able to heartily congratulate itself.

CANADIAN BANKS.

Our fellow citizens from over the Canadian border are often given to telling us how much better certain things are done over there than they are here, a custom that is likely to involve the parties concerned in fruitless argument. There is one point, however, on which they are particularly fond of making comparison, where it is very hard indeed for the American to make an argument that will give his side of the case a favorable showing, and that is on the banking business.

Canada has probably the best, the soundest and the most serviceable banking system in the world, and the Montreal Standard has been led by the remarks of Banker Schiff of New York about the currency system to make a comparison between American and Canadian banking systems. It was an occupation in which the Canadians must have taken great pleasure, for it shows up their system to be immeasurably superior to ours. While it may be doubtful if the immense volume of business in this country could be carried on upon the conservative, rather ponderous and yet eternally secure plan of the Canadian banking system, there can be no doubt that this country could copy many of the Canadian methods and profit thereby.

The Canadian system is composed of great central banks with branches all over the dominion, with a free interchange of business between all the different branches and the center. Our system is just the opposite, each bank, ostensibly at least, standing upon its own bottom and doing business in its own way. One can start a bank on $25,000 in this country, and the money need not even be deposited, while in Canada, according to the Standard, one must deposit with the government $250,000 in gold, together with a list of bona fide stockholders to the amount of $500,000, liable for twice their subscriptions, so that the public has actually a guaranty of $1,000,000.

The Montreal paper also claims that the United States system makes for restriction of circulation, while the Canadian system stands for elasticity, the thing most needed in this country, according to Banker Schiff and others.

A strong point in favor of the Canadian system, according to Duncan M. Stewart, general manager of the Sovereign bank, is that it results in uniformity of interest rates, whereas in the United States rates may on the same date run all the way from 2 per cent to 6 per cent in different parts of the country. While this country is fortunate in the possession of a great many very sound and very strong banks, the credit is due to the banks themselves and those who have made them rather than to the banking system under which they were built up.

EXPERIMENT A FAILURE.

South Carolina is about to put an end to her interesting experiment, the state saloon, otherwise known as the dispensary system, and thereby confesses that it is a failure.

Theoretically, it should have been more of a success. So long as the state permits men to indulge their appetites for strong drinks, it sounds reasonable that if the state provides a limited number of dispensaries, selling the best quality of liquor at moderate prices and surrounding its sale with wholesome regulations designed to remove some of the temptations to surplus drinking, it ought to result not only in a financial success, but in curbing some of the evils of the saloon and rendering it less a menace to society than it too often proves itself to be.

But it did not work out that way, apparently. One very fine theory about it was that it did away with drinking on the premises. A man could go to the dispensary and buy a quantity of liquor and take it home with him, but he could not invite a friend in to have a drink, which custom is the most potent producer of drunkenness in existence. The treating habit leads to excessive drinking, since when one buys his friends a drink around, often each friend feels obligated to respond in kind, so that by the time every man has responded discretion is drowned in alcohol and things begin to happen.

It was this very feature that proved the making of numerous "blind pigs," where poorer liquor at higher prices was dispensed in prodigious quantities, because people sought them for the "social glass" the dispensary refused them.

As to profit, the state found its dispensary system less remunerative than a high license would be, and for these reasons the South Carolina legislature is engaged in doing away with its dispensary system and paving the way for a return to the high license arrangement, which will be ameliorated, probably, by local option provisions that will bar liquor from communities that want it barred.

SEEKING PIRATE GOLD.

Strikingly human and characteristic of one of man's greatest weaknesses is the story of William S. Meade, a man of 80, who died not long ago penniless and alone, in a New York lodging house.

Meade was an inventor, and through a lucky hit some years ago he suddenly found himself in possession of a fortune of $250,000. Then he resolved to use his money in following out a dream that he had long entertained.

Pirates, according to song and story, used to proudly sail about the Spanish main, carrying on a warfare against society that resulted in large accumulations of wealth. There are yarns innumerable about places where these pirates buried their stores of gold and jewels. Meade had read of these things, probably from boyhood days, and it was to the romantic search for buried pirate treasure that he dedicated himself and his fortune. He was not content with what he had, which was more than enough. There was a glitter and fascination about pirate gold that his fancy could not resist.

The result is that he never found any buried pirate wealth, but that he buried his own fortune in the search, and so came, at the end of his days, to find himself dying alone, penniless and forlorn.

It is the same old tempting, beckoning, fascinating beguiler of men, the idea of getting something for nothing. Meade is not the only man who has wasted his life and his substance hunting for pirate gold. Thousands of men with the capacity of acquiring wealth by industry and diligence have frittered away their opportunities seeking royal roads to wealth. They hunted pirate gold. The hunters of something for nothing, which is another name for pirate gold, have been the fruitful prey of bunko-steerers, great and small, through all the ages.

The farmer that used to buy gold bricks and green goods was a seeker after pirate gold. The victims of the get-rich-quick swindlers were seekers after pirate gold. The men who risk their positions, their prospects, their honor and their futures upon will-o'-the-wisp speculations are seekers after pirate gold.

Pirate gold is a delusion and a snare. Honest, intelligent, faithful and persistent effort is the only satisfactory way to get ahead. While seekers after pirate gold are dying penniless and forsaken, the workers who banish such dreams—for they come to all men—are finishing their days in peace and comfort and the respect and confidence of their fellows.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"In some parts of the West where irrigation of lands could be used to the greatest advantage there is no irrigation at all, the inhabitants depending entirely upon the rain fall," said H. G. Jefferson of San Francisco, at the Spalding. "It is surprising, for instance, to one accustomed to irrigation and its value, to note the indifference of the people on the Salinas River valley in my own state, to the value of irrigation.

"It seems that the usual rainfall so nearly meets the needs of the valley as a whole, as to make the people there depend upon it. If they ware forced to irrigate they would do so and triple their land values and quadruple their products in three years' time. Irrigation everywhere marks the difference between certainty and uncertainty, between scientific farming and mere speculation. The inhabitants of the valley have learned to depend too strongly upon grain crops. They have grown wealthy with too little necessity for new ways to get the greatest returns from their work and property.

"This would be all right were it not for the fact that the valley would be one of the easiest places in the entire country to irrigate. I know of one scientifically farmed ranch in the valley. It has six thousand acres of diversified products, in which dairying and cattle-raising predominate. The ranch has paid every year, for it is well managed, yet not until two years ago was alfalfa raised, and not until last year cut for feed. The valley gives four crops a year of alfalfa, but alfalfa requires more water than the land owners can give it without irrigation, and so they are at an actual money loss every year on this account, where a little money spent in irrigation, especially among the stock raisers, would yield rich returns through the medium of alfalfa.

Tilton E. Lewis, a clerk in the St. Louis hotel, is a handsome young man, but only a few of his intimate friends are aware of the fact that, when properly dressed, he appears as a pretty and dashing girl, setting the hearts of admiring males to wildly thumping in their bosoms when his attention is turned in their direction.

All this was shown to be true at a recent meeting of a secret society, it is said. There was quite a large class of candidates for membership to be admitted, and they had only a hazy notion of just what riding the goat in this particular lodge would consist. They were very curious to know, naturally, and in the due course of events found out for themselves.

The most surprising thing about the affair to most of the candidates was the fact that there was a woman in the room, who seemed to be taking an important part in the ceremonies. None of the lot had any idea that a woman was to be included in the ceremonies, and the wonder grew to astonishment when they saw that she evidently was to take part in the work of initiating. That she was young and strikingly pretty, with a charming smile and much grace of movement, made the fact all the more disconcerting, for, it is said, the would-be members were scantily clothed in readiness for some part of the ceremony where an abundance of wearables appears to have been considered unnecessary.

Some of the men were young bachelors and some were old and long-married, but none was exempt from the fascinating smile and soft-voiced attentions and caresses of the girl, who, of course, was Mr. Lewis. Men who had not felt embarrassed for years grew red in the face and looked at each other foolishly. The fun of those who had inside information may easily be imagined. Most of the candidates have not yet learned of the deception practiced upon them.

LINES TO A SMILE.

Chicago Tribune: "Paw, can an honest man play poker?"

"Yes, Tommy—but he can't win anything."

Kansas City Journal: Old Bill Missgimmons of Belleville remarked to Tom Pendergrast, as he sat down gingerly on on one edge of a dry goods box: "Tom, did you ever see a gol durn boil just where you wanted it?"

"Yes," said Tom, "the one on you is exactly all right for me."

Chicago Tribune: "I like this make of automobile better than any other in the whole show," said the girl in the fur jacket, with enthusiasm.

"Why is it better than the rest of them?" asked the girl with the three-cornered hat.

"I was knocked down by one like this the other day, and it didn't hurt me a bit."

Back to the People.

Nebraska State Journal: One of the candidates for the United States senate in Michigan has asked the Republican state central committee to include in the call for the next convention the nomination of a senator, who shall be elected in case the party controls the next legislature. This is a movement toward the people that one would hardly expect to see in a state that sends so many millionaire lumber men to the upper branch of congress. Nevertheless it is decidedly in the line of present day tendencies, and will without doubt meet with the approval of the rank and file of the party.

The Remorseless Clock.

And look it in the face,
I'll maybe feel a solemn shock,
It's frequently the case,
It talks in a remorseless tone—
I wish it would relent—
About the day, no more my own,
And how that day was spent.
—Washington Star.

THE WEATHER

Though last night was the mildest in several days, the lake was frozen over this morning, and if the wind will only hold off a little longer the permanent ice field will be formed and the iceman made as happy as the coal man has been during the cold weather. It continued to grow milder yesterday afternoon and evening, and this morning it was partly cloudy and almost genial in temperature.

The lowest temperature last night was 7 degs. below, and yesterday's highest was 14 degs. above. The weather man expects still warmer weather tonight, with a temperature between 10 and 15 degrees above zero. Snow flurries tonight and Saturday are also possible. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The lake region high barometer area remained about stationary, but it caused a drop to zero weather in the Adirondacks. The Alberta low pressure center moved somewhat northward attended by higher temperature in Northern Saskatchewan. A depression developing in the Southwest is responsible for a further increase in warmth in the lake region and districts lying between the Mississippi river and Rocky mountains. It is followed by colder weather and increasing pressures in the Rocky mountains. Precipitations was light and over scattered areas only. Conditions favor light snow flurries in this section tonight and Saturday, and it may turn a little colder Saturday afternoon."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, Feb. 15.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Saturday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday, with possibly snow flurries. Warmer tonight, with temperature between 10 degs. and 15 degs. above zero. Cooler Saturday afternoon or night. Fresh westerly winds.

H. W. RICHADSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Saturday: Wisconsin: Generally fair tonight and Saturday. Rising temperature.

Minnesota: Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday. Warmer in east and colder in west portions tonight.

North Dakota: Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday. Cooler in south portion tonight. Warmer Saturday.

South Dakota: Generally fair tonight and Saturday. Colder tonight. Warmer Saturday.

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

Bemidji Sentinel: Go ahead, boys, and nominate a candidate for governor on the Republican ticket. There are about 30,000 Republicans in this state with a six-foot knife up their sleeves waiting patiently.

Stillwater Gazette: Says Dunn's Princeton Union: "Names are already being suggested for the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis should these cities ever be consolidated into one great commercial center. There is no necessity for newfangled names. Drop Minneapolis and retain St. Paul." What was Johnson's majority in Minneapolis over Dunn?

Albert Lea Tribune: Why hold a Republican state convention this year? Why not let Mr. William Grimshaw select the candidates, formulate the platform and appoint a state committee? We must have harmony this year, and it is in the interest of harmony that the above suggestion is offered.

Minneapolis Telegram: It was not the weakness of the Republican candidate for governor that caused the defeat in 1904—though you shouted it until you were black in the face. It was the desperate struggle between two groups of would-be leaders, who got in behind the two leading candidates and then could not take their medicine in defeat—and so set out to defeat the winner.

Zumbrota News: What's become of the harmony chorus? Some of them seem to have forgotten the pass word and have gone back to the anvil gang.

Princeton Union: What has become of that man Van Sant?—Minneota Mascot.

He is awaiting another assignment from his chief, Governor Johnson, to go forth and preach the doctrine of insurgency.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The Republican editors should turn their faces towards the coming victory, and not squander any more time on the inquest of the 1904 tragedy.

Brainerd Dispatch: The Minneapolis Journal wants to know "if the war is over." Not if the Journal can help it.

St. Peter Free Press: The Dunn newspapers are making a great play as to their loyalty to the party and are throwing dirt at those papers who repudiated their candidate and defeated him. If they want fight they can have it, to their heart's content.—Anoka Union.

So far as this Union is concerned we accept the challenge. Now good lord, if you are not on our side, nor on the side with Mr. Pease, just stand aside and you will see one of the prettiest fights known since the creation of all political parties. —Lake Crystal Union.

Go it, brethren, that's the way to elect the Democratic ticket.

Roseau Region: The suggestion of R. C. Dunn that, if St. Paul and Minneapolis ever became one city, the name of St. Paul be retained, is a good one. The Region heartily seconds the motion. The state at large would be glad to forget Hennepin county, which is Minneapolis. That city has been a big nuisance, politically, and no one would regret its sinking into oblivion, except Minneapolitans, maybe.

The Creation of Wealth.

New York World: All the gold produced from all the mines of the Transvaal last year amounted to only $104,000,000 in value. Its production cost the lives of Kaffirs and coolies, together with the loss of parliamentary seats and much political chicanery in England.

In New York two men by a private agreement for the merger of city traction interests added $108,000,000 to the face value of the certificates of wealth in which Wall street deals. In the transaction not a life was lost or a widow left to mourn, though in the morality involved the honors are perhaps easy.

How simple and effective the American process by comparison with the ruder methods of the Rand! "Water is best," said Pindar. Its usefulness in the creation of fictitious wealth is unexcelled.

Time, the Great Healer.

Charleston News and Courier: But, after all, what difference does it make, or will it make in history, that the Grand Army of the Republic still thinks Robert E. Lee was a traitor? The day will yet come when Henry Thompson's dream will be a reality:

Fold up the banners! Smelt the guns!
Love rules. Her gentler purpose runs.
A mighty mother turns in tears
The pages of her battle years,
Lamenting all her fallen sons!

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Anoka Herald: What the average observer often regards as a flash of genius is merely the result of some hard work.

Park Rapids Clipper: Some people go ahead and do things; others sit back idly and criticise the doing. Which class is of the most benefit to the world?

Little Falls Herald: The way things are moving, by the time Bryan gets back many epublicans will consider him a conservative.

Cannon Falls Beacon: In 1904 the Republican politicians wanted a late state convention because it made a short campaign; this year they want an early convention to shorten up the trouble-breeding period within their own ranks; but how about the long, expensive campaign? The fellow who gets the nomination will be bled to the last drop before it comes to a vote, and will have ample time to repent at leisure having accepted the nomination in haste. A state convention that is other than the climax of a natural incubating period is likely to give birth to a monstrosity.

St. Peter Herald: It cannot be said that the state railway and warehouse commission saw its shadow. The commission never comes out of its hole.

Red Wing Republican: The legislator who refuses his vote and his influence for drainage will be swamped himself some day.

Madison Independent Press: Up to the time of going to press last evening, the man who can puncture the tire of Johnson's gubernatorial chariot had not been discovered.

Stillwater Gazette: Minnesota is fast approaching that stage when we will be known as the North Star Bread and Butter and Milk state of the union.

Paynesville Press: We don't care where Jacobson was born; we know he is a man and that he stands for the things the people want.

Moose Lake Star: There may not be any iron in the ground around here, but there surely is a lot of it in the air.

Ortonville Herald-Star: This column is receiving photos and cordial letters of greeting from a large number of very worthy gentlement who evidently expect us to help catch and cage the bees now worrying their bonnets. To paraphrase the story, "This is no beehive, gentlemen, it's a newspaper office."

Crookston Times: The newspaper discussion of the gubernatorial situation is the best thing that can happen to Minnesota in a political way. The more mentionees the better. One trouble of the past has been that no one outside of a few powerful leaders stood any show of nomination; this year every man of ability has a chance.

Stillwater Gazette: There's a New York man who should be knocked down and kicked just eight hundred times. During his married life he gave his wife eight hundred beatings, and after the poor thing came to and got up nerve enough to secure a divorce, she named desertion as the grounds for separation. Wouldn't that jar you?

Mankato Free Press: Governor Johnson declared that $10,000 a year is enough for any man. Well, we will take the governor's word for it.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It is high finance when the law isn't smart enough to catch you.

A man would run away from home if he had to practice the things he preaches to his boys.

It's lots more fun thinking you are going to have it than thinking afterward that you had it.

It would make a preacher awful tired if somebody got up and preached his own sermon to him.

Half the satisfaction of being a family man is pretending you are of some importance in the house when everybody knows you aren't.

We will sell any Suit of Clothes or any Overcoat in our entire stock that have been selling at $18, $15 and $12.50, for

$8.90

The Suits are to be had in all this season's smartest single and double breasted styles in our finest staple blacks and blues, also in handsome Tweeds, Scotch Cheviots, Homespuns and Worsteds. The Overcoats are to be had in handsome double and single breasted blacks and oxfords in 44, 48 and 50 inches long, also in dashing Tourist effects of fancy Overcoats in single and double breasted.

The wise men will come early, for it won't take long to sell the balance of our winter stock at these prices.

After-Inventory Prices in Our Boys' and Children's Department.

Boys' and Children's Suits, Overcoats and Reefers selling at a reduction of 20, 30, 40 and 50 per cent from former prices. On the Boy's Suit you can almost save enough now to buy his overcoat. 'Tis a big paying investment.

BERRIES ON THE MARKET

Shipments From Florida Are Received for the Duluth Trade.

Potatoes Take Another Slump, Eggs Also a Trifle Lower.

Strawberries and fancy California, Duarte oranges are the features of this week's market on Michigan street.

The Strawberries are about the first of the season, aside from a few odd shipments that have come in from time to time. They come packed in ice from Florida. Considering the distance the fruit has to travel, and the expense of keeping it fresh, the price is not excessive. The berries are selling at 55 cents a quart, and the price may be lower during the coming week when other shipments are expected The demand for the berries as yet is not sufficient to warrant direct shipments from Florida, but the berries are brought in by local freight from Chicago.

The Duarte oranges are a special brand which were brought to Duluth for the first time last year. They are a new variety of orange in which the naval has been practically eliminated, having been reduced to a mere speck on the skin. In addition to this the skin is smooth and silky, and thinner than the skin of the ordinary California orange.

Local commission firms have received the first consignment of this fruit and more is expected next week.

* * *

Another new feature in the market this week, are the fresh, green onions from New Orleans. They are about the first of the season.

* * *

Potatoes have taken still another slump this week and are now selling for as low as 50 cents a bushel, the price ranging from this figure to 55 cents. The approach of the season when new potatoes will be on the market is the cause of the drop in price. A few advance shipments in small lots of new potatoes from the Bermudas have been received, but they cut little figure in the market as yet. Within two or three weeks, however, the first shipments from Florida will begin to come in, and from that time on the new potatoes will become more and more plentiful.

If the price of the old crop continues dropping at the rate maintained for the last month, potatoes will be as cheap as they were last spring, when the dealers were unable to get enough for them to pay for the handling. Even at 50 cents a bushel the price is much below the usual figure for this season of the year.

* * *

Egg receipts continue to be heavy and the price is about the same as last week. The fresh eggs are now practically supplying the demand, and there is little or no market for the storage stock. What little storage stock is left in Duluth is being sold at about whatever figure is offered. From 14 to 15 cents is about the ruling price, and this is no higher than the price at which the eggs were placed in storage. Fresh eggs are selling freely at 19 and 20 cents a dozen.

* * *

Butter is just a trifle weaker this week. There has been little or no change in the price of creamery butter. but the dairies are selling for 19 and 20 cents, and the renovated is quoted at 20 and 21.

Cheese remains firm at the same figures quoted last week.

* * *

Poultry receipts have been very light during the week, but the demand is not heavy and the price has remained stationary at the figures quoted last week.

Farmers who have wintered their hens do not care to market their poultry at this season of the year, and during the next few months there will be little doing in the poultry business.

* * *

Trade has been a little slack in all lines during the week, but it is expected to take a turn for the better early next month, when the spring business in Southern fruits and vegetables will begin.

ELIMINATE POLITICS

No Caucus on Election of President of Council Likely.

Six Candidates in Field for Position of City Sealer.

A "business" council rather than a political body is what the members of the new organization will endeavor to bring about, and the sentiment of most of the aldermen is that politics should be eliminated as far as possible from the meetings.

As a result of this sentiment there is not likely to be a caucus on the vote for president of the new body. The Republicans concede that the Democrats are entitled to have one of their number in the chair, owing to the fact that there is a Democratic majority and a Democratic mayor, whose place will have to be taken by the president of the council in the mayor's absence from the city.

But the Republicans will be given just as much of a voice in the selection of the Democrat as the Democrats themselves, and the sentiment seems to be opposed to a caucus.

The sixteen aldermen will probably enter the council chamber with little knowledge of what the outcome will be, and will simply vote as they see fit.

In this way no ill feeling between the two parties will be stirred up.

During the time that President Haven has been in the chair there has not been a single division of the council on straight party lines, and little or no feeling stirred up between the two sections of the council. The differences of opinion have seldom or never been brought about by political feeling, and on all votes taken Republicans and Democrats have been found on both sides.

President Haven has also shown no favoritism in his committee appointments, and the important committees have been distributed about equally, or at least proportionately, between the members of the two parties.

It is this feeling that the aldermen wish to see continue, and for this reason a caucus will probably be avoided by the Democrats as tending to stir up party feeling, and give the new council a bad start. With such an equal division, it would be difficult to transact business if the party lines were drawn.

The only question on which there is likely to be any fight is the election of the city sealer of weights and measures. There are no less than six candidates already in the filed. They are: F. T. Little, Alex Longmuir, Emil Hume, M. F. Kelliher, J. Kelly and Noble Sampson. It is difficult to pick dates already in the field. They are: others are said to be considering entering the race.

UNCLE SAM'S HAWKSHAW

Makes Amusing Report of His Aventures as a Sleuth.

Sent to Ivestigate Looting of Colorado Fish Hatchery.

Washington, Feb. 16.—What sort of men are at times secured by the government as confidential agents is disclosed in an amusing report made by a sort of Hawkshaw. The detective, a special agent of the department of justice, by name, Simon Kleyn, was sent to investigate the looting of a fish hatchery in Colorado. The president has recommended to congress that the Englishman who sustained the loss be paid $25,000 in settlement of his claim.

In September, 1895, William Radcliffe, a British subject, became the proprietor of thirteen private lakes in Delta county, Col, and preserved them as a private hatchery for the propagation of mountain trout and other fish. The people of the neighborhood resented the closing of the waters, and a bad feeling was created, when Mr. Radcliffe, after the English fashion, employed armed watchers to keep people off the property.

Finally, after the killing of a man who was fishing, a mob was formed in 1901, and the hatchery was looted, the buildings being burned in Radcliffe's absence. He was warned that if he attempted to return and take possession of his property, he would be lynched. The state officers could not, or would not, afford the despoiled Radcliffe any relief, and claim was made through the British ambassador on the department of state for redress.

After a conventional and formal correspondence, lasting two years, Kleyn, then residing at Holland, Mich., was appointed to make an investigation. He got the notice of his appointment Feb. 1, 1903, and, after visiting Mr. Radcliffe in New York City, came to Wisilington, leaving here March 19 to visit "my home people at Holland, Mich., to perfect my preparations." He was vastly impressed with the importance of his mission, and apparently moved in fear and trembling. He took his time about the job, too. Here are some entertaining paragraphs from his own account of his preparations and movements:

"It being understood that the undertaking was one of extreme hazard to life, in case my real mission became apparent, and it being agreed that I should assume the role of a beet-sugar enthusiast and promoter, because of my thorough acquaintance with that industry and its importance to the state of Colorado, I prepared myself with beet literature of all kinds, and also with correspondence with well-known beet-growers and sugar-house operators.

"I left Holland April 14, and arrived in Denver the evening or the 15th; studied geographical and other local conditions. Went to Greely, Colo., the 17th to get in touch with the sugar people there, and to obtain letters to the people acquainted with the Grand Junction, Colo., beet-sugar house; thence went to Fort Collins, where the Colorado State Agricultural college is situated, and there divested myself of all my papers and effects which would be liable to identify me as a government agent, and returned to Denver April 22.

"I left next day, April 23, for Grand Junction, Colo., (near Delta), where a beet-sugar plant is located. There I was able to get letters and desirable information, and reached Delta, the nearest railroad point to the scene of destruction which I was to investigate.

"Delta is a typical Colorado mountain town of 1,800 people, with banks, schools and churches. I soon found out that the people of Delta county were greatly interested and engaged in raising alfalfa hay and fruit, with a tendency to become interested in the sugar-beet culture. As this county has been the scene of the official acts growing out of the Radcliffe affair, I was not long in discovering that the feeling against Mr. Radcliffe is still bitter, and realized that I must proceed with the utmost caution.

"Moreover, the season was yet far too early to go out to the mountainous regions of the lakes upon any theory or pretense that would appear reasonable. Feeling sure that I could not be too careful at my bases of operations at Delta and Grand Junction, I spent part of the month of May and early part of June in the streets, places of business and various places of entertainments, and at various restaurants and lodging houses, etc., so as to get thoroughly acquainted.

"I also carefully examined, so far as it was practicable, the newspaper files, as far as they had been preserved, of the local papers, especially about the time of the destruction, the shooting of Womack, and the trial and conviction of Mahaney, game warden at the lakes. I talked and listened, throwing out such cautious suggestions, as far as it was practical, for the purpose of leading up to the object of my visit.

"It was late, in fact June 15, before I could find a good excuse to go to Cedar Edge. This postoffice is about twelve miles from the lakes and Radcliffe's property, and about eighteen to twenty miles via stage route from Delta, the county seat. I found that the large region of the lakes owned by Radcliffe from Cedar Edge, the nearest postoffice, a good-sized Eastern county in extent, contained about sixty to seventy voters and many less families, and these greatly scattered.

"While the town contains a few good people, a great part are floaters or adventurers, who become squatters and claim jumpers, without regular occupation, and some good ranchmen.

"As all of them ride skillfully and are provided with good horses and saddles, and sidearms, news travels with rapidity, as on the veldt with the South African Boers. And here every prospect of excitement or perilous adventure would seem to meet with an instant and nearly unanimous response. My position was such that it absolutely prevented all confidential communications.

"At Cedar Edge is a store with postoffice, blacksmith shop, and three or four houses near the village corner. I talked sugar beets; lingered about the store evenings and became acquainted; acted for parts of many days as a helper in the blacksmith shop, and even reconstructed a small cabin, where I slept in order that I might be more free with the people, so I could come and go, than at the only house in which I could have stopped.

"I rode with the cowboys, labored out during the haying seasons where others liable to talk were employed. I also joined fishing parties that went up to the lakes. At times I was under suspicion and in great danger, but I carried no arms, left my small grip where any curious person might have gone through all my papers, and, in fact, acted in such a way as to invite inspection.

"I talked with ranchmen, played cards, ate and drank at cabins at various times with some of the floaters and with the cowboy punchers on the range near the lakes on the Grand Mesa near the property of William Radcliffe; and, in short, became as well acquainted with the people in that region as the time I had would permit. There was constant adventure in the affair that I partly enjoyed, which was of increasing interest and kept me free from ennui to the end. I was in part successful, but not wholly so. It is like prospecting for mineral; one may search a lifetime without succeeding or stumble upon a find in an hour.

"The daily details of my stay of over three months in that locality are all carefully preserved, but I deem them too lengthy for a report, for they would fill a fair-sized volume. They will be held available to the department at all times. I will therefore only give my conclusions and the strictly legal advice I was able to obtain or which I think upon inquest by a grand jury could be obtained.

"In judging of a farm in a well-settled agricultural region or a house and lot or vacant property in a village or city the market price may be established generally by testimony of competent witnesses; but such is not the case with this property, and much of its value would depend upon the peculiar views, ideas, wishes, and anticipations of persons called directly to the subject, and in all probability there would be a difference between individuals of different tastes and ideas so widely varying as to render it difficult, if not impossible, to establish any regular value, and I found it beyond the reach of my power at this time to do so. Therefore I refrain from making a report, or even at the present time expressing an opinion relative thereto."

CITY HALL IN TANGLED SUIT

Mayor's Plan to Evade Law May Nullify Property Title.

Mishawka, Ind., Feb. 16.—Should the plaintiffs in the suit against the city of Mishawka win in the present contest, this city may lose its handsome $50,000 city hall, a modern jail, a well-appointed fire station, and its paid department system.

Citizens are suing Mayor Mix, the members of the city council and the men appointed by the chief executive to serve as directors and incorporators of the Mishawka Public Utilities company, a corporation formed to take over the city waterworks plant and the municipal lighting and power-developing station, in order to permit the city to carry out the ideas of the mayor and city council, and provide a city hall, only about half of which is being used.

The municipality having reached the limit of its indebtedness, a special bill was railroaded through the legislature, and this now is said to be class legislation. William E. Miller, president of the Mishawka Paper and Pulp company, and a score of other well-known men, are the plaintiffs in the suit, and the sale of the property was in violation of the laws of the state; that the city had no right to sell; that not one cent was received by the city treasurer from the transaction; that the city is paying all the bills for the operating and maintenance of the two plants.

The suit promises sensational developments, and it is alleged by the plaintiffs that revelations will be made showing that bribery was attempted and that some officials were bought last summer when certain members of the council and the mayor sought to have fourteen streets in this city newly paved. It is also alleged that two councilmen had offers of $1000 each if they would vote for the paving resolution.

DOGS ARRESTED AND FINED.

Owner Pleads Guilty to Violation of the Game Law.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 16.—For the first time in the history of Nebraska, a pack of hounds have been arrested, formally summoned into court, convicted of violation of the state game laws, pleaded guilty and have been fined $20. The plea of guilty was entered by the owner of the dogs, E. Fowler of Arcadia, who, however, was in no way to blame for the act of his animals. Mr. Fowler also paid the fine imposed on the dogs. The hounds have been used in chasing rabbits, coyotes and wolves, and when two deer ventured down into Valley county, they either forgot all about the game laws or else were too ardent hunters to obey them, for they caught and killed a doe.

Deputy Game Warden Hunger investigated, found that Mr. Fowler had nothing to do with the matter and agreed with him that the dogs should be arrested and that their owner should make their pleas and pay their fines.

All old-time Cough Syrups bind the bowels. This is wrong. A new idea was advanced two years ago in Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. This remedy acts on the mucous membranes of the throat and lungs and loosens the bowels at the same time. Sold by all druggists.

MAN HAS SLEPT NINE MONTHS

Pulse and Respiration Normal, Yet is Near Death's Door.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 16.—Lying in an almost continuous slumber since the middle of last April, Aaron Gorfinkel, an escaped Russian soldier, is in St. Joseph's hospital. His condition is a puzzle to the physicians.

Gorfinkel was a well-educated and influential Russian citizen. He was drafted into the army, where he underwent many hardships, often being stoned by mobs.

After serving nearly a year he escaped and finally reached America and came to the Zager family, friends of his, who reside at 1925 South Nineteenth street, this city.

Here he bought a horse and wagon and has been peddling vegetables on the streets.

One day a crowd of boys hurled stones at him. One of the stones struck Gorfinkel on the head, rendering him for the time being unconscious.

When he regained consciousness he remarked to his friends that he was meeting with the same persecution in this country as he met with in Russia. This seemed to grieve him greatly.

The boy who hurled the stone at him was arrested, but he was released when the case was called in police court.

Before the bruise disappeared Gorfinkel went to sleep, and it was six weeks before he was partially aroused. First he was taken to the county hospital and thence to the Wise Memorial hospital, where he rallied somewhat and was taken back to the Zager home.

In a few days he again went into a sound slumber, from which he could not be aroused, and he was returned to the Wise hospital. Two months later he was again taken back to the home of his friends, no improvement being shown in his condition.

Physicians in Omaha have worked over the case, but could do nothing to revive Gorfinkel.

Recently Gorfinkel's condition became so grave that his life was despaired of and he was removed to St. Joseph's hospital, and the physicians there think an operation may be necessary in order to save his life.

For nine months he has taken nothing but liquid food.

Physicians say the patient's pulse, respiration and heart have remained practically normal, but all efforts to resuscitate him have proven futile.

DEDICATION WEEK ENDED.

Interesting Services in the New Presbyterian Church at Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The week of dedication of the new First Presbyterian church of Hibbing closed after the meeting on Wednesday night.

On Monday evening the fellowship meeting took place at the church. A splendid musical program was executed, Mr. Giddings and Miss Florence Hyland, both of Duluth, the Arion quartette, Miss Bardesono and the church choir taking part. Rev. Rupert Swinnerton of the Methodist church gave a splendid talk on "Men's Relation to the Church." Rev. Frank Durant of the Episcopal church, who is ever ready to come to the assistance of the Ladies' Aid, gave a fine talk, full of wit and humor, on "Women's Relation to the Church." The social hour then followed under the direction of the ladies of the Reserve Fund society of the Presbyterian church. Fine refreshments were served to about 200 people. The young people went upstairs to the gymnasium, where pit and other games were played. Miss Ruth H. Bates and Miss Mabel Trenerry deserve great credit for the beautiful way in which they had the gymnasium draped and decorated with cozy corners, etc. This was the first social held in the new church building, which was dedicated last Sunday, and it certainly was a success.

On Tuesday evening the installation services took place. These services have often been called the "church wedding," for by them the pastor is officially united with the congregation. The sermon was preached by Rev. T. H. Cleland, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Duluth. Dr. Cleland preached a beautiful sermon. He congratulated the congregation on their beautiful new church home, and especially on the fact that they had so successfully handled the financial part of the enterprise. Rev. H. E. Neff of Virginia gave the charge to the pastor and Rev. S. A. Jamieson, to the people. Rev. Charles P. Bates, the pastor, has been with the people of Hibbing for about a year. The installation services were to have been held sooner, but have been put off because both the congregation and the pastor wanted to wait until the new building was completed. The new church edifice, costing in the neighborhood of $5,000, and free from debt, stands a monument to the zeal, energy and sincerity with which Rev. Bates has labored among the people of Hibbing.

On Wednesday evening the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip formally dedicated their free reading and club rooms. The church was well filled and a fine program was given.

A Healing Gospel.

The Rev. J. C. Warren, pastor of Sharon Baptist church, Belair, Ga., says of Electric Bitters: "It's a godsend to mankind. It cured me of lame back, stiff joints and complete physical collapse. I was so weak it took me half an hour to walk a mile. Two bottles of Electric Bitters have made me so strong I have just walked three miles in fifty minutes and feel like walking three more. It's made a new man of me." Greatest remedy for weakness and all Stomach, Liver and Kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at all drug stores. Price 50c.

HANGED MAN'S SPOOK.

Kentucky Girl Says Spirit Visits Her Each Night.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 16.—Ethel Gentry of 523 Marshall street, the girl who visited William Van Dalsen at the county jail a number of times before he was executed, declares that she is visited nightly by Van Dalsen's spirit. According to her statement the executed murderer appears to her every night shortly after midnight, and once she says the spirit laid his hand on her lips. The family of the girl are somewhat troubled over the strength of the delusion.

THREE ARE DEAD FROM PTOMAINE POISONING.

Stockton, Cal. Feb. 16.—J. B. Barnett and his two daughters are dead from poisoning and Mrs. Barnett and Mrs. Hartley, who had been nursing the Barnett children, are dangerously ill. Barnett died yesterday at the emergency hospital. One of the children died last Saturday and the other Wednesday. Coroner Southworth is making an investigation. The symptoms indicated ptomaine poisoning, and it is thought to be due to some ham, of which the family had been partaking.

NICK NOT IN HOUSE; INDIANS DISAPPOINTED.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Ten Ponca Indians, who came from Oklahoma to present Representative Nicholas Longworth with a buffalo skin vest, were much disappointed at not finding him in the house when they visited the capitol yesterday afternoon. The Indians were especially painted and dressed in beaded buckskin clothing in anticipation of an elaborate presentation ceremony. Their gift for the president's prospective son-in-law is made from the hide of a young buffalo, which is more highly prized by the Indians than any other trophy of the hunt.

GOES TO LEPER COLONY.

Believes He Can Thus Best Aid His Fellow Men.

Cincinnati, Feb. 16.—"I am of no use to myself and only a burden to my friends and I want to go to the leper colony, near New Orleans, and spend the rest of my days where I can be of some benefit to my fellow men," was the declaration of William Promise, in Mayor Dempsey's office, as he presented sufficient money to pay for a half-rate ticket to the South.

Promise said that years ago he had lost his hearing and this made it hard to get employment. He said that he loses one position after another, and this has discouraged him so much that he has finally decided to accept employment and spend his days among the lepers. Under the rules of the colony, and according to the health regulations, he can never leave the place after once going there.

Promise is about 50 years of age and has no family. For some time he has existed through kindness of friends. Previous to coming to the mayor's office he went to St. Xavier's church and received the blessing of Rev. Father Chambers. He was given the ticket.

CORK LEG FOR DAISY.

Pride of the Deer Herd Survives an Operation.

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 16.—"Daisy, while playing with her mate, Bradley," said Eugene Roberts, "fell and broke her leg." When asked to explain, Mr. Roberts answered that Daisy was the eldest deer at Chilhowee Park, while Bradley is a buck.

While scampering over the hills in the park the deer fell and crushed two bones in her left hind leg. Dr. Jacobs amputated the leg. Mr. Roberts says Daisy is improving and will live.

GREEN AND YELLOW SAME.

Twenty-Eight of Thirty Naval Recruits Fail in Test.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 16.—Of thirty applicants at the United States navy recruiting station here in three days only two were accepted. Nearly all of the twenty-eight were rejected because of color blindness.

Usually the average is one man selected out of three or four. Applicants are given as a test for eyesight a box containing pieces of yarn of almost every color, and are made to arrange the yarn according to color. Most of the twenty-eight applicants were unable to distinguish light yellow from light green.

Ladies, read this catalogue of charms. Bright eyes, glowing cheeks, red lips, a smooth skin without a blemish, in short, perfect health. For sale with every package Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

WHO LOST BY THEFT?

Owner of Street Car Line Puzzled Over Retribution.

Logansport, Ind., Feb. 16.—An unidentified Logansport man, who, twelve years ago, stole $9 from the Logansport Street Railway company while he was an employe, has tried to make restitution for the amount by sending to William Jacques of San Antonio, Tex., son of a former owner of the line, $10, Jacques, no longer connected with the system, has written to Albert Hahn, who has been with the system for nearly twenty years, asking him for directions as to who should be entitled to the money.

Since Jacobs' disposed of the road it has changed hands several times, but Hahn is of the opinion that George J. Marott of Indianapolis is entitled to the money, because when he bought the road in 1899 he also purchased the rights to all the moneys due the line, and when he sold he reserved thish right.

GETS HIS TURTLE BACK.

Mark of Thirty-Eight Years Ago Identifies Animal.

Athens, Ga., Feb. 16.—P. T. Harmon of this place received recently a turtle, boxed and sent by express, from his brother living at the old home near Germantown, Ky. Harmon, when a boy of 14 years old in Kentucky, caught this turtle, and with a pocket knife cut his initials and the date, "P. T. H.—1868," on the lower side of the turtle, when it was small about the size of a sivler dollar. Today it measures six by four and a half inches and looks as healthy and vigorious as when captured thirty-eight years ago.

Mr. Harmon carved the present date on his turtleship and turned him loose on Ingleside farm.

WHEAT IS VERY WEAK

Weakness of Foreign Markets Strongly Reflected.

Lively Time in Flax in Final Moments of Session.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 16.—Wheat was very sick today, and not for a moment throughout the session did it show any real disposition to rally. The Liverpool market closed ⅝d to 1d lower, and this was the initial weakening influence. The Argentine shipments were liberal, and the Modern Miller's weekly report on winter wheat crop conditions was practically a standoff. Paris closed ½c to 1c lower, Berlin ⅜c lower, Budapest ⅜c higher, and Antwerp unchanged.

The May option fell ⅞c in Duluth and Chicago, ¾-⅞c in Minneapolis, ⅞-1c in New York and Kansas City, 1c in St. Louis and ½c in Winnipeg.

Stocks of wheat at Duluth are estimated to increase 240,000 bus this week. Bradstreet reports weekly clearances of wheat from America of 2,951,642 bus, and of corn 4,163,853 bus.

Corn in the Chicago market closed ⅜c lower for May and in Liverpool ½d to ⅝d lower.

Fololwing is the Modern Miller's report: "The Northwestern winter wheat states are well covered with snow. Elsewhere in the states east of the Rocky mountains little or no snow protected the crop during the late cold spell. Some complaints are being made of unfavorable conditions, but damage seems to be more apprehended than actual. Moisture has been plentiful on Pacific coast and conditions are highly favorable."

Car receipts at Duluth were 27, against 6 last year, and at Minneapolis 267, against 259 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 296, against 265 last year. Chicago received 11, against 7 last year. Winnipeg received 107, against 61 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 447,000 bus; last year, 387,000 bus. Shipments, 196,000 bus; last year, 217,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 69,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat this week aggregate 3,608,000 bus, against 2,392,000 bus last week and 3,344,000 bus last year. From Jan. 1 to date, the shipments have been 11,748,000 bus, against 11,680,000 bus in the same period a year ago.

Primary receipts of corn were 612,000 bus; last year, 332,000 bus. Shipments, 316,000 bus; last year, 281,000 bus. Clearances were 457,000 bus. Argentine shipments of corn for the week are 227,000 bus, against 634,000 bus last week and 349,000 bus last year. The total from Jan. 1 to date are 2,711,000 bus, against 7,075,000 bus in the same period last year.

Wheat was fairly active in the Duluth market today. May wheat opened ⅜c lower, at 82⅞c, advanced to 83c, at 9:38, and dropped to 82½-⅜c, at 12:29, and dropped to 82⅝c at 12:42. The closing price was 82⅝c, a loss of ⅞c from yesterday. There was no activity in July wheat, and it close at 83⅝c, a loss of ⅞c from yesterday.

Flax was the feature of the local market today. Trading in May flax was not overly active until the last few minutes of the session, when a large amount was thrown upon the market at $1.15. Trading was lively and the price was hammered down to $1.14, but railled quickly and the close was $1.14⅞, a loss of 1⅜c from yesterday. May opened unchanged, at $1.16¼, went to $1.16½, and then began a gradual drop.

The foreign flax markets were weaker, Laplatta and Calcutta linseed being 1½d lower in London and flax in Antwerp 1⅞c lower. The Argentine shipments of flax during he week aggregated 920,000 bus, as compared with 1,080,000 bus for last week and 656,000 bus for last year.

July flax opened ¼c lower at $1.17½, went to $1.17⅞ and dropped to $1.15¼. The closing price was $1.16, a loss of 1¾c from yesterday. September flax opened ¼c higher at $1.16¼ and closed at $1.14½, a loss of 1½c from yesterday.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Lower Cables Cause Considerable Weakness in the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Lower cables caused weakness today in wheat here. Selling was quite general and demand was scattered, the principal buyers being shorts. May opened ⅛@¼c to ⅜@½c lower, at 84¼c to 84⅛c, and during the early part of the session held within the opening range. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 305 cars against 219 cars last week and 272 cars a year ago.

The market became much weaker later because of the bearish predictions in several trade papers. The low point for May was reached at 83½c. The close was weak with May off 1@1⅛c at 83⅝c.

Free selling by cash houses and pit traders weakened the corn market. The selling was due to lower cables, liberal receipts and favorable weather for the movement of the crop.

Commission houses were active buyers of May. At the opening May was ⅛c to ¼c lower, at 43c to 43⅛c. Local receipts were 365 cars with 7 of contract grade.

The market became weaker along with wheat, the price of May declining to 42¾c. The close was weak with May down ⅜c at 42⅞c.

Oats were easier in sympathy with the weakness of other grain. Trading was quiet and business mainly of a local character. May opened unchanged to ⅛c lower, at 29⅞c to 29⅞c, and sold off to 29⅜@½c. Local receipts were 108 cars.

A decline of 10c in the price of hogs started general selling in provisions and resulted in a weak market. At the opening prices showed a considerable decline, but later a moderate rally occurred on covering by shorts. May pork opened 7½c to 5c lower, at $15.27½ to $15.35 and sold up to $15.40. Lard opened 2½@5c to 5c lower, at $7.82½ to $7.82½@7.85, and sold at $7.85. Ribs opened 5c lower, at $8.10, and advanced to $8.12½.

Close: Wheat—May, 83⅝c; July, 82¼@⅜c. Corn—May, 42⅞c; July, 43¼@⅜c. Oats—May, 29⅝c; July 29c. Pork—May, $15.52½@15.55; July, $15.35. Lard—May, $7.85; July, $7.95. Ribs—May, $8.20; July, 8.30. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was no mistaking the trend of today's market; it was weak from the start and closed particularly at the bottom, losing ⅞c to a full cent net for the day. Whatever bullish feeling prevailed oozed out on posting of cables, showing a decidedly easier feeling abroad. The large Argentine shipments, lack of buying demand in our home markets, seem too much of a load for the bull. Coupled with this the dragging cash markets Southwest and the unloading of the bulls were factors. As we said some days ago, it is too early to take complaints of crop damage seriously. There is still a large scattered long interest and as the market drags to a lower lever, with but feeble rallies, the holders of wheat are likely to get tired of their load. Unless something new develops to strengthen their position, it is likely to become more so.

Corn and oats—Liquidation in these markets was a little more pronounced than in recent sessions but still the same selling by scattered holders. As we said yesterday, there seems nothing in sight to warrant any sustained improvement. The load is heavy from a statistical standpoint and a speculative one, too. We feel the little rallies that develop will be short lived.

Provisions suffered from profit taking and some little pressure of short selling, influenced by weakness in other pits, but the short sellers and some of the profit takers too, were the active buyers just before the close of market.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat m oved out of its narrow rut today. The trade was large in the aggregate. Sellers took advantage of the sharp decline at Liverpool and the rather liberal shipments from Argentina; in fact, about all the weakness that developed was based on foreign news which should not have so much consideration with out market on a home basis. Naturally the bears are much encouraged by this little reaction, but they are very likely to over-estimate themselves and sell the market short, and in the event of any good buying tomorrow we should be near the turning point. There is nothing in the situation to indicate that our supply and demand situation has weakened any, and we think such time as this wheat should be bought and held for sharp advances.

Chicago Tribune: The exports of flour and wheat from the United States during January were 10,081,000 bus, compared with 15,721,000 bus in December, and 2,887,000 bus in January, 1905. The exports from July 1, 1905, to February were 62,911,000 bus, compared with 27,677,000 bus for the corresponding period last year.

GHOST POINTS WAY.

Bringing a bottle filled with almost pure gold, taken from a lode long hidden in mountain fastnesses, not far from here, W. E. Bartlett and M. C. Black, both well known business men, are back after a perilous trip to the Cascades, says a Wenatchie correspondent of the Seattle Times.

Theirs, however, was labor richly rewarded, though the story is so interwoven with spiritualism and romance that it is well nigh incredible. Bartlett is the grandson of D. E. Ingels, a miner of the early '50s in these parts, who was murdered in the hills by his partner. The Bartlett family are spiritualists, and Bartlett declares his dead and murdered grandfather, through a Portland medium, sent word to him to find the lost mine and he would be independent for life.

Bartlett swears positively that he received specific directions from the spirit of his grandfather how to proceed to the lost mine. Moreover, he was told to select M. C. Black to accompany him. The men will not tell of the location of their find, but say it cannot be reached save by making an extremely dangerous trip and one filled with hardship, especially at this time of the year, when the mountains are firmly in winter's icy grasp. In the spring they will return and develop their find.

In a rough and mountainous section, they say, they found a gray quartz lodge, literally filled with precious metal. Small pieces were broken off, pounded up in a frying pan which they had with them and the gold picked out by the men's fingers and placed in a bottle. Should the ledge prove as rich as the samples, a man could make a mortar and gold pan, and in a week's time take out enough of the gold to make him wealthy.

As an evidence of their find they have the little bottle of gold dust, which has already been viewed by dozens of people, and tests have been made by O. D. Johnson which prove that the mineral is genuine.

DOING THINGS TOMORROW.

New York Sun: "I suppose," said Mr. Biffleby, "that the easiest way to do things is not to do them—to put them off till tomorrow. And I have found a lot of comfort in that way.

"Lots of troublesome things come up, but I don't let 'em worry me—not today. I say I'll have peace and comfort and take things easy today and tackle that difficult proposition tomorrow. And when tomorrow comes I say to myself: 'Well, I guess this thing will keep another day. It's kept all right one day, and I guess it won't do any harm to let it go another. I'll do that thing tomorrow.' And so I've carried some things along for years; always going to do 'em tomorrow.

"And it's easy, this way, doing things tomorrow, sure enough; but there certainly is one drawback to it—it doesn't roll much surplus. As a matter of fact, I suppose the only work we ever get paid for is the work we do today.

"The things we are going to do tomorrow produce no revenue. Doing things in this way is easy, but it yields no great returns, as I know, from long experience. Other men that I know who have collared things as they came along, who have not put things off till tomorrow, but have acquired the habit of doing things today, have grown rich or have come to be at least men of comfortable means, while I have nothing: I am just where I was at the beginning—going to have something tomorrow.

"And, really, I think I must stop putting things off, and start doing things; and I'm going to begin, sure, without fail, tomorrow.

"Men learn to shave on the chin of a fool"—and, sometimes, found their prosperity on the adversity of others. For example—buying a store or a property, whose owner is forced to sell. And many such opportunities are found in the ads.

At the Close, Declines Following Heavy Selling Pressure.

Copper Lost Over Two Points During the Last Hour.

New York, Feb. 16.—Sufficient buying orders appeared at the opening of the stock market today to rally some stocks from the depression in which the market closed last night. At other points the pressure continued. There were opening gains of ¼ in Lead and Northern Pacific and a point in Reading and Smelting. Colorado Fuel, Sugar and New York Central were up large fractions. Denver & Rio Grande lost 1⅛ and Wabash preferred ⅝.

The bulk of the commissions in the hands of brokers were purchasing orders, and the traders, seeing the direction of the outside demand, bid up the favorite stocks for a time and helped the rise along. Advances reached substantial proportions in a number of the stocks that had been especially weak yesterday. Great Northern preferred and New York, Chicago & St. Louis gained 2, Colorado & Southern first preferred 1½, and New York Central, Ontario & Western and Colorado Fuel 1. These improvements and a number of others of similar importance were surrendered under renewed large selling at the higher prices. Colorado Fuel and Tennessee Coal fell 1, Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. 1½, National Railroad of Mexico preferred 1¾, Northern Pacific 2. Sloss-Sheffield Steel 2¾ and Delaware & Hudson 3. Prices fell below last night throughout, but the market became quiet at a rally at 11 o'clock.

Union Pacific, St. Paul, Atchison, Missouri Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Brooklyn Transit and others yielded a point or more before the decline was checked. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred first 2⅝, United States Reduction preferred lost 2, American Express 5. The slow hardening movement which followed made up much of the decline. Great Northern preferred rose 4½ over last night, Northern Pacific 2¼ and Northwestern 1. The volume of business during the second hour showed a material shrinkage from that of the first hour. Bonds were heavy at noon.

The list got back to within measurable distance of yesterday's closing when prices slipped back again and some of the coalers and grain carriers reacted a point. Pressed Steel Car sold 1 and Northwestern 3½ above yesterday's closing, while Westinghouse Electric was quoted at 2 and Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha preferred 5 below.

An irregular recovery set in about the middle of the afternoon in which some stocks recovered to their earlier top figures or above, notably Reading, New York Central, Smelting, Lead and Colorado Fuel. Smelting and Lead gains reached 2¼.

Another selling movement revived the activity of the market later in the day and re-established or exceeded the low level of the morning, wiping out the few gains. Copper ran off 1½ below last night. Wells-Fargo Express 10, Brooklyn Union Gas 8, Virginia Iron 4⅝, Northern Pacific relapsed 2¾ below last night, Central of Jersey, Virginia-Carolina Chemical, Brooklyn Transit, Colorado Fuel and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred and Atlantic Coast Line 2. and Wabash, Southern Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Louisville & Nashville, Southern Railway, Erie, Central Leather, General Electric and others about a point. The closing was weak and unsettled.

Stock Gossip.

Waldorf to Paine, Webber & Co.: According to brokers having exceptional sources of information, 70 per cent of the recent selling of stocks has been by bears. The latter element is so confident of its position, and sentiment in trading circles is so intensely and generally bearish, that conservative critics feel that the market is likely to score a sharp advance. The preponderant feeling is as pessimistic today as it was bullish a fortnight ago. There is a deep conviction that the factors which are the real basis of values must soon exert their normal influence and that barring accidents quotations are within a point or two of the lowest that will be seen for some time to come. The richest men in the street are buying stocks on the scale down, but are making no attempt to force a general advance. Such efforts may not be witnessed until the question of the coal strike is definitely settled, when a higher and broader market is looked for.

* * *

Randolph to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market this morning and during the day continued uninteresting. Ther were small rallies from time to time, but stocks have been freely supplied on all the strength and the rallies were at all times short lived. In the last half hour selling pressure was extremely heavy and under heavy sales the market closed sharply lower in spots. Undoubtedly some liquidation was brought about, but the declines made semed to be largely manipulated. The close was weak in most cases near the lowest prices of the day. Copper, which showed marked strength all day, broke sharply and lost over two points during the last hour.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 16.—The cotton market opened easy at unchanged prices to an advance of 2 points, which was a little poorer than expected on cables. Some of the local professionals were selling and there was scattering liquidation, but prices worked up shortly after the call to a net advance of 4@6 points, with May selling at 10.95. At this level offerings increased somewhat and there was a reaction of 3@4 points, followed by a quiet and steady market during the middle of the morning, with prices 3@4 points net higher.

Cotton spot closed quiet and steady; middling uplands, 11.25; middling gulf, 11.50; sales, 600 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady. February, 10.67; March, 10.74; April, 10.83; May, 10.92; June, 10.96; July, 11.06; August, 10.93; September, 10.55; October, 10.44; November, 10.47; December, 10.49.

GREAT MACHINE.

Multiphone Repreduces Stage Performances in Your Home.

Time, 1909. Scene, a villa in the White Mountains, N. H. Couple dining on tabloid foods of the period. James passes the chicken drops.

She—Chicken again! Oh, dear! There's no variety these days.

He—Let's have an opera or something or other in New York. James, what is on at the Waldoria?

James—"The Alcalde of Asbury," sir, by Percival Browne.

He—Oh, squab! (a slang phrase of the period.) James, connect us with the Cultus theater, Boston. I want to hear that new comic opera, "The Peculations of Paul."

She—But, Horace, I'm not dressed.

He—You're woefully behind the times, Mary. (Strains of overture sweep through the villa.) What! Already, James? Let's have coffee in the library, then. Come, my dear. (Exeunt He and She.)

James—Drat it! When I was a boy we pyde our sixpence to sit in the gallery. Nowadays it's a tu'penny toob and movin' pictures.

This conversation is not due for four years yet, but that it will occur then and often is the fond belief of K. M. Turner, the inventor of the machine, which, he says, enables the deaf to hear music and dialogue as clearly as anybody in the theater audience, says the New York Times. Mr. Turner's latest achievement is a machine for transmitting sound without the use of an ear receiver at one end and lungs of brass at the other.

Last night while the performance of "Veronique" was going on in the Broadway theater on the second floor of the same building behind tightly closed doors sat Mr. Turner and a few guests listening to Miss Ruth Vincent singing:

Swing high! Swing low!
Swing to! Swing fro!

The sound of the voice, the articulation, the inhalation of breath, the creaking of the swing, and the accompaniment of the orchestra were all, so to speak, reproduced with startling clearness.

"But it is not reproduced," said Mr. Turner when the word was unfortunately used. "What you hear is the original. The performance is going on just the same, and no one on the stage is paying the least attention to the operation of my disks; in fact, I don't think any but the management knows of their existence."

The disks to which Mr. Turner referred were set in a little box about six inches above the level of the stage and hidden behind the footlights. The disks formed one extremely sensitive transmitter. The principle of the telephone seems to be in use to a great extent, but, as Mr. Turner explained, the disks are so sensitive that even the slightest wave of sound is caught whether the singer or speaker is within two or twenty-five feet of it.

At the other end of the wire was an ordinary receiver, with a phonograph horn attached, and over a specially manufactured wire came the strains of "Veronique."

The performance, as it was heard through the "Multiphone," as Mr. Turner calls his invention, was a bit uneven. That, the inventor explained, was due to the multiplying power of the machine. In time he hopes to overcome this trouble, which is caused by the moving of the performers about the stage—some one singing softly at the rear, or perhaps a basso profundo roaring by the footlights.

"The transmitter takes it all evenly," said Mr. Tirner, "but multiplies it, so that the slight difference of space down there makes the bigger difference at this end of the wire."

Mr. Turner was reticent about the details of his invention, and only wished to emphasize that for the first time, as he said, a man at a distance could listen to a performance in any theater in town without going to it, or even standing with a receiver to his ear at home.

"This is not a telephone," he said. "It is something better. In time I shall get that metallic ring out of the transmitted music and get all sounds evenly distributed. Then—well, I forsee a new kind of telephone system about theater time."

Mr. Turner's mode of completing the illusion of actual attendance at a performance would be with the aid of a moving picture machine.

MYSTERIOUS MAN.

Lloyd's News: Latest mails from Celebes in the Eastern Archipelago tell of the advent of a mysterious Englishman, who has taken up his residence on the Island of Bouton.

Early in July arrived in a sailing boat a bronzed, broadchested stranger, accompanied by a little fair-haired dwarf, apparently his servant. According to the story told by the agent of a wealthy merchant of Macassar, the two white men proceeded to build a large log house, the interior of which they painted a brilliant scarlet. Over the threshold, flanked by Union Jacks, they raised a gigantic wooden shield, bearing a portrait of the master of the house seated at the apex of a pyramid around the base of which crowds of pygmies groveled, looking upward with expressions of bewilderment and awe. Beneath this wonderful device was a mysterious inscription: "I am a M. O. L."

Hundreds of natives came to look at the "funny white men," but the master repelled their curiosity, brandishing a couple of revolvers. The quaint shield roused the admiration and curiosity of all, and stories were told by the superstitious of dark deeds done at midnight in the house of the strange white man.

One native, more educated than his brothers, read the inscription beneath the shield, and the word went forth that the big white man was a new god, named Amol, and that the dwarf was his attendant priest. This story was readily believed because of the hundreds of sheets of white paper which Amol daily covered with mysterious writings, believed by the natives to be charms against disease.

For six months the Englishmen lived on the stores they had brought with them. Then the dwarf set sail for Macassar to lay in a new supply. He told a curious tale about his employer.

Amol, he said, had told him that he was the "greatest English novelist alive." But the English people were fools, and did not appreciate good work. Cheap journalism and upsart publishers combined to stifle men of letters. He was himself a man of letters, although no one would believe it. For years he had been unwillingly compelled to prostitute his genius that he might live. But at last a rich lady, who had hoped that he would marry her, died of a broken heart, bequeathing him her fortune. Forthwith he shook the dust of London off his feet, leaving behind him, he hoped forever, his unappreciative native land.

Haven't you seen a "To Let" placard in some particular window so long that you come to wonder what was wrong with the property? Placarding is primitive—very primitive—advertising. It's just a little better than nothing—while Herald want advertising is a little better than anything else.

BEING AN ACTOR.
Experiences of a Youth Who Was Stage Struck.

The double-chinned, prosperous-looking man of 45 or so was chuckling to himself, says the Washington Post. He was requested not to be so selfish, but to let others in on it. He did.

"It's nothing," he said, pulling the paper band off a fat cigar, "except that I can't help but laugh when I remember what an ass of a boy I was. I can see my level-headed old dad's point of view now. It's shocking, now, to think of what a bonehead I must have appeared in his eyes when I was a boy. It sure is. And yet, the same bug that I had afflicted about all the rest of the boys of my day. I had a mad hankering to be a minstrel man. Went to the minstrel show at the Columbia a couple of weeks ago, just to see if any lingering particle or atom of that old bug still clung to my system. Found out that it didn't. All gone, years ago, of course. But it sure possessed me, body and pantaloons, when I was a youngster.

"The profound yearning to be a minstrel man is a thing that the youngsters of today know nothing about. But, as I say, it was the dream that had most of the lads of my hadhood mumbling in their sleep. I can't remember a solitary member of the boy gang with which I affiliated and fought who wouldn't rather have got into the burnt-cork bushess than have become president of the United States. It was a microbe with all of us, an obsession that made the majority of us all but useless in buckling down to the solid facts of work-a-day life.

"I believe, though, that it had me rocking more than any of the other youngsters of my bunch, for I really could do something. I was clever with my feet, and I could sing a bit. It was just because of the fact that I could do something that I was cursed early.

"My level-headed old dad had a pretty tidy plumber's shop down on 'the Island,' as we used to call Southwest Washington, and, when I was 13, seeing that there was no use in trying to keep me from playing 'hookey' from school, he put me in his shop, under his shrewd eye, as an apprentice to learn the plumber's trade.

"I was a husky gossoon of a boy, and went along pretty well for a year or so, until the ache to be a minstrel man got possession of me. In those days all of the boys used to practice jig steps on their favorite corners after supper of evenings, for boys at that time used to flock by themselves, and didn't spend their spare time in combing out their bangs and trying to make hits with the girls of the neighborhood. The girl gag wasn't any part of the game of the growing boy when I was coming along.

"Well, at these corner jig seances the fact began to stand out pretty early that I had something on all the rest of the tads of my bunch when it came to quick and shifty feet stuff. And when the rest began to refer to me as the main jiggist of the push it was all off with me.

"I couldn't see the plumber's trade with a binocular as big as a Dahlgren gun, and it was going to be a minstrel business for mine or nothing. I used to take in all the minstrel shows, at a quarter a throw up in the gallery, that swung along to Washington, and there were lots of minstrel shows in those days. And the more I looked at these minstrel shows the more I became convinced that I had a lot of the black-face people of Dubville outshined in juggling. I took to singing and found that I could tear off some of that, too. I also practiced the coon dialect business, and the boys of my gang, generally a sardonically critical, not to say derisive, lot, pronounced me to be there with the Sambo spiels. I heard that they had what they called amateur nights at a prominent minstrel house over in Philadelphia.

"I saved up for two weeks to get the price of a ticket there and back, and I finely sneaked over to Phillie and got a chance to go on on one of the amateur nights. I did an aged coon stunt, singing 'The Old Bay Mule,' and padding that out with the '24, count 'em, jig steps that I had picked up. I was the only one out of the sixteen tads of boys who went on at the Philadelphia house that amateur night that didn't get chased off by the hoots of the bunch in front. Fact is, they asked me to come back. And that was the completion of my ruin.

"When I returned to Washington in time to get to work on the following morning, so that my dad wouldn't get next to where I'd been, I began to soldier on my job something awful. I rattled around some pieces of brass pipe, so that my dad 'ud hear me 'working' from his little office down below the workroom, and then I'd jig variations. My $7 a week began to trickle away for coon wigs and make-up auxiliaries for the burnt-cork man—dancing clogs and slap shoes and such truck—and, as an apprentice at the plumbing trade, I wasn't earning one-seventh of my $7 a week, either. My dad used to corral me up in the loft doing the yodle and jig thing every once in a while, and I can see him yet shaking his wise, grizzled old head, and hear him mumbling those things about fool boys and d—d loafers and so on. He had not even an inkling of a notion that I was tossing around in my little white bunk o' nights trying to dope out some way to bulge into the minstrel business. But, looking back now, I can see that he had it figured out for a pipe that I was never going to do as a plumber, apt as I was at the trade.

"I had taken to reading the old Clipper so's to keep informed of the movements of the minstrel outfits, and one day I read in it an ad stating that 'talent was wanted' for a minstrel outfit forming in Baltimore. The ad required that applicants should inclose $10 in the first letter as an evidence of good faith. I fell for that, something easy, shooting the application with the $10 along half an hour after I'd read the ad. I never got any reply, of course, but the mere knowledge that I had an application for a job as a minstrel kept me alive for four months. My hopes up to cutting in with the Baltimore outfit began to ooze some at the end of the four months, however, when I read another ad also in the Clipper, setting forth the fact that the Memphis minstrels (forty strong—count 'em, forty strong—were organizing in Pittsburg for a tour of the West and South, and needed some more 'talent.' Nothing was said in this ad about inclosing any money with applications. I sat down and wrote to the organizer of the Memphis minstrels, a man named Murtha, telling him how strong I was at the 'Footprints in the Sand' thing, and how I was there with the quavery pipes in the aged coon stuff.

"I received a telegram from Mr. Murtha two days later, requesting me to 'state my terms.'

"Now, a lot of good things have come my way, please God, since that time, and I hope I've accepted them with becoming modesty and gratitude. I've had the fun of making some money. I've swelled up powerfully over the birth of my first boy, and plenty of little events have filtered in my direction to make me feel for a little while that the world was my oyster and that I was engaged in opening it.

"But, gentlemen, I want to go on record as stating that nothing ever happened to me that gave me the glow of sustained and serene joy that the receipt of that telegram from the sure-enough, honest-Injun manager of that minstrel show did.

"It was hours before I could keep my hand from shaking long enough to write him a telegram stating that my terms were $25 a week. When, late that afternoon, I got another telegram from him, informing me that he would give me $15 a week and expenses, and directing me to 'come on' if the terms suited, I had reached, as I thought then, and, b'jee, as I think yet, the supreme hour of my existence. I say that I think so yet because, looking back at it with the cooled-out view of a man of my age and the father of a family at that, I clearly remember that the receipt of that telegram to 'come on' transported me to a seventh heaven of rapture compared with which the Mohammedan's paradise must have been a house of correction.

"I got that 'come-on' telegram on a Saturday. Was I going to 'come on?' Was the Potomac going to keep on sliding toward the sea?

"I handed my old dad some gnome narrative about wanting to get off early to go downtown to buy some clothes, drew my weekly $7 from him—I already had $15 saved up for such an emergency—and slid home. I knew that I'd find the house empty at that hour, 4 in the afternoon, because it was a couple of hours before supper, and my mother always spent Saturday afternoon at the market, buying truck for Sunday, and my sisters were always at some matinee or other on Saturday afternoons. I was correct, and when I got home I had the house to myself. I slipped up to my little old white-washed room—and I've never had a room since, fellers, that I remember half so kindly as I do that one—and threw my possessions into my first trunk, a zinc box about two and a half feet long and some considerable shyer than that in height and breadth. I had it packed and locked in less than fifteen minutes. I dragged the trunk downstairs, threw it on my shoulder when I got outside, tossed it onto the rear platform of an old Seventh street horse car and made down and wrote to the organizer of the Memphis minstrels, a man named Murtha, telling him how strong I was at the 'Footprints in the Sand' thing, and how I was there with the quavery pipes in the aged coon stuff.

I dragged the trunk downstairs, threw it on my shoulder when I got outside, tossed it onto the rear platform of an old Seventh street horse car and made the bunk into the old-timer, telling him of what a long time I'd been in the business and all that sort of boy-like lying. I thought I was getting by with it, too, but, casting back to it now, I know the meaning of the good-natured glances that he kept passing at me out of the tail of his eye as I went along telling him how I'd been with the Haverly outfit for several years, and such demphool boy nonsense.

"'I'll introduce you to some of the boys,' Murtha said, after we'd had this talk, and there I was, hired and on equal terms with those gods of my walking and sleeping dreams, the bunch of forty—count 'em, forty—honest-and-truly minstrel men. They were all a great deal older than I was, and most of the poor devils looked like bums, but I couldn't see that then. They were all members of the president's cabinet, and bigger'n that, even, to me; and when they gave me the slap on the back and called me pal and mate and said old hoss, and asked me if I happened to have any finecut in my clothes, I guess I wasn't peering out at the world through a pair of rose-glass lorgnettes! Those fellows could all do something, too. I saw that when we rehearsed at old Liberty hall on the following morning. I got by Murtha something easy when I did the aged coon thing for him, and he put me on one of the bone ends.

"We were to open at Zanesville, Ohio, on the approaching Thursday, and—well, we did open there. I believe there were fourteen people in the house, including the three town constables that had been staked to passes. The trail of the panic of '73 was yet heavy on the Middle Western states, and the one-night shows were all going to the dump. We went on to the next town, and to the next and the next, but there was nothing doing, although the towns had all been billed with the 40—count 'em—49 posters. The handsomest of the Memphis minstrels were the first to begin to fall away from us. They had a chance to get work somewhere or other, which the rest of the members of the outfit didn't, and when the musicians saw that they were out with a dead one, and that there was going to be no ghost-walk, they slipped away in pairs and trios. Their defection hurt me a lot, because the street parades had to be cut out. I sure enjoyed those street parades. A nine-mile route didn't seem much more than a block to me when we were parading, with the boom-ta-ra of the hollow former twelve bandsmen up in front, and us four-a-fact minstrel men streeling out behind, in our silk toperinos and bulgy cream-colored frock coats, and all the Rubes and Zekes trailing along, looking at us in awe, as I thought—the young ones especially. I knew the inner feelings of the boys who tagged after the minstrel parades, and how I did inwardly gloat at the thought of how I had it on em all—me, a sure-enough minstrel man that had landed!

"When the remaining members of the bunch began to see that there wasn't going to be a cent of coin in it for them, the desertions became general, most of them taking the ties for it to make Cincinnati. The finish came when we landed in a bum little town about sixty miles from Dayton. There were only nine of us left, with one of the end men doing a piano-thumping gag in place of the deserted orchestra. The few folks in the audience who had come to count the 'forty' went out during the intermission, taking return checks as they went, and they came back with invalid eggs and passe vegetables. That settled it. Murtha told us that he was all in, and that it was a case of all hands to cover the best way they knew how. We'd been pretty shy on the eat thing for a number of days, and I was a growing boy with an appetite. Somehow or another, when I fell to thinking of the little old whitewashed room I'd left behind down on 'the island,' and of the dinners which my mother knew so well how to frame up, and of the dessert-making stunts that my sisters were pulling off in the kitchen all the time—well, somehow or another the plumber's trade didn't strike me as being such a bad thing after all.

"My watch had already gone, and when I went back to the hotel on the day of the final bust-up, the hotel clerk bought my cameo ring of me for $3, and it ached me to have to pull it off and pass it over to him for the three, but there was nothing else for it when he informed me that Dayton, sixty miles away, was the nearest place from which I could send a telegram for money. The next morning I went over to Dayton out of the $3, and wired my dad for $15, saying that I wanted to return home at once—that being the first word I'd sent home since my getaway.

"The $15 came along in a few hours, and I slunk back to Washington, looking pretty much on the fritz, with my ears caked up with black cork that I'd been unable or didn't have the time to wash out, and my ornate song-and-dance togs pretty much rumpled up and frayed from my month of one-night-stand jumping around and sleeping in punk day coaches in all sorts of curled-up attitudes.

"I got home early in the afternoon, feeling powerful cheap, but, of course, my mother gave me a big reception and a lay-out of hugs, just as if I'd been circumnavigating the planet Jupiter on an airship for thirty years or so. She told me to 'wash that nasty black stuff off myself'—and say, fellers, I guess the little old white-painted bath tub, filled to the brim with hot water, felt bad again yet!

"'When I'd got myself looking decent, 'you'd better go down and see your father now, son,' my mother said to me; and there was nothing else for it but that, much as I hated the job, and onnery as I felt over the necessity of having to do it.

"'Well, the old gentleman rammed his hands into his front trouser's pockets and grinned grimly when he clapped eyes on me. He was pretty glad I'd come back, but he didn't let on anything as to that, and I didn't know it then.

"'Go home and take it easy for a day or so,' was all the fine old hard-headed boy said to me, 'and then come back to work. And, hereafter, if you want to imitate anybody try to imitate a gentleman, instead of a coon.'

"I went to work at plumbing the next morning, with the minstrel microbe thoroughly eradicated from my system, and I never had any recurrence of it. Homo cooking looked pretty good to me, and I've never taken a chance on losing out on three of those square eat things per day from that time down to the present hour."

THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER BECOMES MRS. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH IN NOTABLE WEDDING AT WHITE HOUSE

WOULD BE LET ALONE

China Wants the Powers to Keep Their Hands Off.

Any Uprising Would be Promptly Subdued by the Emperor.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The Post today says: "There is no danger whatever of an uprising in China against foreigners," said Sir Chentung Liang Chang, the Chinese minister.

"It is true, of course, that there is political agitation in China, but its object is to create such excitement as to cause international complications with the view of crippling if not wholly destroying the present dynasty. My government is amply prepared to meet any emergency. I do not mean that China is threatened with a revolution, but that a small party of discontents is striving desperately to start a revolution. But the movement would not be strong or dangerous.

"My government is keeping me minutely informed. If as a result of the agitation now going on a worthy foreigner is harmed the emperor's soldiers will pounce upon the community that harbors the miscreants and lay it waste, should they be unable to find every one of the scoundrels responsible directly or indirectly, for the trouble. The slaughter will be sickening if the government is driven to reprisals. Yuan Shi Ki, the great viceroy of Chili set the example for this sort of rigid work in the Boxer uprising of 1900. The slaughter of the Chinese by the emperor's soldiers will be more horrible than that of Yuan soldiers six years ago if the miscreants now at work to involve China in foreign trouble do not desist.

"Millions of dollars have been expended by the central government in the last six years in bringing the army up to a proper condition of efficiency. China does not want to go to war. We are a peaceable people. War is hateful, awful horrible—hell.

"Is there likelihood of a foreign war?"

"None, so long as the outside world lets China manage her own affairs."

"Is it a fact that Germany, or Germans, are mainly responsible for a large part of the threatening trouble in China at present?"

"The Germans are aggressive," he replied. "Since the dawn of your civilization the Germans have been the disturbers of the peace and repose of other peoples and nations within what is now the Christian domain. They seem always discontented with what they have. I do not say that they are responsible in any sense for what is going on behind the scenes in China. I merely tell you that I have heard that stated in well informed and responsible quarters.

"I am keeping my government informed of all I know and all I hear. I have pleaded with the authorities at Pekin to be careful to see to it that foreigners of all classes are treated unusually well in China while this agitation lasts. I have learned that my advice is being followed all over China.

"The Chinese have adopted a new internal policy. There will be no more concessions to foreigners.

"The granting of concessions to foreigners have been a too fruitful source of trouble to be continued. And so we shall attend to our own affairs in future, and we hope the outside world—the Christian world—will permit us to do this. When I reflect that all of Christendom is an armed camp, I am convinced that we are more peaceably and neighborly inclined than is the Christian world. I suspect that statistics would show that there are today more men in uniform, and with deadly weapons in their hands, than at any time in the world's history. Even China is armed to protect itself.

"Why is the government of the United States strengthening its military forces in the Orient?" was suggested.

"That is something I do not understand," replied Sir Chentung.

SWISS ICE TRUST

Cutting Down Mont Blanc at Height of 4,000 Feet.

Chamonix, Switzerland, Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—An ice trust has formed to monopolize the clouds. To begin with, it is cutting down the Mont Blanc glacier at a height of 4,000 feet. The ice used to be mined with the aid of dynamite, but only small blocks could be secured, and all of them had a yellowish color. Now it is done with powder. Afterwards the blocks are cut into regular cubes and sent into the valley by a small gauge railway. In the valley they are cleaned and then sent by train to Southern France. The ice trust pays its workmen $1 a day in wages.

KILLED A MAN BY KNOCKING HIM DOWN.

Boston, Feb. 17.—Because he resented what he called an insulting remark addressed to his women friends, James E. Mars is alleged to have struck a man supposed to have been J. Brooks of Lowell, and knocked him down in Washington street today. Brooks died later at a hospital without recovering consciousness, and Mars was arrested on the charge of murder. The dead man was about 40 years old. Mars is 23 years old. Brooks' death apparently was the result of a fractured skull caused by his head striking the pavement.

PRECURSOR OF TROUBLE

Interruption of Cable Was Warning of Seismic Disturbances.

Martinique Has the Worst Earthquake Shock in Sixty-four Years.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The belief of officials here that the recent prolonged interruption of the submarine cables in West Indian waters was the precursor of great seismic disturbances was confirmed by the receipt today of a cablegram, dated at Fort de France, island of Martinique, yesterday, from American Consul Jewell, as follows:

"Most violent earthquake shock in sixty-four years prevailed over the entire island at 2 o'clock this afternoon. No great damage."

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, B. W. I., Friday, Feb. 16.—A very severe earthquake was felt here at 1:35 p. m. today, and another severe shock was experienced at 2:55 p. m. Nearly all the walls and buildings in Castries were damaged.

Pointe a Pietre, Island of Guadeloupe, D. W. I., Feb. 16 (Friday.)—Terre, on this island, experienced slight earthquake shocks this afternoon.

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, B. W. I., Feb. 17.—Following the earlier earthquakes of yesterday another shock was felt at 5:45 p. m. yesterday and loud detonations and slight shocks continued until 3 o'clock this morning. The inhabitants are in a very disturbed state of mind and business is suspended. Some of the larger residences have been badly damaged and their occupants have sought shelter elsewhere. Many private houses and stores sustained serious losses.

Cable communication with the islands of St. Vincent and Barbadoes has been severed by the earthquakes.

CASTRO READY FOR CONFLICT

Preparations for War at the Venezuelan Ports Are Completed.

Caracas, Thursday, Feb. 15 (via Willemstad, Island of Curacao, Feb. 17.)—The preparations for war at the Venezuelan ports have been completed. A large quantity of ammunition arrived in Venezuela last week.

All the foreign consuls, consular agents and other foreign officials have been absolutely forbidden to go on board steamers at Venezuelan ports without first obtaining official permission.

The American minister, Mr. Russell, who has been suffering from an indisposition, has gone to Macuto to recuperate.

The Venezuelan government has appointed Guzman Garbiras to be minister to the United States in place of M. Veloz-Goiticoa, who offended President Castro by voting to hold the Pan-American congress at Rio de Janiero.

NOT RESPONSIBLE.

Mrs. Dickens Discharged From Charge of Murdering Husband.

Minneapolis, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The grand jury, late yesterday, decided that the killing of Edward Dickens by his wife was accidental, and Mrs. Dickens was discharged by the police.

The jury, after spending two days over the evidence, came to the conclusion that the woman was not responsible, and refused to return a bill against her.

The tragedy occurred last Monday, and Dickens died Wednesday, at the Swedish hospital. Before he died, however, he became reconciled with his wife, and made a deathbed statement, completely vindicating her. He also willed her all his property and personal effects.

A PAPAL ENCYCLICAL CONDEMNS FRENCH LAW.

Rome, Feb. 17.—A papal encyclical was issued to the French episcopacy clergy and people today on the situation of the church in France, strongly condemning the law providing for the separation of church and state, and giving advice to Catholics. Several French bishops, who were summoned here, have arrived in Rome to receive verbal instructions for the guidance under the new order of things in France.

EARLY SETTLER DEAD.

Mazeppa, Minn., Feb. 17.—Mrs. Joel B. Sheldon, one of the earliest settlers in these parts, is dead as a result of paralysis. Mrs. Sheldon was born in Lockwood, Ill., June 15, 1839, moved to Wyocena, Wis., as a child, came to Pine Island township in 1856, and was married to Joel B. Sheldon in 1859. Her husband and seven children survive her. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon.

TERRORISTS TRY POISON

As Substitute for Open Violence to Russian Rulers.

Important Arrest of Revolutionists Made by Police.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—An important arrest of six Social Revolutionists lavishly provided with explosives and bombs, who it is believed were planning an attempt on the life of Governor General Goubasoff of Moscow, was made here yesterday evening, just previous to their departure for Moscow. A seventh man of the party, a student, threw away a bomb and escaped. The police also took into custody eight Terrorists belonging to another group at whose residence was found cyanide of potassium and other deadly chemicals sufficient, it is said, to kill half the population of St. Petersburg, and thousands of revolutionary proclamations. It is suspected that the Terrorists failing to reach prominent persons here by open violence are about to try the more subtle means of poison. The police here have been advised of the arrest at Saratoff of the members of the social revolutionary committee instituted to incite agrarian trouble in the province of Saratoff. Among those arrested are many students. One of the latter was found to have a poisoned dagger in his possession.

JAP BARON

Complains of Treatment He Received on a German Steamer.

Bremen, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The North German Lloyds received a vigorous protest from a Jap baron, complaining that he and several compatriots were grossly ill-treated and insulted by the management of the steamer Zieten. "Think of it," says Baron Suyemeatsu, "when I boarded the ship at Genoa I found three of my compatriots, a naval captain, a jurist, and a government engineer at the end of the table, and there the steward asked me to be seated, too; me, a Japanese baron."

"Reflect, a Japanese baron, a naval captain, a doctor of law, and an engineer sitting at the end of the table. I protested, of course, and the steward gave us a table by ourselves. Let me protest against such discrimination. Why shouldn't Japanese gentlemen sit with the rest of the passengers?"

The Lloyds says all Japs who have good table manners will be seated with the other passengers, but the majority "eat like pigs, grunt and drop half their dinner. Out of respect for the other passengers they are given separate seats."

JAPS ARE GRATEFUL.

Tokio, Feb. 17.—The sincerest gratitude is expressed here on all sides at President Roosevelt's appeal to the American nation for assistance for the sufferers from famine in Japan. His action is appreciated as the timeliest mark of America's unvarying friendship.

DUNN FIGHT ON NELSON

Will Introduce Old Bitterness in Next State Convention.

Federal Ring of Twin Cities Now Booming Senator Sommerville.

St. Paul, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—That there will be an element of the old bitterness in the next Republican state convention is now practically assured. During the last few days R. C. Dunn has become very active among the local workers and has personally met a number of them. There seems to be no foundation for the report that Dunn held a secret conference at the Merchants in the interests of Peter E. Hanson for governor. It is well known, however, that Dunn is anxious to have a strong Swede come out as a candidate for governor, not so much to defeat Johnson as to overthrow his old-time enemy, E. A. Nelson of Hallock, who has had the temerity to announce his candidacy for secretary of state in the face of such opposition as the man from Princeton.

Dunn is out to defeat Nelson. That is why Swan B. Molander was induced to declare his candidacy. Molander's announcement is regarded in local circles as a challenge from Dunn to Nelson that there will be war to the knife in the next state convention. State Auditor Iverson will also join the Molander contingent and no doubt swing his following into line for Molander.

Had Dunn been able to secure the

FOOTPADS NUMEROUS.

Robbers Are Very Busy in the Streets of St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The police being busy hunting for political criminals, the other kind flourishes at an unheard of rate. The streets are honeycombed with beggars all day long, and after dark beggars and out-of-works turn footpads and robbers. Business men and women, compelled to walk the streets after dark, are obliged to don ragged coats and tattered hats to be free from molestation and to protect their lives. All well-dressed persons are importuned for alms and where such are not forthcoming at once and in lordly fashion, a knife thrust or assault by leaded cane or club follows. The police has forbidden the press to report cases of robbery, hence the footpads consider themselves under the protection of the authorities and act accordingly.

Witnessed by a Brilliant and Distinguished Assemblage.

Decorations the Most Elaborate Ever Known at White House.

The Nuptial Knot is Tied by Bishop Henry Satterlee.

Washington, Feb. 17.—In the beautiful white and gold East room of the White House a few minutes after noon today, the venerable Right Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, bishop of Washington of the Protestant Episcopal church, pronounced the fateful words which united Alice Lee Roosevelt, eldest daughter of the president of the United States, and Nicholas Longworth, the representative in congress from the first district of Ohio.

The ceremony—the simple, beautiful and impressive ring service of the Protestant Episcopal church—was attended with all the splendor of a grand official function and with all the devotional beauty of a cathedral service. It was witnessed by one of the most brilliant and distinguished assemblages ever gathered in the White House, by far the largest company which ever graced the executive mansion on a similar occasion.

A halo of a hundred years of romantic White House history hung over the bridal couple. Miss Roosevelt was the twelfth bride, according to accepted authorities, to plight her troth within its classic walls and the identical spot where she today joined hands with the husband of her choice, "for better, for worse," is hallowed in the memory of another White House bride, beloved "Nellie Grant, who thirty-two years ago on that same spot became the wife of an Englishman, Algernon C. F. Sartoris. Tender, indeed, must have been the recollections of Mrs. Sartoris of that day, now long ago, for she was one of the witnesses of Miss Roosevelt's wedding.

Since that day, a third of a century ago, tremendous changes have taken place. Then this country scarcely had recovered from the awful shock of great internal conflict and its place among the nations of the earth was conjectural; now America stands forth unchallenged as among the first powers of the world, in peace, as well as in war.

Gladly, therefore, did princesses and potentates pay homage today to the daughter of the president. Glad they were to extend their courteous tributes to the president's daughter and doubly glad were they to extend them to the dainty bride for herself. Kings and emperors, through their personal representatives, joined with the American people in extending to Alice Lee Roosevelt, the American girl, their heartfelt good wishes.

MRS. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

It has been the desire not only of Miss Roosevelt, who was most concerned, but of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt that the wedding today should be celebrated in a manner comparatively quiet, that it should be a family affair. This desire, it shortly was disclosed, could not be gratified. As it finally developed, the wedding was the most imposing function that ever took place in the White House. The thousand guests bidden to the ceremony began to arrive shortly after 11 o'clock. They entered by the east terrace and passed up the main staircase directly to the historic East room. Beautiful at all times, the famous room today was exquisite in its classic splendor.

The warm sunshine of a perfect February day flooded the room, rendering it unnecessary to use the hundreds of electric lamps which had been placed about the apartment.

The floral decorations were more elaborate than any heretofore have been in President Roosevelt's administration. While unnecessary space in the apartment was not taken up with decorations, as every inch of it was needed to accommodate the guests, two huge vases of rare design, each filled with Easter lilies and fern fronds occupied each of the mantels, and two handsome tables, one each at the north and south ends of the room, bore jardenieres of flowers rhododendrons.

At the great center windows, directly opposite the main entrance of the room and overlooking the east terrace, a superb floral bower had been contrived with exquisite skill and artistic taste. A semi-circular platform, twelve inches high, was constructed before the windows. On this the ceremony took place, so that all in the room had practically an unobstructed view of it. The platform was carpeted in green, of handsome design, and over the carpet was thrown with artistic carelessness, an elegant oriental rug, designed in curious and intricate figures. In colors, red predominated. Banked back of the platform and next to the windows were palms, selected for the beauty and closeness of their leaves. This group of palms was fringed at the base with astilbe japonica. Forming a background were dracena sanderli, of green and white, and gorgeous Easter lilies. Above the platform there was a garlanding of greenhouse smilax and asparagus, with scores of the loveliest bride roses nestling in the green. The effect of the whole was exquisitely beautiful.

While the decorations in the other rooms on the main floor of the White House were beautiful, they were less elaborate than those in the East room. The vases in the Green room were filled with enchantress carnations of delicate pink and fer fronds. The Blue room vases bore Easter lilies, with fern and asparagus fronds; while two great vases at each end of the mantel were filled with Easter lilies and white roses.

In the window recess small palms and flowering plants were disposed effectively. In the red room, to harmonize with the color scheme of the apartment, the vases contained jacquiminot roses in a setting of fern and asparagus fronds. The state dining room, which was not thrown open to the guests until after the ceremony, was a vision of grandeur. The great high walls and ceiling, panelled in walnut, like the halls of a Saxon lord of old, bearing, just below the ceiling the hunting trophies of the president, formed a magnificent setting for the beautifully decorated table on which, amid a shimmer of silver and cutglass, the buffet wedding breakfast was laid. The great table, extending almost the entire length of the apartment, was decorated with vases of American beauty and bride roses, ferns and asparagus. In the private dining room, which opens into the state dining room on the north, the vases on the table contained American beauty and bride roses and ferns.

The decorations of the main corridor were beautifully artistic. The niches were filled with decorative plants, stately palms and tree ferns. The two great jardinieres between the columns along the corridor were planted with handsome rhododendrons in full flower. The blossoms were of purple and pink and the plants were so arranged in the jardinieres so that they formed a living screen just twelve inches high.

Behind this screen was stationed in the vestibule the magnificent Marine band orchestra under the personal leadership of Lieut. William H. Santelman, the director of the band. A special program had been prepared for the wedding. The music was selected, for the most part, by Miss Roosevelt herself. During the wedding and the reception

TO PIERCE EASTERN ALPS.

Berne, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Now that the Simplon tunnel is about ready for traffic, the Swiss authorities are preparing to pierce the Eastern Alps. The councils of several cantons are co-operating to promote this great enterprise. The choice lies between piercing the Spluegen or building a tunnel through the Greina. The first project seems to be most favored. The matter will come up before the federal council in a few weeks.

"Is it a fact that Germany, or Germans, are mainly responsible for a large part of the threatening trouble in China at present?"

"The Germans are aggressive," he replied. "Since the dawn of your civilization the Germans have been the disturbers of the peace and repose of other peoples and nations within what is now the Christian domain. They seem always discontented with what they have. I do not say that they are responsible in any sense for what is going on behind the scenes in China. I merely tell you that I have heard that stated in well informed and responsible quarters.

"I am keeping my government informed of all I know and all I hear. I have pleaded with the authorities at Pekin to be careful to see to it that foreigners of all classes are treated unusually well in China while this agitation lasts. I have learned that my advice is being followed all over China.

"The Chinese have adopted a new internal policy. There will be no more concessions to foreigners.

"The granting of concessions to foreigners have been a too fruitful source of trouble to be continued. And so we shall attend to our own affairs in future, and we hope the outside world—the Christian world—will permit us to do this. When I reflect that all of Christendom is an armed camp, I am convinced that we are more peaceably and neighborly inclined than is the Christian world. I suspect that statistics would show that there are today more men in uniform, and with deadly weapons in their hands, than at any time in the world's history. Even China is armed to protect itself.

"Why is the government of the United States strengthening its military forces in the Orient?" was suggested.

"That is something I do not understand," replied Sir Chentung.

SWISS ICE TRUST

Cutting Down Mont Blanc at Height of 4,000 Feet.

Chamonix, Switzerland, Feb. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—An ice trust has formed to monopolize the clouds. To begin with, it is cutting down the Mont Blanc glacier at a height of 4,000 feet. The ice used to be mined with the aid of dynamite, but only small blocks could be detached, and all of them had a yellowish tinge. Now it is done with powder. Afterwards the blocks are cut into regular cakes and sent into the valley by a small cable railway. In the valley they are covered and then sent by train to Southern France. The ice trust pays its workmen $1 a day in wages.

KILLED A MAN BY KNOCKING HIM DOWN.

Boston, Feb. 17.—Because he resented what he called an insulting remark addressed to his women friends, James E. Mars is alleged to have struck a man supposed to have been J. Brooks of Lowell, and knocked him down in Washington street today. Brooks died later at a hospital without recovering consciousness, and Mars was arrested on the charge of murder. The dead man was about 40 years old. Mars is 23 years old. Brooks death, apparently was the result of a fractured skull caused by his head striking the pavement.

PRECURSOR OF TROUBLE

Interruption of Cable Was Warning of Seismic Disturbances.

Martinique Has the Worst Earthquake Shock in Sixty-four Years.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The belief of officials here that the recent prolonged interruption of the submarine cables in West Indian waters was the precursor of great seismic disturbances was confirmed by the receipt today of a cablegram, dated at Fort de France, island of Martinique, yesterday, from American Consul Jewell, as follows:

"Most violent earthquake shock in sixty-four years prevailed over the entire island at 2 o'clock this afternoon. No great damage."

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, B. W. I., Friday, Feb. 16.—A very severe earthquake was felt here at 1:35 p. m. today, and another severe shock was experienced at 2:55 p. m. Nearly all the walls and buildings in Castries were damaged.

Pointe a Pietre, Island of Guadeloupe, D. W. I., Feb. 16 (Friday.)—Terre, on this island, experienced slight earthquake shocks this afternoon.

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, B. W. I., Feb. 17.—Following the earlier earthquakes of yesterday another shock was felt at 5:45 p. m. yesterday and loud detonations and slight shocks continued until 3 o'clock this morning. The inhabitants are in a very disturbed state of mind and business is suspended. Some of the large residences have been badly damaged and their occupants have sought shelter elsewhere. Many private houses and stores sustained serious losses.

Cable communication with the islands of St. Vincent and Barbadoes has been severed by the earthquakes.

CASTRO READY FOR CONFLICT

Preparations for War at the Venezuelan Ports Are Completed.

Caracas, Thursday, Feb. 15 (via Willemstad, Island of Curacao, Feb. 17.)—The preparations for war at the Venezuelan ports have been completed. A large quantity of ammunition arrived in Venezuela last week.

All the foreign consuls, consular agents and other foreign officials have been absolutely forbidden to go on board steamers at Venezuelan ports without first obtaining official permission.

The American minister, Mr. Russell, who has been suffering from an indisposition, has gone to Macuto to recuperate.

The Venezuelan government has appointed Guzman Garbiras to be minister to the United States in place of M. Vez-Gutteon, who offended President Castro by voting to hold the Pan-American congress at Rio de Janiero.

NOT RESPONSIBLE.

Mrs. Dickens Discharged From Charge of Murdering Husband.

Minneapolis, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The grand jury, late yesterday, decided that the killing of Edward Dickens by his wife was accidental, and Mrs. Dickens was discharged by the police.

The jury, after spending two days over the evidence, came to the conclusion that the woman was not responsible, and refused to return a bill against her.

The tragedy occurred last Monday, and Dickens died Wednesday, at the Swedish hospital. Before he died, however, he became reconciled with his wife, and made a deathbed statement, completely vindicating her. He also willed her all his property and personal effects.

A PAPAL ENCYCLICAL CONDEMNS FRENCH LAW.

Rome, Feb. 17.—A papal encyclical was issued to the French episcopacy clergy and people today on the situation of the church in France, strongly condemning the law providing for the separation of church and state, and giving advice to Catholics. Several French bishops who were summoned here, have arrived in Rome to receive verbal instructions for the guidance under the new order of things in France.

EARLY SETTLER DEAD.

Mazeppa, Minn., Feb. 17.—Mrs. Joel B. Sheldon, one of the earliest settlers in these parts, is dead as a result of paralysis. Mrs. Sheldon was born in Lockwood, Ill., June 15, 1839, moved to Wyocena, Wis., as a child, came to Pine Island township in 1856, and was married to Joel B. Sheldon in 1859. Her husband and seven children survive her. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon.

TERRORISTS TRY POISON

As Substitute for Open Violence to Russian Rulers.

Important Arrest of Revolutionists Made by Police.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—An important arrest of six Social Revolutionists lavishly provided with explosives and bombs, who it is believed were planning an attempt on the life of Governor General Goubasoff of Moscow, was made here yesterday evening, just previous to their departure for Moscow. A seventh man of the party, a student, threw away a bomb and escaped. The police also took into custody eight Terrorists belonging to another group at whose residence was found cranide of potassium and other deadly chemicals sufficient, it is said, to kill half the population of St. Petersburg, and thousands of revolutionary proclamations. It is suspected that the Terrorists failing to reach prominent persons here by open violence are about to try the more subtle means of poison. The police here have been advised of the arrest at Saratoff of the members of the social revolutionary committee instituted to incite agrarian trouble in the province of Saratoff. Among those arrested are many students. One of the latter was found to have a poisoned dagger in his possession.

JAP BARON

Complains of Treatment He Received on a German Steamer.

Bremen, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The North German Lloyds received a vigorous protest from a Jap baron, complaining that he and several compatriots were grossly ill-treated and insulted by the management of the steamer Zieten. "Think of it," says Baron Suyematsu, "when I boarded the ship at Genoa I found three of my compatriots, a naval captain, a jurist and a government engineer at the end of the table, and there the steward asked me to be seated, too; me, a Japanese baron."

"Reflect, a Japanese baron, a naval captain, a doctor of law, and an engineer sitting at the end of the table. I protested, of course, and the steward gave us a table by ourselves. Let me protest against such discrimination. Why shouldn't Japanese gentlemen sit with the rest of the passengers?"

The Lloyds says all Japs who have good table manners will be seated with the other passengers, but the majority "eat like pigs, grunt and drop half their dinner. Out of respect for the other passengers they are given separate seats."

JAPS ARE GRATEFUL.

Tokio, Feb. 17.—The sincerest gratitude is expressed here on all sides at President Roosevelt's appeal to the American nation for assistance for the sufferers from famine in Japan. His action is appreciated as the tiniest mark of America's unvarying friendship.

DUNN FIGHT ON NELSON

Will Introduce Old Bitterness in Next State Convention.

St. Paul, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—That there will be an element of the old bitterness in the next Republican state convention is now practically assured. During the last few days R. C. Dunn has become very active among the local workers and has personally met a number of them. There seems to be no foundation for the report that Dunn held a secret conference at the Merchants in the interests of Peter E. Hanson for governor. It is well known, however, that Dunn is anxious to have a strong Swede come out as a candidate for governor, not so much to defeat Johnson as to overthrow his old-time enemy, E. A. Nelson of Hallock, who has had the temerity to anounce his candidacy for secretary of state in the face of such opposition as the man from Princeton.

Dunn is out to defeat Nelson. That is why Swan B. Molander was induced to declare his candidacy. Molander's announcement is regarded in local circles as a challenge from Dunn to Nelson that there will be war to the knife in the next state convention. State Auditor Iverson will also join the Molander contingent and no doubt swing his following into line for Molander.

Had Dunn been able to secure the

FOOTPADS NUMEROUS.

Robbers Are Very Busy in the Streets of St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The police being busy hunting for political criminals, the other kind flourishes at an unheard of rate. The streets are honeycombed with beggars all day long, and after dark beggars and out-of-works turn footpads and robbers. Business men and women, compelled to walk the streets after dark, are obliged to don ragged coats and tattered hats to be free from molestation and to protect their lives. All well-dressed persons are importuned for alms and where such are not forthcoming at once and in lordly fashion, a klife thrust or assault by leaded cane or club follows. The police has forbidden the press to report cases of robbery, hence the footpads consider themselves under the protection of the authorities and act accordingly.

Witnessed by a Brilliant and Distinguished Assemblage.

Decorations the Most Elaborate Ever Known at White House.

The Nuptial Knot is Tied by Bishop Henry Satterlee.

Washington, Feb. 17.—In the beautiful white and gold East room of the White House a few minutes after noon today, the venerable Right Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, bishop of Washington of the Protestant Episcopal church, pronounced the fateful words which united Alice Lee Roosevelt, eldest daughter of the president of the United States, and Nicholas Longworth, the representative in congress from the first district of Ohio.

The ceremony—the simple, beautiful and impressive ring service of the Protestant Episcopal church—was attended with all the splendor of a grand official function and with all the devotional beauty of a cathedral service. It was witnessed by one of the most brilliant and distinguished assemblages ever gathered in the White House, by far the largest company which ever graced the executive mansion on a similar occasion.

A halo of a hundred years of romantic White House history hung over the bridal couple. Miss Roosevelt was the twelfth bride, according to accepted authorities, to plight her troth within its classic walls and the identical spot where she today joined hands with the husband of her choice, "for better, for worse," is hallowed in the memory of another White House bride, beloved "Nellie Grant, who thirty-two years ago on that same spot became the wife of an Englishman, Algernon C. F. Sartoris. Tender, indeed, must have been the recollections of Mrs. Sartoris of that day, now long ago, for she was one of the witnesses of Miss Roosevelt's wedding.

Since that day, a third of a century ago, tremendous changes have taken place. Then this country scarcely had recovered from the awful shock of great internal conflict and its place among the nations of the earth was conjectural; now America stands forth unchallenged as among the first powers of the world, in peace, as well as in war.

Gladly, therefore, did princesses and potentates pay homage today to the daughter of the president. Glad they were to extend their courteous tributes to the president's daughter and doubly glad were they to extend them to the dainty bride for herself. Kings and emperors, through their personal representatives, joined with the American people in extending to Alice Lee Roosevelt, the American girl, their heartfelt good wishes.

MRS. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

It has been the desire not only of Miss Roosevelt, who was most concerned, but of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt that the wedding today should be celebrated in a manner comparatively quiet, that it should be a family affair. This desire, it shortly was disclosed, could not be gratified. As it finally developed, the wedding was the most imposing function that ever took place in the White House. The thousand guests bidden to the ceremony began to arrive shortly after 11 o'clock. They entered by the east terrace and passed up the main staircase directly to the historic East room. Beautiful at all times, the famous room today was exquisite in its classic splendor.

The warm sunshine of a perfect February day flooded the room, rendering it unnecessary to use the hundreds of electric lamps which had been placed about the apartment.

The floral decorations were more elaborate than any heretofore have been in President Roosevelt's administration. While unnecessary space in the apartment was not taken up with decorations, as every inch of it was needed to accommodate the guests, two huge vases of rare design, each filled with Easter lilies and fern fronds occupied each of the mantels, and two handsome tables, one each at the north and south ends of the room, bore jardenieres of flowers rhododendrons.

At the great center windows, directly opposite the main entrance of the room and overlooking the east terrace, a superb floral bower had been contrived with exquisite skill and artistic taste. A semi-circular platform, twelve inches high, was constructed before the windows. On this the ceremony took place, so that all in the room had practically an unobstructed view of it. The platform was carpeted in green, of handsome design, and over the carpet was thrown with artistic carelessness, an elegant oriental rug, designed in curious and intricate figures. In colors, red predominated. Banked back of the platform and next to the windows were palms, selected for the beauty and closeness of their leaves. This group of palms was fringed at the base with astilbe japonica. Forming a background were dracena sanderii, of green and white, and gorgeous Easter lilies. Above the platform there was a garlanding of greenhouse smilax and asparagus, with scores of the loveliest bride roses nestling in the green. The effect of the whole was exquisitely beautiful.

While the decorations in the other rooms on the main floor of the White House were beautiful, they were less elaborate than those in the East room. The vases in the Green room were filled with enchantress carnations of delicate pink and fer fronds. The Blue room vases bore Easter lilies, with fern and asparagus fronds; while two great vases at each end of the mantel were filled with Easter lilies and white roses.

In the window recess small palms and flowering plants were disposed effectively. In the red room, to harmonize with the color scheme of the apartment, the vases contained jacquimmot roses in a setting of fern and asparagus fronds. The state dining room, which was not thrown open to the guests until after the ceremony, was a vision of grandeur. The great high walls and ceiling, panelled in walnut, like the halls of a Saxon lord of old, bearing, just below the ceiling the hunting trophies of the president, formed a magnificent setting for the beautifully decorated table on which, amid a shimmer of silver and cutglass, the buffet wedding breakfast was laid. The great table, extending almost the entire length of the apartment, was decorated with vases of American beauty and bride roses, ferns and asparagus. In the private dining room, which opens into the state dining room on the north, the vases on the mantel were filled with bride roses and fern fronds. Vases on the table contained American beauty and bride roses and ferns.

The decorations of the main corridor were beautifully artistic. The niches were filled with decorative plants, stately palms and tree ferns. The two great jardinieres between the columns along the corridor were planted with handsome rhododendrons in full flower. The blossoms were of purple and pink and the plants were so arranged in the jardinieres so that they formed a living screen just twelve inches high.

Behind this screen was stationed in the vestibule the magnificent Marine band orchestra under the personal leadership of Lieut. William H. Santelman, the director of the band. A special program had been prepared for the wedding. The music was selected, for the most part, by Miss Roosevelt herself. During the wedding and the reception

TO PIERCE EASTERN ALPS.

Berne, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Now that the Simplon tunnel is about ready for traffic, the Swiss authorities are preparing to pierce the Eastern Alps. The councils of several cantons are co-operating to promote this great enterprise. The choice lies between piercing the Spluegen or building a tunnel through the Greina. The first project seems to be most favored. The matter will come up before the federal council in a few weeks.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

Denver, Feb. 17.—Sir William Joseph Greene, who came to Denver five years ago from Boston seeking health, died yesterday at Mount Clair. Sir William was born in Connaught, Ireland, June, 1870, being a descendant on his mother's side from O'Rorke, prince of Brefny, and on his father's side from Viscount Taafe, baron of Ballymole. His grandmother was sister of the Viscount Taafe, premier of the Austrian empire. Sir William received his education from the Marist fathers and devoted his life to literature. The body will be forwarded to Roxbury, Mass., for interment.

Montreal, Feb. 17.—Lieut. Col. George A. Hughes, for thirteen years chief of police of Montreal, and commander of the crack French-Canadian regiment, the Sixty-fifth Royal Rifles, died today. He was well known in the United States.

London, Feb. 17.—Carl Joubert, the well-known writer on Russian subjects, died here last night.

ALEXANDER RALLYING.

New York, Feb. 17.—James W. Alexander, the former president of the Equitable Life Assurance society, who is in a critical condition at his home here, following a surgical operation, was reported today by his physicians to be rallying. The physicians said that Mr. Alexander passed a comfortable night, and that his condition today was satisfactory.

GOLD HELD IN RESERVE.

ORDERS AN ABSTRACT

First Step Taken to Clear Title to Courthouse Site.

New Building May Provide for Bar Association Library.

Since the county board and the new courthouse commisison have determined on a site for the new courthouse, no time is being lost by the county attorney's office in taking steps requisite to obtain title to the property, the east half of the block on which the federal building now stands.

The board directed the county attorney to begin condemnation proceedings, but before this is done an effort will be made to get the title of the several lots involved cleared up and in such condition that the transfer can be made after the condemnation proceedings.

The site was selected and confirmed at meetings of the county board and the courthouse commission Thursday afternoon. The following day W. G. Crosby, assistant county attorney, placed an order with one of the local abstract companies for an abstract of title to all the First and Second street lots involved in the selection. As there are several of these lots, and the land being some of that platted for the greatest length of time since the city of Duluth was started, there have been many transfers. The probability is that a search will discover some tax matters which have never been fully settled up. The work of getting out an abstract is likely to take several days. As soon as it is ready, however, the county attorney's office will immediately institute condemnation proceedings.

It is regarded as quite probable that the new courthouse, when erected, will provide adequate space for the Duluth Bar association library, which for some years past has been located in the Torrey building.

The bar association comprises the judges and practically all the local attorneys and there is a movement on foot to bring the needs of the association for suitable library space to the attention of the commission.

With the courthouse located on its present site, some distance from the downtown offices of the lawyers, it has been impracticable to have the bar library at the courthouse, even had the space been available, because the lawyers have frequently to visit the library, and to go to the courthouse every time they wished to consult the law books would inconvenience them in no small degree.

The bar association has a very large and valuable collection of law books and the idea of having it located in the new courthouse seems to meet with much favor among the members.

Parties desiring to invest $500 to $1,000 to complete a promising development proposition, may get particulars by addressing James Ames, 314 E. Fourth street, Duluth, Minn.

WORK OF RABBI SILBER.

Advance Copies of "The Gaon of Wilna" Are Out.

Advance copies of "The Gaon of Wilna" by Rabbi Mendel Silber of Duluth, have been received in the city.

To readers of Hebrew literature the name of the Gaon Elijah of Wilna is a more or less familiar name, but to those dependent upon the English literature, he is unknown even by name.

The work of Rabbi Silber is the first English publication to deal with the life and work of this most remarkable figure in Jewish history.

OLD PEOPLE ARE ARRESTED

Were Drinking and Carousing in House on St. Croix Avenue.

Five examples of hoary depravity were arraigned in the municipal court this morning, on the charge of disorderly conduct.

There were three women and two men in the list, and they gave their names as Ida Johnson, Mary Olson, Lizzie Stone, Michael Johnson and Julius Upland.

They were charged with dringing and carousing in the house at 124 St. Croix avenue, and disturbing the entire neighborhood with their actions.

They were all found guilty by Judge Windom, and each was sentenced to pay a fine of $15 and costs or spend fifteen days in the county jail.

Johnson is a fisherman, about 70 years of age, and the others apparently ranged from 35 years of age to 50.

ANOTHER WEAK DAY IN STOCKS

Coppers Are Very Dull With Prices Much Lower.

Strength did not come to the copper stock market today, and stocks were weaker in some quarters than they were yesterday. The Bisbees hold strong, however. Amalgamated opened at $111.87½, went to $112, and then dropped to $110.25. The closing price was $110.50 bid and $110.75 asked. United Copper opened at $70.87½ and closed, after a day of inactivity, at $68 bid and $68.87½ asked. North Butte opened at $86.25, dropped to $84.75, rallied to $86.75, and fell to $86.50 before the close. The closing price was $85.50 bid and $86..50 asked. Anaconda dropped from $275 to $271.

Calumet & Arizona was inactive, and closed at $118 asked, Calumet & Pittsburg at $36 bid and $37 asked, Denn-Arizona at $26 asked, Junction at $27 bid, Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $43.75 bid and $44.50 asked, and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $24 asked, after selling at $25.

Black Mountain sold at $12.50 and closed at $12 bid, Keweenaw sold at $17 and closed at $16.25 asked, Warren at $18 asked, Copper Queen at $2 asked, and Sullivan at $2 asked.

TWO FATALITIES AT MARQUETTE

Woman Killed In Runaway; Man Crushed by a Sawlog.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—A runaway team on the Chocolay road crashed into a sleigh containing Mrs. Lachlin Johnston and two children this morning. Mrs. Johnston and one child were injured, the mother fatally, dying shortly after noon.

Late yesterday Joseph Ayotte, single, living at Ishpeming was crushed by a falling sawlog while at work at Birch, northwest of here. He died within a few minutes.

WILL BE BURIED HERE.

Funeral of Victim of Boiler Explosion Will be Held Sunday.

The funeral of John Thompson, the fireman who was scalded by the explosion of the locomotive boiler at Frazee, Minn., will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home of his mother, Mrs. J. D. Madigan, 905 East Fourth street.

The funeral services will be in charge of Rev. R. J. Mooney and interment will be made at Forest Hill cemetery.

Mr. Thompson suffered terrible burns from the explosion of the boiler, and died in the hospital at Brainerd, where he was taken after the accident.

Old Soldiers to Entertain.

The members of Willis A. Gorman post, G. A. R., have planned another of their popular camp fires, to be given in Kalamazoo hall next Tuesday evening. The entertainment will include a program of much interest. Rev. Egbert L. Barber, formerly a member of the Tenth New York artillery, will tell some of his wartime reminiscences, and Mrs. B. Welcker, past department president of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, will deliver an address. War songs will be sung by a quartet, and recitations will be rendered by Misses Eva Sawyer, Effie Brotherton, Emily Brittts and by W. S. McCormick, interspersed with selections by the post drum corps.

TROUBLES OF THE LAW CODE

Session of Legislature May be Necessary to Extend Time.

St. Paul, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The possible necessity of a call for a special session of the legislature to consider a postponement of the date when the new code is to go into effect, is to be put up to Governor Johnson. That he will accede to the demand is hardly likely. In fact, it is intimated that he will turn the proposition down hard.

A hint of the possible need of a special session was given the governor today when he was called into a conference with Secretary of State Hanson, Expert Printer Dare, Assistant Attorney General Simpson, and others of the commission in charge of the publication of the new code.

As the code becomes a law by March 1 and the printing of the books by that date is very much in doubt, the situation was explained to him, but he declined to take a hand in the matter, remarking that this was rather a late date to call him into something that he should have known months ago. Later he left the conference with a request that if the commission had any explanation or recommendation to offer, they send it to him in writing. This Secretary of State Hanson promised to do.

Although one member of the commission declares that the books will be out on time without fail and another says he is positive some of the books at least will be ready for distribution, the whole thing is very much in the air. The contractors lay the blame on the editor, Mark H. Dunnell, saying that copy and proofs are not furnished fast enough, while Dunnell says he is working with all the diligence possible.

OFFERS 50 PER CENT ON CLAIMS.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 17.—The Standard Trust company of New York has made an offer of 50 per cent of the face value of all proven and undisputed claims against the bankrupt National Electric company of this city. Bloodgood, Kemper & Bloodgood, representing a majority of the creditors of the bankrupt concern, have sent a letter to their clients advising an acceptance of the offer, and it is said that creditors having claims of more than $400,000 have already signified their willingness to accept the offer.

CAUGHT UNDER ROLLING LOGS

Edward Anderson Injured in Accident at West End Mill.

While unloading logs at the Hubbard & Vincent mill in the West end this morning, Edward Anderson, one of the men employed at the mill, sustained serious injuries which may result fatally.

Anderson, who lives at 1816 West Superior street, was caught under the logs, and badly injured about the back and head. His ears were also almost torn from his head.

He was taken to St. Mary's hospital, where his wounds were dressed, and the doctors reported that he would probably survive the accident, and pull through without serious results.

Anderson is unmarried.

From Northern Lumber Company for Loss of Right Hand.

The summons and complaint in a personal damage suit of Stefan Wesnieski against the Northern Lumber company was filed in United States court today. This suit is transferred from the state district court for Carlton county.

The complaint asks for judgment for damages to the amount of $15,000 for the loss of the plaintiff's right hand, which it is claimed was cut off while Wesnieski was performing his duties as helper on the edger saw in the defendant company's mill in Cloquet last April.

HATS FOR MEN

A Columbia derby is made of about three ounces of light fluffy fur which a breath might blow away.

Through thirty-seven ingenious processes this double-handful of fur is transformed, first in to a cone shaped pouch of gauzy texture — then, through manipulation by hand, in hot water, into a fabric of great strength which, with the assistance of brain-guided machinery, but mainly by handwork, is shaped into the finished product.

In each of the different processes through which a Columbia hat passes something is done a little better than in any other make.

Noticeable elegance of style and superb quality are combined in an extremely unusual manner in

THIS STOCK JUMPS 25% IN TEN DAYS

This stock has increased in value 50% since January 1. It is now selling at 55 cents per share cash, or 60 cents on installments of 10% down and 10% a month for nine months. It will jump 25% the 28th and will continue to increase. Estimated value of this stock in two years, from four to eight dollars a share.

WHY PASS UP THIS PROFIT? In just ten days from to-day you will be either one of the hundreds of people who were shrewd enough to accept my advice and who bought Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. stock before the raise and who made a clean immediate profit of 25% or you will be one of the regretters who take cold comfort in the thought, "I had a chance, but passed it up."

If you are rich enough in this world's goods so you can safely be indifferent to money making opportunities you still have the responsibility of considering the interests of others who may be directly or indirectly dependent upon you. If, on the other hand, you have to work for your living, as the majority do, and I am one of the majority, you owe it to yourself as a matter of fairness to read carefully all that follows, consider and ACT PROMPTLY.

There is yet time for any investigation you want to make as to the value of the stock of the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. If you have a notion that because this stock is advertised or offered at a low figure that it can't be worth much, disabuse your mind of that illusion. Take my word for it, that this stock is cheap at any price under $2.00 a share. If you won't take my word for it, investigate and satisfy yourself in the matter, not by simple imagination but by learning the facts.

I make a business of finding safe and profitable investments for money savers. I employ the most reliable experts to assist me in determining the safety and profit values of an enterprise before I recommend it to the public. I can't afford to endorse anything that isn't sound. I could not remain in business if I did. I can't deal in "prospects," nor can I permit my clients to do so through me. I won't speculate with my own money nor will I with yours.

It is gratifying to receive calls from scores of people who have investigated for themselves and who say, "Mr. Underwood, I had my doubts, but since investigating I am convinced The Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. is all you say for it and I want to be one of the stockholders and am sure I cannot invest my money to better advantage."

For the benefit of the doubters: I will pay $1,000.00 to any one who can prove that the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. is not all I claim for it. And the publishers of this paper will tell you my guarantee is good.

In previous isues of this paper I have told you all about the great enterprise of the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. of Idaho Springs, Colo. I can recommend that enterprise as deserving your patronage, because after careful investigation I found: First, the management to be absolutely honest; second, that every dollar that I might invest in that Company will earn for me larger dividends than I could probably get from any other source, and third, the price at which I can buy this stock now should make me rich by its natural increase in value, to say nothing of the income from dividends. You can do as well as I, but you must act now.

This Company is wholly responsible and is engaged in a legitimate and definite enterprise, and must not be confused with the many wildcat mining speculations in which investors are offered stock. The Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. refers by special permission to Mr. Geo. Armstrong, Cashier Capital National Bank, Denver, Colo.; The First National Bank, Idaho Springs, Colo.; Mr. C. S. Birkins, President Merchants' & Miners' National Bank, Idaho Springs, Colo.; Mr. John T. Mallalieu, Secretary Chamber of Commerce, Idaho Springs, Colo.; Mr. George W. Dutton, Mining Editor Siftings News, Idaho Springs, Colo.

Investors who care enough for their money to preserve it and make it earn large dividends can readily distinguish a wildcat scheme from the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co.

Better Than a Salary——An Income for Life——Not a Speculation

In fairness to yourself, and those who depend upon you, read the following—THEN ACT.

SOME OF THE MEN WHO KNOW:

From January 13, 1906, Issue of The Idaho Springs Siftings-News.

The tunnel is already equipped with a splendid plant of machinery, including an 80-horse power boiler and a ten-drill Leyner air compressor, and the mouth of the tunnel is located at a most advantageous point, being within a stone's throw of the Colorado & Southern railway and side tracks at the mouth of Trail Creek, where coal and supplies may be delivered at a small cost. This will permit of shipping the lowest grades of ore that may be encountered and it need never be touched with a shovel, and when broken down in the stopes can be loaded into the tram cars from the chutes, after which it may be dumped directly into the railway cars for shipment to the smelters, or thrown into the crushing machinery of the concentrating mill.

Mining men familiar with the Hoosac unhesitatingly say that it is one of the most attractive mining tunnels in the district, and they predict that it will become an extremely profitable proposition.

E. D. QUIGLEY,
President of the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co., Idaho Springs, Colo.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that I have known Mr. E. D. Quigley for the past eleven or twelve years, and it affords me pleasure to say that he is a thoroughly reliable gentleman in every particular. Mr. Quigley is a mining man of large experience and has been eminently successful in the various enterprises in which he has engaged. He bears an excellent reputation for energy and conservatism, and he carries with him the best wishes of the undersigned for the future. Very respectfully,

G. E. ARMSTRONG,
Asst. Cashier, Capitol National Bank, Denver, Colo.

H. P. DICKINSON,
Mining and Metallurgical Engineer,
355 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

"In my judgment the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. has all the foundations for a permanent and exceedingly profitable business. It is thoroughly conservative and the element of safety for those investing in it is practically absolute.

"You need have no hesitancy whatever in advising your friends and others to invest in the stock of the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co."

H. P. DICKINSON, Mining Engineer.

Assayer Rio Grande Smelter, Socorro, New Mexico.
Assayer St. Louis & Zacatecas Ore Co., Minines, Mexico.
Manager Calumet Smelting & Refining Co., Chicago.
Consulting Mining & Metallurgical Engineer, Denver, Colorado.

J. A. TOWNSEND, Capitalist, Who personally investigated and purchased a large block of stock.

Chicago, Jan. 18, 1906.

Pierce Underwood, Chicago,

Financial Agent, Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co.:

Dear Sir—I am glad to report that I have made a careful and personal investigation of the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. enterprise of Idaho Springs, Colo., and found it not only all you represented it to be, but much better.

I have sent you my subscription for myself and friends for a large block of this stock, which speaks for itself. Yours with congratulations,

J. A. TOWNSEND,
Ellsworth Building, Chicago.

PIERCE UNDERWOOD,
Specialist in Profitable Investments,
140 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Financial Agent of the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co.

I have employed the best experts to investigate the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Co. enterprise and report upon it. I have also personally visited the properties and investigated same as well as the reputation of the management and I could not afford to sell you one share of this stock on my endorsement were either the enterprise or the management undeserving of your patronage or your co-operation.

The stock, in my opinion, is cheap at any price less than $2.50 a share and the enterprise is of sufficient magnitude to have permitted a capitalization of from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. The small capitalization means bigger dividends to the stockholders and is the best evidence in the world of the decency of the management and the respect it holds for the confidence and financial co-operation of the public.

From January 11, 1906, Issue of The Idaho Springs Mining Gazette.

Mr. Underwood is the financial agent for the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining Company, which speaks well for the company, as Mr. Underwood has for years refused to handle any mining securities without absolute knowledge as to their values.

The fact that the Hoosac Tunnel will now be pushed with great vigor has greatly increased the value of every property through which it will pass and the way stocks are going up argues well for the future of both the Hoosac Company and properties upon the line of its tunnel.

He who doubts the truth of every statement and sneers at every proof, never becomes wealthy or famous for shrewd judgment.

Devoted to Mining as a Business.

The Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company, a Colorado corporation capitalized for $1,500,000, stock fully paid up and non-assessable, is an enterprise devoted exclusively to MINING AS A BUSINESS. It is officered by men of the highest reputation and personal integrity.

The properties and privileges of the Company are calculated to produce such revenues as will make the stockholders independent for life.

Idaho Springs, Colo.

Idaho Springs, Colorado, is one of the largest and is one of the oldest mining camps in the State. It is 38 miles west of Denver on the Colorado & Southern Railroad. Gold predominates, but silver, lead and zinc are found in quantities and some copper. The value of the ore produced here runs into the millions annually, and competent mining engineers say that these mines have but just begun to deliver their enormous tonnage of precious ores.

OVER THREE HUNDRED PRODUCING MINES in the district and twice as many new ones to be opened up, most of which require cheap transportation to get the ores to the railroad or mills, and this means transportation tunnels.

What Is a Transportation Tunnel?

In the Idaho Springs Mining District, covering practically all of Clear Creek County, as I have told you, there are over 300 mines being actively operated, and there are probably three times as many that are not operated, some of them equal, if not of greater value. These mines are located, many of them, in almost inaccessible places upon the mountain tops and sides, usually where the vein crops out above the ground. When the mine owner or company operating has followed the vein down into the ground a sufficient distance, hoisting machinery is necessary to draw up the ore. Such machinery is operated by steam and requires coal. The coal has to be hauled up from the railroad, anywhere from half a mile to five or six miles distant, and the cost of hauling it up from the railroad to these mountain tops and sides is oftentimes more than the cost of the coal itself. After the ore has been hoisted out of the pit, or shaft, it must be hauled by wagon back to the railroad, and there reduced by a mill or shipped direct to the smelters at Denver. The enormous cost of getting the ore up out of the shafts and to the railroad means that only high-grade ore can be utilized, that is, ore that will run enough gold to the ton to pay all these burdensome expenses and still leave some profit. If these expenses could only be reduced, the hundreds of mine owners would make a greater profit on the high-grade ore and would also be able to market practically all of their low-grade ore.

Now it is a geographical fact, in the Idaho Springs District, that the ore veins grow thicker and richer the deeper under the surface they go. In some instances they have been tapped 1,000 and 2,500 feet below the surface and found to be from two to six times as thick as on the surface and from two to ten times as rich in quality. Now, imagine a tunnel run through such distinct veins of ore, imagine the ease of the operators of the mines, going into the tunnel and blasting the ore from overhead and dumping it into our cars, and letting us run it out through our tunnel direct to the railroad at a cost to the mine owner of $1.00 a ton, as against a cost of several dollars a ton by the former method of working on the surface with a steam hoist and the requirement of coal, etc., etc., to be transported by wagon over the mountain tops. Five hundred tons a day is a fair average of what one mine can produce when such a tunnel cuts its vein under the circumstances suggested. Ten such mines would produce a fair average of 5,000 tons a day; 20 would produce 10,000 tons a day, etc., which at an average rate of $1.00 per ton means an enormous earning capacity for the tunnel, while the cost of operating is comparatively slight.

Such a tunnel also drains the water from the mines, for which a reasonable charge is made, also from our powerhouse power is furnished for the various mines, also electric lights for the miners, all of which means a profit to us.

Rich Properties and Perfect Title.

The property and privileges of the Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company consists of five Patented Claims, 32 acres of Placer Ground, a Tunnel Site, Water Rights and the rights pertaining to a Transportation Tunnel. The Company's title to these properties and privileges consists of United States Patents (the most perfect title obtainable for a mine), covering the Mining Claims and Placer Grounds, and the title to the Transportation Tunnel privileges is secured under the laws of the State of Colorado.

How the Company Will Make Money.

FIRST OF ALL THE TUNNEL (which is already bored over 600 feet), will be run through eighty active mines, which have to date produced about $100,000,000.00 by expensive surface and shaft workings. Several will be cut this year. Ten such mines can send enough ore through our tunnel to earn for us annually profits of between one and two millions of dollars, after deducting all operating expenses. This tunnel will be a big producer for more than a natural lifetime.

THE GREAT HOOSAC MINES are the FIRST to be cut by our tunnel, which is now bored to within 200 feet of this mammoth body of ore, and WE OWN THESE MINES, which contain enough ore, estimated by engineers, to run from 1,500,000 to 4,000,000 tons, and which assays $3.50 to $40.00 a ton. The cost of mining ore is so slight that profits of many millions will accrue to the stockholders of this Company.

THE HOOSAC MILL will be the third source of profit. At the mouth of the TUNNEL this Company will erect at once a 100-ton concentrating mill, which will not only treat the ores of the Company's mines, but will also do custom work for the other mines of the neighborhood. The earnings of such a mill will be between $50,000 and $50,000 a year.

THREE DISTINCT PROFIT-EARNING FEATURES—two of them of enormous proportions—constitute the business of the Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company.

This business is unlike most propositions offered the public. IT is NOT a speculation or a prospect.

Safety of the Company's Management.

The Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company has for its President and active Manager, and one of the principal owners of the enterprise, Mr. E. D. Quigley, who for 35 years has been one of the foremost operators of the Idaho Springs District. Mr. Quigley is a man of exceptional ability, strength of character and genuine worth. He is highly indorsed by all the Bankers of Idaho Springs and several of the principal banks of Denver, by the newspaper publishers, by the Chamber of Commerce and by all who recognize and appreciate real worth and real manhood. Mr. Quigley is pledged to the Company to carry this enterprise without digression or interruption, to the greatest possible success and in the speediest possible manner, with all regard to safety, economy and general business prudence. Mr. Quigley is not a Wall street magnate, schooled in the fine art of stock jobbing and manipulation of the people's money. He is a practical and competent man of honor, fitted by disposition, education, experience and success to the organizer, the leader, and the respected chief of this enterprise. He well deserves this compliment, as recently expressed in an editorial in the Idaho Springs Siftings-News, as follows:

"Mr. Quigley, to whom the credit is due for having successfully financed this proposition, is one of our oldest and most conservative mine operators. He has a thorough knowledge of the mines of Gilpin and Clear Creek Counties, his operations therein covering a period of 35 years. He is energetic, experienced, and of unquestioned integrity, and every dollar committed to his care will be consecrated to the operation and development of the properties under his charge.

"This, taken in connection with the merit of the propositions named, is a guarantee of a successful issue."

Why You Are Asked to Join.

The Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company can borrow enough money to accomplish its purpose, but the directors and stockholders will not permit the Company to run in debt to such an extent. There are big capitalists who would put up the money, but they would want to own the business themselves, and then the present owners and you, if you were a stockholder, would not have the profits that the business will surely earn. So you are asked to come in with hundreds of others as a partner and buy at the present ground-floor price as much stock (on easy terms) as you feel you can afford to buy.

The management of this Company is such that your investment of $5.00 or $50.00 or $100.00, or whatever it may be, will be as conscientiously accounted for and probably more so than if you were the owner of the Company and had the active management in your own charge.

Probable Profit to YOU—Several Hundred Per Cent Annually.

This is treasury stock that is offered and the price at which you can buy it to-day is far below the value at which it will be held when the TUNNEL, MILL and MINES of the Company are in active operation. If the estimates of our experts are realized by one-third the figures they state, this stock will be worth many times its par value of $1.00 per share. Your income from dividends, it is reasonable to suppose, would be annually per share many times more than you have to pay for it now.

Past Opportunities That Have Produced Vast Fortunes Thought to Be Duplicated by the Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company Enterprise.

The man or woman who has a preconceived notion that investments in a Mining enterprise cannot be profitable to the small investor had best investigate the facts before becoming too firmly wedded to such a theory. A few of the vast opportunities that were offered the small investor (the general public), precisely the same as this proposition is being offered, are as follows:

"Union Consolidated" was quoted at 9c a share and in a year it was selling for $10.00 a share. The man who bought 50 shares at $4.50 made $500 on the transaction, in addition to his dividends. The man who bought a greater number of shares made in proportion.

The "Consolidated Virginia" rose from 11c per share to $95 within a single year.

$25 in "Isabella" in 1893 is now worth $1,240.00, and, in addition you would have received $350.00 in dividends.

$100 invested in "Gold Coin" stock in 1894 is now worth $2,000.00, and in addition you would have received $1,000 in dividends.

$25 invested in "Jack Pot" in 1894 is now worth $1,500.00, and in addition you would have received $750.00 in dividends.

$100.00 invested in the "Elkton" mines in about 60 days realized $3,500.

"Granite Mountain" shares were peddled on the streets of St. Louis at 10c with but few buyers. In six months it sold for $10.00, and in less than two years it was quoted for $75.00 per share, and has paid over $14,000,000 in dividends.

What Your Money Should Earn.

$2,816.00 cash, or $3,072.00 payable 10 per cent down and 10 per cent a month for nine months, will buy 5,120 shares of stock, par value $5,120.00, estimated value within one year $12,800.00, within two years $25,600.00.

Be One of Us On Easy Terms.

You can take advantage of a real OPPORTUNITY and be a partner in this enterprise on terms that cannot be a source of inconvenience. You probably often spend more money in a single day on amusements or things that are unnecessary than would be required to buy a good block of this stock.

Subscribe at Once to Insure Getting Any of This Stock

If you want further particulars before subscribing, write at once to the undersigned. The directors of the Hoosac Tunnel and Mining Company have decided to offer this stock at 60 cents a share on installments, or 55 cents a share if paid for cash with subscription, for a short period only. They reserve the privilege of advancing the price without notice, and the price WILL BE INCREASED RAPIDLY as circumstances justify until it reaches or exceeds the par value of $1.00 per share. The Company reserves the right to take the stock off the market at any time the development of the business would seem to indicate that the future sale of stock is entirely unnecessary.

It is believed that the Tunnel, which is already run 600 feet and which will soon strike the great Hoosac vein, will produce enough revenue from our own MINE to pay all further operating expenses, cost of MILL construction and leave an ample profit besides. It is not an idle and stereotyped phrase to say to you, ACT NOW.

"There is a tide in the affairs of man which, taken at its flood, leads on to fortune," etc.

Highest references in behalf of both the Company and its agent, the undersigned, will be forwarded to those who require them. The most complete information, including government maps, etc., will be supplied. To assist in any investigation that any INDIVIDUAL, BANK, TRUST COMPANY, CAPITALIST or SYNDICATE wishes to undertake, in view of making an investment, every facility will be supplied for such an investigation, but any delay due to such will not protect you against the increase in the price of this stock. It is now offered at many times less than its real value in the estimation of the Directors and present stockholders, and will be advanced 25 per cent or more February 28th. QUICK ACTION IS NECESSARY IF YOU WANT TO GET IN AT THE PRESENT ABSURDLY LOW PRICE.

Chairman Tawney Does Some Close Questioning in Committee.

Washington, Feb. 17.—In its preparation of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, the house committee on appropriations is making an inquiry into the necessity for practically every item asked for by the various departments of the government. An estimate made by the librarian of congress for $180,000 to erect a separate building in the court of the library for the storage of newspapers, has caused some interest. The librarian has explained that the rapid advancement in the making of books and newspapers is filling the mammoth building much more rapidly than its designers anticipated, so that the time when it will be filled to its capacity is not far distant.

To ascertain just how much time Bernard R. Green, custodian, gives to the work at the library, Mr. Tawney asked the direct question.

"I cannot answer that except to say that I am employed all the time," answered Mr. Green.

"You are the architect employed in the construction of the National Museum building?" asked Mr. Tawney.

"I am doing that as general contractor for the government. I have been in the business so long that I do business for Uncle Sam in that way," responded Mr. Green.

"You get extra compensation for that over and above your salary?"

"I get $2,000 a year for that."

"Do you do work for outside parties in addition to that?"

To this Mr. Green replied that some times he did when his friends wanted him to help them. Just now he is engaged in that capacity with regard to the construction of an addition to the Raleigh hotel in this city.

"Did you not also superintend the construction of the New Willard hotel?" asked Mr. Tawney.

"I did look after it for the owners. They are friends of mine. I have not time to do business of that sort regularly to make a business of it, but—"

"Are you employed as superintendent of construction of the state capitol at Harisburg, Pa.?" interjected Mr. Tawney.

"No, sir. I simply acted as a general adviser to the commission. I simply went to their meetings once a month.

"What compensation did you receive for that service?"

"That is a private matter," responded Mr. Green, "but I have no hesitation in telling you I received $4,000 a year and my traveling expenses.

"People come to me once in a while to answer a question professionally and I do it. I am not engaged in supplying anything of that sort. I have too much else to do. I have worked for the government all my life."

Mr. Green said that the work at Harrisburg is now ended; that it had lasted three years.

That there is a constant tendency on the part of the government departments to divert appropriations made by congress for one purpose to some other end, has been testified to before the committee by Comptroller Tracewell of the treasury department, in answer to questions by Chairman Tawney of the committee. The comptroller explained that when errors of this kind reached him he endeavored to make transfers so that the proper funds should be applied, but when this was impossible he disallowed the payment and then congress had to be applied to for an allowance to meet the deficiency. When asked by Mr. Tawney if all of these cases reached him, Mr. Treadwell replied:

"I know that a great many of them do not. Even with my six experts I can only examine one out of 500 accounts settled by the auditors."

That the committee has an eye out for "press agents" was indicated in the examination of Mr. Ludlow, chief clerk of treasury department.

"How many clerks in the treasury department are detailed for newspaper work?" asked Chairman Tawney.

"We have a clipping bureau and there is one clerk there and one messenger I think," responded Mr. Ludlow.

"You are certain there is only one clerk?" pursued Mr. Tawney.

"That is all. There is one clerk at $1,800 and I think one assistant messenger at $720."

"What do they do?"

"They read the newspapers and make clippings that are of interest to the secretary and the assistant secretaries, and the department, so we can keep abreast of the times."

"Do not the secretary and the assistant secretaries read the newspapers?"

"I do not think they have time. I have never seen the secretary read a paper."

Mr. Littauer: "These men advise them of all questions affecting great financial matters connected with the departments?"

"Yes, sir."

FELL UNDER THE WHEELS.

Joe Bartholomew Run Over by Train at Backus Station.

Walker, Minn., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joe Bartholomew was run over by the Minnesota & International passenger, Thursday evening, at Backus, the next station below Walker, both legs and his right arm being completely severed from his body, besides sustaining other injuries. Two passenger coaches passed over his body. The man was endeavoring to board the train at Backus when it was in motion, losing his grip and falling under the wheels. He was brought to Walker on the train and taken to the hospital. Although alive when reaching this place, he was in a critical condition, and chances for his recovery are small. His parents live at Badoura, Hubbard county.

LORD MARRIES ACTRESS.

London, Feb. 17.—Lord de Clifford and Miss Eva Carrington, who has been playing a small part in "Bluebell in Fairyland," at the Aldwich theater in this city, were married yesterday under a special license at the St. Pancras registry office. The religious ceremony will take place at St. Margaret's church, Westminster, on Monday. The honeymoon will be spent in Paris and in Abyssinia, where the couple will travel for six months.

IN POLITICS

Everything appears to be going along swimmingly with Representative N. F. Hugo in his candidacy for speaker of the house. He is receiving many assurances of support from different parts of the state, and the prospects for his winning out are very bright. The Redwood Falls Gazette, of which Julius A. Schmahl is the editor, this week came out with the following tribute to Mr. Hugo:

"During Speaker Clague's illness, or absence from the house, at the 1905 session, Mr. Hugo occupied the important post, and his manifestly fair rulings, his courtesy to all members, his affable and genial manners, made him an unusually popular presiding officer, and it can be said of him that as speaker in fact he would be fair in all matters pertaining to legislation, and that he would leave the session with a host of friends.

"The fact that he hails from Duluth has given currency to the rumor that he would always be friendly to the corporations. The very fact of his residing there would force him to be otherwise in the composition of the committees, etc. He realizes that should he be chosen, that suspicion would attach to him, and Mr. Hugo is so eminently fair that the people would receive the very best treatment from him on that account, if on no other.

"But Mr. Hugo's own record is the best testimony. The House Journal shows him to have voted right on the three railroad measures that came before it. He voted for the bill prohibiting the issuing of passes by railroads to any other than the railroad employes. He voted for the bill requiring a passenger rate of 2½ cents per mile on all railroads of Minnesota, and he voted for the Nolan reciprocal demurrage bill on its final passage."

Mr. Hugo was shown the clipping from the Redwood Falls Gazette, and asked for a statement of his intentions and prospects. Said he:

"I have already received positive assurances of support from many old members of the legislature, who are almost certain to be returned, besides some from probable new members. Indeed, if anything like the usual proportion of old members appear in the 1907 legislature, I think I am safe in saying that the pledges I have from those who seek return to the house will be sufficient to land the speakership without much of a struggle. These pledges come from all parts of the state, and I have been particularly gratified by the prompt and spontaneous assurances of support that have come from the southern part of the state.

"I believe that the way is open, therefore, for a more important recognition of this part of the state than it has had in a long time. In view of the sentiment that appears to exist in my favor this far ahead of the 1907 session, I have deemed it my duty to the people of this section of the state to definitely announce myself as a candidate for speaker. I shall, therefore, standing upon my record as a member of the house, and upon the pledges of support already received, ask for a return to the house from the Fifty-first district, and for the support of the people of this section, in my candidacy for the speakership."

• • •

Julius A. Schmahl, who owns and edits the Redwood Falls Gazette, and who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for secretary of state, was in the city early in the week. Mr. Schmahl was chief clerk of the house for three terms, from 1901 to 1905, inclusive, and is well-known through the state, with many friends in Duluth. He was here looking over the political situation, and left feeling well satisfied with things as he found them as regards his candidacy.

Mr. Schmahl made an excellent impression on the local people with whom he came in contact, and met with flattering assurances of support, such as he is understood to be getting from various parts of Minnesota. His popularity is well extended, and he is looked upon as a strong candidate for the position which he seeks.

"I am now receiving much encouragement in my campaign for the Republican nomination for secretary of state," said Mr. Schmahl, "and I shall work as hard and consistently as possible to succeed. My friends here in Duluth are very kind, and express themselves as anxious to see me land the nomination. I believe I will be nominated."

He expressed the belief that he would not be injured any by the candidacy of Swan B. Molander, who has also announced himself as a candidate for the place.

Interviews reflecting on the candidacy of Senator E. B. Hawkins for the nomination of lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket, and credited to St. Louis county people, appeared in St. Paul and Minneapolis papers this week. These interviews intimated that the senator would not have the support of the St. Louis county delegation at the state convention. Among politicans it is generally declared that such statements as these are little less than absurd. There appears to be no question that Senator Hawkins will have the undivided support of the St. Louis county delegation; in fact it is declared that no attempt will be made to prevent such support being given. The senator is unquestionably popular all through St. Louis county, and is looked upon as a strong condidate.

• • •

The possibility and probability of W. E. Culkin, entering the field as a candidate for congress on the Republican ticket in the Eighth district, in opposition to Congressman J. Adam Bede, are being freely discussed. Mr. Culkin himself maintains a non-committal attitude, and will neither deny or admit reports regarding the chance of his entering the race. He is still acting as register of the Duluth United States land office, and until he has severed all connection with that position it is not considered likely that he will mix at all in politics. There is still plenty of time for him to get into the game, however.

• • •

Politics is quite active in the Forty-ninth district just now. Three candidates for state senator on the Republican ticket have already announced themselves, and it is regarded as a certainty that a fourth will soon come out with a like announcement. Up to date L. A. Barnes of West Duluth, W. C. Brown of Proctor and Representative P. E. Dowling of Eveleth have filed for nomination, and P. R. Vail of Ely, soon to be a resident of Virginia, is expected to announce his candidacy when the proper time arrives.

Mr. Vail is in Duluth at present, but refuses to say for certain that he will become a sensatorial candidate. He is being urged to run and, he says, that if it is shown to be the desire of his friends he will file for the nomination. He will be a resident of Virginia and the Forty-ninth district very shortly. He is heavily interested in real estate and commercial enterprises on the range, and has an extended acquaintance.

West Duluth is awakening to the necessity of centering on one man for political honors this year, and it is said that there is small likelihood of any other candidates besides Mr. Barnes, either for the house or the senate, entering the race from West Duluth. If that part of the district gets a man in the senate it will rest content to let the two representatives recognize the range as their home. Dr. David Braham has announced positively that he will not become a candidate.

The largest part of the Forty-ninth district vote lies in the range towns, with the smaller portion in West Duluth. Two years ago the latter was left out of the running altogether, and was not represented in either the house or the senate. If West Duluth has no other man than Mr. Barnes in the contest it is believed that he will win out, especially if he so manages it with range house candidates that they will lend him their support on the range in return for his support in the city. That there will be at least two to men trying for the nomination on the range will, it is thought, make the chances of Mr. Barnes all the better for winning out. P. R. Vail served one term in the house for his district. Mr. Brown tried twice to become representative, once as a Democrat and once as a Republican, and lost out both times.

• • •

It is said that Capt. J. R. Randall will file for the nomination of representative on the Republican ticket in the Fiftieth district. He was in the house session before last. Victor Johnson, former alderman from the Fifth ward, is looked upon as another possible Republican candidate for the house from the Fiftieth district.

• • •

John Saarl of Sparta, Minn., one of the representatives from the Forty-ninth district, was in the city this week. He declined to talk politics, and said that as far as he was concerned he was not prepared to make any announcement. He says he believes it too early for him to get into the field, anyway. It has been said that he would try for one of the county offices this year.

• • •

John M. McClintock, county attorney of St. Louis county, will not be a candidate for re-election this year. He said two years ago that he would not run again, and now says that he is going to stand by his statement. He expresses his gratitude for the manner in which the people of the county have treated him.

• • •

County Auditor Odin Halden, whose name has been persistently connected with the state auditorship for some time, put at rest all talk of his becoming a candidate for state office today, by filing for the Republican nomination for county auditor, thus seeking his old place, which he has creditably filled for several years.

"I konw it is early," said Mr. Halden today, "but I wish to put an end to the talk about my being a candidate for state auditor, and I know of no better way of doing it than to announce my candidacy for the county auditorship.

"I am very grateful, indeed, to my friends here and elsewhere throughout the state who have assured me of their support if I would become a candidate for the state office. However, I am a Republican, and the Republican doctrine in this state appears to be that one term deserves another. Since it is the custom of the party to honor an officeholder who makes a good record with a renomination, I think that custom should be applied to S. G. Iverson, the present state auditor, who has certainly made an excellent and capable officer.

"Hence it is that I am appearing in the field for county auditor this early in the game."

So far as heard from, there is no other candidate as yet for the place Mr. Halden seeks.

KAISER MAKES A SLIP.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—When Baron Richthofen died the kaiser telegraphed to his widow: "It shall not be forgotten that the baron, when a lieutenant, carried the flag of the Eleventh regiment to victory at Mars-La-Tour." Hence broad grins in all directions, for the Eleventh regiment was soundly licked by the French and had to retire from the Heights of Rezonville, which it attempted to storm.

DUNN FIGHT ON NELSON

consent of a strong Swede to come out for governor, it is argued, that he would not have troubled about the office of secretary of state for with a representative Swede to head the ticket, Nelson would be counted out anyway. Now, however, Dunn will make his fight directly on Nelson, by opposing him under the mantle of Molander.

It is predicted that this will stir up much of the old bitterness and that the Collins forces will rally around Nelson in order to checkmate Dunn's move. It is safe to say that in Molander's candidacy Dunn has shown his hand for the first time since his political ambitions were cooled nearly two years ago.

Has the federal "ring" composed of C. C. Houpt, William Grimshaw et al switched from Jacobson and are they now preparing to launch a boom for Senator George W. Sommerville of Sleepy Eye? The rumor is current that a boom for Sommerville is now in process of incubation and may be expected at any moment. When Jacobson, made that silent journey to the state house—the first since he left the official circle—his last conference was with C. C. Houpt in a room at the Merchants hotel. The conference lasted till after 11 o'clock when Jacobson went in search of Frank Clague, who had been waiting in the rotunda to see Jacobson. The two never met, but Houpt, it is understood, pledged the support of the federal ring to Jacobson and up to a short time ago Houpt has been talking Jacobson.

There is a sudden change; the federal ring is now sounding for Sommerville. Senator Sommerville when in St. Paul to attend the Lincoln day banquet in Mineapolis, showed great interest in gubernatorial situation and not so much interest over whether Judge Webber would be in the race again or not. Before leaving he was satisfied that the gubernatorial situation was not crystalizing and was still a mere matter of speculation.

Those who are preparing to launch the Sommerville boom state that he will be a candidate about whom a strong platform can be built. Two of the center planks, they assert, would be his bill for taxing foreign corporations, commonly known as the Sommerville law and his inheritance tax law which was recently upheld by the state supreme court. It is well known that the officials were about to lie down when the inheritance law was declared unconstitutional by several probate and district judges in the state. Sommerville, however, made a quick flank movement from Sleepy Eye just when the fight was almost up and showed the state officials that his law could hold water. The fight was renewed by Attorney General Young, but a great deal of the honor of that great victory is claimed by Sommerville's friends to be due to him. Few doubt but that Sommerville would get into the race if he was given any assurance whatever. It is hinted that his friends are trying to induce Block to withdraw in Sommerville's favor.

"I am still a receptive candidate." This is the refrain of Samuel Lord's campaign song after the attempt of his friends to count him out. He came in strong just at the finish, and before the sponge went up, Samuel informed his friends that the reports of his demise, as regards the gubernatorial situation, were grossly exaggerated. Lord is the authority for the statement, and his friends corroborate him, so what more assurance does one want. Senator Barker of Cambridge and Frank Clague of Lamberton, personal friends of Lord, say that the report that Lord was out of the race was made up of whole cloth. Lord, when seen at the Merchants, after the report appeared, was very wroth, and assured one and all that he was still in the game. Lord's position in the present chaotic gubernatorial situation seems to be getting more involved each week. There is a strong rumor that Congressman Tawney is making himself felt, and may throw his support over Lord's way, in order to sidetrack a dangerous rival. It is generally predicted that Lord has the first district solid, but the attitude which James M. Diment takes toward Lord's candidacy must be counted as a strong factor in crediting these predictions of Lord's constituents. Lord is "hooked up" to a very popular manager in Sam Langum, who is one of Tawney's right hand men.

That harmony in the Republican ranks is still far distant is evinced by the absence of that deity from the Lincoln banquet at Minneapolis, last Monday evening. It was advertised as a harmony dinner among the initiated, but like many show managers, the political leaders of Hennepin county put more on the bill boards than they were in a position to deliver. Harmony was not a keynote of the dinner.

Senator J. F. Calhoun of Minneapolis thought he would do a skit in harmonics by introducing a resolution endorsing Senator Nelson, but his attempt was greeted by a discordant volley of Nos! Instead of a fanfare of trumpets and a storm of applause, Nelson's name fell coldly on the chilly air. James Robertson, a mere alderman, had the audacity to say that the mention of the senior senator's name was decidedly out of order at a harmony banquet. He was greeted with cheers, and the resolution died before the frigid blasts of an unfriendly vote, which was as strong, if not stronger, than the ayes which greeted the resolution.

Governor Johnson's stock in Northern Minnesota is rising every day. Today it is quoted above par in Hubbard county, since the citizens of Park Rapids held a mass meeting to endorse the timber board, and especially Governor Johnson's energetic measures in hunting down the timber thieves. Governor Johnson's policy was practically endorsed at a mass meeting of representative citizens of Hubbard county.

That Governor Johnson has secured more fame outside of the state than has fallen to the lot of any other governor in the history of Minnesota is shown every day in the number of invitations he receives to speak. Daily he must refuse to be the guest of honor of some of the most representative bodies in the United States. First, it was the Jefferson club of Chicago, then the Gridiron of Washington, recently the Republican Swedish club of Denver had to be disappointed. Other organizations, both Republican and Democratic, are constantly clamoring to hear Johnson. Even his enemies are forced to admit that he has made good with a vengeance.

TO APPEAL FOR RELIEF.

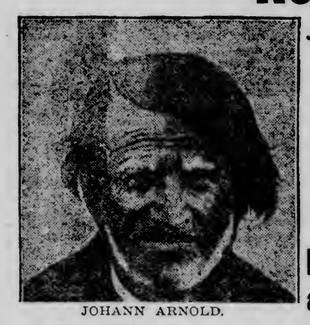

New York A. O. U. W. is in Bad Shape Financially.

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 17.—With a surplus of but $29,000 and with beneficiary claims aggregating $706,440, the New York state grand lodge officers of the Ancient Order of United Workmen are preparing to appeal to the supreme lodge for relief in the greatest crisis in the history of the organization.

Grand Trustee F. B. Garrett and Grand Master Workman August Steinbecker of this city are making efforts to secure the necessary assistance, which, it is claimed, is due from the supreme lodge, in order to protect thousands of members of the 425 lodges in the state. The fate of the organization in this state is claimed to be dependent on securing prompt relief.

A call was issued by Mr. Steinbecker for a meeting of the grand lodge in this city on March 6. At that time a course of action will be determined upon.

JOHANN ARNOLD.

Johann Arnold of Reading, Pa., and Mrs. Phebe Pratt of Chelsea, Mass., say their sturdy old age is due to the regular use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

It makes the old young, and the young strong.

MRS. PRATT.

Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure in my old age to testify to the benefits I am deriving from the judicious use of your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I am now 104 years old, hale and hearty, have a good appetite and perfect digestion. I have tried a number of wines and whiskies for their stimulating effect, but my stomach would not retain them. Duffy's agrees with my stomach perfectly. It is certainly a Godsend to the aged, who need a stimulant to tone up their stomachs, increase their digestive powers and strengthen their weakened nerves.

Mrs. Pratt writes:

Gentlemen: I am now almost 91 years of age and am in excellent health, owing to the use of Duffy's Malt Whiskey. Catarrh of the throat troubled me for four years, and I tried many remedies, without any benefit, until a friend induced me to try Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

My general condition was very poor also until I used Duffy's, but I am very glad to state that since using this grand medicine the catarrh has left me, my general health is better than it has been for years, and I know that it has prolonged my life. I most certainly would not be without it.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

There are 4,000 men and women in this country alone who have passed the hundred-year mark, and nearly every one of them has publicly acknowledged that he or she owes health, strength, continued use of all the faculties, and extreme old age to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great cure and preventive of disease, the true elixir of life. We will send you free a booklet containing portraits and letters of many of these old people, and valuable medical information.

If you would be strong, husky and vigorous, and able to enjoy the work and pleasures of life to the fullest; if you would live to ripe old age without aches and pains, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as directed and avoid all drugs. Doctors say it's the most powerful aid they have in fighting and curing diseases of throat, lungs and stomach, low fevers and all weakening, wasting, nervous, run-down, diseased conditions from whatever cause. It acts quickly and builds up the whole system. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is used exclusively in leading hospitals. The old reliable family remedy of hundreds of thousands for over 50 years. Its purity is vouched for by chemists, and by the fact that it's the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine.

Every testimonial is published in good faith and guaranteed.

AVOID SUBSTITUTES.

Be sure you get the genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, sold in sealed bottles only—never in bulk—by all reliable druggists and grocers, or direct. Price, $1.00. It is the only absolutely pure medicinal whiskey and contains no fusel oil. This is a guarantee. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and be certain the seal over the cork is unbroken.

THE PHARAOH OF THE EXODUS.

Ramises II, 1700 B. C.—4,00 Years Ago.

HIS MUMMY BODY NOW IN GOOD STATE OF PRESERVATION.

In the glorious days of the Egyptian, Chinese and Greek empires science was not so well developed as today. True, they were many valuable inventions beginning from nature; developments took place slowly. The sciences of writing, printing, the science of astronomy, medicine, etc., were known somewhat even in those ancient empires. Seventeen hundred years before Christ the great Egyptian Ramises II., the Pharaoh of the Exodus, who chased Moses and the children of Israel across the Dead Sea and who was one of the greatest conquering generals in the world, conquering in his day all of the then semi-civilized nations, was a man of unusual attainment, a man of fine physique, a well developed body and an ever-thinking brain. His mummy today, now nearly 4,000 years old, is lying in a state of perfect preservation in the great Museum of Cairo, Egypt. This great mummy of Ramises II., the remains of 4,000 years of time of one of the most wonderful men that ever lived, has attached to it one of the most interesting histories of the past, and from that time to the present date denotes one continual advancement.

With bare hands and vacant mind he began his struggle with nature and the great problems of life and destiny. The lightning that terrified him with its thunder and the waterfall in which he saw the home of the malignant god is now harnessed by us as he harnessed the waterox thousands of years ago and that waterfall pulls our electric power as the ox pulls the creaking two-wheled cart.

The live man of today is not the man to let the grass grow under his feet, let him be a doctor, lawyer, merchant or tradesman, and while some succeed, others fail, but the percentage of those who succeed outweigh the balance of those who fail. I refer you to a man and master of a great system of medicine; a man who thinks with his own brain and stands on his own resources; a post graduate of some of the best medical schools of the world, has traveled to almost all parts of the earth, has viewed from the tops of the Pyramids the beautiful valley of the Egyptian Nile, has penetrated into the tombs of the most famous kings of the world, has visited the Holy lands, the birth of religion and civilization, has traveled extensively in South America, Mexico, knows continental Europe like a book and has studied his profession in some of the most famous hospitals in the world, has discovered some of the most valuable chemical combinations of this, the twentieth century. This man, eminently situated at the top of his profession, a man whose system of treatment for chronic diseases and diseases of the heart, stomach, bowels, liver lungs, cancer, etc., has never been equalled, a man who is curing his patients when they have been experimented on by others almost unto death. In this I refer you to Dr. Rea and some of the many he has cured.

Henry Nyhouse, Duluth, Minn., cured of chronic catarrh of the stomach, bad blood and general indisposition. Had doctored with a good many doctors and had taken all kinds of treatment, but no relief.

Mrs. H. P. Jacobson, Langdon, Minn., cured of chronic dyspepsia and liver troubles. Cured after all other doctors had failed.

Ole Larson, Wild Rice, N. D., cured in two months of chronic catarrh of the stomach.

Tobias Grady, 831 Lake Ave. S., Duluth, Minn., cured of cancer of the lip by one treatment of Dr. Rea's Hypodermic Injection Fluid. The most wonderful and successful cancer cure in the world.

Mrs. Robt. Kern, Emerson, Man., cured of appendicitis. Another doctor said she would have to be operated on.

Frank Hughes, Dwight, N. D., cured of cancer of the lip with two injections. This cancer had been cut out several times, but always returned.

Mrs. John Engstrom, Two Harbors, Minn., had a sick baby that many doctors said could never get well. Dr. Rea cured the child in four months.

Nick Wilson, Plum City., Wis., cured of chronic case of piles. No operation. Cured by the hypodermic injection plan.

E. R. Morgan, Elmwood, Wis., cured of a bad cancer of the face with the hypodermic injection treatment.

Geo. Kothlaw, Menomonie, Wis., cured of catarrh and bronchial troubles.

John Consbruck, Hastings, Minn., cured of cancer of the face in two treatments.

F. J. Swoboda, Hopkins, Minn., cured of chronic bladder and kidney troubles. Had doctored with all the noted specialists in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and as a last resort was advised to have a surgical operation; this he refused, and went to Dr. Rea, who cured him in 18 days.

Mrs. Margaret Gangloff, Denison, Minn., cured of a bad skin cancer on the face in one treatment.

Louis Doer, Rannaby, Minn., cured of almost total blindness by cataract. Cured by the absorption method.

C. J. Wendt, Duluth, Minn., cured of chronic eczema all over the body. Of two years' standing.

Mae Lynard, Bixby, Minn., cured in three months of chronic nasal catarrh.

William Reid, Little Falls, Minn., cured of cancer of the lip in one treatment.

H. P. Jackson, Morris, Minn., cured of long standing piles. Cured without operation.

Chas. Jeffs, Owatonna, Minn., cured of tumor on the head and scalp with one treatment.

Wm. McCarty, St. Cloud, Minn., cured of a long standing chronic disease.

S. J. Insley, Ipswich, S. D., cured of varicocele. Had spent hundreds of dollars and had never received any benefit. Cured by Dr. Rea with a few treatments.

Wm. Wolf, Red Wing, Minn., cured of long standing case of piles.

E. P. Morris, Wahpeton, N. D., cured of epilepsy. Had tried many doctors and all kinds of treatment, cured by Dr. Rea in five months.

H. P. Ash, Red Lake Falls, Minn., cured of loss of hair and facial eczema, red nose and bad blood.

Miss Mahoney, Wabasha, Minn., cured of bronchial catarrh. Cured to stay cured.

Miss Anna Stevens, Alma, Wis., cured of rheumatism. Had tried all the local doctors, but got no relief from any of their treatment.

D. Corbesid's child, Faribault, Minn., cured of slow growth, malnutrition and general weakness. Other doctors said could not be cured.

Miss McEacher, Duluth, Minn., operated on and cured of cross eyes in 10 minutes.

Mrs. Harrison, Red Wing, Minn., cured of nervousness, general debility, heart trouble and goiter. Gained flesh at the rate of five pounds per month from the start. Local physicians had failed to give her any relief.

Dr. Rea will continue to visit professionally the principal cities of the Northwest every four weeks as usual. Next visit to Duluth, Minn., at the Spalding hotel, Saturday, Feb. 24, from 9 a. m. until 8 p. m.

East Grand Forks, Minn., at the Great Northern hotel, Wednesday, February 28th.

Moorhead, Minn., at Hill's European hotel, Thursday, March 1st.

CZAR SUPPORTS PREMIER WITTE

Premier Wins in Bitter Controversy With Minister Durnovo.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—Temporary peace has been patched up between Premier Witte and Interior Minister Durnovo and the disruption of the cabinet has been averted at a moment when the strain was apparently at the breaking point. The latest development was due to the direct intervention of the emperor, who insisted that both men should remain in the cabinet. The agreement, however, which rests only on the influence of the emperor, is none too stable. The premier's desire for a relaxation of the repressive measures is understood to have prevailed for the present, but the Durnovo and Ignatieff forces are unwilling to accept the defeat as permanent and still have mighty influence at court. Premier Witte's strength rests on the emperor's inflexible determination to adhere to constitutionalism and on his recognition of the fact that Count Witte is the best man to carry out the reforms.

HEALTHY ON ISTHMUS.

WEST DULUTH

COMMENDS ITS ACTION

Commercial Club Endorses Choice of Courthouse Commission.

Important Meeting Asks Senators to Vote for Hepburn Bill.

The West Duluth Commercial club held a busy meeting last night, and took considerable important action. A resolution was passed by the club, in which the board of county commissioners and the court house commission were commended for the action taken on the resolution to build a new courthouse, and on the site chosen for the same. The club is a unit in this matter, and the general expression at the meeting last night was to the effect that the courthouse commission had acted very wisely.

Another resolution, adopted at the meeting, called upon Senators Nelson and Clapp to not only vote for the Hepburn rate bill, but to work for it and do everything possible to secure its passage. Copies of this resolution were ordered forwarded to the two senators mentioned, and to the West End Commercial club and the Duluth Commercial club.

A committee of five was appointed to look after the Ramsey street dock affair. This committee consists of M. M. Clark, chairman; E. J. Zauft, P. H. Martin, J. J. Frey and County Commissioner Charles Kauppi.

A committee was ordered appointed within the next week to make arrangements for the club's annual banquet, which will take place in the near future.

County Commissioner Charles Kauppi brought up the matter of asking that water and gas mains be extended to the western part of West Duluth. This was made a special order for the meeting next Friday night.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is not really a sickness, but a symptom. It is a symptom that a certain set of nerves is ailing. Not the voluntary nerves that enable you to walk and talk and act—but the AUTOMATIC STOMACH NERVES over which your mind has no control.

I have not room here to explain how these tender, tiny nerves control and operate the stomach. How worry breaks them down and causes indigestion. How misuse wears them out and causes dyspepsia. How neglect may bring on kidney, heart, and other troubles through sympathy. I have not room to explain how these nerves may be reached and strengthened and vitalized and made stronger by a remedy I spent years in perfecting—now known by physicians and druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative, (Tablets or Liquid.) I have not room to explain how this remedy, by removing the cause, usually puts a certain end to indigestion, belching, heartburn, insomnia, nervousness, dyspepsia. All of these things are fully explained in the book I will send you free when you write. Do not fail to send for the book. It tells how the solar plexus governs digestion and a hundred other things every one ought to know—for all of us, at some time or other, have indigestion. With the book I will send free my "Health Token"—an intended passport to good health.

For the free book and the "Health Token" you must address Dr. Shoop, Box 7760, Racine, Wis. State which book you want.

SOME FAVOR THE CAUCUS

Politicians Are Urging the Democratic Aldermen to Get Together.

Object Is to Keep Committee Appointments in the Party.

The statement in The Herald last evening that there was not likely to be a Democratic caucus on the question of the election of president of the council, has aroused a number of the Democratic politicians in the city, and pressure is being brought to bear upon some of the Democratic aldermen to bring about such a gathering.

The argument is advanced that there is no use in electing Democrats to the council if they do not take advantage of their majority and keep the good committee appointments in their own ranks. There are four, or possibly five important committees. They are the finance, light and water, ordinances and resolutions, streets, alleys and sidewalks, and possibly the police and license. Four of these five committees are now presided over by Republicans, Alderman Barnes, Trevillion, Wilson and Moore holding the plums. Alderman Tessman is chairman of the police and license committee.

On each of the five committees there are two Republicans and one Democrat, so that the Republicans have control of the five most important committees.

The Democrats who favor a caucus argue that if the party does not caucus on one man, the Republicans will have the say in electing the president, and that in return for their votes the candidates will pledge them important committee appointments, which will leave some of the five chief committees in their hands.

"I do not hesitate to say," said Alderman McEwen this morning, "that I favor a caucus. We have a Democratic administration and a Democratic council, and if the Democrats are going to make a record we want the control of the important council committees. The nine Democrats should settle their own family affairs among themselves, get together and decide upon whom they want, and then go into the meeting prepared to stick by him. In this way the president will enter on his duties unhampered by any promises regarding committee appointments."

The fight apparently lies between Alderman Tessman and Alderman McEwen, with chances seemingly about even.

The argument advanced against a caucus is that with such a close division of the council, the ignoring of the Republicans in the choice of president and committee appointments, would stir up party strife and party feeling, and hamper the transaction of business throughout the year. It is claimed that since the new president will undoubtedly be a Democrat, the Republicans should be given a say as to which Democrat they want. If the matter were put to a vote without a caucus of the Democrats the Republican votes would decide which Democrat would be chosen.

NOTICE.

JACKSON-SAMMIS COMPANY

Delights Large Audience in Concert at First M. E. Church.

The Jackson-Sammis company appeared in concert at the First Methodist church last evening, this being the musical number of this year's Star lecture course. The audience was large and seemed to be delighted with the artists and program.

Miss Leonora Jackson has been before the public for several seasons, although a young woman, and has been acknowledged as one of the foremost of woman musicians. She was handicapped somewhat last evening in not having her usual instrument, it having suffered an accident a few days ago. She is an especially pleasing performer, graceful and without affectation, and producing the finest of tonal effects, pure, musical and sympathetic. In her numbers there was a variety that exhibited many phases of her ability. Sarasate's "Gipsy Fantasie," a fanciful composition opening with a deep toned resonant passage, followed by a tender melody played with muted strings and concluding with a vivacious mingling of harmonics, pizzicaton and other brilliant effects, was finely done. All of her members were encored with much enthusiasm and she responded graciously.

Miss Silbyl Sammis has a dramatic soprano voice of much power and wide range, especially pleasing in the middle and lower register when it is of contralto like quality. Her largest number was from Gounod's "Queen of Sheba," and she sang two songs and in response to an encore a lullaby that was delicious and sung with rare charm. Her perfect enunciation was noticeable.

Charles E. Clarke, the baritone has a pleasing voice and stage manner, but that could hardly forgive his substitution of the "Bedouin Love Song," which has been sung to death, for his main number on the program. His other songs were "Hindu Lament," by Morgan, and "Robin Goodfellow," by the same composer.

Alexander MacFayden, the accompanist was the wonder of the musicans, from the fact that he did not use a sheet of music, in fact not once during the entire evening did the audience see a sheet. His work was skillful and intelligent. He opened the program by playing very pleasingly a Chopin nocturne and Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodie No. 12.

BACKACHE? IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS!

Mrs. Estelle Clayton, of Toronto, Canada, Suffered Intensely From Pain in Back and Kidneys. Completely Cured by

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

A TRIAL BOTTLE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY CURE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE TO EVERY READER OF THE DULUTH EVENING HERALD WHO SUFFERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER, BLADDER OR BLOOD DISEASE, OR WHAT IS COMMONLY KNOWN AMONG WOMEN AS "FEMALE WEAKNESS."

If the kidneys become diseased and are unable to do their work properly, the liver becomes affected, then the bladder, the urinary organs, the blood and the stomach. The blood becomes impoverished, the urine becomes muddy, and will have a brick-dust sediment if it stands for 24 hours; the liver becomes torpid, and pains in the back are almost constant as the system becomes pregnated with the disease.

If any trace of kidney disease shows itself, get a bottle of WARNER'S SAFE CURE; it will purify and strengthen the kidneys, kill the disease germs, prevent the serious complications that are bound to arise, and restore perfect health.

Thousands, both men and women, have kidney disease and do not know it. It is hereditary. If any of your family in this or past generations have been troubled with kidney disease of any form you cannot be too careful. You should make a test of your kidneys at once and satisfy yourself as to their condition. Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism, rheumatic gout, inflammation of the bladder and urinary organs are caused by kidney disease neglected.

Suffered Intensely

Mrs. Estelle Clayton, a noted Canadian society woman, says: "We have used Warner's Safe Cure in our family for several years. It cured my husband of backache and kidney trouble, and Warner's also cured me of a serious cold that settled in my back and kidneys and which caused me intense suffering and pain."—Mrs. Estelle Clayton, 664 Adelaide St., Toronto, Canada.

KIDNEY DISEASE

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is purely vegetable and contains no harmful drugs. It is prescribed by doctors and used in leading hospitals for disease of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS taken with WARNER'S SAFE CURE move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is put up in two regular sizes and sold by all druggists, or direct, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Refuse substitutes.

TRIAL BOTTLE FREE

To convince every sufferer from diseases of the liver, kidney, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will cure them, a trial bottle will be sent ABSOLUTELY FREE to any one who will write WARNER SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in The Duluth Evening Herald. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed by the publisher. Our doctors will send medical booklet, containing symptoms and treatment of each disease, and many convincing testimonials, FREE, to any one who will write.

Escanaba—In a petition to the city council, the pastors and trustees of seven churches of Escanaba have asked that the special street assessment taxes be rebated and that in the future church property in the city will be exempt from street assessments, as it is from other taxes. Whether it will be possible and advisable to grant the requests of the churches will be determined by a special committee composed of Aldermen Smith, Lawson and Priester.

Ontonagon—There is one government job in Ontonagon county which goes begging—the postmastership at Flintsteel. Mrs. Willard Rice, who has been presiding over the destinies of the office for a year or more, has tendered her resignation, and there is no one there who wants the job. It is contended that the business of the office is so small that it does not pay to look after it, but at the same time people living in that vicinity would be inconvenienced were the office abolished.

Menominee—Complaints are coming from timber land owners throughout Menominee county of wholesale trespassing. It is said that hundreds of thousands of feet of timber, posts, poles and ties have been illegally cut this season. The total losses to the rightful owners, it is said, will amount to $100,000. In some cases the trespassing is the result of an oversight or comes about through carelesness on the part of loggers, who fail to establish the exact boundaries of the tracts which they are supposed to cut, or, if they do, run the lines incorrectly. On the other hand, a great deal of deliberate trespassing is being practiced and the lines are oftimes intentionally being overstepped. The property trespassed lies in all parts of the county and belongs not only to corporations and firms, but to private individuals as well. Many discoveries of this dishonest practice have been made recently and the owners are becoming thoroughly aroused. A number of detectives are reported already at work upon the matter. Trespassing on timber lands has caused and is causing endless trouble in Menominee county. Scarcely a term of court is held that one or more such cases do not come up for trial.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Jailbreaker Caught and Further Charges Are Made Against Him.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—Leslie Harrington, who escaped from the Mandan jail about a year ago, while awaiting trial on a charge of horse-stealing, has been recaptured by Sheriff McDonald of Morton county. Harrington, it is claimed, after breaking jail, resumed his alleged old trick of stealing horses, and finally was run down. He has been held to await the action of the spring term of the circuit court.

Minot—County Auditor Fabrick has been served with a writ of mandamus issued by Judge Goss, ordering him to issue a county warrant in favor of the Northwestern Bridge Company of Moorhead, Minn., for $9,250 in payment for the construction of the bridge across the Des Lacs lake.

The bill was allowed by the county commissioners in January, but the auditor refused to issue a warrant on the ground that it was an extraordinary expenditure, and further, that as the lake was navigable the county had no right to construct the bridge. The company then brought mandamus proceedings, which have now been decided in its favor.

The county auditor announces that no appeal will be taken.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Twice preventing a negro from committing suicide was the experience of Mrs. Benjamin Hayes of this city, who conducts a boarding house. Among those who had rooms there was a negro named Norwood, who for a time was employed as porter in the Elk club rooms. During the absence of Hayes the negro, without any apparent reason, started in to smash the furniture in the house, and before he could be stopped, much of the furniture had been ruined.

Mrs. Hayes remonstrated with the man, and he drew a revolver and attempted to shoot himself. After a desperate struggle Mrs. Hayes succeeded in disarming him. This was no sooner accomplished than the negro took from his pocket a bottle of carbolid acid and tried to drink the poison, but again Mrs. Hayes was able to frustrate his design. At this point the police arrived and the man was taken to jail. When searched another bottle of carbolic acid was found in one of his pockets.

Rapid City—Miss Bertha Lewis, who was injured by a fall from her horse, died of concussion of the brain. She did not regain consciousness after the injury. She was 24 years of age and has always made her home in this city, where she was a member of the Presbyterian church. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Lewis, who live on a ranch just below town.

Employs Physical Director.

The Norwegian Turner society has taken a lease of the building at 1826 West Superior street, and will remodel and equip it with a complete gymnasium outfit. The organization has also made arrangements to employ a professional physical director in the person of August Kvisgaard, who has been for several years a director of athletics in the army in the old country. The club membership comprises fifty young men of Norwegian descent, at the present time, and it is expected that many new members will be added from time to time.

Swedish Minister Visiting Here.

Rev. Axel Wall of Minneapolis has been in the city this week, assisting Rev. Hjalmar Henrickson, at the special evening services at the Bethel Baptist church, Ninth avenue east and Third street. Rev. Wall came some months ago from Stockholm, Sweden, and is a graduate of the Baptist Theological seminary in that city. He is in the United States chiefly to study the English language, and has been in Minneapolis since coming to this country. He is said to be a speaker of fine ability. He is to preach tomorrow morning at the Bethel Baptist church, and in the evening at the First Swedish Baptist church.

WISCONSIN HAS A GENUINE ENOCH ARDEN.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 17.—Stoughton has a genuine Enoch Arden. John Lind, a Swede, returned to Stoughton yesterday, after several years in the West and the Klondike, to find his wife married to Peter Olson, and a year-old baby in the cradle not his own. He never wrote his wife after leaving, and thinking him dead, she remarried. There is an 11-year-old daughter by the first marriage, whom the father gave $500, then took a train for the West again, that he might not disturb his wife's present happiness.

FREIGHT NO LONGER DELAYED.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Chairman Shonts of the isthmian canal commission has received a cablegram from Chief Engineer Stevens, at Panama, announcing that there is now no delayed freight on the isthmus. Mr. Stevens' cablegram reads: "With probably the heaviest coffee movement for ten years, there is not today one ton of delayed freight on the isthmus."

THE PROFESSIONS.

The crowding of the professions continues as rapidly as ever. The New York World shows that last year 983 new lawyers were admitted to practice, 705 doctors, 238 dentists and 910 druggists. There are more school teachers than doctors and lawyers, but the school teachers increased in number only 697 during the year.

While the professions are so overcrowded that the majority of those who seek them do not average the wages of skilled mechanics, it is still true, as it always was, that there is "plenty of room at the top," and this it is that causes sanguine youths to aim for a profession instead of learning a trade or a business. Still, too many of these young men enter professions not so much from any definite "calling" as from a misunderstanding of the dignity of labor, and a desire to get into vocations in which a man may be a "gentleman." This ridiculously mistaken view of life is responsible for many doctors and lawyers who are practical failures.

A man may be a gentleman, in the true sense of the word, absolutely without regard to his occupation. There are thousands of toilers who work with their hands that have the instincts that make for gentleness, and who become truer gentlemen than many that keep their hands white. Labor is dignified if the laborer makes is so, and no profession can make a gentleman out of a boor.

The professions are not so attractive as they once were. The law business has been curtailed in almost as great a proportion as its followers have increased. Title companies, employers' liability insurance, and other corporations do a large part of the business formerly divided up among many lawyers. Hospitals and dispensaries have reduced the possibilities of individual medical practice. In both professions there are a few that enjoy immense incomes, a larger number that command incomes yielding comfort, and a deplorably large number that find it difficult to make both ends meet, not to consider keeping up appearances.

A noble profession, that of the ministry, is apparently exempt from this overcrowding, and it would be well if young men who are pondering their course in life give it their attention. It offers an opportunity for a broad, useful, and uplifting career, in which there is perhaps greater satisfaction, if followed conscientiously upon a broad plane, than in any other profession. It may not pay so well as some callings, but it view of the multitude of modern instances of the fact that there is poor satisfaction in mere money-getting, this should not be a bar.

A GOOD MOVE.

The West Duluth Commercial club is planning a campaign to settle up the vacant lands of Northern Minnesota, particularly those adjacent to Duluth.

The club could not devote its wellknown energy to any better purpose. Every farmer settled on land tributary to Duluth is a tangible asset, not only to Northern Minnesota and the entire state, but particularly to Duluth.

The Herald would commend to the attention of the club the matter of dairy farming. It believes that there is no better opening for a man seeking a location than to start a dairy farm near Duluth. There is ample land, yielding grasses and clovers unexcelled anywhere; there is a close and growing market, where he can get good prices for his products; there are all the advantages that any location could offer and some that others do not have.

The West Duluth Commercial club is on the right track. More power to it.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE.

Just when mere man had about resigned himself to the belief that any time the women of the country really want the right to vote they are going to get it, it is somewhat disconcerting to learn for the first time that there is an active organization in being whose aim is to prevent further extensions of suffrage to women, and that, miracle of miracles, its membership is composed entirely of women.

Such is the case, however. The Herald has received a copy of the Remonstrance, a 4-page publication which announces that it "is published annually by the Massachusetts Association Opposed to the Further Extension of Suffrage to Women." The first column and a half are given up to a list of officers of state organizations pledged to oppose to the bitter end any attempt to thrust the right to vote upon the women of the land. There are organizations in Massachusetts, New York, Maine, Illinois, Oregon, Iowa, Rhode Island and Washington, and the list of names reads like a list of real women. There is a proper proportion of "misses," to prove that the organization is not composed of wives impelled to this vigorous step by the promptings of tyrannical husbands.

To quote the Remonstrance, these women "believe that the great majority of their sex do not want the ballot, and that to force it upon them would not only be an injustice to women, but would lessen their influence for good and imperil the community."

Most men, The Herald believes, look upon the proposition of extending suffrage to women with a more or less impartial view. The Herald has heretofore said that if women really want to vote, and make their wants known through any general expression of their sentiments on the subject, there will be no very determined opposition from the men. Most men believe that the influence of women is genrally for good, that their instincts are toward the right, and that communities would generally be much more depraved and inelegant without their efforts and examples. These influences they now exert, and very effectively too. Their appeals to the voters for cleaner, brighter and more wholesome municipal conditions are seldom disregarded, and their work toward local improvements is always valuable and effective. Whether their influence would be stronger if they had the ballot is a question yet undetermined in the minds of most men—and of many women too, let it be said.

It would be interesting to hear from the women of Duluth on this subject. It would be instructive to know what proportion of them actually want to vote, what proportion of them do not care, and how many of them would rather not vote.

CONSUMPTIVE TEACHERS.

The state normal board is considering a resolution requiring a medical examination of all applicants for admission to normal schools in this state, and also requiring evidence of the moral character of such applicants.

The principal object sought to be attained is to bar out from the profession of teaching in this state all persons suffering from tuberculosis. Incidentally the resolution is broad enough to cover other ailments which might threaten the health of the pupils, including moral infirmities, which are, however, less easy to detect though not less important.

It is a very proper movement, on the whole, and one that should receive the earnest support of authority. A person sufering from consumption is recognized as a possible source of contagion to all about him, and it would be criminal to admit a tuberculous teacher into the public schools. How much farther than this the movement should be carried is not to be settled offhand. It is absolutely true that it would be worse than folly to admit into a normal school a person of known immorality. Such a person would be a source of moral contagion to his associates in the normal school, and his work in the public schools after graduation could hardly tend toward the uplifting of society.

Such people, however, do not commonly seek the profession of teaching. A regulation requiring evidences of good character from normal school attendants could do no harm, though it is equally probable that it would not effectually bar out applicants who are morally weak.

The regulation against the admission of persons suffering from contagious diseases, however, is not only wholesome and advisable, but absolutely necessary. The state could better afford to take such applicants and care for them in a state hospital than to admit them into public school rooms to spread their disease.

A MODEL STREET.

Denver has furnished a number of excellent ideas about municipal improvements, most of which seem to emanate from Mayor Speer, and now comes another one that appears to be worth trial, in Duluth as well as elsewhere.

Mayor Speer's plan is to pick out one street and improve it to the utmost, thereby making it a stimulus to property-owners on streets not yet improved, and a model for property-owners everywhere.

The advantages of such a scheme are obvious. The example of an ideal street in a city would be as effectual as any possible method of improving the community. Owners of property along other streets would soon feel ashamed of their own more or less unsightly thoroughfares, and would become ambitious to live on a street as comely as the model one. There would be few residence streets in the city where the people would long remain contented with their old condition. There would be paving, tree-planting, weed-cutting, yard-cleaning and a general bustle of improvement throughout the community.

Of course there would be difficulties in the way. Everybody can dig up the weeds on his lawn and from the grassplots along the sidewalk and everybody can clean up his yard, but for general improvements like lighting and paving cooperation is required. It would be hard, of course, to find any very long stretch of thoroughfare upon which all the property-owners would agree to the expense and trouble.

But it is not impossible, by any means, and Denver is going to try it. The example of that one street in Denver will be felt throughout the city, and the example of Denver will be felt all over the country. It would be exceedingly pleasant if Duluth could take up a similar work.

AN ECONOMIC PUZZLE.

Another native industry is appealing for the tender care of the protective tariff, and complaining because it has been overlooked by the friends of protection down in congress.

Since this industry is that which produces the articles of commerce known as "poker chips," it is inexplicable how congress came to overlook it. Unless tradition and rumor are all wrong, congressmen are familiar with the fact that there are such things as poker chips. Indeed, if rumor has not committed a grievious error, poker chips are among the commodities most dealt in at the national capital. So it is strange that in preparing tariff schedules the statesmen overlooked these valuable adjuncts to the arts and sciences.

The Dingley tariff law, however, makes no specific provision for poker chips. The customs authorities, therefore, have classed them as "earthy or mineral substances,' and under that classification have imposed duties at the rate of 35 to 45 per cent. This, the native manufacturers complain, is not enough, and it leaves them exposed to the competition of cheap foreign labor.

Whether a tariff schedule would affect the price of poker chips is questionable. Referring again to rumor, it is learned that in Washington poker chips have varying prices, based, apparently, more upon the social set in which they are used than upon the tariff or any other consideration. Study of the prices of poker chips is peculiarly baffling, since the ordinary laws of economic study, such as supply and demand, seem mysteriously puzzling when applied here. It seems that poker chips vary in price also according to the color, whereas it does not appear that the color enters into the cost of production, nor is it proposed to base the tariff schedules upon the hue of the chips.

For instance, among the smaller clerks and attaches of congress white chips can be purchased for a penny, red ones for a nickel, and blue ones for a dime. Imagine the mystification of the economic student who finds chips apparently of the same manufacture, hue and consistency selling among the members of congress at $1, $5 and $25, respectively. There are reports that among the millionaires who are getting into the habit of making Washington one of their homes, values even higher than this are observed.

It is clear, therefore, that the preparation of an adequate tariff schedule is a thing of great difficulty, which may explain why it has not already been done. To tax them upon an ad valorem basis at the price paid for them by the members of the exclusive club known as the United States senate would make a prohibitive price for the small clerks who are accustomed to buying them for pennies, nickels and dimes. In that case they would be driven to substituting matches, beans or other makeshifts, which would be an example of a protective tariff that restrains production and becomes burdensome upon the poor.

It seems, therefore, a most complicated subject, and it is commended to the experts for elucidation.

THE WEATHER

Mild and affable, this latest turn of the weather. The lowest temperature in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning was 4 degs. above, and the highest was 22 degs. above. A little fine snow fell yesterday afternoon, but no more came in the night. The weather man expects it to snow lightly tonight and tomorrow, and he thinks it will remain mild, with a minimum tonight of about 10 degs. above. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Somewhat colder weather prevails this morning in the Dakotas and Western Minnesota, with zero temperature at Moorhead due to an increase in pressure from that section southward. But this temperature conditions will be modified considerably by the easterly movement of a disturbance central over Saskatchewan, and which is responsible for warmer weather throughout Western Canada, the Mississippi valley and the western lake region. This disturbance has also caused light falls of snow over Western Lake Superior, the Upper Mississippi valley and Lower Missouri valley, and its further easterly movement favors a continuance of light snow flurries in this locality tonight and Sunday."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded by the weather bureau in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning:

Ready for a Clean Sweep.

Henry Watterson in Louisville Courier-Journal: I observe that President Eliot of Harvard is very optimistic over the thought that Civilization is to be advanced through Democracy, and I read in the New York Times that Democracy is a menace to both Civilization and Republicanism. For my part, I am not much afraid of the Monster without a Head. Much more I dread the Man, or the Party, on Horseback. Organized power is always more or less dangerous to liberty. The old Democratic party grew so strong that it was able to make its exit the signal for a bloody war. The Republican party has grown so strong that it thinks it owns the earth and has measurably lost the fear of God. The people seem at length ripe for a clean sweep. But, they must be unified on some fighting line and under some adequate leader, who, whatever else he is, we may make sure will not be a Conservative.

Saturday Night Talk

The Fine Art of Dying.

We speak often of the fine art of living but there is an equally fine art of dying and every now and then we get a splendid embodiment of it. No better instance has been afforded in recent years than that of the late President Harper of Chicago University. There was never a man in whom the tides of life were stronger. He was alive to the tips of his fingers. He tossed off 18 hours of work daily as easily and joyously as the robin pours forth his morning song. He seemed to be equally interested in a multitude of different pursuits. As some inviting avenue of labor opened before him he was in the habit of saying "How I wish I could drop everything else and give myself to that." He was constantly projecting plans whose realization would require years of patient and intense labor.

It was this eager, ambitious, capable tireless worker who more than a year ago was stricken with mortal disease and given by his physicians to understand that but a few months more remained to him on earth. How did he receive the announcement? Did he complain and revolt? Did he show the white feather? Did he sink in the deep waters of affliction? On the contrary he at once faced the situation as he had every other problem of his life. As calmly as if he were preparing the schedule of lectures for a new term at Chicago University he set his house in order, planned for the completion of important books, pushed along with the day's work as steadily and as serenely as though he had a hundred more years before him. The victim often of excruciating pain he never lost his nerve nor did his indomitable purpose falter. But this is by no means all. Dr. Harper faced death as a Christian should. The great religious problem of the universe which in full health he had discussed often with his pupils as an abstract matter now came home to him as a most vital personal concern. He called in his friends to help him find the needed solution. He prayed much and sought the prayers of other for himself. He scrutinized his inner motives and he put the finger of self-criticism on what he considered to be his own faults. Out of this severe introspection and out of this recanvassing of the foundations of his religious belief—on which his marvelous career of usefulness had these years been built—there came to President Harper a fresh and gladdening sense of the validity of all his religious hopes and yearnings. The imminence of death only made more clear the vision of the hereafter so that at last the unspeakably great privilege was given him of being able to say from the heart, "I have no idea what the activities of the next state of existence will be like, but I have less hesitation about taking the next step into the future than I had about leaving Yale and coming to Chicago."

Surely there is nothing mawkish about this method of dying and there is something far greater in it than a stoical acceptance of the inevitable It must have been that President Harper, as physical strength declined, caught a vision of two great truths respecting life in the world to come. One is that heaven is a place of larger knowledge than we have here and the other that heaven means not idleness but work and work infinitely more interesting and varied than any earthly occupations can ever be. To a man of Dr. Harper's temperment with his eager desire for more truth and his marvelous capacity and relish for work a heaven would be robbed of its richest attractions that did not offer the chance to learn and the chance to do.

And the fine art of dying may be attained by anyone who firmly believes that the good God has ampler fields of truth for us to explore in the other world and more engrossing and satisfying tasks to perform. Only we must begin here to learn and to do. Then each will be living.

A life that dares to send
Its challenge to the end
And, when it comes says welcome Friend.

THE PARSON.

FLASHES OF FUN.

Cleveland Leader: Mabel—It's queer what an aversion dear papa has for music, isn't it?

Mamma—Why, I never noticed that he had, my dear.

Mabel—Yes, he has. Doesn't he always leave the theater as soon as the orchestra begins to play between acts.

Chicago Tribune: Belchazzar's attention had been called to the handwriting on the wall.

"Looks like a Chinese laundry check," he said, carelessly.

But he learned later that it was a weigh check and that he was short weight.

Philadelphia Press: "The milk you left yesterday was sour," indignantly said the young housekeeper.

"Was it, ma'am," innocently asked the tricky milkman, "well, that's that lazy farmer's fault. He overslept himself yesterday morning and didn't milk the cows until three hours later than usual."

New York Sun: Washington had just said he couldn't tell a lie.

"In that case," replied the father, "you had better grow up a financier and not tell anything at all."

Thus we may plainly see where G. W. got his sterling common sense.

Philadelphia Press: "Poor old Uncle Richley!" said the favorite nephew, "he's a very sick man."

"Yes," replied Dr. Slocum, "but I have his case in hand now and there is hope."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the other absentmindedly, "some of our patients have been known to get well in spite of you."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Jane, leaning forward: "Will you please remove your hat—it hides half of the stage."

The woman in front, with much bitterness: "No, I won't."

Jane, louder: "Excuse me. I suppose if you took it off your hair would come with it."

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: Hicks—I met Barelock yesterday. Typical baldheaded man, isn't he?

Wicks—Typical? How do you mean?

Hicks—I hadn't known him ten minutes before he was telling me how his mother used to whip him because his hair was so thick he couldn't keep it combed.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: You could always trust a girl if she wasn't one.

Mighty few men have the reason to see that coal bills are better than doctor's bills.

It would be awful satisfactory to have married daughters if there were no sons-in-law.

An easy way to convince a woman how much you love her is to pretend to be jealous about her.

It takes an awful long time to convince yourself that you are as happy as your wife tells you are.

"If I Might!"

If I might dip my pen within
The lily's chalice white,
And gather on its point the dew
Which breathes a love that's pure and true,
What grand words I might write!

If I might gaze but for a space
Into the rose's heart,
To see the life which prompts it live
And unto man its fragrance give,
What tales I might impart.

If every day I might but feel
The bluebell's gentle kiss,
And know that, tho' I roamed at will,
Its sweet breath would be with me still
What cares my heart would miss!

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

At the meeting of the village council last night, a letter from a modest Canadian named J. C. Young, asking for $2,000 to publish a pictorial map of Duluth was laid on the table. An exempt fireman's certificate was recommended for Melvin J. Forbes. Mayor Sutphin's appointment of Everett Lawler as special policeman at the toboggan slide without pay from the village was appointed. The city attorney having reported that the claim of J. J. C. Davis as chief of police was legal, an order for three months and a half salary was passed. The bid of the Evening Herald for doing the city printing was accepted. A fireman's exempt certificate was granted to J. J. Costello. An ordinance was passed granting to the Superior Short Line railway right of way through Third street, Rice's Point, for one track, to conform with the grade of the street, the company to plank between the rails of said track and to pave the street if so directed by the council.

The St. Paul Globe says that the Minneapolis & St. Louis and the St. Paul & Northern Pacific roads have been quietly at work securing the right-of-way from Minneapolis to Anoka and will build a road from Minneapolis to Duluth via Anoka so as to gain a lake outlet.

M. S. Burrows, formerly engaged in the clothing business in Duluth, has returned to the city greatly improved in health and appearance. He has visited the principal cities of the country, but finds Duluth the best after all. He will probably engage in business here.

Charles Buffington of Towanda, Pa., is in the city and will probably locate here. Mr. Buffington is a machinist and thinks of starting a machine shop.

S. D. Allen has been retained as attorney for the Duluth, Park Point & Southern railroad.

Mrs. Thomas Dowse's kindergarten will open for the spring term on Monday, March 1.

The co-partnership existing between McGuire & Finn has been dissolved, and James McGuire will continue the business.

Edmond Sherwood is in Chicago on business.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Some actresses and actors have a fad of carrying dogs and other animals about with them on their travels," said W. J. Benedict at the St. Louis. "I was traveling with a company once whose leading lady had as her peculiar pet a small monkey that had been presented her by an uncle who was captain of a sailing vessel that occasionally touched at Brazil.

"There are few pleasures in this world, however, that are not tempered by some alloy, and the actress in question frequently mourned the loss of powder puffs and small articles of jewelry and personal adornment that the monkey, who was named Pat, had made away with. Pat also had a jocular habit of going through the dressing rooms of other members of the company while they were on the stage and creating havoc in their trunks, until the manager put a stop to it. One night in Boston he pranced out on the stage wearing some of his mistress' lingerie, while that young lady was in a pathetic part, with the result that she was reduced to a condition known in the profession as 'all broke up.'

"Pat's crowning exploit, however, was one that brought his theatrical career to an abrupt termination. It was performed in a hotel. Another member of the company had a small, silky sky terrier, of which she was extravagantly fond, valuing it as her most priceless possession. The terrier incurred the hatred of Pat, and the little cuss laid low, awaiting a chance to do up the victim. The opportunity came at last in an El Paso hostelry while the monkiet, who had escaped from the actress, was circulating around the corridors of the hotel, introducing himself with characteristic audacity to people he had never met before, and dodging with considerable success half a dozen bell boys who were in pursuit. The boys were close on his trail when Pat saw the terrier, and with one bound he was on the poor canine and had him by the tail.

"Pat slipped quietly into the bar room, dragging the squalling dog after him, and leaving wreck and desolation in his wake as he leaped upon the bar and scampered its full length, with bottles and glasses flying in all directions. The men who were drinking thought they were things for sure. During the confusion that followed Pat gained a point of vantage to top of a high plate glass mirror, where it seemed impossible to dislodge him, and where he sat grinning with glee, still holding the terrier by the tail.

"When all efforts at dislodging him were found unavailing the actress owner was sent for and she came flying into the bar room at a 2:30 clip. She coaxed and cajoled, held out extravagant bribes in the way of loaf sugar, and finally wept, but the monkey still refused to come down. Now and then he created a diversion by pulling the ears of the terrier, until the unfortunate animal howled in the most heartrending way. Finally a ladder was procured. Pat capitulated and the terrier was rescued in a swooning condition."

"Conditions for farming are ideal around Cass Lake," said J. M. Goss, a Cass Lake lumberman, at the Lenox. "The land covered by the white pine up in that district is a heavy loam soil and is well adapted to agricultural purposes after the timber has been cleared off. White pine is a pretty sure indication that the land where it is growing is of a fertile nature, and a good deal of the timber in the Cass Lake region is white pine.

"I believe that when this land is cleared it will make just as good farming ground as is to be found in other parts of the state now recognized as first-class agricultural districts. Anyone making the statement that this land is valuable only for the timber is doing the country a great injustice, for it will, when cleared, make good farms.

"Our company has just completed a contract for getting out 10,000,000 feet of lumber for the J. Neils Lumber company, and expects to get out 4,000,000 feet more before the close of the season."

PAT CROWE ACQUITTED

Jury Says He is Not Guilty of Robbing Edward Cudahy.

Omaha, Feb. 17.—The jury in the trial of Pat Crowe, charged with the robbery of Edward Cudahy, the Omaha packer, of $25,000 in connection with the kidnaping of the latter's son five years ago, yesterday, after fifteen hours' deliberation, brought in a verdict of not guilty.

The kidnaping of Eddie Cudahy Dec. 19, 1900, and his release upon the payment by his father of $25,000 ransom, created a sensation, and the search for the kidnapers was stimulated at the time by the offer of a reward of $50,000 by Mr. Cudahy.

It was the belief of the authorities that Crowe and James Callahan were the guilty persons, but no trace of them could be found until about a year ago, when Callahan was arrested. He was identified by young Cudahy as one of his captors, but released as it could not be shown that he received any of the money, and there was at that time no law making the kidnaping of a person more than 10 years of age a crime. Last October Crowe was arrested in Butte, Mont., and the trial began Feb. 7. There was no evidence positively to identify Crowe as one of the kidnapers.

Crowe was recently indicted in Council Bluffs, with others, on a charge of holding up a street car.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Feb. 17.—Pat Crowe is now a prisoner in the Pottowatomie county jail here, and will be arraigned on the charge of street car robbery. The indictment charges that he and Arthur Levi held up two car crews on the Missouri river bridge, July 2, 1905, and obtained $50 from them. Crowe's bond has been fixed at $1,500.

Levi was on trial yesterday for a saloon hold-up committed a month subsequent to the street car robbery.

Obtains Guns From State.

Capt. John H. Norton of the local camp, Sons of Veterans, has received from the state of Minnesota a consignment of twenty-five rifles that will be used in the military organization the camp has recently perfected. The guns were obtained by depositing a bond in the sum of $500 for their safe keeping. Regular drills will be had with a view of getting the members of the company thoroughly posted in the manual of arms. It is expected that the camp will be able to make quite a showing by next Memorial day.

GOES WEST TO INVESTIGATE

Friends Think Johnson Was Robbed as Well as Murdered.

S. A. McElroy of the local lake engineers' union, will go at once to Denver to further investigate the circumstances which surround the death of Thomas Johnson, the former Duluth man who was shot by a policeman in the Colorado metropolis a week ago.

Johnson was known to have $1,000 in cash on his person when he left Duluth, and as he was exceedingly cautious in money matters, his friends are at a loss to know why he should have been penniless when he was killed.

The Denver authorities reported to the murdered man's parents at Mondovi, Wis., that only $20 was found on the body. The dead man's friends in Duluth feel sure that he was robbed as well as murdered and it is to probe this part of the unfortunate affair that McElroy is going to Denver.

It is thought probable that some of the loiterers in the saloon where Johnson was killed took the money. Shortly before he left Duluth, a friend of Johnson's spoke to him about carrying large amounts of money on his person, but he said that he knew to whom he would show his money.

MINING STUDENTS

At Michigan College to be Addressed by James Gayley.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—James Gayley, New York, first vice president of the United States Steel corporation, will address the graduating class of the Michigan College of Mines, May 4. This closes the college's twentieth year. The class contains forty-five members, making a total of 370 graduates employed in every important mining district of the world.

NO HOPE FOR McCALL.

Lakewood, N. J., Feb. 17.—Physicians of John A. McCall, the former president of the New York Life Insurance company, announce today that almost all hope for his recovery has been abandoned. Mr. McCall was much weaker today than at any previous time during his illness, this condition being due largely to the fact that for several days he has been able to take only small quantities of liquid nourishment. Members of the family have been told to be prepared for the end very soon.

MANY CENTENARIANS.

Bucharest, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Anna Pavlov, a working woman, died the other day, 126 years old. As a consequence the birth registers of her district, Tulca, were overhauled, and it was found that in five villages there are 300 people having passed their 100th birthday.

One Does Not Want to Read All the Time.

He would liked to have boarded all winter at one of the big hotels on Superior street but the fact that he was not an officer of the company and his salary was small kept him in a fairly large and quite respectable boarding house on the hill. Not that he had been used to the big hotels but the cafes looked very attractive from the outside and the fare in the most respectable boarding houses is not so good that it kills all longing for better things to eat.

The place wherein he stored his trunk and whereat he ate three times a day was not the most homelike place for one who had spent most of his twenty years with his own family at Rush City, or was it Staples? But there seemed to be some sociable fellows in the house and the second night of his stay he received a mysterious invitation to take a hand in a friendly little game of poker in a room on the top floor occupied by a young man who worked in the board of trade building. They did not seem so friendly, however, when they learned that people fresh from towns which do not boast of trolley lines and seven story buildings know that four of a kind beats everything but straight and royal flushes.

He retired with some $11 of his enemies' money. But he got no particular enjoyment out of the game. When he began to win his new found friends shut up like clams, studied their hands closely, and did not seem disposed to be overly polite. Perhaps they had expected to fleece a lamb.

Meal time offered some variations to the monotony of the life in a strange city but after all, they did not amount to so very much. The potatoes were often cold, and not a single soul even greeted him as he sat down. When he first appeared he had been introduced to the only person who happened to be dining at that hour, and she proved to be a gloomy, middle-aged bachelor girl, who affected an aloofness that would have done credit to a member of the four hundred. She had mispronounced his name when they had met, and never even looked at him again.

Every meal was the same, as far as entertainment went. Everyone seemed to be in a hurry to get through and be off. He adopted similar methods, but these did not quench the feelings of loneliness which persisted in rising and mocking him.

No one ever thought to introduce him to anyone else. The landlady was invariably so busy at meal times, as at any other during the day, that she could not stop to make her boarders acquainted with each other. This was not a part of her functions, it seemed.

Others at the table seemed to be in the same predicament as he, but they did not seem to mind it so much. He heard them running lightly up and down the stairs, and whistling merrily as they went out the front door, banging it loudly.

He went to the theater—but a young man on a small salary cannot go to the theater every night; he read, but a person does not like to read every evening, and he took long walks, but one does not always want to walk alone.

He tried to encourage a conversation one night with the man on his right, but that person invariably brought a newspaper to the table with him, and did not seem disposed to be lured from its printed pages. It occurred to him that from all he had heard of boarding houses, and from what he learned of them during the two winters which his mother had "taken in" several school teachers, a young man who worked in a local bank and the station agent, that he had struck something unheard of. Perhaps the others talked about him after he had left the table; he did not know.

Then She came. He realized that things would be different the first time he caught a glimpse of Her. She seemed to work wonders at that table. Before She had been there a week, a marked change was noticeable. Everyone, except the exclusive old maid, made it a point to converse with Her as much as a nodding sort of an acquaintance would permit. Some of them had been introduced to Her, but, alas, he had not been present when the only move toward such formalities were made.

He watched Her covertly over the soup, and when he saw Her eyes wander along the table, he hastened to push the salt within Her reach. On these occasions She rewarded him with a smile that filled him with ecstasy. Otherwise, he was unrewarded with attention. She seldom looked at him.

There was no denying, however, that mealtime was much more to be looked forward to than formerly. He grew into the habit of brushing his hair more carefully and taking especial pains with his finger nails before going down to dinner.

He was not the only male person at the table to spruce up, however. The young man who worked at the board of trade produced some marvelous cravats of the sort calculated to fill the hearts of the others present with a malicious envy.

This board of trade person seemed to have a marvelous gift of gab. The others at the table seemed to look up to him as a wit, and She favored him with most gracious smiles and even hearty laughs. He seemed to be much interested in Her, and observed to the group in the parlor, as he lighted his after-dinner cigar, that "That Breuker girl is a corker."

This observation was instantaneously endorsed.

The man from Rush City, or was it Sauk Center? felt that she was a peach. He thought about her a great deal during the day and planned to ask the landlady what Her first name was when he got a chance.

And he tried, too, to describe Her to himself. Her hair, he knew, was neither black or brown. It was a happy combination of both. Sometimes he was not sure just what color Her eyes were, but he had a notion that they were dark blue and he knew positively that they were perhaps the most beautiful he had ever seen.

She had a wonderous way of looking at you, all smiles. It seemed to him that She was the light of his life, although he realized that that line had been done to death by the novelists and the play builders. He dreamed, over his work, of marrying Her and taking Her to some pretty little home where there were no careless waitresses to spill soup on their shoulders and bring him oat meal when he wanted grape-nuts.

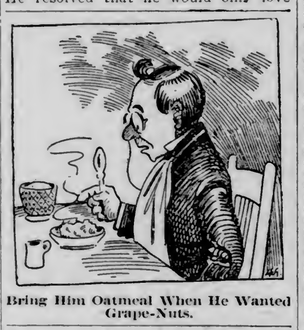

Even people who have not lived within sight of the aerial bridge a great length of time are not entirely ignorant of the ways of the world and he managed to squeeze in a little conversation with his divinity now and then. But he did not seen to be in a fair way to catch up with his puts and calls rival, however.

He contented himself with less than that gentleman received. He made the most of the rays of sunshine that the fair one occasionally threw in his direction and tried to forget that She apparently ignored him whenever there was anyone else around to talk to.

He wondered where She worked. Once he met Her coming up the hill and walked with her from Superior to First street. Then his deadly rival came along and joined the party without any apologies whatsoever. More than that, he began an apparently endless dissertation on some new copper stock he had become interested in.

Somehow, all his life, fate had given him the double cross.

He did not give up hope, however. He resolved that he would only love the fair creature from afar until such time as he had acquired the inside track and might watch the game from a seat near the front. He tried to appear at his best whenever She came near, although he realized that he had failed to take advantage of several opportunities to show Her that he was not the stick that She must think him to be.

One day She had playfully chided him for failing to speak to Her when they had passed on the street, and instead of saying something that would not only explain his lack of courtesy but please Her as well, he mumbled something incoherent and spilled his coffee. Of course this was after everyone was on speaking terms with one another at the dinner table. For the arrival of Miss Breuker revolutionized things and made a group of live and friendly conversationalists out of what had been the grumpiest lot of pessimists that ever kicked about cold rooms. But this did not come about in a single night, not even with Miss Breuker as managing director of the enterprise.

On several occasions he had determined to ask Her to accompany him to the Lyceum, but each time his courage had failed him and someone butted in at the crucial moment. He finally stopped in the hall one day and asked Her to go with him on an exploring expedition to ascertain whether "The College Widow" was as good as every one who went to New York last winter said it was. And when She consented very prettily, he felt like C. M. Depew used to feel after the demitasse had been served and long before the days of insurance investigations.

The very next week the Board of Trade man got busy and took Her roller skating. More than that, he increased his conversational liveliness about 250 volts and the delegate from Rush City became worried. But he felt, nevertheless, that if it came to a showdown, She would not pick the grain man as Her ring purchasing agent. He took Her to another show, a concert and walked down the hill with Her on two mornings.

It became so apparent—to him—that he was the whole thing that he pictured to himself the time when he would ask Her to share his lot and handle his money and it filled him with delight when he thought of the Board of Trade man getting it where Elizabeth is popularly supposed to have worn the necklace.

There were one or two others at the house who imagined that they stood high in Her favor, too. What chance had they, poor things, and how little did they appreciate their positions? They had not even been entered in the race.

All the other women at the house had it doped out that either he or the Board of Trade man was due to win Her and this pleased him greatly. He was glad that they considered him as formidable a eclaimant as the grain dealer. And he figured that the other women ought to know something about the situation, too, because they had plenty of time to watch all those concerned and carefully weigh every detail.

But one morning Miss Breuker did not show up at the breakfast table. The disappointment was almost general. The Board of Trade man complained bitterly about the quality of the pancakes and The Man Who Had the Inside Track staid so long at the table that he was fifteen minutes late at the office. He lingered to catch a glimpse of Her.

She was absent at lunch, but no report of her whereabouts reached his anxious earrs and he was unable to get to those of the landlady to make inquiry for the reason that that good lady was not to be found.

But he got there early for dinner and was the only person at the board when the large waitress with the moth-eaten complexion pushed the glass of water in front of him and chanted something that only a confirmed boarder could understand.

"Where is Miss Breuker?" he asked, trying to hide the eagerness in his voice.

"She has went home to get married," said the waitress, ungrammatically, but, it seemed, truthfully. "She had broke off her engagement wid this feller and just fixed it up yesterday. Roast beef, veal cutlets and lake trout wid—"

"Didn't—didn't she leave any word for anyone?" asked the man.

"No. Roast beef, veal cutlets, lake trout wid tomato—"

"Oh, bring me any old thing," sighed the man.

A few days later, the landlady received a letter from Miss Breuker mailed at Fargo and signed "Mrs. Felix G. Morgan."

"I pity that fellow; I think she is a 'nagger'," said the Board of Trade man when the landlady had finished the letter. But the delegate from Rush City said nothing.

AROUND THE PRESS CLUB FIRE

"Gentlemen," said the president of the Press club, as he rapped for order," I am glad to see so many, bright, shining faces gathered before me here this evening. I hope you will all grow up to be governors some day, as all good newspaper boys do. We will now take up the collection."

"No you don't," interrupted the sporting editor. "You don't get any collection until you refer to the pure, young minds which are revealed through those bright faces. You're departing from the accepted method of procedure."

"The exception is well taken," said the president, "and the secretary will please make note of the amendment. When the suspender buttons and plugged nickels have all been gathered—I mean garnered in, we will proceed with the program of the evening."

"Which is?" said the theatrical critic.

"It has come to my mind," said the president, "that the well known musical abilities of our friend and brother, the stage door Johnny, are being wasted on this barren and arid atmosphere. Tonight, I propose to allow him to irritate the baby grand, while the assembled audience warbles a few lines. During the interim of fifteen minutes you will be each allowed to perpetrate a popular ballad, which will be inflicted on the others without fear or favor, and may the Lord have mercy on our—no, I mean, may we all spend a profitable and enjoyable evening."

The mythical cloak of silence wrapped itself about the quill drivers as they labored at their self imposed task.

"Our friend and brother the police reporter will be the first on the program," said the president.

"To properly present my ballad," said the police reporter, "I should have the accompaniment of colored lantern slides, with a poetical young man and a girl in white duck leaning over a fence rail. But you will have to imagine these views posed by the ribbon counter clerk and the stenographer, strolling through blue trees and orange colored moonlight, or floating on a purple lake in a pea green row boat. If the pianiste will kindly tear off a few chunks to the tune of 'Where the Silvery Colorado Wends Its Way-ay-ay—ay—ay-ay,' yours truly will begin. This is what is known as an 'old home' ballad. I believe our sister city of the stock yards has been neglected while music hall artists have sung the praises of every state from the green hills of old New Hampshire, to dear old Alabama. I call it 'Where the Golden Brown Chicago Wends Its Way.' Here goes:

"I sit alone at twilight in the gloaming,
And I ponder on the thoughts of days gone by,
My thoughts turn back from out here in Wyoming,
To my ivy covered cottage back in Shy.
I can see the rustic gateway,
Where I swung with sweetheart Nell,
I can see the kitchen where I rolled upon the floor,
I can hear the dear old river,
As it gurgles on its way,
And can smell the fragrant odor from the shore.

"Where the golden, brown Chicago wends its way,
There of old as children we were wont to play,
Skipping stones upon the water,
In a way we hadn't ought'er,
Where the golden, brown Chicago wends its way—ay——ay——ay.

"But they caught me stealing cattle in Wyoming,
And tomorrow I will hang upon a tree,
So no wonder as I sit here in the gloaming,
My thoughts are not exactly filled with glee.
I would rather swing upon that gateway,
Where I swung with sweetheart Nell,
Than to some pine out here in far Cheyenne,
And I'd rather hear the river
As it gurgles on its way,
Than gurgle when they take me from my pen.

"Where the golden brown Chicago wends its way,
There of old as children we were wont to play.
I long to see that water,
For I'm going where it's hotter,
Than where the golden, brown Chicago wends its way-ay-ay-ay-ay."

"Doesn't it take you back to home and mother, though?" asked the sporting editor, as the audience sat in helpless resignment to its fate, while the last weird strains were still ringing in their ears. "Fairly reeks of the stockyards."

"The next," said the president, rousing himself with an effort, as if he feared what was coming, but was resolved to face it like a man, "will be the selection by the literary critic."

"If you turn that atom of walking dyspepsia loose on us every meeting, I'm going to resign from this club," said the sporting editor, rising excitedly to his feet.

"Sit down," roared the president, and the sporting editor sank mumbling into his seat.

"My little effort," said the literary critic, rising and eyeing the sporting editor with a malevolent glance, "is entitled 'In the Garden of My Dreams.' It is designed for matinee idols to sing at afternoon teas before audiences of sweet young things, grass widows and long-haired poets. You don't need any tune for it. All that is necessary is a chord when you begin each bar."

"You need a ¾-inch Manila rope and a 6-foot coffin," growled the sporting editor, but he was promptly sat upon by two burly members, while the literary critic began, in a high, lyric tenor voice:

"Far in the garden,
In the garden of my dreams,
We will tell our soul's deep yearnings
In the pale moon's yellow beams.

What matters life's great sorrows,
When our joys all take to flight,
If we but clasp our hands together,
Through the stillness of the night.

Let us gather of the flowers,
Our soul's thirst we will slake,
Let us satisfy the longings
Of finite hearts that ache.

For in our dear dream garden
The saddened heart turns gay,
And the roses of tomorrow
Choke the weeds of yesterday."

* * *

"Just let me kill him once," said the sporting editor, as he struggled to get free. "Just once; there's a good fellow."

"Your turn next," said the president. "It has occurred to me, however, that we are punishing ourselves unnecessarily. There is really no reason why we should compel ourselves to listen to such a program as this, in a free and civilized community. Consequently after our bloodthirsty friend here inflicts upon us the product of that mental zoological garden which he calls his think tank, the club will adjourn to the usual game of 'old maid.'"

"The unkind remarks of our worthy president, prompted as they are from the petty feelings of professional jealousy, rising like toadstools in the narrow and darkened attic where he stores away his musty and incomplete stock which passes for grey matter, I will not even deign to notice," said the sporting editor, jumping to his feet, and brushing the dust from his back, after his enforced imprisonment on the floor. "I will at once pass to the product of my ripened intelligence to which he so slightingly refers. It's a coon song gentlemen, and if the orchestra will just tickle out some rag time, I will give you the first of the sixteen verses. Any old tune will do, as long as it is frayed out at the edges.

"You will note, gentlemen, that there is not a trace of rhyme, reason or sense to any of the entire sixteen verses, and if I just had a rolled up newspaper, and a partner whom I could swat over the head at the end of each stanza, the impersonation of a real live comedy team, would be so lifelike it would make you weep. Here goes:

"Bill was a member ob a minstrel show,
Dat struck our town one night.
Bill had a seat at the end ob de row,
And was dressed up like a fright.
Bill had on a long green coat,

And he certainly look like de owner ob.

"Second stanza——"

"No you don't," interrupted the president. "The snake editor and the hen fight reporter are appointed a committee of two to gag our friend here, while the rest of us proceed to the enjoyment of liberty, freedom and the pursuit of happiness, to which the constitution of this glorious country entitles us."

The Press club stood adjourned.

SHEEHY DROPS DAMAGE SUIT

Files Dismissal of His Case Against T. J. McKeon.

Joseph Sheehy seems to find it inconvenient to come to Duluth to push his alleged malicious prosecution case against Assistant City Attorney T. J. McKeon. Through his attorney in Minneapolis, Sheehy has filed a dismissal of the suit so that argument on McKeon's demurrer will not be necessary.

Sheehy was convicted in municipal court for disorderly conduct and was sentenced to sixty days' imprisonment in the county jail. The assistant city attorney prosecuted the case in the regular line of his duty.

Sheehy appealed, after serving a few days of his term, securing his release under bond pending the appeal. The supreme court dismissed the appeal and the sentence became operative. Sheehy left the city and for some weeks service could not be made on him. When he returned he was rearrested on a bench warrant and recommitted to the county jail. Ten days later Sheehy started habeas corpus proceedings and secured his liberty on a legal technicality, an error having been made in the records.

Sheehy left the city again and after a sojourn in Superior he went to Minneapolis and started an action for over $9,000 damages against Assistant City Attorney T. J. McKeon for alleged malicious prosecution. Mr. McKeon applied for a change of venue and gave notice of a demurrer to the complaint.

Sheehy has not yet returned to Duluth. There is awaiting him a warrant charging him with criminal libel that the authorities are anxious to serve as soon as he puts in an appearance.

SENDS OLSON TO THE ASYLUM

Unfortunate Miner From Wyoming Does Not Recover Reason.

Erick Olson, a young miner who came to this county from Wyoming, where he was injured by a blow on the head in falling from a horse, has been committed to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls. Olson was examined in the probate court yesterday afternoon. The blow he received on his head has affected his mind and he cannot remember incidents of his past life. While in jail, unless restrained, he would plunge into the bathtub with his clothes on, seeming to have a great mania for cleanliness.

Olson was taken in charge at Hibbing, his condition indicating mental derangement. A friend who accompanied him to Hibbing and who has since disappeared, claimed that he and Olson were riding down a mountin in Wyoming when Olson's horse fell and he was thrown to the ground, fracturing his skull on a rock. The friend claimed that Olson had a valuable mineral property and that the physician who treated him for his injuries secured it for $700, deducting $500 of the amount for his professional services. After the remaining $200 was spent, Olson was cast adrift and became a county charge. He was kept at the poor farm for a time, but his condition was such that the authorities decided that he needed treatment that he could only get it at an asylum.

DIRECTORS ARE RE-ELECTED

Stockholders of Black Mountain Company Hold Their Annual Meeting.

The old board of directors was re-elected at the annual meeting of stockholders of the Black Mountain Mining company held at Tucson, Ariz., Thursday. It comprises George T. Oliver of Pittsburg, W. Z. Stuart and F. J. Sensenbrenner of Neenah, Wis. and E. D. Brigham and J. G. Brown of Chicago.

Heavy rains have retarded work on the property for the past few months, but it is expected that the stamp mill will start work in thirty days and that the cyanide plant will be in readiness by May 1. President Stuart reported that the property was resurveyed and titles examined, and everything found to be in conformity with Mexican mining laws.

Explosion Brought Death.

Frank Jones, a laborer employed with the construction gang that has been driving piles for the Great Northern Railway company's bridge between Allouez and Saunders, Wis., died at St. Mary's hospital in Superior last evening, from injuries received in a dynamite explosion yesterday noon. He was too slow in getting away after the fuse was lighted and a large fragment of frozen earth struck him down. He sustained a fracture of the ribs, his chest was crushed and he was otherwise internally injured. Little is known about the unfortunate man other than he is 40 years of age and is supposed to have relatives in Michigan.

9—March, Bride Elect..... Sousa.

During the time the guests were assembling, the military and naval officers detailed for the occasion to the White House as the occasion to the president, were completing the arrangements, by seeing that the distinguished throng was disposed of properly, for the ceremony. The officers were: Colonel C. S. Bromwell, U. S. A., the president's military aide; Lieut. Commander A. L. Key, U. S. N., the president's naval aide; Major Charles L. McCawley, U. S. M. C.; Capt. A. E. Harding, U. S. M. C.; Capt. Guy V. Henery, U. S. A., Capt. Dan T. Moore, U. S. A.; Lieut. P. H. Sheridan, U. S. A.; Lieut. Chauncey Shackford, U. S. N.; Ensign Adolphus Andrews, U. S. N.; Capt. Spencer Crosby, U. S. A.; Capt. A. W. Butt, U. S. A.; Lieut. J. H. Poole, U. S. A.

A few minutes before noon, Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by the members of the immediate family descended the main staircase and under the escort of several military aides, entered the East room by the main doors. She was escorted to a position on the left side of the platform, which was reserved for the bride's family. Designated members of the bridegroom's family, including his mother and sister, already had taken their places on the right side of the platform. In order to keep a way clear for the wedding party, white satin ropes were stretched from each side of the main entrance to the East room to posts located ten feet west of the platform and thence, around the platform, to points on the east wall.

Mrs. Roosevelt graciously acknowledged the greetings which she received on her entrance. She wore a superb gown, richly designed, of heavy, cream colored brocade, on which were figures of blue and brown interlaced with threads of gold. The gown was made in Princess style with a long train of the brocaded material. The trimmings were of brown chiffon, embroidered in blue and gold. The yoke of the bodice was formed of embroidered chiffon, as were the trimmings of the elbow sleeves. Exquisitely designed panels on the skirt were made of the blue and golden embroidery: She wore diamond ornaments.

Two or three minutes after the entrance of Mrs. Roosevelt, the bridegroom, Mr. Longworth, accompanied by his best man, Thomas Nelson Perkins of Boston, descended the main staircase, and entering the East room, took his place at the foot of the platform to await the arrival of his bride.

Promptly on the stroke of noon, Miss Alice Roosevelt, escorted by the president, descended by the elevator to the west end of the corridor. There awaiting them were the ushers, selected by Mr. Longworth. All of them are longtime personal friends, and several were the bridegroom's classmates at Harvard. They were: Quincy A. Shaw of Boston, Frederic Winthrop of New York, Francis R. Bangs of Boston, Guy Norman of Boston, B. A. Wallingford, Jr., of Cincinnati; Lars Anderson of Washington, Vicomte Charles De Chambaun of the French embassy, and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.

Preceded by the ushers, the president and the dainty bride, resting her hand lightly within his left arm, proceeded to the East room, the orchestra rendering the magnificent march from Tannhauser. Miss Roosevelt never looked better. The classic beauty of her face and figure was accentuated by her exquisite attire and by the surroundings. Her bridal dress was a magnificent creation of heavy white satin, point lace, chiffon, filmy tulle and silver brocade. The material from which the gown was developed was manufactured especially for Miss Roosevelt, and the design was destroyed as soon as the necessary amount of the material for the dress was made. The gown had a long court train of super silver brocade. The bodice was made high, without a collar, was trimmed with rare old point lace, and the elbow sleeves were finished with the same filmy material. The sleeves just met the long white gloves. A voluminous tulle veil almost completely enveloping the slender, graceful figure of the charming bride, was held in place by dainty clusters of orange blossoms. The tiny slippers were fashioned from silver brocade, and instead of buckles, tulle bows were worn with tiny clusters of orange flowers. The only jewels worn by the bride was the superb diamond necklace, which was the gift of the groom. Over her left arm, Miss Roosevelt carried a superb shower bouquet of the rarest and daintiest white orchids procurable. The delicate blossoms were arranged in cascade form, the stems being tied with white chiffon satin ribbon, with long bows.

The ushers, who were in couples, separated as they reached the platform, and the president passed through the two lines, and presented his daughter to the waiting bridegroom, who stepped forward to receive her. Together they ascended the platform, where Bishop Satterlee, in the imposing robes of his office, already was standing.

It was one of the most auspicious moments in the history of the White House. The guests seemed scarcely to breathe, so intent were they to catch every syllable of the beautiful service. In low, yet resonant tones, Bishop Satterlee began. At the conclusion of the responses from the bride and groom, the venerable bishop inquired, in a tone that filled the great room:

"Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?"

The president of the United States ascended the platform and, taking his daughter's right hand, placed it in that of the bridegroom. Thus he gave the bride away to the man of her choice, and by the ring, which an instant later the groom placed on the fourth finger of her left hand, she became Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

At the conclusion of the wedding ceremony, the assembled guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Longworth on the platform, and beneath the floral bower, where their hands and hearts were joined forever. They were showered with congratulations. The guests then were received in the Blue room by the president and Mrs. Roosevelt. After the informal reception, the bridal breakfast was served, in buffet form, in the state and private dining rooms.

OUTSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE.

Great Crowds of Eager People Assemble in Its Vicinity.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Fair as a May morning was the wedding day of Miss Roosevelt. Soft, balmy sunshine poured down from a cloudless sky and made the day like springtime. Although the guests within the East room who witnessed the ceremony did not number beyond the hundreds, crowds assembled around the White House so as to be near to the scene to which the eye of the world is centered today. A large curtain of green canvas festooned over the outside of the bay window of the East room marked for those on the outside the altar before which the bridal couple were pledging their troth. For this reason, the crowds around the eastern entrance were larger than elsewhere and packed the sidewalks running between the treasury department and the White House.

The crowd which gathered at the south gate to witness the arrival of the diplomatic corps were keenly disappointed to note that they did not appear in uniform. Indeed, this has been a subject of discussion for some time, the more intimate friends of the president in the corps insisting that it was the courteous thing to do. There is in the corps, however, an ambassador who has always opposed the idea of uniforms except at the diplomatic reception and rather than show to the public a marked division of sentiment the conservative element in the corps yielded.

So perfect was the weather that many of the guests dismissed their carriages and walked leisurely down to the White House. This made Layfayette park a center of interest between 11 and 12 o'clock and reminded one of an Easter morning. Along the front of the White House there were many promenaders, who strolled along in the sunshine, every one expressing their delight that Miss Roosevelt's supreme wish for a bright day had been granted. Among the promenaders was the daughter of the Russian ambassador, Miss De Rosen, who was out for her walk with a friend.

It was a typical Washington crowd which gathered about the White House this morning. It included many who were friends of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and good enough friends to understand the impossibility of all the friends of the two families being invited to the wedding. There was no jostling, no disorder and comparatively few policemen were on duty. No one was permitted in the White House grounds today, except the guests. A few intimate friends and relatives entered by the north door, but the vast majority of the guests entered by the eastern door where they were received by Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, U. S. A. and Lieut. Chauncey Shackford, U. S. N., aides to the president, both in special full dress uniform. There were large crowds about the north gates, who were sure that Mr. Longworth would come in that way but they were disappointed. Indeed few knew of the arrival of the bridegroom, as he came early.

By half past 10 o'clock the line of carriages extended from the eastern enterance of the White House past the front of Lafayette Square and down Seventeenth street nearly to the Corcoran art gallery. So excellent were the arrangements for receiving the guests, however, that all were entered quickly and the carriages were packed in the elipse south of the White House. The vice president and Mrs. Fairbanks arrived fifteen minutes before 12, and were among those who were received at the north door. The British ambassador and Lady Durand, and the German ambassador and Baroness Sternberg were also at the White House promptly and were assigned places near the president.

It was possible for the crowds in Lafayette park to see the guests standing in the East room, and as soon as they saw them moving toward the corridor they knew that the ceremony was over and a ripple of excitement spread through their ranks. Straightway there was a movement to the north gate because of the rumor which was current throughout the morning that the bridal couple would leave the White House by this entrance on their way to Friendship, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean, where it is said they will spend several days before leaving Washington.

GOWNS AND HATS

Worn by the Women Guests to the White House Wedding.

Washington, Feb. 17.—No social event in recent years in America has induced so many elaborate and beautiful toilettes as the wedding of Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth. The gowns and hats of the ladies present were in keeping with romantic importance of the event. While the display of jewels was not so great as it might have been had the wedding been an evening affair, it nevertheless was notable. Many of the women present wore jewels which matched in colors their gowns or if they did not match they blended harmoniously in the color scheme of the toilettes. As the wedding was a morning function, the women guests for the most part kept on their hats. Some of the notable toilettes were the following:

Mrs. William S. Cowles, sister of the president, wore sapphire satin, trimmed with bands of velvet the same shade. The transparent yoke and collar were of point de Venice lace, the sleeves being elbow length and finished with lace ruffles.

Mrs. Douglas Robinson, sister of the president, a reseda velvet bands of sable, trimming the skirt and edging the jacket which was in empire effect.

Mrs. Robert B. Roosevelt, Jr., light blue chiffon cloth made in princess style with insertions of Irish lace; a large picture hat of velvet of the same shade, with white plumes.

Miss Olga Roosevelt, white chiffon over white silk and a picture hat in white, wreathed with rosebuds.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, black lace and black velvet hat trimmed with plumes.

Mrs. John E. Roosevelt, tan chiffon cloth, the skirt edged with a narrow band of mink, the bodice having three mink ornaments placed between narrow V-shaped insertions of lace; a small hat of mink trimmed in lace.

Mrs. Hilborne L. Roosevelt, gray chiffon trimmed with insertions of lace and lavender velvet bow knots; a picture hat of gray with large white plumes.

Mrs. Frederick Roosevelt, steel blue panne velvet with venetian collar and cuffs; hat of lace and feathers.

Miss Christine Roosevelt, blue silk, trimmed with lace; large hat with blue feathers.

Miss Margaret Roosevelt, cerise crepe du chine and hat in same shade.

Mrs. Longworth, mother of the bridegroom, white chiffon cloth trimmed with a deep band of Irish lace at the hem, a long coat of Irish lace. She carried mauve orchids.

Comtess de Chambrun, sister of Mr. Longworth, was in brown chiffon velvet embroidered and trimmed with cloth of gold. Her sable toque had white aigrette.

Mrs. Fairbanks, wife of the vice president, was in violet chiffon and velvet, with hat and gloves to match, the hat having long violet plumes.

Mrs. Root, wife of the secretary of state, dark green velvet with a small toque to match.

Miss Root, cerise chiffon velvet with black hat and dark furs.

Mrs. Shaw, wife of the secretary of the treasury, lavender satin with toque of the same color.

Mrs. Cortelyou, wife of the postmaster general, white voile, the fronts of skirt and ruffles being of hand embroidery. Large white hat with plumes.

Mrs. Bonaparte, wife of the secretary of the navy, wore the historic black lace which was sent by the king of Westphalia, Jerome Bonaparte, to his daughter, and which has been handed down to the secretary and Mrs. Bonaparte. The lace is in flounces of great depth and was worn over coral satin. She also wore the necklace pins and hair ornaments which Jerome presented to his American wife, Martha Patterson of Baltimore, before he became king of Westphalia.

Mrs. Metcalf, wife of secretary of commerce and labor, was in blue velvet, with large white hat, with blue plumes.

Mme. Hengelmuller, wife of the Austrian ambassador, was in coral-tinted voile, her hat matching in color.

Mme. Vasisus, wife of the Mexican ambassador, black velvet costume, trimmed with Irish crochet lace, large black hat trimmed with black and white.

Baroness Rosen, wife of the Russian ambassador, black velvet with black hat, being in mourning for King Christian of Denmark.

Mme. Jusserand, wife of the French ambassador, white chiffon, with velvet appliques, in black and hat in black and white.

Lady Durand, wife of the British ambassador, gray chiffon cloth, with gray hat, furs, shoes and gloves.

Baroness Von Sternburg, wife of the German ambassador, cloth of silver, hibert lace, picture hat of lace covered with plumes, and a superb boa of ostrich feathers, shading from shell pink around the neck to an exquisite purple at the tips, which hung to the bottom of her skirts.

Mme. Nabuco, wife of the Brazilian ambassador, blue panne velvet, with large hat, trimmed with plumes.

Mrs. Harlan, black velvet, trimmed with white lace, black and white bonnet.

Mrs. McKenna, black velvet, trimmed with Irish point lace, toque in black and white.

Mrs. Day, white cloth dress, with white hat to match.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, mauve chiffon velvet, princess styles, the waist opening over a vest of silver, embroidered in gold, set in amethyst, blas bands of mauve velvet edged with silver braid trimmed the skirt. The sleeves were elbow length, slashed up the center and showing silver cloth and embroidery.

Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, panne velvet costume in champagne tints, dress and coat trimmed with Russian sable, hat, matched in color, and trimmed with sable and plumes.

Mrs. Spooner, costume of green velvet, with rich embroidery, hat in light shade with plumes.

Mrs. Loeb, wife of the secretary to the president, a dainty silk costume, with yoke and sleeve trimming of real point lace. Her hat was of pink maline with pink feathers.

Mrs. Dubois, wife of Senator Dubois, embroidered gray crepe, trimmed with real lace, ermine hat, stole and muff.

Mrs. William Alden Smith, wife of Representative Smith of Michigan, white lace with large white hat.

Mrs. Landis, wife of Representative Charles B. Landis of Indiana, pale blue radium silk, trimmed with silver lace, the gown made princesse, a picture hat of blue, with blue plumes and French flowers in a wreath about the hat.

Mrs. Overstreet, wife of the representative from Indianapolis, pale blue chiffon broadcloth, trimmed with chiffon cloth and Irish lace of tiger lily pattern, with hat of blue maline and blue plumes.

Mrs. Ebenezer N. Hill, an imported costume of black thread lace over white silk and chiffon, with stole of Russian sable, and hat trimmed with white ostrich plumes.

Mrs. William M. Howard of Georgia, silk crepe of champagne tint, with panels and jacket of point de venice, lace hat, with feathers.

Mrs. William M. Calder, a light blue princess gown, with Irish crochet lace and hat in blue and white.

Mrs. Duncan E. McKinley, cream white china crepe, lace trimmings and a white hat.

Mrs. William A. Jones, lilac velvet with trimmings of point venice, and lilac velvet hat, with ostrich feathers.

Mrs. J. E. Andrus, black lace over violet chiffon, trimmed with point lace; violet and white hat.

Mrs. Goebel, light broadcloth with waist of chiffon and a hat trimmed with plumes in same shade.

Mrs. G. E. Foss, a light blue silk with cream lace and band embroidery, diamond ornaments.

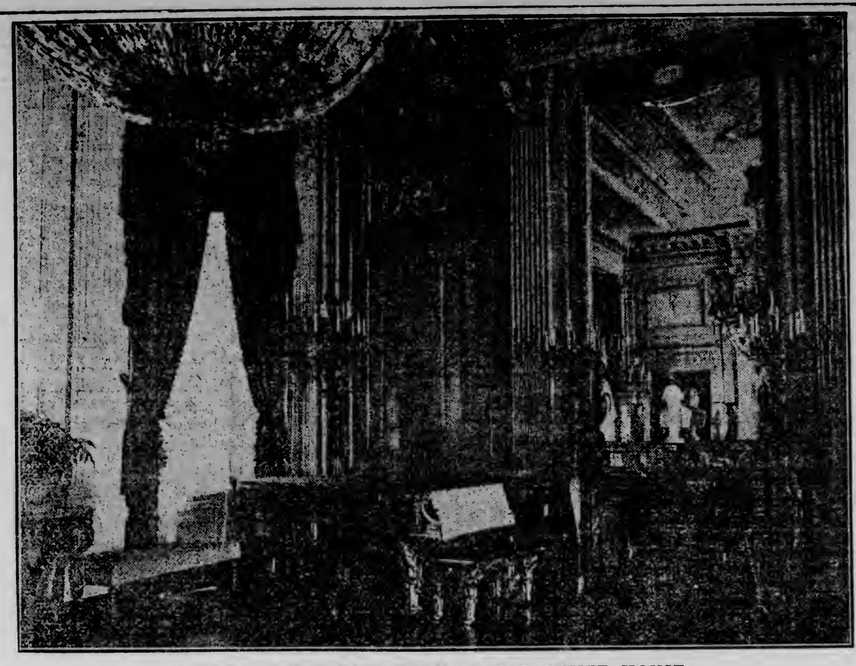

Mrs. Henry Allen Cooper, an imported princesse gown of pale gray silk crepe, embroidered in cherry blossoms, garniture of duchess lace and pink roses and plumes.

Mrs. Richard Townsend, Paris dress of pale gray velvet embroidered with silver with hat of silver and gray ostrich plumes.

Miss Townsend, a chic creation of white lace and velvet. The skirt of white lace has deep lace flounces outlined with gold threads. A Louis Seiz coat of brown velvet trimmed with gold embroidery and a picture hat of gold lace with white ostrich feathers.

Mrs. M. E. Driscoll, fog-colored satin trimmed with ribbon flowers in blue, with flounces of real lace and bolero of the same. Sable and lace hat, flower trimmed.

MAGNIFICENT GIFTS

Presented to White House Bride by Potentates of World.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Few brides, not of so-called royal birth, ever have been recipients of so many and such valuable gifts as were received by Miss Roosevelt. For weeks these tributes of the love and affection have been pouring into the White House. The bride and the members of her family were almost overwhelmed by the number and character of the presents. It was not that they were so valuable, intrinsically, although in the aggregate they represent a great sum, but it was the spirit which animated the givers which appealed strongly to Miss Roosevelt. Many of the presents were accompanied by oral or written expressions of the deep and sincere regard in which the bride is held by persons of all classes, not only in her own country, but throughout the world.

Weeks ago, on behalf of their daughter, President and Mrs. Roosevelt let it be known that certain profferred gifts could not be accepted. It was their desire that the wording, so far as the presents were concerned, would at least be stripped of official character. An intimation was conveyed through diplomatic channels that it was the desire of the president that no gifts should be made to Miss Roosevelt on behalf of foreign governments, through the ambassadors or ministers accredited to the American government. The only present, therefore, which may be said to come directly from a nation is that from the Cuban republic. It was provided for prior to the receipt of the president's delicate intimation and in the peculiar circumstances it could not be declined.

During the past week, hundreds of remembrances so particularly precious in the eyes of a bride, have arrived at the White House for Miss Roosevelt. By far the greater number of them came from personal friends and acquaintances. Her joy was clouded by the receipt of presents from people of whom she never had heard, who followed the gifts immediately with requests for invitations to the wedding. Some of the gifts were costly, but some of them that were so evidently sent with the idea of obtaining an invitation to the wedding were returned instantly to the senders. It can be said with perfect confidence in the accuracy of the statement that while many of the presents received by the bride are very valuable, some of them being particularly so by reason of the circumstances surrounding them, the value of the gifts has been greatly exaggerated. Many of those who remembered Miss Roosevelt with presents are by no means wealthy, and it is quite certain the could not afford to make such presents as they have been credited with having given. The definite announcement of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt that no list of the bridal gifts would be made public has been approved cordially by friends of the families of both bride and bridegroom, but it has placed a premium on the exaggeration so greatly deprecated by the president himself. So remarkable have some of the accounts of the presents been that their publication has brought to Miss Roosevelt any amount of annoyance. Her mail for many days has been flooded with letters from men and women in all parts of the country urging her to give to them from her plentiful store of duplicate gifts one thing or another. Some of the stories of suffering and privation they told were pitiful.

Even in the time of her life's greatest happiness Miss Roosevelt's heart was made sorrowful by the tales of hardship. Of course she was unable to gratify the appellations.

In addition to appeals for charity, Miss Roosevelt received as a result of the exaggerated reports of the value of her presents letters, unsigned as a rule, menacing in their tone. No actual threats were made, but the letters contained sinister intimations of future trouble, perhaps for the country through the presentation to the daughter of an American president of gifts so costly as to be merely a display of the wealth of the givers.

Nobody without the circles of relatives and intimate personal friends had been permitted to view the bridal presents. For two days they were placed in the library, on the second floor of the White House, and not for a moment were they left unguarded. The fortunate ones were permitted to view the beautiful array, many of which are almost regal in their splendor. The gifts numbered nearly 1,000, and it is known that all have not arrived. The display consists principally of jewelry and rare bric-a-brac. There are necklaces, brooches, rings, bracelets, fans of unique design, clocks, watches, vases, loving cups, punch bowls, pictures, rare laces, exquisite silks and embroideries from the Orient, delicate carvings in ivory and the precious metals, handsome rugs and tapestries, rare silver and China table services, most of them manufactured from special designs, and every other gift which probably could make glad the heart of a bride. Among the many beautiful things received are some rare old laces and jewels, from Mrs. Lee, the grandmother of the bride. Had the bride's mother lived these, very likely, would have gone to her. In the circumstances, they are more precious in the eyes of Mrs. Longworth than scores of the gifts intrinsically of greater value.

As heretofore indicated, no list of presents was made public, and no complete list, approximately accurate, can be compiled, but among those received by Miss Roosevelt are the following:

President Loubet of France—A magnificent gobelin tapestry, made especially for Miss Roosevelt, long and narrow in shape, and portrays scenes renowned in the history of France. This tapestry is made only for the French government, and never is placed on sale. Its value, therefore, is practically conjectural in dollars and cents. It was presented to Miss Roosevelt on behalf of President Loubet by Ambassador Jusserand. At the same time Ambassador Jusserand, on behalf of himself and Mme. Jusserand, presented to Miss Roosevelt an exquisite fan of white ostrich plumes, set on tortoise shell sticks, and bearing Miss Roosevelt's initials in gold.

Emperor of Germany—A bracelet of special design, studded with gems of rare value, one of the finest works of the jeweler's art. It was presented by Ambassador von Sternberg.

The emperor of Japan—Two beautifully chased vases of silver and a piece of wonderful Japanese embroidery. The latter is a piece of silk, eight feet square. Its left corner shows a background of heavy gold thread, but the greater part of the piece is embroidered with chrysanthemums, done in white silk and gold.

Republic of Cuba—A splendid necklace of selected pearls, the design of the piece being made in Paris, on the order of the Cuban government. It is one of the most valuable gifts received by the bride.

The emperor of Austria—A diamond and pearl pendant, exquisitely wrought.

The empress dowager of China—A handsomely made dower chest, filled completely with rare gifts of silk, embroidery, ivory carvings and lovely bric-a-brac.

The king of Italy—A mosaic table of superb workmanship and great beauty, depicting scenes of Italian life. It was manufactured especially for Miss Roosevelt in Florence.

Pope Pius X—A handsome mosaic, representing one of the great paintings in the Vatican.

The king of Spain—Pieces of antique jewelry of rare design and value.

King Edward VII of England—Sent a gift to the bride, but the character of it has not been disclosed.

While some of the ambassadors and ministers accredited to this capital from foreign countries sent individual presents to Miss Roosevelt, the majority of them presented to her offerings of flowers. Mr. Takahira, former minister of Japan, cabled directions that a handsome floral offering be made to the bride in his name.

Mr. Grip, minister of Sweden, presented an exquisite vase which he purchased in Paris; Baron Moncheur, the Belgian minister, a piece of handsome bric-a brac, minister Quesada, of Cuba, and Mme. Quesada, a set of eight pieces of silverware lined with gold and bearing the initials of the bride, "A. R."

Members of the president's cabinet presented individual gifts, but only few of them are known. Secretary and Mrs. Taft presented a pair of elegantly chased silver table vases of American manufacture; Secretary and Mrs. Bonaparte a handsome piece of de milieu of repousse silver. In the center are several fanciful figures, wrought. The edge of the piece is open work. Secretary and Mrs. Shaw a chocolate set of rare Worcesterware, inlaid with silver, and Attorney General Moody a pair of silver candlesticks, elegantly chased and of beautiful design.

What is known as the Taft Philippine party, including those who with Miss Roosevelt made the trip last summer to the Orient, joined in a beautiful gift to the bride. It is a necklace of gold with the alternate links studded with diamonds, bearing a magnificent aqua marine pendant surrounded with diamonds. The aqua marine is a stone of remarkable size and color, costing $1,500 unmounted. A card accompanying the gift is inscribed: "With love and best wishes to our Alice from members of the Taft party."

Mr. Longworth's assistants in congress united in the presenting to the bride of three beautiful gifts. The New York delegation gave an exquisite service of Ievre glass, each piece having the peacock eye in its center and no two pieces being of precisely the same hue. The service consists of five dozen wine glosses, finger bowls and plates.

The Ohio delegation in congress gave the bride a heavy silver loving cup. It is more than two feet in heighth and bears festoons of roses in repousse work around the top and bottom.

The house committee on foreign affairs, of which Mr. Longworth is a member, also gave the bride a loving cup of silver handsomely chased and lined with gold. It was inscribed: To Alice Lee Roosevelt."

Fans were a favorite article of presentation to the bride and she received a notable and handsome collection of them. Besides the fan of the French ambassador and Mme. Jusserand, the Viscount de Chanbrun sent a hand painted fan and Senator and Mrs. Spooner of Wisconsin presented a jewled fan of exquisite workmanship. No adequate idea of the gifts of the bride can be given at any degree of accuracy, but the foregoing will convey some notion of their character. Those made by the members of the immediately families of the bride and bridegroom are held sacred. The gift of Mr. Longworth to his bride was a necklace of selected diamonds, perfectly matched, the stones being beautifully mounted. This probably was intrinsically the most valuable gift received by Miss Roosevelt.

BELLS RING IN BOSTON.

Boston, Feb. 17.—The bells of Boston pealed at noon today in observance of the wedding of Miss Alice Roosevelt. This was by direction of Mayor Fitzgerald, who arranged that for five minutes the bells should be sounded on the public buildings and on many of the churches.

EMPEROR CONGRATULATES.

Vienna, Feb. 17.—Emperor Francis Joseph has sent a congratulatory telegram couched in the most cordial terms to President Roosevelt in connection with the marriage today of his daughter Alice to Congressman Longworth.

Rome, Feb. 17.—Many prominent people have cabled their congratulations to Miss Alice Roosevelt on her marriage, including Baron Mayor Des Planches, the Italian ambassador at Washington, who is now in this country and the baroness Mayor Des Planches.

EVERYONE LOOKS FOR GREATEST PROSPERITY

Duluth Business Man Says He Has Never Seen a February in Duluth Which Gave So Much Promise of Business Activity and Improvements for Year.

When a prominent local business man, who has practically lived here all his life and who has been actively identified in the business affairs of the city for the past twelve to fifteen years makes the declaration that never before in his recollection has there been a February that has witnessed the amount of business now being transacted along all lines, or better prospects for continued activity right along through the spring and summer, there is good reason for some of the investors to take notice of things.

That this idea is not possessed by one man alone can be proved by making inquiry of any business man along Superior street, or the wholesale merchants on Michigan street. They claim that good business conditions are the best evidence of general prosperity, including the real estate situation, one in which this department is chiefly concerned. The months of February and March have for so many years been considered dull months of the year that the business men and the real estate dealers have got in the habit of expecting nothing else. When the monotony has been broken as it has this year, a belief arises that there is something back of all this activity and that it means a great deal for business.

Even though there are not many sales of Duluth property being made, it is urged that this does not give a true view of the state of affairs. The fact that real estate prices are gradually stiffening all over the city is pointed out as significant. To find that this is true, one has only to get quotations from local agents of property that a year ago was on the market. Figures then will be found to have been less than the owner will now consider. No anxiety is evident to sell property even at the advanced prices. With many owners it is a proposition of "take it or leave it," with the preference clearly for the latter.

Anybody who expects to pick up snaps in centrally located property, especially that adapted for business purposes, is likely to be doomed to disappointment. There may have been a time for that, but it is said to be past. A visit to any of the real estate offices about the city will demonstrate that there are far more offers being submitted to the owners than there are offers being made by owners to prospective purchasers.

* * *

If real estate men are asked the reason for this strength in realty prices the answers will vary to a certain extent, but in the main the dealers will point out the splendid building movement that has taken part in the last two years, the growth of population, growth of business and the prospect of a continued big building movement during the coming year to meet the demands.

New railroads building into Duluth, with all the increased business that these will bring, power development that means the springing up of many new industries and many other openings will be found in the category of things that the real estate men of Duluth have in mind when they consider the city's future.

Speculative propositions may for a time draw the attention of investors away from ground values, but it is evident that they come back sooner or later to realty investments. In this city activity in stocks has always been followed by a dull period in the real estate business and vice versa.

* * *

Another things that augurs well for the home building movement in Duluth this coming season is the strong demand for houses and flats for rent. Men who have in contemplation the erection of houses and flat buildings this year are being overwhelmed with inquiries from people who are looking for locations.

In some instances it is known that persons who intend to build this year have made special request that their names be not mentioned because they do not care to be bothered with renters. Large business blocks are being built right along whose space has been leased for a long term of years before ever the bids were called for on the plans.

* * *

One of the most important news items that the people of this city and county have had for a long time was the action taken by the county board and the courthouse commission, to build the new county courthouse on the half block on Fourth avenue west, between First and Second streets and East of the federal building. It will be an improvement that will be a credit to the taxpayers from all over the county. The improvement will be of special advantage to Duluth for the reason that it will be located in this city and because a big piece of practically unimproved property is at last to be utilized. A court house costing $400,000 is no small improvement to any city.

* * *

The present season is to witness, according to all reports, another active period in handsome and expensive residence building in the East end. Plans are already being prepared for two or three new homes and many persons are said to be getting estimates with a view of calling for plans if the results are favorable. One of the strongest inducements to advanced real estate prices of certain East end localities in the past two years has been the activity in handsome residence building.

But the building movement is not confined to the more expensive houses. In fact, the aggregate valuation of new houses planned is by far in favor of the more moderate priced homes, of which there will be scores erected this spring, summer and fall. No one locality has a monopoly in this latter class for the movement seems to be pretty well distributed with the West end and the hill district having, possibly a shade the best of the prospects

Announcement that the Northern Pacific Railway company is contemplating improvements in Duluth that will practically mean the doubling of its present equipment and facilities at a cost in the neighborhood of a half million of dollars is of no little importance to the city. Although all of the plans may not be carried out this year it is certain that the company will accomplish a great deal in the way of filling in the water front to the dock line and the building of new docks.

* * *

The deed was recorded this week transferring from George Spencer to John H. McLean, the former's handsome residence in the East end, for $24,500. The property is described as lots 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, block 92 Endion division. The sale was mentioned when the deal was closed, a few days ago.

* * *

Preliminary to the extensive building improvements that it has planned to accomplish this spring the Duluth Brewing & Malting company has enlarged its ground space by the purchase of lot 1, block 2, Marine division, from Henry Roos, for $2,000.

* * *

Bids are to be in March 1 for two new school buildings, one on the hillside and the other at West Duluth. The board of education has just acquired title to the site at Sixth street and First avenue east, the price being $2,200. The property was bought from the Hoffecker heirs and the property is described as lots 26 and 28 East Sixta street.

* * *

Architects W. T. Bray and C. E. Nystrom have consolidated their business interests and are now located in the former's offices in the Palladio building under the firm name of Bray & Nystrom. Mr. Bray and Mr. Nystrom have been very active in architectural affairs in Duluth in the past several years and each has planned many residences, flat buildings, business structures and even public buildings. The firm is now taking figures on a large two-story brick business block at Hibbing, Minn., for M. Rogalsky. Plans are being prepared for a handsome two-flat brick building at Second avenue east and Fourth street for Emil Tessman, and for a seven-room house on the boulevard for Charles Shogren. The firm is also preparing plans for two handsome and expensive residence buildings in the East end. It is understood that the buildings will be as fine as any that have been erected in that part of the city in recent years. The owners' names are withheld.

* * *

Architect J. J. Wagenstein is preparing plans for a two-story brick building at Twentieth avenue west and First street that will be utilized for steam laundry purposes by a laundry concern. Mr. Wagenstein has in the contractor's hands plans for T. H. Wahl's handsome flat building at First avenue west and Third street and will shortly have prepared the plans for a frame residence for the same party on the fifty feet next the corner of Twentieth avenue east and First street.

* * *

J. H. Hilliard has been awarded the contract for the construction of the generating station for the Great Northern Power company, above Fond du Lac. The building will cost about $100,000.

* * *

Architect A. Terryberry has plans out for a frame residence for F. B. Thomas.

* * *

Architect E. S. Radcliffe has plans out for a frame residence on Minnesota Point for L. C. Harris.

* * *

W. R. Parsons & Son Company of Des Moines, Iowa, have plans ready for the new high school building to be erected at Hibbing.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, Feby, 9th, 1906.
In the Matter of the Estate of Wm. McDonald, Deceased:
On reading and filing the petition of Mary McDonald, Executrix of the estate of Wm. McDonald, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It Is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday, the 5th day of March, A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

And It Is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this Order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 9th day of Feby., 1906.

SHOWS NO STRENGTH

Wheat is Entirely Responsive to the Bearish Factors.

Flax Has Another Sharp Break—Foreigners Not Buying.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 17.—Foreign markets were weaker on wheat, rain fell in India, weather was favorable in this country, and large world's shipments for the week are estimated, and under this combination of bearish factors wheat fell all morning. The only thing in the line of bullish talk to be found was reports from New York of large clearances there, good sales of flour and a good demand for spring wheat. Liverpool closed ⅜d to ½d lower, Paris ⅛c lower to ¼c higher, and Antwerp ⅝c lower. Broomhall estimates world's shipments to be reported Monday at 11,200,000 bus.

The May option fell ⅞c in Duluth and Chicago, ¾-⅞c in Minneapolis and Kansas City, ⅞-1c in St. Louis and ½c in New York and Winnipeg.

Corn was weaker, a decline of ⅛c being made in the May option at Chicago, and of ⅜d to ½d at Liverpool. May oats in Chicago fell ⅛c.

Car receipts at Duluth were 49 against 48 last year, and at Minneapolis 316 against 225 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 365 against 273 last year. Chicago received 9 against 11 last year. Winnipeg received 124 against 50 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 496,000 bus, last year 340,000 bus. Shipments 165,000 bus, last year 123,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 369,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 618,000 bus, last year 291,000 bus. Shipments 306,000 bus, last year 208,000 bus. Clearances were 248,000 bus.

Wheat was quiet in the Duluth market. May opened ⅛c lower at 82¼c and dropped to 81⅞c at 9:47, rallying to 82c at 9:55. At 11:55 the price had dropped to 81½c and it closed at that price, a loss of ⅞c from yesterday. July wheat was inactive and closed at 82⅞c, a loss of ¾c from yesterday.

Flax was active during the entire session and prices were weaker. Prices were unchanged in Antwerp, and in London Laplatta was ¾c lower and Calcutta unchanged. Despite the fact that the foreign markets were not very weak, the foreigners were buying no flax in the American markets. The local concern which deals with the Dickinson house of Chicago was again a heavy seller of flax today, and it was this house that precipitated the break toward the end of yesterday's session. The American Linseed company bought considerable flax today.

May flax opened ⅝c lower at $1.14¼ and fell to $1.13½, rallying to $1.13¾. The price then dropped to $1.12¾ and ranged between that and $1.13⅝ during the remainder of the session, with considerable activity. The close was 1⅝c off at $1.13¼.

July flax opened ½c lower at $1.15½, went to $1.15¾, then fell to $1.14½ and rallied to $1.15. After that the price fell to $1.14½, recovered to $1.14¾ and closed at $1.14½, a loss of 1½c from yesterday. There was no activity in September flax at the opening. It sold as high as $1.14 and as low as $1.13¼. The closing price was $1.13¾, a loss of ¾c from yesterday.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Free Selling by Local Trades Causes Easiness in Wheat.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—The wheat market here today was easy because of free selling by local traders. News of the day was generally bearish. Advices from India were that rain had fallen in several of the drought stricken provinces, a forecast of world's shipments, showed a liberal movement, and weather conditions in the United States were reported as favorable to the fall sown crop of wheat. May opened ¼@⅜c lower at 83¼@83½c and for a time held within the opening figures. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 374 cars against 281 cars last week and 288 cars a year ago.

The market became weak later in the day because of a dispatch from Argentina which declared that the exportable surplus of this year would be as large as that of last year. The low point for May was reached at 82⅝c. The close was weak, with May off ⅞c at 82¾c.

Lower cables had a depressing effect on corn, and cash houses and pit traders sold freely. The chief demand came from commission houses. May opened ⅛c to ⅛@¼c lower at 42⅝@⅞c to 42¾c, cold at 42⅝c and rallied to 42⅞c. Local receipts were 291 cars with 5 of contract grade.

The market became firm early on covering by shorts, but later declined with wheat. The high price for May was 43¼c. The close was easy, with May down ⅛c at 42⅝c.

The oats market was steady on moderate covering by shorts, but the volume of trading was small. May opened ⅛c lower at 29½c and sold at 29⅝c. Local receipts were 118 cars.

The feature of trading in provisions was an active demand for pork by shorts. A 10c advance in the price of live hogs was responsible for the upward turn in prices. May pork opened 15@17½c to 32½@35c higher at $15.70@15.87½, sold at $15.90 and reacted to $15.77½. Lard was up 2½c to 5c at $7.87½@7.90. Ribs were 2½c to 5c higher a t$8.22½@8.27½.

Close: Wheat—May, 82¾c; July, 81½c. Corn—May, 42⅞c; July, 43¼c. Oats—May, 29¼c; July, 28⅞c. Pork—May, $15.80; July, $15.45. Lard—May, $7.82½@7.85; July, $7.92½@7.95. Ribs—May, $8.27½; July, $8.30. Rye—Cash, 64½@66c; May, 66c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.12; southwestern, $1.07; May, $1.13. Timothy—March, $3.40. Clover—Cash, $14. Barley—Cash, 37½@52c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, 85@86c; 3 red, 84@85c; 2 hard, 81@83c; 3 hard, 79@81c; 1 northern, 83@85c; 2 northern, 82@84c; 3 spring, 79@83c. Oats—No. 2, 29¼@½c; 3, 29c. Corn—No. 2, 39½@¾c; 3, 39@¼c.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—This has been another day of liquidation, closing practically at the bottom. It shows no rallying power whatever and to the decline the load becomes heavier to the scattered long interest. The winter wheat crop seems to be receiving moisture. The shipments from our competitors are increasing. Cash markets show a dragging tendency and in the speculative market the buying demand comes from shorts and this, too, is a provokingly deliberate manner. The advantage is with them and they know it, and do not hesitate on the strong spots to press this advantage. Rallies will undoubtedly result from oversold pit conditions, but we see nothing to warrant the hope of anything lasting on the bull side. On the rallies resulting from short covering we would sell wheat.

Corn and oats—All things considered this market held very well today. It seems as if the small shorts were inclined to cover around present level. The fact that the market shows no rallying power whatever, merely holding steady a day or two and then resuming its downward course in a slow, discouraging manner, counts against this market. The urgent demand has fallen flat and what business is being done is short covering.

Provisions—Especially strong in May pork was the feature. The expected profit taking at the end of the week did not materialize to any extent. Considering the actions of other pits, provisions act well. It is getting to be a great big affair.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Foreign markets were not inclined to follow our weakness, and this gave our market a firmer tone, offsetting in a measure the domestic news, and during the early trading the market seemed to be shaping itself for an advance. Messages from India stated that if freezing and thawing weather was continued, there would be no crop, and a wire from Kansas City claimed that millers there were making good sales of flour for export at a nice profit. Wheat is now some 8c under top; we would anticipate such a turn from about this level, and owning a little wheat to realize on a little later.

Flax—A bear day in flax. The market was moderately active throughout, with an increase in supporting orders around the low point. Considerable long flax has been liquidated in the last few days, which places the market in a decidedly stronger position. The cash market reports a fair increase in receipts and some falling off in shipments.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Urgent Liquidation and Aggressive Bear Selling Caused Break.

New York Bank Statement More Favorable Than Expected.

New York, Feb. 17.—Opening prices in the stock market were fractionally irregular, with a downward tendency. Reading, Northern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Amalgamated Copper and Sugar were among those that were depressed a good fraction, while St. Paul was the most conspicuous of those that moved the other way. Lead advanced 1½.

Not enough buying orders made their appearance to afford any bulwark against the selling and there was a general decline when the efforts to support special stocks became futile. Business expanded as the list got lower and there was considerable selling of long stocks in various quarters. Amongst the losses of the first hour were Union Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Chesapeake & Ohio, Northern Pacific, Toledo, t. Louis & Western preferred, Smelting and Republic Steel which fell 1, Amalgamated Copper, Brooklyn Transit and Great Northern preferred 1½, Reading and Locomotive 1¾, Colorado Fuel 2, New York, Chicago & St. Louis 2¼, Delaware & Hudson, Virginia Iron and Anaconda 3 and Lackawanna 14¾.

There was extensive covering of shorts after the appearance of the bank statement, but after rallies of 1 to 1½ immense offerings poured into all quarters again. Losses ran in Great Northern preferred to 6⅛, Northwestern 4⅜, Northern Pacific 2½, Union Pacific 2, New York Central, Louisville & Nashville and Central Leather 1⅜, Colorado Fuel 4¾, Smelting 3, Brooklyn Transit 2½ and Amaugamated Copper 1¾. International Power slumped 14½ on one sale. Losses ran from 1 to 1½ for the principal active stocks with only a few exceptions. The extent of the decline invited profit-taking by the bears and the buying to cover shorts caused some rallies. Rallies were feverish and were accompanied by renewed declines at other points. The closing was unsettled and weak.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The bank statement today was a pleasant surprise, and for a short time the market rallied but continued heavy; liquidation came in and the close was weak all through the list. Boston coppers showed a remarkable healthy tendency, indicating that they are in a very strong position. The good coppers are much harder to buy than to sell. On every rally quotations are frequently half a point apart.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 17.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 1 point. The improvement on near months was due to the higher cables, while the market eased off as the call progressed and shortly afterwards showed a net loss of about 2 points on active months as a result of bearish weekend statistics. Brokers believed to represent large short interests were good buyers and the market gained a few points. Trading was not active.

Spot cotton closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.25; middling gulf, 11.50. Sales, 400 bales. Futures closed barely steady; closing bids, February, 10.61; March, 10.68; April, 10.77; March, 10.87; June, 10.91; July, 11.00; August, 10.87; September, 10.49; October, 10.38; November, 10.42; December, 10.43.

St. Paul Live Stock.

St. Paul, Feb. 17.—Cattle: Receipts, 75, steady and unchanged at week's advance of 10 to 15c. Hogs: Receipts, 1,800; 5@10c higher; range, $5.85@6.05; bulk, $5.00@5.95. Sheep: Receipts, none; steady, unchanged.

SHAW REPLIES TO HOUSE QUERY

No Deed Has Ever Been Given to Old Custom House Property.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Speaker Cannon has received from Secretary Shaw the following reply to the resolution recently introduced in the house by Representative Sulzer of New York, regarding the sale by the government of the old custom house property in New York City.

"Feb. 15, 1906. The speaker, house of representatives: Sir—Responding to the resolution of the house, dated Feb. 14, askin gthe date when the government executed the deed for the custom house property situated in Wall street, New York City, to the National City bank; where the said deed is at the present time and in whose custody it has been since it was executed; and why the deed has never been recorded in the county of New York and other facts in connection with the sale of said custom house property to the said National City bank, as may have come into my possession since the publication of house document No. 264, first session, fifty-sixth congress, I beg to say:

"The document referred to, and especially the contract appearing on page 45 thereof, with a copy of a deed prepared for execution shows that no deed had been executed at the time said document was prepared. I beg to further advise that no deed has since been executed and none will be executed until the balance of the consideration is paid, which is not due and collectible until the government is in position to surrender possession in the premises.

"No facts connected with the sale of the New York custom house have come to the knowledge of the treasury department since the publication of the document referred to in the resolution. Respectfully,

"L. M. SHAW."

THE BUTTER WAS OLEOMARGARINE

Explanation of Remarkably Cheap Butter Produced at Detroit.

Detroit, Feb. 17.—Thomas Lorimer, 451 Winder street, was arraigned today before United States Commissioner Davison, on the charge of manufacturing colored oleomargarine, without paying the government tax of 10 per cent per pound, and the government officers say that his arrest marks the exposing of one of the biggest revenue frauds unearthed in this part of the country for years. Warrants are out for several other men alleged to be implicated in the frauds with Lorimer, and the United States officers say they expect to make further arrests today. The revenue officers say that one concern alone with which Lorimer was connected has been buying an average of 35,000 pounds of oleomargarine a month, coloring it and re-selling the stuff as creamery butter.

Lorimer stood mute when arraigned today, and his examination was set for Wednesday morning. Special Revenue Agent H. H. Schlusser of Cincinnati is alleged to have caught Lorimer in the act of mixing up the fictitious creamery butter. Special Agents W. W. Cronk and A. L. McClure of Cincinnati have also been working on the alleged frauds. About 1,000 pounds of the manufactured creamery butter is alleged to have been found in Lorimer's rooms. It is said Detroit has acquired a reputation all over the country as a producer of remarkably cheap creamery butter, as a result of the allegd frauds.

RAILROADS ARE PROSPEROUS

Marked Increase in Capitalization and Payment of Dividends.

Washington, Feb. 17.—A special statistical report of the interstate commerce commission just made, shows that railway capitalization has very rapidly increased during the last few years. The total capitalization for the year ending June 30, 1903, was $9,894,625,239 or $59,729 per mile. Three years later it increased to $10,566,865,771, or $59,620 per mile, while in 1904 it had grown to $13,213,124,678 or $64,265 per mile.

An improvement likewise is noted in the dividend paying ability of railroad stocks. In 1893 the per cent stock of stock paying dividends was 38.76 or $1,809,600,146, or an average rate of 5.58 per cent paid on dividends paying stock. In 1904, the per cent of stock paying dividends was 57.47 on $3,643,427,319 or an average rate paid on dividend paying stock of 6.09 per cent. The amount paid in dividends in 1904 was $221,941,049. Although the figures for the year ending June 30, 1905, have not yet been completed, there is sufficient data at hand to show that there was an increase in the amount paid in dividends which would represent a total of over $230,000,000.

The tables show that if the amount paid in dividends were computed on all outstanding stock, the average dividend rate would be reduced to 3.50 per cent, but it is contended that in view of the many reasons for which this stock is held other than that of securing dividend payments and also that 30.64 per cent of railway stocks outstanding are owned by railroads in their corporate capacity, 6.09 per cent is the proper rate to accept in measuring the dividend earning capacity of this class of securities.

In arriving at these figures, the interstate sommerce commission has found it practically impossible to determine whether the outstanding stock represents actual value or "water." It is estimated, however, that if there is a large amount of "water" in these stocks the dividend rate should be higher and it is stated that any rate producing more than 6 per cent on a fair valuation of the investment is to the extent of such excess unnecessarily high. As regards freight rates, the statistics show that estimating the amount of freight revenue at the average rate of 95.2 cents per ton, the rate of 1899, the amount of freight revenue for the year ending June 30, 1904, was $1,247,024,005. It is explained that even if the average rate per ton per mile had not been increased there is still an increase in the freight revenue and that the tendency to increase the rate per ton per mile is to still further augment the freight revenue. It is therefore shown that if there had been no advance in rates or classification since the year ending June 30, 1899, the average rate per ton for each of the subsequent years would have been somwhat less than for that year.

LATEST NEWS:---Calumet & Arizona will soon distribute from $500,000 to $600,000 to its stockholders. Calumet & Pittsburg North drift on the eleventh level from Briggs shaft still in ore. Junction North drift ninth level still in ore averaging above 17 per cent. You may be one of those fellows that are waiting to get in on the new Montana deal which took over the Heinze properties, but you are holding idle money because you won't be counted in. In the meantime Calumet & Pittsburg and Junction are rapidly being developed into big mines and you will be surprised how scarce the stock is, and next week when the general public gets the news that I have had since yesterday morning, you will find that the price has advanced materially and still a scarcity of stocks. There is nothing to it the market is going higher and all the bears in the country can't hold it down. I have reference here to the unlisted market. If you will buy only what you can pay for and quit buying on margins you will know better where you are at.

The SHASTA MAY BLOSSOM.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 17, 1906.

H. E. SMITH & CO., Duluth, Minn.:

Gentlemen: Having spent several days in an examination of the Shasta May Blossom Copper Mine" property, I find the location beyond question to be on the same slate and porphyry contact as the "Bully Hill," "Anchor" and Winthrop" mines, line of contact being exceedingly well defined and easily followed all over the four properties. The outcropping of all these properties are exactly the same, where large and very rich ore bodies have been opened by development. On the "Shasta May Blossom" the surface showing is as great if not greater than on any of the others, and will by developing make another great mine of the camp, in fact, cannot see how it can be otherwise.

Tunnel No. 3, now in more than 390 feet, will cut the west vein within the next 150 feet at 160 feet greater depth than the depth at which sulphide ore has always been found on other properties in the camp, and will go into good pay ore within the next 60 days. The management seems to be of a safe and conservative character and the development of the property carried on in a very business like manner.

Yours truly,

G. H. CLAYPOOL.

BULLS RULE PROVISIONS!

PRICES MAKE NEW HIGH RECORDS.

GROWING CONFIDENCE IN CURRENT AND FUTURE WHEAT VALUES

Millers Anticipating Small Supplies Are Buying Heavily of Cash Wheat—Famine In Japan and War In China Are Other Price Making Factors.

FLAX IS IN A STRONG POSITION--TALK OF A CORNER ON SUPPLY RUMORED

Provisions This market has experienced a material increase in demands for all products and from each little setback, strength has developed sufficient to give holders and investors confidence in their position. Conditions connected with the supply and demand situation are fully as strong now as they were a month ago, they are very much better understood and the result of it all is that speculation is extending into this market as we have recently witnessed it in stocks, and occasionally in the grains.

for some time past the trade has been more or less spectacular, largely owing to activity of Eastern shippers who are weekly drawing thousands of hogs away from the Western markets and keeping them out of the hands of the packers who need them badly for restoring depleted stocks of meats and lard in regular warehouses.

Packing interests have until recently been making strenuous efforts to hold the price down, but control has at last been taken out of their hands. Live hogs have sold well above $6.00 per cwt. and some of the most conservative men in the trade are now predicting $7.00. The idea of the packers being forced to pay $7.00 for hogs is anything but agreeable to them, because they have large orders booked ahead and a comparatively small supply from which to make delivery. Besides this new competition from shippers, country packers have stepped into the market and this in turn has attracted widespread interest among investors, and the effect of it all is in favor of the bull side. And until demands from all sources have been satisfied and the present enormous consumption checked to a considerable extent, the market is likely to sell still higher.

Neither pork, lard nor ribs can be said to be selling at unwarranted figures when conditions are considered. Nor is the list overbought because, nowhere is there an accumulation of stocks for buyers. The winter packing season, when the visible supply is usually added to so extensively, closes March 1st, but the marketing of hogs thus far is barely sufficient to care for daily orders for fresh meats. Our exports to Europe show increases for each day and each week. We regard purchases on recessions in the price with favor, for the reason that the market is strong from natural causes and not from manipulation. Would suggest buying moderately at first and adding to lines on a scale down if the opportunity is afforded. It is plain that the list is cheap and there is no doubt about future demands.

Flax Fluctuations in the Flax market are not so wide at the present time. This is the result of less exciting news and for this reason the buying is of a more substantial kind—large interests that can comprehend at a glance the opportunities presented for making profits on the buying side and from those who have use for the seed or the products that are manufactured therefrom.

European market quotations are holding steady. The news from the exporting countries of India and Argentina is of a character that forecasts genuine disappointment and the already large estimated decreases in the yields are likely to be realized and even exceeded.

The domestic situtions from the standpoint of demands is exceedingly strong. Sentiment among many of the big oil interests and the independent companies is that the market will not remain long around this level. Sales of oil for delivery as far ahead as next July are reported as being enormous, and it will be necessary now for the crushing interests to secure their supply of seed and this with the market price on an export basis, available stocks less than one-half of a year ago, and offerings from the small number of cars received daily light, any urgent buying would give buyers of today another opportunity to make sales again at figures several cents higher up. The future promises many favorable developments, and talk of a corner is even hinted at, under the leadership of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co. The largest lines of short flax have been put out by a clique of operators in Minneapolis, who are using every endeavor to circulate bearish reports in the hope of stemming the advance.

At this level prices are well under top figures. The decline amounts to a splendid reaction. We look for another demonstration on the part of the bulls soon and think it is a safe proposition to own some May or July flax on these temporary recessions.

Wheat There are many indications of increased public interest in the wheat market, changes in prices have been very frequent, and although narrow, either purchases or sales have shown good profits the same day trades were started. Along with the natural trade conditions and statistics, there was considerable foreign political news that has added a bullish influence. Famine in Japan, and fears of a revolution in China have been followed by good inquiry for Pacific Coast wheat, and some orders were placed for Australian wheat.

Cash wheat continues in splendid demand. Southwest millers are contending with a scarcity of good milling qualities, and are paying big premiums for this class of wheat. Spring wheat millers at Minneapolis are operating a good part of their full capacity. The production for the week amounting to 290,000 barrels, against only 244,780 the corresponding week in 1905. The usual large flour sales for spring delivery are reported. Liberal receipts are being picked up readily, and it has necessitated drawing on terminal elevator stocks to the extent of 200,000 bushels to fill shipping orders. In Europe the consumption is breaking all records also, and notwithstanding the heavy shipments the amount of wheat afloat is some 10,000,000 bushels less than a year ago, and Bradstreet makes the world's visible show a decrease of 1,600,000 bushels, while decreases in stocks in the United Kingdom for the same week were 1,500,000 bushels, and 785,000 bushels were taken out of the American visible. This means that we are making distribution of our wheat faster than it is being received. Such material reductions in our stocks is bound to exert the proper influence in the end, and the trade is coming to the point of believing that the world at large is progressing in population to the extent of catching up to its producing capacity.

Besides all our strong statistics to enlist support to the market, we are now within but a few weeks of the time when the conditions of the growing winter wheat crop will be watched closely, and any serious damage would be reflected speedily in the price.

With prices from 30c to 35c under those of a year ago, and the market heavily oversold as the result of the long run of bearish news, further decline at this time would not be warranted. In our opinion there exists more than the ordinary reasons for buying wheat to hold as an investment. All the market possibilities are favorable to strength, and future developments can be counted on to not only maintain values, but add to them. We can find no evidence that would indicate that supplies of wheat will be burdensome after all wants have been provided for, and some allowance has been made for putting back a little wheat in reserves. If the situation is analyzed carefully, we think you will agree with us that under all circumstances wheat around 83c in Minneapolis is selling at a low price, and not likely to sell much, if any, lower at any time, but instead, a great deal higher. Would accept all weak spots as a place to buy, and with this done, lines should be held for the regular spring advance.

The board was in session several hours hearing arguments and considering testimony.

RAILROADS BUSINESS VERY GOOD

Every Freight Car Said to be in Active Service Just Now.

Railroads Show the Northwest to be in a Prosperous Condition.

If the prosperity by the railronds may be taken as a barometer by which to judge business conditions throughout the country, as is generally supposed to be the case, the United States as a whole, and Duluth and the Northwest in particular, are enjoying a greater era of prosperitt just now than for many years past.

Three or four weeks ago local officials expressed the belief that the car shortage had come to an end for the season, and that, during the remainder of the winter, there would be no diqfficulty on the part of the shipper in getting all the cars desired for freight purposes. While no actual shortage has developed since that time there has been such an unusual amount of business for this season of the year that the roads have had all they could do handling it. Every freight car in the country is said to be in active service just now, and there are few roads, particularly in the Northwest, that could not use more to advantage. There is as much business, in fact, as is usually the cvase in the fall.

The movement of pulpwood is now at its height, and this calls for a good many cars. There is also a very heavy movement of Washington and Oregon timber to the East and Middle West. There is a greater demand for this timber at present than ever before, and large amounts of it are continually being moved eastward over the Northern Pacific and Great Northern.

Local wholesale interests are using more cars now than they ever have before at this season. The present week has been the heaviest of the winter for the Marshall-Wells Hardware company in point of the number of loaded cars received. The first two days of the week twenty-five cars were received.

Usually it is the custom of this concern to have full stocks before winter sets in, getting enough hardware on hand to last through until spring, with comparatively few additions during the cold months, but business has been so good with them for the last eight or ten months that they were unable to do this, and consequently new goods have to be gotten in every day in order to keep the trade supplied. Much the samo is true of the other Duluth wholesale houses, in all lines.

Mrs. L. Ryan of Duluth spent several days in the city visiting relatives and friends.

A Japanese carnival was given at the Armory by the Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church Friday evening. The carnival consisted of presentation drills, marches, illustrated and character songs and a number of little girls represented "Delsarte in Fairyland." The carnival was one of the best entertainments ever seen in the city.

At the meeting of the Gogebic Range Creamery company, held last Tuesday, the following officers were elected: F. H. Kearney, John Bostrom, E. B. Williams, G. N. Nelson and G. A. Curry.

A ski tournament will be held on the Curry hill, north of the city, Sunday afternoon, Feb. 18. Teams from Ashland, Duluth, Bovey, Drummond, Mellen and Ironwood will compete. Members of the Ironwood club have offered five cash prizes, and an exceedingly large crowd is expected to compete.

L. L. Wright is reported to be on the quick road to recovery after a very severe illness.

Miss C. Jefferey visited with friends in Bessemer Friday.

Mrs. F. Blackwell was at Bessemer Thursday, visiting with friends.

The anual prize mask ball, given by the Lady Maccabees, occurred Friday evening at the Scandinavian hall. The music was furnished by the Symphony orchestra. The prize winners were R. Schrengarth and Miss Paulson first, and D. Charbenneau and Miss A. Marx second.

Mrs. J. Luxmore, for a number of years a resident of Ironwood, died at her home at Bessemer Wednesday, after a long illness. Mrs. Luxmore had been ailing for some time and then underwent an operation, from which she never recovered. The deceased was 30 years of age and leaves a husband and three children. The funeral will occur from her home Sunday afternoon, and interment will be made at Ironwood.

CHILDREN ON STRIKE

Pupils at Proctor School Sympathize With Their Suspended Chum.

Refuse to Return to Studies Until He Is Reinstated.

Because one of their classmates was suspended for insubordination, a dozen or more of the school children in the sixth and seventh grades of the school at Proctor, have gone out on a strike.

The boy who was suspended is Leo Brennan, and the teacher is Miss Geer.

There appears to be several sides to the story, but as nearly as the facts can be learned, the cause of the suspension was the failure or refusal of the boy to march out of school properly, in spite of repeated commands from his teacher. He was kept in after school, and is claimed to have refused to stay.

The boy's friends claim that he is suffering from an injured hip, and that he was unable to walk as the other children did, but the school authorities claim that this was not brought to the notice of the teacher.

A meeting of the board was held Thursday evening, when it was expected that the case would be taken up, and several of the boy's chums were waiting outside the board room, to be called as witnesses, but they were not given a chance to appear.

Yesterday morning the number of pupils in the room was diminished by the absence of ten or twelve boys who refused to attend school until their comrade was reinstated. They held out throughout the afternoon, and remained away from their studies.

Saturday brought a lull in the battle, and affairs will remain unchanged until Monday. If the parents of the striking children cannot be induced to spank their offspring and send them back to school before that time, the board may adopt more stringent measures and get after them for truancy.

Mrs. Brennan, mother of the boy, was loth to talk about the trouble this morning. She said that it did not amount to much anyway, and that the boy would return to school on Monday, she said that she couldn't tell, but that the other boys were going back, and everything would probably be settled up in a few days.

Miss Fitzpatrick Goes East.

Miss Fitzpatrick, the well-known Fourth street milliner, left today over the Omaha for New York, to study the newest American and Parisian creations. During her four years of business in Duluth, Miss Fitzpatrick has gained more than a local reputation as a designer and creator of exclusive and artistic styles, and has received flattering offers from prominent houscs of several of the large Eastern cities. She is perfectly satisfied, however, with Duluth and Duluth people, and has no intention of removing from the city where she has made so many warm personal and business friends.

RUSSIAN CRUISERS WATCHING FOR WEAPONS.

Riga, Feb. 17.—Russian cruisers are lying off this port inspecting all arriving craft in order to prevent the importation of weapons, several large consignments of which are reported to be on their way here to replace the thousands captured and destroyed by the troops. A depot of bombs and explosives has been discovered in the center of the city.

Executions in the country continue daily. Three punitive expeditions are concentrating at Dondangen, where lately there has been a recrudensce of the revolutionary movement.

Parties desiring to invest $500 to $1,000 to complete a promising development proposition, may get particulars by addressing James Ames, 314 E. Fourth street, Duluth, Minn.

LAND TORPEDO

Explodes in Military Road, Badly Injuring Two Men.

Chita, Trans Baikal, Russia, Feb. 17.—Twenty-four military land torpedoes, such as were usod by the Russians and Japanese during the war operations have been found imbedded in a military road in this vicinity. One of the mines was exploded by an ammunition wagon, badly wounding a soldier and a driver. There is no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage.

MINE WORKERS HARD AT WORK ON NEW SCALE.

New York, Feb. 17.—The anthracite mine workers committee of seven, engaged in drafting the demands to be made of the operators met again today at the Ashland house and resumed their task. They expect to remain in session, throughout the day. They continue to maintain complete secrecy on every phase of the work, declining to state even when they expect to conclude the draft of their demands and meet the committee of the operators.

The 8-hour day question for "outside men," is thought to be the main feature delaying the work. The miners' committee, it is understood, is agreed that it is useless to try to force the operators to employ only union men and this demand probably will not be pressed. It is also feared that the demand for an 8-hour day for laborers other than miners (who form a large part of the union) will be met by a flat refusal, while the scale committee is hard pressed by the mine workers to secure this concession from the operators.

GREAT PRODUCTION OF COAL.

Hazelton, Pa., Feb. 17.—The annual report of Mine Inspector Roderick, which was made public today, shows that the total production of coal in the Ninth anthracite district for 1905 amounts to 7,059,335 tons. This is the greatest tonnage ever registered in the district and exceeds the record of 1904 by 387,435 tons. The number of employes is 15,319. There were forty-nine fatal and ninety-eight non-fatal accidents during the year.

FIRE IN THEATER.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Fire was discovered early today in one of the dressing rooms of the Belasco theater on Lafayette square, occupied by two of the girls of the De Wolf Hopper company. It was quickly extinguished with only a nominal loss.

The Northwest's most successful and reliable SPECIALIST IN DISEASES OF MEN.

The Neglect of Private Diseases

A Stitch in Time Saves Nine.

Many men have been made miserable by the unfortunate contracting of some poisonous special disease which, through neglect or improper treatment, has completely undermined and shattered the physical strength and mental faculties. No greater mistake can be made than to consider lightly the first evidence of the introduction of any private disease into your system, or to neglect the first symptoms of Nervous Debility, caused by improper and unnatural habits, excesses, dissipation, etc.

Such indifferences and neglect of the first symptoms are responsible for thousands of human wrecks, failures in life and business. Men! why take such desperate chances? The manifestations of the first symptoms of any disease or weakness should be a warning for you to take prompt steps to safeguard your future life and happiness. You should carefully avoid all uncertain, experimental, dangerous or half-way treatment, for upon the first treatment depends whether you will be promptly restored to health again, with all taint of the poisonous disease removed from your system, or whether your disease will be allowed to become chronic and subject you to future recurrences of the disease, with the various resulting complications, etc.

One consultation with us may change your whole life. Delays are dangerous.

If we could but see and treat all men when the first symptoms show themselves there would soon be little need for specialists in chronic diseases, and there would be few men seeking a rejuvenating of their physical, mental and sexual powers, and there would be none marked with the indelible stamp of constitutional Syphilis; and the sufferers from Prostatitis, Varicocele, Gleet, Kidney and Bladder Diseases, would be reduced to a minimum.

The Progressive Medical Association offers every afflicted man the care and attention of a skilled specialist in men's diseases, and a sure cure. Consultation free and confidential. Office hours 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sundays 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. If you cannot call write Dept. A.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage which was duly executed and delivered by Mary L. Castonguay and D. Castonguay, her husband, mortgagors, to Herbert Normay May, mortgagee, bearing date, February eighth (8th), 1904, and which was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on May thirty-first (31st), 1904, at twelve o'clock and fifteen minutes (12:15) p. m., in book one hundred and sixty-four (164) of mortgages, on page five hundred ninety-six (596); such default consisting in the non-payment of the sum of seven hundred ($700.00) Dollars of the principal sum secured by said mortgage, with interest thereon at the rate of six (6) per cent per annum, from February eighth (8th), 1904.

And whereas, there is therefore claimed to be due, and there is actually due, upon said mortgage debt, at the date of this notice, the sum of seven hundred eighty-two and 71-100 ($782.71) Dollars, principal and interest;

And whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form, which has become operative by reason of the default above mentioned, and no action or proceeding, at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of said power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, described as follows to-wit:

The southeast quarter of the northeast quarter (SE¼ of NE¼), and the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter (NE¼ of SE¼), all in section seventeen (17), in township fifty (50), north, of range fifteen (15), west of the fourth principal meridian according to the government survey thereof; which premises will be sold by the sheriff of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house, in the City of Duluth, in said County and State on the 13th day of March, A. D. 1906, at ten (10) o'clock a. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises and fifty ($50.00) Dollars attorney's fee, stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated January 27, A. D., 1906.

HERBERT NORMAN MAY, Mortgagee.

JOHN BROWN, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Duluth Evening Herald, Jan. 27, Feb. 3-10-17-24, March 3, 1906.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of Education of the City of Duluth, up to March 2nd, 1906, at 7 o'clock p. m., for the construction of the new school building to be erected upon Lots 18, 20, 22 and 24, East Sixth street, Duluth Proper, First Division, according to plans, specifications and details on file in the office of German & Lignell, Architects, 201-202 Torrey Building, Duluth, Minn.

All bids must be submitted on a form supplied by the Architect, and must be accompanied by a certified check for $500.00, payable to the order of J. J. Le Tourneau, Treasurer, said check to be forfeited by the successful bidder in case he fails to enter into contract and furnish a satisfactory bond in an amount equal to the contract price agreed upon, within five days after award.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

ON THE MENOMINEE RANGE

Crystal Falls, Mich., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the conditions in general may be stated to be the same all over the Lake Superior iron region, there will be no greater activity anywhere the coming season than in the Crystal Falls district of the Menominee range. The most prosperous year in the history of the community is assured, not excepting the boom days of 1900, and the era of good times will extend well into the future, the mining companies being sold ahead on long-term contracts that will keep the properties operating whether there is a slump in the iron trade or not. At the present time almost every mine is working full-handed. The Crystal Falls, Tobin, Great Western, Lamont and Bristol, lying within or just outside the city limits, and employing upwards of 900 men. In addition, the Fairbanks property of the Corrigan-McKinney company, the biggest operator in the district, is rapidly developing into a mine and probably will be employing 100 men instead of the twenty-five whose names now appear on the payroll. The Kimball also is expected to have a force of about 100 men before the summer is far advanced. Adjacent to the city are the Dunn, Armenia and Mansfield. The Dunn is preparing to break all records this season; the Armenia will give work to more than 100 men, and the Steel corporation's Mansfield to about 150. This makes a grand total of between 1,500 and 1,600 men who will be employed at producing properties, aside from which a considerable number will be busy on drilling operations and other exploratory work. All available mineral lands in the vicinity have been gobbled up on options, and the woods will be full of men seeking ore this coming summer. Mining work is still somewhat hampered by a shortage of men, but new hands, for the most part secured through employment agencies, are arriving on nearly every train and it is expected the labor market will be well supplied in the near future. Skilled miners, however, are hard to secure, and the need for this class of workers probably will continue pressing.

A program of improvements is being carried out at the Bristol, operated by Oglebay, Norton & Co., which will make that mine one of the best equipped in the district. A fine new hoisting plant of sufficient capacity to last the mine for many years has been ordered and will be doing duty in the summer. The working shaft is being overhauled and put in condition to permit of the operation of heavier skips traveling at greater speed. The Fairbanks is proving up beyond expectations, and gives evidence of developing into a mine of large proportions. Already there is a considerable stockpile, accumulated in the course of opening work, and the tonnage is being added to daily. Shipments will be made this season. At the Kimball property, the shaft that was sunk the first year that any exploring was done in the Crystal Falls district, is being put into condition for permanent duty. The timbering is being renewed, and the water lowered, as necessary, in the prosecution of the work. Diamond drills are in commission at the North Armenia property, for the Buffalo & Susquehanna company, and at a tract in the vicinity of the old Mastodon mine for the Consumers' Ore company.

The report is current in mining circles both at Crystal Falls and at Iron River, on the opposite side of Iron county, that all the mineral lands of the old D., M. & M. company have been taken over under option by a large operating concern and will shortly be the scene of extensive drilling operations. The deal is credited, but the identity of the company concerned is not clear. There is reason to believe, however, that it is the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, which heretofore has confined its extensive operations to the Marquette, Gogebic and Mesaba ranges. Recent developments at the West Hiawatha property indicate the existence of an ore body of sufficient size to assure the opening of a mine. Both a churn and diamond drill are in operation, and the ore formation has been traced across the forty. At the Buchholtz property, west of the Mineral Mining company's Beta mine, the Buffalo & Suspehanna company has encountered some ore in test pits, and is arranging to install drills to further test the tract. Ore bodies of importance are being opened at the Beta. The drill at the Tully has cut into an ore deposit, the extent of which is for the future to determine.

The big new shaft at the Steel corporation's Ludington mine at Iron Mountain, Menominee range, has attained a total depth of better than 1,950 feet. It will be carried down to the 2,000-foot level. The shaft house over this big opening will be constructed entirely of steel and will be lined with the same material, making it practically fireproof. The steel is on the ground, and the erection of the structure will soon be commenced. Some drifting has been done to connect this shaft with the Hamilton, and in the work some fine deposits of ore have been cut. Supt. Truscott of the Loretto mine, also a Dickinson county property, operated by a Chicago company, states that the underground showing was never better. The lenses are widening with depth, and the iron content is improving. The shaft is being lowered another 100 feet, from the seventh to the eighth level, with encouraging results.

ON THE MARQUETTE RANGE

Dexter Mine Likely to be Reopened This Year---The Old American and Boston May Also be Worked.

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is a prospect that another abandoned property on the Marquette range will shortly be a scene of activity again. This is the Dexter, located six miles west of Ishpeming and at present controlled by Detroit, Mich., men. Application has been made for a lease of the mine, and it is believed the negotiations will be successfully concluded. The property comprises several hundred acres, on which two shafts have been sunk, known as the Dexter and the Dey, the first of which is down about 700 feet. P. P. Chase, one of the fee owners of the lands, has great faith in the property, despite that no extensive ore bodies were developed when the mine was operated some twelve or fourteen years ago. He believes that important deposits will be discovered with depth. He thinks that the formation indicates a condition similar to that obtaining at the Steel Corporation's Champion mine, which is the deepest on the range. Before the Champion was 1,000 feet deep it was generally supposed that the mine would last only a few years, but with depth the deposits began to increase in size. The company now negotiating for the Dexter would sink the shafts several hundred feet deeper, and diamond drills would be operated from the workings as well as from the surface. The buildings at the property have been kept in good repair.

In the same district as the Dexter is the old American property, recently taken over under lease by M. A. Hanna & Co. of Cleveland. This mine, eight miles west of Ishpeming, was last operated fourteen years ago by Ishpeming and Appleton, Wis., people, and was closed down because of dull times and lack of funds. Adjoining the American on the east is the old Boston, which also has been taken over by the Hanna company, as have a mile and a half of lands in the direction of the Dexter. The ore at the American had been followed downward to a depth of 600 to 700 feet, and had been opened on the strike of the deposit for 1,000 feet. At places it obtained a width of eighteen feet, but the general average was six to 8. In the upper levels the ore was of very high grade, Bessemer in quality, running about 67 per cent in metallic iron. When operations were suspended the ore was dipping toward the Boston, where the shaft had attained a depth of 300 feet. It is the belief of mining men familiar with the conditions that Hanna & Co. will make important finds by going down deep. There is only one building remaining intact at either location; all the others, together with the machinery, were demolished and stolen years ago.

At the present time there is not an iron mining property, excepting the Cambria Steel company's Republic, in operation on the Marquette range west of Ishpeming. The big Champion hard ore mines has been idle two years, awaiting the removal of its stockpiles, which were filled to overflowing. The machinery plant has been overhauled the past few months, and everything is ready for a resumption of work whenever the company so decides. The mine is a valuable property, containing large bodies of ore running well in iron and low in moisture, and it is owned in fee, which may be one of the reasons why work is not being pushed. The Beaufort mine, in the Michigamme limonite district, is also idle, the lease having been surrendered by the Buffalo & Susquehanna company. It is expected that new parties will take hold early in the spring. The ores run low in iron and high in phosphorus, and are in poor demand except in times of prosperity in the trade such as at present prevail.

The Steel corporation's new general machine shop, now building at the Lake Superior mine at Ishpeming, will be the largest and most complete on the Marquette range. It will be able to handle locomotives and steam shovels with ease. A ponderous traveling crane will be included in the equipment. The frame of the building is of steel, and the interior walls will be bricked, making the structure practically fireproof. Good headway has been made with the construction work, but it will be several months before the shop will be equipped and in running order.

Lucien Eaton of Ishpeming, formerly mining engineer at the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company's Ashland mine, on the Gogebic, has taken up his duties as superintendent of the Iron Belt and Shores properties at Iron Belt, in the same field. The Iron Belt and Shores were acquired by the Cleveland Cliffs several months ago and are now in course of development.

Daly West Report to Show Heavy Income---Duluth Capital Going Into Tintic District.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 17.—Although the option on the Ontario and Daly stocks expired Jan. 31, no definite announcement has yet been made. The sentiment in Salt Lake City is that some deal will probably be concluded.

The annual meeting of the Daly-West stockholders will be held in Denver Feb. 19. There will probably be some changes in the membership of the board of directors. It is likely that the report will show heavy income for the year on account of the advanced prices of the various metals.

The ore shipments from the Tintic district for the past week increased very materially, 208 carloads being sent to the smelters from the following properties: Ridge & Valley, 5; Centennial-Eureka, 59; Bullion-Beck, 13; Gemini, 16; Ajax, 5; Black Jack, 4; Carisa, 4; Grand Central, 12; Lower Mammoth, 2; Mammoth 17; Victoria, 3; Marlow & Baxter, 1; May Day, 1; Brooklyn Consolidated, 4; Eagle & Blue Bell, 9; Uncle Sam Consolidated, 4; Yankee Consolidated, 5; Eureka Hill (lease), 14; South Swansea, 1; Swansea, 6; Dragon Iron mine, 17; Beck Tunnel, 6.

The increased demand for Ajax, which has been selling freely at 30 cents, is due to the fact that the company is now free from debt with prospects of resuming dividends. The stock is earning at least one-half a cent a share net per month. Carisa is also becoming stronger. There has been little change in Eagle & Blue Bell for a week, although the conditions at the property are encouraging, as is revealed by the output from the mine. The Yankee Consolidated company has decided to put in a concentrating mill. The Beck Tunnel company has decided to increase its dividend to 2 cents per share. The Victoria will pay 3 cents per share this month. The Mammoth company has extended the life of the company for twenty-five years more.

There have been some important transactions involving the transfer of large interests at Stockton. Capitalists of

THE WARREN DISTRICT MINES

Good Strike at the Calumet and Pittsburg—Drill Working on the American—Shattuck Continuing to Open Up More Ore.

Bisbee, Ariz., Feb. 17.—Interest during the week has been generally directed toward the Briggs shaft of the Calumet & Pittsburg. The ground there had been improving very decidedly for several days and it looks as if ore was at hand. This expectation was realized, and a large quantity of 6 per cent ore has been taken from the shaft. The quantity present remains to be determined, and it is not improbable the shaft will have to go much deeper before it gets into real bodies. The Houston shaft of the same property is said to be in 1½ per cent ore at the 1100 level, at which, if the dip shown in the Lowell may be relied upon, it must get the ore body of the great Copper Queen mine adjoining.

• • •

At the American they have the diamond drill going down steadily. It is now into the ground something like 300 feet, all in conglomerate. The drill has not yet been started on Warren, organization having just been completed for the work on American. The confidence that is held in these two properties is pretty well shown in the manner their stocks have been holding in the lead during the recent season of depression.

• • •

The unusual output of the Calumet & Arizona smelter at Douglas last month must necessarily look very good to the management and stockholders of that company, the total amount of copper being produced for January being a little more than five million pounds. This output was an indication that very high grade ore had been fed to the furnaces of the C. & A.. The output of last month, however, was by no means the limit of what may be expected of the Calumet & Arigona people in the future, as another furnace is now being added to the smelting plant as fast as circumstances will admit. News also comes from Douglas to the effect that the Copper Queen smelters are to have several new furnaces.

It is reported that two new furnaces are to be erected of the same size as the three new ones erected last year, which have a capacity of 400 tons of ore per day. Besides these two new blast furnaces, plans are on foot for three reverberatory furnaces, each to have a capacity equal to the large blast furnaces. The output of the Copper Queen smelter last month was 7,696,000 pounds. The Queen is now handling a great deal of custom ore from various sections of southern Arizona and Sonora, besides the ores received from their kindred companies at Globe and Nacozari.

The smelter record for January broke all records in the history of Bonanza Circle production. During the month 30,727 tons of material was handled and 5,012,875 pounds of copper bullion produced. This in the face of a poor start during the first ten days of the month on account of delayed coke shipments. From these figures it is evident that all departments were working overtime for a record.

• • •

It is rumored that I. N. Kinsey, formerly chief clerk at the Calumet & Arizona smelters, is to return shortly from Globe and resume his old position at the smelters. With his return practically all the old force who handed in their resignations during the close of 1905 will be back in their old positions, H. B. Paul, James Wood and I. N. Kinsey.

Wolverine & Arizona is at the present time holding the eyes of those who keep close watch on Warren district. Excepting Calumet & Pittsburg and Denn-Wolverine is attracting the greatest amount of attention from the general public that is just now being given any property in the district. With Calumet & Pittsburg and Denn it holds the center of the stage. Wolverine has had a long, hard pull of it, and there is still some strenuous work ahead, but it begins to look as if the first stage of the road to ultimate success was very near its end. All indications at the mine at this time point to its coming in with the long-desired ore in the right place before many more weeks have slipped by. Should such results attend the work now being prosecuted in the cross-cut that is to solve the problem, a great deal will have been accomplished for the district. Its proven area will have been widely extended and some things that have ranked in the past only as theories will be demonstrated to be facts. The all-important work now in progress at the property is in a cross-cut being run from the end of the drift from the 500 level. This drift is in close to 2,000 feet. Toward the latter end of this distance the ground softened greatly and the formation became exceedingly promising. The distance to the porphyry from the present end of the shaft is doubtless short. From the end of the drift the cross-cut, started during the week, is expected to have to go about two hundred feet to reach the Czar fault. The latter runs crosswise to the porphyry. It is the same identical fault which brought the ore of the Shattuck and it is the confident belief of men who have directed the manner of development that has been under way at the property in recent months, that it will bring ore into the Wolverine, and much of it, rich in both quality and quantity.

BUTTE PLEASED WITH COLE DEAL

Will Result in Many More Properties Being Worked—North Butte's Great Earnings—Columbus-Butte to Sink Deep Shaft—Raven Buys a Compressor.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 17.—There is general rejoicing here that the great copper war is at an end, through the purchase by the syndicate headed by Thomas F. Cole, president of the North Butte Mining company, of all the Heinze properties in Butte. This will put an end to the litigation which has tied up many properties for years and will result in development work that will add largely to the number of miners employed in Butte and greatly increase the copper production of this district. A new company is to be formed which will include the Heinze interests, the Amalgamated interests and the North Butte and the Guggenheim interests and the basis upon which each company will be taken into the new organization is expected to be announced at an early date.

• • •

The North Butte is steadily increasing its production and it is said by those in a position to know that its earnings are really wonderful. Evidence of this is found in a further increase of its dividend to $1.25 a share for the present quarter, while it is understood that the earnings would have admitted of a $1.50 dividend, even after laying aside a handsome surplus which is being used to acquire other properties.

• • •

The Columbus-Butte company, the large end of the stock in which is held by Columbus, Ohio, capitalists, has decided to sink a 1,200-foot three-compartment shaft on its property, located a short distance west of the Lexington property, and will begin the work about the first of the month. A cross-cut will be first driven about 50 or 60 feet south of the bottom level of the Jennie Dell claim, after which raising and sinking will be prosecuted simultaneously and another level driven parallel with the first to connect with the shaft at a point about 200 feet from the surface. In order to accomplish the work mapped out the property will be equipped with heavy hoisting machinery as soon as possible. M. J. Bergin, president of the company; L. A. Frankenberg, vice president, and Capt. Alexis Cope, one of the directors, spent several days in Butte last week, having come from Columbus for the purpose of inspecting the property and deciding upon a future course for the corporation. While here they secured an option on the Twilight claim, which lays just north of the company's present holdings, and will make the first payment on it next month. The new acquisition is a full claim. With this claim the company will have four in its group, the Jennie Dell, La Monta and October being the others. The new shaft will be on the La Monta.

• • •

A syndicate composed of George H. Casey, W. F. Cobban, William J. Dawson and other Butte men has secured control of the Alex Scott claim, located near the West Colusa, and has started a drift in the lower workings with a view of determining the extent of the ore body. The syndicate owns the Little Annie, which adjoins the Goldsmith on the west, and intends to incorporate the two claims and operate them, provided the work of development in the Alex Scott proves satisfactory.

• • •

The Never Sweat mine, one of the large producers of the Amalgamated is again in operation, after a suspension of seven weeks to permit of the retimbering of about 400 feet of the shaft. This mine yields nearly 1,000 tons of ore per day, and has between 300 and 400 men delving in its veins and other workings.

The Gagnon mine, another Amalgamated property, was closed down last week, and will probably be out of business about two months. The shutdown was made necessary by reason of the fact that the shaft needed retimbering between the 1,000-foot station and the 1,300. Only the timber crew is at work now.

All of the other mines of the company are in operation, and, in addition to the ore coming from them, the company is getting between 500 and 600 tons a day from the Clark mines, nearly 1,000 from the North Butte and 300 from other sources, making a total of about 8,300 tons which the Washoe plant alone is consuming.

• • •

The East Butte Copper company is busy. It has overhauled the old Yankee Boy concentrator recently, replacing the old machinery with new jigs and rolls and such other machinery as is required to do first-class work in the saving of mineral. The mill was started last Saturday and is now running. Manager Wall says the Yankee Boy mine is yielding 100 tons of ore a day and the Hancock 50, which will furnish work for the concentrator, the capacity of which is 100 tons a day. Five shafts on ground owned by the company are undergoing repair, but will be in commission before a great while. One is almost finished. The main working shaft will be on the Dutton. It will be of three compartments. Manager Wall is now prosecuting this work, having started to raise from the 350-foot station to the surface two or three weeks ago. The raise is nearing the 200. After it reaches the surface sinking from the 350 will be begun and continued until a depth of at least 1,000 or 1,200 feet is attained. A little time will be required to get everything at the property in good shape.

• • •

Ray Cobban, son of W. F. Cobban, and Sidney George are mining near the Eighteen Mile house, south of Butte, and are reported to have struck an eight-foot vein of good copper ore. Some specimens of the vein have been brought to Butte. The boys own the Yankee Girl and Yankee Boy claims in that section, and also two others in another place not far distant. Several Butte men own property there, and since the strike on the Yankee Boy and Yankee Girl group was made they have been looking after their interests.

• • •

W. McC. White is still in the East in the interest of the company he and others contemplate organizing to work in the southern and northern part of the Butte district. It is reported that he is making good progress and hopes to have the proposed enterprise rounded out within the next week. Eight or ten persons in Butte will hold interests in the company by reason of their holdings in some of the property which the company purposes to take over. The area south of the city is said to be nearly a mile wide and three-fourths of a mile long, in addition to which there are some claims north of the city to be included in the deal. The proposed company promises to be a good one.

• • •

Butte & London Copper is working its ground, the Greendale placer, and is making as good headway as can be expected. The shaft is now about twenty feet deep. Last week the directors held a meeting and elected A. A. McMillan treasurer and Dr. E. D. Leavitt a director. The board also

MINNESOTA RANGES

Iron Range Road Will Have Double Track From Mines to Dock---Bovey Extension of Missabe Road to be Completed in June.

The record-breaking ore traffic handled last year by the Steel corporation's two Minnesota railroads, the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, with docks at Duluth, and the Duluth & Iron Range, with docks at Two Harbors, is reflected by the reports of gross earnings filed with the state authorities for the purpose of determining the amount of the taxes to be assessed against the companies. The gross earnings of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern for 1905 were $7,798,110, against $4,394,629 the preceding year; those of the Iron Range system, $7,575,151, compared with $4,742,905 in 1904. Thus, between them, the roads will contribute to the state the sum of $614,930 as their tax on gross earnings, the Missabe $311,924 and the Iron Range $303,005. In 1904, the Missabe paid a gross earnings tax of $131,839, and the Iron Range something more than that.

The Iron Range will have a double track from the mining district through to its ore docks by the opening of navigation. Construction work on the only remaining stretch of single track, that between Colby and Summit, a distance of about sixteen miles, has been in progress all winter and is now well on the way toward completion. The road will be better prepared than ever this year to serve the various mines whose product it handles, as will the Missabe system, and with increased rolling stock and better shipping facilities at the lake shore, each of the Steel corporation lines can be depended on to care in satisfactory manner for the great ore tonnage they will be called upon to transport. Just how much ore the corporation intends to move from its own mines is at matter that has not been made public, but it is announced that in addition to its own tonnage of 11,500,000, ample vessel room has been secured for all ore above that figure it is intended to ship. Ore has been moving freely from the Lake Erie docks the past few weeks, and the storage room there will be pretty well cleared up by the time the boats begin arriving with this year's cargoes. Ore prices hold steady. Old range bessemer is now quoted at $4.25, Mesaba bessemer at $4, old range non-bessemer at $3.70 and Mesaba non-bessemer, $3.50.

The Bovey, or Western Mesaba, fifty-five mile extension of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, which has been in course of construction for the past several months, will be completed by June 15 or July 1, it is expected. The work of grading, which for the greater portion of the winter has been aided by favorable weather, is progressing rapidly, and it is believed all the various contracts will be completed on the dates scheduled. Mining and development work is being pushed in the new field, and there is a prospect that a considerable tonnage will be shipped from the Western Mesabe this year. Many of the deposits already located in this portion of the Lake Superior region are of very large extent, running well up into the millions of tons, much of which is ore within the bessemer limit, and for the most part they are controlled by the Steel corporation, although the holdings of the Great Northern interests are considerable. Two particularly large basins, each containing tremendous beds of oe, some of which will require concentration and dressing, lie in Township 56, Range 24—a township whose wealth in mineral is probably great-

SUDBURY NICKEL REGION

The Creighton Mine the Biggest Nickel Property in the World---Millions of Tons of Ore Still in Sight.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—There are only two places on the globe where as far as yet discovered, nickel exists in large quantities. One is on the eastern shore of Australia, the other in the Sudbury district a few miles north of Georgian bay in Canada. In the latter region the ore is practically inexhaustible. There are shafts at Copper Cliff, four miles from Sudbury, which ae 1,200 feet in depth, and the oe is still rich and the deposits persistent. Twelve miles from Sudbury is the Creighton mine, the biggest nickel property in the world. Here, as a result of the mining operations conducted during the past few years, there is a great open pit, much like those on the Mesaba iron range in Minnesota, 500 feet long and 300 feet in width, with millions of tons of ore still in sight.

Both the Copper Cliff and Creighton properties, together with 20,000 acres of nickel-bearing lands in the district in which the mines are located, are owned by the so-called nickel trust, which has a monopoply on the business in this continent and to a large extent controls the trade of the globe. This big corporation, dominated by American capital, is the International Nickel company, which is a combination of the Canadian Copper company, the mining department, and its associate companies of the United States which reduce the matter and handle the product. The company annually ships from its Canadian properties 14,000,000 to 15,000,000 pounds of nickel matte, and its product last year was worth much more than a million dollars. It owns the largest nickel smelter in the world, and it controls the best known process of getting the nickel out of the matte after the latter comes from the smelter.

The Canadian Copper company, first organized to produce copper, was launched by Cleveland (Ohio) men in 1886, among the incorporators being Senator Henry B. Payne. The Canadian Pacific road had laid bare the nickel deposits several years before, but no one had looked upon the ore as nickel, and it was considered valuable only for the copper it contained. The Ohio company, capitalized at $2,500,000, opened the mines at Copper Cliff. It sent part of its ore to New Jersey for refining, and a portion of the product to Wales. The New Jersey reduction works looked upon the nickel as valueless and permitted it to run off with the slag. The Wales smelters paid only for the copper and retained the nickel for their own financial benefit. It was not long, however, before the Canadian Copper company came to the conclusion that the copper was not the most valuable portion of the ore, and since then the nickel has been the principal item of profit.

The smelters at Copper Cliff are of large size, the location in all covering ground running well up in acreage. The machinery is modern and labor-saving, and the ores are reduced at the minimum cost. In addition, new works will shortly go into commission and the development of a waterpower twenty-eight miles distant will give the company 10,000 horse-power. The ore is first crushed and screened, and then spread out in great heaps on beds of cordwood to be roasted. Hundreds of tons of the coarse ore are piled upon the wood, and the finer ore dust spread over them. Fire is started, and the ore gradually burns away, day after day, for a period of two months or more. This roasts out 15 to 20 per cent of the sulphur. The output has run about 700 tons of matte a day, or something like 200,000 tons annually, all of which is sent to the refining works at Constable Hook, N. J., where the various elements are separated and the nickel of commerce is made.

The ore from the Creighton mine carries about 6 per cent nickel, 2 or 3 per cent of copper, about 40 per cent iron and from 25 to 55 per cent of sulphur. This equals about six pounds of nickel to the hundred, or 120 pounds to the ton. At a selling price of 40 cents a pound, each ton of ore, therefore, contains $47 worth of nickel alone.

GOLD IN DEATH VALLEY

Another Nevada District Being Developed --- One Streak of Ore in the Palmetto Runs to $20,000 a Ton.

Goldfield, Nev., Feb. 17.—Nevada has another new gold district in the famous Death Valley, wherein lie the bones of hundreds of men who have perished since the first gold seekers tried to push through to the Golconda in the Sacramento Valley, over half a century ago. The latest and most important discovery has been made in the Palmetto district, about twenty miles south and west of Goldfield, close to the California line and near the northern edge of Death Valley. Ore which assays as high as $20,000 a ton is being taken from the Palmetto and Death Valley Mining & Milling company's property.

The ore was first uncovered at a depth of twenty-five feet on a five-foot vein on the Burlington claim, which is part of the Harwood-Gillan lease. The high-grade streak was two inches in width.

Closed to Death Valley, and even in this weird depression, other discoveries have been made. The Bullfrog region is not far away, the town of Beatty being only fifteen miles distant.

This is the best season of the year for Death Valley, and many scores of prospectors are ransacking the region, searching for gold and other valuable metals. Despite its name and the fact that it is flanked on one side by the Funeral range, Death Valley is a pleasant place at this season of the year. The locality is peculiar in the extremes of elevation, extending from far above to below the level of the sea. Panamint and Sentinel peaks tower to an elevation 11,000 feet above the ocean, while within ten miles to the eastward the alkali bottom is 300 feet below the sea level. The general name of Death Valley is applied to three connecting valleys—Death Valley proper, Lost Valley and Mosquito Valley.

The greatest trouble in prospecting the region is due to the fact that the water is impregnated with various injurious salts, while the wiry grass is not nutritious for animals.

Walter D. O'Brien, a former Goldfield man, is opening up a property that gives great promise. It is called the Death Valley Big Belle, while not far away is another mint owned by him, which is known as the Funeral Range City. These mines are on the Death Valley slope of the Funeral range. Mr. O'Brien claims to have opened up 30,000 tons of free-milling ore in this property which will average not less than $15 in gold to the ton.

Harry Welch, an old prospector, says he has found the mine in Death Valley which cost L. Bethune his life last summer. Welch declares he found the body of Bethune at the mine. He brought as proof a copy of the location notice of the New Century lode, located by Bethune in Death Valley.

The rush to Manhattan is unabated. The trains are crowded with men from all over the country en route to the new camp. The vast majority are Rocky Mountain miners and prospectors, although there are numbers of investors and others from the Far East. There is more speculation in stocks, claims and town lots than development of the mines. Hundreds of thousands of dollars change hands in a week, and the people are speculation mad. For all that, work is going on in a number of places, and some good ore is being taken out. Five automobile companies are now operating between Tonopah and the camp. The fare is $15 each way.

The Ore Top of Goldfield has declared a dividend of 5 cents a share or $50,000, payable Feb. 20. Books close Feb. 19.

COLORED INK

Next week promises to be a busy one, and if the Lenten dullness, that is supposed to mark the forty days arrives on schedule time, the contrast to the galeties of the few preceding weeks will be hard on society. During the past week invitations were issued for the pre-Lenten Assembly party. The affair will be given Friday evening of next week, at the Spalding, as usual, and it will be entered into with much zest, for it will be the last for some time.

Wednesday evening the February cotillion will be given at Steinway hall. Preceding as it does Washington's birthday, the favor and figures will undoubtedly suggest and be symbolical of cherry trees, hatchets and all the other things for which George Washington cannot be forgotten. Powell Grady will lead, and will be assisted by Miss Katherine Ensign.

The annual banquet of the Young Women's Christian association will take place Wednesday of next week, at the association rooms, and it will also be a Washington affair. The banquet will be served at 6:30 o'clock. Rev. T. H. Cleland will preside as toastmaster, and the toasts will be responded to by Mrs. L. W. Kline, Chas. Alden Smith and Watson S. Moore. The committee in charge of the affair consists of Mrs. C. H. Merritt, Mrs. W. A. McGonagle, Mrs. W. C. Sherwood, Mrs. A. H. Smith, Mrs. Z. D. Scott and Mrs. J. C. Watterworth.

In addition to this there will undoubtedly be—bridge. Bridge afternoon and evening—the mornings havo not been given over to the game in Duluth as yet. At the luncheon of the club women Monday, one guest remarked: "Oh, no, I'm not a club woman," with the air but slightly concealed of, "I'm not that sort of a creature," and then added, "Clubs take one away from one's home altogether too much." Within ten minutes she was gleefully announcing that she had engagements for every afternoon of the week to play bridge, and a few evenings. There will be some bridge parties next week.

Of special interest to Duluth society is the wedding of Miss Katherine Noyes of Milwaukee and Donald R. McLennan of Chicago, which took place Wednesday of this week at Milwaukee. Mr. McLennan lived in Duluth for many years, and was prominent in society's circles, and Miss Noyes has visited her sister, Mrs. William Dalrymple, of this city. The wedding was a brilliant function, and several Duluth people were present. Mrs. Dalrymple of this city was the matron of honor, and William L. McLennan was the best man. Ward Ames and William Dalrymple, both of this city, were among the ushers, and Mrs. McLennan, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Welles and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thompson of this city were guests at the wedding. The Evening Wisconsin of Milwaukee said:

"St. Paul's church was the scene this afternoon of one of the prettiest of the winter weddings, when the marriage of Miss Katherine Noyes, daughter of Judge and Mrs. George H. Noyes, to Donald R. McLennan of Chicago, was solemnized there at 4 o'clock. The church was filled with a large and fashionable assemblage. The chancel was banked with palms, and on the altar were vases of white flowers.

"At the appointed hour the vested choir met the bridal party at the church entrance, and preceded it up the aisle, singing the bridal song from 'Lohengrin.' The ushers, Messrs. Haskell Noyes, Frank Leach, John Dalrymple, Ward Ames and Robert Greer, marched first. Then came the bridesmaids, the Misses Margaret Noyes, Clare Oliver, Lois Hollister, Margery Lockwood, Edith Willis and Lola Bishop, wearing charming gowns of white radium silk, with trimmings of Irish point and heavy cream lace, and carrying pink roses. Their hats were stunning creations of white and pink. The bridesmaids were followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. William F. Dalrymple, a sister of the bride, who wore an exquisite gown of pink radium, trimmed with lace. Her hat was white, trimmed with pink tips and pink Paradise plumes, and she carried Golden Gate roses.

"The procession was closed by the bride, walking with her father. She wore a lovely gown of heavy white satin, trimmed on bodice and skirt with rose point and Venetian point lace. Her veil was of tulle, and her shower bouquet was of white lilacs and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a necklace of diamonds.

"As the wedding procession reached the chancel, the bride was met by the bridegroom and his best man, William McLennan, and the service was read by Rev. William Austin Smith, rector of St. Paul's. As the wedding procession proceeded down the aisle Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by the organist.

"The ceremony was followed by a small reception, held at the residence of Judge and Mrs. Noyes, 204 Prospect avenue. The receiving party, composed of Judge and Mrs. Noyes and the bride and groom, stood before the wide south window in the library, beneath a bower formed of graceful Australian ferns and asparagus vine. This room was done entirely in white and green, with large vases of white flowers placed about. The drawing room was decorated with pink roses, and in the dining room the table centerpiece was of orchids and lilies of the valley.

"Mr. and Mrs. McLennan will sail Saturday on the Celtic for Italy, and after a trip abroad will reside at the Auditorium annex in Chicago."

1906 Spring Fashions

DURING the past week every express from New York has brought us captivating new styles in women's apparel for spring. Elegant gowns and suits from famous makers—the latest ideas from abroad—the finest models produced in America.

A grand collection now ready for your choosing. The richest, the most exclusive, the most beautiful women's apparel ever shown in the Northwest.

Already the spring selling has begun and as there is but one of a kind in the real exclusive models, and they cannot be duplicated, it is decidedly to your advantage to make your selection as quick as possible.

Delicate Shades All the Rage

Dame Fashion favors the delicate shades for this season. Never before have such beautiful tints been created—never before have such exquisite garments been designed.

In place of the dark heavy shades of red, blue, brown, gray, etc., 1906 styles will be characterized by such shades as coral, Alice blue, lavender, shadow plaids, pin chicks, dainty white and black stripes, delicate gray, etc.

In the new spring suits and costumes voiles, serges, silks, batiste, budah cloth, etc., will be the favorite materials.

Combinations of silk and wool will be quite popular, while lace and embroidery will be more or less used in trimming.

The suit models most in demand for this spring are the new long front Eton, the short Eton, the Princess and the pony coat suits.

One of the latest fads with New York's smart dressers is the combination suit, the jacket being of plain color cloth and the skirt of plaid material. If you would be dressed in the ultra-fashionable style you must have a combination suit.

Many new ideas in evening gowns and wraps have just been put on exhibition. These are American and imported models, and come in white and all the delicate shades.

Circular and pleated skirts will be the correct fashions for street wear this spring. Many new models have just arrived.

You must see the handsome coats for street wear and automobiling. These come in three-quarter and full lengths, many of the automobile coats being of an entirely new design.

Stop at the style store and inspect these handsome new garments, whether or not a purchase is intended.

Clubs and Musical

The past week has been a most important one to the club women of the city, beginning as it did upon Monday with what has come to be regarded as the annual midwinter luncheon of the club women of the Head of the Lakes. The presence of Governor Johnson of Minnesota as their guest of honor added much to the brilliancy of the occasion and all details of the luncheon, the menu itself, the speakers and their toasts and the genuine approval of the guests made the affair the most delightful that Duluth club women have participated in.

Mrs. J. L. Washburn presided as toast mistress and there was not a club woman in the room but glowed with pride at the ease and happy manner their representative as head of the local Women's council displayed in this capacity. The toasts were responded to by Mrs. John MacLeod, Mrs. J. H. Crowley, Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., and Mrs. I. L. Lenroot of Superior.

The governor also spoke, and in the delightful talk expressing his belief in women's work and his gratitude for the influence that work had had in his own life, he won the club women of the northern part of the state as he has all those in the southern districts. His tribute to Lincoln given in the language of perfect simplicity and sincerity reached the heart of every American present.

Great credit is due the committee with Mrs. G. A. Elder as its chairman for the success of the affair.

* * *

At the meeting of the Women's Council which was held Wednesday morning at the Library, a movement was started which has many ardent and enthusiastic women back of it. A committee was appointed by the president, Mrs. J. L. Washburn, consisting of Mrs. H. C. Marshall, Mrs. R. N. Marble, Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour and Mrs. T. J. Davis, to consider the possibility of establishing a guild room in Duluth for the encouragement of the work in arts and crafts. The committee will inquire into ways and means and report to the council, but the establishment of the movement is almost a certainty.

One example of the help that such a movement might be was explained at the council meeting. Recently a local firm sent to Sweden for some embroidery work that is done by many Swedish servant girls right here in the city, in careful and beautiful needlework. If the Guild room were established here such work would be encouraged and added instruction given and the workers aided in securing sale for their work. Many branches that are not at first thought of would be added and the movement would undoubtedly reach many people.

Another committee that was appointed was a public playgrounds committee, which consists of Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, Mrs. Ward Ames, Miss Statham and Mrs. Alexander Milne.

The Bishop's club will meet Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the club room of the Library. Mrs. A. A. Fider is leader for the evening and the following program will be studied.

Roll call from proverbs.

Bible study.

"Napoleon's Expedition to the Holy Land" .... Miss Lydia Poirier.

"The Ancient Tombs of Jerusalem".. Mrs. E. W. Fahey.

"Samaria, Galilee, Decapolis".......... Miss McHugh.

Book review, Scott's "Ivanhoe."

The Travel class of the Twentieth Century club will meet Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the club room of the Library. An interesting program has been prepared and the members are urged to be prompt in attendance. The class is studying Japan and any interested in the program are invited to attend.

* * *

The Morning Browning class of the Twentieth Century club will meet Thursday morning of next week at 10:15 o'clock at the club room of the Library.

* * *

The Federation meeting of the club women of the Eighth district, which was held in this city Tuesday of this week, was exactly what a district federation is aimed to be—a help and an inspiration to the clubs of the smaller towns. The outside towns were not largely represented, however, Aitkin, Grand Rapids and Cloquet being the only outside towns represented and the meetings were so helpful that it was decided if possible to hold a district meeting next year in one of the smaller towns that more of the smaller clubs might be reached.

Sessions were held morning and afternoon at the club room of the Library, and following the afternoon session a very delightful informal reception was held in honor of the visiting women. At the tea table Mrs. Ward Ames and Mrs. T. H. Cleland presided and assisting were Mrs. A. H. Smith, Mrs. F. H. Barnard, Mrs. W. C. Jones, Mrs. M. Kelley, Mrs. L. H. Corcoran, Mrs. W. A. Kaake and Mrs. W. A. McGonagle.

A union day of prayer for missions will be conducted Thursday of next week at the First Methodist church. The Women's societies of the several churches will have charge of the meetings and the program for the day is as follows:

10 to 11 a. m.: Congregational—"Japan," Mrs. Nichols. "Open Doors," Mrs. Alex Milne.

11 a. m. to 12 m.: Baptist—"Burham, Especially for Unmarried Missionaries," Mrs. Gouch and Mrs. J. O. Milne.

12 m. to 1 p. m.: Christian—"Freedman," Mrs. Douglas. "Mexico and South America," Mrs. E. A. Wisdom.

1 to 2 p. m.: Methodist—"Mountain Whites," Mrs. Hall. "India, Mrs. Stewart.

2 to 3 p. m.: Episcopal—"Indians in Minnesota," Mrs. J. D. Morrison.

3 to 4 p. m.: Presbyterian—"Deepening of Interest in Missions Among Women," Mrs. Blackmarr. "Incoming Multitudes and Mormons," Mrs. Whipple.

4 to 4:30: "Duluth Missions," Mrs. A. W. Bradley.

NORMAL SCHOOL NOTES

The third year class had charge of the program in chapel this week. Dr. Bohannon read an article on Lincoln Monday morning. Tuesday Bishop McGolrick gave an interesting talk. Thursday Mrs. L. W. Kline told the pupils some humorous negro stories, and Dr. Kline addressed the pupils Wednesday and Friday mornings.

The Glee club held its weekly practice in the music room Friday afternoon.

The junior class entertained the seniors and faculty at the annual junior-senior party at the school last Saturday evening. The affair was a Valentine party and all the guests were clothed in costumes of different countries and wore masks. The second floor, the scene of the merriment, was beautifully decorated with hearts, and the class colors of the seniors and juniors were used extensively in all the rooms. The evening was spent in playing appropriate Valentine games. Each guest was provided with a heart-shaped box and was sent on a "heart hunt" to gather candy hearts which were hidden around the building. In the library a large red heart dotted with smaller hearts was suspended from the chandelier. The guests were provided with tiny bows and arrows, and each one tried his luck at shooting at the white hearts. The fact that each heart had a fortune written on it made the contest more amusing. Dainty refreshments were served in the library. The guests were: President and Mrs. Bohannon, Mr. and Mrs. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, Dr. and Mrs. Kline, Misses Mason, Post, Eaton, Bainbridge, Carey, Shoesmith, Ely, Quilliard, Heywood, Horne, Ensign, Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Sinclair for the faculty, and Misses Hicken, Hopkins, Hoskins, Ober, O'Keefe, Robinson, Streed, Wright, Berry, Carlson, Dolan, Frost, Gorman, Hanson, Hoyer, Kennedy, Lavalle, Marshall, Mendleson, Schaffer, Shaw, Bartz, Blackmarr, Anderson, Carlson, Detert, Dolan, Doran, Gandsen, Hughes, McAvoy, Swanson, Talboys, Webster, Chisholm, Jenson, Keehan, Taylor, Turnbull, Miltse, Aune, Brentigan, Brown, Flynn, Hinsman, Holtorf, Ives, Kelly, Krey, Leland, McLean, Mintle, Mitchell, Olssen, Owens, Phelps, Roberts, Sand, Shaver, Shaw, Ulsrud, Wolfe, Wagner, Burbank, Campbell, Murray, Rowe, Shannon, Tyler, Gowan, Magner, McDonald, Lind, Latture.

The basket ball teams had their weekly practice at Harmony hall Friday afternoon. There are two teams, junior and senior. Next Friday they are to have a big game, as the juniors have challenged the seniors. Both teams are being coached by Fred Ober and are practicing hard.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Governor Hagerman of New Mexico granted a reprieve for one week to John Conley, who was to have been hanged at Taos Friday, in order to permit an inquiry into his mental condition. There is no telegraph to Taos and a messenger, carrying the reprieve rode there from Embrodios, 30 miles, over mountainous roads.

Nine of Iowa university's best baseball players have agreed not to play this year, acknowledging they were professionals and saying there is not an amateur baseball player of any skill within any university in the United States.

Chapel Fowler, a car repairer of Plainfield, Mich., was killed Friday, his wife is apparently dying from shock and Charles H. Fairchild was probably fatally injured as the result of a caboose striking the railroad velocipede on which the three were riding.

Arthur Scoper, assistant engineer of the Savannah district, was on the stand in the Greene and Gaynor trial all day Friday. The most striking feature of his evidence was that the government has paid 95 cents a yard for mattresses that cost the contractors but 9 cents.

The Jack O'Keefe-Kid Parker fight at Spokane Friday night was a draw. It went twenty rounds.

H. A. Taylor, assistant secretary of the treasury at Washington, has resigned, and J. H. Edwards will be appointed his successor.

Governor Hoch announced Friday night that he would not reopen the pardon case of Arthur E. Ireland, a union labor leader, formerly a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor. Ireland is serving a six months' sentence in the Cowley county jail for assaulting a non-union machinist during a strike.

E. G. Carpenter and wife are held by the police of Baltimore on the charge of having stolen goods amounting to $6,000 to $7,000. They were arrested Thursday, and Friday broke down and acknowledged that the articles were obtained by shoplifting and other methods in Peoria and Atlantic City, Washington and Baltimore.

The next annual meeting of the directors of the National Federation of Women's clubs will be held in St. Paul, Minn. The date for the convention was not announced.

BEAUTY! HOW ACQUIRED.

Use of Mme. Ruppert's Face Bleach Assures Perfect Complexion.

It is said that beauty is but skin deep. Nothing is more true. But there can be no real beauty unless the skin is beautiful. Nothing is easier to be had than a beautiful skin, if the proper remedy is used.

Mme. Ruppert's Face Bleach has never failed in the past to naturally beautify the complexion. Its use imparts to the skin a girlish loveliness. This loveliness is not artificial, but natural, as the effect of Mme. Ruppert's Face Bleach is to restore the skin to childish freshness and bloom, leaving it wholesome and pure.

It is positively harmless to the most delicate skin, and while using it one may attend to regular household, office or social duties, it being impossible to detect its use, as it does not show after application.

Face Bleach is guaranteed to remove painlessly and harmlessly wrinkles and lines of care, freckles, tan, moth, pimples and blackheads, and in fact any disease or discoloration of the skin.

Call at our toilet goods counter and have its merits further explained.

We also sell Mme. Ruppert's Almond Oil Complexion Soap, an exquisite toilet soap; Mme. Ruppert's Gray Hair Restorative, for restoring gray hair to its natural color; Mme. Ruppert's Depilatory, for removing superfluous hair, and a full line of her toilet requisites.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS.

Duluth People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words, but deeds, that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,
For Duluth kidney sufferers,
Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Duluth people who have been cured to stay cured.

Mrs. C. M. Bradley, dressmaker, living at 109 First street east, Duluth, Minn., says: "Since giving a testimonial for publication in 1898, telling of the gratifying results obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, my faith in them has continually increased, for besides my own experience I have known of numerous friends and acquaintances who have learned the reliability of Doan's Kidney Pills in severe cases of kidney trouble. I suffered a great deal from heavy, dull pains in the small of the back, and it was impossible for me to bend over or rest at night with any degree of comfort. I used only about half a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, when I noticed a wonderful improvement. The kidney secretions were regulated and toned up, and the pains gradually disappeared, until I was entirely free from my former trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Philadelphia Ledger: Religious factions among the Syrians of New York met in such heated debate that two were killed. However, as one belonged to each side, the relative weight of opinion remains unchanged.

Baltimore American: A minister in New York recently declared in the course of a sermon that he would go to hell with a true friend or stay away from heaven without him. But, while so extravagant a statement might impress some, the majority will continue to hold the test of a true friend as one always willing to lend money.

New York Post: Theoretically desirable, the separation of church and state has always been in France. The inequity of the actual law lies in the fact that the church is, on the whole, more regulated than before. The whole form of parish organization has been changed. Churches become public property, and are only leased at discretion to the newly formed associations cultuelles. It is the steps preliminary to this virtual confiscation which have provoked the present disturbances. Furthermore, the endowments to be held by parishes are greatly restricted, and the state constitutes itself judge not only of the loyalty of an association, but of its orthodoxy. Through the abolition of the concordat, the state sacrifices the right of nominating bishops. It is said that it will endeavor to maintain this prerogative in the absence of a treaty with the Vatican. In fine, the church is treated as a suspect, whose conduct must be inquired into and regulated with a minuteness hitherto reserved for the unfortunates of the street. One may deplore the fact that the Catholics of France do not obey the Biblical injunction to turn the other cheek; one can hardly wonder that their bewilderment and indignation occasionally find vent in violence.

Lame Back.

This ailment is usually caused by rheumatism of the muscles, and may be cured by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm two or three times a day and rubbing the parts vigorously at each application. If this does not afford relief, bind on a piece of flannel slightly dampened with Pain Balm, and quick relief is almost sure to follow. For sale by all druggists.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—"Piff! Paff! Pouf!"
METROPOLITAN—The Avenue Girls.

"PIFF, PAFF, POUF."

Musical Show Pleases Large Audience at Lyceum.

Piff, Paff, Pouf" began an engagement the Lyceum last evening. H. C. Whitney calls his production a "musical cocktail." That is good, even if it has been heard in Duluth before. An expression like that is needed to adequately describe the entertainment, for "Piff, Paff, Pouf" is not a comic opera and when you merely call it a musical comedy, you do not tell enough.

The ingredients of "Piff, Paff, Pouf," so far as the eye can determine, comprise a plot that is not too complicated, but which contains an idea or two that has not been used before this season; some musical numbers that sound like more; two elaborate and beautiful sets of scenery, a large company of musical comedy stars, with little Fred W. Mace and Pony Ballet on the side.

There are no strangling scenes, no leaps for life and only once during the action of the piece is a member of the cast called upon to do any tall and lofty vocalizing, but you cannot help enjoying the entertainment. It is not so different from the others that you know. You think it something like the musical shows that have gone before—only more so and with all the up-to-the-minute improvements.

The story concerns the efforts of a rich New Yorker, August Melon, to marry his four daughters in order that he may marry again himself. You see, somebody's will figures. Three of them are wedded to as many penniless men, who are known as Lord George Piffle, Macaroni Paffle and Peter Poufle. The fourth daughter is married to a penniless creature, too. She weds a newspaper man.

The plot is Stanislaus Stange's concoction and Jerome and Schwartz are responsible for the lyrics and the score. All have done well, if the success with which "Piff, Paff, Pouf" has met is any indication. The present production is a sumptuous one.

F. W. Hornby is the unkissed Piff; Charles A. Morgan, who will be remembered as the noisy Sergeant Barker with Richard Carle in "The Tenderfoot," is Paff, and Fred W. Mace, who has been playing Pineapple in "A Chinese Honeymoon," is Pouf, the part Eddie Foy practically originated. Every member of this trio does well. Morgan does not have as many opportunities as he had in "The Tenderfoot," but he does not muff any that come his way. Mace shines brilliantly as Peter Poufle. Everyone was his friend last evening. The audience liked it when he sang "I'm the Ghost That Never Walked," with the aid of the Pony Ballet, and it found his tocipal song, "I'm So Happy" very enjoyable. Morgan and the Pony Ballet have a very enjoyable number in "Lutie" and Hornby sings "The Sunbeam and the Rose" very satisfactorily. The other songs which made hits last night were "The Goo Goo Tree," "Cordelia Malone," and "Dolly Dimples."

R. E. Graham enacts the role of the Melon, who seeks to wed his daughters and likewise himself, and Katheryn Ostefman, a leading light in farce when George Broadhurst was writing many of them and later a vaudevillian, plays the widow who is so anxious to have his plans succeed. Eveleen Dunmore has the only pretensious voice in the company and Lulu McConnell deserves special mention for the way in which she sings "Dolly Dimples."

The chorus is large and well drilled. Many of the numbers are staged with a Julian Mitchell excellence.

"Piff, Paff, Pouf" will close its engagement tonight.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal eventually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Members of union labor are welcoming back this week, Henry Perrault, predecessor of Joseph Shartel as president of the Trades assembly. Mr. Perrault has been in Winnipeg for the past seven months managing the cigarmaking business of L. Van Praagh, formerly of Duluth. Mr. Perrault says that Winnipeg is a fine town, but not quite in Duluth's class. He says that it is more expensive to live in than Duluth and has not the advantages of this city. Many points he found which leave the balance in favor of Duluth. Mr. Perrault says, for instance, that he paid $20 a month for a room which he could get in Duluth for from $8 to $10; paid 50 cents for 25-cent meals and every night after 11 o'clock it costs 10 cents to ride on street cars, with no car service on Sunday. Mr. Perrault has returned to Duluth to stay and will shortly choose one of two places that have been offered him. His return is welcomed both in labor and other circles. He was one of the most conscientious and fearless leaders in organized labor here, and his voice was always for moderation in action.

So far as strikes are concerned all is at peace. The last strike is that of the job printers and they feel that they are winning by degrees. The builders' laborer's strike on the contract of John Hilliard on the building at Fifteenth avenue west and Superior street did not last long, and last Monday morning the men went to work again, Mr. Hilliard having recognized their union.

* * *

A committee from the painters' union is investigating the charges made by Delegate C. M. Brandt of that union at the trades assembly meeting a week ago last night. Mr. Brandt charged unfair action by certain union officials in the recent election. Trouble is likely to arise out of this matter and the best of feeling does not prevail just now. The committee will likely report to its union next Tuesday evening.

* * *

Peter Nelson, treasurer of the trades assembly, has gone to Los Angeles, Cal., where he expects to reside in future. Mr. Nelson's health has not been of the best and he decided to seek recuperation and relief in a milder climate. Mr. Nelson belonged to the tailors' union.

A. Victor Johnson, for eighteen years in M. S. Burrows' store and until recently with the succeeding firm, the Columbia Clothing company, has resigned and is now on the road for the McMillan Pants company. Mr. Johnson has been a leading labor union man, was formerly a member of the city council from the Fifth ward, and has recently been talked of as a candidate for the Republican nomination for representative in the legislature from the Fiftieth district.

THE CELERRATED PROF. BENEDIKT

On Discovery of Bacillus of Paralysis and Spinal Disease.

Vienna, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Continental medical authorities continue to regard with skepticism the announcement of Dr. Ford Robertson, the learned Scotchman who claims to have discovered the bacillus of spinal disease and paralysis. Your correspondent had an interesting talk about the disease and the alleged discovery with Dr. Benedikt, the famous expert of the Vienna medical faculty, and professor of medicine.

"It is my firm belief that general paralysis and spinal disease are illnesses with which a person is born. At an earlier or later period in life they manifest themselves, according to circumstances and predisposition. As to Dr. Robertson's discovery, or alleged discovery, I take it to be due to autosuggestion borne of the present tendencies of medicine. Neither do I believe in the theory that mental paralysis is due to alcoholism, or certain nameless diseases. According to my studies and experiments, prosecuted for thirty years, such vices and illnesses hurry the disease in those predisposed to it, but do not bring it on.

"I have proved to the satisfaction of many of my English colleagues that the above is correct—and that the Russian Jews in London were my best witnesses. Paralysis, mental or physical, was at one time almost epidemic among these unfortunates, yet they suffered not from vices. The hardships they endured simply brought out their hereditary predisposition at an early date.

"Paralysis and spinal disease are increasing at a terrible rate, because the conditions of modern life are such as to bring out any hereditary disposition to these diseases. Telegraph, telephone, newspapers, etc., are keeping the people in a state of excitement that cannot fail to be nerve-wrecking. Again poverty is increasing, especially in England and the United States, where the good things of this world are monopolized by a favored few—diseases of degeneration flourish in the hotbeds made for them by man's greed and passion.

"The frequent wars are co-responsible. They provide excitement, both for combatants and non-combatants, and numerous soldiers return with a predisposition to spinal disease brought on by vicious living, abnormal exercise and great hardships. At a conservative estimate the battles of Manchuria, around Port Arthur and on the sea, must have predisposed 10,000 soldiers for mental paralysis, too.

"Heredity has much to do with paralysis and spinal disease, but I warn people against abject fright. Even heredity can be paralyzed by marriage, by breeding to good healthy stock.

"No, I do not believe in the paralysis bacillus, said to have been discovered by Dr. Robertson, but I do detest 'the medical bacillus' that sees bacilli everywhere. There are queer medical fads and fancies. Forty years ago all ills were due to heredity, next all were due to alcoholism and nameless diseases, next bacilli did all the tricks, and because there are bacilli, every disease due to bacilli was said to be contagious. This is all nonsense. For instance, cancer is due to a bacillus, but not contagious."

SENIORS HARD AT WORK REHEARSING PLAYS

"The Flying Wedge" and "The Elopement of Ellen" Are Titles of Pieces to be Given by Members of the High School Graduating Class.

By dint of the hardest kind of work rehearsing, the seniors expect to be able to present their annual plays on next Friday evening. Two plays will be presented and during the past week each has been rehearsed daily under the direction of Prof. Custance, who reports fine progress.

The plays themselves are said to be remarkably good, both as to comedy and in plot, and fully equalling any that have been given by former classes. "The Flying Wedge" is a farcical curtain-raiser in one act, dealing with college life. The scene is laid in the room of Tom Hurlbut, captain of the Yale football team, on the day of the Yale-Princeton game. Two young ladies, Nellie Suydam, Hurlbut's fiancee, and Kate Chester, engaged to Percy Suydam, Nellie's brother, are trying to find Suydam's rooms and by mistake get into Hurlbut's. They discover this fact only when they hear the boys returning from the game, and not having time to get out they hide.

Hurlbut and Suydam enter and some very interesting complications ensue, in which a very enterprising young female reporter and a maiden aunt of Suydam's play an important part. At the close of the scene, the girls are anxious to get out without the maiden aunt knowing that they were in Hurlbut's room, so Tom engrosses her attention in a ludicrous description of the flying wedge during which the girls escape.

Frank Crassweller will take the part of Tom Hurlbut, Benjamin Frink will be Percy Suydam, and Verner Claypool will take the part of another friend of the boys who accompanies the maiden aunt and assists materially in making Tom's description of the flying wedge a success. Miss Mabel Culkin will play the maiden aunt; Florence Bradley will take the part of Nellie Suydam, and Madge Millar will be her chum, Kate Chester. The role of the reporter will be well taken care of by Elsie Crassweller and Edna Ericson will play Mrs. O'Flynn, the janitress.

"The Elopement of Ellen" is a more pretentious piece, containing three scenes, and is more elaborate than any of the plays that the high school seniors have heretofore presented. The first act is in the breakfast room of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ford in the suburbs of New York. Mrs. Ford is busy setting the breakfast table. As she explains to her brother, Robert Shepard, her servant has eloped during the night with one of the neighbor's coachmen, and she has sent her husband to telephone to the employment office for a new maid. He returns presently, reporting that one would be sent up at once.

The new maid proves to be a Wellesley girl, June Hathaway, to whom Shepard had at one time paid serious attentions, and who is spending the summer studying the servant problem at close range. Shepard and June recognize each other, but conceal it from the rest of the family and hold their meetings secretly. Dorothy March, a young lady visiting Mrs. Ford, is engaged to Max Ten Eyck. The affair is not one of love, but has been arranged because Max's eccentric aunt willed $25,000 to each on the condition that they marry each other, and they consent to the engagement solely that they may not lose the inheritances.

When Max sees the new maid he recognizes her as a young lady to whom he has promised undying affection, and the situation is somewhat embarrassing. He and Dorothy agree to break off their engagement, but decide to keep it secret. Max intends to propose once more to June, but no sooner is the engagement broken than he realizes that it was really Dorothy whom he loved. In the meantime Dorothy has been receiving attentions from the Rev. John Hume, an eccentric clergyman who has difficulties with his speech. He writes to Dorothy a heart-rending appeal and Max finds it. It bears no address, and seeing the initials "J. H." at the bottom of the paper, he concluded that it is June Hathaway's reminder to him of his promises.

She soon disillusions him, however, much to his delight, and Dorothy, in order to escape from the attentions of the Rev. Mr. Hume tells him that she is engaged to Max. Max suggests that they make this statement true, and Dorothy confesses that she too had realized that she loved Max after their engagement was broken. June and Robert Shepard then announce their engagement, and the curtain falls on a crowd which is, with the exception of the Reverend Hume, very happy.

Ed Borgen will take the part of Richard Ford, and Ethel Ericson that of his wife. The part of her brother, Robert Shepard, will be played by Charles McFadden, and Charles McLennan will be Max Ten Eyck. Ethel Beckinger will be Dorothy March. Leila Sparks will take the part of June Hathaway, while Arthur Dunning will play the unfortunate rector.

STANDINGS ARE ANNOUNCED

Names of Students With the Best Marks Given Out.

At the senior class meeting held Wednesday afternoon, Principal Smith announced the list of the twelve students whose standing for the past three and a half years of their high school course is the highest in the class. They are as follows, the names being given in the order of their standings:

Ruth Ringsred,
Howard McAdams,
Charles McFadden,
Huldah Paulson,
Hazel Britts,
Sadie Stevens,
Amy Magnussen,
Ida Spence,
Frieda Bier,
Ruth Sahlberg,
Edna Ericson,
Ruby Harris.

Editor-in-Chief Dunning of the Zenith board spoke in behalf of the class department of the book, saying that the members of '06 had not been contributing as they should. President Borgen urged every member of the class to support the play by selling tickets, and Benjamin Frink reported $25 in the treasury.

High School Notes.

Work has been commenced on the lunch room in the basement. The room across from the football room is being remodelled and when finished the lunch room will resemble the one at the Y. W. C. A.

The first of a series of preliminaries for the debating team will be held Monday afternoon in the music room. Frank Boerner and Albert Bawden will uphold the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, That all elective city, county, district and state officers shall be nominated by direct ballot rather than by delegate convention," and Wallace Webster and Russel Briggs will take the negative. The club has decided not to debate with Virginia and to confine its efforts to defeating Blaine.

A Habit to Be Encouraged.

The mother who has acquired the habit of keeping on hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy saves herself a great amount of uneasiness and anxiety. Coughs, colds and croup, to which children are susceptible, are quickly cured by its use. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and if given as soon as the first symptoms of croup appear, it will prevent the attack. This remedy contains nothing injurious, and mothers give it to little ones with a feeling of perfect security. Sold by all druggists.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Weather Conditions Continue to Stimulate Seasonable Trade.

New York, Feb. 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Weather conditions have continued to stimulate retail trade in seasonable merchandise, part of the earlier unsatisfactory results being offset by a vigorous demand for winter clothing and footwear, while household consumption of fuel has revived retail stocks at the end of the season as was indicated by last month's business. Nor has the possibility of a strike unsettled confidence in the future, jobbing and wholesale sales of dry goods for the spring trade reaching a greater aggregate than last year, and collections are prompt in most instances. Manufacturers in most leading industries are falling further behind with deliveries, particularly in the steel business, while increased capacity has not kept pace with requirements, but reports from the woolen mills are irregular. As to foreign trade, preliminary statistics of exports in January fell short of the month preceding, but promise to surpass records for the corresponding month in previous years, while for the last week at this port exports were $2,911,396 larger than a year ago, but imports declined $1,741,889. Railroad earnings in the first week of February were 24.5 per cent larger than in the same week of 1905, but prices of securities were somewhat irregular because of the firmer money market and heavy new bond issues.

Domestic hides continue dull and weak. Leading Western packers ask prohibitive prices which curtails business, preferring to accumulate stocks rather than accept low bids made by tanners.

Failures this week number 241 in the United States, against 253 last year, and 33 in Canada, compared with 32 a year ago.

HANDSOME CLUBHOUSE ERECTED BY ELKS LODGE AT HANCOCK, MICH.

ELKS' CLUBHOUSE BEING ERECTED AT HANCOCK.

In November last year, Hancock Lodge, No. 381, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, let a contract for a new club house to cost when completed, about $50,000. Plans for the handsome structure were prepared by H. T. Liebert, architect, Hancock. A description of the building now in course of construction, and which will be completed July 1, next, is as follows:

The exterior of the building is designed in a plain imposing manner, using the Italian reannaisance in its details. Two different colors of brick will be used, a salmon body color with chocolate brick for trimming. Some Portage Entry sandstone will also be used for trimming. The main corner of the building is on a circular shape. The main outside entrance at the corner, to the buffet will be one of the most striking entrances in the Copper country, being on a circle, the superstructure being supported by two massive columns fourteen feet long. There will be an open lobby in the entrance provided with a tile floor with the letters B. P. O. E. inscribed in the tile.

The first floor will consist of a banquet hall, buffet, kitchen and one store room 25x75 feet. It is expected that the basement will be used for Turkish baths. The second floor will be used exclusively for club and lodge room purposes. The lodge room is 40x50 and is supplied with a good-sized stage. The club rooms consist of a large reception parlor 25x25, library 15x25, billiard room 15x30, small private dining room 15x15, and lunch room 20x30. In addition to this there will be a large cloak room for ladies, also one for gentlemen, property rooms, anterooms, etc.

The different rooms will be finished in different finishes of oak and are detailed to be strictly architecturally correct. For instance, the private dining room will be kept in Mission style, having a seven-foot wainscoting on the walls, surmounted by a plate shelf. The heavy oak timbers which divide the ceiling into panels will give a pleasing effect. It is intended to cover that portion of the walls which are not covered with wood, with leather in odd shades.

The library and lobby will be carried out on the English order in English stained oak. The rooms will also have a panel of wainscoting four feet high and panel wood beams on the with tapestry. The reception parlor will also be finished in oak and neatly decorated with stucco work at the ceiling. The billiard room as well as the remainder of the rooms on the second floor will be finished in oak in plain massive proportions.

Special features in the line of architectural wood effects will be the colonades between the billiard room and card room, also between the library and the reception parlor. The columns will be oak of Roman Ionic design, surmounted by richly carved caps. The electric and gas fixtures will be of the most modern designs of architecture to match that of the respective rooms.

The lodge hall will be specially well ventilated and lighted. There will be three large ornamental ceiling ventilators provided with electric fans, which can be operated by switches whenever necessary. The ceiling of the lodge hall is divided up by massive pilasters against the walls. The corners of the ceilings and walls will be rounded by large coves. A raised platform will extend around the entire hall for the seating of specially raised platform for the officers.

The hall will be provided with a highly polished hardwood floor, which can be used for dancing. All the windows in the lodge hall will be provided with beautiful art glass. The electric display in the hall will be a feature. Strings of lights will cover all the beams on the ceiling with neat clusters in the panels. There will also be gas brackets on the side walls, one at each pilaster. These brackets will be of Elks' design. A memorial tablet of art glass, illuminated from the rear will occupy a conspicuous place in the hall. A dumb waiter will connect the club room on the second floor.

The building will be equipped with electric bell service, speaking tubes and telephones. The hardware for the building, such as locks, etc., will be of the very best. The knobs on all the escutcheons are elaborated by bronze Elks' emblems. This will be furnished by the Kelly-How-Thomson company, Duluth.

Hancock lodge was organized July 12, 1897, with forty-four members. At present the total membership numbers 400. The officers, all but two of whom are shown in the cut, are as follows: Exalted ruler, Henry L. Baer; esteemed leading knight, W. I. McMaster; esteemed lecturing knight, Martin Foley; esteemed loyal knight, Ed H. Lee; secretary, Arthur Finley; treasurer, M. C. Getchell; chaplain, Rev. J. E. Curzon; inner guard, Charles Lewis; tyler, Louis Wilmot.

NEW SALT LAKE CITY IN JUTLAND

Ancient City is Fast Becoming a Stronghold of Mormonism.

Aalborg, Jutland, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—It will surprise Scandinavians in the United States to learn that our ancient city is fast becoming one of the strongholds of Mormonism. In this line we even rise superior to Copenhagen, which is always ready to accept strange and mysterious fads and fancies.

It wouldn't do to mention names, but the Salt Lake City missionaries are making many converts here and while Mormonism, for good and sufficient reasons, can never attain ascendency in Denmark, we are afraid that a number of well-to-do Aalborgers may feel called upon to emigrate to Utah or Mexico. Hence Danish patriots advise their friends in the United States to write to Danish relatives and acquaintances and newspapers, giving the true inside history of Mormonism in the United States, especially as to late legislative measures against the sect. Our Danish Mormons or would-be Mormons, may not be inclined to accept advice in the matter of their new religion, but when they are told that the government of the United States will not tolerate them, they may think twice, before putting absolute faith into the claims of the missionaries, a thing the latter demand above all.

So numerous have the Mormon missionaries become in Denmark, that they elected a president and that president told your correspondent that "no part of the world, comparatively speaking, yielded so many converts to the faith of the Latter Day Saints than the Limfjord City and district."

The authorities say that the sensual character of the people and it's hankering for mysticism have much to do with the matter, and point to the works of J. P. Jacobson, the Danish poet born in Aalborg, or at least reared there.

A Copenhagen bookseller told your correspondent that the number of books on Mormon topics sold in the last six months in Denmark is above eight thousand, while 50,000 Mormon leaflets, pamphlets, newspapers, etc., were distributed in this little kingdom.

As a result of the propaganda, the missionaries are said to have gathered in 150 converts, most of them well-to-do farmers, merchants and artisans.

The Mormons are holding regular meetings in many parts of the kingdom, their records show that 2,000 were held during the last six months. Furthermore they paid visits to farms and houses, trusting to their persuasive powers. Forty thousand such visits have been recorded during the time mentioned.

CHURCH MAY LOSE MANY ADHERENTS

Owing to the Attitude of the Clergy Regarding War.

Stockholm, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Lutheran church, which is the state church, is in imminent danger of losing many adherents here as well as in Norway, on account of the attitude of the clergy, which refuses to fall in with the tendency of the times as far as it purports to abolish war and to submit international differences to arbitration. Since lasting peace was established with Norway, the previous endeavors of a large part of the Lutheran clergy, both in Sweden and Norway, advocating war between the two countries, has been the subject of much public discussion, and while religious people are inclined to merely disavow the military parsons, the freethinkers turn their bellicose attitude in a quarry for their agitation against the church. The most extraordinary case of "military parsonship," often cited in the public press, is that of the Stockholm pastor Heuman. Heuman delivered himself of a sermon during the crisis, when war and peace between Sweden and Norway hung in the balance, in which he charged the government with treachery for not "hanging the Norwegian revolutionists to trees." Instead of "palavering with them," said the warlike pastor, "the Swedish army should march into Norway and kill some ten thousand of these rioters—that would teach them a lesson in obedience for the future."

At the same time this parson assailed King Oscar for his peaceful disposition, and advised the hanging of all Socialists.

The minister of justice put Heuman on trial, charging him with disturbing the peace, but a jury, carefully selected with respect to their religious tendencies, declared him "not guilty." That lets out Heuman, but the Lutheran church will have to pay the bill.

ORIGIN OF THE HABIT

Of Drinking to One's Health Told by an Ambassador.

Copenhagen, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the state banquet given in honor of the new king, the British ambassador told an interesting story concerning the habit of "drinking to one's health."

It's an English habit, "due to a certain bad Danish habit."

The ambassador told the following interesting story: "Many hundred years ago when the warlike Danes made themselves masters of England, some of the chiefs endeavored to improve the fortunes of war by assassination. It happened that a number of Englishmen were slain by them in the course of banquets and drinking bouts, to which both Danes and English were addicted.

"As a consequence the English bethought themselves of a means of protection and this was the understanding arrived at:

"When an Englishman at a banquet attended by Danes, desired to empty one of those big drinking horns—the process required considerable labor and attention—he called on one of his compatriots. When he said to him: 'To your health,' at the same time raising his drinking horn, the latter understood that he was to guard his friend and protect him against the treacherous Danes, while absorbed in finding the bottom of the horn. That accomplished, the drinker did as much for the person who had protected him, and in this way the English succeeded in obtaining their tipple without endangering their lives.

"To your health then has a real, historical meaning."

GERMAN CHANCELLOR

Said to Have Many Relatives in Norway and Sweden.

Copenhagen, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Five Danish and seven Swedish Bulows attended the "family day" of the noble house at Berlin some days ago, which recalls the fact that the Bulows are among the oldest families in the Scandinavian countries, as well as in different parts of Germany. A Bulow is mentioned in Danish chronicles as early as the year 1100, lyong before any of the royal families now ruling in Europe were thought of, and there is small doubt that the escutcheon of the family, fourteen golden balls in a blue field, was granted by a Danish king.

LEPERS IN NORWAY.

Five Hundred of the Unfortunates at the Present Time.

Christiania, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—There are 500 known lepers in Norway. Fifty years ago 3,000 of these unfortunates were counted. That the government was unable to stamp out the disease in fifty years is due to the fact that it refuses to absolutely isolate lepers. Only the most dangerous cases are isolated, while others are allowed to come in contact with people and infect them.

TUBERCULOSIS IN SWEDEN.

Disease Has Declined 38 Per Cent in Stockholm Since 1886.

Stockholm, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city of Stockholm is maintaining in its hospitals 410 consumptives, a large percentage for a city of 360,000 inhabitants. But as Prof. Kosh pointed out in a recent lecture, "it pays," because public health is greatly benefited. The sanitary department of Stockholm proposes to give an asylum, in its hospitals, as far as room permits, to all pauper patients in the last stages of consumption. During that period consumptives become most dangerous to their families and friends; they even become a menace to the persons living after them in the house they inhabit. For that reason the sanitary department has instructed physicians to inform it when a party is dying of consumption, and whenever possible, the sick person will be removed to a hospital and made comfortable for the rest of his, or her, life.

In consequence of these precautions, the decrease in consumption has been very remarkable in Stockholm. Compared with the figures of twenty years ago, Stockholm has now 38 per cent less consumptives than in 1886.

It is, therefore, not a matter of charity only when Stockholm hospitals can proudly point to the fact that, unlike others, they never refuse to receive a consumptive case. They always have room for these unfortunates and public health is the gainer.

IMPORTANT ELECTIONS

Are to Take Place in Denmark During Month of March.

Copenhagen, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Politics is the order of the day, and the newspapers are filled with pros and cons, respecting candidates—almost like American newspapers before election day. The most important elections are to happen in March, namely the municipal elections of Copenhagen, followed by the general Folkethings elections, the Landsthings elections, elections of tax assessors and elections of rural elders.

"The governmental press and the papers serving special interests are warning the public against the Socialist bugbear and cite the case of the Land of Laaland as a horrible example. Laaland elected the straight Socialist ticket against the united parties, Conservatives, Moderates, Liberals and anti-Socialists. All these parties together obtained but 501 votes against nearly 700 votes of the eight Socialist candidates, though 80 per cent of all persons entitled to vote did vote. Five years ago the Conservative parties triumphed with 500 majority—the governmental and special interest papers are sorry to say so, "but the people must be forewarned that the Socialists are gaining in strength while the other parties lose steadily."

IBSEN'S BAD ATTACKS

Said to be Hovering at Brink of the Grave.

Christiania, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Everyone is talking of the vitality of old Ibsen, who seems to have made up his mind not to die, and by sheer will power succeeds in hanging on to life. In late weeks the old poet had several bad attacks, but again weathered the storm like the old Norseman he is.

SOCIALISTS GAIN

Considerably in the Elections in the Danish Municipalities.

Copenhagen, Feb. 17.—Special to The Herald.)—The new king faces a strong socialist phalanx not only in parliament, but in the municipalities of the kingdom likewise the Socialists gained considerably in the provincial elections, the small cities and towns and villages, showing that the peasants are adopting the Socialist faith more and more. All told, 417 aldermen were to be elected, of that number, the Socialists captured 155 in fifty different towns; the Radicals got eighty and the mixed parties 152. The last before this election placed Socialists only in twenty-five towns, the number of Socialist aldermen chosen being fifty-six; at the aldermens' election of 1894 only ten Socialists were elected in eight towns. That shows the tremendous growth of Socialism. There is hardly a small town in Denmark today that has not one or more Socialist aldermen.

SHAH OF PERSIA

Writes That He Will Protect Sven Hedin, the Explorer.

Stockholm, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The shah of Persia has addressed a letter to King Oscar, promising to extend his protection to Sven Hedin, the explorer, while on Persian soil. The shah has issued orders to all provincial authorities to aid the explorer in every possible way and to guard his life and property against robbers. This is particularly important, since Sven Hedin proposes to travel through the deserts of Gedrosia, some of which have never been trod by a white man's foot. Sven Hedin writes from Teheran that he expects to be gone eighteen months. Tibet and India are to be has quarry this time.

ABOLITION

Of Trial by Jury is Being Agitated in Prussia.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Reading between the lines of the official press reveals the fact that the government is behind the agitation for the abolition of trial by jury in Prussia. "Lay judges," we are told, "make nothing but mistakes, and the Assizes must be abolished, giving professional jurists the exclusive right to decide in criminal matters." The official press denies that professional jurists are liable to make mistakes as well as lay judges, and insists that "the people enjoy enough rights in the government anyhow and that of judging their peers should be taken away from them."

In this connection a sentence delivered by five judges in Kottbus is interesting. These professional jurists sat in judgment of a railway station master, accused of having through drunkenness and negligence caused a railway wreck attended by great loss of life.

These were the facts. The station master, Stuligys, confessed that he had spent the night and morning preceding the wrecking of the train, due to his negligence, in company of two other men, while between them they drank up the following quantities of liquor: Six bottles of wine at supper, fifty glasses of beer, four bottles of wine, bottle of champagne and six rounds of cognacs. When the station master entered up on his duties, so many reliable witnesses testified, "he swayed to the right and left, had lost the use of his limbs, and fell upon several people." Yet the professional judges decided that he was "not drunk" and must be punished for the awful loss of life caused by him. This, despite the general agitation for banishing alcoholism, from the railway service.

Bill Bowden, A. B. Sees Things

Dips Into the Occult and Discusses Ghostly Warnings.

By Walter Hackett.

This is the report of the investigations of "Bill" Bowden, A. B., as to the truths of certain occult phenomena. Those who know Mr. Bowden, and a hospitable nature demonstrated by the frequent purchase of liquid refreshment is all that is necessary as an introduction, are well aware that he is a firm believer in the supernatural. It is difficult to see how he could be otherwise, since it has been his frequent privilege to meet and talk with visitants from the world of shadows. Indeed, never has he approached a great crisis in his life—a shipwreck, a new wife oh a friend who wished to borrow money—but what some philanthropic ghost has warned him of the threatened dangers. We have his own word for it that had he heeded these warnings he long ago would have attained the command of a vessel and gained for himself immortal fame as the bloodiest pirate in history,

The report was delivered to the assembled mariners in the Bell Buoy saloon, and particularly to the bo'sun of the Marcus Hyde, who, being far gone in his cups, had presumed to make light of the heavy gloom in which Mr. Bowden had enshrouded himself.

"You'd feel like wot I do," returned that galiant sailorman, breathing with considerable difficulty, "if you had a-seed wot I seed last night."

The bo'sun's air at once became as solemn as Mr. Bowden's.

"They ain't gone an' closed up any more saloons, has they?" he inquired with marked trepidation.

"Do you know wot it were that I seed?" continued Mr. Bowden, ignoring utterly the query of the anxious bo'sun; "it were a ghost wot I seed."

A perceptible shiver ran about the room. Several of the mariners looked apprehensively over their shoulders.

"An' wot do yo usuppose happened?" contolnued Mr. Bowden, now thoroughly in his element. "The ghost give me a warnin'. I is goin' to get married again, an' wot is wuss, I is goin' to get married permanent."

Only One Unmoved.

Mr. Bowden paused impressively and gazed about the room at the blanched faces and staring eyes of the appalled men who listened to the dread fate in store for him. Only the bo'sun, whom liquor had made brave, remained unmoved.

"These here ghosts wot you sees," he remarked lightly, "is only mince pie or plum duff or Bombay duck now an' then."

"You think so, does you?" replied Mr. Bowden, with astonishing calm. "Well, I thought so once, but I were converted, same as you'll be, pore onfortoonit onbeliever. It happens this way. I were a hand on the ship Lizzie McAllister, of Portland, Maine, on a w'yage from Salem to Liverpool an' return. At Liverpool one o' the crew desarts an' we ships a new hand. He are a pale, thin feller, with long hair an' more different cuss words than any man I ever seen—me that has sailed all around the world an' under an' above, so to speak. Natcherly this makes him most popular with the crew, an' he are not aboard over twenty four hours afore he larns the marster's secret. That are that he are a practis'n spiritoolist.

"He have not allus been such, havin' started out in life as a non-church goin' Presbyterian, but were converted by a pore relation, wich are the meanest o' Gawd's critters. Ten years afore, havin' accoomolated a fortin out o' the slop chest an' wot his owners didn't get, it doin' 'em no harm, as they never knowed nothin' about it, he retires from the sea, an' settles down quiet like at Chatham preparin' to keep busy tellin' people how the polyticians ought to run the gov'ment if they want to keep out o' trouble and expectin' to get married every now an' then, when they is nothin' else to occoopy his mind.

Well, he ain't no more than got his house fitted up all ship shape and proper like, wich he does by placing a old cannon and a flag mast in front o' the door an' a barometer just inside, when a stranger boards him. It are the pore relation, that bein' the fust time that he and the marster's second cousin by marriage with his third wife, an' he brings with him his chest an' a appetite wich the marster said were the most remarkable hever seed, barrin' that o' a cannibal king wich once held him a captive in the Solomon Islands, who, when he were preparin' to eat him, ordered the cook to roast him, takin' speshal care he were not too well done.

This feller—his name were Sam Chase—said that it were Gawd's providence that the marster had made enough to keep 'em both from workin' such things bein' only fitten for the lower clarasses an sich, an' says for the marster not to worry none about him, as he are sure that he will be right comfortable like, so to speak, for the rest o' his life. Natcherly this didn't soot the marster any too well, but he had to stand it, there bein' nothin' else to do. Still is worried him like till he got longin' for a fight. There were no use tryin' to pick one with Sam, he were too ca'm an' peaceful, so he does the sensible thing an' decides to get married.

He Sat Up With Them.

Sam he carried on something awful when the marster told him wot he were a-goin' to do. He said that he had never heerd o' sich selfishness in his life, an' if he didn't promise not to break up the peace o' their little home by bringin' into it women the disturber, he'd up an' leave. This jest sooted the marster, so he begins sittin' up with every onmarried woman in the neighborhood, goin' so far even as to include some o' those as is still married, but has hopes, their husbands bein' sickly like.

Natcherly that made this here Sam Chase desperit. It looked like they were nothin' left for him to do but go to work, which he knowed would kill him, he havin' a college edoocation. So he figgers around tryin' to think o' some way to stop the marster, wich is most foolish, as no man ought to fool with a love affair onless he are one o' the stricken parties, an' seldom then, but when a non-combatant, so to speak, interferers, then it's to his house trouble, as the fortin' tellers say. But that didn't stop Sam. On the surface he ca'med down, however, an' listened very interested like while the marster told him how the gals fell for him easier than a man that are overloaded with rum falls over a shadow. But as soon as the marster finishes, Sam up an' goes an' sees the gals himself, an' praises the marster to 'em something wonderful like, sayin' that it jest natcherly breaks his heart to think such a good man should be only with 'em in sections, so to speak.

In course, wimmen bein' cur'us like, allus asked wot he meant by that. When they done so, he'd look startled like an' say, "Wot," he'd say, "hasn't you noticed that one o' his eyes is a glarss one an' his nigh hind leg are cork? Oh," he'd say, "if I'd a thought you hadn't a-knowed that I'd a never spoke o' it." Then he'd bust into tears an' go away, leavin' the woman high an' dry, like a schooner wot are washed ashore by a tidal wave.

Nowadays they ain't no woman as wants to get married 'cept by way o' experiment, an' it stands to reason they ain't no interest in experimentin' with damaged goods, so when the marster would turn up agin to see 'em they presses his hand very sympathetic like an' says that he mustn't come around no more, as the neighbors, wich is low-minded people an' too fond o' gossipin', is a-talkin' about 'em. Well, when all o' the wimmen had done this to the marster he began to think they was something wrong, though he were not sure, he havin' been married a right fair number o' times an' knowin' that they ain't no way o' tellin' afore hand jest wot a woman will do, though if you do do so you can know that she won't. But when he does find out wot the trouble is, through Sam eatin' two plates of flapjacks wot he had cooked hisself, an' talkin' in his sleep, he gets the power an' throws Sam out o' the house with nothin' on him but a charm to keep away the rheumatics, an' then throws his chest out after him. Natcherly, Sam objected, but that didn't make no difference to the marster. Sam finds this out when he gets kicked four times hard runnin', mostly amidships. Then he said as how he intended to get even with the marster by dyin'. The marster said to go ahead, an' Sam done so, choosin' pneumonia, an' bein' berried in the potter's field.

He Cried Conspicuous.

The marster were at the funeral an' cried very conspicuous like, feelin' that that were the proper thing to do, but arter it are over he goes around an' calls on the wimmen, an' takin' 'em out in the front yard, hops fust on one foot an' then on the other to show 'em he is whole, arter w'ich he cries, fust openin' one eyelid an' then the other, w'ich proves they is as good as new, that is as far as wimmen are concerned, the only use they havin' for eyes bein' to cry with 'em. Well, this puts him back into the marryin' class, an' all is happy an' serene, so to speak, until the followin' Toosday, when he is a-sittin' up with Mrs. O-Be-Joyful Jenkins, a widder woman, who showed signs of forgettin, man's inhumanity to wimmen an' givin' the marster a trial. Bust just as he were about to pop the question, w'ich he allus does on grabbin' a-holt o' the party, an' a-bu'stin' into tears, that way havin' proved most successful, they hears the sound o' chains, an' in walks Sam's ghost, an', sittin' down by the fire right comfortable like, he says, very severe, too, he says, "Cork leg, and glarss eye," he says.

Natcherly that don't please the marster none, an' Mrs. O-Be-Joyful has wot is called a coniption fit, w'ich is how wimmen as doesn't know how to cuss cusses.

The marster he orders the ghost to go away back to the graveyard, where he belong—very stern an' impressive, too, he is as he orders him, but the ghost don't pay no attention to him an' jest rattles his chains an' says, "Cork leg an' glarss eye." Every time he speaks up Mrs. O-Be-Joyful hollers louder than ever. This makes the marster very angry an' he runs over an' tries to hit the ghost, but fails, as there ain't nothin' about a ghost you can hit, so all he manages to do is to smash his hand on the back o' the chair, w'ich makes him yell louder than the woman. When he ca'ms down he tells the woman not to mind the ghost, but she bein' obstinate, like all wimmen, insists on doin' so. This makes the marster plumb discouraged, so he goes home, the ghost a-waulkin' part o' the way with him, a-chucklin' to hisself an' a-sayin' over an' over, "Cork leg an' glarss eye," as though they saw something funny about it.

Well, this goes on for six months. Everwhere the marster goes along goes the ghost with him, a-worritin' an' a-disturbin' everybody with his chains an' his jokes, till at last they tells the marster that he are allus welcome hisself, but his friends are not, an' please not to bring any o' 'em along onless they is invited speshal. The marster he grows thin an' pale as a man wot have lost a pet dog, not knowin' how to rid hisself o' the pesky critter, till one day a summer boarder tells him to send for one o' these here corporation lawyers wot keeps millionaires out o' jail when the officeholders wants to put 'em in the last two weeks afore election. The marster arsks if this here lawyer has any experience with ghosts, an' the feller says he reckon that he has, as all corporation lawyers is experts at tellin' ghost stories. So the marster sends for one an' lays the case afore him.

Simple, Says the Lawyer.

The lawyer he says that that are a very simple case. All they got to do is to give the ghost knockout drops an' have him shanghaied on some vessel wot wer goin' on a long v'yage. He can never find his way back, the lawyer says, as no ghost could ever tell where he was buried by readin' wot his relatives put on his tombstone, it bein' so different to wot they said about him when he were alive.

Well, the marster takes the lawyer's advice, an' gets a couple o' sailormen to come to dinner with him an' the lawyer. In coorse, the ghost shows up an' they gives him so much liquor that he falls asleep. When he done so the sailors picks him up an' carries him out to a ship wot is jest settin' sail, an' that's the larst the marster ever sees o' him. He thinks then that his troubles is over, but they ain't, for when he arsks the corporation lawyer for his bill, the feller says, very pleasant like, too, he says, "I'll take all you got," he says, an' done so. So the marster has to go to sea ag'in, which is how he is in command o' the Lizzie McAllister.

Well, when the new hand wot we ships at Liverpool hears all this he says as wot he is a spiritoolist, too, an' he goes an' tells the marster so, wich he pleases him that he promotes him to be a passenger, a-leavin' the crew shorthanded. The passenger says he thinks as how it would be a noble thing to convert the crew to the glorious belief, wich the marster thinks a grand idea, an' he an' the pale feller holds sperience meetin's on deck every afternoon for those as ain't on watch, the marster keepin' us all awake he bein' a expert shot with a Spencan shooter.

The passenger is allus makin' speeches an' a-callin' us pore unfortoonit critters, wich makes us all feel most onpleasant like, not bein' sure whether its true or not. He tells us a lot o' other things an' one day, bein' considerable worked up, he says they ain't no such a thing as death, an' he fust made a fool o' hisself a dreadful time keepin' the vessel shipshape, all of us hands bein' so busy attendin' meetin's, calls the feller a liar an' says that if they ain't no death all the fellers wot run the cemeteries is a runnin' bunco steerin' games. The passenger don't pay no attention to the fust mate wich riled him most awful, an' goes right on sayin' they ain't no death. The mate says then the feller has got to prove it to him an' he will be converted, an' the feller says he will do so, an' he promises that when we gets home to Salem he will go out to the berryin' ground an' raise a few o' them as has passed away.

We couldn't hardly wait to get ashore an' see it done, an' it seemed that that v'yage were never gonin' to an end. It did, though, an' the day arter we makes port we starts out to the berryin' ground, everybody in town goin' along with us, they all havin' heerd o' wot was a-goin' to happen. The marster an' the passenger an' the fust mate goes on ahead, walkin' very impressive like, as everybody is a-lookin' at 'em. When all o' us reached the berryin' ground the passenger stops up to a grave wot has a tombstun w'ich says, "Sacred to the memory of Sarah Burns. Erected by her inconsolable husband. Gone, but not forgotten." I shall raise this pusson fust, he says; for no onbeliefin' fust mate's fust wife, he says. The fust mate he grows pale an' steps forward very quick. No, he says, don't do that, he says. She had the asthmy very bad, he says, an' suffered from it dreadful, he says. It wouldn't be right to make her go through it ag'in, he says. Besides, he says, I am married ag'in, he says, an' I'm afeard my wives wouldn't get along well, he says.

Pore Feller, He Says.

"Very well," says the passenger, "we will go on to the next," he says, an' he walks over to a tombstun, which says, "To the memory of Richard Slnk, from his brother, Henry Slnk, who will always mourn his loss. A brother's love passeth all these." "Now," says the passenger, "we will restore Richard to Henery." "Hold fast," says Henery, who was in the crowd. "Hold fast," he says. "He left me his p'perty when he died," he says, "an' I can't afford to give it back to him," he says, "with hard times on us now the way they is," he says, "an' besides," he says, "he were most onhappy, cause his wife died afore him," he says. "an' they ain't no way o' bringin' her back, she havin' been blowed up by a dynamite explosion," he says. "Don't bring Richard back to mournin' hopelessly for her," he says. "Pore feller," he says.

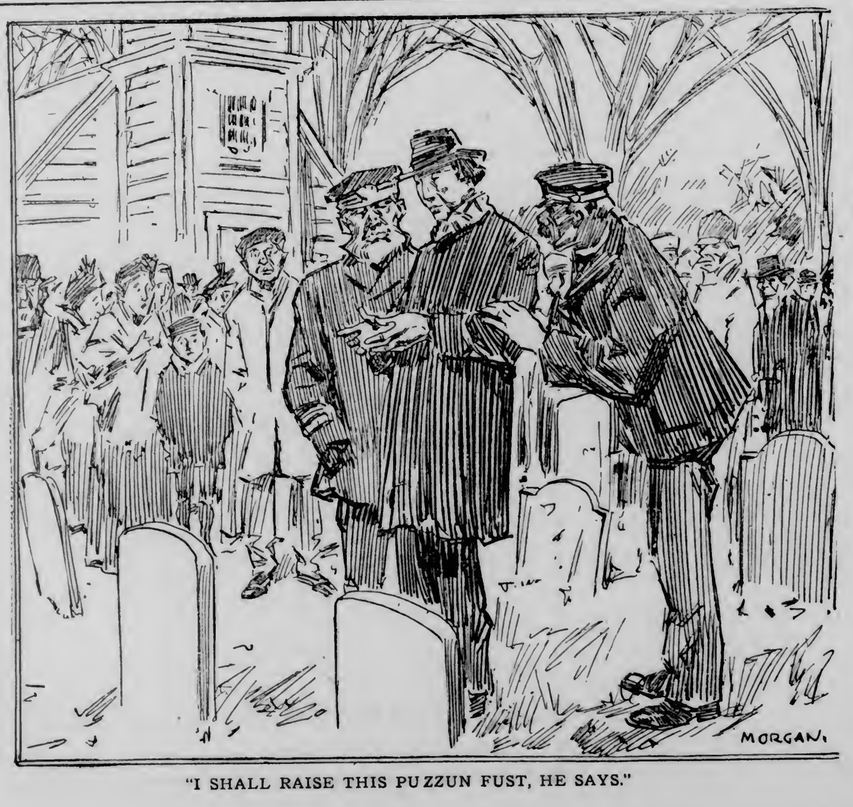

"We will let Richard sleep, then," says the passenger, "an' go on to the next," he says, an' he stops at a tombstun, which says, "John Hunter, good husband and kind father." "Let us raise John," he says. "If you do," says a woman in the crowd, "I'll raise something with you," she says. "He were my husband," she says, "an' he never did a day's work in his life," she says. "He were allus drunk an' beatin' me an' the children," she says. "Don't you dare for to bring him back," she says.

Well that were the way with all o' 'em. We went all through the cemetery, but the relatives allus had a good reason for not havin' their kin come back to 'em. At last we come to a little child's grave, the only one left in the berryin' ground, he didn't have no tombstun or nothin' to mark it—just a little mound o' round earth. The passenger he stops there. "No one," he says, "will object," he says, "if we raise this baby" he says. He aint no more'n got the word out o' his mouth when a pore thin gal, a factory hand she were, broke through the crowd an' flung herself on the grave cryin' fit to kill herself. "Oh, sir," she says "don't go an' bring him back," she says "to learn that his life were his mother's shame," she says, "for Gawd's sake don't bring him back to share my sin an' sufferin'," she says; "though I long for him night and day for Gawds sayke don't bring him back," she says, "my little boy, my baby boy," she says, an' we all turned away an' left her there a-sobbin'.

Now, that's why I lives in ghosts when I sees 'em, an' when one o' 'em tells me I is to be married permanent. I know it's so, an', what is more, I know that to get married permanent is a sign o' bad luck.

"IT WERE A GHOST WOT I SEED."

"I SHALL RAISE THIS PUZZUN FUST, HE SAYS."

IN THE LITERARY WORLD

"On the Field of Glory," by Henryk Sienkiewicz—"Forty Years an Advertising Agent," by George P. Rowell—"The Sage Brush Parson," by A. B. Ward—"Who's Who in America."

"On the Field of Glory" is a new novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz, the brilliant Polish author, and a new book by the author of "Quo Vadis" and "The Trilogy" of Polish historical novels is a literary event. The book is translated by Jeremiah Curtin, who translated the other Sienkiewicz novels, and to whose skill much of their success in this country is due.

While most readers will remember this Polish author only as the writer of "Quo Vadis," a brilliant novel whose sale has not been equalled by any modern work of fiction, those who have read the three novels composing "The Trilogy" have had the deepest insight into his positive genius, and are in a position to appreciate the fact that he ranks as one of the world's greatest novelists, if he is not quite the supreme genius. "The Deluge," "With Fire and Sword" and "Pan Michael" are thrilling novels of Polish history, rich, ripe romances full of pictures of human character that approach the art of the world's masters. Sienkiewicz has recently been awarded the Nobel literary prize of nearly $40,000.

The new novel is another dip into the romantic history of Poland, during the period of the reign of the famous King John Sobieski, just before the Turkish invasion of 1682 and 1683. In many respects the work is an advance upon all predecessors, and shows a riper genius and a broader grasp of humanity. As his habit is, the story itself is strong, compelling, and pulsing with real life and absorbing action. The drawing of characters is distinctly brilliant and masterful.

Sienkiewicz is a patriot, and his historical novels, all of which deal with a time when Poland was a strong, forceful nation among nations, are calculated to keep alive in his countrymen the spirit of independence that its partition and subjection to other nations might tend to crush. The new book deals with a period in Polish history when Poland's military glory was at its zenith. While such a purpose is nowhere expressed in the book, it would not be at all surprising if it proved to be the initial volume of another historical series, since its scenes are laid at the beginning of a period full of possibilities of this sort. There is a group of character as instinct with life and reality as the memorable figures of "The Trilogy," and showing marked gains in the skill of character painting. This group might be carried forward into volumes with great success and to the delight of the reading public.

The story deals with the life of the country nobles on their remote estates in the later years of the seventeenth century. King John Sobieski, for his valor and military genius in forcing the Turks back, had been hailed as the savior of Christendom. In the beginning Pan Gideon, an old noble, with his retainers, his ward and the elderly relative who manages his household, are traveling through the forests, in danger of being attacked by bands of wolves. A party of hunters, led by some young nobles from a nearby estate, rescues the party. The hero of the tale is a young and poor noble, who joins the party next day, and who is in love with the ward of Pan Gideon. There is a touch of the thrilling romance of Dumas, the elder, in the series of duels who are fought over the beautiful heroine, the young hero overcoming five nobles in succession. This is followed by a warm friendship among these young men, and when later the hero starts for the wars, the five young men who had been his opponents follows him.

It is an unusually brilliant, absorbing and charming romance, with a touch of real genius that argues for permanency in its success. The publishers are Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

"Forty Years an Advertising Agent," by George P. Rowell, the veteran advertising man, may appeal by its title only to those associated, on one side or another, with advertising. But its contents will appeal to anybody who likes to hear of the beginnings of things that have grown familiar by constant association, and the book is full of entertainment for everybody. Mr. Rowell began the advertising business forty years ago, and his experience is ripe and full of interest. His work brought him into close association with publishers during all these years, and there are many interesting sidelights on public events, regarding which the author takes his readers into his confidence.

To newspaper men, merchants, and others associated with advertising, the book will appeal as the first and most complete history of American advertising, a subject that is full of romance, instruction and interest. To others, who may not have the slightest interest in the subject of advertising, there is a wealth of incidents and stories of other days that will not fail to assure the book a careful reading from start to finish. It is more than a history of advertising. It is the story of a long, vigorous and active life, which brought its author in touch with the affairs of men over an uncommonly broad field, told most interestingly. It is published by the Printers Ink Publishing company, 10 Spruce street, New York.

"The Sage Brush Parson," by A. B. Ward, is a powerful, realistic novel of the great West, depicting the unconventional life in the sage brush wastes of Nevada. The characters are all distinctly marked, the hero, Clement Vaughan, an Englishman, being particularly striking. Filled with a great enthusiasm for saving souls, Vaughan works zealously among the rough miners of a little Nevada town. The denouement of the novel is vividly unfolded. Those who know anything about the little mining town of Eureka, Nev., will recognize many familiar features in the book. The names of the streets are retained, some local celebrities appear, among them Jack Perry, trhe famous saloonkeeper and sheriff, who plays an important part. "The Sage Brush Parson" is fiction, but fiction with a basis of fact which gives it verisimilitude. The atmosphere of the sage brush waste permeates the story, while the author's sense of humor, apparent throughout the book, contributes greatly to the reader's enjoyment. Published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

The fourth biennial edition of "Who's Who in America," has just been issued by A. N. Marquis & Co. of Chicago. As a biographical directory of notable living men and women of the United States it holds first rank. The present volume, while no more bortly than its predecessor, contains 346 more pages and has life sketches of 16,216 men and women. There were 1,013 names eliminated from this volume which appeared in the previous ones, of whom 752 are known to have died and 261 have been dropped for various reasons. It is claimed that the publication has now reached a stage of such completeness in selection that very few Americans of the very highest rank of prominence will be missed fgrom its arroy of notables. "They are selected out of the 80,000,000 not as the best," say the editors, "but as an attempt to choose the best known, and it is believed that the present volume achieves the purpose to present a useful biographical dictionary of notable men and women of the United States, whether residing in America or in any other part of the world."

The chief feature in which this volume excels all its predecessors is the more complete balance established between the various classes of notables. In the present volume commercial, financial and industrial classes are as well represented as literary, official and professional. It is a fact that more than four times as many names were recommended as could be admitted. Yet exclusion has occurred only after careful judgment. Many very young men have had their names added to this volume who were mere boys when the first volume appeared. The patriarch of the volume is Charles Haynes Haswell, who was born in 1809 and is a distinguished civil engineer.

Although the publishers of E. Phillips Oppenheim's new novel, "A Maker of History," printed a first edition of the book as large as the combined editions of any one of his previous novels, heavy reorders from booksellers necessitated a second printing almost immediately. In "A Maker of History," this favorite English novelist has scored his greatest success and many of the critics agree that it is his best story thus far.

John Lane company issues from the Bodley Head a new volume by Vernon Lee, entitled "The Spirit of Rome." The author of "The Enchanted Woods" writes of the many treasures and points of interest in Rome in her characteristic style. The matter is arranged as notes of travel at different seasons for the last ten years. "I was brought up in Rome," the author writes in an "explanatory and apologetic" foreword, "from the age of twelve to that of seventeen, but did not return there for many years afterwards. I discovered it anew for myself, while knowing all its sites and its details; discovered, that is to say, its meaning to my thoughts and feelings. And the value of these notes to those who love Rome or are capable of loving it, is that they express, in however stammering a manner, what I said to myself about Rome; or, perhaps, if the phrase is not presumptuous, what Rome, day after day and year after year, has said to me."

A Byron novel of a different character from those written of late is "Maid of Athens" by Lafayette McLaws, which Little, Brown & Co., will soon publish. In this new romance the author deals with the love of Byron for Thyrza, the Maid of Athens, to whom he wrote immortal verse and whom the author portrays him wooing with abandon and disregard of danger. The author, Lafayette McLaws, is best known by her novel "When the Land Was Young," a romance of the days when buccaneers sailed the Spanish main.

Doubleday, Page & Co. announce Lady Henry Somerset's novel, "Under the Arch," for publication on March 3. It is a strong novel of modern London, by an author who is quite familiar with the smart social set (striving to live down to the dictates of "The Simple Life" which was the vogue when the book was written) as with the poor wretches of the great city's "submerged tenth." It is said to have many of the healthy virtues which are associated with the so-called old-fashioned novel," though there is no lack of up-to-dateness in the scenes it presents.

The Harpers are reprinting this week their fine set of Mark Twain's complete works, known as the Hillcrest edition. This edition, which is the one authorized by the great humorist himself, contains twenty-three volumes, a special feature being the series of photogravure portraits of the author, taken at periods when the different volumes were being written. Many illustrations by well-known artists and a biographical criticism of Mark Twain and his work by Brander Matthews, as well as the finest of pressWork, make this a notable edition.

Fresh air, carefully regulated exercise and nourishing food are now generally accepted as the three fundamentals in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis or consumption. The work being done along these lines at the Massachusetts state sanitarium is told of by Dr. Henry B. Dunham, assistant resident physician, in an interesting article in the February number of Journal of Outdoor Life, published at Trudeau in the Adirondack mountains. Dr. Dunham describes the daily life of the 375 patients at Rutland, telling just what they are permitted to do and what they are not permitted to do. The article is well illustrated. Other features of the February number of Journal of Outdoor Life are "The Home Sanitarium, a Successful Method of Treating Pulmonary Tuberculosis," by Dr. Joseph H. Pratt of Boston; "Diet in Tuberculosis," and "Proper Homes and How to Live in Them."

"The Town Room in Boston," "Wall Papers" by Eliza Codd, "A Step Forward in School Decoration," "A $4,500 Cottage," "A Third-Story Sun Parlor," are among others which show the reader many paths he may follow to improve his surroundings, whether indoors or out.

The New England for February contains articles of especially vital interest to the New Englander—able discussions of subjects that affect Yankeeland and through it, the larger world—and bright stories and verse. "The Newfoundland Side of the Fisheries Question" is presented by P. T. McGrath, editor of the St. John's, Newfoundland, Herald, and a man of judgment and keen insight. Commanding facts of the long history of the dispute are brought forth. The reader of this clear article will feel that he has himself been on the ground and been personally enlightened. On the other hand, Thomas J. Partridge in "The Recapture of the E. A. Horton" relates the American sea-captain's side of the same dispute. He tells the true story of a captain, who by strategem recaptures his vessel, which has been taken prisoner by British subjects, and sails it back to the welcome harbor of Gloucester.

AT THE LYCEUM

Grace George in "The Marriage of William Ashe" on Monday, Allen Doone in "Kerry Gow" on Wednesday and Thursday, and Louis James in "Richelieu," "Ingomar" and "Virginius" on Friday and Saturday.

One of the most striking dramatic sensations of the season, up to this time, has been the production of the stage version of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's successful novel, "The Marriage of William Ashe," in which Grace George is to appear at the Lyceum, Monday evening.

For its strongly sustained interest, its convincing air of reality, its delineations of character and passions, and its artistic development of plot, "The Marriage of William Ashe" is certainly a great achievement.

The central situation is the effect upon the political career of William Ashe of his marriage to Lady Kitty Bristol. Lady Kitty was the daughter of a certain notorious Lord Blackwater, and a woman whose social gatherings were attended only by men. Lady Kitty grew up in a convent in Paris, and when William Ashe meets her she has just returned from France, and is still unacquainted with the social stigma attaching to her mother. Ashe's first feeling for her is one of pity, which, however, soon grows to something more, as he falls under the influence of her piquant and contradictory personality, which is by turns childishly willful and childishly affectionate. He marries her, realizing her antecedents and the danger such a union may be to his career, but willing to take the risk of developing her nature by love and patience. On her side Lady Kitty's love for William is sincere, but she is too utterly a creature of impulse to be governed by anything beyond the whim of the moment. As time goes on the wild extravagance of her actions, verging often on insanity, increases rather than diminishes, and she not only alienates Ashe's friends, but jeopardizes his political advancement again and again. She even insults the prime minister and his wife repeatedly, and at last attacks them in an anonymous novel, which, she is under the delusion, will somehow redound to the glory of her husband and make up for all the harm she has done heretofore. Her relations with the poet, Cliffe, are from the first marked with the same ungovernable imprudence. Yet in spite of all, the strain of sweetness in her character and her childlike candor, hold the affection to the last, as they did that of her husband, and as the end draws near there is an overwhelming sense of pity at the inevitable fate of such a nature dashing itself to pieces against the rocks of its own passions.

Only secondary in interest to Lady Kitty is the development of William Ashe from a good-natured, easy-going young man of latent possibilities, into a strong, serious-minded statesman. This is not a sudden leap, nor a change to be accepted on the word of the author, but a gradual growth which slowly takes place.

The minor characters, Ashe's mother, Lady Tremmore, the spiritual little Dean, the poet, Cliffe, with his Byronic poses, and the self-righteous Mary Lyster, whom disappointment made so venomous, all stand out with the distinctness of living men and women, whose actions are governed by the whim of their creator, but by the compelling force of circumstance.

Miss George, in the role of Lady Kitty, is said to have a part that gives her greater scope than any she has ever essayed. The lighter scenes make her youth, beauty and vivacity charming to behold, while in the emotional or dramatic episodes of the play, her simple heroic nature asserts itself to a pitch where the auditors forget they are witnessing a play, and for the time being imagine themselves face to face with stern reality, so natural is her work.

DOONE IN "KERRY GOW."

New Irish Star in Joseph Murphy's Popular Play.

A new Irish star in the person of Allen Doone will make his initial appearance at the Lyceum, Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Doone unlike many young actors striving for prominence has wisely chosen a play with a reputation. He has behind him the good will of Joseph Murphy and the support of Mr. Murphy's admirable company, who together appear in that beautiful old play "The Kerry Gow," with the necessary scenic equipment and careful attention to detail the play will be seen in every particular as when produced by its former celebrated star. It has built up its splendid record solely because each succeeding year it endeared itself more and more to the theater patrons. It is quaint, with a rugged pastoral atmosphere that has almost become extinct in these days of modern society stage whims and freak melodramas. It is simple and pure; not unlike a good sermon, we are the better morally for having witnessed it. Its characters are all natural studies and historically correct, handed down from that period in Ireland when foreign control held sway mid tyranny and oppression. There is a rich vein of humor and Irish wit and ludicrous situations throughout the entire action of the play, in fact were space allowable, columns could be written on "Kerry Gow." Suffice to say, however, its characters bid fair to live out their welcome which will undoubtedly be as many years to enumerate among the rising generation, as the length of its splendid record of over thirty continuous years on the boards. It does not grow old, it does not grow old-fashioned. It is always refreshing, sparkling and bright.

Thursday being Washington's birthday a matinee will be given.

LOUIS JAMES COMING.

Eminent Tragedian to Appear in Three Great Plays.

Louis James, one of the greatest and most popular of American tragedians will appear at the Lyceum next week, presenting evening performances Friday and Saturday and an afternoon performance on the latter day. Three of his greatest plays will be given during the engagement. Friday night, "Richelieu" will be the bill, Saturday afternoon, "Ingomar," and Saturday evening, "Virginius."

In "Virginius" Mr. James is said to give the most masterly presentation of his varied and successful career, for he seems to have become so thoroughly in sympathy with the character that he virtually lives "The Roman Father," so faithful is he to the traditions of the tragedy.

His "Ingomar" is one of the star performances in the history of Ford's, Baltimore, for it was there he first played the part, and there he played Ingomar to the Parthenia of Mary Anderson. Never probably in the memory of the present generation was there a greater ovation given to two stars than that which rewarded Anderson and James at the end of "Ingomar," and while that occurred in 1876, we are told that Mr. James gives now even a more forceful performance of the Barbarian than he did then.

"Richelieu" has long been considered one of his best roles, and prominent critics have eulogistically compared his characterization to that of Edwin Booth who was in his day the greatest Richelieu.

Each production will be presented in a sumptuously perfect manner, and an exceptionally competent company will give life to these classics. Norman Brackett, who has been associated with Mr. James for several seasons has been especially engaged for these revivals, and among the other players the familiar names of Charles Stedman, Arthur Young, Harry C. Barton, Milton Nobles, Jr., Aphie James, Terese Deagle and Anna Marie Schaefer are noticed.

LOUIS JAMES,
Great Tragedian Who Will Appear at Lyceum Friday and Saturday.

GRAND OPERA IN MARCH.

Savage's Great English Company to Sing Three Operas.

Gertrude Rennyson, the well-known dramatic soprano with the Savage English Grand Opera company during the paste three years, created the role of Sieglinde in English in America when Mr. Savage gave "The Valgyrite" its first appearance in the varnacular on this side of the ocean. Miss Rennyson also created the role of Desdemona in English when Manager Savage produced Verdi's "Othello" two years ago, she being the only prima donna that has ever sung the role in the mother tongue. This talented artist made her operatic debut with the English Grand Opera company in Cincinnati, in 1902, as Elsa in "Lohengrin." Since then she has sung forty-three roles ranging through all the schools of opera. This remarkable versatility of the American prima donna is more easily appreciated when it is observed that the great singers who give us opera in a foreign tongue, are almost invariably limited to a single school of opera. For instance, those that sing in German are seldom able to take the Italian or French opera roles, while the Italian or French artists are seldom able to take the German.

The company will be heard in Duluth in March singing "Lohengrin," "Tannhaeuser" and "Faust."

THE METROPOLITAN

Reilly & Woods Company in "Simple Simon and Simon Simple" and "A Hot Time at Reilly's" All Next Week.

Pat Reilly and his merry band of Bohemians from New York, U. S. A., will be at the Metropolitan all next week. Mr. Reilly's organization is called the Reilly & Woods company, and it is known from one end of the Empire circuit to the other as one of the strongest organizations therein.

The company will remain for the usual week's engagement and matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Hereafter, there will be no matinee at the "Met" on Friday afternoon. With matinees on Thursday and Saturday, it was found impractical to continue it.

"Simple Simon and Simon Simple," is the rather awkward title of the opening burlesque on the Reilly & Woods program. But the burlesque itself is said to be alright. "A Hot Time at Reilly's," is the title of the afterpiece, and it is replete with musical numbers and jokes that have been culled from the minds of the brightest along Fourteenth street, Gotham, and from the latest editions of the vaudeville budgets. It boasts of some sequence and the stage settings are said to be really elaborate.

Pat Reilly himself enacts the principal comedy roles and his long experience on the burlesque stage ought certainly have shown him the right ways to gain the laughs. He is known to have gathered about him this year a galaxy of comedians and primadonnas who are good enough to star alone under the management of A. H. Woods.

Among those who assist Mr. Reilly very materialy or contribute some bit of cleverness to the olio are Kennedy and Evans, Daly & Reno, the Revere sisters, Ira Kessner, the Golden Ballet and Orth and Fern, who are two of the best ever. They present their famous skit, "Sign That Book."

THE NEW BIJOU

The management of the Bijou, which is introducing many new novelties in the vaudeville line, next week offers a bill of unusual strength.

The show is headed by Farmer Jones and his wonderful pigs, which are the only trained animals in the world who play music upon various instruments, playing popular airs and producing the same tunes as though the instruments were in the hands of competent musicians. Mother Jones, wife of the farmer who has a large troupe of trained chickens, pigeons and ducks.

Lovers of good singing will enjoy Leon and Bertie Allen, who appear in a comedy sketch, "An Innocent Flirtation." Seymore and May, "polite vaudeville entertainers," introduce some clever singing and dancing; Crouch and Richards, musical artists, who play on standard instruments and introduce classical selections, will be one of the principal features. This act made a hit in Anustrila.

Grace Armond, charming soubrette, introduces a number of the latest popular song hits and Harry Wilmot will sing the late song hit, entitled "School Days," illustrated with colored views. The moving pictures for the week will be "Faces of the Moon," "Warships in Storm at Sea" and the comedy film, "The Insurance Solicitor," all of which are said to be very good.

Matinees will be given daily at 2:45 and there will be a special school children's matinee Saturday afternoon.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Genuine Star Revival of the "Gypsy Baron"---Viola Allen Will Return to Shakespeare Next Season.

New York, Feb. 17.—A genuine star revival of Strauss's "Gypsy Baron" was given at the Metropolitan, Thursday night with Alten, Rappolo, Homer, Bauermeister, Dippel, Goritz, Blass, Muehlman, Bars, Pali and Dufriche in the cast. But the feature of the "Gypsy Baron" performance was no doubt the appearance in an interpolated episode occurring in the third act of the following artists, who did not take part in the action proper: Mmes. Abbott, Eames, Fremstad, Jacoby, Jomelli, Mulford, Nordica, Poehlmann, Ralph, Sembrich, Walker and Weed, with MM. Burgstaller, Begue, Caruso, Campanari, Franke, Journet, Knote, Parvis, Plancon, Parroll, Reiss, Rossi, Scotti and Van Rooy. In order to allow these singers to display their various gifts during the triumphal entrance of the Hungarian troops after a campaign in Bavaria, Spain and Italy, they were introduced as captives and sang to regain their liberty.

Viola Allen has announced that she will return to Shakespeare after this season, reviving "A Winter's Tale," and "Twelfth Night" and presenting "Cymbeline" as a new production. She will not use her present play, "The Toast of the Town," after June.

In the progress of New York's uptown district another old landmark, the Hotel Delevan, is to go, and will soon be made over into a big office building. It is situated at the corner of Fortieth and Broadway, and at one time was the rendezvous for all the prominent stars playing in New York. This was some years ago, when Mrs. D. P. Powers, a famous actress, managed the hostelry. Among her guests at various times were such prominent actors and actresses as Henry Irving, Ellen Terry, Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Mary Anderson, Rosina Vokes, Lotta, Salvini, Ristori and others of equal prominence in their time. In later years it has been operated by Tom O'Rourke as a headquarters for sporting men.

The newspaper colleagues of William Winter, the dean of American critics, are preparing to give the veteran a testimonial dinner, which is booked for an early date in New York.

* * *

Yvette Gilbert has sailed for America, and shortly after her arrival will be seen in a series of special matinee performances that will be arranged for her by Manager Charles Frohman.

* * *

M. B. Leavitt has purchased the English rights to the latest Lincoln J. Carter play, "Bedford's Hope," which he will send over to England for a visit to the principal cities in that country. Many of the Carter plays have been successful there in the past.

Florence Kahn resigned from the Arnold Daly company in St. Louis last week, after a brief engagement with that young star. Her place in the Shaw comedy, "You Never Can Tell," has been taken by Edna Bruna, a young actress who has been associated with the Daly company for the season. This makes the third leading woman Mr. Daly has had in less than two months.

* * *

Harry Bulger is to be a star under the Savage management next season in a comic opera called "Screamland." It is said to be a revised edition of the piece, "Tomorrowland," which was given a trial in Baltimore and found to be in need of many repairs. It has been worked over and will be put in shape for next season.

* * *

Drina De Wolf is to be a star soon in a play by Will A. Page called "The Woman Pays."

* * *

Henry Miller gave the initial presentation of a new play by J. Hartley Manners, entitled "The Indiscretion of Truth," at the Princess theater, New York, Monday evening. It is a comedy.

The great New York Hippodrome success "A Yankee Circus on Mars," will open at the Chicago Auditorium, Saturday night, Feb. 24, for a five weeks' engagement, which will include two daily performances. The production goes straight from its triumphant run of 400 performances in New York, and twenty-four cars will be required to transport its effects and the 450 persons who comprise its stage folk.

"A Yankee Circus on Mars" is a combination of spectacle, circus, pantomime, drama, musical comedy and specialty performances. It is so large that in only one other American city could Thompson & Dundy, owners of the colossal production, find a theater big enough to accommodate it, and that was in Boston. There are fifty people in the spectacle. With the performance proper comes an assemblage of European performers.

* * *

Henry W. Savage has gone to Europe for a trip through England, Spain and France. He will have his eyes open for novelties in a theatrical way, and also expects to bring over a number of singers for his opera company.

* * *

Marie Jansen will try to overthrow the will of her father by which she is cut off with a mere $500. She claims that her parent, who was a Boston provision dealer, was unduly influenced by his third wife, Mrs. Lulu Johnson, to destroy his first will in which he bequeathed his entire fortune, $50,000 to her.

The Garrick Theater company is the newest theatrical organization in New York, built on the lines of the old Lyceum and Empire companies. Charles Richman is the leading man and Grace Filkins, Frances Starr, Grace Kimball, W. L. Abingdon and William F. Hawtry, a brother of Charles Hawtry, are among the members of the company. The first play to be given will be "Gallops," a new comedy by David Gray.

I hear that Max Faetenheur has plans well under way for the building of a great hippodrome at Cleveland, which will have a seating capacity of 5,000 people, a stage eighty feet wide, sixty-three dressing rooms and accommodations for camels, elephants, horses and other beasts galore. While this seems in the East a very big undertaking for the Ohio city, Mr. Faetkenheur is confident that it will be a paying investment, and declares that he has secured the necessary backing to carry his plans into effect.

* * *

A story is told on Broadway that the Shuberts have secured a site and will soon begin building a $250,000 theater at Denver. It is to be modeled after the Illinois, in Chicago, and the Garrick, in St. Louis, and will be called the E. H. Sothern theater.

If you had been several kinds of a champion pugilist and were convinced that you had it all over Richard Mansfield as an actor, and with the aid of a shrewd manager, an accomplished press agent and a beautiful young wife, had secured columns of free advertising, then, with the beautiful young wife aforesaid, had put on a fancy act in vaudeville, only to have your sweetest and prettiest love scenes laughed at as farce comedy, wouldn't it jar you? Well, that's what happened to Bob Fitzsimmons when he made his reappearance at Proctor's Fifty-eight Street theater.

* * *

Jim Corbett, the other pugilist-actor, intends to take another fall out of the drama. He claims that he was knocked out in his last attempt by a foul. He hasn't signed for his next fight as yet, but intends soon to go into active training by way of vaudeville. He is firmly convinced that it was not James J. Corbett, but "Cashel Byron's Profession" which was to blame for his recent knockout.

Miss Maud Adams can boast of the heaviest mail of any actress now playing in New York. The great majority of letters received by her are from little children, who have been delighted by her "Peter Pan," and who have no hesitation in saying so.

* * *

"Large house tonight?" asked the critic. Manager Fiasco groaned.

"It never looked so large before," he said. "There are only four people in it."

* * *

* * *

A copyright performance of the "Prince of India" has been given in London.

* * *

Hattie Williams is to star this spring in a new play, "The Masquerading Girl." Joseph Coyne and Harry Kelley are in the cast.

* * *

May Yohe has returned to the footlights. She is filling a series of engagements in the London music halls.

* * *

Dunston Farnum is to be starred by Charles Froham in a new Western play by Augustus Thomas as soon as his contract with the La Shelle estate expires.

* * *

The story of "Peter Pan" is to be published in book form. New photographs of Maude Adams, in and out of character, will be used as illustrations, and the text will be the dialogue of the play, with Mr. Barrie's stage directions.

* * *

Nella Bergen (Mrs. De Wolf Hopper) will sing the prima donna role in support of Joseph Cawthorne, in "The Free Lance," the new Sousa-Smith comic opera, which is to be produced for the first time in March.

* * *

The properties and scenery of the Riggs Florodora company, which stranded at Fremont, Neb., several weeks ago, have been sold by the sheriff to satisfy a claim of $2,000 for royalties due Fischer and Riley. They brought $32.

* * *

William A. Brady has secured the rights from Rupert Hughes for a new American play entitled "The Richest Girl in the World," in which Grace George will enact the heroine. The play will be given its trial production with "The Marriage of William Ashe" company, at the Olympic theater, St. Louis, March 9.

Grace George in "The Marriage of William Ashe" on Monday, Allen Doone in "Kerry Gow" on Wednesday and Thursday, and Louis James in "Richelieu," "Ingomar" and "Virginius" on Friday and Saturday.

One of the most striking dramatic sensations of the season, up to this time, has been the production of the stage version of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's successful novel, "The Marriage of William Ashe," in which Grace George is to appear at the Lyceum, Monday evening.

For its strongly sustained interest, its convincing air of reality, its delineations of character and passions, and its artistic development of plot, "The Marriage of William Ashe" is certainly a great achievement.

The central situation is the effect upon the political career of William Ashe of his marriage to Lady Kitty Bristol. Lady Kitty was the daughter of a certain notorious Lord Blackwater, and a woman whose social gatherings were attended only by men. Lady Kitty grew up in a convent in Paris, and when William Ashe meets her she has just returned from France, and is still unacquainted with the social stigma attaching to her mother. Ashe's first feeling for her is one of pity, which, however, soon grows to something more, as he falls under the influence of her piquant and contradictory personality, which is by turns childishly willful and childishly affectionate. He marries her, realizing her antecedents and the danger such a union may be to his career, but willing to take the risk of developing her nature by love and patience. On her side Lady Kitty's love for William is sincere, but she is too utterly a creature of impulse to be governed by anything beyond the whim of the moment. As time goes on the wild extravagance of her actions, verging often on insanity, increases rather than diminishes, and she not only alienates Ashe's friends, but jeopardizes his political advancement again and again. She even insults the prime minister and his wife repeatedly, and at last attacks them in an anonymous novel, which she is under the delusion, will somehow redound to the glory of her husband and make up for all the harm she has done heretofore. Her relations with the poet, Cliffe, are from the first marked with the same ungovernable imprudence. Yet in spite of all, the strain of sweetness in her character and her childlike candor, hold the affection to the last, as they did that of her husband, and as the end draws near there is an overwhelming sense of pity at the inevitable fate of such a nature dashing itself to pieces against the rocks of its own passions.

Only secondary in interest to Lady Kitty is the development of William Ashe from a good-natured, easy-going young man of latent possibilities, into a strong, serious-minded statesman. This is not a sudden leap, nor a change to be accepted on the word of the author, but a gradual growth which slowly takes place.

The minor characters, Ashe's mother, Lady Tremmore, the spiritual little Dean, the poet, Cliffe, with his Byronic poses, and the self-righteous Mary Lyster, whom disappointment made so venomous, all stand out with the distinctness of living men and women, whose actions are governed by the whim of their creator, but by the compelling force of circumstance.

Miss George, in the role of Lady Kitty, is said to have a part that gives her greater scope than any she has ever essayed. The lighter scenes make her youth, beauty and vivacity charming to behold, while in the emotional or dramatic episodes of the play, her simple heroic nature asserts itself to a pitch where the auditors forget they are witnessing a play, and for the time being imagine themselves face to face with stern reality, so natural is her work.

DOONE IN "KERRY GOW."

New Irish Star In Joseph Murphy's Popular Play.

A new Irish star in the person of Allen Doone will make his initial appearance at the Lyceum, Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Doone unlike many young actors striving for prominence has wisely chosen a play with a reputation. He has behind him the good will of Joseph Murphy and the support of Mr. Murphy's admirable company, who together appear in that beautiful old play "The Kerry Gow," with the necessary scenic equipment and careful attention to detail the play will be seen in every particular as when produced by its former celebrated star. It has built up its splendid record solely because each succeeding year it endeared itself more and more to the theater patrons. It is quaint, with a rugged pastoral atmosphere that has almost become extinct in these days of modern society stage whims and freak melodramas. It is simple and pure; not unlike a good sermon, we are the better morally for having witnessed it. Its characters are all natural studies and historically correct, handed down from that period in Ireland when foreign control held sway mid tyranny and oppression. There is a rich vein of humor and Irish wit and ludicrous situations throughout the entire action of the play, in fact were space allowable, columns could be written on "Kerry Gow." Suffice to say, however, its characters bid fair to live out their welcome which will undoubtedly be as many years to enumerate among the rising generation, as the length of its splendid record of over thirty continuous years on the boards. It does not grow old, it does not grow old-fashioned. It is always refreshing, sparkling and bright.

Thursday being Washington's birthday a matinee will be given.

LOUIS JAMES COMING.

Louis James, one of the greatest and most popular of American tragedians will appear at the Lyceum next week, presenting evening performances Friday and Saturday and an afternoon performance on the latter day. Three of his greatest plays will be given during the engagement. Friday night, "Richelieu" will be the bill, Saturday afternoon, "Ingomar," and Saturday evening, "Virginius."

In "Virginius" Mr. James is said to give the most masterly presentation of his varied and successful career, for he seems to have become so thoroughly in sympathy with the character that he virtually lives "The Roman Father," so faithful is he to the traditions of the tragedy.

His "Ingomar" is one of the star performances in the history of Ford's, Baltimore, for it was there he first played the part, and there he played Ingomar to the Parthenia of Mary Anderson. Never probably in the memory of the present generation was there a greater ovation given to two stars than that which rewarded Anderson and James at the end of "Ingomar," and while that occurred in 1876, we are told that Mr. James gives now even a more forceful performance of the Barbarian than he did then.

"Richelieu" has long been considered one of his best roles, and prominent critics have eulogistically compared his characterization to that of Edwin Booth who was in his day the greatest Richelieu.

Each production will be presented in a sumptuously perfect manner, and an exceptionally competent company will give life to these classics. Norman Brackett, who has been associated with Mr. James for several seasons has been especially engaged for these revivals, and among the other players the familiar names of Charles Stedman, Arthur Young, Harry C. Barton, Milton Nobles, Jr., Aphie James, Terese Deagle and Anna Marie Schaefer are noticed.

LOUIS JAMES,
Great Tragedian Who Will Appear at Lyceum Friday and Saturday.

GRAND OPERA IN MARCH.

Savage's Great English Company to Sing Three Operas.

Gertrude Rennyson, the well-known dramatic soprano with the Savage English Grand Opera company during the paste three years, created the role of Sieglinde in English in America when Mr. Savage gave "The Valgyrie" its first appearance in the vernacular on this side of the ocean. Miss Rennyson also created the role of Desdemona in English when Manager Savage produced Verdi's "Othello" two years ago, she being the only prima donna that has ever sung the role in the mother tongue. This talented artist made her operatic debut with the English Grand Opera company in Cincinnati, in 1902, as Elsa in "Lohengrin." Since then she has sung forty-three roles ranging through all the schools of opera. This remarkable versatility of the American prima donna is more easily appreciated when it is observed that the great singers who give us opera in a foreign tongue, are almost invariably limited to a single school of opera. For instance, those that sing in German are seldom able to take the Italian or French opera roles, while the Italian or French artists are seldom able to take the German.

The company will be heard in Duluth in March singing "Lohengrin," "Tannhaeuser" and "Faust."

THE METROPOLITAN

Reilly & Woods Company in "Simple Simon and Simon Simple" and "A Hot Time at Reilly's" All Next Week.

Pat Reilly and his merry band of Bohemians from New York, U. S. A., will be at the Metropolitan all next week. Mr. Reilly's organization is called the Reilly & Woods company, and it is known from one end of the Empire circuit to the other as one of the strongest organizations thereon.

The company will remain for the usual week's engagement and matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Hereafter, there will be no matinee at the "Met" on Friday afternoon. With matinees on Thursday and Saturday, it was found impractical to continue it.

"Simple Simon and Simon Simple," is the rather awkward title of the opening burlesque on the Reilly & Woods program. But the burlesque itself is said to be alright. "A Hot Time at Reilly's," is the title of the afterpiece, and it is replete with musical numbers and jokes that have been culled from the minds of the brightest along Fourteenth street, Gotham, and from the latest editions of the vaudeville budgets. It boasts of some sequence and the stage settings are said to be really elaborate.

Pat Reilly himself enacts the principal comedy roles and his long experience on the burlesque stage ought certainly have shown him the right ways to gain the laughs. He is known to have gathered about him this year a galaxy of comedians and primadonnas who are good enough to star alone under the management of A. H. Woods.

Among those who assist Mr. Reilly very materialy or contribute some bit of cleverness to the ollo are Kennedy and Evans, Daly & Reno, the Revere sisters, Ira Kessner, the Golden Ballet and Orth and Fern, who are two of the best ever. They present their famous skit, "Sign That Book."

THE NEW BIJOU

The management of the Bijou, which is introducing many new novelties in the vaudeville line, next week offers a bill of unusual strength.

The show is headed by Farmer Jones and his wonderful pigs, which are the only trained animals in the world who play music upon various instruments, playing popular airs and producing the same tunes as though the instruments were in the hands of competent musicians. Mother Jones, wife of the farmer who has a large troupe of trained chickens, pigeons and ducks.

Lovers of good singing will enjoy Leon and Bertie Allen, who appear in a comedy sketch, "An Innocent Flirtation." Seymore and May, "polite vaudeville entertainers," introduce some clever singing and dancing; Crouch and Richards, musical artists, who play on standard instruments and introduce classical selections, will be one of the principal features. This act made a hit in Anustria.

Grace Armond, charming soubrette, introduces a number of the latest popular song hits and Harry Wilmot will sing the late song hit, entitled "School Days," illustrated with colored views. The moving pictures for the week will be "Faces of the Moon," "Warships in Storm at Sea" and the comedy film, "The Insurance Solicitor," all of which are said to be very good.

Matinees will be given daily at 2:45 and there will be a special school children's matinee Saturday afternoon.

A story is told on Broadway that the Shuberts have secured a site and will soon begin building a $250,000 theater at Denver. It is to be modeled after the Illinois, in Chicago, and the Garrick, in St. Louis, and will be called the E. H. Sothern theater.

If you had been several kinds of a champion pugilist and were convinced that you had it all over Richard Mansfield as an actor, and with the aid of a shrewd manager, an accomplished press agent and a beautiful young wife, had secured columns of free advertising, then, with the beautiful young wife aforesaid, had put on a fancy act in vaudeville, only to have your sweetest and prettiest love scenes laughed at as farce comedy, wouldn't it jar you? Well, that's what happened to Bob Fitzsimmons when he made his reappearance at Proctor's Fifty-eight Street theater.

* * *

Jim Corbett, the other pugilist-actor, intends to take another fall out of the drama. He claims that he was knocked out in his last attempt by a foul. He hasn't signed for his next fight as yet, but intends soon to go into active training by way of vaudeville. He is firmly convinced that it was not James J. Corbett, but "Cashel Byron's Profession" which was to blame for his recent knockout.

Miss Maud Adams can boast of the heaviest mail of any actress now playing in New York. The great majority of letters received by her are from little children, who have been delighted by her "Peter Pan," and who have no hesitation in saying so.

Dunston Farnum is to be starred by Charles Frohman in a new Western play by Augustus Thomas as soon as his contract with the La Shelle estate expires.

* * *

The story of "Peter Pan" is to be published in book form. New photographs of Maude Adams, in and out of character, will be used as illustrations, and the text will be the dialogue of the play, with Mr. Barrie's stage directions.

* * *

Nella Bergen (Mrs. De Wolf Hopper) will sing the prima donna role in support of Joseph Cawthorne, in "The Free Lance," the new Sousa-Smith comic opera, which is to be produced for the first time in March.

SARAH BERNHARDT AS "CAMILLE."
Greatest of All Actresses Will Appear at Minneapolis Next Week in Four Great Plays.

At any time the appearance of the greatest actress in the world would be regarded as an unusual event in a season's dramatic record, but when such an announcement carries with it the note of farewell, the occasion assumes a two-fold importance and Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, whose sceptre of sway over the entire domain of the drama continues to be unchallenged, it is announced will include Minneapolis in the itinerary of the farewell tour she is now making of the United States. Her engagement will take place at the Auditorium, Minneapolis, Feb. 22, 23 and 24, with Saturday matinee.

Thursday night she will present "La Sorciere," Friday, "Camille," Saturday afternoon, "Phedre" and Saturday evening, "La Tosca."

* * *

Madame Sarah Bernhardt admires many playfolk and people will give them their plays, but among all that America has known intimately she is especially fond of talking about the late Sir Henry Irving. She said, immediately following Irving's death: "When the king is dead, we say, 'The king is dead; long live the king.' When Henry Irving dies one can only say 'The king is dead.'"

* * *

John Barrymore, who is now playing in "Pantaloon" and "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire," at the Criterion theater, will go to Australia with William Collier, when the latter sails on April 19. During the Australian tour Mr. Barrymore will play his old part of the telegrapher in "The Dictator," and will also be the duke in "On the Quiet." The three Barrymores —Ethel, Lionel and John—are now appearing in the two Barrie plays.

* * *

When the Metropolitan Opera company starts on its tour to the Pacific coast, Mr. Conried will "go ahead," not in the ordinary capacity of advance agent, but merely to "look over the ground" and to assure himself that everything is in readiness for the aggregation of singers and instrumentalists.

* * *

The man of this English farce by Sidney Howkitt is a liar not essentially different from the American and French liars of the stage, but his circumstances are new and strange, for the girl is paired with him in the lying. This is a modern instance of Ananias and Saphira, for Mr. Ware and Miss Dean are husband and wife secretly, and living on little else than love and kisses, for he is an artist who can't sell his pictures. Ware reads Kipling's lauding of a lie if it be a big one and struck to, and tries to excel as a liar by publishing the fiction that his portrait of Miss Dean has led a fascinated millionaire to bequeath his whole fortune to her. That is meant to bring in orders to the artist. But its immediate effect is to attract rapacious relatives and plunge Ware into a maze of falsehoods to sustain his initial fabrication.

* * *

Now, we are ready to laugh at the humorous masculine stage liar, but lies from the lips of a girl are unpleasant, and to make Miss Dean a companion liar with Mr. Ware does not double the fun, as the author expected it to, but lessens it by more than half. To make the lying particularly objectionable, much of it is devoted to making two wooers of Miss Dean believe she is still a maiden, that she loves them and that she will marry them. Under her husband's directions, and without any qualms of her own conscience, she tries to wheedle money out of them ostensibly to buy, before she comes into her own mythical fortune, the portrait which she declares to have made her the lucky Miss Dean. In plain terms, the pair work a bunco game which, in spirit and somewhat in method, is repulsively like the one played by criminal couples of sirens and their pals. To smooth and soften the rough hardness of the affair, Helen Grantley is the embodiment of innocence, and her luring of dupes is not sensual. But by that device the play is not saved from failure. It would be curious to see if, after all, a broadly comic actress might help the fun. Such a comedienne would compel us to laugh, and perhaps she wouldn't give us time to realize, as the ingenue does, that Miss Dean is no lady.

* * *

There has been a more or less prevalent idea here that Miss Grantley is an English girl, doubtless because she comes over from the other side, and probably because she and her managers have done nothing to dispel this natural inference. But the truth is that Miss Grantley is not of England, but of Omaha. Her father was the late Henry Grantley, a director of the First National bank of that city, and it is said that he bequeathed his ambitions daughter $100,000. She came to New York and appeared on the local boards in a piece called "Vanity Fair," for which she had numerous pictures taken. One of these pictures was used with a corset advertisement and in a way that was offensive to the actress, and she sued the firm for $50,000 damages. Later she toured with Charles Hanford as his leading woman throughout the Northwest, and last season she traveled in a private car under the management of James R. Deicher and appeared in Martha Morton's "Her Lord and Master," first tried by Kelcey and Shannon. So it seems that this Western girl has tried to lay siege to New York by way of London.

* * *

Paucity in newness of literary ideas in plays and novelty in novel stagecraft are giving way as fast as our American audiences will permit authors and managers to progress in these respects. A good change is observable this season in Broadway, where the best of the prosperity attends the best of the productions. But the Bowery is backward. I went there to see the "great sensation" in "The Factory Girl." But I found an audience, not enthralled by the hero's peril, but laughing at it heartily. The episode was nothing more than the hundredth imitation of the sawmill scene in "Blue Jeans." Once more the bad man fastened the good man on the bed of a machine that moved him along towards what seemed to be certain death, and again some one broke in through the window to save him. The only change was from a buzzsaw to a trip hammer. The ponderous hammer was so really heavy that at each fall it jarred the stage. If by some mischance the fellow's head got under it a mess and muss of crushed bone and brain would have sobered the merriment. Why not have the villain thrown under this hammer after the hero is grabbed away? The sacrifice of a cheap actor at each presentation wouldn't be too great a sacrifice to dramatic realism.

* * *

To mention dramatic realism, even that which is mechanical, is to suggest Ibsen. Perhaps you know that the Norwegian author and actor did not become realistic until after he had been for many years romantic. He wrote imaginative plays in verse and others that were allegorical. Portions of an early drama of his, "Peer Gynt," were presented last Sunday for the first time anywhere in English by the Progressive Stage society. They were more like the fantastic, visionary, utterly unrealistic work of Maeterlinck than that which is generally known as Ibsen's. Peer Gynt was a peasant of some former time. He should have labored to support his old mother, but he roamed lazily instead, hunting and fishing, dreaming and lying. As a liar he was most peculiar. He lived an imaginary life with the Scandinavian fairy tales and folk lore until to him they seemed half real, and he recounted them an adventures of his own. When, for instance, he returned from a long absence in the mountains, and his mother scolded him, he described a long chase of a wild stag; and she was glad to believe him, for her larder needed venison, until his narrative was merged into a legend of a hunter who, mounting an enchanted stag, was carried across lands and over seas to an unknown realm. Then she beat him with a stick.

* * *

Never have I seen a wild fantasy so risk ridicule in a theater, and to win admiration, as did the scene of Peter Gynt's mother's death. The old woman lay moaning and whimpering alone in her hut. Peer came back from one of his roxinks. She told him she was dying and bade him fetch a clergyman; but he was in a buoyant mood and would not take a serious thought of anything.

"You need but to be cheered up, mother," cried Peer; "don't weep, laugh; don't pray, play. Why, you're in the box bed that was mine when I was a boy. It was sometimes my sled, with fancy reindeer, and sometimes it was my wagon with magic horses. So, mother, you imagine you're going to die. Very well. Lie there in your chariot till I hitch my steeds to it and I'll drive you across the river of death to the gate of heaven."

* * *

Then Peer, with the glee of a child, placed two chairs for horses, tied a cord to them for reins, took his seat on the footboard of the bed and cried, "Away we go!" With steadily rising excitement as his fancy took flight, he described a journey across Norway and over the Arctic sea to the portal of paradise. The exuberance of the grown man with a boy's mind infected the old woman at first, and sitting up in bed, she joined in the childplay; but weakness overcame her and she fell back dead, while he still drove his make-believe horses merrily on. Why did not the audience laugh at the sight of that lout of a man playing horse and wagon? First, the cultured people were in a respectful mood. Second, the Progressive Stage society, instead of letting the acting be done by amateurs, had employed Warner Oland and Hilda Englund, actual Ibsenian players from Christiania. Third, the Norwegian language had been translated into the simplest and, therefore, effective English. The silence of complete engrossment was on the house when Peer disputed with an imaginary Saint Peter over the question of admitting his mother. Nor did it seem irreverent, but awesome-ly impressive, when he turned from Peter and said:

"Ah, here comes God Almighty!"

Then Peer bowed low three times, as though God had given entrance to his mother, and she lay dead on the bed. Not for promiscuous audiences, though, is "Peer Gynt."

* * *

What subject is most appealing to most people? Sudden wealth? So the title, "Ready Money," indicated a popular theme. The anonymous play purported to be complete as given by dramatic students, but I suspect it was the third act of a melodrama of New York society being tested. We saw the office of Vice President Van Dyck, of a life insurance company, and for a while it was occupied by gentlemen and ladies as moilish as Clyde Fitch ever put on the stage, but soon they developed the qualities of vital men and women more like Augustus Thomas', and at length there was an episode theatrically strong in the manner of Theodore Kraemer, edited by David Belasco. Van Dyck's daughter Kate, heiress to a fortune, was wooed by Dr. Brooke and Lawyer Royce, both connected with the insurance company.

"You are poor and want to marry wealth with Kate," said Royce to Brooke. "But her fortune is lost with her father's and she won't have a dollar left. Now, I am rich enough to take Kate as a luxury and I'll give you a hundred thousand dollars to give up your claim and get out."

That was a new situation, but there was something more original to follow. Brooke rejected the money, which Royce had brought from a safe and laid on a table before him and went away. Now, that money had been intrusted to Kate's father by a friend, Slaytor, who learned of the impending bankruptcy and came back to get it. Royce was alone with it, after office hours. Slaytor demanded it. Royce refused to give it up. There was an altercation, a scuffle and Slaytor fell dead from heartbreak.

* * *

Of course, you guess now that Royce will steal the ready money and make the circumstances accuse Brooke of the crime. But mark the new handling of the matter. Royce is a nervous victim of morphine and the sight of the corpse terrifies him. He lacks the self control to rob the dead. But a dose of that drug braces his courage and he stoops to loosen the stiffening hand from the packet of notes. At that instant the telephone bell rings sharply. That renders him nervous again, but he swallows more of the morphine, and staggers to the 'phone. It is Kate, asking if Brook is there. Now Royce rouses himself. He is a clever mimic, as we have seen.

"Yes, Kate," he replies, speaking into the sender with the voice of his rival; "this is Dr. Brooke. I am here alone with Col. Slaytor. Is he well? Not very. I am attending him. Yes, I will be at your reception this evening. Thank you. Good by."

The shivering Royce totters to the stark body of Slaytor, and would collapse beside it, but once more he steadies himself with the narcotic to rob the dead and work woe for the living. On that the curtain goes down.

* * *

Not often do the resident stock company provide a topic sufficiently unusual for this correspondence, but on two afternoons I saw such actor worship as we didn't look for in these times of generally sane regard of stage mock heroism. "Go to see 'The Merchant of Venice' done by the Proctor stock," said a friend, "if you want to see something odd."

"Is James Young remarkable as Shylock," I asked.

"Oh, he is first rate, but not great."

"Then it is Amelia Bingham's Portia?"

"No; it is Gerald Griffin Launcelot Gobbo. Don't ask me why. Go and get surprised."

The surprise came of the fact that Griffin, the girl-worshipped member of the company, is not its chief love maker, but its boss funny man. Within a year Edwin Arden, Harry Woodruff and Charles Richman have succumbed to the hard labor of studying, rehearsing and acting long roles all day and half the night, and James Young has just taken the job; so the matinee girls have no more than learned to love one than away he went, and a shift of heart had to be made. Meanwhile Griffin has stayed right along, and the feminine adoration has gone over to him.

* * *

Now, Griffin is the kind of a comedian that, if he can't make you laugh with what he ought to do, will do it by doing what he ought not to do. He is a gagger, a mugger, a clowner, and he is permitted to have his own way. My friend was right in advising me to seek a novelty in this performance of "The Merchant of Venice." The most important character wasn't Shylock, nor Portia, but Launcelot Gobbo, who is cut down usually from what Shakespeare made him, but here speaks every line set down for him in the earliest prints of the play, barring a few indecent ones, and for those he substitutes new humor. When Shakespeare gets dull Griffin drops in a gag; when the author's Gobbo has nothing funny to do the actor's Gobbo pulls a wry mug; when an entrance or exit would be quiet it is stirred up by a stumble, a fall or some other comic stunt. And the audience thinks Griffin is greater than Miss Bingham or Mr. Young. In a month' vote as to which member of the company is the first favorite, and as a reward may choose the play for a certain week, Griffin, the gagger, mugger and stunter, counts up top.

* * *

However, the wooer wins in the Bimberg Stock company, as customary, yet extraordinarily. His name, William J. Kelley, is unknown to you, as it is to ninety-nine in a hundred New Yorkers, for the Kelley cult is confined to a far corner of the town. But never in the Wallackian, Palmerian and Dalyian palminess of stock companies did I ever see Harry Montague, Charles R. Thorne or John Drew so set up on an altar for worship as Mr. Kelley was on the afternoon of my observation. "Shenandoah" was the play. Kelley was the Kerchival West. Also Kelley was the Gen. Sheridan. What? Why, yes. The matinee girls wouldn't like to see anyone but their Kelley dash in on horseback.

"To save the day,
From Winchester, twenty miles away."

If every dramatic game played on the Bimberg stage it is "Kelly at the bat," and he couldnt strike out if he missed the ball every time he ought to hit it. So, with Sheridan twice twenty years away, Bronson Howard not looking, and the motto, "We strive to please," hanging in the lobby, Bimberg at rehearsal may have recalled the lines of the poem,

What was done? What to do? A glance told him both.

Although he may not have let out Sheridan's "terrible oath," he did put Bill Kelley in Phil Sheridan's saddle, and thus, as I may say, he

Saved the day at the matinee
By bringing Bill, not Phil, to the fight,
From Winchester, twenty miles away.

And after the performance Kelley, as on every Thursday, received the matinee girls on the stage.

TO BUILD BIG PIPE LINE.

Tulsa, I. T., Feb. 17.—Stock to the amount of a million dollars is said to have been subscribed to the Pure Oil company of Pennsylvania by Kansas territory oil producers to secure a pipe line for oil from the field to a gulf port. The directors of the Pure Oil company will meet on Tuesday at Pittsburg, where details will be given out. The pipe line will be 600 miles long and cost over a million dollars.

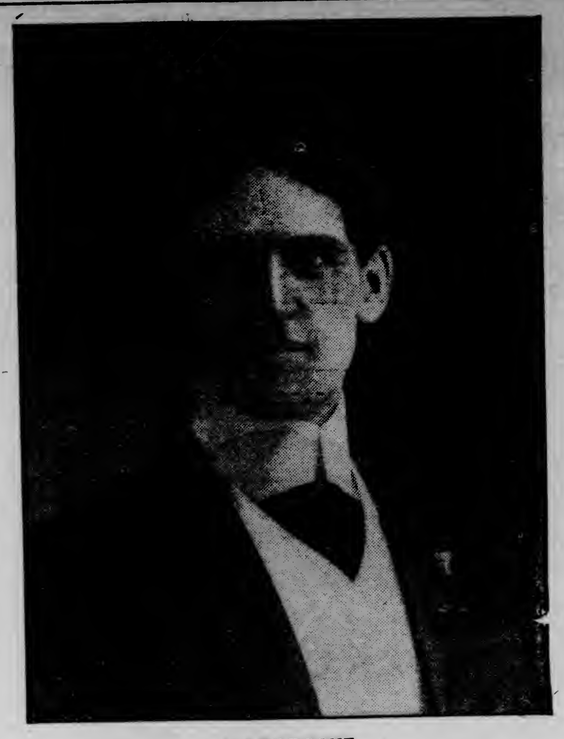

NEW YORK THEATERS

Why Helen Grantley Was in the Title Role of "Lucky Miss Dean"---Presentation of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt."

New York, Feb. 17.—During the first act of "Lucky Miss Dean," on the opening night, the question went the round of the audience, not why the play had been imported—for it had done tolerably well in London—but why Helen Grantley had been with it. William Courtleigh had been assigned to the principal male part. Grantley was neither good nor bad nor anything in particular. The know-alls chaps in the lobby, at the intermission, explained that she was the owner and promoter of the piece. That was a sordid reason enough why she was the Miss Dean. But there was an artistic reason, too, as the second act disclosed, why she, or some other actress of a sweet, gentle, no-account kind, should have the part.

ONE OF THE STRIKING SCENES IN "THE MARRIAGE OF WILLIAM ASHE" TO BE PRESENTED BY GRACE GEORGE AT LYCEUM MONDAY.

ALLEN DOONE,
Young Irish Comedian to Appear in "Kerry Gow" at Lyceum Wednesday and Thursday.

KING O'KEEFE.

Never has there been a theme in real life, that lends itself more readily to comic opera atmosphere, as that of the story of O'Keefe, the white king of Yap, an American Irishman who landed destitute in the realm of Queen Dally Boy and eventually became ruler of the island, and Mr. Getz in working out the play for the Elks' performance this year, has evovled a three act comedy that is certain to please theater goers. Charles Doranee will this year assume the part of the queen and is busy learning how to manipulate his skirts in the big dancing number he has with O'Keefe. O. E. Spencer, who posses a baritone voice of great strength and purity, will be seen in the part of "Rogengo" the "Hunchback," and his solo "Beware, Beware" with a chorus of fifty voices is a great specialty. The Misses Margaret Dingwall, Bertie Lawrenz, Tena Shaw, Inga Foss and Susie Irwine, and Messrs Will Aronsen, Sellers, Main, Dignus and O'Gorman will do a big stunt called "We Wander the Bright Moonlight," and Mr. Paul Clarkston and the Misses Kate Burke, Nellie Sorenson, Mina Clark, Della Keidler and Tina Shaw will do a rattling French number "Oh Take Me Back to Gay Paree." Paul Clarkson, Don Clark, Lotita Lamb and Cliff Allen will do a comedy stunt from the "Rollicking Girl," called "Indians on Broadway." Those who have been lucky enough to get a look in at the rehearsals say it will easily supass "Toodles in Posterland," the Elks big success last year. Don Clark in "The Rag Bag Man," will have a great number, as he is assisted in the singing and dancing by the Misses Clara and Bessie Collier, Margarette Mordall, Dora McDonald, Agness Skelton, Agness Morrison, Petronella Gilman, Alice Sund, Mable Sund, Effie Brotherton, Edna Jones, Hildegarde Wohlin, Elsie Flett, Hattie Plannt, Hazle Roberts and Lillian Morey.

The production will be given at the Lyceum, March 1, 2 and 3.

KAISER DISCUSSES

Jewish Ambassador at Court of the United States.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The kaiser was greatly surprised to learn from a Washingtonian, received in audience, that the Jews have an ambassador, accredited to the White House, on Simon Wolf, the well-known president for the B'nai B'rith.

"Just think of it," he said to one of his ministers, "he interfered when the United States sold arms to France during the war of 1870-71. When the Jews were massacred at Kishineff, he immediately went to the president and roused a great storm that frightened the czar. When Roumania suppressed the Jews, Simon again had an interview with the president, and Secretary Hay's protest followed. Though he holds credentials from no government, Simon, I am told, has greater influence on the foreign policy of the United States in certain directions than all the other ambassadors and ministers combined. There are only 1,500,000 Jews in the United States, 700,000 of which live in New York, yet Simon Wolf, is treated on a footing of equality with the republican leaders."

"That is not so extraordinary after all," replied the minister, "when your Majesty will consider that the Jewish dollar kings Schiff, Thalman, Wormser, Speyer, Strauss, etc., are backing him."

"True," said the kaiser, "money talks."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

GIVEN BAD TROUNCING

Duluth Y. M. C. A. Basketball Teams Meet Match at Superior.

Blaine Teams Win Both Games by One-Sided Scores.

The senior and junior basketball teams of the Duluth Y. M. C. A. were both taken into camp last evening by the Blaine team in the Blaine gymnasium.

The first team was swamped by the score of 45 to 10 and the juniors were defeated by the score of 53 to 11.

The Duluth players were clearly outclassed by their opponents, who displayed some very pretty team work, and threw basket after basket.

The Duluth men showed a lamentable lack of team work, owing to failure to practice regularly. The Superior men, on the other hand, were in the best possible shape, and their team work was perfect. H. Buchanan put up a star game and threw a number of very difficult baskets. He was very ably assisted by Mills, known to the Superior rooters as "Little Eva." The same can be said of Burr and A. Buchanan, who clearly outplayed their opponents.

Prof. Clemens refereed the game and E. G. Morse acted as umpire. The teams lined up as follows:

Y. M. C. A.	Position.	Blaine.
Olson	forward	H. Buchanan
Dinham	forward	Mills
Deighton	center	Burr (capt.)
Skelton (capt.)	guard	A. Buchanan
Smith	guard	McGraw

The game between the second teams showed up the same need of practice that the first game did. The Duluth men fell down on their team work and the Blaine boys piled up a big score against them by working well together. Every man on the Blaine team put up a hard, fast game, but Long was probably the star of the second team.

The score at half time was 31 to 4 and the final score 53 to 11.

The teams lined up as follows:

Y. M. C. A.	Position.	Blaine.
Ober (capt.)	forward	B. Clark
Bardlett	forward	D. Long
Bethune	center	A. Kentfield
Nelson	guard	F. Nord
Miller	guard	J. Rooney (capt.)
Dennis	guard

Next Friday evening the Duluth teams will play the Superior normal school team in the latter's gymnasium. Return games with both Blaine and the Superior normal will be played in the Duluth gymnasium on March 1 and March 8.

The Duluth players are not disheartened at the result of last evening's bad beating, but they realize the need of more systematic practice. They will make a big effort to turn the tables on the Blaine team on March 1.

HALDIN AS LOBBYIST

Delegated to Plug for Duluth at National Ski Meeting.

Thirty Rooters Will Accompany Team to Ishpeming Tournament.

On the lobbying of Odin Haldin, the county auditor, will largely depend Duluth's chances of securing the national ski tournament for 1907.

At a meeting of the Duluth Ski club, held last evening at the St. Louis hotel, Mr. Haldin was elected a delegate to the meeting of the National Skiing association, which will meet at Ishpeming, Wednesday evening, to settle the question of the site for the 1907 tournament, and delegates from the twenty clubs in the association will be in attendance.

Mr. Haldin will be backed up by a party of about thirty members of the Duluth club who will accompany the team to Ishpeming to root for Duluth and boost for this city as the proper place for the next tournament.

The Duluth club will be represented by a team of six, five of whom have attended the Ashland, St. Paul and Stillwater tournaments and have been very successful in landing their share of the prizes. The jumpers are: John Mangseth, captain of the Duluth club; Olaf Larson, assistant captain; Elling Diesen, Ole Felring, Gustav Bye and Ingvald Sveen.

The same team will also go to Bovey this afternoon to attend the tournament of the Itasca Ski club, which will be held in that town tomorrow. The sum of $250 is offered in prizes by the Itasca club, and the tournament will be the largest of any held in this part of the country, aside from the national tournament at Ishpeming.

The Duluth team will return Sunday night from Bovey and will leave here the following morning for Ishpeming, where the national tournament will open on Thursday.

At the meeting last evening it was also decided to hold another tournament in Duluth. It will take place shortly after the national meet at Ishpeming, and President Iverson and Secretary Lunde were appointed a committee to take charge of the arrangements.

OUTCOME IS DOUBTFUL

No Means of Guessing Result of Northern League Meeting.

Five Possible Courses Are Open to the Duluth Club.

Doping out a baseball circuit is usually a simple proposition.

All that is generally necessary is a fair working knowledge, goegraphy and a vivid imagination.

But for once the dope artists are up against it in trying to figure out a Northern league circuit for 1906.

Just what will be the outcome of the gathering at Grand Forks on Sunday, time alone will tell. The meeting, however, will be one of the most important in the history of the league.

Duluth is apparently at the parting of the ways, and on the meeting tomorrow depends largely whether the future lot of the team will be cast in with the clubs in the Copper country or with those in the West. Failing in the amalgamation of the two leagues, in spite of the outcome of the meeting in Duluth two weeks ago, does not now seem probable, the White Sox must decide which league they intend to warm up to. In spite of the fact that the Copper country towns are close and offer a very favorable field, the tendencies of the Duluth club would naturally be toward the West.

The business interests of Duluth lie largely to the north and west, and it is there that the Duluth firms look for the bulk of their trade. Winnipeg, Grand Forks and Fargo are all good ball towns, anxious for clean, fast ball, and if Duluth were to drop them now it would mean the breaking up of the Northern league or at least its relegation to the lowest class. No good cities would be available to fill up the circuit, and the Fargo, Grand Forks and Winnipeg teams would have to carry along any other three clubs that might be taken in.

That is the situation, and as to the outcome, one fan's guess is as good as another's. No definite information has been given out, and none will be until after the meetig, but the circuit committee is said to have something up its sleeve.

The possibilities are as follows:

The amalgamation with the Copper country towns in spite of the statement that negotiations were off.

The severing of Duluth's connection with the Northern league in favor of the Copper country league.

The taking in of the two Wisconsin cities, such as Eau Claire, Chippewa Falls and La Crosse.

The taking in of two towns from the West such as Minot, Brandon, Devils Lake or Brainerd.

The return to the old league with Crookston and Superior in the circuit.

SPORTING COMMENT

To an unprejudiced eye a wrestling match between chorus girls would seem about on a par with a hen race or a snake fight, in the line of sporting events.

About the time "Mame" got a strangle hold on "Mag's" blonde tresses, and Mag dug her fingers into Mame's complexion, there would be a crying match, which nothing short of a diamond bracelet would stop. And yet Manager Billy Longstreet of the Metropolitan has the temerity to advertise such a contest as a sporting event. He says he isn't joshing either, and that the girls can wrestle. Of course a manager's statements have to be taken with several pinches of salt, but a whole mine of it wouldn't make that story slip down. The novelty will help swell the bix receipts, but as a sporting event—oh, shades of Jimmy Parr!

Now, if Billy Longstreet wants to pull off a real, live, up-to-date sporting event between two of the ladies in his company, let him arm them with broom sticks, and hang up the diamond bracelet as a purse. It won't cost him any more in the end, and there will be something doing all the time.

Or, failing that, he could let each of them stock up with flat irons, and, standing at each side of the stage, commence when the signal is given. Measures would have to be taken to protect the Johnnies in the boxes, of course, and the only safe roosting place would be the upper balcony, but who wouldn't be willing to take a few risks for the sake of witnessing such a fight.

Contrary to the general belief, the Duluth hockey players are not going to meet the Copper country hockey teams that are now playing in the International league. The Duluth boys prefer to linger a little longer in this mundane sphere. They average about 153 pounds in weight, while the Michigan men are full grown professionals, and about the speediest in the world. They also have a method of dealing with opponents that makes the football tactics look like children's play. A perfectly good hockey player has been known to come out of some of the games in the International league spoiled for any further use that winter. At times they get so worked up over the games that the referee, out of very shame, has to rule everybody off the ice but the goalkeepers, who fight it out until one or the other is put out of business.

No. The Duluth high school boys are not going up against any such game as that. They also have a junior league in the Copper country, and Mart Adson is planning to steer the Duluth team around this circuit, so the players will have some chance of returning home as good as new, and with perhaps a victory or two to their credit.

The ski runners might as well make it unanimous. Every good thing is coming Duluth's way. The grocers decided to hold their annual convention here. The curlers chose Duluth as the permanent meeting place. The Republicans have Duluth slated for the state convention. What is the use of holding out? When the managers of the national ski tournament get together at Ishpeming next week to select their meeting place for next year, they should decide to climb on the band wagon with all possible dispatch. The band wagon is headed toward the Head of the Lakes at present, and the walking's poor. If there is anything about Duluth they don't like, it will be changed to suit them.

Charles Rankin, the Duluth skater, is traveling in fast company. He has a series of races arranged with Norval Baptie, the speedy North Dakota boy, and if he can hold him, there are not many left in the business to go after.

ANN ARBOR PLEASED

That Yost is to be Retained for Another Year.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 17.—The action of the University of Michigan senate on football has left a feeling of gloom, and yet of satisfaction, about the campus. Many of the students hoped against hope that the conference recommendations would not be ratified. Before the meeting of the senate, however, this hope was dispersed by the radical action taken by Wisconsin and Chicago, and it is feared that Michigan must follow suit. So the announcement that football was at least not to be abolished and that Coach Yost was to be retained brought relief to all.

The general sentiment remains that the action, although less radical than either Chicago or Wisconsin, nevertheless might easily have been less sweeping. There is a general opinion in favor of the training table and of a slightly longer season; in fact, this is the view of the most conservative of the student body, while those who are bitterest say that there was no need of hasty action in football, that conservative reform would gradually have produced good results.

Chicago has declared for either adopting the conference rule as they stood or abolishing football for two years and charge Michigan with violating the spirit of the conference by retaining Yost. A few of the Chicago faculty recognize the delicate position Chicago is in with Stagg, who, although he comes within the letter of the rules, is as much a professional coach as Yost, but the majority seems to have no idea but that of gaining an unfair advantage. Foothball is not played solely to win, but if there is evil in Michigan's having a professional coach there is evil in Chicago having one. It was much better for Michigan to state fairly that they had a contract they could not break than to attempt to fulfill it by the subterfuge of placing Yost upon the faculty. That would have placed Michigan in a ridiculous attitude.

Chicago now advocates a second conference. Illinois has adopted the conference rules with a request for a few changes. It does not seem to be deemed necessary here that a second conference be called, as the rules and actions of the faculty would have to go to the regular conference of the boards of control, composed of faculty members, in any event.

John L. McLean, last season's football coach at the University of Missouri and a prominent Michigan athlete, is spending several weeks at the Sigma Chi house. Back in '98 and '99 McLean played left halfback on the 'varsity eleven and was considered one of the best men in that position at that time. In track, however, he outshone his gridiron work, for there he established some records that still stand unlowered by Michigan men. At present he holds the record for both the high hurdles and the broad jump.

SWEET SINGER AND GREAT JOCKEY

GEORGE SWAIN.

Born in Minneapolis, Minn., eighteen years ago. He was first noticed around race tracks as a public singer, having a wonderful child voice, which made him many a dollar. Joe Baker took a liking to the boy and developed him into a first-class rider. Swain is one of the most fearless riders at Ascot. His first win was on Virgie Withers at City Park. He is now riding for Denny Brothers, of Kentucky.

DULUTH SKATER IS DEFEATED

Norval Baptie Wins All Three Races at Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, Feb. 17.—Charles Rankin of Duluth was defeated here last evening by Norval Baptie, the North Dakota skater, in all three races, and Baptie retains his title of American Champion.

The two men skated a half mile, a mile and a two-mile race, and Baptie won all three by good leads.

The attendance was large, and owing to Baptie's popularity at Grand Forks, he was the favorite in the race, being loudly cheered after each victory.

Sporting Notes.

The fourth race in the series, which is being pulled off on the ice track at Twenty-first avenue west, is billed for this afternoon.

Annie Donovan of Butte is billed to wrestle Marie Jeanette of Elgin, at the Metropolitan theater tonight. The bout is for two falls, with the strangle hold barred.

The three-cornered pool contest, which has been in progress at the Ideal pool hall, ended in a three-cornered tie, and six more games will be played by each man to settle the supremacy. The contests were Charles Westberg, Chas. Norlin and Nick Mergener.

At the Grand Opera house, Superior, tonight, Billy Maynard will endeavor to throw four men in an hour, his opponents being Halberg, Harris, Hunter and Haggstad.

The Duluth hockey players are now assured of their trip to the Copper country, granted favorable weather. They will leave about March 12, and will play several games with the teams in the junior league, under the management of Mart Adson of the South Shore road.

FIRE ON THE MINNESOTA.

Yokohama, Feb. 17.—The Great Northern Steamship company's big steamer Minnesota, Capt. Riner, from Seattle, for Nagasaki, Shanghai and Hongkong, arrived here yesterday and reports that during the voyage fire broke out in the third hold of the ship. The cargo was badly damaged and it is probable that it will be discharged.

CRACK PITCHERS OF THE PAST

Something About the Twirling Stars Who Shone in Baseball Thirty Years Ago.

Christopher Matthewson's remarkable pitching in the world's series last fall, which will not be forgotten by the present generation of baseball fans, has been the subject of an interesting discussion among several old-timers, who recall some of the performances of star twirlers during the last thirty years, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. In shutting the Athletics out three times in succession many experts have credited Matthewson with the greatest feat in the pitching line ever recorded. In many respects it was an incomparable piece of box work, but in days gone by there were pitchers just as sensational and masterful. George Washington Bradley, now a Philadelphia policeman, was the star pitcher of the St. Louis team back in 1886. He was a noted shut-out pitcher and white-washed the Hartford club three days in succession. John Clapp was his catcher, and together they made a famous battery. It was seldom that a club played a series in the Mound City without receiving a string of goose-eggs from Bradley's effective twirling.

Going back even further, it is a matter of record that the Boston club won the "pennant" or rather the championship in 1872, 1873, 1874 and 1875, with A. G. Spalding, now a millionaire, as the only pitcher. In 1875, Spalding pitched in every game played by the Bostons on their own grounds and won them all. He had superb control of the ball, used the old underhand delivery and bowled the heavy sluggers over with a "slow raise." It was in 1898 that John Ward was one of the pioneer curve pitchers. He started with Providence, and in 1879 he was instrumental in winning the campionship almost single handed. Ward shut one team out that year without a hit and handed the whitewash brush around liberally. He had great speed, excellent control, and above all a cool, level head. His curves and shoots were so deceptive that he was one of the hardest pitchers to handle and kept the agile Barney Gilligan, little Nava and Emil Gross, all great pitchers, on the jump.

Thomas Bond, another star boxman in the old days, was with the Atlantics, Hartfords and Bostons from 1873 to 1883, nearly every year pitching 90 per cent of the games for his team. Bond relied wholly upon speed and control, coupled with head work, which helped him out of many a tight place. But he had no curves until a couple of years before he retired from the game. Bond's best catcher was Charley Snyder, who went behind the bat day after day, despite the fact that such a thing as a big mitt or "pillow" was not heard of then. "Tricky" Nichols was another famous pitcher in those days, but his best ball—a sharp, puzzling drop—was afterwards ruled out by the moguls. Then there was the Only Nolan, who pitched for Indianapolis in 1878 and shut out all the clubs at different times that year. He had a wide, sweeping outcurve, which he controlled with splendid accuracy, and had the big hitters up in the air.

Charles Sweeney, of the crack Providence team of 1884, was far ahead of his time in point of skill. He established a record of nineteen strike-outs in a single game, which has never been equaled. Sweeney had a preliminary movement very much like Mathewson's, and in the estimation of competent judges who remember his work in the box he was the most difficult man to hit that ever faced a batsman, and this includes the wonderful Amos Rusie and Matty, too. The keynote of Sweeney's success was a "fadeaway" ball, identical with the one used by Mathewson. When he struck out nineteen men one afternoon it was not with the aid of a foul strike, although the pitcher's box was only forty-five feet from the plate. This performance was the talk of the country at the time, and Sweeney was looked upon as a genuine phenomenon. His side partner on the Providence team was Charley Radbourne, "Old Hoss," as he was familiarly called, and he was not far behind Sweeney in point of pitching skill, either. "Rad" had wonderful stamina, for after Sweeney deserted the Grays he consented to pitch game after game, occupying the box about twenty days in succession, and winning a large percentage of these contests. Radbourne was an artist at "change of pace." He could turn loose terrific speed when he wanted to, but he liked a slow curve ball the best, and the way he controlled it was a marvel in its way.

It was about this time that the Boston club had two great pitchers in Big Jim Whitney and Charley Buffington. Whitney came to the Hub from California. He was tall and lanky, and the fans soon called him "The Grasshopper." But he could pitch, and speed was his chief stock in trade. In those days (1883) a pitcher could take a sort of hop, step and jump in order to get momentum before delivering the ball, and Whitney, with his long legs and preliminary movements, was able to soak the ball to his catcher with frightful power. He used up both Mike Hines and Mertie Hackett, his backstops, that year, but he puzzled the best batters in the National league. Buffington hailed from Fall River. He had the best drop ball ever seen up to that time, and it was many years before his equal in this respect was unearthed.

The Chicagos, under Anson, had some great pitchers, too, after Spalding retired. Among them were Larry Corcoran, Goldsmith, Jim McCormick and John Clarkson. Corcoran was built on Clark Griffith's lines and looked very much like the New York Americans' popular manager. He was a cool, deliberate sort of a fellow, with all the qualities of a good boxman. Goldsmith was more rugged, and was, therefore, able to stand more hard work. So was Jim McCormick, who lives over in Paterson now, and still loves to talk of the triumphs of the dim past. Clarkson was a star in 1887, when the Chicago club sold him to Boston for $10,000. He had better control of the ball than any man in the profession at that time, with the possible exception of Tim Keefe, and it was only on rare occasions that he had an off day. The memorable struggle for the pennant between New York and Boston in 1893, when Keefe and Clarkson were the pitching stars of the profession, will always be memorable incidents in baseball history.

Charley Ferguson of the Philadelphia club was still another star. He was not only a crack pitcher, but one of the most accomplished general utility men in the country. Bobby Matthews, a little man with wide curves, earned a place in the Hall of Baseball Fame twenty years ago. "Gentle Jeems" Galvin of Buffalo and Pittsburg, a magician in the points, cannot be overlooked here, neither can "Lady" Baldwin, the champion Detroits' star left-hander, and Tom Ramsey of Louisville, another celebrated southpaw. Dupee Shaw, left-handed, was one of the first pitchers to use the "wind up" motion of the arm before delivering the ball, and his antics caused much merriment and good-natured joshing wherever he appeared.

CURLING ON THE RANGES

Duluth Members Anxious to See Several New Clubs Organized.

Plans for arousing interest in curling in the small towns and cities in the immediate vicinity of Duluth, are being considered by the members of the Duluth Curling club, who would like to see about six or eight new curling clubs organized in such towns as Cloquet, Two Harbors, Hibbing, Eveleth, Grand Rapids, Tower and Ely.

The formation of such clubs would not only greatly add to the interest in the annual bonspiel, but it would give the Duluth curlers a list of friendly rivals who would be available for a game at any time, and informal meetings could be arranged from time to time during the winter.

The trip to any of these towns is a short one, and some series of games could be arranged early in the season, if clubs were organized. Virginia is already supporting a club, and the Duluth members are anxious to see the other towns follow Virginia's example.

Just what method will be adopted to push the ideas, has not been decided. An informal smoker at Duluth, and an invitation to some likely curlers from the different towns to attend and participate in the game here some evening, is suggested by some members. If the Duluth members could get the visitors inside the club rooms here, it is believed that they could be talked into believing that their towns could no longer exist on the map without a curling club.

The Duluth club is willing to assist in any way possible. About eight pairs of surplus rocks are lying about the rink, and these would be sufficient to start a new club and keep it going until the members could buy rocks for themselves. The Duluth club would undoubtedly be willing to loan these rocks to any town desirous of forming a new club.

The expense of erecting a rink usually frightens those contemplating such a club, but attention is respectfully called to the West Duluth club, where the members are getting a dividend from the skating rink, and their stock is not a liability but an investment.

In each of the range towns mentioned the experience of the West Duluth club could be duplicated, and with six or eight curling clubs on the ranges and in Duluth, some very interesting social games could be pulled off during the winter.

* * *

The different club trophy contests at the Duluth curling ring have not made much progress during the last week, and are but little farther advanced than they were a week ago.

In the St. Louis trophy contest only three rinks are left. The Macrae rink defeated the Anneke rink in the semi-finals and goes into the final round against the winner of the game between the Duncan and Brewer rinks. This contest can be finished up at any time.

In The Herald trophy contest two of the squad winners are known, the Myron and Frick rinks having won out in their respective squads. The Milne rink is a very likely winner in squad 3, having won four games and lost none, but it has one game yet to play. The standing of the two squads, whose games are unfinished, is as follows:

SQUAD 3.

Milne	4	0
Magner	2	1
Duncan	1	1
Reichert	1	2
McLennan	1	4
Haig	0	1

SQUAD 4.

Harris	2	0
Stillman	3	1
Hargreaves	0	1
Ron Smith	0	1
Woodruff	0	2

In the Manley-McLennan trophy contest only one of the squads has played more than two or three games. The standing in this squad is as follows:

Harris	2	0
Stillman	3	1
Oldham	1	2
Prindle	0	1
Hargreaves	0	2

FISTIC DOPE FROM FRISCO

Billy Delaney is Home From a Visit to Jim Jeffries.

Hinted That Jeff is Willing to Take on Another Fight.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 17.—Which is the most attractive pugilistic card in sight?

During the past week this question has been put to numbers of sporting men who are supposed to be thoroughly posted as to the temper of the times, and the reply has always been the same—Joe Gans and Battling Nelson.

When Promoter Jim Coffroth returned from the springs the other night he was asked.

"I have my opinion as to which is the 'most atractive card,' but it's not in sight," was Coffroth's answer.

Then he explained: "A match between Gans and Nelson would create more interest just now than an event which had Jefferies for a principal," said Coffroth. "It is an impossible match, though, and I'll tell you why. Nolan will prevent Nelson making it. My information on the subject dates back to the night Jimmy Gardner and Budy Ryan boxed at Colma. Coming home on the club's special car Nolan and I sat side by side, and the drift of our conversation was about as follows:

"A great fighter, Gardner, isn't he?" remarked Nolan.

"A wonderful man," I replied.

"But there's one man can beat him," continued Nolan.

"Who do you mean?"

"Joe Gans."

"It may be that Gans would have trouble making the weight that Gardner would ask," I ventured.

"Don't ever believe it," said Battling Nelson's manager. "Gans can make 133 at any time of day from the moment he gets up until he puts his foot in the ring and at that weight he can lick every white-skinned light weight in the business today."

"That's the whole story," said Coffroth. "Nolan believes what he said and still believes it. That is why I think it next to impossible to get Gans and Nelson together.

Ben Selig, who is Gans' San Francisco agent, was told of Coffroth's remarks, and he said: "I can give you more pertinent dope than that even. I came over from Sausalito on the ferry with Billy Nolan one day and the talk turned to fighting. He rattled off the names of the men he thought Nelson could go through like sunlight through a chink, and then he paused and pondered.

"'But there's one fellow Nelson will never box as long as I have a say in it,' mused Nolan. 'That's Joe Gans. It's poor business to match a man when there's nothing but defeat staring him in the face.'

It may be that Mr. Nolan may deny participation in either incident, and I don't know that there is anything about these quotations to cover him with confusion in any case. "Match well made is half won," is a Shakespearean adage, and I dare say if the Bard of Avon had thought of it he would have made one of his characters say "Better no match than one which promises defeat."

The moral, if there is one, is that it doesn't do to take too much stock in what the manager of a world-famous pugilist says. When he alleges that it is the fear of contaminating influences that deters him from sending his man against a dangerous rival it may be that he is swayed by entirely different motives.

And doesn't it, kind reader, suggest that poor, besmirched Mr. Gans may have been as much sinned against as sinning when he entered into various shady deals in the past? In the name of all that's justifiable, how was the man to obtain honest work when he encountered such sullen, steady, stonewallers as confront him now in his quest of a match with Nelson?

The light is breaking in the matter of just one more match for James J. Jeffries. Billy Delaney, who acted as adviser general conditioner in chief in Big Jim's past matches, is just back from a visit to the Jeffries ranch, and he says that the retired champion will, in all probability, take hold again if shown a suitable opponent and a fair prospect.

Coffroth says that he felt that way about it all along, and that the reason he hasn't bothered Jeffris is that he wants Jack O'Brien or Marvin Hart or Sam Berger, or some other heavyweight to rise so far above his classmates that the public will begin to say: "This fellow would be in line for a tilt at Jeffries if Jeffries hadn't retired."

"When the time is ripe I have no fear but that I will be able to obtain Jeff's signature to articles of agreement," is the way Coffroth puts it.

The threatened return of Jeffries to the fighting game adds interest to the coming match at Los Angeles between Marvin Hart and Tommy Burns, but only because Hart is one of the principals. Hart, on account of his size, probably is looked upon as the most suitable opponent for Jeffries, and the fact that Jeffries snubbed the Kentuckian at a recent slugfest in Los Angeles is taken to mean that Farmer Jim would box as mercilessly with Hart as he did with Jack Munro.

What a farcical situation it would be, though, if Tommy Burns defeated Hart? If anything like that happened Jeffries would, no doubt, burrow deeper than ever into retirement.

Frankie Neil and Harry Tenny, a pair of bantams, are matched to box before the San Francisco fight trust on Feb. 27. They are a waspish couple, and an intense rivalry existed between them ever since they figured in a close thing at Colma. There is every prospect of a bitter contest.

It may be that Henry Mellody and Mike (Twin) Sullivan will form the March card. Morris Levy is negotiating with these welter weights, and is reserving the privilege of putting them in the ring either in this city or Los Angeles.

At this writing the fight trust is in a muddle. As told in last week's letter the shareholders are at loggerheads. Coffroth who was supposed to control 75 per cent of the stock, has given it out that he simply stands on an equal footing with Levy, Graney and Willie Britt, and that the conditions do not suit him.

"If I am to handle the business of the amalgamated managers I want more than 25 per cent," said Coffroth. "What with Britt and Nelson pictures and other schemes my time is too valuable to be given up to the San Francisco fight game under existing arrangements."

If Coffroth cannot make better terms he will go to London to look after the Britt-Nelson films, and will attend to the making of daylight matches at Colma later in the year.

TO SAVE HIS SON'S LIFE

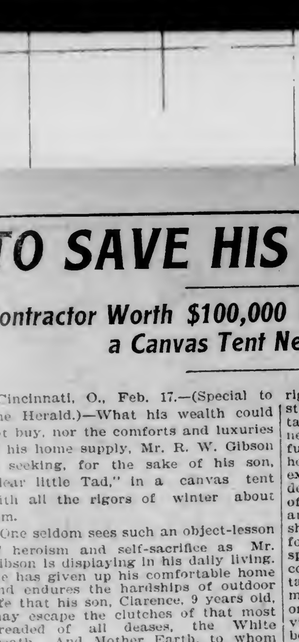

Contractor Worth $100,000 Lives the Year Round in a Canvas Tent Near Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—What his wealth could not buy, nor the comforts and luxuries of his home supply, Mr. R. W. Gibson is seeking, for the sake of his son, "dear little Tad," in a canvas tent with all the rigors of winter about him.

One seldom sees such an object-lesson of heroism and self-sacrifice as Mr. Gibson is displaying in his daily living. He has given up his comfortable home and endures the hardships of outdoor life that his son, Clarence, 9 years old, may escape the clutches of that most dreaded of all deases, the White Death. And Mother Earth, to whom he has taken his son for her blessing, has given assurance that his prayers shall be answered in the little house of cloth outside of Evanston, a suburb of Cincinnati, where they do their cooking and sleep with the fresh air blowing over them.

The father has given up what the average man spends his whole life in trying to obtain. He has made a great sacrifice, as the world sees it, but in his own eyes it amounts to very little.

"Do you think," he said "that I would hesitate for a single minute to leave a comfortable home and live as I am living now, when the life of my boy, my dear Tad, hangs in the balance? He and my older son, Robert, who, thank God, is in good health, are all I have in the world. Why, sir, if I had a million dollars, I would gladly give it all to bring rosy cheeks and a pair of healthy lungs to my little Tad."

Moreover, the father is happy in his new life of privation and hardship. His own health and that of his other son, Robert, has improved greatly since they have been living under the heaven's blue.

"Our home now is very plain, as you see," he said, "but what does that amount to, when I know that each day in the open air and each night beneath the stars, gives my boy a new lease on life. No, I do not find it very disagreeable. In fact, I have grown rather fond of this outdoor life. The tent is water-proof and I have boarded the sides to avoid a washout. Our stove is a good one and on the coldest nights keeps the interior of the tent at a fairly comfortable temperature. Have you noticed that the end of our tent is not boarded up, nothing but the bare canvas? Our bunks are right next to the canvas wall as you can see for yourself. Hence, our supply of fresh, cold air at night is unlimited. Do we ever catch cold? Certainly not. We have warm blankets and plenty of them, and on the coldest night or in the heaviest snow-storm we are as comfortable as the proverbial 'bug in a rug.' Well, yes, I'll have to admit that a person accustomed to sleeping in the average bedroom would shiver and shake all night if he tried to sleep here with us. But we've grown used to it and find it very comfortable. Fortunately, we are able to have the very best of everything in regard to food, and indeed we have all the delicacies of the different seasons. I am a fairly good cook I do not mind preparing our daily meals. My boys help me and we have a merry time in our culinary department. The little shavers have every wish gratified and plenty of spending money—I'm afraid I spoil them. But they are worth it; and nothing in this world is too good for them."

The tent, which is located on the side of a hill in Bloody Run, a precipitious valley, just outside Evanston, Ohio, is much like the home of the average summer camper-out, except that a wooden door has been fixed in the front, instead of the usual tent-flaps. A pane of glass has been fitted into the door, so that on cold days the door may be shut without obstructing the light. The tent is floorless—they live right on the bare ground. A few plain, straight-backed chairs, two pine tables, a trunk, a set of dishes, and the necessary pots and pans, comprise the furnishings of this simple house—a home which its occupants would not exchange for the most palatial residence purchasable. At the rear end of the tent, next to the canvas wall, and running the whole width, is a shelf, or berth, which serves as a bed for the devoted father and his offspring. The berth is wide and well covered with heavy blankets. A curtain separates this sleeping compartment from the rest of the interior. In one corner is kept the supply of provisions, and they are always of the best quality procurable.

On top of the tent-pole is a small American flag, which the two boys patriotically insist shall always be flying in the breeze. Clarence, aged 9 years, and Robert, 15 years old, attend school in Evanston each day, and spend the long afternoons in the open air, roaming the country round about. They are apparently a healthy pair of youngsters. But Clarence's eyes are a little too bright, and his cheeks bear the peculiar flush that denotes the presence of tuberculosis. However, he is on the road to recovery, and his father believes that in another year the specter of death, that has been shadowing him so long, will seek its victims elsewhere. Two dogs, one an Irish setter, the other a mongrel cur that strayed into the tent one night, are the constant companions of the little lads.

When questioned as to his former life, now left so far and so thoroughly behind, Mr. Gibson said:

"Three years ago I lived in Pittsburg. Our home was ideal. We had the best of everything, and my wife and little boys were denied nothing within reason. I started out as a poor boy. In fact, I had little or no home life, for my parents died while I was quite young. Although a mere boy at the time, I resolved that some day I would have a home of my own, where poverty would be a stranger and happiness and love triumphant. I was fortunate. While I was not a wealthy man, I had amassed quite a tidy little sum in the contracting business.

"My home life was so happy, and my wife and children so dear to me that it seemed almost too good to be true. At last it came, and like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky I found out that my wife had been untrue to me—and God knows for how long. I shall never forget that hideous night. I obtained a divorce on the grounds of infidelity, and also secured the custody of the children. I do not know whether my wife is living or dead. She was all in all to me, but—that's over with, let's pass on.

"When my second son, Clarence, was born the doctor said that he could not live a year. But he did, and for six or seven years, although in very poor health. Indeed, he was but a skeleton. Everything known to medical science was done to build up the lad's constitution, but he continued to fail until finally I took him to an eminent physician, who said that the only chance to save his life was to keep him in the open air.

"'But, doctor,' I said, 'he is out of doors all the time now except when he is asleep.'

"'That's just the point,' answered the physician, 'he must sleep out of doors. This is his only chance.'

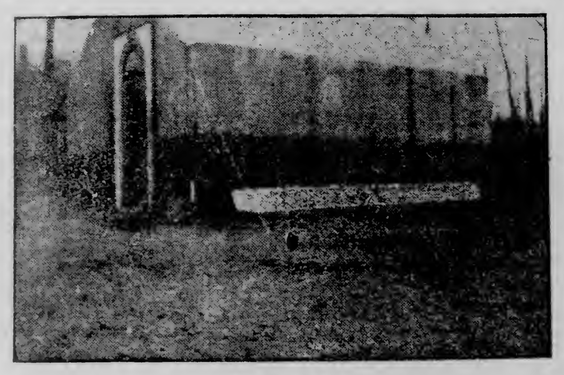

"Well, I thought the whole thing over. The sleepless nights and days of keenest sorrow and worry I passed, are things that I gladly forget. At length I hit upon the plan of living as you see me now. It fulfills the demands of the physician and makes it possible for me to be with my boy. I wouldn't think of sending him to a sanitarium for then I would be separated from him.

"Of course, I had to give up my business and the many things I prized dearly. But it was done to save my boy, and if he improves as steadily in the next few years as he has done in the past he will be in sounder health than the average man—and that's my greatest aim and my fondest hope in life. Heroism? Well, perhaps you might see it in that light, but I can't. It's simply a case of luxury and ease vs. my little Tad.

"I am still in the contracting business and have done quite a bit of work since I have been in Cincinnati. Although I am living the life of a hobo in a burlap tent, I have $20,000 in paid up life insurance policies. That's for my boys when I die. It will give them a start. Then they can hustle for themselves. Moreover, I own over 10,000 shares of mining stock in gold mines out West. They are first-class investments. Then I have laid by a tidy sum in banks. I mention this because it's such a great comfort to know that, if anything should happen to me, my boys will not starve.

"By the way, I have often heard of thieves breaking into the residences of wealthy men, but never before that they thought it worth while to look for money in a canvas tent, which, with all its furnishings could be purchased for a hundred dollars or so. I learned better one evening last week, for we had a visit from those light fingered gentry while the boys and I were in Cincinnati at the theater. Upon our return we found everything inside the tent all topsy-turvy. The table drawers and bed clothes had been thoroughly searched and my trunk had been broken open and ransacked. Failing to find any money, the thieves had contented themselves with several suits of underwear, shirts, hose and two suits of clothes. They even opened the stove and looked in the oven to see if they couldn't find a few thousand dollars lying around loose. Of course, they didn't get any money for I keep every cent, except what is necessary for the week's supply of provisions, in a safe deposit vault. It has gotten around pretty generally in this vicinity that I have got a few dollars laid by, and I suppose the thieves imagined I kept it in an old stocking hung up on the tent pole. As I have said before, I haven't got a savings bank attached to my canvas home, but I have got a revolver which I don't keep locked up in a bureau drawer, and the next thief that comes prowling around here is going to find out how straight I can shoot.

"We expect to be here until July. Then I shall take the boys to Idaho where I am interested in some mining property. If the climate doesn't agree with Tad, we'll move to New Mexico, Arizona or Southern California. I don't care where I have to live nor how long I shall have to live in this way. My boy's health is the first consideration. All else is immaterial. In a few years, when the boys have become old enough to appreciate it I shall take them to Europe and spend several years there. But at present, my boy and I must fight the fight against Death. We'll win, too—or go down to defeat with our faces toward the enemy."

THE TENT.

er than that of any other on the Mesaba, barring that in which the great Hibbing group is located—and in these the Steel corporation is at work preparing for operations on an extensive scale. Most of the properties are deep and wet, and with the exception of the Holman, where the open pit method will be in vogue, practically all of them will be operated by the underground system of mining. Included in the list of the Steel corporation's Western Mesaba properties are the Arcturus, Holman, Diamond, Buckeye and the Canisteo group, the Fletcher and the Lewis, and all will be very large producers.

Large forces are employed at the Canisteo mines, and large shafts are sinking, one of which, a three-compartment opening, 8x20 feet in dimensions, has just been started. It is expected that an especially heavy flow of water will be encountered in this shaft, and at the south side a very large pumping station will be equipped with machinery to handle the excessive flow, which will be diverted through a launder to low ground away from the mine. It is expected that much quicksand will be encountered in sinking, and great skill will be required to preserve the alignment of the shaft. Those of the ores of this field that need concentration, and which contain 10 to probably as much as 30 per cent sand, will be treated at an immense washing plant, which, it is understood, will be installed at Trout lake, south of Bovey. This extra handling of an immense tonnage of ore will, of course, increase considerably the cost of laying down the product at lower lake ports, but tests have shown that the ores will work excellently in the furnace stack and that there will be less flue dust to contend with than is the case with the ore from some districts of the Mesaba.

It is almost entirely in Township 56 that are located the Walker lands, a half interest in the fee of which was recently acquired by the Steel corporation, a deal that was negotiated to the great surprise, it is believed, of J. J. Hill and his Great Northern associates, who, having purchased the other half interest several years before, are credited with feeling secure in the fact that any transfer to other parties involving the remaining rights were tabooed by reason of the remote location of the tracts with reference to shipping ports, the cost of mining and the necessity of treating by the washing process much of the tonnage available. The half interest owned by the Great Northern was acquired at a time when not much was known concerning the great mineral wealth of the field, prior to important discoveries made subsequent to the transaction, and it was picked up at a bargain figure, understood to have been in the neighborhood of only $200,000. The Steel corporation will pay much more than this for the interest it has obtained, probably several million dollars, but it will not be for some time that the proportions of the consideration will be based on the amount of ore shown up by the diamond drills, now in commission, and also on the quality of the product, a distinction having been made between ore running about 57 per cent iron and ore assaying less in metallic contents. Estimates of the merchantable ore in the Walker lands there is reason for the statement that probably 150,000,000 tons will be proved up, half of which, or 75,000,000 tons, constitutes much of the amount the Great Northern still has open to lease.

Aside from the exploratory and development work in progress in the field adjacent to Bovey, there is much activity at Nashwauk and vicinity in the way of drilling, stripping operations and shaft sinking. In this district are the Forest mine, which will be active this season; the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company's Crosby property, and the LaRue and Hawkins mines. The St. Paul mine, northeast of Nashwauk, will be one of the most active properties on the range. It is being developed by Corrigan, McKinney & &Co. Mining will be by the underground method, and employment will be given a large force of men. At Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s Commodore mine at Virginia, stripping has been in progress all winter on a 230,000-yard contract, and in addition ore is being stocked at the rate of about 700 tons a day. It is expected that the season's output will amount to about a quarter of a million tons, much of which will come from the open pit. The Republic Iron & Steel company also is stockpiling at its Virginia group, some of the workings of which had previously been idle for a year or more; the Higgins, a Steel corporation property, has a full force of men at work, and at the Jones & Laughlin company's Lincoln mine a new shaft is going down on the western portion of the property, close to the Higgins open pit. A new double-drum hoist, equipped with 250 horse-power engines, has just been received at the Lincoln for installation at the No. 1 shaft, supplanting a hoist in use since the property was opened. At its Grant mine at Buhl, the Jones & Laughlin company has the installation of the grab system well advanced and will put the new plant in commission in the spring. This clamshell method of stripping and mining is something new in the Lake Superior country, and there is much interest in mining circles in the results of its operations. It is expected to lessen costs. Altogether, the company will ship about 1,200,000 tons of ore this year, of which about 900,000 will come from the Lincoln, Grant and Leetonia, on the Mesaba, and the remainder from the Ishpeming-Negaunee district of the Marquette range. The Leetonia mine, whose deposit is of large proportions, is developed as an open pit.

The Pitt Iron company's Wacoutah property, which is to be operated, both by the steam shovel and milling systems, will be stripped this year. The necessary equipment, including a steam shovel, locomotives and cars, has been ordered. The property lies between Virginia and Mountain Iron. Test-pitting is now in progress for the purpose of defining the boundaries of the deposit, prior to starting the work of removing the overburden. A shaft, also, is sinking, which will be put down to a depth of 200 feet. The water draining from the workings will be hoisted through this shaft, as will also the ore to be mined by the milling system later on. Twelve miles north of Virginia, churn drilling has been started in the Rice river district, on a tract of 120 acres, owned by Virginia parties. Ore was found here at shallow depth, several years ago, and there is a faint possibility that the long sought westerly continuation of the Vermilion may be revealed. The vein runs northeast and southwest, it is stated, which would make it in direct line with the Vermilion. The Tesora Mining company, of which former Mayor M. L. Fay of Virginia is general manager, has taken a lease on the Mallman property, on the eastern Mesaba, and expects to have it on the shipping list before the end of the season. The property has lately been in the possession of the Mesaba Iron company, of which Mr. Fay is president. The Mallman was the first property explored on the Mesaba range, and has lain dormant for years.

The Shenango Furnace company, which latterly has been gradually enlarging its operations in the Lake Superior region, is developing its Shenango property, on the Mesaba, in a manner which indicates the intention of producing 500,000 tons this season. The mine last year forwarded 210,000 tons. The Webb, a new property of the Shenango company at Hibbing, will ship about 250,000 tons. The deposit here contains about 10,000,000 tons. Last season the Webb sent 71,000 tons to market. Stripping operations are in progress at the Yates mine, the only Mesaba property of the Consumers' Ore company now in commission. Work is suspended at the Frantz, and it is problematical whether the property will be on the active list this year. Notice has been served on the tenants-at-will occupying lands of the Mahoning Iron & Steel company, between the village limits of Hibbing and the Mahoning mine, a mile west, that the tract is wanted for mining purposes, and it will be necessary to vacate. About sixty-five dwellings are affected by the order of removal. The plans of the company are not announced, but it is supposed it is intended to now develop the ore known to underlie a portion of the lands in question.

It is reported, upon what authority is not known, that the Biwabik Mining company will ship only 700,000 tons of ore this year. The property sent out more than 1,000,000 tons last season, and if pushed could doubtless reach the 2,000,000 mark this year. However, the reported decision of the company is to conserve supplies for the future, when it is assured that still better prices than now prevail will be obtained for ore. Considerable of the product of the Biwabik has heretofore been sold in the open market, the Brier Hill Iron & Steel company and the Youngstown Steel company, owners of the mine, having had occasion to use only about half of the output.

Excellent reports continue to come from the section 30 (Vermilion range) property, now being developed by the Shagawa Iron company. The shaft is now down more than fifty feet in ore assaying from 60 to 67 per cent iron, and drifting will soon be started. Quite a stockpile is accumulating.

Denn-Arizona companies are expected here soon to hold their annual meeting and inspect the improvements which are being made. Since the last annual meeting, Shattuck-Arizona has made a mine, which it is freely stated by many who should know, has ahead of it a life that will suffer none in comparison with those of the best mines that the Southwest has brought in. It is declared that no other mine in the Warren district has brighter prospects, and the Warren district leads the world with great mines. Shattuck is continuing on the happy program of opening more and more ore on its 700 and 800 levels. That in sight is constantly getting bigger and better and every day adding proof to the good ground for enthusiasm entertained by those interested in the property. During the last week they struck rich sulphides on the 700-foot level in the drift running from that depth. They now have 65 feet of this ore in the drift and no end in immediate prospect. This ore is assaying better than 30 per cent., which is surely an exceedingly nice grade of material to have coming in quantity.

• • •

At the Denn-Arizona they are down 920 feet in the shaft and making splendid progress with their sinking. The water, which they have had for some weeks, is not increasing as yet, and to this time the pumps are handling it without difficulty. Of course, it retards sinking to some extent and the splendid dry ground records for rapidity are being lost. However, the speed being made in the wet ground is of the feature class. Sinking will be continued until the big water basin is entered, which may not be very far distant now, when stations will be cut. From these, drifting will be done, and it is altogether likely within a short time to bring the property into its ore bodies, disclosed by the prospecting diamond drill work.

selected James H. Lynch, Mr. McMillan and W. E. Reynolds to negotiate for the purchase of hoisting and pumping machinery and such other material as may be required for the operation of the property.

• • •

The Butte Copper Exploration company is about ready for active work. The work of placing the machinery was rushed last week, and as soon as it is finished the pumping of water from the old shaft will be begun. Only a few days will be required to accomplish this job, for there are no extensive openings leading from the shaft. Sinking will be prosecuted as soon as the water is out of the way.

• • •

The Raven Copper company installed a 15-drill compressor on its property last week and is now using its own air. Prior to last week it had been buying power from the Anaconda company. The compressor has ample capacity to enable the company to prosecute work in the crosscut from the 1,500-foot station of the Buffalo toward the main vein of the Snoozer much faster than it could before, and with no bad luck the opening will intersect the vein within a month. Some very fine ore is coming from the raises on the 1,200-foot level, several magnificent large chunks showing all sorts of good copper and silver values having been brought down from the property on Saturday. Two of the six raises made from the 1,200 are in bonanza ore.

MINING AS A BUSINESS

Investors Now Quick to See the Safer Side of the Industry---The Business of Necessities.

The New York Mercantile and Financial Times says: A good mining investment under present conditions, and considering the offerings to be found on the stock market today, may be as free from a speculative taint as the most legitimate "sure thing" in the business world. It is merely a matter of discrimination, an appreciation of relative values.

If an investor puts money in an out and out mining venture, one that takes a chance not only on the wealth but even on the location of the mine itself, he is investing in a field that is filled with thousands of luckless miners, and that is presided over by a force that blights money like the sun does the snow. On the other hand, if he secures an interest in an enterprise that has to do with the supplying of some great mining necessity, that is selling a thing that every one needs, that is contracting to do what every one needs done, that investment is safe, and also is business-like. This is what is meant by mining as a business. It is the form of investment that is being adopted by the financiers and heavy investors who want something in return for value received.

An illustration of the investment propositions that are commanding the attention and interest of the more representative men in the money market is the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining company, operating in the famous Idaho Springs district of Colorado. This is a Colorado corporation, is capitalized for $1,500,000, and its management is strengthened by some of the best known figures in the business world and the mining industry. Its properties and privileges consist of five patented claims, thirty-two acres of placer site, a tunnel site, water rights and a transportation tunnel. The company's title to these properties and privileges consists of United States government patents—the most perfect title obtainable for a mine—covering the mining claims and placer grounds, and the title to the transportation tunnel privileges is secured under the laws of the state of Colorado.

In the Idaho Springs Mining district, covering practically all of Clear Creek county, there are over 300 mines being operated, and there are probably three times as many that are not operated, some of them equal, if not of greater value. These mines are located, many of them, in almost inaccessible places upon the mountain tops and sides, usually where the veins crop out above the ground. When the mine owner, or company operating, has followed the vein down into the ground a sufficient distance, hoisting machinery is necessary to draw up the ore. Such machinery is operated by steam and requires coal. The coal has to be hauled up from the railroad, anywhere from half a mile to five or six miles distant, and the cost of hauling it up from the railroad to these mountain tops and sides is oftentimes more than the cost of the coal itself. After the ore has been hoisted out of the pit, or shaft, it must be hauled by wagon back to the railroad, and there reduced by a mill or shipped direct to the smelters at Denver. The enormous cost of getting the ore up out of the shafts and to the railroad means that only high-grade ore can be utilized, that is, ore that will run enough gold to the ton to pay all these burdensome expenses and still leave some profit. If these expenses could only be reduced, the hundreds of mine owners would make a greater profit on the high-grade ore and would also be able to market practically all of their low-grade ore.

Now, it is a geological fact, in the Idaho Springs district, that the ore veins grow thicker and richer and deeper under the surface they go, in some instances they have been tapped 1,000 to 2,500 feet below the surface and found to be from two to six times as thick as on the surface and from two to ten times as rich in quality. Now, imagine a tunnel run through fifty of 100 of these rich mines at a depth of from 500 to 2,000 feet below the surface, and as the tunnel passes through such distinct veins of ore, imagine the ease of the operators of the mines, going into the tunnel and blasting the ore from overhead and dumping it into cars, and letting it run out through the tunnel direct to the railroad at a cost to the mine owner of $1.00 a ton, as against a cost of several dollars a ton by the former method of working on the surface with a steam hoist and the requirement of coal, etc., to be transported by wagon over the mountain tops. Five hundred tons a day is a fair average of what one mine can produce when such a tunnel cuts its vein, under the circumstances suggested. Ten such mines would produce a fair average of 5,000 tons a day; twenty would produce 10,000 tons a day, etc.

The Transportation tunnel has come to be an established factor in modern mining as the world-famous Newhouse tunnel—also in this district—shows.

In addition to this feature, the company's mines, stamping and concentration mill are also promising great dividends, especially the mines which are right on the famous Hoosac vein.

In "The Idaho Spring Siftings-News" of Jan. 13, 1906, we note the following:

"On the line of the Hoosac tunnel are a number of big mines that can be worked through the tunnel to advantage, which arrangement will yield the company a good revenue for the transportation of ore from these adjoining mines.

"Mining men familiar with the Hoosac unhesitatingly say that it is one of the most attractive mining tunnels in the district, and they predict that it will become an extremely profitable proposition.

"The recent big strike of the Specie Payment vein by the Two Brothers tunnel will unquestionably be eclipsed by the Hoosac tunnel whose course brings it underneath that point at an additional depth of 1,000 feet.

"The Two Brothers tunnel reached the Specie Payment vein Friday, Jan. 5, and in two rounds thereafter opened a lode measuring 7 feet in width, of which 5 feet is high-grade ore. There is a solid streak on the hanging wall which assays from $80 to $200 per ton and has an average value of over $100 per ton. The balance of the streak is finely mineralized milling ore of high value for such treatment. The ore is the readily recognizable Specie Payment copper-iron and carries from 2.50 ounces to 6 ounces gold, about 30 ounces silver and as high as 20 per cent copper per ton. Thirty cars of marketable ore was taken out in crossing the vein with the tunnel. The main tunnel will be driven ahead about 50 feet and drifting on the vein each way will be started at once."

Pierce Underwood, the Chicago man who has been identified with many of the more representative and legitimate investment enterprises that have appeared in recent years, is handling the shares of this company and offering a limited number of shares for public subscription, and his connection with it has carried great weight with La Salle street brokers. The shares are selling briskly, and owing to the reports of metallurgical experts, backed by the known standing of the men at the head of the Hoosac corporation, a marked sentiment has set in in its favor, and the stock will soon be off the market.

MINING IN UTAH

Minneapolis and Duluth have become interested in this camp.

Last week some samples of high-grade ore were brought in from the Honerine, which show from 70 to 80 per cent lead and good values in silver. The tunnels are now running through five feet of this character of ore. The New Stockton Mining company is having some difficulties. One of the machinery firms at Salt Lake recently brought suit for $12,000 against this company.

There has been a change in the officers of the Utah Copper company. C. M. MacNeill is president; D. C. Jackling, vice president and general manager; Spencer Penrose, secretary and treasurer. The fact that John Hays Hammond and A. Chester Beatty are connected with the company in an official capacity as engineers, shows that the American Smelting & Refining company is largely interested, or perhaps we should say, the Guggenheims are in control.

AT CRIPPLE CREEK

New $250,000 Company Formed by A. C. Bullis and Others.

Colorado Springs, Feb. 17.—The Almira Gold Mining company, $250,000 capitalization, has been incorporated by A. C. Bullis and others to develop a group of five claims betwen the Chicago Belle and Great Britain claims in North Spring Gulch, Cripple Creek. The veins will be opened by a crosscut tunnel. In the discovery shaft of one claim gold and 163 ounces silver, of $1,587 a ton. Another claim has exposed a ten-inch streak carrying 3.20 to 5.60 ounces gold per ton.

The Bertha mill has been started to treat the Orr mine ores containing $7.60 to $11 a ton values. The Orr vein is 8 to 12 feet wide.

Preparations for pumping from the 1,000 foot level of the El Paso mine have brightened the prospects of the C., K. & N. and the Old Gold mines, whose lower workings will thus be drained. In the former a vein of rich ore was discovered, but operations were closed abruptly by water.

An ore body has been opened in the Beacon Hill Ajax of the El Paso Consolidated company. It measures three to five feet and has a gold value of $20 to $60 a ton.

Charles Walden, lessee, has opened a six foot ore shoot in the Katinka mine on Guild hill, Cripple Creek, from which good returns are expected.

The Hillhouse mine, in the Russell district, has been sold to F. H. Simons and associates of Providence, R. I. The property was owned by the Rocky Mountain National bank of Central City. It is credited with a $150,000 production record. The new purchasers will install modern machinery, erect new buildings and begin extensive development work.

The Interocean Mining & Milling company is constructing a mill at Sunshine, Boulder county. At Summerville, near by, the Cash mill is being put in shape to treat large ore supplies. In Black Cloud gulch, in the same district, the Pollock mill will be started this week.

The Doric tunnel will soon be pushed toward its objective, the Gem mine, which it must penetrate in cutting through Saxon mountain. Work was stopped in 1902, when the tunnel was in 3,000 feet. Several lodes were intersected, but no drifting has been done. The American Smelting & Refining company wants to exploit the vein found at 1,000 feet distance. W. E. Renshaw, owner of the Gem mine, is owner of eighty-eight claims on the east side of the mountain. The tunnel will be run to intersect each vein. The Lamartine vein will be thoroughly exploited. The ruling of the supreme court giving tunnels right of way through all properties has made the completion of the tunnel possible.

The Centennial mine, Georgetown district, is in a four-foot ore body, fourteen inches of which is solid copper. The general average is 32 ounces silver, 4.2 ounces gold and 19 per cent copper a ton.

The discovery in he fourteenth level of the Old Town mine, Clear Creek-Gilpin district, of an immense body of extra good ore is proving important in making the mine productive throughout. The mine has yielded its present management $115,000 in dividends, as a result of systematic development.

CALIFORNIA MINES.

San Francisco, Feb. 16.—The Feather River Exploration company and the Cherokee Dredging company have been consolidated by W. P. Hammon, and the new company will be known as the Feather River Exploration, consolidated, with a capital of $1,500,000 fully paid up. The former owners of these companies were New York and Pittsburg capitalists. Mr. Hammon was able to show San Francisco moneyed men that there was big profit in these dredgers and he secured easily the cash to finance this deal. Among those interested are E. J. de Supler, Jr., who will be president of the company, William H. Crocker, Joseph D. Grant, Louis Storr and others. The company has about 1,000 acres of fine land which has all been prospected with the drilling machine, and it has six dredges. Two new dredges, each capable of handling 3,000 cubic yards per day, will be built at once.

One of the heaviest pieces of mining work in California is the 700-foot air shaft which is designed to carry air and afford ventilation to the four-mile tunnel in the Hidden Treasure gold mine in Placer county. This air shaft was dug from above and below at the same time and the two gangs met 400 feet above the tunnel level. Three years have been spent on the shaft.

The old Rademacher mine will soon be reopened at Randsburg. The owner disappeared about seven years ago. Rademacher left Randsbury for a trip across the desert to Arizona and no trace of him was ever found. It was plain that he had lost his way and perished on the desert, but until recently the courts would not give permission for the distribution of his estate. The mine is a big low grade proposition, the ore averaging $14 to the ton, though there are stringers that go as high as $1,000 to the ton. One shaft is down 200 feet, with cross cuts every fifty feet.

MINING IN IDAHO.

Boise, Feb. 17.—Snowstorms continue in the mountains, assuring a splendid placer mining season.

Plans are made for the construction as soon as possible in the spring of a wagon road to connect Big Creek district with the Thunder Mountain road. During the past two years a number of mining men have been attracted to the district and several have secured property there. The development now in progress in the Bluebird group of the Pen-Idaho company, in the Pueblo property, and some other groups it is believed will show up some wonderful mines. The ledges are monsters in size.

An important strike has been made in the Dutch John mine, near Leesburg. A new tunnel has been run into a big dike of low grade ore, where a streak of five feet thick was cut that assays from $10 to $100 to the ton in gold. The balance of the ledge goes from $3 to $20 a ton.

IN THE BLACK HILLS.

Rochford, S. D., Feb. 17.—The Montezuma Mining company is making surveys preliminary to patenting another group in Strawberry gulch, about a mile from this city. An air compressor and two ore drills are at work. The ground is being well opened up and shows very flattering prospects.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 17.—The directors of the Reliance Gold Mining company have been engaged in raising $40,000 for the building of a mill. This amount has now all been pledged. The mill will have a capacity of 200 tons a day, and there is now available sufficient ore to supply such a mill for fourteen years. The company has a large water supply and an excellent mill site. The company has an acreage of about 500 acres and an immense amount of good grade ore.

ALASKA MINING.

Seattle, Feb. 17.—At Fairbanks there is great activity along the creeks. Mines are accumulating ore on the dumps and sales are taking place quite frequently at good prices. The Hannon-Shay claim, known as No. 8, sold for over $100,000. A fifty horse power plant is operating on this property.

No. 7, owned by Meehan & Larson, on the same creek, is hoisting out a large amount of pay dirt. This will be among the busiest of the claims, as it opened up in fine shape early in the season after the fall clean-up.

On No. 3 6,000 wheelbarrow loads are on the dump, ready for the spring clean-up, and from the prospecting it gives great promise.

TO SAVE HIS SON'S LIFE

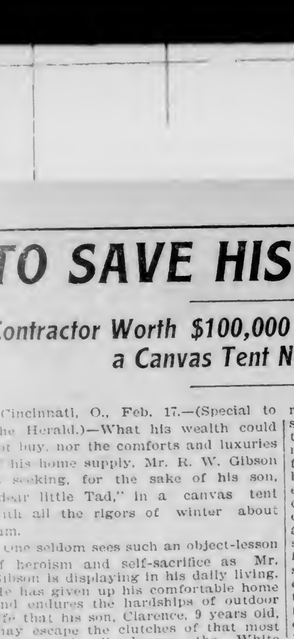

Contractor Worth $100,000 Lives the Year Round in a Canvas Tent Near Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—What his wealth could not buy, nor the comforts and luxuries of his home supply, Mr. R. W. Gibson is seeking, for the sake of his son, "dear little Tad," in a canvas tent with all the rigors of winter about him.

One seldom sees such an object-lesson of heroism and self-sacrifice as Mr. Gibson is displaying in his daily living. He has given up his comfortable home and endures the hardships of outdoor life that his son, Clarence, 9 years old, may escape the clutches of that most dreaded of all deases, the White Death. And Mother Earth, to whom he has taken his son for her blessing, has given assurance that his prayers shall be answered in the little house of cloth outside of Evanston, a suburb of Cincinnati, where they do their cooking and sleep with the fresh air blowing over them.

The father has given up what the average man spends his whole life in trying to obtain. He has made a great sacrifice, as the world sees it, but in his own eyes it amounts to very little.

"Do you think," he said "that I would hesitate for a single minute to leave a comfortable home and live as I am living now, when the life of my boy, my dear Tad, hangs in the balance?" He and my older son, Robert, who, thank God, is in good health, are all I have in the world. Why, sir, if I had a million dollars, I would gladly give it all to bring rosy cheeks and a pair of healthy lungs to my little Tad."

Moreover, the father is happy in his new life of privation and hardship. His own health and that of his other son, Robert, has improved greatly since they have been living under the heaven's blue.

"Our home now is very plain, as you see," he said, "but what does that amount to, when I know that each day in the open air and each night beneath the stars, gives my boy a new lease on life. No, I do not find it very disagreeable. In fact, I have grown rather fond of this outdoor life. The tent is water-proof and I have boarded the sides to avoid a washout. Our stove is a good one and on the coldest nights keeps the interior of the tent at a fairly comfortable temperature. Have you noticed that the end of our tent is not boarded up, nothing but the bare canvas? Our bunks are right next to the canvas wall as you can see for yourself. Hence an supply of fresh, cold air at night is unlimited. Do we ever catch cold? Certainly not. We have warm blankets and plenty of them, and on the coldest night or in the heaviest snow-storm we are as comfortable as the proverbial 'bug in a rug.' Well, yes, I'll have to admit that a person accustomed to sleeping in the average bedroom would shiver and shake all night if he tried to sleep here with us. But we've grown used to it and find it very comfortable. Fortunately, we are able to have the very best of everything in regard to food, and indeed we have all the delicacies of the different seasons. I am a fairly good cook I do not mind preparing our daily meals. My boys help me and we have a merry time in our culinary department. The little shavers have every wish gratified and plenty of spending money—I'm afraid I spoil them. But they are worth it; and nothing in this world is too good for them."

The tent, which is located on the side of a hill in Bloody Run, a precipitious valley, just outside Evanston, Ohio, is much like the home of the average actioner camper-out, except that a wooden door has been fixed in the front instead of the usual tent-flaps. A pane of glass has been fitted into the door, so that on cold days the door may be shut without obstructing the light. The tent is floorless—they live right on the bare ground. A few plain, straight-backed chairs, two pine tables, a trunk, a set of dishes, and the necessary pots and pans, comprise the furnishings of this simple house—a home which its occupants would not exchange for the most palatial residence purchasable. At the rear end of the tent, next to the canvas wall, and running the whole width, is a shelf, or berth, which serves as a bed for the devoted father and his offspring. The berth is wide and well covered with heavy blankets. A curtain separates this sleeping compartment from the rest of the interior. In one corner is kept the supply of provisions, and they are always of the best quality procurable.

On top of the tent-pole is a small American flag, which the two boys patriotically insist shall always be flying in the breeze. Clarence, aged 9 years, and Robert, 15 years old, attend school in Evanston each day, and spend the long afternoons in the open air, roaming the country round about. They are apparently a healthy pair of youngsters. But Clarence's eyes are a little too bright, and his cheeks bear the peculiar flush that denotes the presence of tuberculosis. However, he is on the road to recovery, and his father believes that in another year the specter of death, that has been shadowing him so long, will seek its victims elsewhere. Two dogs, one an Irish setter, the other a mongrel cur that strayed into the tent one night, are the constant companions of the little lads.

When questioned as to his former life, now left so far and so thoroughly behind, Mr. Gibson said:

"Three years ago I lived in Pittsburg. Our home was ideal. We had the best of everything, and my wife and little boys were denied nothing within reason. I started out as a poor boy. In fact, I had little or no home life, for my parents died while I was quite young. Although a mere boy at the time, I resolved that some day I would have a home of my own, where poverty would be a stranger and happiness and love triumphant. I was fortunate. While I was not a wealthy man, I had amassed quite a tidy little sum in the contracting business.

"My home life was so happy, and my wife and children so dear to me that it seemed almost too good to be true. At last it came, and like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky I found out that my wife had been untrue to me—and God knows for how long. I shall never forget that hideous night. I obtained a divorce on the grounds of infidelity, and also secured the custody of the children. I do not know whether my wife is living or dead. She was all in all to me, but—that's over with, let's pass on.

"When my second son, Clarence, was born the doctor said that he could not live a year. But he did, and for six or seven years, although in very poor health. Indeed, he was but a skeleton. Everything known to medical science was done to build up the lad's constitution, but he continued to fail until finally I took him to an eminent physician, who said that the only chance to save his life was to keep him in the open air.

"'But, doctor,' I said, 'he is out of doors all the time now except when he is asleep.'

"'That's just the point,' answered the physician, 'he must sleep out of doors. This is his only chance.'

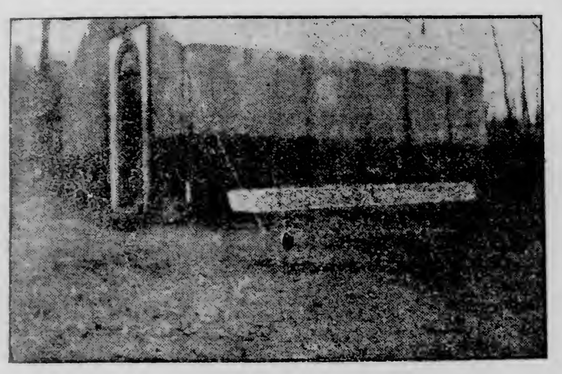

"Well, I thought the whole thing over. The sleepless nights and days of keenest sorrow and worry I passed, are things that I gladly forget. At length I hit upon the plan of living as you see me now. It fulfills the demands of the physician and makes it possible for me to be with my boy. I wouldn't think of sending him to a sanitarium for then I would be separated from him.

"Of course, I had to give up my business and the many things I prized dearly. But it was done to save my boy, and if he improves as steadily in the next few years as he has done in the past he will be in sounder health than the average man—and that's my greatest aim and my fondest hope in life. Heroism? Well, perhaps you might see it in that light, but I can't. It's simply a case of luxury and ease vs. my little Tad.

"I am still in the contracting business and have done quite a bit of work since I have been in Cincinnati. Although I am living the life of a hobo in a burlap tent, I have $20,000 in paid up life insurance policies. That's for my boys when I die. It will give them a start. Then they can hustle for themselves. Moreover, I own over 10,000 shares of mining stock in gold mines out West. They are first-class investments. Then I have laid by a tidy sum in banks. I mention this because it's such a great comfort to know that, if anything should happen to me, my boys will not starve.

"By the way, I have often heard of thieves breaking into the residences of wealthy men, but never before that they thought it worth while to look for money in a canvas tent, which, with all its furnishings could be purchased for a hundred dollars or so. I learned better one evening last week, for we had a visit from those light fingered gentry while the boys and I were in Cincinnati at the theater. Upon our return we found everything inside the tent all topsy-turvy. The table drawers and bed clothes had been thoroughly searched and my trunk had been broken open and ransacked. Failing to find any money, the thieves had contented themselves with several suits of underwear, shirts, hose and two suits of clothes. They even opened the stove and looked in the oven to see if they couldn't find a few thousand dollars lying around loose. Of course, they didn't get any money for I keep every cent, except what is necessary for the week's supply of provisions, in a safe deposit vault. It has gotten around pretty generally in this vicinity that I have got a few dollars laid by, and I suppose the thieves imagined I kept it in an old stocking hung up on the tent pole. As I have said before, I haven't got a savings bank attached to my canvas home, but I have got a revolver which I don't keep locked up in a bureau drawer, and the next thief that comes prowling around here is going to find out how straight I can shoot.

"We expect to be here until July. Then I shall take the boys to Idaho where I am interested in some mining property. If the climate doesn't agree with Tad, we'll move to New Mexico, Arizona or Southern California. I don't care where I have to live nor how long I shall have to live in this way. My boy's health is the first consideration. All else is immaterial. In a few years, when the boys have become old enough to appreciate it I shall take them to Europe and spend several years there. But at present, my boy and I must fight the fight against Death. We'll win, too—or go down to defeat with our faces toward the enemy."

THE TENT.

or than that of any other on the Mesaba, barring that in which the great Hibbing group is located—and in these the Steel corporation is at work preparing for operations on an extensive scale. Most of the properties are deep and wet, and with the exception of the Holman, where the open pit method will be in vogue, practically all of them will be operated by the underground system of mining. Included in the list of the Steel corporation's Western Mesaba properties are the Arcturus, Holman, Diamond, Buckeye and the Canisteo group, the Fletcher and the Lewis, and all will be very large producers.

Large forces are employed at the Canisteo mines, and large shafts are sinking, one of which, a three-compartment opening, 8x20 feet in dimensions, has just been started. It is expected that an especially heavy flow of water will be encountered in this shaft, and at the south side a very large pumping station will be equipped with machinery to handle the excessive flow, which will be diverted through a launder to low ground away from the mine. It is expected that much quicksand will be encountered in sinking, and great skill will be required to preserve the alignment of the shaft. Those of the ores of this field that need construction, and which contain 10 to probably as much as 30 per cent sand, will be treated at an immense washing plant, which, it is understood, will be installed at Trout lake, south of Bovey. This extra handling of an immense tonnage of ore will, of course, increase considerably the cost of laying down the product at lower lake ports, but tests have shown that the ores will work excellently in the furnace stack and that there will be less flue dust to contend with than is the case with the ore from some districts of the Mesaba.

It is almost entirely in Township 56 that are located the Walker lands, a half interest in the fee of which was recently acquired by the Steel corporation, a deal that was negotiated to the great surprise, it is believed, of J. J. Hill and his Great Northern associates, who, having purchased the other half interest several years before, are credited with feeling secure in the fact that any transfer to other parties involving the remaining rights were unbeknown by reason of the remote location of the tracts with reference to shipping ports, the cost of mining and the necessity of treating by the washing process much of the tonnage available. The half interest owned by the Great Northern was acquired at a time when not much was known concerning the great mineral wealth of the field, prior to important discoveries made subsequent to the transaction, and it was picked up at a bargain figure, understood to have been in the neighborhood of only $200,000. The Steel corporation will pay much more than this for the interest it has obtained, probably several million dollars, but it will not be for some time that the proportions of the consideration will be based on the amount of ore shown up by the diamond drills, now in commission, and also on the quality of the product, a distinction having been made between ore running above 57 per cent iron and ore assaying less in metallic contents. Estimates of the merchantable ore in the Walker lands must of necessity at present be purely guesswork. Only a few holes have ever been put down on the tracts, but from discoveries on adjacent lands there is reason for the statement that probably 150,000,000 tons will be proved up, half of which, or 75,000,000 tons, constitutes much of the amount the Great Northern still has open to lease.

Aside from the exploratory and development work in progress in the field adjacent to Bovey, there is much activity at Nashwauk and vicinity in the way of drilling, stripping operations and shaft sinking. In this district are the Forest mine, which will be active this season; the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company's Crosby property, and the LaRue and Hawkins mines. The St. Paul mine, northeast of Nashwauk, will be one of the most active properties on the range. It is being developed by Corrigan, McKinney & &Co. Mining will be by the underground method, and employment will be given a large force of men. At Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s Commodore mine at Virginia, stripping has been in progress all winter on a 230,000-yard contract, and in addition ore is being stocked at the rate of about 700 tons a day. It is expected that the season's output will amount to about a quarter of a million tons, much of which will come from the open pit. The Republic Iron & Steel company also is stockpiling at its Virginia group, some of the workings of which had previously been idle for a year or more; the Higgins, a Steel corporation property, has a full force of men at work, and at the Jones & Laughlin company's Lincoln mine a new shaft is going down on the western portion of the property, close to the Higgins open pit. A new double-drum hoist, equipped with 250 horse-power engines, has just been received at the Lincoln for installation at the No. 1 shaft, supplanting a hoist in use since the property was opened. At its Grant mine at Buhl, the Jones & Laughlin company has the installation of the grab system well advanced and will put the new plant in commission in the spring. This clamshell method of stripping and mining is something new in the Lake Superior country, and there is much interest in mining circles in the results of its operations. It is expected to lessen costs. Altogether, the company will ship about 1,200,000 tons of ore this year, of which about 900,000 will come from the Lincoln, Grant and Loetonia, on the Mesaba, and the remainder from the Ishpeming-Negaunee district of the Marquette range. The Loetonia mine, whose deposit is of large proportions, is developed as an open pit.

The Pitt Iron company's Wacoutah property, which is to be operated, both by the steam shovel and milling systems, will be stripped this year. The necessary equipment, including a steam shovel, locomotives and cars, has been ordered. The property lies between Virginia and Mountain Iron. Test-pitting is now in progress for the purpose of defining the boundaries of the deposit, prior to starting the work of removing the overburden. A shaft, also, is sinking, which will be put down to a depth of 200 feet. The water draining from the workings will be hoisted through this shaft, as will also the ore to be mined by the milling system later on. Twelve miles north of Virginia, churn drilling has been started in the Rice river district, on a tract of 120 acres, owned by Virginia parties. Ore was found here at shallow depth, several years ago, and there is a faint possibility that the long sought westerly continuation of the Vermilion may be revealed. The vein runs northeast and southwest, it is stated, which would make it in direct line with the Vermilion. The Tesora Mining company, of which former Mayor M. L. Fay of Virginia is general manager, has taken a lease on the Mallman property, on the eastern Mesaba, and expects to have it on the shipping list before the end of the season. The property has lately been in the possession of the Mesaba Iron company, of which Mr. Fay is president. The Mallman was the first property explored on the Mesaba range, and has lain dormant for years.

The Shenango Furnace company, which latterly has been gradually enlarging its operations in the Lake Superior region, is developing its Shenango property, on the Mesaba, in a manner which indicates the intention of producing 500,000 tons this season. The mine last year forwarded 210,000 tons. The Webb, a new property of the Shenango company at Hibbing, will ship about 250,000 tons. The deposit here contains about 10,000,000 tons. Last season the Webb sent 71,000 tons to market. Stripping operations are in progress at the Yates mine, the only Mesaba property of the Consumers' Ore company now in commission. Work is suspended at the Frantz, and it is problematical whether the property will be on the active list this year. Notice has been served on the tenants-at-will occupying lands of the Mahoning Iron & Steel company, between the village limits of Hibbing and the Mahoning mine, a mile west, that the tract is wanted for mining purposes, and it will be necessary to vacate. About sixty-five dwellings are affected by the order of removal. The plans of the company are not announced, but it is supposed it is intended to now develop the ore known to underlie a portion of the lands in question.

It is reported, upon what authority is not known, that the Biwabik Mining company will ship only 700,000 tons of ore this year. The property sent out more than 1,000,000 tons last season, and if pushed could doubtless reach the 2,000,000 mark this year. However, the reported decision of the company is to conserve supplies for the future, when it is assured that still better prices than now prevail will be obtained for ore. Considerable of the product of the Biwabik has heretofore been sold in the open market, the Brier Hill Iron & Steel company and the Youngstown Steel company, owners of the mine, having had occasion to use only about half of the output.

Excellent reports continue to come from the section 30 (Vermilion range) property, now being developed by the Shagawa iron company. The shaft is now down more than fifty feet in ore assaying from 60 to 67 per cent iron, and drifting will soon be started. Quite a stockpile is accumulating.

Denn-Arizona companies are expected here soon to hold their annual meeting and inspect the improvements which are being made. Since the last annual meeting, Shattuck-Arizona has made a mine, which it is freely stated by many who should know, has ahead of it a life that will suffer none in comparison with those of the best mines that the Southwest has brought in. It is declared that no other mine in the Warren district has brighter prospects, and the Warren district heads the world with great mines. Shattuck is continuing on the happy program of opening more and more ore on its 700 and 800 levels. That in sight is constantly getting bigger and better and every day adding proof to the good ground for enthusiasm entertained by those interested in the property. During the last week they struck rich sulphides on the 700-foot level in the drift running from that depth. They now have 65 feet of this ore in the drift and no end in immediate prospect. This ore is assaying better than 30 per cent., which is surely an exceedingly nice grade of material to have coming in quantity.

* * *

At the Denn-Arizona they are down 920 feet in the shaft and making splendid progress with their sinking. The water, which they have had for some weeks, is not increasing as yet, and to this time the pumps are handling it without difficulty. Of course, it retards sinking to some extent and the splendid dry ground records for rapidity are being lost. However, the speed being made in the wet ground is of the feature class. Sinking will be continued until the big water basin is entered, which may not be very far distant now, when stations will be cut. From these, drifting will be done, and it is altogether likely within a short time to bring the property into its ore bodies, disclosed by the prospecting diamond drill work.

BUTTE PLEASED WITH COLE DEAL

selected James H. Lynch, Mr. McMillan and W. E. Reynolds to negotiate for the purchase of hoisting and pumping machinery and such other material as may be required for the operation of the property.

* * *

The Butte Copper Exploration company is about ready for active work. The work of placing the machinery was rushed last week, and as soon as it is finished the pumping of water from the old shaft will be begun. Only a few days will be required to accomplish this job, for there are no extensive openings leading from the shaft. Sinking will be prosecuted as soon as the water is out of the way.

* * *

The Raven Copper company installed a 15-drill compressor on its property last week and is now using its own air. Prior to last week it had been buying power from the Anaconda company. The compressor has ample capacity to enable the company to prosecute work in the crosscut from the 1,500-foot station of the Buffalo toward the main vein of the Snoozer much faster than it could before, and with no bad luck the opening will intersect the vein within a month. Some very fine ore is coming from the raises on the 1,200-foot level, several magnificent large chunks showing all sorts of good copper and silver values having been brought down from the property on Saturday. Two of the six raises made from the 1,200 are in bonanza ore.

MINING AS A BUSINESS

Investors Now Quick to See the Safer Side of the Industry---The Business of Necessities.

The New York Mercantile and Financial Times says: A good mining investment under present conditions, and considering the offerings to be found on the stock market today, may be as free from a speculative taint as the most legitimate "sure thing" in the business world. It is merely a matter of discrimination, an appreciation of relative values.

If an investor puts money in an out and out mining venture, one that takes a chance not only on the wealth but even on the location of the mine itself, he is investing in a field that is filled with thousands of luckless miners, and that is presided over by a force that blights money like the sun does the snow. On the other hand, if he secures an interest in an enterprise that has to do with the supplying of some great mining necessity, that is selling a thing that every one needs, that is contracting to do what every one needs done, that investment is safe, and also is business-like. This is what is meant by mining as a business. It is the form of investment that is being adopted by the financiers and heavy investors who want something in return for value received.

An illustration of the investment propositions that are commanding the attention and interest of the more representative men in the money market is the Hoosac Tunnel & Mining company, operating in the famous Idaho Springs district of Colorado. This is a Colorado corporation, is capitalized for $1,500,000, and its management is strengthened by some of the best known figures in the business world and the mining industry. Its properties and privileges consist of five patented claims, thirty-two acres of placer site, a tunnel site, water rights and a transportation tunnel. The company's title to these properties and privileges consists of United States government patents—the most perfect title obtainable for a mine—covering the mining claims and placer grounds, and the title to the transportation tunnel privileges is secured under the laws of the state of Colorado.

In the Idaho Springs Mining district, covering practically all of Clear Creek county, there are over 300 mines being actively operated, and there are probably three times as many that are not operated, some of them equal, if not of greater value. These mines are located, many of them, in almost inaccessible places upon the mountain tops and sides, usually where the veins crop out above the ground. When the mine owner, or company operating, has followed the vein down into the ground a sufficient distance, hoisting machinery is necessary to draw up the ore. Such machinery is operated by steam and requires coal. The coal has to be hauled up from the railroad, anywhere from half a mile to five or six miles distant, and the cost of hauling it up from the railroad to these mountain tops and sides is oftentimes more than the cost of the coal itself. After the ore has been hoisted out of the pit, or shaft, it must be hauled by wagon back to the railroad, and there reduced by a mill or shipped direct to the smelters at Denver. The enormous cost of getting the ore up out of the shafts and to the railroad means that only high-grade ore can be utilized, that is, ore that will run enough gold to the ton to pay all these burdensome expenses and still leave some profit. If these expenses could only be reduced, the hundreds of mine owners would make a greater profit on the high-grade ore and would also be able to market practically all of their low-grade ore.

Now, it is a geological fact, in the Idaho Springs district, that the ore veins grow thicker and richer and deeper under the surface they go, in some instances they have been tapped 1,000 to 2,500 feet below the surface and found to be from two to six times as thick as on the surface and from two to ten times as rich in quality. Now, imagine a tunnel run through fifty of 100 of these rich mines at a depth of from 500 to 2,000 feet below the surface, and as the tunnel passes through such distinct veins of ore, imagine the ease of the operators of the mines, going into the tunnel and blasting the ore from overhead and dumping it into cars, and letting it run out through the tunnel direct to the railroad at a cost to the mine owner of $1.00 a ton, as against a cost of several dollars a ton by the former method of working on the surface with a steam hoist and the requirement of coal, etc., to be transported by wagon over the mountain tops. Five hundred tons a day is a fair average of what one mine can produce when such a tunnel cuts its vein, under the circumstances suggested. Ten such mines would produce a fair average of 5,000 tons a day; twenty would produce 10,000 tons a day, etc.

The Transportation tunnel has come to be an established factor in modern mining as the world-famous Newhouse tunnel—also in this district—shows.

In addition to this feature, the company's mines, stamping and concentration mill are also promising great dividends, especially the mines which are right on the famous Hoosac vein.

In "The Idaho Spring Siftings-News" of Jan. 13, 1906, we note the following:

"On the line of the Hoosac tunnel are a number of big mines that can be worked through the tunnel to advantage, which arrangement will yield the company a good revenue for the transportation of ore from these adjoining mines.

"Mining men familiar with the Hoosac unhesitatingly say that it is one of the most attractive mining tunnels in the district, and they predict that it will become an extremely profitable proposition.

"The recent big strike of the Specie Payment vein by the Two Brothers tunnell will unquestionably be eclipsed by the Hoosac tunnel whose course brings it underneath that point at an additional depth of 1,000 feet.

"The Two Brothers tunnel reached the Specie Payment vein Friday, Jan. 5, and in two rounds thereafter opened a lode measuring 7 feet in width, of which 5 feet is high-grade ore. There is a solid streak on the hanging wall which assays from $80 to $200 per ton and has an average value of over $100 per ton. The balance of the streak is finely mineralized milling ore of high value for such treatment. The ore is the readily recognizable Specie Payment copper-iron and carries from 2.50 ounces to 6 ounces gold, about 30 ounces silver and as high as 20 per cent copper per ton. Thirty cars of marketable ore was taken out in crossing the vein with the tunnel. The main tunnel will be driven ahead about 50 feet and drifting on the vein each way will be started at once."

Pierce Underwood, the Chicago man who has been identified with many of the more representative and legitimate investment enterprises that have appeared in recent years, is handling the shares of this company and offering a limited number of shares for public subscription, and his connection with it has carried great weight with La Salle street brokers. The shares are selling briskly, and owing to the reports of metallurgical experts, backed by the known standing of the men at the head of the Hoosac corporation, a marked sentiment has set in in its favor, and the stock will soon be off the market.

MINING IN UTAH

Minneapolis and Duluth have become interested in this camp.

Last week some samples of high-grade ore were brought in from the Honerine, which show from 70 to 80 per cent lead and good values in silver. The tunnels are now running through five feet of this character of ore. The New Stockton Mining company is having some difficulties. One of the mechinery firms at Salt Lake recently brought suit for $12,000 against this company.

There has been a change in the officers of the Utah Copper company. C. M. MacNeill is president; D. C. Jackling, vice president and general manager; Spencer Penrose, secretary and treasurer. The fact that John Hays Hammond and A. Chester Beatty are connected with the company in an official capacity as engineers, shows that the American Smelting & Refining company is largely interested, or perhaps we should say, the Guggenheims are in control.

AT CRIPPLE CREEK

New $250,000 Company Formed by A. C. Bullis and Others.

Colorado Springs, Feb. 17.—The Almira Gold Mining company, $250,000 capitalization, has been incorporated by A. C. Bullis and others to develop a group of five claims between the Chicago Belle and Great Britain claims in North Spring Gulch, Cripple Creek. The veins will be opened by a crosscut tunnel. In the discovery shaft of one claim gold and 103 ounces silver, of $1,587 a ton. Another claim has exposed a ten-inch streak carrying 3.50 to 5.50 ounces gold per ton.

The Bertha mill has been started to treat the Orr mine ores containing $7.60 to $11 a ton values. The Orr vein is 8 to 12 feet wide.

Preparations for pumping from the 1,000 foot level of the El Paso mine have brightened the prospects of the C., K. & N. and the Old Gold mines, whose lower workings will thus be drained. In the former a vein of rich ore was discovered, but operations were closed abruptly by water.

An ore body has been opened in the Beacon Hill Ajax of the El Paso Consolidated company. It measures three to five feet and has a gold value of $20 to $60 a ton.

Charles Walden, lessee, has opened a six foot ore shoot in the Katinka mine on Guild hill, Cripple Creek, from which good returns are expected.

The Hillhouse mine, in the Russell district, has been sold to F. H. Simons and associates of Providence, R. I. The property was owned by the Rocky Mountain National bank of Central City. It is credited with a $150,000 production record. The new purchasers will install modern machinery, erect new buildings and begin extensive development work.

The Interocean Mining & Milling company is constructing a mill at Sunshine, Boulder county. At Summerville, near by, the Cash mill is being put in shape to treat large ore supplies. In Black Cloud gulch, in the same district, the Pollock mill will be started this week.

The Doric tunnel will soon be pushed toward its objective, the Gem mine, which it must penetrate in cutting through Saxon mountain. Work was stopped in 1902, when the tunnel was in 3,000 feet. Several lodes were intersected, but no drifting has been done. The American Smelting & Refining company wants to exploit the vein found at 1,000 feet distance. W. E. Renshaw, owner of the Gem mine, is owner of eighty-eight claims on the east side of the mountain. The tunnel will be run to intersect each vein. The Lamartine vein will be thoroughly exploited. The ruling of the supreme court giving tunnels right of way through all properties has made the completion of the tunnel possible.

The Centennial mine, Georgetown district, is in a four-foot ore body, fourteen inches of which is solid copper. The general average is 32 ounces silver, 4.2 ounces gold and 19 per cent copper a ton.

The discovery in he fourteenth level of the Old Town mine, Clear Creek-Gilpin district, of an immense body of extra good ore is proving important in making the mine productive throughout. The mine has yielded its present management $115,000 in dividends, as a result of systematic development.

CALIFORNIA MINES.

San Francisco, Feb. 16.—The Feather River Exploration company and the Cherokee Dredging company have been consolidated by W. P. Hammon, and the new company will be known as the Feather River Exploration, consolidated, with a capital of $1,500,000 fully paid up. The former owners of these companies were New York and Pittsburg capitalists. Mr. Hammon was able to show San Francisco moneyed men that there was big profit in these dredgers and he secured easily the cash to finance this deal. Among those interested are E. J. de Supler, Jr., who will be president of the company, William H. Crocker, Joseph D. Grant, Louis Storr and others. The company has about 1,000 acres of fine land which has all been prospected with the drilling machine, and it has six dredges. Two new dredges, each capable of handling 3,000 cubic yards per day, will be built at once.

One of the heaviest pieces of mining work in California is the 700-foot air shaft which is designed to carry air and afford ventilation to the four-mile tunnel in the Hidden Treasure gold mine in Placer county. This air shaft was dug from above and below at the same time and the two gangs met 400 feet above the tunnel level. Three years have been spent on the shaft.

The old Rademacher mine will soon be reopened at Randsburg. The owner disappeared about seven years ago. Rademacher left Randsbury for a trip across the desert to Arizona and no trace of him was ever found. It was plain that he had lost his way and perished on the desert, but until recently the courts would not give permission for the distribution of his estate. The mine is a big low grade proposition, the ore averaging $14 to the ton, though there are stringers that go as high as $1,000 to the ton. One shaft is down 200 feet, with cross cuts every fifty feet.

MINING IN IDAHO.

Plans are made for the construction as soon as possible in the spring of a wagon road to connect Big Creek district with the Thunder Mountain road. During the past two years a number of mining men have been attracted to the district and several have secured property there. The development now in progress in the Bluebird group of the Pen-Idaho company, in the Pueblo property, and some other groups it is believed will show up some wonderful mines. The ledges are monsters in size.

An important strike has been made in the Dutch John mine, near Leesburg. A new tunnel has been run into a big dike of low grade ore, where a streak of five feet thick was cut that assays from $10 to $160 to the ton in gold. The balance of the ledge goes from $3 to $20 a ton.

IN THE BLACK HILLS.

Rochford, S. D., Feb. 17.—The Montezuma Mining company is making surveys preliminary to patenting another group in Strawberry gulch, about a mile from this city. An air compressor and two ore drills are at work. The ground is being well opened up and shows very flattering prospects.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 17.—The directors of the Reliance Gold Mining company have been engaged in raising $40,000 for the building of a mill. This amount has now all been pledged. The mill will have a capacity of 200 tons a day, and there is now available sufficient ore to supply such a mill for fourteen years. The company has a large water supply and an excellent mill site. The company has an acreage of about 500 acres and an immense amount of good grade ore.

ALASKA MINING.

Seattle, Feb. 17.—At Fairbanks there is great activity along the creeks. Mines are accumulating ore on the dumps and sales are taking place quite frequently at good prices. The Hannon-Shay claim, known as No. 8, sold for over $100,000. A fifty horse power plant is operating on this property.

No. 7, owned by Meehan & Larson, on the same creek, is hoisting out a large amount of pay dirt. This will be among the busiest of the claims, as it opened up in fine shape early in the season after the fall clean-up.

On No. 3 6,000 wheelbarrow loads are on the dump, ready for the spring clean-up, and from the prospecting it gives great promise.

NEGAUNEE

Negaunee, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thomas Pascoe, who left here the latter part of last month to do diamond drill work for J. W. Bodilly, who has charge of the exploratory work near Wilde, Canada, for the Breitung Mining company, arrived home Tuesday afternoon, having completed his work there.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Gaffney returned Tuesday afternoon from Green Bay, where Mrs. Gaffney underwent a successful surgical operation and is now rapidly improving in health. During their absence of five weeks, Mr. Gaffney took occasion to pay a short visit to his brother, James, in Oshkosh.

Fred C. Shrier visited friends in the Copper country during the early part of the week.

E. J. Blee, who has charge of work for the Algoma Commercial company, left here Monday morning, accompanied by Michael McTigue, Peter Chiri, Thomas Adams, Edward Peterson, Alfred Collins and Alfred Lampsen for Michipicoten, Canada, to work in the mines.

Nelson L. Haggerson of Republic visited friends here Saturday and Sunday.

Garnet Luke, who came down from the Copper country last week to visit friends, departed Wednesday evening for Butte, Mont., where he has been promised work.

Miss Mae Elliott, who spent the past few months here visiting her brother, S. R. Elliott, superintendent of the Negaunee and Maas mines, departed Saturday for Baltimore and Washington, where she was to visit for some time before returning to her home in Beaufort, S. C.

Joseph Farrano, bartender for John Shardi, left here Friday on a visit to his brother in Calumet.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Manning arrived here Friday from Crystal Falls on a visit to relatives and friends. Mr. Manning, who is the chief of police of Saturday evening, while Mrs. Manning is still visiting her parents here.

Miss Celia Wood visited her sister in Marquette Sunday.

J. M. Perkins returned Thursday from Chicago, where he went to attend the automobile show.

James Kirkwood of Duluth was in town Saturday.

C. B. Burt was a passenger to Milwaukee Sunday evening.

Mrs. Abel Levine has been visiting her parents at Marquette.

Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Barabe arrived here Saturday on a visit to Mrs. Barabe's father, Nicholas Laughlin.

Capt. and Mrs. R. R. Trezona arrived I nthe city Tuesday evening from Eveleth, Minn., and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pellow.

Mrs. Alexander aMitland, accompanied by her daughter, Katherine, left Tuesday evening for Chicago.

Mrs. John Rough of Marquette visited friends here Tuesday.

Miss Grace Murray departed Monday night for Chisholm, Minn., where she will spend some time visiting her brother John and sister.

Miss Catherine Brand went to Marquette Tuesday on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. L. E. Dousseron.

Mrs. Charles Granberg, mother of Mrs. Charles Johnson, is reported seriously ill at the family home.

The Dozen-and-One club met at Mr. and Mrs. Axel Rasmussen's residence, on Lincoln street, Thursday evening, and as usual a pleasant time was spent. Mrs. K. W. D. Little, who recently arrived here from Chicago, was awarded the prize of honor, and Hans Hemmingsen the consolation prize.

Fifteen hundred dollars will be spent by the Marquette County Agricultural society this year for improvements on its fair grounds, and double the amount of money appropriated last year for horse racing will be offered in purses for the races at the exhibition to be given in the fall.

Ernie Zimmerman is now employed as delivery clerk for Winter & Suess in place of Sidney Northey, who resigned and left for Detroit Thursday morning.

Herbert Calligan arrived here Thursday from Iowa on a visit to his parents.

Claude Prout, a young man who resides with his parents on Cherry street, was seriously injured in the Queen mine Thursday morning. While riding on a loaded car of ore he was caught between the car and a piece of timber at the top of the drift. Prout sustained a badly fractured skull and fears are entertained for his recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Salmi of Palmer buried their infant daughter in the cemetery here Thursday afternoon, the child having died Tuesday night. Services were held at the Finnish-Lutheran church.

Mark Richard, the 13-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. William Flynn, who reside at the Mary Charlotte mine location, died Saturday night of whooping cough and bronchial pneumonia. The funeral was held Monday afternoon from St. Paul's Catholic church.

A quantity of lumber and bridge timber was taken to the No. 4 South Shore ore dock Thursday to be used in repairing the superstructure. The planking will be renewed for a considerable distance in the center of the dock, and the interior of some of the pockets will be lined with new timber. The dock was laid up in good condition last fall, and the repairs this winter will not be as extensive as in 1905.

Because of the failure of the Marquette County Gas, Light & Traction company to pay its taxes on personal property, the council of the city of Ishpeming Wednesday evening formally appropriated for its use the amount due the company for lighting service from Jan. 1 up to and including the day of the meeting, the total sum being $916.35, the same to be credited to the company on tax account. The amount of the taxes on personal property for 1905 was $1,183.99, leaving a balance of $267.64 still due the city.

The old electric lighting plant at the Queen mine has been taken out so as to give the workmen a chance to construct the foundations for the new plant, which will soon be installed and will furnish power for the new underground electric haulage system and for a much larger system of lights than the old plant was capable of operating. As a consequence all the underground operations are again being conducted with the aid of torches and miners' lamps. Nearly all the wiring for the new plant is finished, and everything is ready for installing the new generator and dynamo as soon as they arrive.

John Jacka, who came here a few days ago to try and secure miners to work for the Hobart Iron company at Sparta, Minn., left Thursday night with only one man. Miners are very hard to secure here, as well as in the Mesaba country, all the spare men having left recently for Canada.

M. A. Hanna & Co., nave leased the American mine, north of Humboldt, and operations will be resumed there as soon as machinery can be installed and the workings pumped out. Capt. Frank Platto, who had charge of the East New York mine for the same company will be superintendent. The hoisting plant, air compressor and pumps in use at the East New York will be transferred to the American. It is expected that it will take from three to four weeks to get the machinery in position, and two weeks or longer to pump out the workings. Mining operations will not be resumed much before the opening of navigation.

At the Baltic mine, near Iron River, the shaft has been sunk to the fifth level and a drift has been put through the rock to the ore, in which mining is now being carried on. A new first motion hoist has been purchased and will be installed as soon as possible. The ground has been excavated and the work of laying the foundation is in progress. A good-sized stockpile is already in existence and is being added to at the rate of over 400 skips a day. The Baltic will make a larger shipment in 1906 than in 1905. More dwelling houses are being erected by the company, both at the Baltic and Caspian locations.

Oglebay, Norton & Co. are sinking two shafts on the Seldon property at Stambaugh. Each is down about 100 feet, and drifting will soon be started. Mixed ore has been encountered. A steam plant and air compressor have been installed and a hoisting engine is on the ground.

The Penn Iron Mining company's purchase of a tract of land on the Michigan side of the Menominee river in the vicinity of Sand Portage from the Menominee River Lumber company, has no particular significance as far as the Sand Portage water power is concerned, but was bought to protect interests in connection with the raising of the dam of Sturgeon Falls, where the Penn people are building a large power plant. The land purchased extends from the mining company's holdings at Sturgeon Falls down the river about four miles to Sand Portage rapids.

The mother of Peter Rucinski, the young man who came to his death by being squeezed between a timber support and a motor car underground at the Negaunee mine early Thursday morning, arrived in Negaunee Friday morning and decided to have his remains interred here. The funeral was held Saturday morning at 8 o'clock from St. Paul's Catholic church. The inquest was held Friday afternoon in Justice Trathen's court room, and brought out the fact that Rucinski was a victim of his own fears, he having no cause to attempt to get away from the place where he stood, as there was plenty of room for the car to pass without touching him.

The Tyoga Lumber company expects to put in about 5,000,000 feet of timber this winter and next spring at its plant near Deerton, Mich. Over 2,000,000 feet of saw logs are now on the rollways at the mill, and sleigh hauling is in progress from the company's camps. The 1905 cut will be equally divided between pine and hardwood, 1,500,000 feet of each wood being lumbered. The hemlock cut will amount to 2,000,000, making the total mill cut for the year 5,000,000 feet.

Work on the new ore dock for the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway is progressing rapidly, the weather during the entire winter being favorable to rapid advancement of the work in all departments. The contractors expect to begin framing the bents in about two weeks, when a large force of bridge carpenters and laborers will be employed. Only one-half of the 6,000,000 feet of timber needed in construction is now on the ground, and it will not be possible to begin framing until the remainder of the timber arrives. Some of the timbers used for capping the piles and upright work are fifty-four feet long and one foot square, 600 pieces of this size now being piled in the yards near the scene of operations. All timber used in the structure is Washington fir.

The steel girders which will be used to span Lake street and also Front street will not arrive at Marquette before the middle of March, but this will not delay operations to any extent, as considerable time will be employed in framing the bents and building the lower sections of the dock. A concrete abutment, similar to those on either side of Front street, will be built on the west side of the Pickands coal sheds, and will be completed before the arrival of the steel girders.

The work of breaking a team road into the old Magnetic mine, situated eight miles distant from Republic, has proved to be a hard task. The force at the job succeeded in getting a road through early last week, but it has all since blown in, so the work of breaking it will have to be done all over again. It is expected to put teams at work hauling ore from the mine stockpile into Republic for loading onto cars, at the first part of the coming week. In all, 1,000 tons will be sent by rail to Escanaba, where it will await the arrival of the first boat of the Pickands, Mather & Co. fleet, which will carry it to the company's furnaces at Cleveland, where a trial test of its qualities will be made.

An infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Salmi, who died at their home at Palmer Tuesday night, was buried from the Finnish Lutheran church here Thursday afternoon .

Miss Louise Kruse has returned from Iron Mountain, where she visited her parents. She has not yet decided to open her millinery store here.

J. W. Bodilly, who has charge of the diamond drill exploratory work near Wilde, Ontario, for the Breitung Mining company, was in town Wednesday. Only one drill has been started at the property, which is located about twenty-five miles from the Canadian Soo.

The board of directors of the Ishpeming Ski club has decided to give $365 in cash prizes to the winners in the national tournament there Washington's birthday. This is $140 more than was distributed last year. The board has not yet decided how this amount will be divided. nor how many prizes there will be, but it is understood that the first prize will be $100. Last year the best prize was $80.

W. J. Roberts has received the silver trophy cup he has presented for a tournament prize, and it can now be seen at his store in Ishpeming. It is one of the prettiest and most expensive cups ever seen in this region. The conditions under which the cup will be awarded will be settled on by the directors of the ski club.

W. G. Mather, president of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company, has offered a gold medal as a special prize to the skier making the longest standing jump at the tourney there on the 22nd. It is a round medal, engraved with a representation of a skier in the act of making a jump.

AKELEY

Akeley, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Walter Petrie, a merchant located at Nevis, Minn., died at his home at Nevis Sunday night. Mr. Petrie was a brother of Dan Petrie, the sheriff of Hubbard county and was a prominent member of Berry lodge, A. F. and A. M. of Akeley. The funeral was conducted by the Masons and was held at Park Rapids, where he was buried.

Two men were instantly killed by a dynamite explosion at camp No. 7 of the Red River Lumber company camps Saturday morning. Edward Fisher, a railroad contractor, and Arthur Moore were thawing dynamite when the stuff accidentally exploded, killing them instantly. Mr. Moore was a high school graduate of Elk River and would have entered the university next year. His remains were sent to his parents Monday. No trace of Fisher's relatives can be found.

C. F. Scheers of the Akeley Tribune has installed a cylinder press in his newspaper plant. Akeley now has two thoroughly equipped newspaper offices.

The Akeley Dancing club gave another of their delightful entertainment Wednesday night. About eighty invitations were issued and a thoroughly good time was reported.

Mrs. E. R. Dampier is spending the week in Bemidji, with her sister, Mrs. J. H. Bailey.

The last number of the Akeley Lyceum course was given Tuesday. Akeley has supported an expensive lyceum course of five numbers this winter and the people are enthusiastic in their determination to have another one next winter.

Mrs. John McReavy, wife of one of the prominent logging contractors of Minneapolis is spending a couple of weeks in Akeley, visiting her husband.

VIRGINIA

Virginia, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—A quiet canvass of the business men interested in the question of paving the main street reveals an expression that there is no doubt but that it is a necessary improvement, yet, in the face of many other improvements that must be made before the foundation for the paving can be put in, that it is hardly possible that the streets will be permanently fixed in good substantial form until a year from the coming summer. In the first place the Virginia Light & Water company must take up the mains on the front street for the block running from the corner of Mesaba avenue to Railroad avenue and replace them with the eight-inch ones put down the main thoroughfare two years ago, and as the question of getting pipes in time is an important one, this will cause a great delay and the weather conditions will also play an important part in the putting in of the larger pipes. Then, too, the Mesaba Telephone company must take up several poles on the main street and place them inside the sidewalk line so far as to not interfere with the curb line. There are several places along the main street which are not connected with water and this must be done before the paving question can be dealt with fairly. There must also be put down along the front street, where the new street surface is to be inaugurated, a good storm sewer system to empty in the lakes to take care of the rain and snow water in order to render a safe foundation for whatever kind of paving which will be designated by the majority of the property owners along the street to be benefited. It is likely a meeting of the property owners on Chestnut street will be called and the matter of paving will be thoroughly discussed.

W. H. Ward, until recently head machinist at the works of the Oliver Iron Mining company at Mountain Iron, has been in the city most of the week closing a deal for the purchase of the Belanger residence in the First addition to the city and expects to move his family from the Mountain next week and occupy the new home. Mr. Ward has accepted a position with the Rainy Lake road at the shops here. He resided here years ago and was employed by the Virginia Iron Works, under the proprietorship of John A. Stein.

It is estimated that the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company will spend $10,000 on depot and other improvements here before the present work under way has been completed. A great change is taking place, among them being a separate baggage, express, operator's and waiting room for ladies at the main depot, while a large stone foundation, solid brick freight depot is being erected at the south of the same. It would not surprise our people in the least if the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Duluth & Iron Range would use the same depot in the early summer.

The Oliver Iron Mining company has two drills on lands just west of the old Norman mine shaft and have several more test pits in that same vicinity, which will be drilled this winter. Testpit and drill crews are working on the hill every day and there is every indication that the Oliver people intend doing business on a large scale on their several properties in the near future.

The vilage council met in regular session Tuesday evening, and among the matters that came before that body was the granting of a street car franchise. This matter has been under discussion for some time and its seems that there are three parties who want a franchise. The council has come to the conclusion that it is advisable to annul the franchise of the Mesaba company that was obtained three years ago, but which has done nothing to indicate that it meant business. There is a company of localists, one from Eveleth and another from Biwabik, desiring a franchise, but the aims of each are some different and the council is inclined to have the various factions get together and build a line that will give the whole range service and it is not likely any franchise will be granted until there is an indication that the various interests mean business and are willing to commence operations as soon as the franchise is granted.

The series of practical talks by practical men, which began last Sunday with Dr. F. W. Bullen the speaker, bid fair to be very interesting. They will be given every Sunday at 5 o'clock and the following are the subjects: Feb. 18, "The Body in Sickness and in Health," Dr. Frederick Barrett; Feb. 25, "Origin and Growth of American Law," F. L. Bannon; March 4, "First Aid in Accidents," Dr. C. W. More; March 11, "A Good Citizen," P. E. Dowling; March 18, "The Eye," Dr. J. V. Johnson; March 25, "The Teeth," Dr. H. B. Denton; April 1, "Money," G. A. Whitman; April 8, "Some Things We Should Know," Dr. T. J. Kinnear; April 15, "Consumption," Dr. W. E. Harwood; April 22, "Banking," W. J. Smith; April 29, "Men of the Hour," C. E. Bailey; May 6, "Some Books to Read," B. O. Greening; May 13, "Magnets," R. M. Dungan.

Invitations are out for a dancing party to be given next Wednesday evening at Fayal hall. Blewett's orchestra of Duluth will furnish the music and as it is the last party the club will give before Lent it is expected a very good time will be had by all.

Alexander Santi, a brakeman employed at the Drake & Stratton works, was killed Wednesday by slipping on the rails and falling in front of a moving engine, which ran over him. His remains were removed to the Gleason undertaking rooms. The same day, Alexander Nordstrom, an expert blastman employed by the Drake & Stratton company, also was killed by being hit by a boulder from a blast he had just prepared. He and some more were back of the blacksmith shop, some distance from the blast, but the stone was thrown high in the air, hit the edge of the shop and then struck Nordstrom on the head, killing him almost instantly.

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Greening entertained a small company of friends most pleasantly at their home last Saturday evening at six-hand euchre, followed by luncheon. Those who were present were Dr. and Mrs. C. W. More, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Barrett, Mr and Mrs. Neil McInnis, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Kingston.

J. Jenks of Virginia was here between trains Thursday.

Mrs. T. C. Guirson is ill with a severe cold.

A small company of friends surprised Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Dowling last Friday evening, the occasion being Mrs. Dowling's birthday. Six-hand euchre was played at two tables and the prizes taken by Mrs. N. B. Arnold and Mr. George McCormack. There were also invited Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. Neil McInnis, Miss George McCormack, N. B. Arnold, Mrs. Josephine Siblit, Mrs. J. C. Poole and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Smith.

A special meeting of the Eveleth Business Men's association was held last evening for the purpose of discussing the franchise for a range street and interurban railway. The opinion seemed to prevail that no franchise should be granted for at least sixty days to enable the Virgina and Eveleth men to look into the matter of a line to be constructed from Ely lake through Eveleth and to Virgina, as it was conceded this would be used the most of any part of the line.

ELY

Ely, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Patrick Grany of Duluth was up the first of the week looking over some pine lands in this vicinity.

Charles Schaffer of Tower was in town Monday and Tuesday.

The Modern Woodmen of America held their first meeting in the new hall Tuesday evening, and elected and installed the following officers: V. C., Peter Schaeffer; W. A., Harry A. Chinn; escorte, Ole Knudtsen; banker, George Brozich; clerk, J. W. Osborn; watchman, Louis Eisnich; sentry, O. L. Anderson. The installation was public and after the ceremonies were over, a most enjoyable social was held.

Capt. Lutes of Biwabik was up Thursday, looking over his mining interests in this vicinity.

Joseph Seraphine, Jr., is the proud father of a baby boy; both mother and child are doing well.

R. Deitz of Superior was up the first of the week, looking over some iron lands east of Ely.

Frank Cimsher is seriously ill with dropsy, at his home in this city.

A number of "Shriners" from Ely went to Duluth Tuesday to attend a meeting held there.

Mr. and Mrs. James Moonan were Duluth visitors Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Chief of Police Troyer of Duluth was in town a few days this week on business.

Dick Hogan of 60-10, is spending the week in town.

Mrs. Bart Coffey entertained a number of friends at cards Thursday evening.

There is a rumor around town that some outside parties may build a hotel on the site of the burned Vail hotel.

Capt. Charles Trezona and wife were Duluth visitors Tuesday.

The masked ball given by the Ely club, at their rooms, Thursday evening, was a decided success, there being about forty couples present, and all enjoying themselves, keeping the dancing up until 6 o'clock in the morning. Refreshments were served during the evenig. La Brosses' orchestra of Duluth, furnished the music.

Edward Lynch of Duluth is registered at the Exchange.

Capt. Sam Hoar of Section 30, was in town Friday.

KAISER EXCLUDES

Man From Army' Who Punished His Calumniator by Law.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. Brand, the eminent jurist, was dismissed from his position as an officer of reserves because he punished a calummator by process of law, having him fined for libel.

Some absurd martinet in the army, brought the case to the kaiser's attention, pointing out, that according to the code of honor, the doctor should have challenged his opponent to a duel. The Kaiser, quickly resolved as usual, wrote on the margin: "Dr. Brand is to be dismissed from the army." Yet William professes to be a Christian man, a pillar of Christian virtues, and, of course, an upholder of the law. He also punishes his detractors exactly as Dr. Brand has done, by prosecuting them for libel of his Majesty. He has never heard to challenge any man to a duel.

HALLOCK, MINN., MAN BURNED TO DEATH.

Hallock, Minn., Feb. 17.—Owen Ryan was burned to death in a fire which destroyed his home at 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning. His wife and five children escaped by leaving the house in their night clothes and going through the snow in their bare feet to a neighbor's. Mrs. Ryan had retired early and thought her husband had not returned home. In the morning he was found burned to a crisp.

THIS PORT'S SHIPMENTS

Last Year Was One-Quarter of Total of Great Lakes.

Remarkable Showing for Lakes in Commerce Report Just Issued.

It may be astonishing to a good many Duluthians and others to learn that Duluth shipped just a little over one-quarter of the total commerce of the Great Lakes—Superior, Michigan, Huron, Erie and Ontario, in the year 1905. That is according to the figures furnished in the report for last year just issued by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor. Of the total tonnage of the Great Lakes, about 2 per cent is registered in Duluth, which is another interesting fact. Of course in connection with these affairs, when the port of Duluth is mentioned, it should be understood that this includes Two Harbors as well, but does not include in any way the port of Superior just across the bay.

The domestic shipments from this port as shown by the figures in the office of the collector of the port during 1905 amounted to 16,587,877 tons. Besides this it is estimated that fully another million tons escaped reporting by the skippers of vessels getting clearance papers in Superior and going into the ore docks here and getting away with a load, so it is estimated that the shipments from here are fully 17,710,877 tons. As the total shipments of the Great Lakes during the year 1905 amounted to 67,345,620, the shipments from this port figure up to be just about 26 per cent, or a little over one-quarter of the total

The total tonnage registered at the ports of the Great Lakes amounts to 88,000,000 tons. Of this 18,000,000 tons are registered at Duluth; and this is about 2 per cent of the total.

Of the shipments from here, of course those of ore make up the great bulk of the amount given. Concerning the domestic commerce of the Great Lakes, the report says:

"While the freight carried in the aggregate on the Great Lakes covers an enormous number of articles, the great bulk of the tonnage is nevertheless restricted to a comparatively few commodities. In the through east bound movements, flour, grain, coal and ore, figure prominently, and the west bound tonnage consists largely of miscellaneous package freight, although there are large quantities of both anthracite and bituminous coal shipped from a number of lower lake ports.

"The domestic shipments from various ports on the great bodies of water, during 1905, reached the remarkably large total of 67,345,620 tons, undoubtedly representing the greatest traffic movements for any calendar year in the history of lake navigation. While the increase of 16,000,000 tons over the shipments of 1904 shipments may be partially accounted for by the interruption of navigation in the later year owing to the strike of steamship employes during May and June, no such cause can be attributed to the gain of 9,000,000 tons over the 1903 outward bound movements, or the increase of nearly 12,000,000 tons over those of 1902. Of the different commodities shipped during the year, ore and minerals aggregate 38,096,210 tons, coal 14,665,875 tons, unclassified freight 5,201,351 tons, grain and flaxseed 3,856,183 tons, lumber and logs 4,268,905 tons, and flour 1,257,096 tons. The heaviest gain occurred in the shipments of ore and minerals, which during 1904 amounted to 23,813,411 tons.

"The coastwise movements of vessels on the Great Lakes during 1905 indicated in clearances a net registered tonnage of nearly 88,000,000 tons, representing a movement of nearly 80,000 vessels, and being considerably in excess of the combine tonnage of the coastwise clearances of England, France and Germany, and, so far as can be determined, greatly heavier than that of the coasts of our own country. When it is remembered that the great bulk of the vessel movements on the great Lakes are confined to eight months of the year, the tremendous activities of these great highways of commerce will be better appreciated."

The report says that while the yearly east bound traffic movements through the Sault canals generally exceed the west bound shipments, they were last year far in excess of any previous record; the east bound shipments exceeding the west bound to the extent of being five times greater.

North Butte Mining Company. Dividend No. 3.

A quarterly dividend of $500,000, being one dollar and twenty-five cents per share on the outstanding stock of this company, has been declared out of the surplus earnings, payable on March 23rd, 1906, to stockholders of record at the close of business on March 10th, 1906. The transfer books will be closed from March 12th, 1906 to March 23rd, 1906, both inclusive.

FOUR MURDERED.

Family at Cape Briton Killed and the Bodies Cremated.

Sydney, C. B., Feb. 17.—In the ruins of a fire which the authorities believe was set deliberately to conceal the work of a murder, the charred bodies of Antonine Stettka, his wife and two children were found yesterday near the Dominion coal mine, ten miles from Sydney. The skulls of the children appear to have been crushed. The skull of the man was found some distance from the body as if the head had been severed.

As soon as the bodies were taken out of the debris, a jury was impanelled by Coroner Phalen and an inquest was begun. The theory which the authorities are understood to hold is that the four members of the Stettko household were killed with an ax, possibly while they slept and that the murderer afterward set fire to the house and departed.

No definite clue to the identity of the murderer has been discovered.

Hoarseness or loss of voice immediately relieved. Nothing excels this simple remedy

ELIZABETH'S LESSON.

BY V. R. EMANUEL.

"Aunt Sally," screamed Elizabeth, clapping her hands and dancing into the kitchen where the old colored woman was baking bread, "a farmer had 26 sheep and one died of fever. How many were left?"

Aunt Sally pulled her arms out from the dough, scraped her fingers with one another, and began to reckon.

"What did yo say dat sheep died of, honey?" she asked presently.

"Fever," said Elizabeth.

"Den fo shore he had 25 sheep left."

"Wrong," yelled Elizabeth. "Nineteen. I said '20 sick sheep,' not '26 sheep.'"

"Drat dat chile," muttered Aunt Sally, as Elizabeth danced out of the kitchen, "she who thinks she knows too much." And when the bread came onto the table it was half raw.

"Uncle Bryan," shouted Elizabeth, jumping into the room where her uncle, who was a cartoonist, sat knitting his brows on a drawing table, "a snail climbs up a 10-foot high wall. He climbs up two feet every day and falls back a foot every night. How long will it take before he can climb down the other side?"

She rushed to the door and flung it to the chickens.

"Ten days," murmured Uncle Bryan, drawing a picture of the Trusts.

"Wrong," shouted Elizabeth. "He gets to the top at the end of the tenth day, but he falls down a foot that night and has another foot to climb on the eleventh day."

"Hm-hm!" said Uncle Bryan, putting an extra tooth into the mouth of a certain hero. "One day I shall get after you." But Elizabeth did not hear, for she had run screaming down the stairs.

But worse was to come. On the following afternoon Elizabeth came dancing home from school into the parlor, where her mother was entertaining Mrs. Secondly, the wife of the minister.

"Oh, Mrs. Secondly," she cried, rushing up to her, "can you tell me the chief events that occurred during the fifth century before Christ?"

Mrs. Secondly hesitated and stammered.

"I see you don't know," said Elizabeth. "But I can tell you. The poets Sappho and Alcaeus flourished; the Persians invaded Greece and were defeated at Marathon and Salamis; the Jews returned from Babylon; Buddha began to preach in India; Confucius wrote his Analects; the kings were driven out of Rome; the——"

"Elizabeth," said her mother sharply, "be quiet."

Elizabeth subsided. But there was somebody more quiet than Elizabeth, and that was Uncle Bryan, who had just entered the room. That night when Elizabeth had gone to bed there was a consultation between Elizabeth's mother, Uncle Bryan and Aunt Sallie, the colored cook; but Elizabeth did not know what transpired.

I have been telling you so much about Elizabeth that you may possibly imagine she was the only child, but that is not the case. She had a brother named John, who was two years younger than herself. But John was so quiet and unobtrusive that many people did not know he existed. When he came into a room he would sit in the darkest corner, listening to what others had to say, but never venturing to take part in the discussion. The consequence was that Elizabeth ruled over him, as did her friend, Ermintrude Smythe, who lived across the street, and was as proud of displaying her knowledge as Elizabeth herself.

The next afternoon when Elizabeth came home she found the house deserted. On the table lay a letter addressed to her. Picking it up, she read as follows:

"Dear Elizabeth: As you are so clever and know everything better than anybody else, we have agreed to go away for a week's holiday and leave the house entirely in your care. Take care of John.

"MOTHER."

"Oh!" cried Elizabeth, clapping her hands for joy. She rushed across the street to call Ermintrude Smythe, and brought her back. As they entered the house a quiet, unobtrusive youth came in. It was John.

"Oh, John, you do look stupid," shouted Elizabeth, throwing the note at him. "Read that. Now you are in my charge. See?"

"Yes, Elizabeth," said John meekly.

"Yes, Miss Jones," you must say.

"Yes, Miss Jones."

"Then sit down over there and don't dare to move until I give you permission."

As John sat down the girls darted contemptuous glances at him and ran into the kitchen.

"Ermintrude," said Elizabeth, "I do feel hungry. I wonder what there is for supper?"

They looked in the larder, but there was nothing ready to eat.

"Oh, we shall have to cook our own supper," she said. "What a nuisance. How do you bake bread?"

"I think its rather fun," said Ermintrude, dumping a bag of flour into the mixing bowl. "Pour in some water, Elizabeth, quick—oh! you stupid, you've splashed it all over my shoes."

"It's your own fault for hurrying me."

"I didn't."

"You did."

"Well, I'm going home, anyway. We have a cook in our house who makes the bread for us. But, then, my popper's rich and can afford to keep one."

So saying, Ermintrude Smythe stamped out of the house and banged the door behind her. Elizabeth burst into tears, and they fell into the dough and made it salty. As she had forgotten to put any salt in this made it just right.

It seemed to be very hard to mix the dough, and by the time that she had got it to the right consistency she was aching all over. There was a pain in her back and another in her neck, and another in each arm, and a small pain in her temper, and she was spotted with flour and her hair had become disorderly, and her eyes were swollen, one being larger than the other.

"Bother the old dough," said Elizabeth. She rushed to the door and flung it to the chickens. They ran up and sniffed at it, but would not eat it. That was the finishing stroke. Elizabeth ran up stairs to her room and flung herself upon the bed.

The bed was not made. The mirror was dusty. There was no water in the jug.

Elizabeth ran down stairs again. As she passed the spare-room she thought she heard a chuckle, but when she looked in the room was empty.

It was a chastened and humble Elizabeth who went into the parlor. Bolt upright upon a chair in the far corner sat a boy. It was John.

"John," said Elizabeth softly, "why are you sitting there?"

"You told me to, Miss Jones," said John.

"John," said Elizabeth, "you need not call me Miss Jones any longer."

"Thank you, ma'am," said John.

"John," said Elizabeth, "I have two marbles. One is green, with red stars inside, and the other is spotted."

A gleam of interest filtered across John's listless features.

"John," added Elizabeth, "I am sorry I spoke harshly to you."

"Thank you, ma'am," said John.

"John, do you know how to make beds and bake?"

"I'll try," said John.

Elizabeth kissed John and John thanked Elizabeth. Then he went up stairs to the bedroom.

What a marvelous change had taken place! The room was swept, the bed was made, the mirror had been dusted and there was fresh water in the jug.

"Oh, John!" screamed Elizabeth, "there's a ghost in the house."

"It must be a black ghost," answered John, "for I saw it in the spare room as I came up. Let us go and see."

"Oh! no," cried Elizabeth, clinging to his hand.

"I'll go first," said John, "and you can keep behind me for protection."

Fearful and trembling, Elizabeth crept down the stairs behind her brother, who marched boldly in front of her. The spare room was quite empty. They ran down into the kitchen. Lo! what a transformation. The bowl was filled with dough, properly mixed, and there in the pantry stood Aunt Sally, shaking out raisins from a little bag.

"Oh! Aunt Sally," cried Elizabeth, "what are you doing here? Where have you been?"

"Why, honey, I's making a cake," answered Aunt Sally.

"Where have they all gone to? Where are mommer and Uncle Bryan?"

"You'se dreaming, honey, I reckon. They're all in the house."

And then, as Elizabeth listened, she distinctly heard the crackling of Uncle Bryan's hair as he ran his fingers through it, which was his habit when he was drawing his cartoons. She rushed into the parlor, and there, seated at his desk, was Uncle Bryan, drawing a picture of a trust with 39 teeth in his upper jaw and 37 in the lower.

"Well, Elizabeth," said Uncle Bryan, "how do you like keeping house?"

"How do you like making beds, Elizabeth?" asked Mrs. Jones, who had entered unobserved.

"Elizabeth, can you tell me the chief events of the ninth century after Isaiah?" asked Mrs. Secondly, who had suddenly appeared from an adjacent room.

"Oh! pshaw!" said Elizabeth.

"Honey," called Aunt Sally from the kitchen, "the cake's done baked fine."

"You see, Elizabeth, there are still some things that you don't know," said Uncle Bryan. And then Elizabeth saw that he had drawn a snail trust climbing up a tariff wall, and on its back he had written "Elizabeth."

"I am sorry I was so conceited," answered Elizabeth.

Thereupon Uncle Bryan changed the snail trust into a hippopotamus trust and scratched out "Elizabeth," and everybody kissed Elizabeth. And when the cake came on the table it was fine, and there was a large piece of citron peel on top of it.

THE HUNTER.

Little Tom Fritz,
His dear mama's pride,
Went forth a-hunting
On the bleak hill-side.
He sought for some game,
Just to try his new gun,
For the taking of life
To young Tom was great fun.

A pretty grey rabbit
Chanced by to roam,
Looking for food
A long way from home.
The winter was hard,
And the rabbits had found
Food hard to get
On the snow-covered ground.

Little grey rabbit
Caught Tom Fritz's eye;
Suddenly raised he
His new gun nose-high:
Took he calm aim—
The cold bullet sped,
Lodging itself in
Grey rabbit's head.

With a leap and a moan,
Her life was all o'er;
And her babies at home
Would see her no more.
Then wicked Tom Fritz,
With a very proud air,
Walked up and gazed
On the little dead hare.

He kicked her poor body,
And said with a grin:
"You ain't fit to eat,
You're so awfully thin.
But I'll take you home
And let the folks see
There's no better shot
In this country than me.

"I shoot birds as they fly,
And hares as they run:
Ah, to be a good marksman
Is the very best fun!"

But far, far away,
Three rabbits did yearn,
And watch for their mother
Who did never return.
And those little rabbits,
So I've been told,
Through loss of their mother
Died of hunger and cold.

At a Young Folks' Party.

A pretty and unique way to "pair off couples" for supper at a young folks' party is suggested here. Pass to the guests two baskets of flowers, one to the girls and the other to the boys, and request each to select one. There may be roses, carnations, violets—any flowers that the young hostess sees fit to supply. To the stems of the flowers are tied with tiny ribbons small cards bearing the names of noted characters in fiction or history. The boy drawing the card bearing the name Romeo must hunt for the girl on whose card is the name Juliet. Pocahontas is sought by John Rolph, John Alden seeks out his demure Priscilla, Hamlet his Ophelia, etc.

CONUNDRUMS AND ANSWERS.

Why are royal robes like water?
Because they are flowing.
Why are blind people the most sympathetic?
They always feel for their friends
What days are like old clothes?
Holy ones.

Cut out the above picture and paste carefully on a piece of cardboard. When thoroughly dry take watercolors and lay in the sky a delicate blue, the distant trees blue-green, the large tree with a thin wash of burnt umber touched with carmine to suggest bark. Paint the house brick color, very faintly.

Paint the boy's cloak and cap bright red, his face flesh pink, hair brown, jacket gray, tights purple and boots black. The two-headed giant should have sandy beard and hair, yellow caps, his jacket be a brilliant purple, his trunks and tights green and his shoes brown with yellow buckles. The club he carries should be light brown. Shade the ground lightly with grey in the distance and touches of yellowish-green in the foreground.

When dry press between heavy books and mount on a bright-colored mat and hang on the wall of your "den."

HOW LITTLE BRIDGET came into her own

By Helena Davis.

A long, long time ago there lived in a country across the sea a very wicked old woman who had two daughters. One of these daughters was her own, and the other one was a stepchild. By a second marriage this old woman had become Lady Hapgood, of Hapgood Castle. But her second husband, who was a good and high-bred lord, could not endure life with her, she was so wicked, quarrelsome, vain and selfish. So, after the second year of their marriage, the disappointed and unhappy man fell ill and died.

Now, this old woman's own daughter by name Estelle, was lazy, deceitful, plain of face and form and inordinately vain, while the stepdaughter, Mary by name, was just the reverse.

But altho Mary was her father's only child, and heir to the vast estate of Hapgood, she was made to occupy the place of a servant in the house and had to wait on her stepmother and stepsister, calling them "mistress."

The lazy, vain Estelle sat before her mirror for hours each day, trying to improve upon her ugliness by means of powder, paint, curling tongs, ribbons and pills, while the beautiful Mary—whom they called "Bridget"—was forced to run up and down the stairs waiting upon her.

Owing to the foolish and wanton extravagance of old Lady Hapgood and Estelle—"Lady" Estelle, as she was called—the estate was becoming greatly incumbered with debts and was on the verge of bankruptcy. Estelle wore the costliest gowns and finery, while Mary had to go about in the coarse clothes of an under servant.

At last, when Estelle arrived at the age of 17 (Mary was just one year her junior) it was decided that she should have a birthday party. A picnic in the fine old park belonging to the estate was planned, and invitations were sent out to all the young lords and ladies who dwelt in the neighborhood.

Strange to say, no one in all the surrounding country seemed to know anything of the little Lady Mary, for during her mother's lifetime they had lived in France—her mother's native land—where, when Mary was but five years old, her mother died. The child had been placed in a convent school, and when she was eight her father married again—married the wicked woman who, upon his death, put her own child in Mary's place and brought the rightful lady of the castle to her home as a servant.

Upon entering her own home little Lady Mary was bidden, through threat of terrible punishment should she disobey, to answer to the menial name "Bridget," and to never, under any consideration, divulge her identity to her fellow-servants. And by cruelty and threats the child had been held in subjection to her sixteenth year.

But two servants on the place, the good old gardener and his wife, had their suspicions regarding the pretty Mary. Year by year they watched her grow more and more beautiful, saw how gentle and refined was her nature, and how unlike the other servants she was. More than this, they had known that their master had had a little daughter by his first marriage, and this servant "Bridget" was very like Lord Hapgood in form and face.

"I tell you wife," said the old gardener, the evening before the day set for Estelle's picnic, "that little golden-haired Bridget is no more a common girl than I am King of England. As sure as I'm in my two boots this minute she's none other than the poor dead and gone lord's daughter and heir."

"So do I think, too," agreed the good wife. "But we've no proofs, so what can we do?"

"Well, I've clean got away from my reglar work and gone to thinkin' a bit," explained the old gardener. "Now, you kno how clever at makin' believe our girl Betty is, and you know how high she stands in the esteem of the Countess Bumbroke, who's kept her as housemaid nigh onto five years."

"But I can't see what Betty's got to do with this case," said the good wife.

"Just you listen to wisdom and you'll soon see," said the old gardener. "Now on tomorrow is Lady Estelle's birthday picnic. We'll have Betty stain her face and dress up like a gypsy and come to the picnic and tell fortunes for the company. When she gets to the old woman or Estelle she'll tell some things that'll astonish them a bit."

"But s'pose we might be wrong?" ventured the good wife. "Then we'd lose our places and do little Bridget no good, either. It's a big risk."

"Trust me for knowing a few things before I start in," smiled the old gardener.

"Oh, uncle!" cried a musical, girlish voice. And in another minute Mary stepped into the cottage of the gardener. "Lady Hapgood says you are to gather the choicest grapes for tomorrow and that I am to put them in little baskets of fresh green leaves."

"All right, Lady Bridget," said the old gardener, rising quickly and bowing deferentially as though before a superior. He and his wife always insisted on calling Mary "Lady" when not in the presence of their two disliked mistresses. "And I suppose you will be at the Lady Estelle's picnic tomorrow to assist in waiting at table."

"Oh, no," answered Mary wearily, for she was dead tired after a day of constant work. "Lady Hapgood says I am to stop at home tomorrow—that my services shall not be needed."

"Huh-huh!" said the old gardener. And he looked knowingly at his wife. "Well, we'll see. We'll see."

Then, after Mary returned to the castle the old man took his hat and walking stick and set off across the fields toward Bumbroke Hall, the home of the Countess of Bumbroke and the place where Betty, his daughter, was employed as a domestic.

• • • • • • • • •

"Oh my, oh my!" groaned the gardener's good old wife on the morning of the festive day. "I just can't get up and dress and go to that picnic to wait on all those grandees. Lady Bridget, you will have to go in my place. It is out of the question for me to go with a tooth aching like fits." And the good, old woman held her palms close over her jaws that held two rows of false teeth.

And so Mary prepared a hot-water bottle to lay against her suffering friend's face, the old gardener, who stood at the foot of his wife's bed smiled and nodded his head at her approvingly; then, when Mary's back was turned, he bent over his wife and hurriedly whispered: "You act it all right, only you forget just now that the ache was on the left side when it begun. Just groan a bit louder, too; folkses do with toothache."

And so the plan of the old gardener's worked out as he wished, and pretty soon he was off toward the park (where an hour before the Lady Estelle and her mother had gone) with two huge baskets on his arms, and Mary was trudging beside him under the load of another pair of luncheon baskets.

Whirling her tambourine and singing a wild melody.

Under the great spreading trees a gay company of young folks had assembled, chaperoned by the Countess Bumbroke and Lady Hapgood. Estelle, the gayest of the gay, was mistress of ceremonies and led in the blithesome games.

No one saw Mary and the old gardener when they joined the other servants who had preceded them to the grounds, for the servants kept to a small copse some distance from the spot where the guests were assembled, waiting in obedience to their mistress' call.

Presently Lady Hapgood touched a silver bell and the servants, acting under orders of the butler, started with the baskets to the long rustic table that had been built for the day's feastboard. And at the same moment there issued from the thicket opposite a gayly-dressed gypsy girl, whirling her tambourine and singing a wild melody.

"Well, well, a good omen!" cried the Countess, beckoning to the gypsy and giving her at the same time a knowing little glance of understanding. "A fortune-teller brings good prophecy to someone, though mayhap bad to others."

The gypsy girl advanced, bowed low and said: "Your fortunes, ladies and lords, I fain would tell."

"Yes, yes, our fortunes!" cried the gay young people gathering round the gypsy. "Our charming hostess first, as 'tis her birthday," said a young lord, taking Estelle's hand and opening the palm toward the gypsy.

"Oh tell me how old I am," laughed Estelle, addressing the gypsy.

The gypsy took her hand, looked in the palm, frowned and said: "Too young to be so full of deceit, too old to continue in cheating another, whose place you occupy unjustly."

A flame of color shot up in Estelle's face and she jerked her hand roughly away from the fortune-teller. Her mother had joined the group just in time to catch the gypsy's words. Raising an imperative finger and pointing toward the roadway, she said in a voice she tried to hold calm: "Begone, your hussy! I'll not have such vagabonds as gypsies roaming at liberty about my grounds."

"Your grounds?" And the gypsy looked her coolly in the face. Then turning toward the group of servants—all of whom were busy arranging the table save the old gardener, who was paying close attention to the gypsy—she pointed toward Mary, continuing:

"There is the rightful Lady of Hapgood and heir to this estate. She is the beautiful servant girl known in your household as Bridget."

Not having heard the gypsy's words and paying only attention to her work, Mary was laying the napkins about to designate the places for the guests at table. So she did not see that all eyes were bent on her, nor note the angry pallor that came over her stepmother's and stepsister's faces when they beheld her presence.

Advancing toward her, Lady Hapgood cried out in a voice thick with rage. "Bridget, how dare you come here without orders from me? Return instantly to the castle."

Mary looked up from her work, and a terrible fear seized her when she saw the look on her old stepmother's face. She made as if to speak in explanation, when, to her surprise, the Countess of Bumbroke came suddenly to her side and said in a voice loud enough for all to hear: "Fear nothing, my child. I know everything and am your friend. Speak out. Who are you?"

The fear Mary had felt for the wicked old woman suddenly left her in the presence of this gentlewoman who promised her friendship, and, proudly raising her head, she spoke in a firm, full, young voice: "I am Lady Mary, of Hapgood Castle, only child of Lord Hapgood, who died in France a few years ago. That woman"—pointing to her stepmother—"has robbed me of my property and my liberty. Until this moment I have never dared to own my own name."

A white rage had settled over the face of the wicked stepmother, and she leaped toward Mary, hand uplifted as if to strike her, but before she had advanced the third step she fell in a fit, screaming and foaming at the mouth with passion.

Estelle, her own features distorted with anger, beckoned to their coachman to come to her assistance, for the guests, grasping the full meaning of what had been said, made no offer to help her care for the wicked woman, who was but suffering the consequences of her own evil doing.

After the coachman had placed his mistress in her carriage and had driven from the park with her—Estelle sitting boldly upright on the seat beside her frenzied mother—the guests turned one and all to Mary, who had so unexpectedly become the heroine of the hour.

"As you are the real Lady of Hapgood," said a handsome young lord, smiling gallantly on Mary, "it gives me pleasure to welcome you in our midst and congratulate you on coming into possession of your own." And he graciously bowed over the confused Mary's hand, the others of the company following his example.

Then the Countess of Bumbroke gayly declared that the day's festivities should not be spoiled, and suggested that all should participate in the appetizing luncheon which the old gardener's wife (who had suddenly recovered from her toothache) assisted by her "gypsy" daughter Betty was placing on the table, just as though nothing had happened of an unusual nature.

So the afternoon wore away, and when it came time for the guests to depart the Countess of Bumbroke cordially invited Lady Mary to her own home, where she hoped she would remain until legal advice was had regarding her business affairs. But just as the company was saying adieus the coachman, who had driven Lady Mary's stepmother and Estelle to the castle, come hurrying up to his new mistress saying in a low voice:

"Your Ladyship, those persons have departed from the castle. After taking what valuables they could carry they hailed the passing coach for London, and seated themselves in it as passengers. Here is a note the older person left on the hall table for you. Thinking you might want it at once I have made haste to deliver it into your hands."

Lady Mary, smiling kindly and thanking the coachman, who had always been so considerate of her when she worked at the castle as a servant also, took the note and read:

"Bridget—You and your servant comrades arranged a pretty trick today. Only servants stoop to such vulgar, open exposures. My daughter and I leave this place today to you and its devouring debts. May the former have much joy of the latter. I have a just claim during my life against the Hapgood estate, being your father's widow, but to live there with you raised to the position of an equal is too much for our pride to suffer. "Bad luck to you and your new-found friends.

"COUNTESS OF HAPGOOD."

After reading the note Lady Mary handed it to her good friend, the Countess; then they all got into the carriages awaiting them and drove to Hapgood Castle, where Lady Mary became installed as mistress, much to the joy of all the servants who had grown to love the golden-haired girl when she was one of them. Nor did she, on becoming elevated to the superior position, lose that esteem and love, and through the combined efforts of mistress and servants, guided by the shrewd old gardener, the debts overhanging the estate were paid off, and when, on Lady Mary's wedding day—which was in her twentieth year—there remained not a penny against Hapgood castle.

And there unto this day live the descendants of the beautiful Lady Mary and her loving husband, Earl of Denforth, who brought his young bride both a fortune and true love.

And unto this day do the descendants of the noble couple delight in telling how their great-great-great-grandmamma had been held a lower servant in her own castle; and how, through the devotion and great regard of her fellow-servants, had she been brought into possession of her own.

ANDREW JACKSON.

Of Irish parents, Andrew Jackson, seventh president of the United States of America, was born March 15, 1767, in the Province of North Carolina, not a quarter of a mile from the boundary line of South Carolina.

And a strange thing connected with this fact is that Andrew Jackson always supposed himself to have been born in South Carolina; but in this he was mistaken, for "the traditions of the neighborhood," says one of Jackson's biographers, "supported by a great mass of indisputable testimony, point to a spot in North Carolina but a stone's throw from the line that divides it from South Carolina as the birthplace of Andrew Jackson."

When the Jacksons came, poor Irish emigrants, to this new land the privations to be borne by the pioneers proved no hardship to them, for their poverty had been so abject in the old country that no condition in this could be worse. In fact, all about them smiled promise of plenty in the vast region of field and forest.

But just as the toil of his hands was beginning to show some returns Andrew Jackson, the father of the subject of this sketch, sickened and died. And a few nights following this sad event his poor widow gave birth to a son—whom she called Andrew, in memory of his departed father—at the home of relatives, who, true to the hospitable pioneer spirit of those times, opened their home and hearts to the woman in such sore distress.

And in this home of his uncle little "Andy," as he was nicknamed, passed the first dozen years of his life, for his mother could never make up her mind to return to the rude log-cabin home which the death of her husband had left so desolate.

As soon as the child was old enough he was, with his brothers and cousins, sent to school to be made a "scholar." The school they attended was the kind then so common in the South, called a "subscription school," the parents of the pupils paying to the schoolmaster a small fee per head. And the schoolmaster in return imparted learning to his scholars by means of a hickory "gad." The school house was a long, low cabin, under whose ridgepole a tall man was obliged to stoop, and which had neither floor nor windows. About a great, wide fireplace that occupied almost one end of the cabin huddled the pupils on rude benches, conning their lessons aloud.

And thus the little Andy grew strong, mischievous and reckless, loving the wild sports and ofttimes wilder fights engaged in by his comrades. He also became a most formidable foe, fearing no boy of his own size or larger, for nothing of the coward was in his fiber.

In appearance he was far from prepossessing. At 16 he stood six feet and one inch in his stockings, but his great height was ungainly owing to the pronounced thinness of his frame. His features were strong and marked by what is vulgarly called "lantern jaws." His hair was a thick, coarse, sandy shock that stood up over his head in a stubborn fashion. But his eyes were clear, shrewd and admirable, being a deep blue in color.
